Gathering of the clan

SANFORD—A gathering of about 100 members of the Vihlen clan met at the family homestead on Vihlen Road in Sanford for a reunion recently. It was a day of food, fun and festivity for the descendants of the early Swedish settlers brought to Sanford by Gen. Henry S. Sanford.

Land donation commemorated

GENEVA — A plaque will be erected at Mullet Lake Park commemorating the donation by local residents H.S. and Irene P. Levy in 1944 of 55 acres for the St. Johns River county park. The children of the late Levy's, Sam Levy, 100; and Rose Levy, 97; were honored by Seminole County commissioners last week with a resolution. Both Levy's live in Sanford.

The honoraria came about when Commissioner Daryl McLain discovered the donation had gone officially unrecognized for the last 50 years. Research done by Current Planning Director Herb Hardin found the park was created with Levy's donated 55 acres and 135 acres bought from the state for $270. Both transactions were completed in July 1944.

Event cancelled

"Sharing Memories," a historic downtown Sanford celebration ending National Preservation Week Saturday, was to have featured costumed shopkeepers, photographic window displays of Old Sanford, entertainment and classic cars. It was cancelled. Information about the cancellation was received too late for Friday's edition of the Herald, where news of the event was listed in the weekend To-Do Guide. The Herald regrets any inconvenience to our readers.

Stopping hate crimes

Cops take racial, ethnic, religious slurs seriously

By NICK PFEIFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County law enforcement has no specific policy dealing with hate crimes. It isn't alone. Six of the 10 top cities and counties reporting the most hate crimes in Florida, also don't have a written policy.

"We have only had four of what we would consider hate crimes in the past few years," said Seminole County Undersheriff Steve Harriett.

"but I assure you, we treat these with as much care and determination as we would any other crime."

The statewide statistics have been included in a report made Tuesday to Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, which collects data on hate crimes from local police agencies.

Seven of the 10 agencies don't have a space on their incident forms to designate a hate crime and six don't have specialized training. The importance of hate crime reporting was emphasized by a sheriff or police chief in five of the 10 agencies.

In 1992, 395 hate crime offenses were reported in Florida, an increase of 25 percent over 1991. More than two-thirds of the crimes were against people as opposed to property and one third were aggravated assaults. Nearly two-thirds were racially motivated.

Bird's flight and how she found home

It was July 1964. I was associate editor of the Herald under Editor and Publisher Walter Gielow. He said I had a week's vacation earned and for me to take it. My wife and son joined me as we drove to Louisiana to spend a few days visiting the dearest mother-in-law a man ever had. To her own six children she was known as "Momma." To everybody else, including her grandchildren, she was "Miss Alma."

She lived alone in a country cottage in an area called Fairfield in Grant Parish, a few miles out of Alexandria. Shortly after getting there we relaxed in front porch rockers. There was another house about 200 feet from Miss Alma's place. They were separated by what I always called, the "pea patch." They were the only two in the area.

Living in a house down the lane on the other side of the pea patch was sort of an elderly lady with a couple of teen-age sons and a beautiful little

New to on-line services?

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald SHIP Patrolman

By now, you've probably read reams of confusing stuff about the so-called Information Superhighway. As the pundits and Podunks of the White House would have us believe, the highway is a massive communications network which will one day allow us all to work, learn or play with just a few clicks of a button or key. Cars will become obsolete! Cheez Whiz stocks will soar! George Orwell is alive and he's a presidential advisor!

Actually, the highway now is a bunch of disconnected paths of really useful and really insane stuff. Most of us now have telephones. A lot of us have cable television service. About 27 percent of us have computers, according to the Software Publishers Association. These are all components of the highway, they just haven't been brought together yet. They aren't likely to be together for a few years yet.

Until then, the main entrance ramp is by way of computer, modem and telephone line. You should have an inkling of what a computer is after reading SHIP for the past few weeks. A modem (Aa in "Let me have mo' dem beens") is nothing more than a telephone used by a computer. It allows your machine to talk to other machines by way of telephone lines. You'll also need communications software, such as WinComm or Crosstalk. If you've got these four things, you're on your way to the highway.

The easiest way to merge into the perimeter of the info-way is through one of several "on-line" services available. These include CompuServe, America Online, Delphi and Genie. During the next few weeks, we'll take a look at these and other on-line services and let you know what they offer, how easy (or how hard) they are to use, how much they cost and so on. Many of them come with their own software "front-ends." Front-ends make using a service easier, but they can't be used with other on-line services. America Online, CompuServe and Genie each offer front-ends, usually for free or with free on-line time.

Out of the lamp...

Let's start out this week with Genie, a service offered by General Electric. Around since 1985, it has grown to become one of the most popular services. It offers educational resources, such as an on-line encyclopedia; a "mail," for ordering everything from computers to cookies; communications, including message bulletin boards and "e-mail" correspondence; and instant feedback "chat lines" and "real-time conferences." There's also several games, including Gemstone III, a role-playing adventure. With Genie, you can check airline flights, leave a message for President Clinton or buy stocks with Charles Schwab.

If you're new to on-line services, Genie can be a bit mind-boggling at first. I counted more than 300 areas and services. One of them, Writers Roundtable, has 48 different categories and topics, each with real-time conferences, bulletin boards, download files and more. If you have an interest in a subject or a question, there's probably an area on Genie where you can find immediate assistance or communicate souls.

Genie is a text-only service, meaning no pretty pictures here, just plain-jane type. You can "download" (save an on-line file to your computer's disk) graphic files, including the whole "Blossom" cast from NBC Online, a Genie service. Getting excited about the Superhighway yet?

Navigating around, if you're not used to typing commands takes some getting used to. The Genie front-end helps a great deal, eliminating most of the typed commands for point-and-click ease with your mouse. But if you're lost in an easy area to find yourself, just type HELP and you'll be able to work your way out. Typing TOP puts you back at the introductory page where you can sign off or plunge in again.

Over the fence...

One popular service of Genie is the real-time "chat" lines. Kind of a keyboard CH on any given evening, there may be 40 channels of two or more folks chatting, using "handles." All lines are monitored and profanity and sexual references are not allowed in open areas. Private conversations are allowed and not monitored.

After perusing several channels one evening, I was struck by the juvenilia of it all. There was "Missal," an 11th grader from Ocala who couldn't get a date to the prom, as she announced most times someone came on-line. But another evening, I went into the Writers RTC and wound up having a pleasant chat with a Brenda Crank of Dayton, Ohio. She was an out-of-work accountant using her post-April 15 time to work on her novel. She chatted that through contacts in the Writers RTC, she was able to have several shorter works and poetry published. She has a beef with her homeowner's association (don't we all?) and was looking for ways to challenge the Powers That Be. Based on the experience with Brenda, you're likely to find people closer to your own interests in the RTCs.

Chatting can quickly become addicting. There's something mesmerizing about typing a message onto your computer monitor and in a moment, seeing a response. Depending on how many people are using the same channel, you may be bombarded with a half dozen responses. It can become quite confusing quickly in sorting through the verbal blast. There is also a tendency for new messages to overwrite yours while you're typing them. This is overcome by the front-end's chat mode, also found in third-party programs, which allows you to type in a separate field then "upload" your completed message to the conference.

Through the woods...

In the Games section, I popped into GemStone III, a fantasy role-playing game not unlike Dungeons and Dragons. You select a character, such as a warrior or magician, give it a gender, name, powers and several other criteria and enter the GemStone world. There, you are met with a written description of your surroundings and the activities in it and are given recommended directions to move, accomplished by typing EAST, WEST and so on. With each move, you encounter new situations and challenges. I popped out after a few minutes, but I could see how folks into this sort of thing could get quickly hooked as you move deeper into the world which you visualize in your mind.

Into cold reality...

There is a wide assortment of services on Genie and when you sign on the first time, you'll want to browse many of them. You'll want to browse every night. And at the end of the month, you'll get your toll for cruising the streets of this cyber community. To be fair, all of these services quickly eat up the time and build bills. Genie costs $8.95 per month, which includes four hours of standard on-line usage. Each hour after that costs $3 after 6 p.m. and $9.50 during daytime hours. So, say, 20 hours of evening on-line connections will cost $58.95.

If you move into some of Genie's specialized services, there are surcharges. For example, on-line faxes cost 85 cents per page. The Dow Jones News/Retrieval service costs $1.50 for each 1,000 characters. Company reports cost $40 each. You quickly learn to limit your use and the added services.

Genie is an excellent service for adult and child alike. There are a plethora of services that should satisfy most anyone interested in joining. Genie accepts MasterCard, Visa, Discover, American Express. You can also pay by electronic fund transfers from your bank account for an extra $2 per month.

Next month, we go on-line with the country on America Online

Kudos to fire chief

People are not supposed to break the law. Through the courts however, laws can always be challenged, and often-times are.

Ordinances and resolutions establishing guidelines for government operations are laws as well. As such, they are also open to question. These include all levels, from city codes to federal guidelines.

In some cases however, officials don't wait for such challenges. They take it upon themselves to examine old laws and codes, to determine if they still serve the purpose for which they were originally intended.

Such a situation is presently underway with the Sanford Fire Department. Although there are many codes covering such matters as building safety requirements, fire inspections, false alarms, and others, Fire Chief Tom Hickson has determined there is room for improvement.

With the assistance of Fire Marshal Richard Cohen, Hickson went through the overall fire codes, and redeveloped them into a single ordinance. Following review by the City Attorney to determine if there are any loop-holes, the matter will be brought up to the city commission for approval.

What is he proposing? Among other changes, Hickson's suggestions will be of help to the small businesses in Sanford, which are in the majority. For example, a small 300 or 400 square foot downtown shop presently pays the same cost for yearly fire inspections as the major retail stores with 20,000 or more square feet.

Hickson has revised this to reduce the cost for small businesses, but raised the cost for the major size stores. In this way, it will be more equitable to one and all.

He has suggested several other changes. None of them will cause undo hardship upon business owners. They will however, provide a simpler operation of the department, especially regarding the various fees, costs and fines which are necessary in pursuing fire safety.

We commend Chief Hickson for these efforts. Other government leaders and governmental departments may do well to look at the old laws under which they operate.

LETTER

Irked over vague tax bill

On May 4, 1994, I received a letter from Ray Valdes, Seminole County Tax Collector's office. The letter stated that I owed them $10.76 because I had not sent the right amount of money when I paid my property tax. I paid my property tax in the amount on the statement that I thought was the right amount. The statement said if you pay by one date your taxes are one amount, and if you pay by the other date, your taxes are a higher amount. I paid the amount that I thought was in the right date, but I was wrong, (I made a mistake), so they sent me a letter stating that if I did not send them $10.76, they were going to put a lien against my property.

I told a manager in the tax office that I thought they should reword their letters a little, and at least let people know that there might be a mistake or something instead of assuming that everyone is out to beat them out of money.

It seems to me that as soon as a person gets a job with the county or city or federal government with any kind of title to it (manager, supervisor, etc.) they forget as soon as they get it who they work for. This manager works for Ray Valdes. Ray Valdes' budget is paid for with tax money that everyone pays, so how can a tax manager whose salary is paid by the people paying their taxes, be so rude and insulting as she was to me?

I have lived in Sanford and Seminole County and owned property here for 22 years; I can't believe that the county would even think about doing something like this to someone who made a mistake and sent the wrong amount on his taxes. They could have at least asked why the right amount was not paid and not threatened their property with a lien.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Letters to the editor are welcome. All letters must be signed, include the address of the writer and a daytime telephone number. Letters should be on a single subject and be as brief as possible. The letters are subject to editing.

Time to focus on state leaders

Now is the time to begin to focus upon the state leaders that are to be elected this November. The governor and the cabinet will be elected. Positions to be filled are: governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, state comptroller, state treasurer, commissioner of education, and commissioner of agriculture.

The governor and his cabinet comprise the managers of the executive branch of state government. All are elected statewide for four-year terms. The governor may be elected once to a successive term, however, cabinet members may remain in their offices as long as they are re-elected.

The 1968 amendment to the state constitution gave cabinet members independent responsibility to manage the divisions under their supervision. This diffusion of executive power insures that salient governmental decisions are made by consensus of the six members of the cabinet and the governor. The budget is the one area that is the governor's sole responsibility.

Historically the office of secretary of state was created as part of the 1838 Florida Constitution. There was vacillation relative to how the position was to be filled. The methods employed were: appointment by the governor and confirmation by the senate, joint vote of both houses of the Legislature and by election. The 1968 constitu-

tional amendment mandated that the position be filled by election.

"The secretary of state manages: the Division of Library and Information Services; the Division of Historical Resources; the Division of Cultural Affairs; the Division of Corporations; the Division of Licensing and the Division of Elections."

The Division of Library and Informational Services serves as a means of disbursing federal and state funds for library services and maintaining the state archives, the repository for official documents. The Division of Historical Resources does exactly what its name implies: preserves, protects and documents Florida's historic buildings, properties and archaeological sites both underground and underwater. The Division of Cultural Affairs coordinates cultural activities and programs and brings top performing groups to communities across the state. The Division of Corporations, Licensing and Elections complete the divisions for which the secretary of state is responsible. The duties associated with the Division of Elections include being in charge of all elections, primary, special and general elections involving state and county offices and affairs, certifies to supervisor of elections in every county names of candidates qualified for state and federal offices.

To date there are two candidates vying for secretary of state. They are: Sandy Barringer-Mortham, Republican from Largo, Florida and Ron Saunders, an attorney and Democrat from Key West, Florida.

The position of Florida secretary of state has never been filled by a woman. Therefore, Mortham's entry into this particular race is very interesting. Sandy Mortham hopes to be the first woman in Florida to fill this position. She already achieved a first when she was elected leader of the House of Representatives. She was the first woman from either party to be nominated for speaker of the House. Mortham has been married for 23 years and has two sons.

Remember this is election year and the governor and his cabinet are very important people in our lives.

ELLEN GOODMAN

Honk if you believe Paula

BOSTON — My neighbor approaches me with what I have come to recognize as his "gotcha" smile. "Well," he draws, swinging his briefcase from one hand to the other, "How come your women's groups aren't rushing to the defense of Paula Jones?"

Now, how exactly women's groups became "mine" in his mind is a story for another day. But the point that he wants to stick to me has become a needle in the conservative arsenal.

Any number of people are asking, with the same slight smirk, about those of who who wore "Honk if You Believe Anita" stickers on our car bumpers. How come we haven't made a beep since Paula Jones officially filed suit against President Clinton for sexual harassment?

Doesn't this prove that we — that's we for a, feminists, b. Democrats, c. Hill supporters, d. All of the above — are guilty of maintaining a double standard for Bill and Clarence?

This accusation of a double standard comes largely from the very people who regarded Anita Hill as a dastardly liar but find Paula Jones a pure truth-seeker. It also comes from Bob Packwood, the senator who said last weekend, "The thing that intrigues me most is the way the women's groups look for a way to absolutely exonerate me and look for some way to attempt to exonerate the president."

I have no doubt that double, let alone triple and quadruple, standards exist. We are all more likely to believe the worst about people we already believe the very bad about. We weigh the importance of accusations against what we like and dislike. If you doubt that, compare the recent assessments of Richard Nixon by his political friends and foes.

As for sexual harassment, it was easier for the opponents of Clarence Thomas to welcome Anita Hill. It's easier for the people who wish Clinton ill to wish Paula Jones well. Just for the record, however, it was not easy for women's rights activists to turn on Packwood until he made it easy.

But the assumption behind my neighbor's needle is that those who stand for women are always supposed to stand with women. That those who oppose sexual harassment are required by the canons of sisterhood to believe any woman who charges sexual harassment.

Not exactly. You don't have to check your skepticism at the door of feminism anymore than you have to check your bra. You don't have to trade in objectivity for faith. Nor do you have to give up the ability to distinguish between true and false right and wrong just because they cross gender lines.

If there is a party line in the women's movement, it looks like the old telephone party lines with everyone talking at once. Two and a half years after Anita Hill made sexual harassment a household word, many of us are still defining and refining it. Case by case.

In my own small line of vision, I have seen one abusive man finally get his just deserts. But I have also seen one man whose jokes deserve an occasional groan get slapped with a suit.

In the post-Hill atmosphere, it has finally, belatedly become possible for victims of sexual harassment to speak up and be believed. But taking the charge seriously doesn't mean taking every accuser seriously. Not every woman is a victim and not every pass is a federal offense.

As for President Clinton and Mrs. Jones, I don't have a clue what, if anything, happened in a Little Rock hotel room where she alleges now that her civil rights were violated. I know if Bill were just another Joe, she would have trouble getting a lawyer. It is not clear if even her version fits the charges of harassment or "intentional infliction of emotional distress."

But there's probably enough here to get to trial. So emerges the specter of a true spectacle featuring a woman being asked to describe what she meant by "distinguishing characteristics in Clinton's genital area." Hail to the Chief.

You don't need a double standard to find this an appalling prospect. Nor do you give up your membership in the "movement" because you have doubts about Paula. Her original coming out party at a conservative press conference, her earlier attempt to trade money for silence, not to mention mixed reports from her family about her motives — don't make for a perfect profile.

"As a society," said Anita Hill last weekend, "we have to decide, are we serious enough about these kinds of behavior to contemplate the fact that sometimes we're not going to like the outcome of the cases?"

Fair enough. But honk if you believe in Paula? For the moment, keep both hands on the wheel.

I have no doubt that double, let alone triple and quadruple, standards exist.

America's culture of sensationalism

This is what America has come to in its 218th year:

Sitting on the Supreme Court is a proud and decent man whose reputation was shredded three years ago by allegations that he sexually harassed a woman who now works for him. He is understandably angry, remains mute on the bench, refuses to read newspapers he believes colluded with his accusers.

The character assassination of Clarence Thomas was, in my judgment, revulsive and inexcusable. I do not know whether the things Anita Hill said about him were true, but I do know they were uncorroborated. Simple fairness dictated that he be regarded as innocent unless provable evidence demonstrated guilt.

But to the groupthinkers of the fanatic left, the mere accusations were enough. Before the harassment charges even arose, his nomination had been condemned as "disgraceful" by the AFL-CIO and he had been branded as "totally insensitive" by radical feminists. After Anita Hill's appearance, the critics argued that proof was irrelevant. Wrote New York Times columnist Tom Wicker: "Why should anyone seeking such an exalted and powerful position be accorded the benefit of the doubt when the truth is in dispute?"

Comes now a president of the United States who has all but confessed to a history of sexual indiscretion. The American people appear willing to tolerate Clinton's falls from grace, but his personal enemies, political opponents and the groupthinkers of the fanatic right won't let it go. Every few months, they hustle someone to center stage to make sensational new incriminations about the president's carnal pursuits.

A few months ago, two Arkansas state cops who had once been a part of Governor Clinton's security detail decided "the national security" compelled them to inform the world about Bill's dalliances. They hooked up with Clinton archenemy Cliff Jackson and went public with charges they had routinely set the governor up with women. They were hazy on specifics, had no evidence to back up their story, and had a history of lying. CNN turned on the cameras and invited them to talk.

In February, a former Arkansas state clerical worker named Paula Corbin Jones appeared at a news conference arranged by Cliff Jackson and accused Clinton of sexually harassing her in May 1991. She met the governor at a conference in Little Rock, she said, then was taken to his hotel room by a state cop. She said Clinton immediately pressed himself on her, ran his hand up her leg, dropped his pants and suggested they get intimate.

She was going public now, almost three years later, she said, because she felt humiliated and was emotionally distressed. According to a Washington Post report, her attorney suggested that money and jobs in California for her and her aspiring-actor husband might ameliorate her pain. Neither were forthcoming, and she recently filed a lawsuit against Clinton. Her own sister said Jones told her she "smelled money" if she went public with her charges against Clinton.

This is what America may come to in its 219th year:

The atmosphere in the courtroom is tense as Paula Corbin Jones takes the stand to testify in her sexual harassment lawsuit against President Clinton. On this day, people are starting in Africa, typhoons are devastating the Near East, all the Balkans are embroiled in a shooting war, but the networks and CNN are covering these proceedings live.

This is what America has come to.

granddaughter who is the central figure in this Sunday's yarn. As you know, my tales — all of which I remind you are as true as the day is long — have what I call a "kicker" or a climax of utter surprise.

It wasn't long before I noticed this pretty youngster leaning against the front steps of her grandmother's home staring our way, wondering who were these strangers at Miss Alma's place. I suppose curiosity got the better of her. In about an hour the barefooted tyke strolled slowly up the lane to Miss Alma's porch. We were told by my mother-in-law that the little girl of French and Indian descent had been abandoned by her father. The child's mother had given birth to a son, then to the little girl, but died when a second son was born.

One evening about midnight the child's grandmother awoke, seeming to hear a child crying. Unable to go back to sleep she went to the front door and found her then three-year-old granddaughter at the front gate, not tall enough to reach the latch to come in. Her father had left her there in the middle of the dark night with what few clothes she had in a paper sack.

My wife and I fell in love with this youngster. I took my son along with the little girl and her uncle to Black Creek where they enjoyed an afternoon of swimming. One afternoon I took them into Alexandria for a special matinee showing of a special movie. I don't remember its name. But I'll never forget when the house lights dimmed for the start of the film, I frightened the little girl. She grabbed my arm and held on for dear life. I was surprised. I didn't know until later this was her first time ever to be in a motion picture theater.

I could write a book about what happened the rest of the week. But on Friday afternoon we prepared to get an early Saturday morning start for the drive back to Florida. The little girl helped us put some of the items in the car. That evening at the supper table Miss Alma started us by asking "Why don't you take this child to Florida with you?" I smiled and said, "Now, Miss Alma, you know that lady down there isn't going to give us her granddaughter to take to Florida and live with us." Miss Alma smiled back and said, "If you'll go down there after supper and ask her, I bet she will."

I didn't think I would have the courage to ask the grandmother. I wasn't sure if my wife would, either. But Miss Alma kept suggesting it until we agreed to walk down the lane to the grandmother's house and ask her. My main concern was that the grandmother would get mad at us for even thinking about it. But when I got up enough spunk to put the question to her, tears welled up in the grandmother's eyes. She looked at me and said, "Mr. Stenstrom, you have no idea of how many nights I've knelt by my bed and asked God for some folks like you to take and raise this child.

The following morning four of us, not three, started back to Florida. We had a new member of the family. Her name was Viola Jean Borchet (pronounced "Borahay" like the last letters of Chevrolet). At that time we were living on Lake Kathryn in Casselberry. Now, we had a little girl living with us whose grandmother didn't even know when or even where she was born. We got her on or about August 1st of 1904 so we figured she had been born in 1959 and we observed her birthday on that date for several years. We located a distant aunt in Tennessee who said she thought Jean was born Aug. 15, 1959, somewhere around Lafayette, Louisiana.

For the umpteenth time we contacted the Louisiana Bureau of Vital Statistics. Sure enough, we got a letter saying they had a record of her birth and if we'd send them $2 they'd send us a certificate. We did and found out Jean was born at the Lafayette Memorial Hospital Aug. 17, 1959 in Lafayette Parish, Lafayette, La.

Now this information was several years in coming. Meanwhile she started her education at South Seminole Elementary where lovable old Christy Harp was principal. After a couple of conferences with him and with county school superintendent R.T. Milwee she was registered under the name of Stenstrom. The only record in the school system of Seminole County that bears the name "Borchet" is her high school diploma. It was done that way to keep everything legal.

Why didn't we adopt her? Folks, that's easier said than done when you know she has a natural father even though we didn't know who nor where he was. Besides several years had passed and my wife became ill. She died Jan. 27, 1971 about one month from the time I was first elected to the Sanford city commission after moving from Casselberry to Sanford in February 1970. So, no adoption ever took place.

The first few years Jean was with us included the heyday of Lyndon Johnson who called his wife "Ladybird." Having a knack for nicknames, I started calling Jean "Ladybird." After the Johnson era went into the history books we stopped calling her Ladybird. Since she never liked the name Viola, to this day we simply call her "Bird."

Bird graduated from SHS. I believe in the same class with Tim Raines. I have a Chicago White Sox jacket that bears Tim's number, "30." The other day before an exhibition game in Miami, Bird borrowed my jacket and White Sox cap. When others wanting Tim's autograph failed to get his attention, Bird, wearing my Chicago jacket with his number on it and cap got his attention by yelling "Seminole High." Bird had her yearbook along and Raines greeted her and autographed it for her.

During Bird's last two years in high school she worked for Jerry Sullivan at Famous Recipe. She made her way up to what I guess would be "night manager."

Because, the last thing she did every evening was take the money to the bank depository.

She bought and paid for her own van. Upon graduation she resigned her job. With a girlfriend she toured Louisiana for a month or so. She found her father and her two brothers. She also found out she had three older step-sisters she knew nothing about. One lives in Jacksonville.

When she returned from Louisiana I got her a job with a Kiwanis buddy of mine, Al Aden, who owned Seinole Printers at the old Navy base. Bird learned the printing trade inside and out, up one side and down the other. To make a long story short she had a disappointing first marriage that left her with a son, now a high school junior, and one of the finest young men I've ever known. And, she raised him by herself. Anyway, she wound up in Fort Lauderdale where today she manages a printing company. She went to work for this firm owned by two men. One died, the other had a stroke, and the business now belongs to a fine young couple who have Bird running the show.

Now to the climax! Recently a Broward County group decided to sponsor a "medieval day" at Snyder Park in Fort Lauderdale.

While assisting in preparing promotional materials for the "production," Bird noticed that part of the all-day show was to include a royal wedding. Since Jean and the gentleman she was going with were planning to be married, it was decided that instead of a "fake" medieval wedding that it would be a real one. Here's what happened.

Over 2,400 people bought tickets to the festival. Most came, as requested, wearing medieval costumes. As the program progressed at given times throughout the park, finally festival goers were invited to the royal wedding.

The folks gathered around the king's platform as he read the wedding proclamation. Bird, in her medieval bridal costume, arrived at the site by coach. The groom came riding a steed. The ceremony was performed by a "monastery monk" who actually was the young lady who with her husband owns the printing company. She was a notary. So, she could officially marry them.

Everybody was there except the Sheriff of Nottingham, Robin Hood and his Merry Men. Now, here's the climax!

The little barefooted girl from Louisiana who God gave to me and my family to love and raise was married before an audience estimated to be at least 2,000 people.

Here's the Sherwood Forest family. From the left is bridegroom Scott Zachocho, the bride "Bird" Zachocho and her son Shaun Zachocho. Zachocho may not be a prince but Bird comes close to being Cinderella.

Now, for the real shocker! Ninety percent of the onlookers didn't realize it was a real wedding. They thought it was simply a part of the festival show. How about that?

Every story has an anti-climax. So does this one. The present Mrs. Stenstrom and I found out the other day that one of Bird's biggest disappointments was that she was never adopted legally into the Stenstrom clan. My wife, Louise, and I plan to remedy that situation in the very near future if someone can help us find a good law firm to handle it. We know a good lawyer but he has retired. So hang on, Bird!

should be banned in public places. Do it in your house or somewhere else. I do think the tobacco companies are trying to get people addicted to cigarettes."

Jay Jo said, "I don't smoke, so it doesn't matter. I don't think companies are lacing cigarettes. I don't care if people smoke in public or not."

Jeanette Wimberly stated, "I'm not a smoker. The second hand smoke is just as bad as what the smoker gets. Outlaw them completely. If they aren't outlawed, then be sure to keep the sections in public separated. Separate clearly smokers from non-smokers."

Samira Javer stated, "I'm not for smoking altogether, so I think it should be outlawed."

Sheila Jackson said, "Outlaw smoking and cigarettes. They have done nothing but harm to smokers and non-smokers."

Susan Weatherby stated, "Outlaw cigarettes and alcohol, for that matter. The smoke hurts everyone and alcohol kills on highways and roads. They both hurt the temple of God, which is your body. God is very displeased with those that hurt themselves and know better."

Joann Ericson said, "I'm a smoker. I don't mind that they outlaw in public places. I have a daughter that I don't smoke around. Restaurants that aren't well ventilated could be a problem for non-smokers. I don't think the tobacco companies are lacing the cigarettes. Don't outlaw cigarettes altogether, just in public places."

Reggie Swain said, "I'm a smoker. I don't think they should outlaw or restrict."

Alice Foltz stated, "I think it's against our constitutional rights to outlaw it. I'm a smoker. I don't think companies are lacing them."

Jignesh Kapadia said, "I feel every person has their own rights. If they want to smoke, they should be able to. I think smokers are being discriminated against. I don't think cigarettes should be outlawed."

John Daxson said, "Smokers have rights. If you don't like the smoke then leave."

Catherine Vinson-Wichman said, "I am a smoker. Yes, tobacco companies are lacing cigarettes with something. Nicotine levels aren't that high in a natural tobacco plant. I feel smoking should be outlawed in public where there are children or people with health problems. It's one of the worst legalized addictions in our history."

Dawn Williams-Knoch said, "I tend to think tobacco companies are lacing the cigarettes. I don't think smoking should be outlawed altogether. What you do in your home is one thing. I am a smoker, but I feel it should be illegal in public places."

Hoping the problem will just disappear

By SARA ELLIOTT
Special to the Herald

LAKE MARY — About a week after her birthday Wynonna knew something was wrong.

Wynonna was late. She hadn't been going through some hard times in her life and she just thought she was stressed. But when the week turned into two, Wynonna decided she needed a pregnancy test. She had a friend to who drove her to a free clinic in one of the worst parts of the city, and she sat in the car scared out of her mind.

"No one realizes how soon responsibility sets in. You think the world is against you no matter what the results are."

After her test was over, she found the outcome short and painful. The nurse just looked at her and said, "Well, it doesn't take a rocket scientist to know you're pregnant."

"The only feeling that I felt was that I was alone," says Wynonna.

One thing is certain—Wynonna is not alone. Teenage pregnancy in this country has skyrocketed in the past 20 years as a product of increased sexual activity among teens. Of the 1 million teenage girls that will get pregnant this year, 490,000 will actually carry their babies to term.

The saying, "Stay a virgin until you get married" just isn't realistic any more. Even though this is a growing phenomenon, programs such as condom distribution and better sex education are not being put into schools.

The saying, "If you don't acknowledge the problem it will disappear," seems to be used by the government and school boards around the country as a way of dancing around the real problem.

How are these young mothers going to support their children? Will they be able to finish school? Get a decent paying job?

Unfortunately, teenage mothers usually have to quit school and go on welfare to support their newborn babies and finishing their education is the last thing on their minds.

What is supposed to be the best time in their lives is changed into becoming young mothers.

The belief that getting pregnant would never happen to a girlfriend or daughter is widely held in today's society. When the reality comes that it can and does happen, shame and depression set in.

"I didn't want to tell my parents because I was afraid of what would occur. But my mom supported my decision."

Wynonna is optimistic, but is curious about what will happen in the future.

"Although I feel stronger than I ever have, I feel that I am missing all the things I wanted to do in high school. I wanted to do so many things. Like maybe try out for cheerleading, or become a student trainer. I made a mistake and now I'm paying for it. Just because your boyfriend says you won't get pregnant, you shouldn't believe him. He won't be the one paying for it the rest of his life."

Sara Elliott is a staff reporter for The Rampage, the Lake Mary High School student publication. Wynonna (whose name has been changed for this story) is a real freshman at the school.

Foster homes needed locally

The Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services reports that there is a critical need for additional foster homes for children in Orange, Seminole, DeSoto and Brevard counties. The number of children in foster care continues to rise while the number of available homes is diminishing, according to Myriam Santiago, Foster Home Recruiter for HRS.

Foster families volunteer their homes to provide temporary care to children who have been placed in HRS custody because of abuse, neglect or abandonment. HRS provides preparation classes for foster parents and conducts a thorough home study on all applicants. Foster parents are not paid any salary for their services, though HRS will reimburse them for their costs for providing care.

HRS is also seeking adoptive homes for children with special needs.

"Our biggest need is adoptive homes for black children and sibling groups," said Santiago. Medical assistance and financial subsidies are often available to families who adopt special needs children.

Persons interested in more information about foster care or adoption may contact Myriam Santiago at 423-6289.

Arrests benefit American Cancer Society

SANFORD — The words "you're under arrest" will ring through the community on Wednesday and Thursday, May 18, 10, during the American Cancer Society Jail and Bail.

"We will have some of Seminole County's most wanted business and community leaders who are slated to be 'jailbirds,'" said Don Moore, chairman of the Sanford/Lake Mary chapter. "They volunteered to be cuffed to raise money for a good cause, fighting cancer."

The jail will be erected Tuesday in Rand Alley near Cafe Jakes, Sanford, and in Lake Mary Center near Radio Shack, Lake Mary, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The "jailbirds" will be escorted by off duty officers from both the Sanford and Lake Mary police departments according to Chief Ralph Russell and Chief Richard Beary. The cells will be fully equipped with phones for the arrestees to find money for the Cancer Society's lifesaving programs in cancer research, education and patient service.

For information, call Don Moore at 321-0964.

SSH celebrates 10th anniversary

LONGWOOD — South Seminole Hospital, 555 W. S.R. 434, sponsored a week of activities for employees in celebration of its 10th anniversary, according to Winnie Rudat, marketing coordinator.

Throughout the week employees were treated to a number of fun and delicious events to thank them for their years of dedication.

The celebration included a Banana Split Mobile, with the roving "Banana Man" delivering ice cream to all, and a Dessert Bake-Off Bonanza. A Wellness Fair, with body fat testing, blood pressure checks, blood sugar testing and stress massages, was a big success.

Winding up the week, a "Carnival." Employees and their families will enjoy carnival games, pony rides, clowns, music and a cook out today.

South Seminole Hospital is a 200-bed acute care and psychiatric facility, affiliated with Orlando Regional Healthcare System. With approximately 550 employees, nearly 450 physicians.

Most recently, the hospital opened two new services: The South Seminole Pain Management Center and the Seminole Wound Health Center.

In addition, the hospital provides inpatient and outpatient psychiatric care for children, adolescents and adults. Psychiatric and evaluation, a crisis assessment and referral service, is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Professional counseling assessments are provided at no charge to help determine the most appropriate course of mental health treatment for an individual.

Researchers call for education of SIDS, infant sleep position

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
AP Medical Writer

CHICAGO — Child health experts are calling for parents to adopt one of the simplest ways to protect infants from death: Put them to bed on their backs or sides instead of on their stomachs.

The American Academy of Pediatrics and the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development said an intensive national campaign is needed to push parents into adopting the safer sleeping position.

The rate of sudden infant death syndrome fell about 50 percent in nations that successfully educated parents to adopt that one habit, researchers found after reviewing studies from seven countries.

The researchers — people from the institute, the pediatrics academy, other government agencies, universities, doctors' groups and SIDS organizations — published their report in the May issue of the journal Pediatrics.

"We strongly endorse the practice of placing healthy infants on their sides or backs when putting them down to sleep," the pediatrics academy and the institute said in a joint statement. They also recommended that soft surfaces and puffy bedding be removed from cribs.

Sudden infant death syndrome, or SIDS, is the name given to baby deaths that cannot be explained. It is the leading cause of death for American babies between 1 month and 1 year of age, claiming 6,000 lives a year.

The SIDS rate has remained relatively unchanged in the United States — about 1.5 per 1,000 babies — despite decreases in the overall infant mortality rate.

The institute in January convened experts who analyzed data from Australia, Britain, New Zealand, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and the United States.

A 1992 recommendation from the pediatrics academy that parents switch infants' sleep positions has not caught on in the United States, the researchers said.

Conventional medical wisdom since the 1930s had been that babies should sleep on their stomachs.

The data showed the prevalence of American infants placed stomach-down has declined from 73 percent to 58 percent in the past two years, the report said.

In Britain, the rate of babies sleeping on their stomachs fell from 59 percent to 2 percent between 1988 and 1991, the report said. The SIDS rate, which had been about two babies per 1,000, was cut in half, the report said.

Not everyone who attended the conference agreed with the conclusions.

Dr. Susan Orenstein, an associate professor of pediatrics at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, said she is skeptical that the U.S. SIDS rate — already relatively low — can be cut in half by changing sleep positions alone.

Caretaking practices differ from those abroad, and babies are rarely placed in thick bedding, as is common elsewhere and is known to be a factor in SIDS, she said.

Also, about 7 percent of American babies have problems with food backing up into the swallowing tube and need to be placed on their stomachs, Orenstein said. The government recommendation excludes babies with such problems, as well as premature infants and those with breathing problems.

EDITOR'S NOTE: A free brochure that includes the latest recommendations is available from the SIDS Alliance by calling 1-800-221-SIDS.

Fitness Factor

Exercise makes you healthy, but not without some risk

By IRA DREYFUSS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Regular workouts can keep blood flowing more easily to feed your heart muscle, which can help you to avoid heart trouble.

On the other hand, a study indicates a possibility that in middle-aged men exercise can raise the level of a chemical that helps to make blood clot, potentially raising the risk of a heart attack.

It's a case of taking the risk with the benefit, but researchers consider the risk theoretical for now; they say it is far outweighed by the benefit.

One major benefit is that regular endurance exercisers tend to have lower blood pressure and lower resting heart rates. Their hearts need to do less work to move blood through the arteries.

In addition, exercisers tend to have more high-density lipoprotein (HDL) and less low-density lipoprotein (LDL). HDL is the "good" cholesterol that sweeps low-density lipoprotein, LDL, the "bad" cholesterol, out of the arteries before it can start sticking to vessel walls and clog arteries.

This means exercisers generally have less to fear from coronary artery blockages.

A blockage develops because fatty particles of LDL can stick to the inside of the artery and hide under a kind of shell, which sometimes can break open. When this happens, blood platelets — which ordinarily clot to help heal injury — gather at the site and clump together, presenting a danger of cutting blood flow, which can kill the affected portion of the heart muscle.

A contributor to the formation of clots is the subject of a study in the American Physiological Society's Journal of Applied Physiology. Researchers knew that heart attacks became more common in men after they entered middle age. The study wanted to see if exercise in these men stimulated production of a substance called thromboxane, which helps platelets group together.

The study looked at nine men with an average age of almost 28, and nine others with an average age of over 54. All were healthy, and all ran on a treadmill at a vigorous pace for 30 minutes. Blood samples were taken before and after exercise.

The older men had a sharper increase in thromboxane 30 minutes after exercise than did the younger men, said researcher M.K. Todd of West Chester University in Pennsylvania.

This could indicate the older men had a higher risk of platelets clumping immediately after exercise, Todd said. The finding could serve as a warning to men in this age group who mostly exercise only on the occasional weekend, because they may have a hidden higher risk of clots to begin with, he said.

However, the thromboxane factor is minor at most, said another researcher, Dr. James H. Chesebro, a professor of medicine at Mt. Sinai School of Medicine in New York.

"Thromboxane is not a good predictor of these events," said Chesebro. The breaking off of a fatty particle from an arterial wall has far more potential danger, he said.

Exercise also increases production of a kind of clot-dissolving chemical, called tissue-plasminogen activator, TPA, which are now synthesized as heart drugs, Chesebro said.

In any case, very few people have heart attacks while exercising, while many are likely to have higher thromboxane levels, so the relationship is likely to be small at most, said Dr. Valentin Fuster, director of the Cardiovascular Institute at Mt. Sinai.

The study should not frighten people away from exercise, Fuster said.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Breyer confirmation predicted

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's Supreme Court nomination of Boston federal appeals Judge Stephen G. Breyer, a political centrist known for legal scholarship and consensus-forging, appears headed for quick Senate confirmation.

Leaders of both parties in the Senate rained praise on the jurist soon after Clinton ended days of agonizing indecision Friday by naming Breyer to the second Supreme Court vacancy of his presidency.

Breyer, 55, "is one of the outstanding jurists of our age," Clinton said. He selected Breyer, the chief judge of the 1st Circuit Court of Appeals, over two other finalists in what the president said was a laborious effort: Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt and federal appeals judge Richard Arnold of Little Rock, Ark.

Democrats and Republicans praised the selection and predicted Breyer would be confirmed easily. He was an assistant Watergate prosecutor in the 1970s and later served as chief counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee, which now will act on his nomination.

False memories of sexual abuse

NAPA, Calif. — Two therapists implanted false memories of sexual abuse in the mind of a woman who accused her father of raping her, a jury ruled in a case that some therapists say will make it harder for them to help people.

The jury awarded former winery executive Gary Ramona $500,000 on Friday in a verdict that questions the validity of so-called recovered memories and supports the right of third parties to sue therapists.

Supporters and opponents of recovered memories — the concept that buried recollections of child abuse can surface in adulthood — watched the case closely.

Ramona, 50, filed his $4 million lawsuit against family counselor Marche Isabella, psychiatrist Richard Rose and the Western Medical Center in Anaheim, charging malpractice in their treatment of his 23-year-old daughter, Holly Ramona.

Tensions over nuclear arming increasing

WILLIAMSBURG — Tensions over the possible nuclear arming of North Korea may be increasing, Defense Secretary William Perry says.

In a speech Friday night to the Business Council, composed of top corporate executives, the Pentagon chief said the threat of a confrontation with the communist North could come to a head within a few weeks.

"In many ways Korea poses the greatest security threat to the United States and the world today," Perry said.

Confirming earlier reports, he said the North Koreans this week were removing enough spent plutonium from a reactor to make perhaps four nuclear bombs.

If ongoing talks fail to provide adequate guarantees the fuel is not being used for nuclear arms, Perry said, the United States will consider sanctions that could escalate the confrontation.

"We have to regard the situation as very dangerous," he said.

Policy clamps down on food ads

WASHINGTON — Advertisers will have to be more careful when they claim foods have "less fat" or contain "more fiber."

Trying to bring ads more in tune with new, stricter standards for food labels, the Federal Trade Commission announced a policy Friday on making health and nutrition claims in advertising.

Advertising claims would have to adhere to specific Food and Drug Administration requirements for labels, such as requiring that food labeled "low fat" contain 3 grams or less of fat per serving.

The FDA determines nutritional and health information allowed on labels. The FTC polices advertising for false and misleading claims.

Land mines target of growing concern

WASHINGTON — The deadly dregs of war, tens of millions of land mines strewn across more than 60 countries, are the target of growing concern even in parts of the world now at peace.

The Clinton administration plans an international fund-raising effort to tackle a problem that U.N. officials estimate kills or maims more than 1,200 people a month.

At the first congressional hearing on the danger Friday, witnesses described expensive efforts to defuse antipersonnel mines and end the suffering and death they cause.

Ken Rutherford, who was badly injured by a land mine, said he felt lucky to be an American because he had access to the $250,000 worth of medical care it has taken so far to repair his body.

Hate

The data for 1993 should be released in a few months.

"Our reports indicate we have possibly had four cases we initially considered as hate crimes in this area since 1991," Harriett said. "One case involved telephoned threats made to a Jewish person by someone identifying himself as a Nazi, one was a white man who was beaten by four black men, and one was a black man who was beaten by a white, each with comments made to indicate they were racial attacks."

"The most recent case we had was this year," Harriett continued. "A woman received a letter with a picture of Adolph Hitler that said, 'White people unite!'"

Harriett said he believes a number of people may have received a similar poster at their homes.

Because of a discrepancy in statewide record keeping in the volume of reports from agencies throughout the state, FDLE Commissioner Tim Moore last fall created a task force to look at improving the reporting program. Arthur Tettelbaum, director of the Miami office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, chaired the task force.

"We offer in panaceas," Tettelbaum told the governor and Cabinet. "We engaged in a clear-eyed assessment of the successes and shortfalls in law enforcement's handling of hate crimes."

The ability of police to properly handle hate crimes is sometimes underestimated, according to Tettelbaum. But, he said, there is a training shortfall.

The task force devised a model policy regarding hate crimes that police agencies may adopt and urged FDLE to create a videotape to help ensure consistent reporting and investigation.

It also recommended that basic and specialized training programs offer enough instruc-

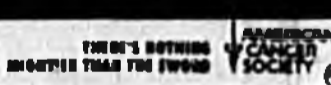

Solid Waste workers tops in Road-E-O

SANFORD — Two Seminole County Solid Waste Division employees made impressive showings at the Solid Waste Association of North America International Road-E-O in Phoenix, Ariz. last month. Gary Heath, solid waste hauler, placed second in the bulldozer event. Rick Roberson, landfill operator, finished fourth in the compactor event, competing against 47 others from 14 states. Competition included skills tests such as turns through an obstacle course and moving their equipment blade as close as possible to a line without touching it.

The two men qualified for the competition by placing first in statewide SWANA competition held here in March.

tion about hate crimes. "The one good thing about this," Harriett commented, "is, if we can connect a crime to a hate crime, the courts will increase the level of the crime. For example, a second degree murder charge would become a first degree murder charge; a misdemeanor would be tried as a felony, and so on. Generally, convictions will thus produce an increased fine and/or jail sentence."

Harriett said he considers a hate crime as any incident which can be associated with race, ethnicity, religion or sexes.

city was for fiscal year 1990/91," he wrote. "The continuing slow inflation since that time indicates the need for a periodic COLA." He admitted that a growing number of position classifications appear to be somewhat below the median for the statewide sample population.

Simmons is proposing a three percent COLA, and plans to include it in the initial budget preparations.

Regarding new personnel, seven departments have requested a total of 21 additional personnel. Discussion during the work session Monday centered on how the requests are expected to be trimmed by the time the first budget requests are considered. Simmons has already projected the number is down to 19.

The police department has requested seven new persons. Four uniformed officers have already been on staff, having been funded through a grant. Since the grant concluded in March of this year, the four have been funded by the city commission. Three other persons include a corporal, evidence custodian and records technician.

For other departments, new personnel requested include three and one part time for Utilities, two for Engineering & Planning, four in Public Works, one in Finance, four in Recreation and Parks and one in the Sanford Fire Department.

The commissioners have allocated June 27, 28 and 29 for preliminary budget work sessions.

Reclaiming the throne

Tribe girls get first track state crown since 1989

From Staff Reports

GAINESVILLE — This time, the Seminoles would not be denied.

At last year's Class 3A state track meet, the Seminole girls dropped the baton during the 4 x 100-meter relay finals and had to settle for second place by Jacksonville-Ribault, 30-27.

In the Class 4A state track meet Friday night at the Percy Beard Complex, the Seminoles again mishandled the baton during the 4 x 100-meter relay. But this time, the Tribe came back and won the state championship, eking past Gainesville-Buchholz (33-32) and Raines (31).

Like last year, the team championship wasn't decided until the final event of the evening, the 4 x 400-meter relay. Seminole won the race (worth 10 team points) with a state-record time of 3 minutes, 49.75 seconds. Raines was second (3:50.89) and Buchholz came in third (3:58.69).

The old state record of 3:50.89 was set by Raines at the 1991 state meet.

It was the fifth state championship for the girls' track team but the first since 1989.

The boys' bid for a third consecutive state title came up short Friday, the Tribe settling for a tie for second with Jacksonville-Wolfson behind team champion Buchholz (49-31).

Mindee Hampton, who anchored the record-setting 4 x 400-meter relay, and Belinder Morgan, who also ran on the 4 x 400-meter relay, claimed individual state titles, Hampton winning the 200-meter dash in 24.36 while Morgan defended her state crown in the triple jump with a winning leap of 39 feet, 3¾ inches.

Katina Perry scored in two events, finishing third in the shot put (39.9%) and fifth in the discus (110-1).

Shawana Montgomery placed fifth in the 100-meter dash (12.62) while Tenelle Hersey managed a sixth-place showing in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles (47.3) despite tripping over a hurdle in the final 10 meters. Montgomery and Hersey also ran on the 4 x 400-meter relay.

In the boys' half of the meet, Seminole's Andre Scott and Bernard Sparrow capped stellar careers with outstanding efforts.

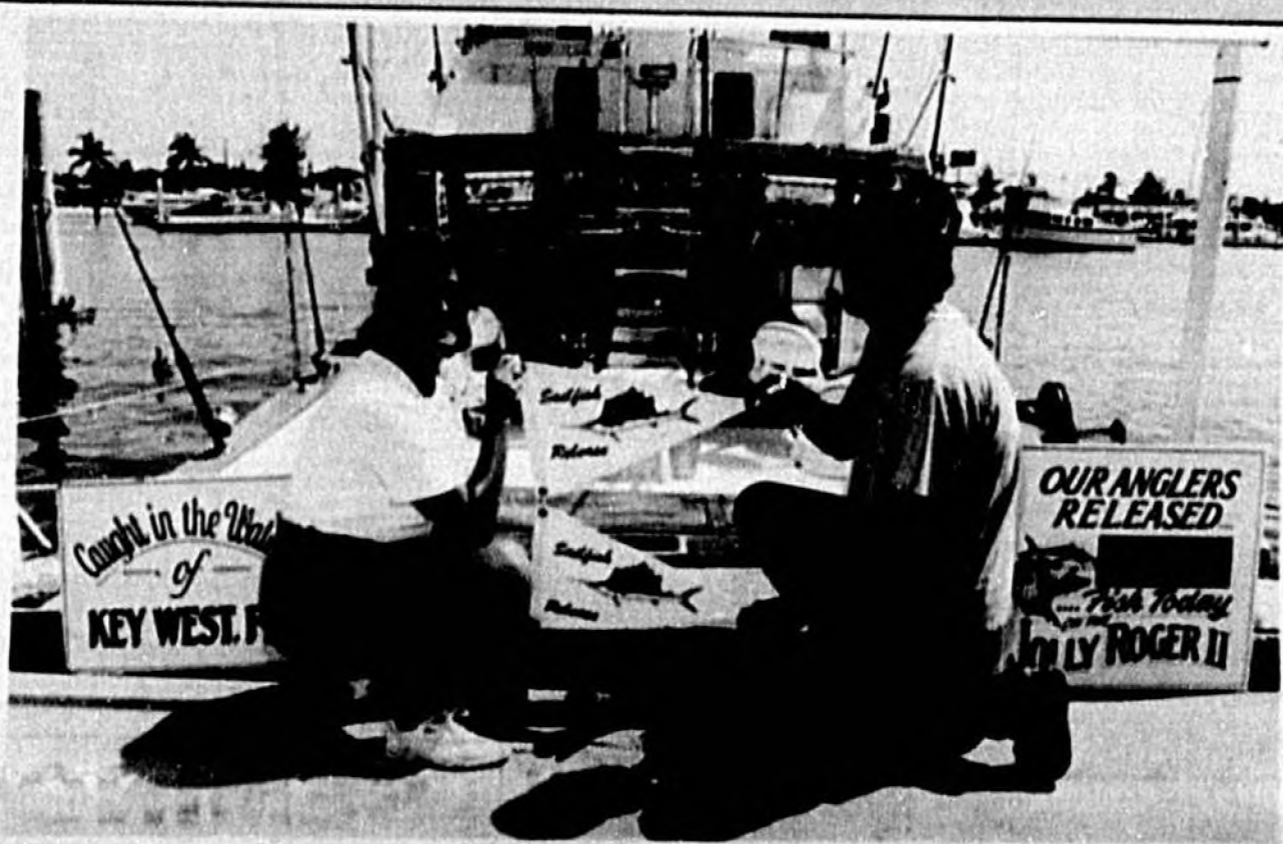

Scott set the state meet record while winning the triple jump with an effort of 52-5½ and finished first in the long jump (23-6½). Sparrow won the state championship in the shot put (62-1) and placed fifth in the discus (154-5).

The only other individual scorer for the Seminoles was Charlie Farmer, who took sixth in the 100-meter dash (11.15).

Seminole's state title hopes were hurt by a muscle pull suffered by Cory Wilson in the finals of the 100-meter dash. Not only did Wilson not score in the 100 (where he hoped to place in the top four), his absence was felt in the 4 x 100-meter relay, where the Tribe settled for third with a time of 41.77.

The Seminoles came in sixth in the 4 x 400-meter relay at 3:21.84.

Sarasota next for Patriot nine

From Staff Reports

GONZALEZ — Peaking at the right time.

At the start of the baseball season the 5A-District 4 team to beat was Lyman, then it was Oviedo and everybody worried about when a talented Lake Howell team was going to wake up.

Not much was said about defending champion Lake Brantley, which graduated eight starters and was having trouble with its defense in struggling out of the gate to a 9-5 record.

Even in late April head coach Mike Smith figured his team was about 10 days away from being at their best.

He was right.

Since dropping back-to-back games to Oviedo and Spruce Creek the Patriots (28-8) have won eight games in a row. They capped the run Friday night in the championship game of the 5A-Region 1 tournament at Tate High School in Gonzalez by earning their second trip to the state tournament in the past five years with a 3-2 victory over Fort Walton Beach-Choctawhatchee.

Lake Brantley will now play Region 3 champion Coconut Creek, which dumped Palm Beach Lakes 7-0 Friday night. In next Friday's state semifinals at Ed Smith Stadium in Sarasota. Also in the 5A field will be defending champion and No. 1 ranked in the nation, Sarasota, which eliminated Valrico-Bloomingtondale 12-3, and Miami-Braddock, which ousted Hialeah 12-2. Times will be announced today.

The Patriots got on the board in the bottom of the first inning when Jeff Shaw reached on a two-out error and scored on a single by J.B. Cartmill.

The Indians (23-9) came back with single runs in the second and third innings against Lake Brantley starter Scott Conner to take a 2-1 lead.

The Patriots took the lead for good in the bottom of the third inning, as Jeff Butler and Joey Harmer singled and came around on a two-out single by Moise Navarro.

There would be no more scoring the rest of the way, but Choctaw, which eliminated Lyman Thursday night, had the bases loaded with one out in the sixth against Lake Brantley ace Mitch Schardt in the sixth. Schardt got back-to-back strike outs to end the threat.

In the seventh, the Indians were robbed on two running catches in the outfield by Shaw and Butler before a strike out ended the game.

Schardt picked up the save in relief of Harmer (2-0). Harmer had come on in the fourth inning and hurled two scoreless innings before giving way to Schardt.

Doing the damage for the Patriots were Brad Van Der Wiede (two singles), Cartmill (double, RBI), Navarro (single, two RBI) and Butler and Harmer (one single and one run scored each).

Confident Dilfer ready for Buccaneers challenge

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

TAMPA — Trent Dilfer doesn't know why other quarterbacks before him failed, and he doesn't really care.

The first-round draft pick of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers has supreme confidence in his skills and believes if any quarterback can turn around the perennial NFL losers, it's him.

"I really feel I can be a great player, and I think (the Bucs) feel the same way," said Dilfer, whose passing efficiency rating of 173.1 last season at Fresno State was the third highest in NCAA history. "I really think it's a match made in heaven."

Tampa Bay, which has given up on two "franchise" quarterbacks in the past decade, hopes so.

Steve Young started 19 games and had minimal success in two seasons with the Bucs. The club also gave up on Vinny Testaverde after six consecutive losing seasons with the 1986 Heisman Trophy winner at quarterback.

Dilfer, 22, doesn't promise an instant turnaround. He isn't even a lock to be the starter as a rookie, although he'll probably earn four times as much as incumbent Craig Erickson next season.

The key to how fast he breaks into the lineup could be how quick he's able to pick up coach Sam Wyche's no-huddle offense and how well Erickson, a third-year pro who threw for 3,054 yards and 18 touchdowns in his first season as a starter, plays this fall.

Although Wyche insisted before the draft that he was comfortable with his quarterback situation, Dilfer was too good a prospect to pass when he was still available for the sixth pick.

"I don't know why it didn't work out for the others," Dilfer said. "But I can see how it looks. Here's another kid. Is he better than Vinny? Is he better than Steve Young? Who knows?"

"I really believe a system helps develop a quarterback. Steve Young was not good when he was here, probably because he was in the wrong system. He got to a system that was right for him and he became good. ... I think the system here is a great system and a quarterback that has an opportunity to be in it for a while is going to have the same results that Steve Young has had, or Dan Marino has had or John Elway."

Dilfer

strong, accurate throwing arm that some scouts feel makes him a slightly better prospect than Heath Shuler, the first quarterback taken in the draft.

As a junior last season, he set a NCAA Division I-A record by throwing 271 consecutive passes without an interception. He completed 65 percent of his attempts for 3,276 yards, 28 touchdowns and only four interceptions.

The Bucs didn't expect Dilfer to last until the sixth pick, but an obviously pleased Wyche resisted the temptation to call him a "steal" on draft day.

The most successful quarterbacks Wyche has worked with as a head coach or assistant — Boomer Esiason and Joe Montana — were second- and third-round selections.

"If this guy turns out as good as those two, we had real good fortune," Wyche said.

Dilfer considers himself a quick learner and hopes to make a strong bid for the starting job in training camp. While he feels he needs to improve every aspect of his game, the biggest adjustment he anticipates is to the speed of the pro game.

"I don't think there's a single player in the draft who can go play next year in the NFL like he did his sophomore, junior or senior year in college," he said. "It just doesn't happen. We all have to get better. The ones who improve the most wind up being the best."

Dilfer said he'll trust Wyche to decide when he's ready to play.

"I don't know what's best. Joe Montana sat on the bench for a while. Dan Marino was thrown into it right away. They've both had great success," he said.

Once the job is his, Dilfer has no doubt he'll succeed. His confidence, however, shouldn't be mistaken for arrogance, he said.

"I am confident, borderline cocky. I'll admit that," Dilfer said.

"But I'm not cocky to the point that I say, 'I'm just better than everybody else, and that's the way it is.' I am confident that if I do everything in my power to accomplish something, I will accomplish it. God has given me a lot of ability. I have worked very hard at grooming it and becoming good at whatever I do."

Take care when fishing offshore Series

Offshore fishing is really good now, and record numbers of anglers are venturing many miles from shore. With these increasing numbers of boaters also comes the greater odds of tragedy. During the past few weekends we have all heard of the highly publicized close calls which have involved weekend offshore fishermen.

I have logged thousands of hours offshore, and each passing day leaves me with a greater respect for the ocean. Anglers who go many miles to sea without being well-prepared, and who lack respect for this potentially dangerous type of fishing only court disaster.

The grim tales of the past few weekends should call our attention to certain basic necessities of all offshore trips. First of all, someone must always know approximately where you will be fishing. The ocean is vast, and finding a tiny boat in such an expanse is analogous to finding a proverbial needle in the haystack.

It is also amazing to me how few people taken enough rope to anchor in deep water should the boat become disabled. Ocean currents are silent, but swift, and a boater could drift to St. Augustine and beyond in a hurry, greatly reducing their odds of being discovered. I personally keep over 300 feet coiled up in my anchor storage compartment. If needed, I can simply tie this spare rope to my anchor rope, which is approximately 100 feet. Once anchored, rescue efforts can be pinpointed with the use of a radio and a Loran.

Never go offshore without a working VHF radio. Your radio is your only lifeline to land, and without it you could remain at sea for many days should you break down.

A Loran is also a necessity, for this is the only way that you can give your exact location in the event of any emergency.

It is also a good idea to take along flares (required by the Coast Guard), water, and extra food. These items are invaluable in any emergency situation. Several years ago, my outboard got stuck in reverse 22 miles offshore. It was late in the afternoon, and I was very lucky that my radio reached out to Captain Jack at Port Canaveral. I gave Jack my Loran coordinates and set the anchor. Rough seas made working on my motor impossible. It got so rough that the commercial sea tow vessel sent to my rescue turned around and went back to port. The Coast Guard had to send their cutter, as my boat was being tossed around in heavy storm seas.

You can take it from me, the ocean is a very lonely, desolate place to be at night. The radio mike in my hand was my only link between me and disaster, and the grave importance of basic equipment took on a whole new meaning.

The huge cutter took waves over the bow, and it was three long hours before I saw her lights. Loran coordinates and my radio enabled the ship to find me on that blackest of nights.

No, you didn't hear about me in the news, that's because I was prepared for the worst when it happened, and I was able to survive a life-threatening situation.

Don't become a statistic, and have everything on board you need for every offshore trip. Treat the ocean with due respect, for to do less is to flirt with disaster.

SHUPE'S SCOOP
Never go to sea with only one boat battery. A two battery system should be a minimum. All of your electronics need power to operate, and you would be in dire straits should your only battery fail.

FISHING FORECAST
Bass fishing will gradually taper off with increasing heat, but Pussie Lake continues to provide fast action with low water, the best action is south of Pussie Lake, and the fish are taking topwaters and small Rapalas.

Sebastian Inlet is getting better by the day. Snook action will peak this month, before the closure begins in June. Be there early if you want a spot at night. Snook, redfish, bluefish, jack crevalle and ladyfish are all present in good numbers. Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports that offshore fishing is hot with dolphin, sailfish, wahoo and king mackerel. The water is very clean, and fish can be found as close in as 80 feet. Bottom action with grouper and snapper is a little slow. Inside the Port, flounder and sheepshead are biting. Trout and redfish are rife as good on the flats of the Banana and Indian Rivers.

A variety of fish are bending rods at Ponce Inlet, sheepshead, bluefish, drum, redfish, jack crevalle and flounder. Live or dead shrimp is the best bait. Trout and redfish are active in Mosquito Lagoon.

meet is scheduled for May 21 at Showalter Park.

Competition in both USTF and AAU meets (as well as the upcoming Lake Mary Track Series) is broken down into two-year increments beginning at 10-and-Under. Masters competition is divided into five-year increments beginning at 30-34. Gibson stresses that the Lake Mary Track Club is not just for those athletes aiming to compete in USTF or AAU meets. Casual athletes also are invited to come work out and, if they so desire, take part in the Lake Mary Track Series.

Designed more as a participatory event rather than a competitive one, the Lake Mary Track Series will be conducted at Lake Mary's Don T. Reynolds Stadium on June 20 and 27 and July 11 and 18.

The meet is broken down into eight age categories: 8-and-Under, 9-10, 11-13, 14-18, 19-29, 30-39, 40-49, and 50-and-Over.

Scheduled events are the long jump, triple jump, 50-meter dash (8-and-Under and 9-10 groups only), 100-meter dash, 800-meter run (8-and-Under, 9-10, and 11-13 only), 1,600-meter run, 200-meter dash (8-and-Under and 9-10 only), 400-meter dash, and 4 x 100-meter relay.

Athletes in the 8-and-Under and 9-10 age groups will not compete in the triple jump, 100-meter dash, 1,600-meter run, or 400-meter dash. The 11-13 group also will not compete in the 1,600-meter run.

All competitors will be limited to four events per meet. The entry fee is $1 per person per meet. Ribbons will be awarded to the first, second, and third-place finishers, male and female, in all age groups.

Flea World named one of the best

By NICK PFEIFFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Flea World, on U.S. Highway 17-92, south of Sanford, has received an extremely high ranking among similar establishments across the entire nation.

Independent Dealers Association, the trade group for North American traveling vendors and concessionaires, gave a report of the top 10 flea markets in North America. The report was published in the April 28 edition of The Wall Street Journal.

The local Flea World was listed as number four in the nation. Others in the top ratings include Apache Park & Swamp, Apache Junction, Ariz.; Rose Bowl Flea Market, Pasadena, Calif.; and Flea Market, San Jose, Calif.

Flea World, owned by Syd

Levy, first opened in Sanford on May 20, 1982. At that time, it boasted of 400 dealer booths. Levy is still the owner.

According to the latest statistics, it now has over 1,700 booths all under one roof. There is also a seven acre amusement park (Fun World), with over 40 rides and attractions.

Officials have estimated Flea World and Fun World attract as many as three million people-visits per year, with about one-third of them from out of the Central Florida area.

Flea World is open Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m., with free admission, and free parking for over 4,000 cars.

Fun World is also open Friday, Saturday and Sunday, from 10 a.m. until Midnight.

State looking into brokers' early sale of Disney stock

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — The state comptroller's office is investigating complaints that brokers solicited investors to buy into Euro Disney before the pitches were legal in Florida, a spokesman said Thursday.

About 80 inquiries have produced 10 complaints against Merrill Lynch and one against Paine Webber Inc., primarily from customers in the Orlando area, the home of Walt Disney World, said comptroller's spokesman Terrence McElroy.

The volume and value of sales questioned by the confidential complaints has not been released.

Stock in the Disney theme park outside Paris has lost more than 55 percent of its value since it was offered in November 1989, and McElroy said. "I think its performance had played a role in the disenchantment of the public."

Florida brokers were not legally allowed to solicit Euro Disney sales under state securities registration requirements until an exemption took effect in January 1992. However, brokerage clients could initiate purchases.

"Someone who does not ask for it cannot be targeted by a broker for it until or unless it is registered or exempt," McElroy said.

The investigation, several weeks old, is still in its early stages and "would take certainly a matter of months" to resolve, he said.

But allegations of widespread illegal sales are false and "appear to be generated by a former employee and his associates," Merrill Lynch spokeswoman Cathy Maroney said Thursday. The company said all of the complaints came from clients of a single broker.

The broker in question is James Spratt, who was fired from his job in Longwood last August and is seeking $1 million in damages through arbitration.

Spratt's attorney, Bill Singer, says the sales went beyond Spratt and blames Merrill Lynch for allowing advance solicitation.

"Merrill Lynch should be a big enough company to accept the fact that they made a mistake, pay back the clients who lost money, rewrite their policy and chalk it up to experience," he said.

Singer also questioned the actions of Florida regulators, saying the comptroller's office wrote an intimidating letter to Spratt's current employer.

"All of a sudden, he's gone from a hero to a goat," Singer said of Spratt. "It's led me to wonder what the state of Florida's real commitment is on this issue."

Michael Ganley, an Orange County firefighter who bought $20,000 in Euro Disney stock in February 1990, said he was solicited by James R. Bagwell, a broker in Merrill's Winter Park office. The Wall Street Journal reported Thursday.

The brokerage house said its internal investigation indicated Ganley initiated the purchase and Bagwell wasn't Ganley's broker even though his code number is on Ganley's account summary.

Another investor, Mary Jan Coon, told the newspaper she received an information packet on Euro Disney from Spratt, and it included a trade journal article saying the development was as "close to risk-free as a deal can get." She bought $2,000 worth of the stock before the exemption took effect in Florida.

Under the address label, Coon said she found a sticker saying "possible blue-sky violation." A stock is "blue-skyed" when it has not been cleared for sale.

Maroney said the sticker was an indication of a double check on the sale, and "this showed that compliance was at work."

If the state concludes sales were unauthorized, investors would be eligible to receive their money back plus interest, McElroy said.

"We would not only attempt to make the investors whole, we would also discipline any renegade brokers who were involved in any impropriety," he said.

The state comptroller's hotline number is 1-800-848-3792.

Teaching protection Seminar to help business avoid crime

By NICK PFEIFFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A special meeting is planned for this Tuesday beginning at 6:30 p.m., at the meeting room of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce facility, 400 E. First Street. It may save property and lives in downtown Sanford.

Sponsored by the Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association, SHDWA, and Sanford Main Street, is will be an educational session on how to help reduce business crime.

Special guest speaker will be Sanford Police Chief Ralph Russell.

"This is part of the CEPTD program," said SHDWA president Ron Layer. "I don't know exactly what that stands for, but I do know that it is a program which has proven successful, in helping business owners and operators reduce the threat of crime at their places of establishment."

"Among things which can be done," he observed, "are improved lighting indoors as well as outdoors, changes in window displays, locations of specific types of merchandise, and many other things which may not cost much money but could save the loss of a great deal of merchandise."

Layer said while the gathering is a regular SHDWA meeting, all business owners and operators are not only invited but urged to attend.

"Help through this education is available," Layer commented, "but it won't do anyone any good unless we hear about it, learn from it, and take advice from the experts."

Playing the name game

By NICK PFEIFFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Rehabilitation Corporation, nationwide, operates over 165 outpatient rehabilitation clinics under the name Rehabilitation Center, including 20 in Florida.

Recent name changes in the local area may be somewhat confusing, but they all result in a Rehabilitation expansion program.

The following should be noted:

• Rehabilitation has acquired the Sanford Wellness Center, 541 N. Palmetto Avenue.

It has recently changed its name to Rehabilitation Center.

• The Longwood Wellness Center, 129 E. S.R. 434, in Longwood, merged with Rehabilitation Sports Medicine, an already existing center in Orlando.

• Deltona Wellness Center, 1555 Saxon Blvd., has also been acquired by Rehabilitation, and is now known as Rehabilitation Center.

"We are very pleased to now offer our clients the convenience of choosing from among our Deltona, Sanford and several Orlando area locations for their therapy needs," said Mark Tracey, center administrator. "Any physicians who require specialized services in physical therapy, occupational therapy or sports medicine can now refer their patients to any of our nine Orlando/Deltona/Sanford facilities."

Rehabilitation is headquartered in Brentwood, Tennessee.

In addition to the 165 centers, it provides contract services to 70 acute-care hospitals, and holds more than 900 long-term care contracts in 13 states.

High tea sparks historic week Vihlen family meets for a gathering of the clan Preservation Week was celebrated all week in beautiful, historic Sanford in accord with the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Festivities got under way on Saturday, May 7, at the Park Avenue home of Jami and Jon Meeks when the Sanford Historic Trust announced the preservation award winners, followed by a walking tour of the historic district and then hosted a Victorian High Tea in the lovely Meeks home under the chairmanship of Georgia Stubbs.

According to Jami, about 50 people called during the afternoon. Guests sipped tea and munched on a variety of delicious edibles while enjoying the home and rose garden in the back. Mostly, couples showed up with the men absorbing the culture and ambience of another era. Several women wore fashionable hats to add "high tea" appeal and authenticity to the formal occasion.

Jami and Jon have lived in the home for about four years since their marriage in another city. They have put their special brand on the showplace, previously owned by Rebecca Stevens, a former school teacher who now lives at the Renaissance.

The couple are completely in love with our city, Jami said. "We wouldn't live anywhere else. We have thoroughly enjoyed it. Our goal is to keep on learning more history about Sanford."

Following the Victorian High Tea, Bert and Walt Padgett entertained at an old-fashioned Sunday dinner at the charming Higgins House which they own and operate in the historic district. Guests enjoyed a carriage ride through the district before dinner to spark a touch of romance on the nostalgic trail down Memory Lane.

Several other events took place during the week to add to the historical data of "Sanford Memories Worth Saving."

Vihlen family reunion

Around Sanford, mention the name Vihlen and watch ears perk up. This is probably because the Vihlen family has played an important role in the development of the community.

Sid Vihlen Sr., 85, and his sister, Olga Hunter, 95, were born on the now Vihlen Road in the Upsala section of the city where Gen. Sanford brought the early Swedish settlers. Sid said his grandfather bought the acreage in 1879 and the family has lived there since.

And this very site, 670 Vihlen Road, "the old home place," lovingly called by the family, was the location of a Vihlen family reunion on Saturday, May 7. About 100 descendants of the Early Swedish settlers gathered to reminisce and feast. A sprawling picnic area has been added in later years to the 20-acre plot to accommodate the gang. According to Sid, most of the clan live at Sanford and Homestead with others scattered across the United States.

Sid's daughter, Shirley Matthews and her daughter, Terri Rollosen, both of Lake City, were in command of the reunion. "They put the thing on," Sid said. He mentioned that he and Olga were talking about the reunion for a long time, but his daughter and granddaughter came in and took over the planning, invitations and other details. Sid was charged with barbecuing the chickens for the big family feast.

The gang played volleyball, horseshoes, croquet and other games accompanied by a variety of music presented by family members.

Olga saw a dream come true. Sid Vihlen Jr. said, "She said that before she died she wanted to see both branches of the family have a reunion on the original homestead."

Sid's second cousin, Sadie Vihlen, is considered the matriarch of the Vihlens in Homestead while Olga is the Sanford descendants' matriarch. Sadie visited with Olga most of the past week.

Geneva woman creates Florida Belles

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

GENEVA — Florence McCarter is a Kansas-born girl but always considered Missouri as her home. "I lived in Missouri so many years, I call that my home," she said. "I moved to Ormond Beach in 1971 but then moved in with my niece in Geneva about six months ago."

McCarter has been retired about 20 years now. She has one son who passed away two years ago, three grandchildren, nine great grandchildren and one great grandchild. "I also claim my niece, Kay, as a daughter," she said. "I live with her now."

Maybe the fact that she has so many grandchildren to keep track of has been the motivator in her love of dolls. "I was born loving dolls," she said. "My mother did too. She always bought me dolls. I was eight-and-a-half when my mother died. I'll never forget the Christmas after that when I was nine. My dad didn't get a doll for me. My aunt lectured him about it. Thirty minutes later my dad walked in with three dolls, one for each of us."

McCarter is the creator of the Ozark Granny Dolls which she made on her 1904 treadle sewing machine. "I fell in love with that treadle when I was four or five," she said. "I've done all my dolls with it. I took up the dolls as a hobby in 1957. Then I started selling them and took up restoring antique dolls."

She spoke about the Ozark Granny Dolls, now renamed Florida Belle Dolls. "I began them years ago," she said. "I take a man's tube sock and stuff it with polyfill. I buy the faces at the craft store. I fill the head with potpourri. I didn't put buttons or beads on them so they would be childproof. Yarn of any color you want, I braid for the hair. I can make two or three in an afternoon." Fancy dresses of ribbons and lace were added for a very feminine look.

The doll has evolved somewhat over the years. "I remember the first one I ever made was for a little girl with heart trouble," she said. "That was about 1956. The course in dolls I took paid off, I guess."

McCarter has some notable achievements in her field. "Some of my dolls were on display at a large store in Washington, D.C. called Woodward and Lothrop," she said. "My dolls are also on display still at a lot of places in Maryland. One of the doll houses my husband made is now in the Smithsonian." A book called "The Collector's Encyclopedia of Dolls" by Dorothy Coleman, sat on her table. See Hobby, Page 6B

"Dorothy was an acquaintance of mine," she said. "She bought a doll from me and that doll and several others I had are listed in the book." McCarter's name was listed in the acknowledgments of this book.

She spoke about the different dolls she's come to acquire and sell. Her knowledge was impressive. "The Germans were the first dollmakers," she said. "The Jumeau doll is French. Keeners and China dolls are German as well as the Simon and Halbig. Brus are the highest priced dolls ever made." McCarter also mentioned she had restored hundreds of these dolls.

Operating a doll hospital in Maryland was a job that occupied much of her time in the '60s and '70s. "I gave lectures on dolls, too," she said. "I especially talked about china dolls." McCarter was the founder and first president of the Free State Doll Study Club in Maryland. The club still recognizes her as a member.

She spoke of going to the 1985, 16th Annual United Federation of Doll Clubs' convention in Washington, D.C. McCarter wrote for the Antique Dealer's Gazette in Maryland about 1985.

A real doll is the best way to describe McCarter herself. Her friendliness and cordial way made for an afternoon of comfort and enjoyment. All the smiling faces of her dolls added to what seemed like a childhood tea party.

Watch out Cypress Gardens, McCarter's beautiful Florida "Belles" could just cut into profits. McCarter was truly the "belle of the ball" around all her small Belles.

Volunteer of the Year

Working with guide dogs has its merits

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

She's just gone to the dogs, some might say, but Doris Houchins would only take that as a compliment. Houchins has been working with Southeastern Guide Dogs as a volunteer since 1988. Four years of that time she has been a coordinator with the organization.

Crediting much of her work to others, she modestly wished to not receive a lot of attention, although this year she was awarded Volunteer of the Year by the group. "I've worked with many different organizations as a volunteer," she said. "I've worked with Habitat for Humanity, the church, Meals on Wheels and others. I've always worked with volunteers, but I've never had volunteers like these. The people are truly dedicated. Some drive far and always show up for meetings and never complain."

Houchins began working with the dogs as a memorial to her granddaughter. "My only granddaughter was killed in a car accident," she said. "I was with her a lot. She and I wanted a dog. If we could get a guide dog we could raise it for the blind. I'd had the puppy one week before she was killed. I did this as a memorial to her."

Interested persons, Houchins asked, to call her at (407) 809-5118 or write to the Southeastern Guide Dogs, 4210 Seventy Seventh Street East, Palmetto, FL 34221.

She spoke further on how puppies begin in the program. "A puppy is placed in the home at 10 weeks old," she said. "Then at 14 months or earlier they are taken to be trained at the school. After the puppy is turned in they go through about 4 to 6 months of training, learning about 44 commands. Blind people are there for 3 weeks and supplied with food and lodging." Houchins spoke of the organization and how it operates strictly by donations from individuals. "We live 100 percent on donations," she said. "The Lions clubs are a big help. We began in a trailer and 2 acres. Last year a million dollar kennel and student rooms were built."

Houchins told of her experience with Southeastern. "We started with just my dog," she said. "Then after two years, Southeastern decided to have coordinators in the area. The coordinators choose interested parties for raising of the dogs from applicants. Little by little 2 or 3 to 23 dogs this year have been raised. It has grown so much. The 23 are the graduates that live in the Orlando area."

Much of Houchins' work involves monthly meetings and on-going training. "We have a graduation every two months," she said. "There's just so much to get out of volunteering there. There's no feeling like this in anything I've ever done in my life. When the dogs graduate and walk away with the blind person, it's a feeling you can't describe. One lady in Melbourne loves to do it so much she's raised two at a time and is on her 14th dog."

Houchins spoke specifically of the two dogs she has now. "I've had Gridley since he was 10 weeks old," she said. "He's now 18 months old. Clark went through the program but since his breeding was so good he is now a breeder. June Bug was one of his puppies and she's in the area and going on her 4th time breeding. We're raising our dog's grandchildren." She elaborated on the information that each person should know and practice when training a puppy for Southeastern. "We are told to put them through every experience that won't kill you or your dog," she said. "It's important not to feed them people food from your hand. They could bite a hamburger from the blind person's hand later. It's also near handicrafts, clothing and food.

Joseph Adams of the Orange County Historical Museum demonstrated the shaving horse and draw knife. Michelle Alexander, also from the museum, churned butter and served it on fresh baked biscuits. Visitors were encouraged to don period clothing and try their hand at churning butter.

The Lake Mary Historical Commission display that received the most attention was the photographs and memorabilia of the railroad, brought by Harriett Boyd. Many visitors added valuable information to the archives by providing Boyd with the names of other railroad workers who lived in the Lake Mary area.

Estella Powell sat at the cassava display, passed out cuttings and shared a delicious cake that she baked using the cassava root. She also had baked cassava on hand for toasting. Mary Jane Duryea's display of old toys and books was also very popular.

The highlight of the day was the unveiling of the historical marker with information compiled by the commission and purchased with funds donated by the Lake Mary Community Improvement Association. Historical Commission chairman Jimmy Thompson and CIA President Joe Rosier were on hand as Lake Mary Mayor Lowry Rockett did the honors.

After the opening ceremonies, the CIA gave out their two annual awards. The Harry Terry Award went to Ethel Carlson as this year's outstanding CIA member. Millie Murray received the Lifetime Achievement Award for community service contributions.

Many of Lake Mary's pioneers turned out to sit and rock and talk to visitors about "the good old days," including Mrs. Horace M. (Olaj) Cochran, Mrs. Lois Pugh and Mrs. Arlyn True.

Across the street in The Shoppes of Lake Mary, several civic groups had displays, including the Rotary Club, the First Presbyterian Church, 4-H, the Woman's Club, St. Peter's Preschool, Family Community Education, the Seminole Family YMCA and the Lake Mary Garden Club.

Various displays could also be found at the new city hall. Inside the hall, the Lake Mary seniors displayed some of their artwork. The paintings and some woodcutting will remain on display through the end of May. You should really stop by and take a look at all the work, especially "tubing on Rock Spring Run" by Janet Krikorian. It was exceptional.

Outside city hall, Grace Christian Church offered free audio tapes and Mother's Day cards to visitors. Their booth was "manned" all day, giving the women of the church a chance to have a Mother's Day luncheon.

The Stardust Service Unit of Girl Scouts also had a display. Patty Shawley wore her vintage 1972 leader's uniform and another leader, Jeanne Bush, brought her small collection of girl's uniforms. There was a Brownie uniform from the mid '60s and a Brownie and Junior uniform from the mid '70s. Jeanne also brought old handbooks covering 1951 to the present. If anyone has any old Girl Scout uniforms or handbooks they would like to donate for next year's display, call Mary Rowell at 321-1498 or Shari Brodie at 321-6471.

Another fascinating display was provided by the Trailmates from the AIS tribe. The Trailmates, the fourth and fifth grade level of the Indian Princesses, set up a teepee which visitors could step into. They also loaned war bonnets at the younger set for picture taking. Olde Lake Mary Days was blessed with wonderful weather, great food and lots of fun. Planning has already begun on next year's event.

Cheap relative is getting a real deal from low rent

DEAR ABBY: I have some rental property. Several years ago, I rented an apartment to a relative. I charged her the same amount I had been getting from the people who moved out.

She pays her rent on time and keeps the apartment clean. She also takes care of the repairs, plumbing, bills and electricity. She put in a new kitchen and renovated the apartment.

The problem is that in this area, all the rents have gone up very high — a lot more than she pays — and I feel I am getting cheated. I don't need the money, but I think I deserve it.

When I told her the rents were going up all over and I thought she should pay more, she got very cross and said she would move out first. I really don't want her to move because I don't drive, and she takes me shopping and drives me to my appointments, etc. She also does my paperwork.

ADVICE
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

I'd really hate to see her move, but I know the apartment is worth more than she's paying. I have raised the rent for all the other tenants. Should I back down or what?

THINKING IT OVER
DEAR THINKING: It sounds as though you have a pretty good deal just as it is. She's improved your property, and you're getting benefits from her that the other tenants aren't providing. As long as you don't need the money, leave well enough alone. She sounds like an ideal tenant to me.

DEAR ABBY: Ohhh! I so enjoyed the tongue-in-cheek letter from that single woman who was delighted to be free. She is not alone; I'm one of those.

My marriage to Frank lasted 17 years. I experienced the snoring as well as the dirty underwear under the bed — and worse. But 10 years after my divorce, I found Richard. My second chance at matrimony was the offer I couldn't refuse!

Two weeks after the ceremony, during a little argument, I realized something was not quite right and I said, "Richard, I swear you must have two personalities." To which he replied, "Dr. Marmor says I have six!"

Olga said, "It was the most beautiful thing I've ever seen in my life. Over 100 descendants from all over the country were there." She added, "It was wonderful visiting with people we haven't seen for years, the little ones are all grown and there are new babies. It was marvelous!"

Birthday greetings

If you're out doing your jogging and walking every morning about 5:45 in between the Town and Lake Apartments and All Souls Catholic Church, you may chance upon Veronica Holdos.

This spry little lady takes the same walk daily to the church, says Hossary, and gets the church prepared for Father Richard Trout to say Mass. This is every day, rain or shine, according to Betsy Quinn.

Last Friday, on May 6, Veronica took her usual walk despite the fact that it was her 90th birthday. Following the walk and Mass with friends, Betsy Quinn entertained at an "Appreciation Birthday" party at her Mayfair home which was attended by the friends, Father Trout and Deacon Ricardo Santos.

Veronica's middle name is love and charity. Born in Vienna, Austria, she has lived in Sanford since 1973. She lost her mother, brother and sister in 1918 in Austria during the devastating influenza epidemic. Her father was in America at the time.

In addition to her daily walks and church duties, Veronica also helps with the Meals-on-Wheels program. Quite a load for a nonagenarian!

Many, many more returns of the day to this fine lady. Happy, happy birthday, Veronica.

Brunch honors moms

Members of the Junior Woman's Club of Sanford Inc. (Juniors) entertained the Women's Club of Sanford (seniors) at a Mother's Day brunch at the clubhouse on Saturday, May 7. The guests came dressed to the nines to dine in splendor from the elegant buffet prepared by the lively and industrious juniors.

The tables were decorated with pink cloths, arrangements, lamps and frilly heart-shaped fridge magnets created by the juniors as gift mementos to the seniors. Floating colorful balloons enhanced the festive atmosphere.

In charge of the gala event were Lori Von Herbulis and Derenda Himschoot assisted by Sandy Gorman and Debbie Whitehead with Myra Bales greeting the guests and giving the welcome. Debbie Whitehead read three poems about moms from a children's book of poetry to delight the seniors.

The food was terrific. Even catering wizard Vivian Buck was very complimentary about the wide variety of delicious specialties the juniors prepared.

In addition to the juniors inviting the entire senior club membership, they also invited their moms and other guests. Collette Colegrove brought her mother, Joyce Conk of Altamonte Springs, and Marty Colegrove, her mother-in-law and former senior club president. Myra Bales brought her mother-in-law, Evelyn Bales, and Flo Sheibenberger, a close friend.

Sandy Gorman was with her mother, Carol Sandkulla, of New Jersey, and Edna Mae Gorman, her mother-in-law, Ann Newkirk was the guest of her daughter, Beth Abruzzo. Debbie Whitehead brought her mom, Dottie Ramsay and Jeana Perneati was with her mother, Jeana Hughes. Derenda Himschoot brought her mother-in-law, Edna Neuman. Senior member Mary Anne Cleveland was accompanied by her mother, Mary Williams.

The lovely event set the pace for a Happy Mother's Day to all attending.

Congratulations

Congratulations are in order to Gail Hill-Smith, a dual member of the Woman's Club of Sanford Inc. and the Junior Woman's Club of Sanford Inc. Gail was elected the state junior director of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs at the state convention held in Orlando.

Woman's Club airs Main Street

At the May meeting of the Woman's Club of Sanford Inc., a mother-daughter luncheon was held when mothers invited their daughters to join them.

The program featured a discussion of Main Street which was enlightening and informative to those attending.

President Jean Metts conducted the business meeting and routine reports were given. The president has formed a Long Range Planning Committee, with approval of the membership, to handle the club property and other actions. She was voted chairman of the committee which includes: Liz Helfrich, Mayor Betty Smith, Charlotte Smith, Rose Payne, Jeanette Padgett, Carolyn Cornelius, this writer and Tina Lee of the Junior Woman's Club.

The clubhouse was beautifully decorated in a spring motif with arrangements of silk roses centering the dining tables and a large silk rose arrangement on the main table. Charlotte Smith was presented the large arrangement as the oldest mother attending.

Hostesses were: Viola Frank and Roberta Zittrower, chairman, Libby Prevatt, Doris Brinson, Mary Tillis and Polly Pezold.

Her tireless work has helped so many. With dog biscuits in hand, and lots of hugs for Clark and Griddle, Houchins bade a friendly goodbye. She said the same goodbye to the graduates of Southeastern Guide Dogs but her heart goes with them.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
May 15, 1994

Be alert for ways to generate additional income in the year ahead. Your chart indicates you might find several previously ignored opportunities.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Instead of resisting changes that could work for your ultimate good, flow with events today. Something you're presently defying might prove best for you in the long run. Taurus, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be prudent and cautious in money matters today or else you might involve yourself in something that has undisclosed costs you didn't anticipate. Don't be caught off guard.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your chart shows you to be a good organizer today, but perhaps a poor delegator. Be sure the persons to whom you give assignments have the talents to carry them out effectively.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Left to your own devices you should be able to perform quite well today. However, when pressured into doing things that aren't of your choosing or scheduling, it could be another story.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're capable of making shrewd, commercial decisions today in situations where the stakes are large. But your skills might diminish considerably when the stakes are smaller.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Success might be denied you today if you do not make allowances for unexpected contingencies. Your blueprint and actuality's blueprint may be dissimilar.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't take an unyielding position today on issues where you may not be too well informed. Your lack of knowledge could prove embarrassing if you're challenged.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be careful today you're not drawn into the financial morass of a friend who is a poor manager of his/her resources. You might have to help pay for this person's mistakes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In order to protect yourself in a joint endeavor today, it's imperative you make your views known, or else decisions might be made that bypass your interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be hopeful and optimistic today, but also be realistic regarding your expectations. It could take best serves your self-interests today might not be equally as beneficial for an associate. Selfishness introduces an element that could lead to failure.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you're rather forgiving and not the type of person who holds a grudge. Today, however, you might treat someone coolly just because of something that happened in the past.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Before participating in pursuits today with a high roller friend, you'd be wise to put a limit on your nonessential spending. If you don't, you might go overboard.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not take for granted today things that pertain to your status, reputation or career. These could be shaky areas where you'll have to watch your step.

21) Be careful today you're not drawn into the financial morass of a friend who is a poor manager of his/her resources. You might have to help pay for this person's mistakes.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Accept friends for what they are today and not for what they care do for you. If your motives are self-serving, they will be perceived and it could negatively affect relationships.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Family members might pull in different directions today regarding a domestic matter that is individually important to each. Resolution is unlikely if there isn't harmony of purpose.

more than just wishing to make things so.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't poke your nose into the private affairs of friends today nor let them pry into your personal matters. Either way might spell trouble that could have been avoided.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's important for you to think for yourself today. Listen to the advice of others and judge their worth, but don't discount your own perceptions and concepts in the process.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A failure to take your responsibilities seriously today could cause you future headaches. Do that which is expected of you and you won't have to worry about what is going to happen later.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you feel inclined to gamble today, gamble on yourself and your own abilities and that with which you are familiar rather than on someone else. If you back a loser, you could be one.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

I spotted today's deal in a magazine. Look only at the West and North hands. Defending against four spades, West led the heart king; four, five, six. As the heart position was unclear (East might have had J-9-5), West switched to the diamond seven; six, nine, ace. South cashed the spade ace, dropping East's singleton king, and played a spade to dummy's eight, East discarding the diamond two. Now declarer led dummy's club three: six, jack, queen. What should West have played next?

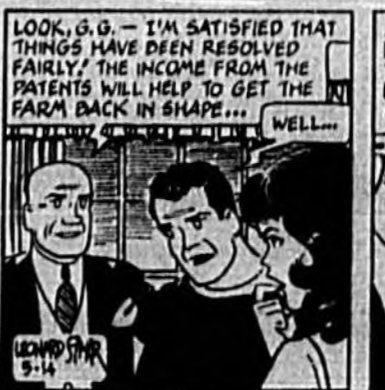

At the time, West continued with a second diamond. Declarer happily ruffed and discarded one of dummy's heart losers on the fourth round of clubs. The author wrote, "Clearly, West should have led the heart two, as this lead cannot lose." The editor added this footnote: "I certainly won't be clear to the majority of readers, but it is correct." Yet is it?

If West reverts to hearts, it is right to lead the two, in case East began with queen-doubleton. But West has made life hard for his partner, leading the diamond seven instead of the three. And East hasn't helped West at all. Using what we call present count, East's diamond-two discard said that he had an odd number of cards left in his hand. He actually had six. And East could see the advantage in continuing hearts. He should have discarded the diamond queen at trick four, apparently denying the king. West would return the heart two, his original fourth-highest, giving East the count in that suit. East would know to return a heart for a third heart trick. Watch for those present-count signals.

Mimi Holt, at 96, is an active antique dealer in Sanford.

The antique on antiques gives advice on collecting

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — On May 11, Mimi Holt turned 96 years old. Friends and family affectionately refer to her as "the antique on antiques."

Holt and her daughter, Jeanne Krause, own and operate an antique store in the downtown area of Sanford called "I Remember That." Krause commented about her mother's nickname. "Sara Jacobson gave her that name," she said. "Yes, that's mother, her antiques."

Jacobson added, "Most of us call her Miss Mimi. She's the oldest antique dealer in Sanford. She relishes the things in her store. It's neat when she talks about a 100-year-old piece because you know she really has lived it. She has such a real knowledge of antiques, she greets the customers and tells her tales with a real charm. She has the spirit of a pioneer lady in a modern world."

Holt in no way looked a day over 60. Her charm and style was immediately evident. "I'm just a little ole' average person on antiques," she said. "I don't pretend to know a whole lot. I learn something every day. I think I know good old antiques and such as that."

She spoke of what she felt were good solid investments in the antique world. "Anytime you get good furniture, like a beautiful table or dresser, that is great," she said. "If you want to get into money then a pretty desk is a wise choice. When I think of an antique I think 75 to 100 years ago. If you had something that belonged to a grandparent than hang onto it. It may not be the finest lumber or timber, but anything old is an antique. There are the pretty marbles from the Victorian age or something handcarved would be a good investment. There's old couches, chairs and loveseats that will show off as a good antique to look at. Yet, lamps and dishes are wonderful."

Speaking of the different age and time frame of many antiques, Holt said, "In 40-50 years, it will be considered an antique. Things made in the 1800s are so scarce. If you go into a place look real good yourself to be sure it's really an antique."

Holt spoke of her feelings about her birthday and nearing her centennial birthday. "I do feel my age today," she said. "But I don't know how 96 is supposed to feel."

When the discussion arose about her tips for a long life, Holt stated, "You just keep busy. The secret to a long life is plain old good living and keeping religious. My grandfather organized churches. I'm a Kentuckian and a country girl."

This "antique" on antiques possesses a flair with people and in her approach to life. It seems that 96 may be a very good year.

NBC calls in 'Doctor Cosby' for fall television schedule

By LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Third-place NBC is calling in the doctor to strengthen its ailing ratings.

The network has Bill Cosby, Ph.D., down to star in a drama on its 1994-95 prime-time schedule. "The Cosby Show" ruled the airwaves when NBC was No. 1 in the 1990s.

Comedies with Gene Wilder and Martin Short and a medical drama from "Jurassic Park" author Michael Crichton also appear on the schedule announced Friday.

There's another news magazine, "Dateline NBC II," with Jane Pauley and Stone Phillips, already paired on the original "Dateline NBC." NBC is breaking up its current Thursday lineup — its strongest night with the high flying "Seinfeld" — in an attempt to bolster Tuesdays.

"Seinfeld" will remain at 9 p.m. EDT Thursday, but the sitcoms "Wings" and "Frasier" will move to Tuesday. "Frasier" will face off against AIC's so-far unconquerable "Roseanne."

"Homicide: Life on the Street," which earned respectable ratings in its tryout season, won a fall berth.

The new comedies for next season are:

- "Friends," about young adults trying to make it in New York. From the executive producers of HBO's "Dream On," the series stars Courteney Cox, Jennifer Aniston, Matt LeBlanc and Matthew Perry.
- "Madman of the People," starring Dabney

Coleman as an irreverent magazine columnist whose daughter (Cynthia Gibb) is his new boss.

- "The Martin Short Show" features the actor-comedian as the star of a TV comedy-variety series and a family man.
- "Young at Heart," with Gene Wilder as a late-in-life father coping with twin sons.
- "The Cosby Mysteries," with Cosby as a retired New York criminologist whose longtime colleague (James Naughton) lures him back into crime.
- "Earth 2," a futuristic look at an expedition to find a liveable future for humankind at a time when the Earth's population is forced into orbiting space stations.
- "E.R.," focuses on a group of young residents working in the chaotic emergency room of a Chicago hospital. Crichton is the writer and executive producer; stars include Anthony Edwards and "NYPD Blue" alum Sherry Stringfield.
- "Sweet Justice" stars Melissa Gilbert and Cicely Tyson as Southern lawyers who champion the underdog.

NBC, which halted the ratings decline that lasted several seasons but still finished third to CBS and ABC, is axing 12 series. Some were seen only early this season.

The canceled series are: "L.A. Law," "Nurses," "Viper," "The Mommies," "The Good Life," "The Second Half," "Winnetka Road," "Cafe American," "Saved by the Bell: The College Years," "I Witness Video," "Getting By" and "Against the Grain."

Failure to attend does not relieve the bidder from the responsibility to carry out the work in the manner discussed at the conference. This pre-bid conference does not relieve the bidders of the on-site inspection of the project requirements.
The Board reserves the right to waive minor informalities in the bidding if said waiver is in the Board's best interest.
