County goes to court against Sassy new foe

By NUBB WHITE
Head Staff Writer

Seminole County vs. Sassy Merlot's tipped off at 10 a.m. today at the Seminole County Courthouse. The action will help determine the county's court savvy against a big-time rival - the adult entertainment industry.

The county is suing Sassy Merlot's and VIP Gold, both in Fern Park, for operating without adult entertainment licenses. The county also claims Sassy Merlot's violates an ordinance because it is within 500 feet of residences.

Doug Bangle, the owner of Sassy Merlot's, has answered the county's lawsuit with one of his own asking a

Spaziano indicted for murder, again

Joseph "Crazy Joe" Spaziano

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

He escaped death in the electric chair, only to find himself heading back to court to face a murder trial for the second time.

Joseph "Crazy Joe" Spaziano will find himself once again in a Seminole County courtroom after a grand jury for the second time in two decades Tuesday indicted the former Outlaws motorcycle gang member for the 1975 murder of 18-year-old Laura Harberts.

Prosecutors are seeking a new conviction for Spaziano who was spared the electric chair when a key witness in the first trial recanted his testimony in 1995.

Last year, Seminole County Circuit Judge O.H. Eaton ordered a new trial for Spaziano, 51, after Anthony DiLisio testified he had lied under oath 22 years ago. DiLisio swore at Spaziano's first trial that the defendant had showed him a pair of decomposing bodies at a dump, one of which was Harberts'.

The state appealed the decision, but two months ago, the Florida Supreme Court upheld Eaton's ruling by a 7-0 vote, paving the way for prosecutors to seek a new trial.

"The new indictment is based on facts apart from the recanted testimony," said assistant state attorney Tom Hastings, who will be prosecuting Spaziano as early as July.

Hastings said the pre-trial hearings will begin before Judge Eaton on Friday morning, June 13. The trial itself, he said, is expected to get under way toward the end of July.

Hastings said the prosecution will seek the death penalty for Spaziano because "he should get it."

Hastings said little about the indictment and would not comment on what new evidence they might have to replace the testimony of DiLisio.

Seminole County sheriff's deputy Ray Parker has been investigating the Harberts case for the last year, searching for new evidence in the case which is nearly a quarter of a century old. He has been working closely with the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

Program helps kids

Editor's note: The Herald over the next few weeks will feature the Sanford Housing Authority summer program, its teachers and students.

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Kids, no matter where they are, get bored after being out of school for a while.

Rose Davis and Bonnie Deese aren't going to let that happen to the youngsters who live in the Sanford Housing Authority communities.

This week, the duo kicked off a six-week summer activity schedule that will give the youngsters something to do besides hang out on the street corner inviting trouble.

"We've got to keep these kids off the street one way or another," Davis, director of the Brethren Reaching Out (BRO) program, said.

FOP Officer of the Year

The Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 140 in Sanford has selected a Seminole County deputy sheriff as its Officer of the Year. Sgt. Dave Smith, center, receives a plaque from Sgt. Darrel Presley, left, president of the FOP as Sheriff Don Eslinger looks on. Smith was honored for disarming a suicidal man in 1996. He also organized 'Shop With a Cop,' an annual project of the FOP which takes needy children on a Christmas shopping spree. FOP Lodge 140 is comprised of 80 Seminole County deputies, and Sanford and Lake Mary Police officers. Smith is a 25-year veteran of the Sheriff's Office. He is currently assigned to Seminole Neighborhood Policing duties, District 2, which covers Sanford and Midway areas.

School desegregation: The meaning of 'sibling'

By STEVE BARNES
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - You could call it a case of sibling rivalry. The question of what constitutes a sibling was heatedly debated by the parents and educators who make up the Desegregation Consent Decree Task Force at Monday night's meeting. The task force is charged with making recommendations to the school board regarding implementation of the Justice Department's Desegregation Mandate.

At issue was the question of what, for the purpose of school attendance, constitutes a sibling. (Siblings receive placement priority when they are put on a waiting list for a particular school.) The definition submitted to the task force was straight forward. It defined a sibling as "Any brother and/or sister, related by blood, adoption, or marriage, living at the same address."

Some members of the task force and some parents felt the definition should be expanded to reflect the diverse nature of the modern household. Several people argued for the inclusion of foster care and court appointed guardianship in the definition.

Syberina Wynn, who has children in Goldsboro Elementary, Lakeview Middle and Seminole High School, asked the task force to include children who were being cared for by non-court appointed guardians. Wynn said that many families take in the children of relatives who are experiencing difficulties with drugs, finances or medical problems. Often, she said, the families do not have the financial resources to pay court costs involved in gaining legal custody. She felt that denying sibling status to those children would create a severe hardship for the custodial parents, as the children could be sent to different schools.

In the end, legalese won out over other concerns. School Board Attorney Ned Julian rejected the idea that foster children or other non-court appointed children should qualify as siblings. He recommended the following definition: A sibling is "Any brother and/or sister related by blood, adoption or marriage or court appointed permanent guardianship, permanently residing at the same address."

Remembering Tiannamen Square

The long, slow days of summer are nearly here, but in the meantime, things continue to drag on through the heat here in Central Florida.

Summer is yet to come. Historically, it has been a relatively uneventful day as well.

However, it is the day we remember those who lay down their lives for the cause of democracy in China.

On June 4, 1989 the Chinese government, plagued by a month and a half of student demonstrations in Tiannamen Square in Beijing, decided to put an end to the loud but peaceful protests.

Eight years ago, the Chinese government ordered the People's Army to open fire on the assembled masses in Tiannamen Square. Although the official government account said few died in the ambush, unofficial counts show that between a few hundred and a few thousand were killed by the government that day.

The protests began on April 18 of that year as several thousand students gathered in the square to commemorate the death of Hu Yaobang, a reform leader within the Chinese government.

When the government imposed a ban on such demonstrations 100,000 demonstrators gathered four days later in defiance of the ban. The numbers grew larger each day.

On May 13 2,000 students announced they were beginning a hunger strike. A week later, the government announced it was imposing martial law and began bringing troops in from around the country into the square.

On June 2, the students turned back an advance of unarmed troops, but things turned ugly two days later when, under cover of darkness, troops began moving in in armored personnel carriers, crushing students as they slept.

The protesters were defeated and in the following months thousands of students were gathered up and jailed.

Not all revolutions against tyranny end so tragically...depending, of course, on your point of view.

If you had asked King George III of England, who was born on this date in 1738, he might say they do. It was against King George that the American Revolution for independence was directed.

Today is a day for music.

Today, and on each Wednesday this month, the Jazz Festival in St. Louis, Mo. is being celebrated. Some of the world's best jazz, organizers say, is being presented under the stars there. More than 9,000 people are expected to attend.

Beginning today and running through the weekend in Sedalia, Mo., there will be concerts, symposia, tea dances and much more in that city's historic downtown as part of the Scott Joplin Ragtime Festival.

More than 3,500 people are expected to gather for that event.

This is the National Day for citizens of Tonga and Flag Day in Finland.

In Garden City, Kan., they are celebrating the 29th annual Beef Empire Days, a yearly celebration of the beef industry.

The events include a show of live and carcass cattle, a rodeo, a reading of cowboy poetry, a softball tournament, a beef tasting celebration and an art show.

More than 100,000 are expected to crowd into town for the 11-day event.

As if all that weren't enough, it is Eugene Klass' (better known as Gene Barry) 76th birthday. Actor Keith David is 43; singer Michelle Phillips is 52; actor Dennis Weaver is 73; actor Parker Stevenson is 44; and former tennis star Andrea Jaeger is 32.

Power Squadron honored by Sheriff Eslinger

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

Seminole County Sheriff Don Eslinger presented, on behalf of the sheriff's office, deputies with 44 awards for meritorious accomplishments in the month of April.

Three civilian awards were also given to residents of Seminole County who were instrumental in assisting the Sheriff's office in carrying out their duties.

One of the civilian "Awards of Appreciation" went to the Seminole Power Squadron.

The local power squadron is a unit of the United States Power Squadrons, a private organization of recreational boaters dedicated to promoting safe family boating through education.

The Seminole Power Squadron was helpful in the support of the Seminole County Sheriff's Office Marine Patrol by helping to equip two Marine Patrol Boats with new VHF radios.

The Sheriff's Office Marine

Patrol helps promote safe boating by handing out literature about the United States Power Squadron public boating course to violators on the water.

There is a course currently underway at Seminole Community College, but other accredited courses are offered throughout the year, often at SCC.

Kids jump just for the health of it

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

They were jumping for joy at elementary schools throughout Seminole County earlier this year.

Actually, they were jumping for the American Heart Association and just for the health of it.

Jump Rope for Heart is an annual event to raise money for the American Heart Association's battle against the number one killer in this country: heart disease and stroke.

Seminole County Public Schools raised $35,512 for the charity.

Several schools raised more than $2,000 through their jump roping efforts.

The top schools were: Wilson Elementary School in Sanford which brought in $9,214.86; Sabal Point Elementary School in Altamonte Springs, which brought in $3,849.25; Winter Springs Elementary School in Winter Springs, which raised $3,340.87; Eastbrook Elementary School in Fern Park, which raised $3,142.23; and Teague Middle School which raised $2,722.90 for the American Heart Association.

Daytrippers is worth the mileage

The Daytrippers (Not rated): After watching The Daytrippers, I sat for a moment recollecting some memories I have of my family. Through times of ups and downs, I would say we have been resilient and -thank God- we are a relatively happy bunch. Not all families can say that. Some have problems that are more deep-seeded than others. But, the survival of the family rests on the strength and character of its individual members, and their willingness to get through any problem.

First time writer-director Greg Mottola takes a suburban New York family and embeds them in a familial crisis. Daughter Eliza D'Amico (Hope Davis), oldest of two by Rita (Anne Meara) and Jim Malone (Pat McNamara), is shocked and confused after finding a note in her bedroom, written by her husband, but addressed to another woman. She goes to her parents' house seeking consultation about the note.

After minutes of analyzing the meaning, they load up the station wagon and head for the city hoping to, eventually, find Louis (Stanley Tucci), Eliza's husband, and a surprise truth. Not only do the Malones complete their mission, but hidden feelings and emotions surface among them causing turmoil and an ambiguous resolution.

Over the course of a day, the Malones conduct their investigation, and, during this time, they meet different people; some of them with unique stories of their own. There are two women, for example, who haggle over their dead mother's estate. It is a bizarre instance because the two even argue over the distribution of the deceased's medication. The scene is mildly funny, but disturbingly sad as well. I think Mottola is trying to show variations of family dysfunction in those sequences as well.

David Frazier

Screen Tests

And the "dysfunctional family" picture is what The Daytrippers is. Although, the material has been reshaped here, it takes on a quiet, subtle form that is both humorous and sad. Mottola shows that the people around you that you have known most of your life, you may not know that well at all. He also looks at relationships both within family and out. He doesn't explode with over-the-top, elaborate drama which, sad to say, some directors would do. Instead, there is a hushed insight and intelligence here. It takes its time and makes its point. And we are more than happy to take the drive with Mottola's middle class clan.

At his luxury, Mottola has an ensemble cast that contains familiar independent film faces like Stanley Tucci (Big Night), Campbell Scott (Dying Young), as a suave, Cassanova-esque author, Parker Posey (Party Girl), as Eliza's rebel sister Jo, Liev Schreiber (Walking and Talking), as Jo's construction working, aspiring philosophical author/boyfriend Carl, Hope Davis (Mr. Wrong), Pat McNamara (Commandments), and Anne Meara (Kiss of Death).

Anne Meara is the movie's standout. But of all the screen moms over the years, Rita Malone is one of the most memorable, and it takes Meara's acting savvy to bring her to life. Rita wants what is best for her daughters, but she wants the best as she sees it. There can be no deviation or she puts them down. She is lovable in some instances yet overbearing and demanding in others. Meara's portrayal is realistic and a tribute to her veteran talent.

Mottola's debut borrows a like plot structure from Martin Scorsese's 1985 comedy After Hours, but The Daytrippers is not as manic as that film. And Mottola's style reminded me of Woody Allen's. Obviously, Mottola seems to be going in the right -pardon the pun- direction. He is a young filmmaker worth paying attention to and that point is made clear by this steady and enjoyable freshman effort. Three stars (out of four).

The new definition was accepted by the task force.

Sherry O'Leary, task force chairman, sought to allay some of the fears expressed by parents of children who are not siblings. She said many of the concerns expressed would be covered under residency classification.

The recommendations of the task force will be forwarded to the school board for consideration in finalizing the implementation of the consent decree. For more information, contact Sherry O'Leary at 320-0458.

On Tuesday evening, more than 500 citizens were on hand at the school for a video presentation and to discuss the desegregation order and consent decree. A free spaghetti dinner enticed many families to attend the event, but those in attendance were as eager to hear their questions answered as they were to eat the tasty meal.

On Thursday evening at 6, the community is invited to tour the school and talk to administrators about the changes coming to the school.

Nathan said he and the task force are planning a series of 10 community meetings throughout the month of June. He said he is working up a schedule that will allow school representatives to visit areas which are affected by the order, who might be unable to go to the school for the informational sessions.

judge to force the county to pay $250,000 in damages and to stop interfering with his business.

First Circuit Court Judge Alan Dekey today hears the county's request to shut down Sassy Merlots' and at 1 p.m. Friday, Judge Leonard Wood will hear a similar claim against VIP Gold. These hearings on the county's injunctions filed on May 27 are the initial sparring in what may be a long haul, not exactly the Bulls vs. Jazz in a best-of-seven.

The nature of this industry (adult entertainment) is that they like to litigate, said Seminole County Board of Commissioners Chairman Randy Morris. We anticipate the long haul and believe ultimately we will be the victor. We may get results today. We think the issue is out and dry.

Morris recruited the legal firm of Shuttles & Bowen to represent the county in its battle. Ken Wright from that firm is the lead attorney in the game plan.

As the court action begins today, the county is making big-time changes in its outdated, 15-year-old adult entertainment ordinance. Sassy Merlots' and VIP Gold opened for business despite a temporary ban designed to halt any new enterprises until the new law, which is expected to be approved by the BOCC on June 10, goes into effect late this month.

Wright says he is intent to stop the new clubs who claim that the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that nude dancing is a form of protected speech. They've wrapped themselves in the Bill of Rights, Morris said. Today, the county began the process to accomplish an All-American unwrapping.

Davis' Bible-based program operates year-round from a converted apartment at Cowan Moughton Terrace on 5th Street in Sanford. Deese has just been hired on by the housing authority to run their WORTH (Worthy Opportunities for Residents Through Holistic approaches) program, which includes the summer education program for youngsters.

The two women are working in unison this summer to be sure housing authority residents between the ages of 10 and 18 have some activities to keep them occupied. From recreational and leisure activities to educational challenges to cultural activities to field trips, the Summer Youth Enrichment Program has a little something for everyone.

We take different approaches, Deese said, but we have the same goal: we want children to make healthy choices and good life-changing decisions.

BRO began two years ago with the idea of serving young men between the ages of eight and 18, but has ended up serving more girls than boys, most of whom are between the ages of four and 14. Davis said they reach out to whatever youngsters feel the need for their services.

This past school year, between 15 and 40 students a day came to Davis for guidance and educational assistance.

Both BRO and WORTH try to teach self-esteem, goal setting and other life skills that encourage a proactive approach to drug use prevention.

"Education is the number one tool to power," Deese said. "Reading is the number one tool to education."

Davis agreed with that assessment and has worked hard to find donors to give the youngsters tools with which to study.

Pine Crest Elementary School donated encyclopedias, science and math books, paper, crayons and other art materials. Sanford Middle School has donated recreational equipment such as croquet, volleyball, a trampoline and academic labs.

Several retired teachers have donated their time to serve as tutors and teachers at the summer activities. Others from the community will be teaching special classes from ethnic awareness to cultural diversity.

"They have been so good to us," she said of the schools and of the community. "We've had an outstanding response."

Davis and Deese will be trading off time at one another's programs throughout the six week period. They are working hard to ensure the young people who live in the housing authority don't get bored.

"These youngsters deserve the best," Davis said. "We're going to give it to them."

Left, Goldsboro Elementary School Principal Ron Nathan addressed about 500 people Tuesday night, who were in attendance at the school to discuss the federal government's consent decree for desegregating Sanford schools. A free spaghetti dinner was also served. Below: On Monday night, a task force of parents and educators questioned the feds' definition of sibling, including Syberina Wynn, who voiced her concerns.

Kelly Flinn was wrong

If Lt. Kelly Flinn's pending boot from the Air Force has so far become a national crisis that it caused the Senate Majority Leader to take umbrage with the "unfairness" of the military, and every babbling head in the media to moan and twitch over the "insensitivity" of military morale, maybe we should all take a look at our military's reasons for discipline.

Remember, when the stupidities of the politicians and the media placed them in Somalia to die because they lacked proper equipment, and to die for lower gas prices in the Persian Gulf and, later, Saudi Arabia, they had the discipline to do it because they are held to a higher standard than the wussies who are too good to serve their country. That discipline denies that "it's a 90's thing, get with it!" It also denies that "it's an 80's thing" or a "70's thing" or a "60's thing." It's a military thing, and it protects those values when threatened, which everybody pays lip service while making their bug bucks back home: like Trent Lott and Peter, Tom and Dan.

If the published shortcomings of Kelly Flinn are true, she is no more a shrinking violet being picked on by be-medalled white men than the officer - cowards at the Tailhook (Tailgrabber?) party. She shackled up with a civilian - whether engaged or disengaged in connubial bliss, still married - and apparently didn't care whether it was known or not. She was counseled about adultery and ordered to quit, but didn't. She shackled up with one or more enlisted men in her command, which was also apparently known. She was counseled about unlawful fraternization, but she still didn't quit. One might object that such fricative activity is not good for order and discipline, also unlawful, and the Air Force did, to the point of court-martial.

Now, the weepy, snivelly chorus of the Left - which can't abide discussions of accountability and responsibility - want to sanctify these affairs of the genitalia by defining them as affairs of the heart. And Old Trent, he is acting in the highest traditions of the political establishment by not knowing what he is talking about and saying "endlessly."

God save our military sons and daughters from their enemies and their posturing, ambitious friends. The big brass make enough stupid mistakes; this isn't one of them. Kelly Flinn doesn't deserve an honorable discharge; she has not acted honorably. If she wants to avoid a court-martial, the least I would give her is an Administrative discharge under less than honorable conditions. Otherwise, Kelly Flinn, quit your bluffing and take your chances with a court-martial: air all the dirty linen (skivvies?).

Paula Jones legacy

The Supreme Court this week ruled that President Clinton can be sued by Paula Jones while he is still in office. The Republican Party considers this a major victory, but is it? This short sighted ruling by the Supreme Court not only allows this president to be sued, but future presidents as well. There's nothing to stop me or anyone else from filing frivolous lawsuits against future presidents or members of congress for that matter. Something the Republicans should think about if they ever get the White House back.

I suppose the real winners are the lawyers who make lots of money from these lawsuits. Supreme Court, who are all lawyers, were taking care of their own.

A giving and caring friend

Not long ago an article was written in the Sanford Herald newspaper concerning an employee of the Sanford Police Department. His name is Edward Lee Manning. My name is Edward R. Hamilton, a resident of the City of Sanford.

The reason why I'm writing you, your honor and council members, is not of the article written on Edward Lee Manning. It's because of my close relationship with him and his family. For almost 20 years of my relationship with Edward, I have seen and known for a fact that Edward has really gone out to help those in the community, as well as, outside of the community. Council families, friends, individuals and all sorts and types of people and races.

Not only has Edward given his very, very best and last, such as pennies, nickels, dimes and even dollars. At times I seemed and feel some of the things that Edward went through.

Mayor, your honor and Council members, I'm saying these words and feelings of his integrity, honesty and being faithful. Yes, faithful. A minister of God's Holy Word. As I sit here writing this letter and addressing my thoughts, oh, have I mentioned that Edward is a minister? It too can be reflections as well as view points in a ministers life. I have been around Edward to see that too.

Just to see his preaching, anyone, anybody can get something out of his messages. A lot of things can be said and stated by me and others, but no one knows Edward Lee Manning like those who have been around him. In part of closing, this is hoping that each of you can really understand how wonderful and giving he is.

From his best and close friend forever.

Congress should fix budget deal

The more you look at the "historic" Clinton-GOP balanced-budget deal, the weaker it appears. But that doesn't mean it should be scrapped, as its harshest critics demand. Instead, it should be fixed.

Critics on the left and the right are correct about the deal's flaws, but it's better than no deal at all, and surely better than 1995-style budget warfare. Some of what's wrong can be repaired now and the rest, later - but soon.

For instance, the agreement assures funding to fulfill Bill Clinton's legacy as the "education president," but the money is badly skewed to middle-class suburbanites sending kids to college, not to improving elementary and secondary education.

That can be fixed, as the "New Democrat" Progressive Policy Institute recommends in a forthcoming report, by reducing tax credits for college tuition from $35 billion to $15 billion over five years and using the remaining $20 billion to improve grade and high schools.

The budget agreement presently calls for a substantial $4.3 billion increase this year for K-12 education -- Goals 2000 education standards, technology upgrades, child literacy and apprenticeship programs -- and Pell Grants for poor college students. Over five years, though, the increase totals only $6.8 billion.

That's a pittance compared with the $35 billion for tuition tax deductions and credits, which go only to families with incomes large enough to endure a tax burden.

Given the tendency of colleges to hike costs when new money is available, Clinton's tax breaks may actually put college out of reach for poor families -- exacerbating growing income inequality in the country.

Besides shifting money to K-12 programs where it also can benefit minorities hurt by reduced affirmative action opportunities, the PPI report recommends targeting tax credits to students attending in-state public universities as a means of creating competition among colleges and keeping costs down.

More generally, right-wing critics like Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, are correct in saying that the budget agreement doesn't deal with the nation's long-term, baby-boom retirement burden, is based on rosy economic predictions, and postpones most spending cuts to 2000.

At the same time, liberal critics like House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., are correct in saying that tax cuts contemplated by the budget deal, especially capital gains rate cuts and indexing, will primarily benefit rich people and will blow the deficit wide open in the second decade of the 21st century.

Studying work-family conflict

BOSTON--We are sitting over tea and salad, talking about time. Or, rather, the lack of it. A table of working mothers and working daughters are sharing strategies and confessing tactics.

One admits that she gets conversations with her ailing mother "done" by car phone between home and office. Another acknowledges that she bribes her sleepy preschooler into the car pool with a breakfast bar. A third runs through the bedtime ritual that has become a struggle between her desire for a fine end to her son's day and her desperation to just end her own day.

Time has become our daily weather report. My friends treat time now as if it were an act of nature.

We discuss the prevailing winds of timelessness, the occasional hurricane of a child's illness, the tornado of a mother's broken foot. A day that proceeds smoothly has become as appreciated as a balmy summer week-end in Anchorage.

I am reminded of the old adage: Everybody talks about the weather but no one does anything about it.

Arlie Hochschild has heard all these conversations. She reports them in a new book called "The Time Bind." Reading it feels a little bit like eavesdropping.

This is her second chronicle of the lopsided nature of the social change we call the women's movement. In "The Second Shift" the Berkeley sociologist dissected life in families where women were working two jobs, inside and outside the home.

We already knew that too few men were sharing the family workload. But the people in her book brought real life out from under the list of chores and complaints.

Now in "The Time Bind" she looks at the well-heralded work-family conflict. If it's been easier to adapt to male life patterns than to get men to adapt to female life patterns, it's also been easier for women to adapt to the traditional male values of the workplace than for men and society to adapt to the traditionally female values of family life.

Hochschild studied the time-deficit complaints of people who work in a "family-friendly" Fortune 500 company she calls Amerco. Not surprisingly, beneath the policy veneer, there is a company ethic that rewards men and women who work long hours. Today the words "family man," she writes, have "negative overtones, designating a worker who isn't a serious player."

But what is new, as Hochschild describes it, is that however stressed and torn women feel, "growing numbers of working women are leery of spending more time at home. ..."

Family was once the "haven in a heartless world" or regimented workers. But now the office has become more like home and home has become more like work. "In this new model of family and work life, a tired parent flees a world of unresolved quarrels and unwashed laundry for the reliable orderliness, harmony and managed cheer of work," she writes. "The emotional magnets beneath home and workplace are in the process of being reversed."

My friends treat time now as if it were an act of nature.

This is by no means true for every worker. Or for every family. At times, Hochschild seems to be blaming the victim. By the time she finishes her study, even Amerco's family-friendly veneer has been shattered by demands of the marketplace.

But her sense that family work has been devalued rings true. The second shift now feels like just that--more work. And family investments themselves feel risky.

"For now at home, there is an atmosphere of emotional 'deregulation' which is creating a basic crisis of security," she says. "People wonder: Where do we feel the safest? Even among those with lousy jobs, the answer is sometimes 'at work.'"

Hochschild might have made a stronger link between her earlier book about inequality at home and the female drift toward work. The trend toward two-workaholic families may well be connected to women's search for full partnership.

Today women are raised as partners. They are coeds and co-workers. The great divide begins for many at parenthood. Sometimes it's easier for women to do less cleaning than to get men to do more. Maybe it's also easier to "work like a man" than to get men to share "women's work" at home.

But in the time bind created by all these cultural and economic forces, we have fewer hours with and for family. We have even created a third shift: managing the daily troubles of an overloaded home life and a "hurried" child.

If this is a weather pattern, it spells trouble for kids. Not trouble with a capital T, but the small t of unhappiness, loneliness. What is squeezed for all of us is the sense of nurturing, the pleasure in each other's company.

Hochschild calls for a time movement to right the imbalance.

JACK ANDERSON

Call this the case of the captive staffers.

Railroads pamper congressional staffers

WASHINGTON--"Captive shippers" is the term railroad-industry types use to describe those who live in remote areas, and thus have only one choice when it comes to transporting their goods via rail.

Call this the case of the captive staffers. More than 30 top staffers from the House and Senate spent the week-end of April 20 being ferried from Los Angeles to Albuquerque, N.M., courtesy of the good folks at Burlington-Northern Santa Fe Railroad. All expenses were paid by the company, including the round-trip air fare from Washington to Los Angeles.

Also on board were several Burlington-Northern bigwigs, including their lobbyists, there to lecture the staffers on the finer details of the railroad industry.

It wasn't that long ago that railroad barons ruled American commerce, and could get what they wanted from practically any member of Congress. But those days are long gone. Now they have to use the same techniques as everyone else to get their points across. Apparently the folks at Burlington-Northern have figured out what most lobbyists in the nation's capital already know: If you want to gain influence on Capitol Hill, talk to the staff.

Dick Russack, of Burlington Northern's corporate relations office, explains that "it was just a business meeting on the train." Included in a partial itinerary we've reviewed were presentations about Burlington-Northern's safety improvements, a lecture on the railroad's relationship with Amtrak, and a fascinating lecture on the Diesel Fuel Deficit Reduction Act.

But the trip wasn't all business; time was also set aside for "scenic viewing," among other things. Russack declined to provide us with a complete copy of the trip's itinerary, explaining that it was filled with too many unimportant, logistical details and that he'd be forced to retype the document if he were to send it to us. He apologetically added: "I'm not trying to be secretive."

Russack went on to explain that the trip was made possible because the company "just happened to have" a passenger car sitting around for the occasion (normally, Burlington-Northern is in the freight business).

By any measure, the company has a lot riding on the outcome of this year's reauthorization of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act, the law provides the basic framework for all federal transportation spending over the next five years. Railroad companies want to make sure they don't get passed over in favor of highway projects and other pork-barrel prizes that lawmakers like to show off for the constituents back home.

To help its cause in Washington, Burlington-Northern spent $90,000 last year for the services of two Washington lobbying firms, one of which now employs two former Senate majority leaders: Bob Dole and George Mitchell. Burlington-Northern's political action committee laded out an additional $133,000 last year to dozens of candidates for local and national office.

By no means is Burlington-Northern the only firm that likes to give congressional staffers a respite from the daily grind. It happens virtually every week and in almost every industry. In Detroit, for example, automakers have been known to invite staffers to test-drive the latest models and to tour their plants. And all of it is perfectly allowable within congressional ethics guidelines.

Hastings has no doubts he and his team will be successful in the new prosecution of Spaziano.

"We remain convinced of his guilt," the assistant state's attorney said. "We are confident we will prevail."

The indictment handed down Tuesday alleges that Spaziano stabbed Harberts to death some time between Aug. 5, 1975 and a year later when her body was found.

DiLiso, who was a teenager at the time of the murders, had testified in 1976 that Spaziano had taken him to the dump to show him two bodies, one of which he identified as Harberts'.

He later told prosecutors he couldn't recall the event clearly and, still later, that he had been manipulated and that he had lied under pressure from law enforcement officials looking for a resolution to the case and by his father who allegedly hated Spaziano for having had an affair with his young wife.

Spaziano remains confined at Rufford Correctional Facility in Starke. He is still serving time in prison for a conviction in a 1974 rape. An Orange County judge refused to overturn that conviction last year.

He will come to Seminole County for the trial and for the pretrial hearing at the end of this week.

Parents need to take a few lessons from their children

Instant jerk...just add kid in sports. All too often, this is what happens to parents who mix their children and sports.

Why is it that seemingly normal people turn into raving lunatics who lose all of their values when their kid gets called out at home or has his touchdown called back?

I remember going to my uncle's little league games and watching the parents in action. Not only did they scream and yell at the umpires, referees, visiting parents, and each other, but they also screamed at their own children. The same children who were out on the field, playing their hearts out and doing the very best they could. The same parents who tell their kids to just do the best they can on exams are insulting them because they struck out.

Sports are supposed to be fun for kids. They are supposed to learn team work, accountability, and sportsmanship.

Luckily, in some cases, we don't rely on the parents to teach them these things.

These little leaguers grow up and become high school players and unfortunately, their parents go with them.

Such is the case at Apopka High School. Apopka, a baseball team that hasn't made it to the state final four since 1978, had a tremendous season this year. Ironically, their match-up for the state championship was against Seminole County powerhouse, Lake Brantley. The irony? Lake Brantley High School is not five miles from Apopka.

These kids played in the same neighborhoods when they were growing up. They play on the same summer leagues now. And their parents know the kids and each other.

Lake Brantley was victorious in the state championships. Apopka put up quite a fight before being named state runner up in the 14-6 loss.

Now the parents are stepping in. Just days after the game, an anonymous letter was received by Apopka Athletic Director Philip King speculating that one of the Brantley players did not live in the school zone. A private investigator's report was received by Lake Brantley Athletic Director Bob Peterson suggesting the same about junior Felipe Lopez. Again, the charges were anonymous.

I have a few questions.

These kids live in such close proximity to and are so familiar with each other, wouldn't this be common knowledge before this point? Was it only a problem in light of the fact that Apopka got smacked around by Brantley? And if the parents are so concerned about the issue, why not come forward and voice their complaints instead of hiding behind anonymous letters?

The answer is clear. The parents are taking the loss harder than the students who played in the game. Just like they did on the little league field.

I was always taught that you can't learn how to win until you learn how to lose. Obviously the Apopka parents haven't learned that valuable lesson.

The saddest part about all of this is that the kids will take the brunt. The Apopka players will be called sore losers and the Brantley kids will be called cheaters. These two schools sit in each other's back yards, making this a problem that will not easily go away.

Apopka lost...Lake Brantley won. If there were kids on the team that didn't live in the right school district, it should have been brought to light before now. Since it wasn't, it can only be assumed that these parents need to learn a few lessons on sportsmanship.

Eckstein taken by Red Sox

By KELLIE WERNER

GAINESVILLE — While David Eckstein was working out in the gym, major league baseball teams were trying to decide where he would spend the next decades of his life.

It turns out that the Red Sox opted to make Boston the future home of the Seminole High School and University of Florida grad.

"I was not expecting to be drafted early," Eckstein explained. "But when Eddie Wyse, the scout for Boston, called me at 8:45 PM and said he was happy to tell me that the Red Sox had drafted me in the 19th round, I was very happy and relieved."

Eckstein had a very successful career as a Gator. He set a new all-time hit record while averaging .341 in 1997 with eight home runs and 34 RBI. Eckstein also scored 85 runs and was hit by a pitch 25 times, the UF single-season school record in both categories. In all, the second baseman placed among the top ten in 11 offensive categories.

In addition to his athletic abilities, Eckstein was honored yesterday for his academic prowess.

While making his mark on the baseball field, Eckstein was also making the marks in the classroom. He carries a 3.51 grade point average in Political Science, for which he was named to the GTE Academic All-America first team baseball squad.

Hard work is a part of Eckstein's life. He has taken advantage of every chance he has been given and has proven himself in every endeavor. He never gave up, though, and that perseverance has paid off.

"I truly enjoy baseball," Eckstein said. "I think it's fun. And I always keep in mind the harder I work, the closer I am to achieving my goals. When there is something that you really want to achieve, the hard work comes a little easier."

Eckstein also gives a lot of credit to those who have helped him, including his father, Sanford City Commissioner and Seminole High School teacher Whitey Eckstein, his high school baseball coach.

Pirates advance to Ruth Finals

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — A pair of two multi-run innings did the trick as the undefeated Moose Lodge Pirates ousted the Nobles Construction White Sox from the Sanford Recreation Department Babe Ruth Baseball League City Championship Series semifinals 14-4 Tuesday evening at Zinn Beck Field.

Nick Erickson and William Cleveland scattered seven hits and the Pirates' offense backed their efforts with a six-run second inning and a seven-run fourth inning to end the game by the run rule in the fifth inning and win their 17th straight game without a defeat. The winners also scored a single run in the third inning.

The Best-Two-out-of-Three City Championship Series finals will begin this Saturday with the American Division champion Pirates taking on the American Division champion Blitz Clean Royals (17-2), who eliminated the Knights of Columbus Cardinals in two games, at Zinn Beck Field at 10 a.m. Game two would be Monday at 5:45 p.m. and the if necessary game, if both teams have a win, would be Tuesday at 5:45 p.m.

Contributing to the Pirates' 10 hit attack were William Cleveland (double, two singles, three runs, two RBI), Richard Wiggins (two doubles, two runs), Adam Frank (double, run), Jay Roland (single, two runs, two coach Mike Powers and Steven Shaif in the University of Florida Sports Information office.

"I owe a lot to Steve. I have been privileged to have him in my corner," Eckstein said.

Although no plans are definite as of yet, Eckstein believes that after a trip home to Sanford this weekend, he will then travel to Ft. Myers for training. After that, it is expected that he will go to New York to play on a team in the New York-Penn League and then move on to Boston.

A move to Boston is appealing to Eckstein and although he said that he was actually a Braves fan when he was younger, he conceded that he is definitely a Red Sox fan now.

BELLSHORN TABBED

Former Oviado High School star and current University of Central Florida Knight Todd Bellhorn was the only other Seminole County player drafted as of press time. Bellhorn, an outfielder/pitcher, was picked in the ninth round by the San Francisco Giants.

national Division champs and beat the Braves twice during the regular season.

In the bottom of the second, Ryan Quinn scored on a pair of errors and Antonio Miller walked and scored on a ground out by Ronald Bradley.

Then Freddie Howard walked and scored on a single by Beas love for the Diamondbacks in the bottom of the second inning to cut the deficit to 2-1.

The game slowed with disputing arguments between both teams and the umpire but Charles Ware got things going for the Braves in the fourth inning as he walked and later scored on a grounder by Poloski.

The Diamondbacks came back in the top of the fifth inning to tie the game as Roger Breum and Mike Towers both walked with one out and Roger Breum scored on a sacrifice fly by Erik Breum and Towers came plateward on a wild pitch.

The Braves answered immediately to the challenge, but it took some clutch performance. Poloski opened the inning with a walk, but the next two batters made outs. Cary Medlock drew a crucial walk, setting the stage for Johnson's heroics.

The Diamondbacks still had a chance to come back one more time in the bottom of the sixth inning and with one out, Love singled and got as far as third base.

The Braves felt the pressure and winning pitcher Ryan Quinn stepped up.

"I told him to dig deep and if he really wanted it, then he's make it happen.

And make it happen he did, striking out the final two batters looking to end the game.

"If we did not win, the Braves are the team I would have chosen to win," said Diamondbacks coach Jeff Deen. "They are my favorite team with good kids and good athletes. These two teams are a credit to the city. I am proud of this league. It's a lot of fun."

Pacing the Braves' attack were Donte Johnson (two singles, one RBI), Cary Medlock (double), Ryan Quinn and Charles Ware (one single and one run scored each), Jason Poloski (one run scored, one RBI), Antonio Miller (one run scored) and Ronald Bradley (one RBI).

Other members of the Braves were Daniel App, Adonis Cain, Turner Davis, Garron Davis, Ronald Hooks and Odie Osteren.

Providing the offense for the Diamondbacks were Sean Love (two singles, one RBI), Roger Breum (one single, one run scored), Mike Deen (one single), Mike Towers and Fred Howard (one run scored each) and Erik Breum (one RBI).

Also playing for the Diamondbacks were Mike McKenzie, Dekwan Debose, Levi Gibb and Jeff Burkett.

When describing the Braves team this season Bender and his assistant, Mike Taylor, said only two words: determined and destined.

Taylor also stated that he and Bender had played in the Sanford leagues as kids.

"The community gave to us and now we are giving something back," Taylor said.

The loss doesn't mean the end of the season for several of the Braves and Diamondbacks. Many of them will be playing on the Sanford All Star A Team including Daniel App, Ryan Quinn, Freddie Howard, Erik Breum, and Mike Deen.

What helps restless legs syndrome?

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: In a recent column, you addressed the problem of restless legs syndrome and gave the address of the Restless Legs Foundation. Unfortunately, I misplaced the information. Can you provide it again?
DEAR READER: Gladly. Restless legs syndrome is a common and distressing condition, marked by uncontrollable feelings of twitching and restlessness in the legs, usually at night. Victims usually have to arise frequently and move about in attempting to relieve symptoms — hence, the sobriquet "Night Walkers." As you know, this condition, of unknown cause, can severely disrupt sleep and make life a living Hell. Many patients have seriously considered suicide. Fortunately, restless legs syndrome is treatable with prescription drugs, such as Permax.

(or the equivalent in wine or beer) a day. Above that level, the liver has trouble handling the load of alcohol and will begin to use alcohol, rather than fat, for energy. Over time, the unused fat builds up, causing a fatty liver, which is the first step toward cirrhosis.
As I've said before many times, the medical definition of "social" drinking has been vastly altered in the past few years. What was customarily accepted as moderate alcohol consumption (a couple of cocktails, wine with dinner and a nightcap) years ago is now known to be harmful. Moderate drinking is presently considered to be one cocktail (3 oz.) or a couple of glasses of wine or about two beers a day. You may not accept this as medical progress, but it is a fact.

Here is the information you seek: Restless Legs Syndrome Foundation, 4418 19th Street, N.W., Suite 201, Rochester, MN 55901; (507) 287-6445.
DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had frequent attacks of hemorrhoid pain over the past 10 years, so I tried to figure out how I could treat myself. I reasoned that hemorrhoids, being swollen veins around the anus, would respond to heat or cold.
Not having very good aim with a blow torch from that direction, I elected to apply an ice cube to the painful area. While, as doctors say, this was more than mildly discomforting for a few minutes, the procedure worked: The hemorrhoid shrank and the discomfort lessened. You may laugh at this, but the ice works well for me, although I don't know why.
DEAR READER: Above all, don't apply a blow torch to your rear end! Seriously, there is a reason why ice works for your hemorrhoids — and has also helped generations of other patients so afflicted. As you stated, a hemorrhoid is a swollen, irritated vein at the rectal opening. The application of cold predictably causes blood vessels to constrict (this is why cold compresses are used to treat the swelling of bruises and sprains).

DEAR DR. GOTT: I read in your column that more than two cocktails a day is unhealthy. This would be the equivalent of about four beers or 12 ounces of wine. Did I read you correctly? This doesn't sound like much alcohol.
DEAR READER: You read me correctly. An average adult can metabolize only about four ounces of spirits

Perfect comment, imperfect play

By Phillip Alder
The Greek philosopher Aristotle made many good observations, including, "The most perfect political community is one in which the middle class is in control and outnumbers both of the other classes." However, that has as much chance of coming to fruition as the flat tax. The upper of the "other classes" will never relinquish the reins.
In today's deal, there is a perfect line that the defenders, of whatever class or political persuasion, can do nothing about. How would you play in four spades? West leads the heart queen.
When the good dummy appeared, South thought he had no problems. After winning in hand with the heart king, he cashed his two top trumps

HOROSCOPE

Your Birthday
Thursday, June 5, 1997
Your efficacy as an entrepreneur will be determined in the year ahead by the foundations you've built. If they are structurally strong, your probabilities for success will be enhanced.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In a delicate situation today you'll be in a position to take unfair advantage of another. However, to your credit you won't, and this will prove to be a lucky decision. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) A matter that has caused you a fair amount of anxiety looks like it will work to your benefit today. Regardless of appearances, don't give up hope.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) For today it's best to do as you can to transform new contacts into friends. Keep everything on a sociable level and don't talk shop or politics.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Lady Luck is in your corner today and she'll do all she can to help you realize your aspirations. Be certain that you're doing your part.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your sound judgment and sense of humor are your most valuable assets today. They will enable you to reach your goals without being forceful or arrogant.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In a commercial arrangement today it might look like you're getting the short end of the stick, but eventually everything should even out.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Yielding to self-doubts is the major ingredient that could retard your progress today. Believe in yourself and you will reach your goal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 18) If you are working for someone else today, do more than what you are asked. Your efforts won't go unobserved and you may be rewarded accordingly.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Some happy and lucky experience might be in the offing for you today. It won't be of a tangible nature, but of the real substance that life offers.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Beneficial closures could result today if you let events run their natural course. Conversely, forcing issues could generate complications.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your initial assessments could be on the negative side today. Study matters closer, and you should see much promise for which to be grateful.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Starting today your financial trends could be showing signs of improvement. You must remember not to waste what could be effectively utilized later.
