

World's Largest Will Having 95,940 Words, Filed For Probate In London

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—(AP)—What is believed to be the world's largest will, containing 95,940 words, has recently been filed for probate in London. Jack Matthews, president of the National Selected Morticians, said in an address here.

"This will of Mrs. Frederica Evelyn Stillwell Cook, widow of a wholesale dry goods dealer, disposed of an estate of $102,315," said Mr. Matthews, "and thus Mrs. Cook used a word in her will for almost every dollar she had to dispose of."

"There are no records showing any wills that approach in number of words the will of Mrs. Cook. It put into the average newspaper, it would fill 95 columns or 12 pages of eight columns each."

"London boasts of many long wills. That of Thomas Cubitt, grandfather of the present Lord Alhcombe, whose will probated in 1825, contained 24,740 words and the will of the eighth Duke of Devonshire 17,730 words, but in neither was there an accompanying document instructing as to details of burial. The idea of preparing for one's funeral long before any thought of death, is taking hold in America much faster than in the old country and serves to save the bereaved family money, trouble and annoyance."

"The shortest will ever filed in London says: 'All for mother—C. T.' and disposed of an estate valued at $41,250. Elias Meyer's recent will, disposing of a $9,350,000 estate, contained only 125 words. Another small will contains a photograph of a girl, autographed 'Muriel,' on the back which is written, 'I leave all to her.' It was signed by a soldier who was killed in the world war and was admitted to probate even though not signed by witnesses.

"The smallest London will is engraved on the back of a soldier's identity disc, a piece of brass about the size of a silver dollar. A microscope must be used to decipher it."

Food Corporation Merger Strikes Snag As Federal Anti-Trust Suit Is Filed

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(AP)—The food corporation merger has fallen through and Wall Street had an uneasy market in food stocks today as an aftermath of a federal anti-trust suit filed yesterday in Baltimore against the proposed $2,000,000 Ward Food Products Corporation.

is a recognized authority on canaries and other song birds. He gives an interesting account of the history of the canary which will be of interest to the many who will view his exhibit for the next 10 days. Mr. Myers's account follows: "The canary has first been known as a household pet early in the sixteenth century. It is a native of the Canary Islands, Madeira, Azores and other small islands near the western coast of Africa. The Canary Islands are in about the same latitude as

Florida and have somewhat of a tropical climate but this is varied by the high mountains. The history of this charming pet began when a merchant ship trading with the Canary Islands took as a part of her cargo several thousand canaries which had been trapped in the Canary Islands, thinking that they could be sold for a good price to the Europeans. The ship wrecked near the coast of Italy but, by the kindness of some sailor, the cage was opened and the birds liberated and flew to the nearest land which happened to be the Island of Elba. Here they found the climate so propitious that they multiplied rapidly. It was not long until their superior song was recognized and they were trapped in large numbers and their domestication soon began. "The Italians were the first to attempt to breed canaries in captivity but with little success. They were taken to the Netherlands by the Germans of central Germany which is the vicinity of Hartz mountains, and St. Andre-burg, where they soon found much favor.

Substitute Religion For Jazz In Housewarming Urges Boston Educator

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 9.—If you are an American home-maker and you want your home to stay made—Beware of noisy, jazzy, "house-warmings," warns Prof. H. Augustine Smith, Boston educator.

For the modern "housewarming," lasting until the milkman's hour and setting neighbors to moaning for the police, is the first psychological step toward the divorce.

The newlyweds, thinks Prof. Smith, who want to remain wedded as they get farther and farther away from the altar, will warm their new homes with a formal dedication ceremony rather than with liquor and hilarity.

He has just exemplified his belief with dedicatory rites at his new home in Newton Highlands, Boston suburb.

Some dedication would help markedly, Prof. Smith holds, to fend off divorce and a multitude of other unwholesome phenomena which have attended the loss of the home's one-time sanctity.

Simple solemn consecration of every home and family circle to the high spiritual purposes which the home life of tradition served is the formality which he suggests.

His own new home was dedicated to "love warmth and beauty."

It is an unritualistic age which presents the problem of black home ties and of home fires which flicker and sputter, the educator concedes. Formula and formality, he admits, have lost many of their powers of restraint.

But, in the home dedication rite he proposes, he sees the possibility of a particularly effective, spiritual cultivating of the idealism which home life of old inspired as well as reinforcing the marriage vow.

"The modern house warming," and to say, too often has just the opposite effect," Smith observes.

If you want to dedicate your home, here is a sample program: Form a circle with your family in the center, for discussion and readings on "love"—parental, brotherly, and mating varieties included.

Light fires in fireplaces to symbolize the warmth and radiance of family relationships.

Unveil paintings to suggest the beauty in marital happiness and the rearing of children. If there are children in the family, choose some pictures which will impress them strongly.

A benediction.

An hour of social informality, with music, songs, and games.

ARE YOU REALLY DOING YOUR OWN THINKING

Do you think you are a "thinking man?"

In other words, do you class yourself as a person who is moved by reason rather than by prejudice?

Put down and ask yourself a few questions before you answer: Suppose that some one sets forth a little argument that is distasteful to you—calls for a course of action, let's say, that goes counter to your own ideas. Do you "read" what he has to say carefully to see just what his notions are; or do you announce that he is a "bolshy" or a "Republican" or a "Ku Kluxer" or a plain nut, as the case may be, and let it go at that, without trying to refute his reasoning?

When some big issue like a political campaign confronts you, do you stop to figure the whole thing out as well as you can, informing yourself accurately as possible about the points of fact involved, before you reach a conclusion on one side or the other?

Or do you go into it blindly and let yourself be carried off your feet by a catch phrase or slogan? (Here are a couple, picked at random: "He kept us out of war," and "Back to normalcy.")

In other words, are you kidding yourself when you think you're really a thinking man?

The only possible danger this country can ever face lies in the growing willingness of so many of us to let others do our thinking for us. So long as we all study our problems and honestly try to think our way out—we may make a few mistakes, but we won't go wrong in the end.

FAMOUS FEATS COLLEGE STARS

BY ART CARLSON HANGS UP RECORD

First-class weightmen aren't so overly plentiful as collegiate athletes just a moment. There are a few outstanding ones, however.

One of these is Ralph Hills, Princeton's great athlete. Hills ranks right along with the California celebrities, Hartranft and Houser.

Hills differs a bit from the westerners, though, in that his events are the shot and hammer, while the others compete in the pill and discus pastimes.

It was in the 1925 eastern inter-collegiate that Hills made one of his most notable showings. He had a bitter contest with Houser on that occasion for shot-putting honors.

The pair fought one of the greatest battles ever waged in the seven-foot circle. Hills finally won out by some six inches. He was forced to heave the leaden ball 49 feet, 7 1/2 inches for a new inter-collegiate record.

The year before Hills whipped Houser also, but was himself defeated by Hartranft. The winner's toss was almost two inches less than Hills hung up last season. That campaign Hills added to the Princeton total by getting fourth in the hammer throw.

Mills was a member of the American Olympic team in 1924. He got a third in the shot-put, being out-done by both of his old rivals, Houser and Hartranft in that class. His best effort was just a little over 48 feet.

What Does He See In Her! By FANNIE HURST

The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

Author of "Lammox",
"Humoresque"

Henshaw was one of those men about whom other men say, "He has everything." At thirty-seven, at a salary of seventy-five thousand dollars a year, he occupied an important executive position on one of America's most powerful newspapers. He was a dynamo. He was an intellectual gattling gun.

Henshaw had everything.

No man said until they met Lilian Henshaw. She represented a mystery—the mystery of "what does he see in her?"

What DID Henshaw see in Lilian his wife?

HENSHAW was one of those men about whom other men say a little wistfully, "He has everything."

In a way, as men measure, there was a certain amount of truth in that.

At thirty-seven Henshaw, at a salary of seventy-five thousand dollars a year, occupied an important executive position on one of America's most powerful newspapers.

A dynamo. When he entered a room it was as if the room had suddenly become the time of his arrival.

He seldom missed fire. He was an intellectual gattling gun. Quick. Short. Concise.

Physically bigger than most men, with a high forehead and with a great blonde head of wavy hair that made women swoon through it.

He was a personage. Every inch. You could feel his voice vibrated through you. He intimidated them more than they feared him. There was no telling how far he would go. Political parties had already advanced to him. A billion-dollar corporation tried to bait him from his executive position with the prospect of a yearly salary more than doubled the seventy-five thousand dollars. The President of the United States had offered him a position on important national scope. His editorials of the variety were by-words.

He was a great person by way of comparison.

But, there usually is a but. So far as his admirers were concerned, the but was Henshaw.

Nothing and all that! Harmless. Utterly colorless and pallid. In every way equal to Lilian. Neither intellectually nor physically. It was rather strange her sitting about here and there in the privacy of Henshaw. She was so pale for his sake.

He had married her when he was thirty and she was thirty. There were no freckles and wore side combs. The pale hair was perpetually pinned in the expensive clothes she wore as some wag put it, like a clothes pin.

Apparently one of those cases where she rapidly outgrew his marriage. There was close enough to Henshaw to know the mystery was something of a glittering affair, with many friends at his feet, but on a mountain side which not one of his friends, even the closest, had scaled.

One of those men, doomed by very his bigness, to a certain kind of solitude. There was no telling from Henshaw's exterior to what extent he realized that this marriage might be the only deterrent to what might be a career without limitation.

Henshaw received his friends on those occasions when he threw open his home to the rightful role of the one who shared.

He appeared at public functions together when the formal nature of the occasion required it, but, more often than not, Henshaw, who had a glitter and a magnificence that were diamond his went about alone. Even, up to a certain decorum limit, tolerated some of the flirtatious advances of women.

He had always, in his large, impervious and dynamic way, been a woman's man, as well as in every sense of the word a man revered, feared, admired and envied by his own sex.

A dangerous and alluring combination. A woman's man. A man's man.

You expected to see a man like Henshaw appear upon the scene with a wife to match his magnificence.

Instead when Lilian Henshaw appeared, with her hair that was graying in its perpetual straggle, her rounded back, carrying to disadvantage the elegance of her plumage, she represented mystery.

The mystery of "what does he see in her?"

It was pathetic in its way. Particularly the rather ostentatious deference that Henshaw displayed to her on all occasions. If it hurt him, as it must inevitably have done, to behold this poor little crow of his in among the bird-of-paradise wives, daughters and sweethearts of his associates, he protested it did not, a bit too loudly.

Protested by a special deference to Lilian Henshaw.

By seeming a little insolent to the bird-of-paradise women, in order that his deference to Lilian might be more marked.

She did not dance and he remained beside her.

Her tongue was apt to clog in conversation of nervousness and with one ear cocked, even while he talked to some one else, he was always ready to leap in to help her. She smiled in the rather poor, uncertain way she had socially and he bowed like a cavalier.

There was something quite matchless about the manner in which Henshaw met this one and only defect in the consistency of his magnificence.

As if by virtue of the irrefutable dynamo force of his personality he would disarm all criticism.

But there were limits even to the extent of Henshaw's intellectual dominance of his friends.

Lilian Henshaw was regarded as a dowd. A hopeless impediment in the way of her husband's progress.

"What did he see in her?"

This is what he saw in her, as evidenced by just a casual conversation that took place between them, after Henshaw had returned home from a late public banquet to a visiting dignitary, from which Lilian had begged off.

She was waiting for him in a little room that adjoined their bed room. A small square box of an affair in rather marked contrast to the pleasant luxury of the rest of the house.

It had been an idea of Lilian's that Henshaw needed a room of this kind of stark plainness. To rest his nerves. A room entirely unadorned which she herself had contrived for him.

"The room does for you what I do for you, Henshaw. Rest your nerves."

"You dear!"

This night, when Henshaw came home, Lilian was waiting for him in this room. And yes, it must be admitted, in a gray flannelette wrapper with black frogs-down the front.

"Come in here, Hen. I've your ginger beer waiting."

At home and away from the cowering influence of the bird-of-paradise women and their appraising eyes, Lilian's voice was no longer lifeless.

"Good Lord, Lilian, what would I do without you?" said Henshaw, and threw himself down in the straight chair that was designed just to his proportions and stretched out his legs in a way he enjoyed and let his chin sink down in his dress-shirt front and his left arm dangle until he touched the floor.

She gave him his glass of ginger beer and sat down on a plain little stool at his feet.

"I sometimes wonder—Henshaw," she said—"what you would do without me."

There was nothing of humility in Lilian's voice. But humor and assurance and gaiety.

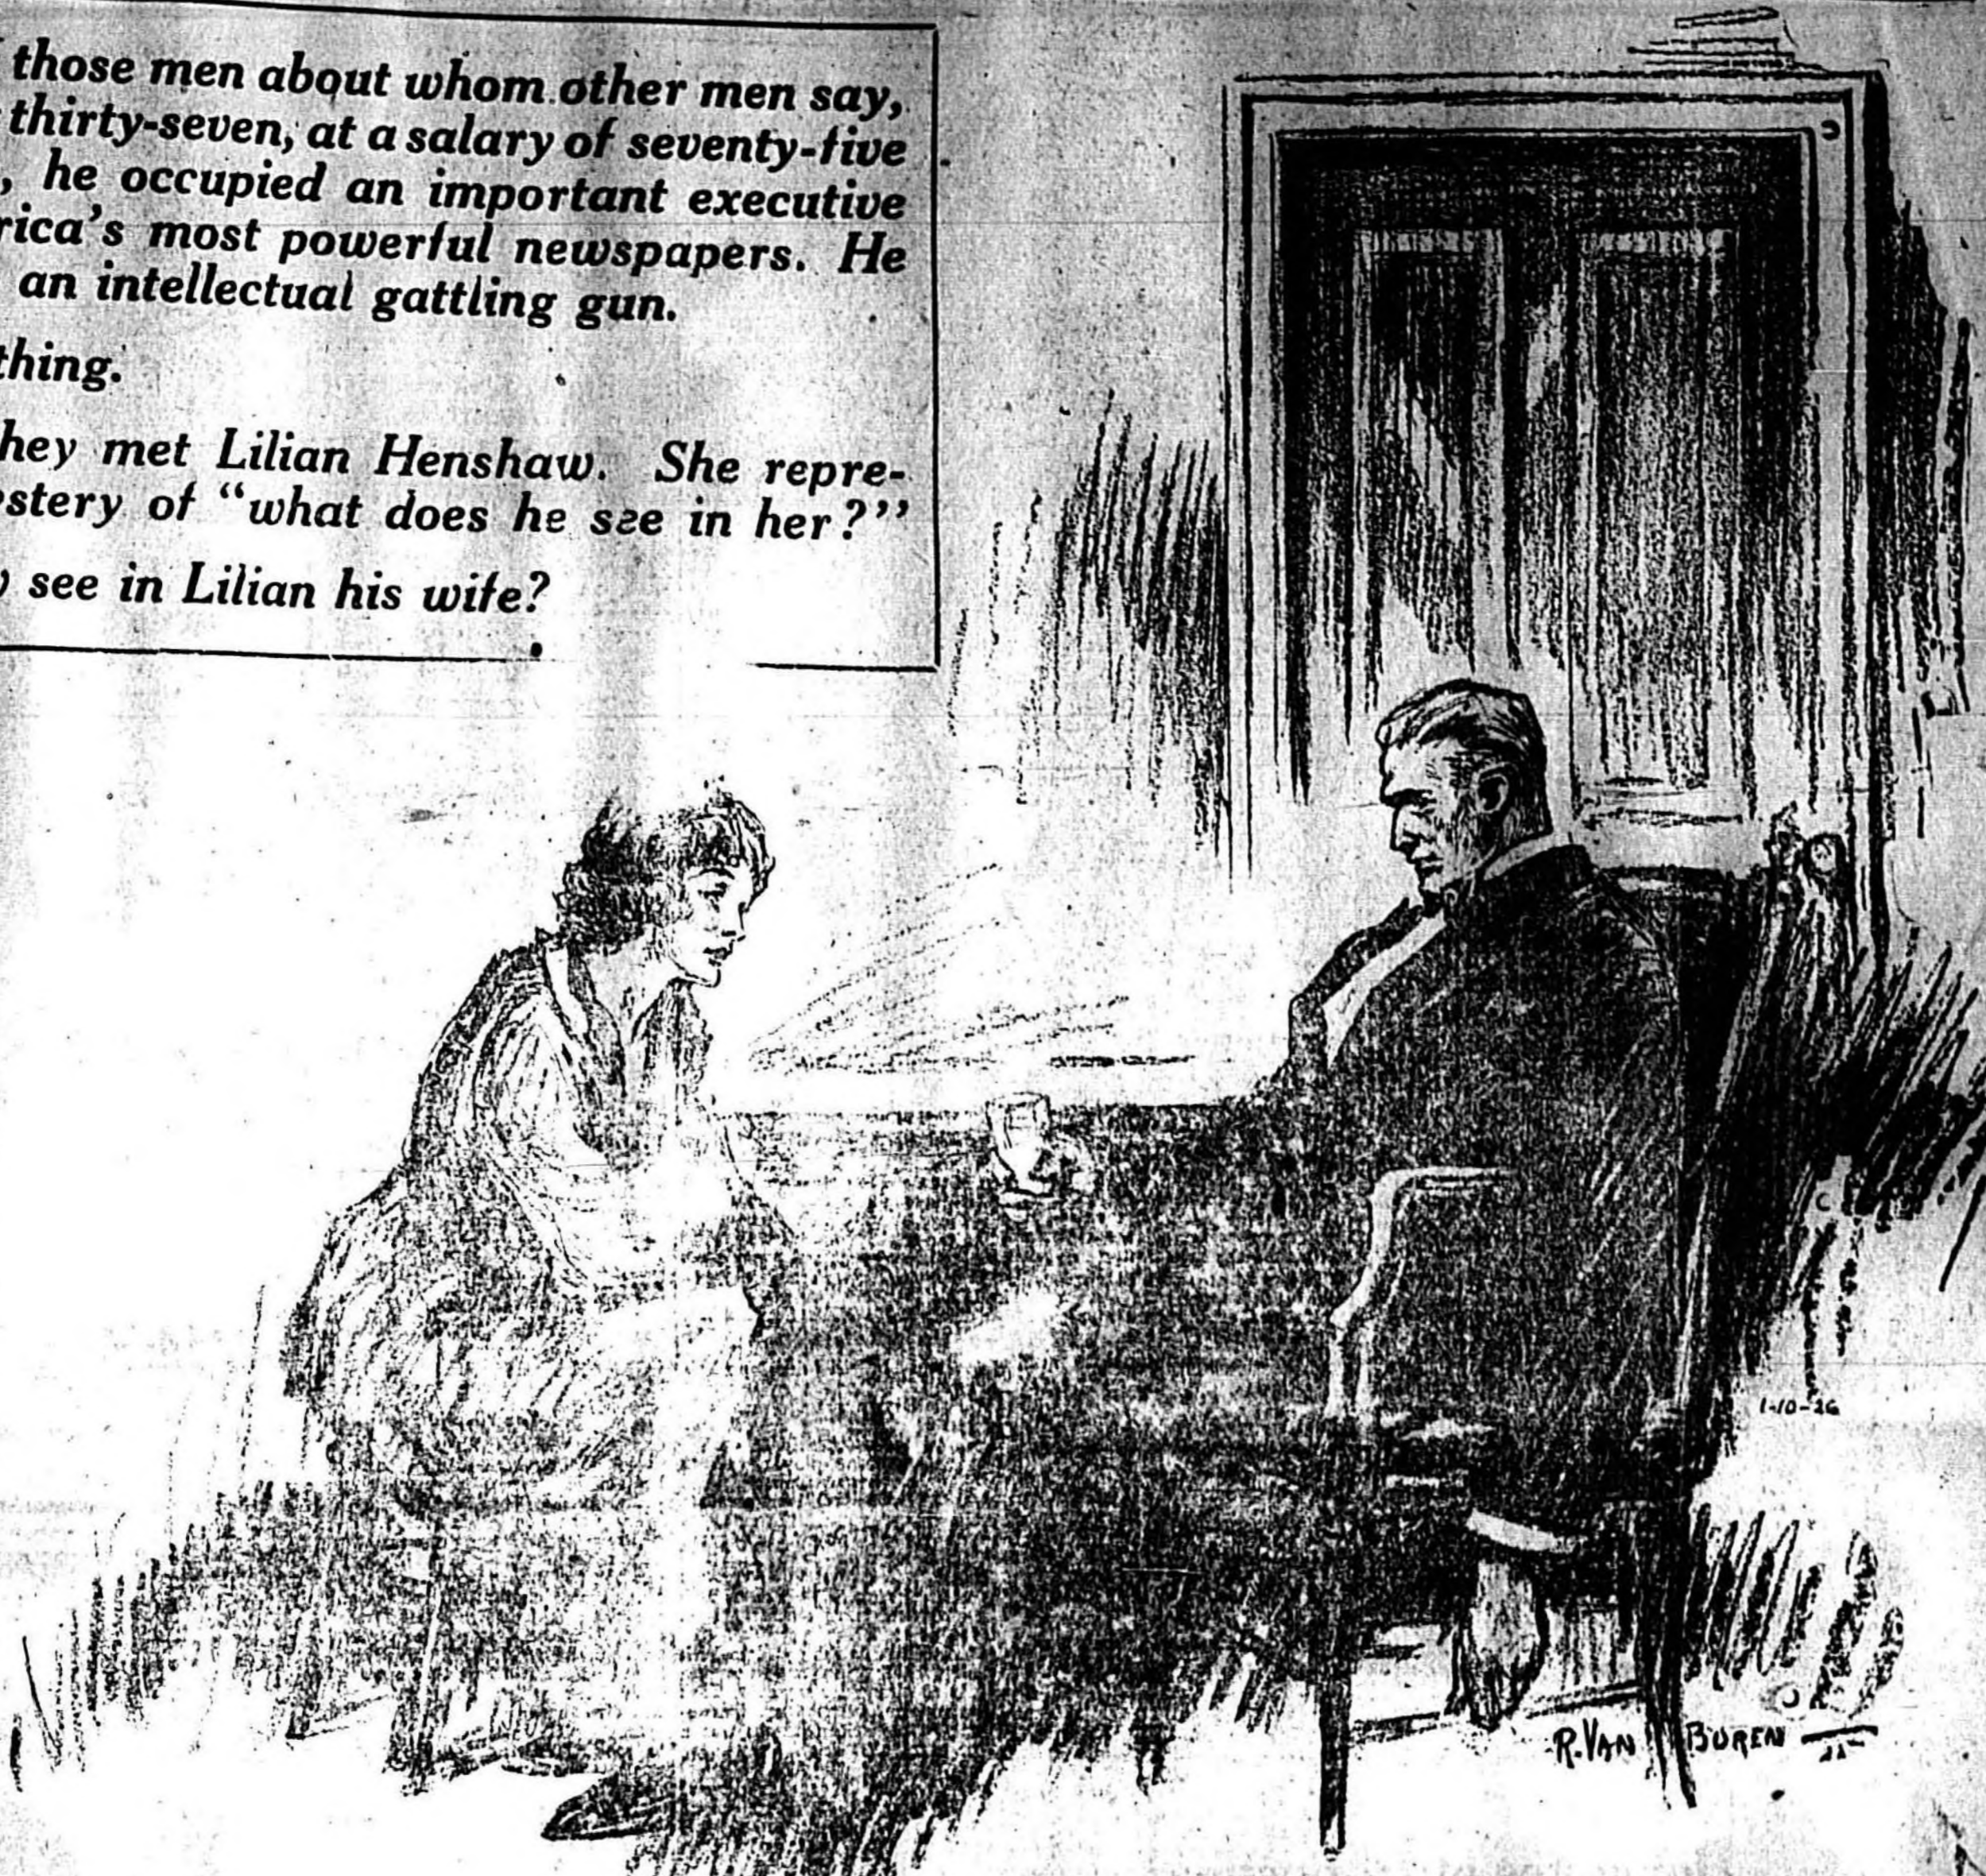

"Without you, Lilian, and your good common sense and your darlingness about my weaknesses and your brilliant help in writing my editorials and speeches—I know what I'd be—"

"What, you darling old spoiled child, you?"

"I know what I'd be, Lilian. I'd just be the husband of Lilian Henshaw—the most brilliant woman executive in America!"

"Darling boy, you—maybe you would!"

Jack Dempsey May Meet Harry Wills in Quaker City, Is Champ's Latest Remark

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 9.—(P)—Harry Wills, negro and former stevedore, has again forged ahead of Gene Tunney in the race for the next chance at Jack Dempsey's heavy weight crown, and Philadelphia is in the limelight as the city most highly favored for the battle. This was the result of conferences held here yesterday between Dempsey and two Philadelphia boxing promoters.

Dempsey, here for an exhibition match tonight after conferring for 30 minutes with Herman Taylor and Bob Gunnis, of Philadelphia, issued a statement to the Associated Press in which he declared the Quaker City promoters had convinced him that Philadelphia "is the logical place for the match." Dempsey's statement also mentioned Harry Wills as the opponent, and "some time in September, 1926," as the time.

"Something over $500,000" was suggested by the promoters as Dempsey's end of the purse, Taylor and Gunnis told newspapermen after the conference.

Declaring that Floyd Fitzsimmons already has contracts signed by himself and Harry Wills, Dempsey, in an statement, asserted that he would attempt to convince Fitzsimmons that Philadelphia "is the logical place" and that Philadelphia promoters could either buy the contracts from Fitzsimmons or bring Fitzsimmons to Philadelphia to share in promoting the match.

Dempsey said that he was impressed by the fact that the big new arena in Philadelphia would seat over 100,000.

The champion seemed definitely to sidetrack Gene Tunney as his next opponent and to accept Wills as the man who will get the chance.

"I believe the popular demand is for a match between Wills and me," he said. "I am not placing myself in the attitude of picking my next opponent, but the public seems to have been clamoring for a meeting of Wills and me for some time and now I am ready to satisfy them."

Taylor and Gunnis, who expressed themselves as optimistic over Philadelphia's success in securing the match, for a second conference with Dempsey in the Quaker City Feb. 20. Dempsey stressed in his statement the fact that the promoters have assured him there would be no interference with the "mixed" match in Philadelphia.

Following his match tonight, Dempsey, accompanied by his wife, the former Estelle Taylor, moving picture actress, will depart for Denver. They spent their first wedding anniversary here yesterday.

Hopes For Pennant

Nothing but a pennant will satisfy Manager Connie Mack of the Athletics this year.

The tall leader of the Athletics doesn't take to heart the manner in which the Athletics exploded last season when all the experts had picked the team to win.

"I feared just such a happening," said Mack recently in discussing the failure of his club last year.

after a great showing to the home stretch.

"The team simply didn't believe strongly enough in itself. Finishing in the cellar for so many years had a psychological influence that handicapped the club severely when the crisis came. It will profit as a result of that sad experience."

"I don't think we can be stopped in 1926."

Good Fight Card Promised Fight Fans At National Guard Armory Tonight

Fight fans are expected to turn out in great numbers tonight to witness the card which Henry Godale is putting on at the local armory.

The feature of the evening's milling will be the scrap scheduled between Ted Goodrich, of New Orleans, and Kid Gomer, of Hartford, Conn., wound up to go 10 rounds. The main bout will be preceded by a semi-final between Kid Irving, well known in these parts, and Kid Parlin who admits coming from Georgia but now claims Sanford as his voting place.

In one of the preliminary bouts "Go" Scherpe and K. O. Tanner will come together in what is promised to be an interesting match. Another preliminary and a battle royal will start the show.

Goodrich will be appearing in a Sanford ring for the first time, and from the advance publicity he has received in other cities he is expected to show his wares before a large crowd. If Godale's promises come true, the customers are in for a lively evening.

The bout in which some action is almost sure to be seen is the one between Kir Irving and Kid Parlin. Irving has been scrapping here for some time and the fans know his ability. He can use his fists at long range and on the infighting, and packs a wallop in either hand. Last week Dan Glibulke fought Irving and injured his hand, causing the bout to be stopped in the sixth frame. The milling was about even up to that point with a shade of favor going to Irving. The Sanford boy is having his hand cared for and is being taught more inside fighting and is expected to do some good punching when he gets back in the ring.

"Go" Scherpe has also appeared here before and was well liked by the folks who bought the paste boards.

University Athletes Proud of Four Merrin Boys Who Played For Orange, Blue

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA, Feb. 9.—(P)—Dartmouth and other colleges may boast of twins on their football teams, but Florida is proud of her four brothers, students of the state institution who have won the highest honors in football.

The name of Merrin in the annals of University of Florida football history will always stand out. Since the season of 1919, every football machine that the university has put out has had, on the regular lineup, one of the four brothers.

Jim Merrin, the oldest, began his football career with Florida in 1919 and won the coveted "P" for two years. He was followed by "Little Joe," who played end on the Gator machine until the close of the 1924 season.

Both Jim and Joe were on the coaching staff of the freshman squad this past season. Jim is assistant pastor of the Gainesville Presbyterian Church, and a graduate student of the university. Joe is in the Engineering College, in the junior class.

This year finds George Merrin with the Gators. He won his numeral. The youngest brother, who was awarded a numeral on the freshman outfit.

George will be eligible two more years for the varsity and Phil three, and both will no doubt hold a regular berth.

Golf Is Recommended By Chicagoan As Aid To Excellent Health

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—(P)—The artist who paints "The Picture of Health" is golf, according to Dr. Albert F. Henning, surgeon of Olympia Fields Country Club, which has 1,250 members and four 18 hole courses.

As official physician of the club with its great clinical facilities, he has made a study of the health benefits of the game, because, he said, there was little else for a golfer's doctor to do.

Dr. Henning has found that the game has proved beneficial to those who get into the game before functional and organic diseases lay hold of them.

The only fatal case among the large membership in 10 years was due to a stroke of lightning two years ago and that caused the death of a caddy who did not play golf. The most popular prescription among doctors today is golf, even at an advanced age.

Michigan Centers

In football, Michigan has always been noted for turning out high-class centers. It seems to be a habit.

In recent years two Michigan centers have won All-American honors as the All-American eleven.

Great players, they deserved all the honors handed them, yet I am convinced that a certain amount of luck goes with even so mythical an honor as the All-American eleven.

Last year in Zoh Brown Michigan had a center whom I regarded as the equal if not the superior to Blott or Vick, yet Brown did not attain the prestige that went to the other two stars.

Some western critics gave Tim Lowrey the preference over Brown in Big Ten circles, while McMillen of Princeton was generally rated higher in the All-American selections.

In addition to being a great center, Brown was the ideal fighting captain, who inspired a never-say-die spirit that did much to make the 1925 Michigan team an outstanding eleven.

Coch Yost regards it as the best team he ever coached; quite some compliment when you consider the many famous teams he has turned out.

ALL-AMERICAN SELECTION

Recently in discussing football with Coach George Little, who had such a big first year at Wisconsin, I brought up the play of Bob Brown.

Little, who formerly assisted Yost in football at Michigan, is familiar with the play of Vick and Blott and helped develop Bob Brown.

"The one Brown was the outstanding center of the Big Ten, if not the entire country," said Little.

"As a defensive player against the line attack and forward pass, Brown had no equal in the country. Brown's play and fighting spirit was the spark plug that made Michigan a great team. If I had been selecting an All-American team in the guise of writer, Bob Brown would have certainly been placed at center."

"I rate him as the equal to Vick or Blott in all things and in certain points of play their superior. That Brown wasn't selected unanimously for All-American honors was a whim of fate."

A great many coaches do not look on the All-American teams with favor but the reading public likes them, so the critics will go on picking 'em.

LENGLLEN ODDS DROP 2 POINTS SINCE SUNDAY

Soft Lobbing Shots By U. S. Star Have Given Way To Shots With Plenty Steam

CANES, France, Feb. 9.—(P)—The odds on Suzanne Lenglen to defeat Helen Wills in singles have dropped. Last week seven to one was being offered with few takers that Miss Lenglen would prove unbeaten.

Lenglen's dropping the soft lobbing shots to which many spectators attributed her defeat in the mixed doubles at Nice Sunday against Suzanne yesterday put so much steam on the ball that when she had defeated Miss Ethel Fischer of England, in two love sets, she also had knocked off two points in the odds. The best that anyone could hear whispered last night was five to one.

Suzanne did not grace the stands to see Miss Mills serve stalling shots. The French Flash had drawn a love and remained away from the courts.

Not a single game went to deuce. Miss Wills lost only 13 points, five in the first set and eight in the second, and yet she apparently did not extend herself to defeat the English girl. After the match was played Helen was pleased with her showing and naively said she expected to reach the top of her playing form around Wednesday.

It is the expectation of the concessionaire of the Carlton Tournament to make a bit of money out of the tournament, aside from the gate receipts. He has sold the motion picture rights to the exhibition match Saturday between Miss Wills and Miss Lenglen to an American firm for a sum said to exceed $100,000.

Miss Wills said that the deal was news to her. "I never bother about moving pictures," remarked Miss Lenglen.

How to stop BOILS!

There's only one way to stop boils. Stop the cause of boils! That's common sense— isn't it? All right. Boils thrive because the blood gets so weak in healthy, red cells that it can't throw off the impurities that get into the body. There's not enough rich, red blood to purify the system.

Now—S. S. S. builds back the blood to fighting strength. S. S. S. builds red-blood-cells—builds them by the millions! Boils dry up! S. S. S. is the thing. Impurities that cause boils and other skin eruptions can't stand up against the rich, healthy, red blood that S. S. S. builds. That's all there is to it.

Stop boils with S. S. S. It's the way. Get it at any drugist. The larger bottle is more economical.

America's Athletes 'Clean Up' In International Games At Madison Square Gardens

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Hubert Houben, of Germany, Adrian Paulen, of Holland and Germany, and Don Goodwin, of England, were defeated by American athletes at the Milrose A. A. games in Madison Square Garden last night.

Charles Hoff, stern black haired performer from Norway, eclipsed the indoor mark for the pole vault of 13 feet made by Nelson Sherrill, of Pennsylvania in 1928. After winning the event at 12 feet, 9 inches Hoff made one successful record attempt, the bar being placed at 13 feet, one inch. He cleared it easily.

Loren Murchison won the 40 and 60 yard dashes, with Douben, his conqueror in Europe, far in the rear. Murchison captured the 300 yard run and again outran Houben in a 220 yard leg of a relay race in which the foreigners defeated American stars. Hoff placed third in the Milrose 300 yard run, finishing behind Alan Helffrich, former Penn State star, and Johnnie Gibson, of Fordham. Paulen finished fourth.

Gordon Goodwin, of England, was outclassed by the American champion, Willie Plant, in a three mile walk, but got third place after

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

NO. 1—THE LAD OF THE BLUE CHERRY

THE Fairy Queen telephoned for the twins to go to her palace at once as she had a very important errand for them to do.

So they lost no time in hunting up her secret dwelling place, which was south of the Dingle Dell, north of the Windy Fold, west of the Glimmering Glaze and east of the Setting Sun.

"How do you do, my dear!" said the Fairy Queen when they arrived. "I'm very happy to see you."

"We're pretty well, thank you," said Nick. "Except that I've got a loose tooth and can't eat apples."

"And I have a scratch on my finger," said Nancy. "Caesar and I were playing and he scratched me."

"Just like a cat!" said the Fairy Queen. "It has queer notions, but there! We're losing time and poor Twinkle Pen is suffering."

"Twinkle Pen!" cried the twins together.

"Yes," nodded her Royal Highness. "Poor old Twinkle Pen! He is my chief clerk and secretary, you know, who attends to all my business and writes my notes for me. The poor dear fairyman went to take a drink of water last night, and in the dark he picked up his inkwell by mistake and drank all the ink."

"That was terrible!" said Nancy. "Did he die?"

"No," said the Fairy Queen. "Fairy's don't die. But he turned black all over at once, then green, then purple, then blue. He's blue now, and his hair is orange. Beside that he is in a most peculiar condition. He can't stop writing. He just sits with a pen in his hand and writes and writes and writes all the time. He's filled up all the paper in the palace and he's beginning on the walls. The ink flows right out through the ends of his fingers. It's terrible indeed."

"Can't he stop?" asked Nick.

"It seems not," said the Fairy Queen. "He's written the A. B. C.'s in twenty languages, the dictionary twice, and added up all the numbers in the telephone book. I'm ever so afraid that he'll begin on 'Forty-nine Blue Bottles—Hanging-on-the-Wall.' If he does all is lost, for that poem has no end."

"Can we help?" asked Nick.

"Yes, indeed," said the Fairy Queen quickly. "That is why I sent for you, Doctor Pulsion Pills and Doctor Sniffles, the two fairy doctors for whom I sent at once, saying that there is a cure for ink drinking. It is a blue cherry."

At that minute Doctor Sniffles himself walked into the room. And upon hearing the Fairy Queen's words, he said, "There is a cure for our poor friend, and it was blue ink he drank. If he had drunk red ink, any cherry would do to cure him. But unfortunately it was blue ink. Even black ink would have been less difficult to cure, for there are black cherries in plenty. Or green ink would have been—poof!—nothing at all!"

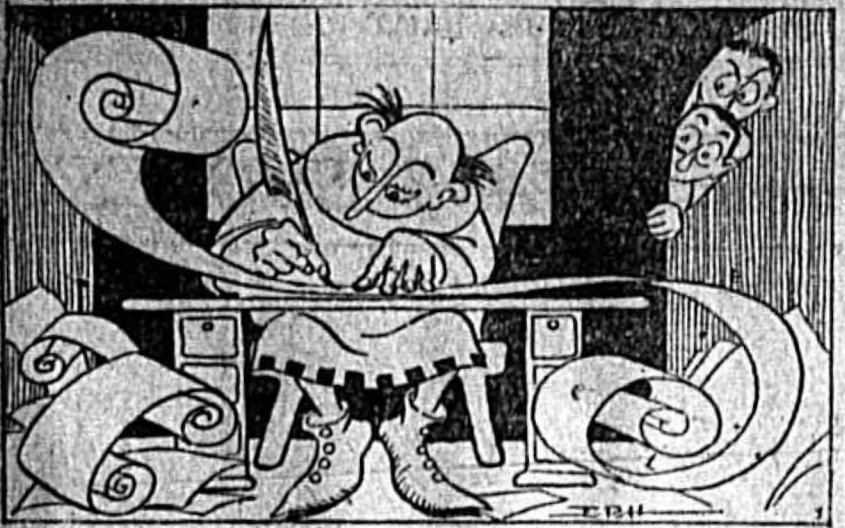

"Of course it had to be blue!" said the Fairy Queen despairingly. "And where are we to find a blue cherry?"

"Aha!" cried a voice at the door. "That was what I was trying to think of—the very word. Blue! Blue! Blue! Forty-nine blue bottles hanging on the wall! Tra, la, la, la, la, la! I'll have to write that now. I still have all the sheets and table-cloths and towels and napkins to write on."

And in walked poor Twinkle Pen, looking like a large blue and orange mosquito.

"Me, my?" sighed the Fairy Queen. "The worst has happened. We shall have to find the blue cherry as soon as we can now."

"He just sits with a pen in his hand and writes and writes and writes all the time."

DAYTONA BEACH—About two hundred members of the Daytona Business Men's League, at a meeting here, expressed themselves as decidedly in favor of "liberal" Sundays. A committee was appointed to seek the aid of the local public in the formulation of a program of "liberal ideas" for the Sabbath.

FORT MYERS—A new "era" was reported in Collier county recently, but this time, according to word reaching here, it was confined to two men, D. G. Copeland, chief engineer and acting manager of the Collier properties, and W. H. Horton, chief of police of Everglades. The two are said to have clashed during an altercation over the removal of some chairs from a club house to a lodge.

DELAND—Volusia county lost one of its oldest and best-known residents when Mrs. Mary Jane Marsh, 85 years of age, died. Mrs. Marsh, known affectionately to many as "Grandma" Marsh, had lived in Volusia county since six years before the outbreak of the Civil War.

"Peter, The Rock" To Be Played At The City Hall Tuesday Evening

STETSON UNIVERSITY, Deland, Feb. 8.—"Peter, The Rock," a religious drama in three acts showing the character development of Simon Peter, to be presented to the people of Sanford Tuesday night at the Municipal Theatre by the Green Room players of Stetson University, was presented by the student players, under the direction of Dr. Irving G. Stover, at the University auditorium here Thursday night.

The largest gathering of playgoers that ever thronged the auditorium of Stetson University to witness a student presentation in dramatics was present to enjoy the remarkable drama. Every available seat was taken, the aisles were filled, and a number of late arrivals were forced to resort to standing room.

An appreciative audience lived with "Simon Peter" through his mountain peaks and valleys of experience. The role of "Peter" was supported by J. Ollie Edwards, one of the foremost of the Green Room players. After Peter had denied Christ he came to the moment of tragic reckoning, he sank into the

SUSPENDERS

HON. ED. WALTHALL, ex-Seminole Hudson-Essex Co., Sanford Fla.

Dear Ed:—I hold no brief for suspenders that from time immemorial have been a more or less important part of man's wardrobe.

I agree with the man who claims that suspenders are a nuisance, especially if a man is fortunate enough to own two pairs of pants. In fact, for many years my idea of great wealth and prodigal opulence has been for a man to be able to have a pair of suspenders for every pair of pants that he owns.

I recognize the drawbacks of the suspenders as well as their fine uplifting service for men. But I am not any enthusiastic advocate and defender of the suspender.

If a man wants to wear a belt, depths of despair and wept bitterly, and an appreciative audience wept with him.

Another interesting development of the language in our time is that when we first entered this noble and progressive profession thieves used to steal whereas now thugs loot.—Ohio State Journal.

Smocks With Underskirt of Velvet Approved By Bandel

To the left you see Miss Foster wearing turbans of metal cloth and on the right she wears one of the new long tunics that are so very practical.

is exceedingly smart and may be worn for formal wear.

The one photographed on Chisholm is of metal cloth, in shades of coral and gold worn over black velvet. Smocking at either side of the waistline gives the slim young silhouette and achieves the belted appearance about the hips which is so very youthful and slenderizing.

The smocking is repeated on the sleeves and forms the new bell shape that is rivaling in popularity the fitted sleeves.

To achieve that "different" effect in an evening frock, I find tulle a valuable agent. It lends itself to many original arrangements, and is so illustrative and feminine that it makes any young woman more interesting.

The evening frock shown today of flame colored moire is very slim and narrow with a shallow yoke of tulle. About the hem is added a width of tulle that gives the transparent effect this season sponsors so enthusiastically.

Many yards of tulle are used in this bouffant effect which frames a huge coral rose about the neck. The frock of today does not overlook the decorative. If there is not a sash at the side or a bustle in the back there is an ornament somewhere to focus the attention.

The evening wrap is always important and the newest ones for Palm Beach give us a very good idea of what the summer wraps will be like.

I always urge upon women to realize the importance of the sheer wrap as an adjunct to style. The gown for daytime or evening is always more elegant and smarter when accompanied by a wrap even when the wrap is no more than a filmy bit of chiffon or brocade that adds no warmth whatever.

And even on the warmest days, the smart woman has a semblance of a wrap to complete her ensemble.

The evening wrap photographed is a Palm-Beach model, which will also be used this spring and summer. It is of deep coral and silver tulle outlined with beige marabout. The cape is on circular lines and has the easy graceful swing that the spring wraps will have. With this cape one naturally selects the turbans of dull cloth of gold as an accompaniment.

St. Lucie County May Vote Expenses To Rid Sections Of Mosquitoes This Week

FORT PIERCE, Feb. 9.—(AP)—National as well as state-wide attention will be focused on St. Lucie county this week when property owners vote on the proposed $500,000 bond issue to finance the eradication of mosquitoes. Those in charge of the war on the winged pest say that the bond issue will carry by an overwhelming majority and that this county will be the first in Florida to wage an active campaign against the mosquito.

"Tell the world that we have got mosquitoes—plenty of them, but we are going to get rid of them," was the editorial advice of the Fort Pierce News Tribune several months ago. Leaders of the community saw the wisdom of the advice and in less than a week a large fund was raised to finance a survey.

Expert Employed
Col. William D. Wrightson, son-in-law of General Gorgas, who cleaned up Panama, was brought to Fort Pierce. He designated the peninsula across the Indian River as the breeding area of the mosquitoes. He classed them as salt water mosquitoes.

Since that time a survey of the entire island in the county limits has been made by Col. Wrightson and he reports that a several times during the year a considerable portion of the island would be flooded by high tides. As the water receded it left pools and in these pools the mosquitoes hatched, he explained. He recommended that a dike of sufficient height be erected along the western contour of the island to stop the overflow. The water inside the dike would be connected by ditches into a main center and pumped out. He was confident of the best results.

Col. Wrightson was recommended by leading men throughout the country. J. LePrince, of Memphis, Tenn., says: "Wrightson was with me in Panama where his work was most creditable. His associates spoke highly of his accomplishments in South America. His work during the war gave us a health record in our southern camps that is a credit to the nation. In Alabama, where others failed, he promptly got the desired results at a low cost."

Lone Civil War Veteran In Congress Pays Honor To Confederate Officer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(AP)—A stirring tribute to Major General J. E. Stuart, the great cavalry leader of the Confederate army, was paid in the house today by Representative Stedman, of North Carolina, who wore the gray and is the only civil war veteran in Congress.

Major Stedman, himself accorded an ovation in the house a few days ago on his 85th birthday, took the occasion of the 53rd anniversary of General Stuart's birth to deliver the eulogy.

Major Stedman gave a sketch of General Stuart's career, which ended in death from wounds, suffered at Yellow Tavern, near Richmond, in the spring of 1864.

"My heart prompts me," said Major Stedman, "on this, his birthday, to express my admiration for a man, whose memory I shall ever cherish, whose life was one of unsurpassed courage, of unexcelled heroism, of rare self-denial—a life without stain and without reproach."

"The forces of moral power have controlled during all ages the destinies of nations. From their influence comes a supreme sense of duty. Without this the legions of Lee would not have struggled in vain for so long a time to roll back the tide of invasion across the banks of the Potomac and the marvelous campaign of Stonewall

Jackson would have found no place upon the pages of history to gild forever with a romantic lustre the beautiful valley of Virginia. Without it the great charge at Chancellorsville led by General Stuart would not have brought victory, but only disaster and ruin.

"As a military commander he had all the qualities requisite for success. As a commander of cavalry he had no superior and few equals, if any in either army. General Sedgwick, an officer of high repute in the United States army, said, 'Stuart is the best cavalry officer ever born in North America.'"

"During the war between the states in the two campaigns most disastrous to the federal army, that of General McClellan in his unsuccessful attempt to capture Richmond and that of General Pope—Stuart contributed largely to the final result. He made the entire circuit of both armies and furnished information of the highest importance to confederate headquarters."

"Military critics have pronounced the battle of Chancellorsville the most brilliant of the many victories won by General Robert E. Lee. It has been called the tactical masterpiece of the nineteenth century. This battle will never be blended with the name and fame of General Stuart."

"Surely, Miss Perier, you could

You have been so brilliantly suc-

"I think I am most disappointed in myself, Mrs. Prescott. I have done those things always which I ought not to have done and left undone those things which I ought to have done."

"I'm sure you don't mean all that, Miss Perier."

"He's much better, John. Doctor
Savage says he's surely going to

"I wish the damn thing were all over, Leslie."

"Why, what is the matter with you, Jack? Surely you know that you have everything at the mill in readiness and you saw you had everything inspected very carefully."

"Yes, I know, Leslie, but I rather wish you'd come down. You are always just a comfort to have around, dear."

"Now, don't be nervous, Jack.
Call me up as soon as you get everything over. I just had a teleleaving directly after the sequence is finished."

"I really wish she could have gone before. I don't know what made me give my consent to this awful performance."

"Don't be grouchy, dear. Go on and do your little work and I'll be here waiting for you at dinner

"Thank God, Leslie, I always find you waiting for me. If I did think I would want to live."

FIFTEEN miles of reinforced concrete sea wall to encircle every bit of waterfront on Davis Shores will be started this week under the direction of W. N. McDonald, former United States engineer and builder of the famous Malecon sea wall and drive at Havana, Cuba.

The Davis Shores sea wall will cost $1,486,000, and will be completed in one year. With the sea wall now being built about Davis Islands in Tampa, this constitutes the biggest bulkheading engineering job now in progress in the world!

The sea wall about Davis Shores will be built of many thousands of slabs of concrete and steel, each of which weighs nearly two tons. These slabs are 18 feet long, 27 inches wide and eight inches thick. They are set upright with a crane and jettied into place by high-pressure pumps.

On the ocean side of Davis Shores the sea wall will be 10 feet high, insuring forever the integrity of Anastasia Island and the historic harbor of St. Augustine. Engineers studied weather and tide charts of St. Augustine for 50 years back before designing the wall.

Such intensity of development operations, the $5,000,000 building program for 1926, and such immensity of engineering plans are making Davis Shores known throughout the land. With Davis Islands it is the most fascinating engineering project ever attempted.

Sales totaled $18,714,600 in one day when the last of this magnetic property was placed on the market. It is the most-sought property in Florida today—the type that will always be in great demand—that will bring big profits to its owners through re-sale for years to come!
