Hope, help for failing students

By VICKI DOSORMIER Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - The Seminole County school board wants to help students at Lyman High School move above C-level.

Through a program approved by the school board Tuesday at Lyman called Project Hope, students whose grades are dangerously close to failure will have the opportunity to ask for extra help and the potential of saving their grades. Students who have already fatled a class can get a second chance and those who falled to get credit in a class can get a chance to earn it.

Though the board put the approval of the school's Project Hope on hold during the last meeting, they approved the pilot program after much discussion last evening.

Project Hope, proposed by Lyman principal Carlton Henley, is designed to prevent students who are earning grades below a C in a See Hope, Page 5A enrolled from failing, help those who failed to earn credit in a course they previously falled or those who failed to recieve credit for a class because of excessive unexcused absences.

Rich Harris, a science teacher at Oviedo High School, was the only member of the public who rose to address the board.

Harris said the pilot program, which he believes will eventually be put into all the high schools in the district, puts an undue burden on the teachers. Henley disagreed.

"I don't think that it is an unrealistic amount of work to give teachers so students can have a chance to graduate," Henley said. He added that 43 of the teachers had applied for a chance to teach in the special program. They will be paid at their regular rate for the additional teaching hours.

Deadline looms

Mail income tax returns early or face line

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

Thursday is the deadline for mailing income tax returns. The U.S. Postal Service is bracing itself for the annual surge of mail from last-minute taxpayers. Unless previous arrangements have been made.

tax returns must be deposited in the mail with a postmark no later than April 15th. The only postal facility which will be open in Seminole County late Thursday night is the Lake

Mary Post Office, at 495 Lake Mary Blvd. Postmaster Richard Sherrill explained, "Our desks won't be open, but we will have people on hand to accept those last minute tax returns between our normal closing time of 5:30, and midnight."

"If there are people remaining in line at midnight." he added, "we will still have the letters postmarked for the 15th."

Sherrill said he was amazed at the number of people who turned out in the last minutes of the filling time last year. "We expect the same thing this year," he said. "The parking lot was jammed, and people were lining up for that last minute mailing."

One of the problems cautioned by Sherrill is postage. "Some of the larger forms will require more than the usual 29¢ stamp," he said, "Most of the larger forms average about 52¢, but if you are in doubt, we'll have a scale available with which to weigh the forms."

"The best way to avoid the crowd is to mail your form during the day," he said. "We are trying to provide service for those last minute mailers, but an early mailing is the safest way to be certain your forms are postmarked on the 15th."

The postal service also maintains a regional distribution center on Rinehart Road in Lake Mary. "Don't get us confused with the Lake Mary Post Office," said Carl Downing, one of the managers at the center. "Just to avoid confusion and delay, it should be stressed that our's is not a post office where you can mail letters, we are a distribution operation."

Downing said only a few people tried to mail their returns at the center last year, but there were many the previous year, shortly after the facility first began

The facilities at the Sanford Post Office will close at the regular 5 p.m. time period Friday, but a spokesman said mail deposited inside, by 8 p.m., will also contain the April 15 postmark which is required.

Civil penalty recommended

Ex-senator's trip violated ethics law; speaker cleared

TALLAHASSEE - Former state Sen.

House Speaker Bolley "Bo" Johnson over a state agency's short-lived hiring of his wife.

Judge Mary Clark's decision in the Gardner case, which will be considered by the Ethics Commission June 3, recommended a civil penalty of $1,346, the cost of the trip for Gardner and his wife.

The ruling is the first by any judge that acceptance of lobbyist-paid trips violates state law because they are intended to exert influence.

"While there may have been no quid pro quo, in the strict sense of expecting (Gardner) to vote in a particular way on a specific bill, the trips were designed to engender favorable feelings ... toward his hosts and their interests," Clark wrote.

Two similar cases, involving former Reps. Frank Messersmith and Dale Patchett, are also scheduled for administrative hearings Winston "Bud" Gardner violated ethics laws by accepting a 1988 Key West trip paid for by lobbyists trying to curry favor, an administrative law judge ruled.

In another recent case, the executive director of the Ethics Commission recommended dismissal of a complaint against House Speaker Bolley "Bo" Johnson over a case is pending before a state appellate court.

Gardner said Monday Clark's ruling "goes far beyond anything anybody has come up with so far" on the issue.

"It's one thing to think someone in public office should not accept anything no matter how small," he said. "It's one thing to think it, another thing to be found guilty."

The Ethics Commission could either accept, reject or modify Clark's recommen-dation, which would then be considered by

The facility has been operating for adults recently, and has produced several complaints from citizens in the nearby area regarding late night noise and traffic into a club for teenagers without alcohol."

Golf complex benefits city

A proposal has been made to the City of Sanford for the development of Eagles Nest Golf Course, a world class complex, on city owned property near Geneva. We believe it is good proposal and urge lie offer to move ahead with it.

The facility would actually consist of two 18 hole courses, 6,000 and 7,000 yards in size. The courses would be public, and could become excellent attractions for the north Seminole County area.

We believe there are sufficient golfing enthusiasts to support this complex in addition to the Mayfair Country Club in the western area of the city.

Many golfers who play regularly at the Mayfair, may drive to other areas to play a different course This new facility could provide this occasional diversion.

One of the items mentioned in the proposal was the plan for a program which would have an estimated 150 local underprivileged children participating in golf. It would be at no cost, as a community service project.

Affording them the opportunity to participate in a sporting activity such as this is commendable.

The city is forced by government mandate to discharge its waste water, but not into the St. Johns River. Site 10, on which the courses would be built, is where this is being accomplished.

Innovative Property Development, which has proposed the courses, has pledged six percent of its gross sales to the city. The amount has been estimated at $70,000 for just the first year. With increased activity, the amount is sure to grow in years to come.

The substitute of such an attraction will also help bring additional people and money into the substitute of such and group area.

The birsy problem will be with a request for 50 year lease. As Commissioner A.A. blem will be with a request for McClanahan commented, there could be different requirements in years shead for the waste water discharge, and changes may be

We believe a contract agreement can be reached that will provide for that possibility.

Pay now, not later

Several months ago, I had the opportunity to meet with eight members of Hungary's Parliament. Hungary, of all the Eastern European nations, is probably the best-prepared to make the switch from communism to democracy and a free enterprise system. The Hungarians had not let the spirit of freedom die since the Hungarian revolution. tion was crushed in 1966, and had a very active underground free enterprise economy. One of the legislators who as a young man participated in the '56 revolt told me that he was worried about the economic situation in Hungary and other Eastern European Nations. He said despite the fact that the Hungarian economy was in the best shape of any of the former Eastern bloc countries, it was far from adequate. He stated that the economy was so poor that many people in Hungary are talking about the "good old days" when even though they didn't have freedom, they had food on the table. I salted how long democracy could last under these circumstances and he said maybe another year if the economy doesn't get better.

The words of this Hungarian legislator apply to the situation in Russis. The reform movement is tenuous at best. The economy is in terrible shape and support is growing for the hardliners. and support is growing for the hardliners. President Clinton has recommended spending approximately $1.6 billion for foreign aid to Russia. This proposal is unpopular in the United States. But one of the jobs of those in Congress is to leok at the long term implications of their votes and not just at the immediate popular political impact. If Russia turns back to communism, the United States' problems increase in the economic field and more importantly, militarily. The primary problem will be who controls the numerous nuclear weapons and means of delivery which still nuclear weapons and means of delivery which still exist. Also, a hard-line government in Russia would impact negatively on the former Eastern bloc countries and Western Europe, Instead of spending $1.6 billion in aid to Russia, we will be spending tens of billions in rebuilding our national defense and shoring up Western Europe. Over the years in the Congress, I was rarely a proponent of foreign aid, voting for it only when I thought it made sense for our country. I think that President Clinton should be supported on the judicious use of foreign aid for Russia. This aid should not be used indiscriminately, but should be used to foster the free enterprise system.

Well, we've learned, we think, that a nation doesn't make it big time unless it has A) a market economy. B) exposure to Western ideas and C) political liberty. There is much variation, but that's the way it works from Europe to America to dapan.

That glorious voice was heard

BOSTON — In the end, she will be remembered less for her sound than for her symbolism and, I suppose, there is some sadness in that. Every obituary of the great contraito Marian Anderson who died Thursday (April 8) at 96 will focus on the special moment when her artistry interacted with our history. On a cold Easter Sunday afternoon in 1939, this Negro — not black, not African American, not yet — stood before a crowd of 75,000 people in front of the Lincoln Memorial. She would write later that, "There seemed to be people as far as the eye could see." When the racially mixed crowd in the racially segregated capital of America grew still, she felt like she was choking.

By that day, Marian Anderson was already in her 40s. She had been born in Philadelphia before the turn of the century, her father, a coal and ice dealer, had died when she was 10, and her mother, who had lost her teaching certificate in a fire, had worked by acrubbing

By then, Anderson had already been refused admittance to a Philadelphia school of music. No Negros need apply. She had already been forced to take the voice that stretched over two octaves of depth, power and gentleness, to Europe just to find an audience.

She had already been told by the conductor Arturo Toscanini, "Yours is a voice such as one hears once in a hundred years." And — perhaps this mattered more — she had already earned enugh money to call Wanamaker's and announce that her mother would not be appropriately an announce that her mother would not be announce that her mother would not be scrubbing floors anymore.

But in the winter of 1939, The Daughters of the American Revolution, the very people who proudly traced their ancestry to break-away republicans, had barred Anderson from singing in their auditorium. Constitution Hall. Nearby, an appalled Eleanor Roosevelt, a certified D.A.R. herself, heard the news and quit in a very public protest.

E.R. was then a first lady embroiled in enough controversy to dwarf those of Hillary Clinton. The year before, at a segregated Southern conference, she had moved her chair into the siele between the black and white sections. Now she and Harold Ickes, the secretary of the interior, decided to find a place for the concert, although the first lady herself wouldn't attend.

So it was that late on that Easter afternoon, a wary Anderson, a woman who "didn't like a lot of show" and was uncertain about safety, came to stand behind six microphones and eight electric heaters at the Lincoln Memorial feeling as if she might choke. But soon she felt "a great wave of goodwill pour from these people, almost engulfing me" and then did all she had ever really wanted to do in her whole life: She sang.

First she sang, "My country 'tis of thee,

sweet land of liberty." then she sang Schubert and then spirituals.

It would be four more years before Marian Anderson got her concert in Constitution Hall. It would be another 15 years before segregation cracked. She wouldn't become the first black to sing with the Metropolitan Opera until 1955 when her voice was past its peak. Later she would say. "Other Negros will have the career I dreamed of." But they would have it, in part, because of her dreams.

"There is a quality in the women of her generation," a cousin once said, "a stoic quality. You rise above whatever indignity is present." She did that. Indeed, Marian Anderson's lifetime spanned an era from stoicism to activism. from ragtime to rap, from segregation and lynchings to civil rights and gang

Anderson will focus on the special moment when her artistry interacted with our history.

She wanted to sing, just that, the way Jackie hall that that. The Robinson wanted to play ball, just that. The way Rosa Parks wanted to sit down. Just that.

"Music to me means so much, such beautiful things," she said, "it seemed impossible that you could find people who would curb you, stop you from doing a thing which is beautiful."

But there are times when it requires bravery just to hit a ball. There are also times when you cannot sing or be heard without changing the world first. She lived through those times.

Marian Anderson didn't want to make political history. She wanted to make music. The woman who should have been known simply as the singer of the century will be better known as a sound of historic change.

But in the end she was a daughter of perhaps a mother of another American revolution. In more than one way, for 96 years, this glorious voice was heard.

JACK ANDERSON Observers treated Haiti as a vacation

WASHINGTON - If you're a recent college graduate and you speak French, the Organization for American States might have a job for you in Haitt. It pays $6,000 per month, tax-free, and it offers plenty of opportunity to tan, relax, and enjoy the local nightlife. And it's all in the name of human rights.

The OAS monitors in Halti could hardly have a more difficult task. Haiti is one of the most ravaged nations on earth. Since President Jean-Bertrand Aristide was deposed by military coup in September 1991, the situation has deteriorated into a tug of war between Aristide supporters and his military opponents. All too often, human rights have been caught in the crossfire.

Between Sep tember 1992 and February 1993, a team of 16 OAS observers were the only outside human rights monitors in the country. A subsequent accord between military-backed Prime Minister Marc Bazin and Dante Caputo.

the special United Nations-OAS envoy working to end Haiti's 18 month-old crisis, allowed the United Nations and OAS to dispatch 40 more observers to the country in February. followed by teams of between 100 and 200. Though the aituation recently got better when more experienced monitors arrived, several sources told us that many of the monitors treated the experience more like spring break than a humanitarian mission.

"What we got was a bunch of people who had no knowledge of Haiti or its customs." said one source close to the Haitian military who has interviewed many of the observers. 'Many are kids in their mid-20s who are very nice, but completely ill-informed." An American businessman who returned from the country in March told our associate Dean Boyd that observers could be seen "absolutely every night in the hotel bar or discothe-

By all accounts, the first mission was a largely failure. In its rush to send observers to the country, the OAS apparently paid little mind to the qualifications of its applicants. Within days, the Haitian government expelled John Kosin, a supposedly impartial OAS observer, after it learned that he worked for a pro-Aristide lobbying group in Washington. Another member of the group then resigned and returned to Canada.

The team also came under fire from human-rights organizations in the United States. "Virtually no one among the 16 with whom I met had previous experience in human rights work or knew anything about human rights in Haiti." charged William O'Neill, deputy director of the New York: based Lawyer's Committee for Human Rights in a scathing October 1992 letter to U.N. officials.

"I spoke to several members of the delegation and they freely admitted that the team had been put together in a haphazard fashion and that they had no idea what their mandate was. ... While some seemed interested and asked me very good questions, some questions, though well meaning, revealed a shocking lack of knowledge about the human-rights situation in Haiti." O'Nelli continued.

When the OAS was given notice to quickly find nearly 100 more observers in February, it only took four days to select and ship 40 new civilian observers out to Haiti. Applicants were only required to speak French and accept a $6.000 check each month. Nonetheless, OAS spokesman Jorge Barbosa said that "we were very careful in the selection process this time."

Assistant City Attorney Donna McIntosh responded, "The city could entertain the proposal or put it out for another bid, whatever it wishes."

"My only concern," said Commissioner A.A. Mc. Clanahan, "is that times change and requirements, for waste water discharge will also change. Mr. Simms wants a 50 year lease, but what will the city need 20 years from now?"

Simms responded that he would be willing to enter into agreements to cover such changes in the future, as initial plans for the development are formulated.

WASHINGTON - Tough new measures perhaps even state licensing of recreational boat operators - could help reduce drunkenness and fatal accidents on the nation's waterways, federal safety officials say.

In a report Tuesday, the National Transportation Safety Board proposed mandatory life-jacket laws, better training for boat operators and more testing for alcohol consumption.

The board stopped short of proposing state licensing of boat operators but said the idea merits serious consideration.

The NTSB began its study of boating safety before last month's Florida boating accident in which two Cleveland Indians professional baseball players died. But board members acknowledged that the incident has caused new interest in cracking down on inebriated boaters.

Indians pitchers Tim Crews and Steve Olin were killed the night of March 22 when Crews drove his 18-foot boat into an unlighted private dock on Little Lake Nellie near Clermont, Fla. Crews was found to have been legally drunk.

The NTSB said more people die each year in boating accidents than in any other form of transportation accidents except highway crashes.

"Recreational boating is the only mode of transportation in which the operator is not required to demonstrate an understanding of the rules of the road and an ability to operate the vehicle," it said.

"There are people out there operating boats, drinking and dying," said board Chairman Carl Vogt. "I think we all feel we've got a problem of alcohol and boating.'

But he said there is strong resistance to licensing, a universally accepted form of state regulation for motorists. Vogt said the idea is up to states to consider on their own.

Other board members said they were concerned licensing would be viewed by the loosely regulated boating public as an unnecessarily burdensome bureaucratic response to the pro-

But Jim Ellis, head of the Boat US Foundation, said most of the group's 450,000 boat-owning members favor licensing if accompanied by requirements that operators complete training

"We're interested in taking the drunks off the water," he said.

Only New Jersey has some form of licensing requirement for boaters, the NTSB said.

Inmate says cross-dressing therapy drove him to flee halfway house

By LINDA A. JOHNSON Associated Press Writer

TRENTON, N.J. - Men on the road to recovery at a stateaffiliated halfway house for addicts and drug offenders must make part of the journey in high heels and a dress.

State corrections officials might not have known about the cross-dressing therapy if not for an escapee who said he fled the place after he was made to dress as a woman and was teased and propositioned by the other guys. Now the state is reconsidering its contract with the halfway such a discussion.

Stabile said the department will reconsider its contract with the agency. The program cur-rently has three prisoners enrolled, at $70 per day.

A few Republicans targeted to help free Clinton's jobs bill

By NANCY BENAC Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - The White House is increasing the pressure on a few Republican lawmakers as it tries, to get President and training, Clinton said the Clinton's $163 billion jobs bill package would create 700,000 Senate.

The president avoided partisan jousting in his public comments Tuesday but fired off written statements to the home states of six Republican senators urging them to "break the gridlock in the Senate."

He called on the senators to put "constituents back to work" by breaking party ranks to end a Republican filibuster that has blocked a Senate vote on the jobs bill.

At the same time, WI ite House spokesman George Stephanopoulos rattled off a list of specific building projects and summer jobs that he said would be jeopardized if the jobs package is not enacted.

"We need a jobs package now to make sure that this recovery does happen, to make sure that this economy creates jobs." the spokesman said.

Clinton was expected to campaign for his proposal during a meeting with mayors today - stick together."

on summer jobs. On Tuesday, he made only a quick pitch for the jobs package while avoiding direct criticism of the Republicans.

At a conference on education past a GOP roadblock in the summer jobs, "including many thousands that have a strong education component so our young people can be learning and working at the same time."

The six Republican senators named in Clinton's more pointed printed statements were James Jeffords of Vermont, William Cohen of Maine, Alfonse D'Amato of New York, William Roth of Delaware and Mark Hatfield and Bob Packwood of

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, leading the fight to block the jobs bill, dismissed the White House targeting, saying, "I don't think they have peeled anyone off yet."

GOP critics say the legislation represents unnecessary porkbarrel spending that would only add to the federal deficit.

"There is no emergency in this bill except the unemployment piece," Dole said, referring to a $4 billion provision to extend jobless benefits. "I hope we can

One Pulitzer winner wishes he never had story to write

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - For one reporter, whining this year's Pulitzer prize for feature writing was bittersweet. "I'd give anything not to have written it." George Lardner Jr. said of the story that got him journalism's highest award.

The veteran Washington Post reporter won the prize Tuesday for a dispassionate but meticulous account of his daughter's murder last year.

"I'm stunned, elated and sad all at once," Lardner said in an Interview following the announcement, "It was the most important story I've ever done and I think Kristin would be proud."

Kristin Lardner, 21, was shot three times in the head on a Boston street by a former boyfriend who later killed himself. Lardner's story, titled "The Stalking of Kristin," ransix months later in the Post.

This was a crime that could and should have been prevented." Lardner wrote, "I writeabout it as a sort of cantionary tale, in anger at a system of justice that failed to protect my daughter, a system that is addicted to looking the other way.

especially at the evil done to women.

The award was one of the three Pulitzers that went to the Post, which now has won 26 since 1933. The others went to David Maraniss for his coverage of Bill Clinton in the 1992 presidential campaign and to Michael Dirda for book criticism.

"I feel particularly pleased about these three reporters for different reasons," said Leonard Downle Jr., the newspaper's executive editor. "First of all, George Lardner because of the amazing courage he showed to pursue a really serious social problem in the wake of his daughter's death and the use of that to inform readers about the problem of battered women."

Of Maraniss' work. Downie said "this is what we are in business for, in-depth reporting and refined writing. It's what newspapers do that other media can't do and don't do." Marantss, he said, spent "the entire political year probing who Bill Clinton is, peeling back the onton, including a series better than anything written anywhere on who this man is Downie described Dirda, who works on the Post's book section, as "someone who when young tell in love with books.

Trade talk expectations low

By TOM RAUM Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - President Clinton is stepping up to an issue that has confounded U.S. presidents for more than a decade: the huge trade gap with Japan. Both sides approach this week's talks with high hopes and low expectations.

Clinton's meeting with Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa on Friday is the first time the leaders of the world's two economic superpowers will meet since President Bush's ill-fated visit to Tokyo in January 1992.

In the ensuing 15 months, Japan has gone through its deepest recession in two decades.

Miyazawa comes calling after announcing a $115 billion stimulus package to jolt the Japanese economy. U.S. companies are hoping for a large slice of that ple. And the package was welcomed at the White House as encouraging news on the trade front.

In another sign of Japanese willingness to ease international frictions, Japan is hosting a meeting today and Thursday of finance and foreign ministers of the world's seven largest industrial democracies. They'll discuss aid to Russia.

Japan has been the must posistant of all the so-called broop of Seven nations to assist Russia, the residue-of- a langsimmering territorial dispute over four islands the Soviet Union seized from Japan near the end of World War II.

And Miyazawa comes bearing visible signs of goodwill for the new president: the stimulus package itself, plus an unusual request that the United States keep the heat on Japan to narrow the trade gap and kind words for Clinton.

In an interview this week with U.S. reporters. Miyazawa even brushed off Clinton's recent comment - offensive to many Japanese - that Japanese negotiators tend to say yes when they mean no.

At the same time Japanese officials are being more outspoken about working to ease the trade gap, the Clinton administration has been taking an increasingly hard line, with U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor vowing to open Japanese markets with "a sledgehammer."

Both Washington and Tokyo have high stakes in working together to narrow the trade imbalance.

Part of Japan's $120 billion surplus with the rest of the world reflects low domestic demand in Japan because of the slump something the stimulus package is expected to prod.

Any narrowing of the trade imbalance means more jobs in the United States - a jobs program that doesn't require additional U.S. government spending.

The United States imported $49 billion more from Japan last year than Japan did from the United States. That's more than We U.S. trade deficit asta in percent higher than the previous year. While both Japanese and U.S. officials have been upbeat about this week's meeting, many analysts suggest Clinton is no more likely than his predecessors to win meaningful concessions from Japan in

"I think there are limited expectations," said Clyde Prestowitz, president of the Economic Strategy Institute, "These two have never met before. It's really a get-to-know-you session and an attempt to set a new agenda for the United States and

Part of the problem is in the nature of the deficit

The United States sells Japan products like logs and unmilled corn and scrap aluminum. Japan sells Americans items that will always be in far greater demand: ears and consumer electronic products.

Clinton himself pessimistically signaled the frustrations involved in trying to make a dent in the trade imbalance, telling a White House news conference last month:

"The persistence of the surplus the Japanese enjoy with the United States and the rest of the developed world can only lead one to the conclusion: that the possibility of obtaining real, even access to the Japanese market is somewhat remote.

C. Fred Bergsten, director of the Institute for International Economics, said the value of Friday's session is in "the tone that it sets for" the relationship between the new administration and Japan.

Chinox has made some dispara ng marks about Japanese. Burgsten said, "and It is interesting and very important to see if that tracks through to his official approach with them or whether there is a more positive context in which he puts the economic issues.'

OVIEDO - Doing what they had to do and getting a little help as well, the Oviedo High School girls' softball team moved back into first place of the Seminole Athletic Conference standings with a 7-3 win over Seminole Tuesday at the Oviedo Sports Complex.

Combined with Lyman's win over Lake Mary, the Lions (10-6 overall, 5-1 in the SAC) are first in the conference ahead of Lyman (5-2 in the SAC), Lake Mary (4-2), Lake Brantley (4-3), Lake Howell (2-5), and Seminole (0.7).

Tuesday's game was Oviedo's first since losing to Lake Brantley 12 days ago.

"We came back strong," said Oviedo coach Greg Register. "We had 14 hits and only made two errors. It was a good game for us. We started the season strong and we hope to finish strong. We had a little down spell. but now we have to get back on track."

Oviedo's efforts were aided considerably by the return of April Zorn to the lineup. Sidelined for several weeks with a knee injury, Zorn hit two singles and scored a ☐See Softball, Page 3B

Pats slip past Hawks

By TONY DeSORMIER Herald Sports Editor

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS - If you turned your head for a moment, you would have missed all the offense in the Lake Brantley-Lake Howell high school girls' softball game Tuesday night.

Granted, the game only took a few minutes (about 45 of them) for the Lake Brantley Patriots to beat the visiting Lake Howell Silver Hawks 7-2. Even so, the offense was uncommonly concentrated.

For example, Lake Howell scored both its runs in the top of the first inming. Lake Brantley scored all seven of its runs in the bottom of the fifth. In fact, except for the fifth-inning outburst and a pair of singles in the first inning, the Patriots did nothing on offense. ☐See Brantley, Page 3B

"We started the season 2.7 and now we're 9-9." said Oviedo head coach Mike Ferrell. "Things are looking up."

Tuesday afternoon in Lengwood, the Greyhounds won their fifth straight game by rallying for two runs in the bottom of the sixth ... inning to edge Lake Mary 8-7 in a Seminole Athletic Conference contest.

The win moves Lyman (5-2) past the Rams (4-2) into second place in the SAC behind Oviedo (5-1). The Greyhounds (9-5 overall) will host Lake Brantley in an SAC game on Thursday starting at 4 p.m. while Lake Mary (16-6) will be in action tonight at Spruce Creek at 7:30 p.m. "We're starting to come around now," said Lyman coach Christy Tibbitts. "This game should give us a boost. It's a real confidence builder, because they know if they can beat Lake Mary, they can beat anybody." Wendy Acey started Lyman's game-winning rally with a single and, an out later, went to second on Jodie Beland's single. Jennifer Forston then loaded the bases by reaching on an error.

"It was an odd game," admitted Lake Brantley coach Debbie Frank. "There were no booming extra-base hits, no singles in the gaps. We just squeezed everything through.

"It came down to one inning of having a few hits in a row and some good base running. At least the girls went out and made something happen."

Anne Freeburg then hit into a fielder's choice, forcing Treat at the plate before Rachel Poppe lifted a sacrifice fly to score Soost.

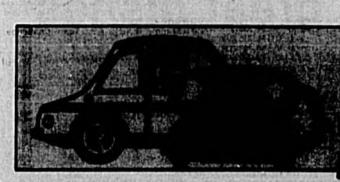

Stacie Stuller and Nicole Rathbun added two more singles while Helmers, Freeberg, Lake Howell had taken a 2-0 lead in the first on RBI singles from Jaimie Iwanzyk and Shannon McDowell. The Silver Hawks also left the bases loaded in the third inning and stranded a pair of runners in the fifth.

Defending Your Rubber, Vinyl and Leather Surfaces Against Spring's Elements

Spring elements like intense heat and humidity can wreck havoc on the rubber, vinal and plastic surfaces of your automotive interior, making them look

But you can easily help these surfaces withstand spring ele-ments and maintain their natural beauty and shine by using vari-ous car care products available today.

According to Pirst Brands Corporation, Danbury, Conn., manufacturer of Son Of A Gun! products, begin preparing the surfaces by first completely removing all the accumulated dust and dirt. A good all-purpose automotive cleaner like Son pose automotive cleaner like Son Of A Gun/Car Cleaner can be used to clean these surfaces, as well as glass, floor mats, head-liners and dashboards. Car cleaners like this contain fast-acting wetting agents and solvents to penetrate, loosen and lift dirt, oily film and dust quickly and safely.

After cleaning, you should apply a protectant to help protect these surfaces and restore their natural luster. Son Of A Gun! Protectant is ideal to use. It can enhance the surface's color, restore lost luster and help resist

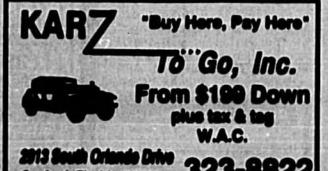

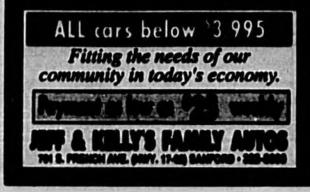

Once applied, protectants also serve as a buffer zone between interior surfaces and potentially damaging elements.
They even help to reduce static electricity build-up, which can attract dirt and dust.

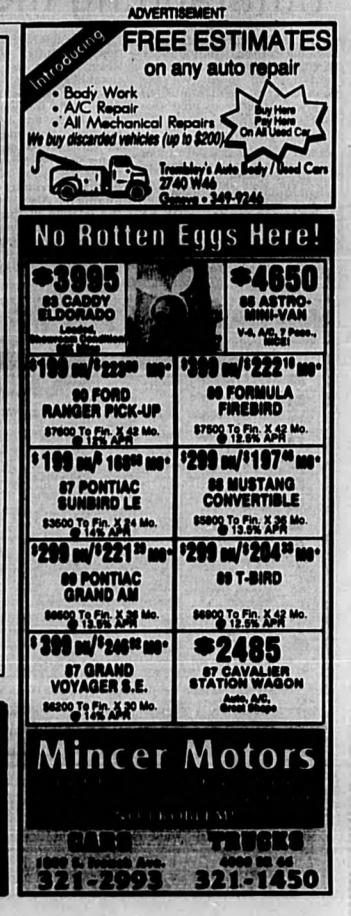

For those car owners who take pride in their vehicles right down to the tires, STP recommends using Son Of A Gun! One-Step Tire Care. The formula in Son Of A Gun! Tire Care cleans, shines and pro-tects automotive tires. The product is easy to use; you just spray it on and watch it work. There is no rubbing or scrubbing required to achieve a beautiful, high-gloss shine.

The best way to keep a new or older vehicle looking new during the spring is to conduct a regular automotive cleaning regimen that includes using a protectant and an all-purpose car cleaner. It can be an inexpensive and easy way to en-hance a vehicle's appearance and protect your automotive investment.

Cook of the Week

Her specialties are flavored with a southern accent

By RENEE KEITH Herald Correspondent

"What I'd give to have just a few more hours in my day," says Jan Winn, feeling, without a doubt, that this would be a main request from many working wives and moms.

Having a full-time job doesn't leave much time for those little extras, but she has managed to find a workable method that ensures something great from her kitchen at mealtime.

Jan was born and raised in the south. Tennessee is her home state, Florida is where she spent her growing up years. She came to Florida with her family as a young girl almost 20 years ago. Her family eventually settled in Sanford. Jan attended local schools, graduating from Semi-nole High School. Currently, she is employed with the Lewis Bear Company, located in Sanford. She has held the position of receptionist for two years.

Sanford is also where Jan met Gary, her husband of almost nine years. Gary has been employed with the city of Sanford for 20 years as the building inpsector. They have one daugh-ter. Shanna, who attends Lakeview Middle School.

When time allows, Jan enjoys doing her puff paint T-shirts. "I never really thought that I had any type of artistic talent." But, she found out differently when she began to explore different types of designs and turning out shirts, sweaters and blouses so beautiful she gave them as Christmas gifts to friends and family. "One just never knows until they try."

Cooking at the Winn home can be a two-fold endeavor at times. Jan is the "queen" during the week in the kitchen. Gary, on the other hand is the "king" on weekends when it comes to doing the barbecuing. They both

Ham and Cheese Balls is a recipe that Jan makes for many different settings. They make great appetizers, or something different when a covered dish is requested. Gary enjoys snacking on them while he's taking in a good TV movie.

Whip up tasty, quick meals

What's for dinner? It seems to be the question I hear the most, and the answers I come up with — "canned soup" or "tea and toast" or "Cheerios."

don't seem to satisfy anyone.

The problem is that cooking decent food takes time and effort. If, like most adults I know, your time is so stretched between work and family (forget friends, recreation or personal growth) that you feel lucky if you find two minutes to scramble an egg, then you know how I feel.

Thus, I have invented a new type of cooking, which I call "Cuisine for Exhausted People." Fortuitously, a number of cookbooks have come along to supply recipes. I especially re-commend two: 'Dinner in Minutes,' by Linda Gassenheimer (Chapters, 1993) and "The Monday to Friday Cookbook," by Michele Urvater (Workman, 1991). Both are chock full of not only recipes. shopping lists and pantry entered the first grade and has befriended a lot of his peers. These children and their parents, some of whom are complete strangers to us, often phone and invite our son over to their homes to play. We try to get to know as many of these people as possible, but some-times kids will invite him over before we've even met them and their families.

Mom wants to meet kids' friends before they play

When this happens, we say that he can't go, and sometimes explain that he can't play there because we don't know them. Some parents have been offended by this reply and others have then suggested that I come over with him.

In this day and age, we carefully instruct our children to beware of strangers. How can anyone expect us to send our young children to spend an afternoon in a stranger's home? It's time to make it a practice to invite the child and a parent over on the first visit.

I hope you can print this. It might protect some unsuspecting parents and childrn.

-Ground Beef Top Priority-

One of the most versatile products in the Food Lion meat department is ground beef. Every Food Lion store grinds fresh beef throughout each day.

Food Lion offers several varieties of ground beef -- from regular to extra lean.

When choosing and preparing ground beef, here are several tips to remember: 1) Look on the label for the percent of fat content. 2) Look for a bright red color. Food Lion packages its ground beef in clear plastic wrap so you can see the product. 3) Due to lack of oxygen reaching the center of the ground beef, the center is not a bright red color. However, once air reaches the center of the fresh ground beef, the product will regain its bright red color. 4) Make sure ground beef is thoroughly cooked. (160° internal temperature)

For those ground beef fans who are seeking an alternative to beef, try ground turkey and ground pork. Ground turkey and ground pork are excellent substitutes for ground beef,

Heavy perspiration could be serious have a medical history of tuberculosis, diabetes, low thyroid, and was hospitalized last year with congestive heart failure. The problem is that I perspire so profusely when I get up in the morning and during the day that I constantly have to change my clothing that becomes wringing wet. My doctor says all tests are normal, yet I wonder if I lack certain vitamins and minerals. Can you shed some light on this problem?

DEAR READER: This is a complex problem because excessive sweating can be caused by a variety of factors, some of which are harmless, others of which are dangerous.

For example, fever causes sweating. If you are experiencing daily fevers, your doctor must assiduously search for an infection. Thus, your history of tuberculosis, a bacterial infection that commonly affects the lungs, is troublesome. Could the TB have reactivated? If so, you will need anti-tuberculosis therapy (antibiotics). This condition can be diagnosed by a sputum analysis.

You don't mention whether you're being treated for the underactive thyroid gland. If you are - and the dose of supplemental thyroid hormone is too high -the fever could be due to the medicine. This can easily be checked with a blood test.

Finally, diabetes can cause sweating, especially if you are taking prescribed drugs, such as insulin, for this disease. Antidiabetes medicines can inappropriately lower the blood sugar. leading to hypoglycemia, which causes sweating, weakness and hunger. This can be diagnosed by a blood test. These are only three possibilities for your excessive perspiration. Space limitations prevent me from describing other causes. I urge you to

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 70 and return to your doctor for further clarification. Mineral and vitamin deficiencies do not ordinarily cause sweating.

To give you more information on a few of your conditions, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports Diabetes Mellitus" and "Heart Disease." Other readers who would like copies should send $1.25 for Picking up a really powerful hand gives you a momentary glow of pleasure. But then you wonder how to steer the bidding to find out what you need to know from partner.

East suffered badly on today's deal, which was reported in New Zealand Bridge. It occurred a few years ago in beautiful Norfolk Island, which lies to the north of New Zealand.

East had never seen a 28-point hand before. Trying not to smile, she opened one club, strong and artificial. South's overcall of one no-trump showed at least 5-5 in any two suits. West's two diamonds was natural and indicated fewer than nine points (a debatable choice in my view). North was happy to compete with two hearts, expecting that to be one of his partner's suits. South's bid of two spades was a shock to North, but he recovered brilliantly. Knowing that East wouldn't sell out to two spades. North passed. Then over East's three no-trump (East not knowing what else to do), North "sacrificed" in four spades. East doubled, of course, but the contract was unbeatable. South ruffed the heart lead and immediately attacked clubs. East won and switched to the spade king, but declarer won and played a second club. South's 10 tricks were the spade ace, four diamond ruffs in the dummy, four heart ruffs in hand and a club.

Note that East-West can make six no-trump or seven hearts but only if the latter contract is played by West.

When did you last bid and make a game with a combined eight points? (C)1993, NEWSPAPER EN-TERPRISE ASSN.
