484 lose power

SANFORD -- With temperatures hovering in the low 30s early this morning, the demand for electricity was high. It caused one area in near Sanford a power outage.

An area involving 484 users, surrounding the intersection of E. S.R. 46 and C.R. 415, reported the outage at approximately 6:03 this morning. Karl Gerwe of Florida Power and Light said it appeared to have been caused by an overload at the Celery Substation, on S.R. 46 near Beardall Avenue.

"FP&L is still looking into it," Gerwe said, "and while we don't know for certain at this time, it appears to have been load related."

"We had about 90 percent of our customers back on line by 6:52 this morning," he said. At 8:30, crews were still working on restoring power to about 50 additional customers.

The outage caused a brief traffic problem at the intersection of S.R. 46 and C.R. 415 for a brief time. The two highways carry a great deal of traffic in the early morning.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies were called to assist the traffic during the outage, and no major accidents were reported.

Elsewhere in the area, power companies managed to keep up with the demand.

Both Florida Power and Light and Florida Power Corporation had planned for the high uses which result from overnight low temperatures. When low temperatures were expected last week, the companies had announced they would be able to handle the situation.

Conservation in electricity use however, is generally requested during peak usage times. This can be accomplished by reducing the use of other electrical equipment, especially that which requires high voltage.

LOTTO winner nets $20 million

Tallahassee -- Florida's first-ever Christmas Day drawing of its LOTTO game produced just one ticket with all six numbers, giving whoever bought that ticket a guaranteed jackpot of $20 million, the Lottery Department reported Sunday.

That sole top prize-winning ticket was sold in Boca Raton, according to Lottery Secretary Marcia Mann.

With a rollover from the previous week's drawing, the Christmas Day drawing offered two weekly jackpots guaranteed at $10 million each. That was because both weeks fell into the six-week Holiday LOTTO Fest, which still offers two more weekly guaranteed $10 million jackpots.

Saturday night's drawing also produced 439 winning tickets with five of the six correct numbers, each of which can be traded in for a cash prize of $1,308.

There's a $63 prize for each of the 21,919 tickets sold last week that matched four of the winning LOTTO numbers. And the 398,811 tickets matching three of the winning numbers were redeemable for $4.50.

The winning Florida LOTTO numbers drawn Saturday night were: 14-16-19-28-39-48.

Wanted for murder

Sanford man sought in Deltona death

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

DELTONA -- A Sanford man is being sought in the death of a DeBary man, who was killed after he was hit in the head with a hatchet then fell into a busy intersection and was run over by a passing car.

Mark Shawn Manley, 27, Sanford, is being sought on warrants for second degree murder and aggravated battery in the death Sunday of Jonathan Brooklyn, DeBary. Ed McDonough, public information for the Seminole County Sheriff's Department said an unnamed attorney for Manley is negotiating his surrender.

Brooklyn, 35, was taken to West Volusia Memorial Hospital after the 12:45 a.m. Sunday incident and pronounced dead. Brooklyn grew up in Sanford.

Volusia County sheriff deputies are searching for Manley, who is 6-foot-4 about 240 to 250 pounds with shoulder length, blond-hair. He was last seen driving a red 1978 or 1979 Ford 4 x 4 pickup with a black stripe on the lower side of the body. The truck has pipe bumpers, chrome rims, a roll bar and a black tool box in the bed.

The incident began with a birthday party on Christmas night at Deltona's Duck Lake, about one-half mile east of the Saxon Boulevard-Enterprise Road Intersection. The victim's 18-year old daughter, Tahyna, and her boyfriend, James Bradley, Enterprise were celebrating his 19th birthday.

Three men and a woman joined the party sometime after midnight. The suspect, who is about 30, got into an argument and shoving match with the 18-year old and her boyfriend.

The two teenagers left the party, went to a nearby convenience store and called her father, Jonathan Brooklyn.

"Mr. Brooklyn reportedly told them to wait for him at the entrance to the lake," according to Capt. Bob Bosco of the Volusia County Sheriff's office. "While they waited, the suspect and his companions arrived and another argument began. At some point, the boyfriend was hit on the head with the blunt end of an ax, which the suspect allegedly had in his tool box."

After the attack, the suspect drove off. Brooklyn and his friend, Clay Curtsinger, 23, DeBary arrived. Brooklyn told his daughter to stay there, while they tried to find the attacker.

About one-half mile away, Brooklyn saw the red pickup pulled off the side of Saxon Boulevard, according to police.

"Mr. Brooklyn got out of his car, approached the pickup to talk to the suspect and was struck in the head with the metal end of a hatchet, which the suspect allegedly pulled from his tool box," Bosco said. "He staggered and fell into the path of a westbound car."

Brooklyn's friend was also hit on the head with the hatchet, but managed to get a handgun from

The story of Endrea Medlock is different with its positive, upbeat message. It sends a ray of hope to parents striving their best to raise good kids in a world that at times appears to dwell on the negative.

Medlock thought of herself as a person unsure of where to go in life. "I stopped going to school and was hanging with the wrong people," she said. "I was going the wrong way, with no direction."

She spent several months out of school and doing whatever she wanted. At one point she felt that enough was enough and it was time to steer her goals in a more productive manner. "I was looking in the newspaper one day for a job," she recalled. "The Job Corps was listed with opportunities for employment. I called and set up an interview

'Old Sanford' on its way

Name ordinance up for final reading tonight

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD -- If Ordinance 3184 is approved on second reading, "Old Sanford" will be officially established. The matter is scheduled for tonight's meeting of the Sanford City Commission.

The ordinance sailed past the commission unanimously during the Dec. 13 meeting. No opposition has emerged.

The plan, which had its beginning as the Duany Project, has been two years in the making. It has been fine-tuned by a number of boards before being made into ordinance form.

The official name will be the "Old Sanford Residential Historic Area." It encompasses a large portion of the historic residential area of the city. It does not include the downtown commercial area.

It specifies such items as requirements for architectural and exterior modifications, dimensional variances, and site planning. It defines rights and procedures for appeals, and the roll to be played by the Historic Preservation Board in monitoring code enforcement actions, and the roll of the City Commission in hearing appeals to HPB decisions when necessary.

The measure also includes Old Sanford Urban Regulations, Architectural Regulations and special standards.

The intent of the ordinance is outlined at the beginning of the document. It states, "Whereas, the City of Sanford has a rich and unique heritage which

Recycling remains constant

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD -- Recycling in Seminole County remained constant last month, according to the monthly report released by the county recycling office.

A total of 6.1 million lbs. of garbage was diverted from the county dump in November, the same amount separated from garbage in October. Of that amount, 2.1 million lbs. of garbage were collected from residential curbside bins, 2 million lbs. were collected from curbside yard waste deposits and another 1.9 million lbs. of yard waste were delivered to county facilities.

The county must meet a 30 percent garbage reduction goal by 1995. By July, the last time the figures were checked, the county had reached a 27 percent rate.

Unincorporated garbage recycling efforts dipped a tad between October and November, dropping from 1.4 million lbs. to slightly more than 1.3 million lbs. Non-city yard waste collections dropped from 369,020 lbs. to 278,100 lbs.

In local cities, Sanford recycling rates edged up to 162,040 lbs. from 152,920 lbs. The city's yard

Man charged with burglary

David Wayne McKnight, 42, 84 William Clark Ct., Sanford, was charged with burglary, burglary to a conveyance, grand theft and molestation of a vending machine by Sanford Police on Friday.

Police said he had gained entrance to Public Junction, 2025 French Ave., Sanford, while it was closed on Dec. 6.

Police said he molested a soda machine inside the business and removed a battery and a stereo system from a truck parked outside.

From latent fingerprints found at the scene, McKnight was identified as the individual who had committed the crimes.

He was arrested at the John F. Polk Correctional Facility where he was serving time on other charges. Bond was set at $5,000 on the new charges.

Petit theft charged

Kevin Anthony Davis, 33, 102 Hawkins Ave., Sanford, was charged with petit theft by Sanford Police on Friday.

Police said he entered the Kmart store on Old Kings Drive empty handed. A short time later, they found he had a receipt for an item for which he had no receipt.

He was taken to the John F. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $1,000 bond.

Burglary to dwelling charged

Emmanuel Crab, Johnson Jr., 31 E. 146 Carver Ave., Sanford, was charged with burglary to an occupied dwelling by Sanford Police on Friday.

Police said the incident occurred on June 21, 1993.

They said he broke out the front window of a home in the 100 block of DeChamp Circle and that he entered the home. He fled from a side door, however, when the homeowner saw him and screamed.

He was located at the John F. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $1,000 bond.

Battery-domestic violence charged

Carlos Mark Jory, Thompson, 24, 1414 Meadowlark St., Longwood, was charged with battery-domestic violence by Seminole County sheriff's deputy on Saturday.

Deputies said Thompson's girlfriend was attempting to break up an argument between Thompson and another man when Thompson became angry with her and punched her in the nose.

After he punched her, she tried to run away, police said, but he chased her down and slammed her head into a wall.

Police said she had a bloody nose and cut on her face. Thompson was taken to the John F. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $2,000 bond.

Mom wants laws changed after girl, 14, weds

By Associated Press

GREEN COVE SPRINGS, Fla. — Delores Jean Snow was among the last to know her pregnant 14-year-old daughter had gotten married.

The judge who approved the marriage says there's nothing in state law that requires, or even allows, parents to be notified before courts permit minors to marry.

It's a law that ought to be changed, Ms. Snow says.

To find out there is a law on the books that allows families to be ripped apart like this, that's what's really bad," Ms. Snow said. "I don't believe any other family ever should have to go through this. This is wrong."

When daughter Amanda failed to return home by dark on Dec. 7, Ms. Snow reported her missing. Her own search took her to the home of a sister of Amanda's husband-to-be, Elmer Williams, 29.

None was there.

A neighbor told there is an apartment in the area. "Well, we're not invited to the wedding," they went to get married. We found standing there, dumbfoundedly," Ms. Snow said.

When she finally showed up, the police were there. I was there and she had a marriage license under her arm."

Some angry words were exchanged and Ms. Snow has barely seen or spoken to her daughter since, except for a couple telephone calls some of her friends.

Amanda has spurned her efforts at reconciling, saying she responded to a letter Christmas card on a plane published in the Clay Today newspaper, Ms. Snow said.

The newlyweds have no telephone. But the now Mrs. Williams told Clay Today her mother was to blame for their feud because she wouldn't let things go.

She also defended her decision to marry Williams.

"I married him because I love him," she said. "Nobody stuck a gun to my head to make me marry him."

Ms. Snow, who just made her complaints on the issue public in a call to Clay Today, said she probably would have agreed to the marriage later on.

"I just don't think parents should be excluded like that, especially at a young age that she was," she said. "I think this should have been a family decision and not carried off by hand by back."

Clay County Judge Thomas McAnally agreed with her that parents and children should make such decisions together. But he said that's not the law.

Florida law allows county judges, at their discretion and without parental consent, to permit minors under 16 to get married if they already have a child or the girl is certified pregnant by a doctor.

Rose Tattoo cottage from play for sale

By Associated Press

KEY WEST — Scratina's cottage — the set from the 1955 movie made from Tennessee Williams' play "The Rose Tattoo" — is for sale.

Anna Magnani played Scratina, a heartbroken Italian widow who finds love again with a dimwitted, but good-hearted banana trucker played by Burt Lancaster. Much of the action takes place in her home.

Though the play is set somewhere along the Gulf coast between New Orleans and Mobile, Ala., Williams insisted his winter home in Key West would be a perfect place for filming.

The house next door to his own was chosen for filming. Owner Robert Christ is selling because he and his family have moved to upstate New York. He always loved the house and got a kick out of its former stardom, he said.

When the family moved in 12 years ago, the penciled signatures of Lancaster, Magnani and Williams were still visible on an outside wall.

The weather eventually eroded it away, Christ said.

For fans of the movie, this is a chance to own a piece of it. The house has been remodeled and expanded and it can be yours — for $325,000.

Needed—one more gift

It gave many people a good feeling to see holiday gifts being received by loved ones. One gift however, is still needed — a gift of life.

As is the case in the past, a holiday weekend produces an overwhelming need for blood. Blood banks go dry in order to fill these requirements.

Even though it was a holiday period of love, peace and joy, there were many tragedies. Some people had serious medical problems. A few may have been injured in an auto accident or some other mishap. Some may be a friend or member of the family. Others may be strangers.

The blood that they received as a transfusion however, may have been directly responsible for saving their lives. The donor or donors of that blood gave the most precious gift of all, the gift of life.

Most blood donors do not know exactly how their blood was used or the name of the individual they may have helped. Nevertheless, blood was given to a human being who was loved by his or her family. It was something which must be provided by a person, and cannot be manufactured.

The Central Florida Blood Bank is running extremely low in its available supply. A massive donor drive is to be held on Jan. 4 and 5. However, the need is now.

No one knows when a major problem could require a large amount of blood. Likewise, no one knows if they may be one of the persons needing a donation — today, tomorrow, or within a few days.

We cannot allow the supply at our local blood bank to remain low. We urge participation in the county-wide blood drive next week. But for those who want to give that one-more-gift, contact your blood bank today, and become a donor.

The Central Florida Blood Bank in Sanford is located at 1302 E. 2nd Street. In Longwood it is at 448 S. Milwee Street. For information, phone 280-2088.

Helping young people

Government and people are worried about the term violence. I'm worried about the next generation coming along.

Now what they need is not toys and junk for Christmas, they need lots and lots of love, being told they are special.

There is a TV ad going on trying to tell you parents this very thing. Stop pushing the children away and quit trying to buy them off with a bunch of things you can't afford. Just give them lots of love and hugs. They may slip but, by George, wherever they go or do they will take those memories out and dust them off somewhere or some place.

I know a fine person who had such a problem but the love that was given instead of gifts brought that person's child back home a new person for Christmas.

Now maybe this one thought may help our young people. I drive by yard after yard of beautiful lawns all nice and green but not the first child outside playing. Where are they? Shut away in a house with air conditioning, playing alone, that's where they are. Get rid of that grass (never mind the neighbors). Put some good old dirt there and some Tonka trucks, cars, hills in that dirt and let the neighbors come in and sit back and listen to something that's never been there before, children really laughing. Oh, yes, they will be dirty but at dinner time the plate will be empty and there will be laughter around the table. And that child will sleep the sleep of angels, that I promise.

Now, by doing this, you will meet other children's parents and you know that family living down the street isn't bad at all, so sit on the other side of the yard and have a nice neighborhood talk. What happened to the bag of marbles and jacks and all the other games? Never mind the basketball hoop, let those boys have their fun, but let's let the younger ones have their time in the sun also. Stop telling the children they can't reach their dream. Help them, not yourself, forget that swimming pool to impress someone with.

How many engineers were born because of a soap box derby being built on a dirt road for a truck or car to be pushed. How many doctors get the dream and other health agencies from playing house. Just planting a row of seeds might trigger a little mind not for drugs or stealing, but to be someone that helps find a way for the hunger problem. All this by getting that grass out and a sand pile of dirt in its place.

Have a Happy New Year with your family and neighbors!

Fear invades the ivory tower

University of New Hampshire English professor Tom Carnicelli recently noted, in the course of a lecture, "This way you get more bang for your buck." He heard a female student gasp. "I said to her," Carnicelli told Clare Kittredge of the Boston Globe, "what's the matter? Did you think that was a sexual reference?"

When the student nodded, the professor told her that the phrase is derived from military slang about explosives.

Several University of New Hampshire professors are currently being charged with sexual harassment by students. A count against one of those professors, reports Kittredge, is that he complimented a student in his class on her new blazer. Also, there are anonymous charges that he keeps pornography in his classroom. They are books on art. The professor teaches graphics.

Accordingly, Professor Carnicelli took his student's misapprehension of "more bang for your buck" quite seriously.

"I was really shaken by that," he says. "If I hadn't heard her gasp, she might have thought it was a sexual reference and secretly reported me, and I might have been under a cloud."

At the University of Nebraska, professor David Moshman, president of the Academic Freedom

Coalition of Nebraska, has sent a memorandum to the Academic Senate citing some of the fears of professors and instructors in that citadel of higher learning: "An untenured instructor who regularly teaches about human sexuality is concerned that, given the topics she addresses, a student may find (or claim to find) aspects of her teaching offensive on the basis of his or her gender, sexual orientation or religion."

She has been advised to take precautions. But "she sees the acts of curricular revisions that might protect her against such charges as inconsistent with her professional responsibilities."

When she asked administrators "about the likelihood and consequences of a student charging her with sexual harassment," the responses "have not been reassuring."

I know an instructor in human sexuality at the University of Nebraska who has indeed been charged with sexual harassment. Toni Blake was conducting a standard demonstration — with a banana — on the proper application of a condom. A male student claims he has been sexually harassed by her because she so "objectified" the penis as to create a hostile academic environment for him.

"I'm not going to teach human sexuality again," Blake told me. "Not in the state of Nebraska. I'm not going to go through that again."

In his memorandum to the Academic Senate, professor Moshman told of Toni Blake's case and added: "I have heard reports of three (other) cases in which University of Nebraska faculty apparently deleted units from their regular courses that they feared might include or elicit statements offensive to some students. The deleted topics were race, gender and rape.... I fear they may represent just the tip of the iceberg of chilled expression at the University of Nebraska."

There are anonymous charges that he keeps pornography in his classroom. They are books on art. The professor teaches graphics.

Inman's first battle: Panetta

WASHINGTON — Bobby Ray Inman faces a daunting array of adversaries as the next secretary of defense: North Korea, Saddam Hussein, Somali warlords, Haitian military rulers and Leon Panetta.

As the director of the Office of Management and Budget, Panetta is playing the part of villainous budget cutter. Critics say he's putting deficit reduction ahead of national defense. His allies salute him as a true deficit-hawk, holding the line on spending. During an interview with us last spring, Panetta had a foreboding that this family feud would erupt. It was even a topic of conversation when then-President-elect Clinton interviewed him for the job.

"I told the president that in some ways to do this job right I've got to be your s.o.b. I've got to be able to say no and you may not want to say no."

If Panetta is just doing his job, then Inman will inherit a position that may force him to pick a fight with Panetta. "He's got to regain the support of the military, which was not the case with Les Aspin," said one close friend of Inman's. "He will have to be an advocate of a strong national defense, and not be perceived as someone who is just going along with Leon Panetta.... He's a brilliant man. I hope he understands it."

The battle has been joined by Les Aspin. In the days leading up to his ouster from the Pentagon, Aspin was engaging in heated debates with Panetta over nearly $50 billion he wanted added to the defense budget. Two days after Aspin was fired, the White House jiggered some numbers — revising some inflation forecasts — and discovered that a $50 billion defense shortfall shrunk almost overnight to approximately $31 billion.

Inman will be asked to explain the administration's arithmetic at his Senate confirmation hearings next month. Many of his supporters believe that fighting for more money would be a morale-builder within the military, whose relations with the commander-in-chief are at a low ebb. Even if Inman rescues $5 billion of funding, it would be a great moral victory. Don't expect Panetta, on the other hand, to blink first in any budget brinkmanship. Even the Republicans know better. A memo prepared by a staffer for a Republican member of the Senate Armed Services Committee predicts:

"With Aspin's resignation, I don't think we can expect to see any additions to the defense budget. Regardless of the impact of further cuts on readiness or capabilities, the administration will likely remain committed to fully funding its domestic program."

Coming into office, Panetta knew he had to play bad guy, but not without cover: "They (agencies) don't want to be told they can't spend it. Look, the president is my cover. On Capitol Hill to some extent it's the leadership... that gives you some cover. Here the president is my only cover. I have to be implementing the president's policy," said Panetta.

CLEAN GOVERNMENT — Interior Department employee John C. Kathmann saved taxpayers from getting taken to the cleaners. Next time he'll know better.

Two years ago, the Interior Department transferred Kathmann from New Mexico to West Virginia and paid him an allowance to live in temporary quarters. Since Kathmann was without a washing machine, Interior reimbursed his costly dry cleaning bills. Kathmann saw taxpayer dollars going down the drain. When his wife eventually joined him, she agreed to wash the clothes at a local laundromat. The couple bought laundry supplies in bulk at a wholesale club: $24.85 worth of detergent, fabric softener and a special degreaser since Kathmann does field work for DOI's surface mining division.

HODDING CARTER

We're facing a crisis of faith

This is not the time for chin pulling about American policy toward the former Soviet Union or debating the many facets of health reform. It's Christmas time, which should be devoted to family ingathering, gift-giving and the reassertion of abiding faith. In the absence of national crisis, the affairs of state take a far-distant back seat.

But as there was once that fabled star in the East that led the wise men to Bethlehem, there is today a growing mass of opinion in America that in fact we do face a national crisis of epic proportions. Its forerunner was a society-wide erosion of civic faith. Its regular manifestations are the polls that tell of profound cynicism. Its most deadly companion is a social disintegration, which announces itself in everything from the tidal wave of illegitimacy to the numbing repetition of casually violent crime.

Initially, there was a tendency to treat this societal cancer as a political problem. Partisans of the right took delight in pinning the fall on the welfare state donkey. Spokesmen for the left pointed to the "I've got mine, Jack" amorality and materialism of the Reagan years. Even now there are those who seek political capital before solutions.

That is not an altogether unworthy objective. In a country of representative government and democratic accountability, placing responsibility is a legitimate exercise. If there are no consequences for failure, dereliction of duty or abuse of power, all three become the norm. But most Americans instinctively know that the responsibility is shared. We see it in our daily lives, from the hours spent with our children to the moments not spent in the voting booth to the corners cut in the marketplace. We feel it in our bones and, more frequently than we like to admit, experience it in our daily lives. "And there is no health in us" is an old liturgical phrase which, though out of fashion in the church which once embraced it, cuts through self-delusion to a truth millions of Americans privately recognize.

And so the public commentary has begun to shift. William Bennett, former secretary of education and a happy warrior of the hard right, gave a speech to the Heritage Foundation not long ago that cut deeply and broadly into the national cancer. You do not have to accept all of his prescriptions to appreciate the acuity of his diagnosis.

About the same time, Bill Clinton went before a black church in Memphis, Tenn., to reassert an old truth: Tools to build community anew can and should be provided at least in part by government, but only those within the community can fashion an enduring structure. It was not a white man's patronizing putdown of the black condition but a thoughtful president's attempt to accelerate a dialogue already begun by Americans of every race and creed.

As I write this, I have just finished reading a manuscript copy of "The Religious Critic in American Culture" by Professor William Dean, a theologian. Soon to be published by State University of New York Press, it is a densely reasoned call for public intellectuals to refocus on the religious identity and nature of the nation. As he puts it in his preface, "...the religious runs through the public and gives it a kind of coherence, so that without the religious the public is jeopardized." As for what he means by "religious" in this context, it is "a people's sense of the whole, a sense that binds together the parts of a person's internal and external worlds."

That is what is missing in the nation today, some version of what the journalist-philosopher Walter Lippmann termed The Public Philosophy in 1955. We have lost that "sense of the whole," and without it, our undertakings of national redemption are hobbled from the start.

So where are our philosophers and theologians and intellectuals at this moment of national need? Dean quotes the brilliant black social critic and theologian, Cornel West, to indict the refusal or inability of many to "take the life of the mind seriously enough to relate ideas to the everyday life of ordinary folk." For West, too, the liberal left's severing of "ties to churches, synagogues, temples and mosques" is an act of specific "political suicide," but implicitly it is suicidal for the nation as a whole.

Which brings us back to this particular season, a frantic, secularized overlay on a religious celebration. While I am a Christian, it is not necessary to be a believer to understand how Christ's involvement in time and place speaks directly to our current condition. Faith in action relates now, as it related then, to our neighbors as well as to our God. A synthesis which ties "internal and external worlds" together is one which can be the foundation for renewed national community.

As it is written in Proverbs, "Where there is no vision, the people perish." They are old words with contemporary relevance.

There is today a growing mass of opinion in America that in fact we do face a national crisis of epic proportions.

As the director of the Office of Management and Budget, Panetta is playing the part of villainous budget cutter.

Gators hunting for first Sugar Bowl win, first W. Virginia loss

By MARY FOSTER AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS - Florida made its New Year's resolutions early - win a record 11 games in one season and its first Sugar Bowl.

And, steal some of the thunder from undefeated West Virginia in the process.

"We have never, ever won a Sugar Bowl," quarterback Terry Dean said. "We definitely think it's time to do that. Besides, we have a chance to do it against an undefeated team that has a chance at the national championship, so that's extra motivation."

Florida (10-2) hit New Orleans on Sunday eager to snatch some of the spotlight from the Mountaineers (11-0). It will be the fourth appearance for the No. 8 Gators in the Sugar Bowl and second in three years.

"This team has set some high goals and we've got a major one to accomplish this week," coach Steve Spurrier said. "Winning the Sugar Bowl would mean a lot to our team and our conference, but we know it won't be easy."

West Virginia made the climb to No. 3 after starting unranked in preseason polls and picked to finish fourth in the Big East Conference.

The Mountaineers can accept trailing No. 2 Nebraska in the poll, they aren't happy to see Florida State with an 11-1 record and ranked No. 1, however. They certainly don't like the idea that Florida State could end up with the national championship.

"There's nothing we can do about it except do what we have to do and let everything else take care of itself," quarterback Jake Kelchner said. "If we're the only 12-0 team in contention and don't get No. 1, I don't know what else they want. I don't know what else we can do."

A Sugar Bowl victory would give West Virginia at least a share of the national title, guard Tom Robsack said.

"As long as we could win, I think we should definitely get co-champions," he said. "If Nebraska wins, I think they should get co-champions, too, because they're also 12-0. Nothing against Notre Dame or Florida State, but those teams have lost."

Florida may not have a shot at the national title, but the Gators would like to have a say in it.

"When you hear everyone talking about these other schools, you want to get into the discussion," Dean said. "We know the nation will be watching this game so we want to showcase what we do well. We want to walk away from this as the first team that had what it takes to beat West Virginia. No one else can say that this year."

West Virginia coach Don Nehlen led the 1988 team to an 11-0 mark in the regular season and a shot at the national championship, only to lose 34-21 to Notre Dame in the Fiesta Bowl.

That makes him twice as wary of Florida this time.

"I think if we win the game there's going to be co-champions," Nehlen said. "I'm sure that any football team that can become 12-0 is going to get a piece of the championship. I'm sure of that. Winning the game is the big obstacle."

Hurricanes, Wildcats hope Fiesta provides strong finish, new start

By AL BRAVO Associated Press Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. - While Miami is ranked as low as it has been in nine seasons, Arizona coach Dick Tomey is looking at the Fiesta Bowl as a chance to raise the status of the Wildcat program.

"Winning the game not just playing in it will be what does the program the most help," Tomey said Sunday before his team's first practice in the area. "Beating a program like Miami doesn't help in recruiting this year but will be beneficial in the years to come."

No. 16 Arizona (9-2) is in its first New Year's Day bowl game since 1949, while 10th-ranked Miami (9-2) is out of the national championship hunt for the first time since 1985.

"That's over and done with. You can't look back. Maybe we could have had one (in national title game) here if things had turned out right," Miami coach Dennis Erickson said. "But we're here to play a good Arizona team, and we want to end up with 10 wins. We're not disappointed."

The Hurricanes arrived in Arizona on Sunday to begin preparing for Saturday's game, while some Wildcats spent the holiday in the area because they have family in the Phoenix area. Others made the two-hour drive from Tucson over the last few days.

Tomey says the Wildcats, 14-5 since losing to Miami 8-7 last year at the Orange Bowl, need their best all-around game to beat Miami. "Miami's defense is their one strength this year."

"Last year's game was just that, Miami didn't think U of A could win last year, but now have a respect for the program and will not take us lightly like last year."

"I guess ideally from Nebraska's standpoint, you'd rather have it hot and humid now and then maybe cool off a little toward the weekend, and it may be the other way around," Osborne said. "But I think our players are in pretty good shape. I don't think conditioning will be a big problem."

Nebraska linebacker Trev Alberts, the Butkus Award winner, participated in contact drills - his most physical workout since dislocating his elbow in the final regular-season game against Oklahoma.

"I felt OK," Albert said. "I did everything I hit people. I even got down in a three-point stance."

Three Seminoles rejoined practice after being sidelined with knee injuries - receiver Matt Frier, center Clay Shiver and tailback Marquette Smith. The status of all three for the game is uncertain.

Protect damaged plants

Improper pruning can do more harm than good

GARDENING
TRICIA THOMAS

We have already experienced several cold snaps, but fortunately for us the cold damage hasn't been severe. Plants that have been damaged must be cared for properly to prevent additional damage. Prompt pruning of cold damaged plants such as hibiscus, allamanda, poinsettia, citrus, philodendron, hydrangea and other cold sensitive plants can often do more harm than good. The extent of cold damage usually cannot be determined until growth starts in spring.

By pruning now, you may remove living wood. Also, the dead leaves and stems offer some protection to the undamaged parts. If you prune this out, later freezes may do more damage than would have been done if the dead parts were left on the plant. Resist the temptation to remove plants that have been killed back to the ground too quickly.

The damaged stems or stalks of banana and bird of paradise may be removed as soon as you determine how much is dead. Banana stalks become brown and soft when frozen. New shoots will appear from the ground next spring. With bird of paradise there is no true stem, only leaf stalks. These will turn brown soon after freezing. You may remove them or leave them until spring. It is very doubtful that the bird of paradise, killed back to the ground, will flower next spring or summer. It generally takes from 12 to 15 months for the plants to flower again.

Freeze damage to citrus is difficult to determine since damage to the trunk may not show up for several months. Prune citrus as soon as possible after damage is determined.

It often takes this long for freeze damage to the trunk to show up. In citrus, it is possible to have limited damage to the foliage and severe damage to the trunk. Remember, too, that most citrus is grafted and if the tree is killed back below the graft union, the new shoots need re-grafting or the tree will produce only small, poor quality fruit from the rootstock.

Azalea flower buds and stems are the most likely portions of the plant to be damaged during freezing weather. Flower bud damage will show up at blooming time, resulting in few or no flowers and stem damage by death of branches in late spring or early summer. Dead azalea branches should be pruned out as they occur.

There are several ways to reduce chances of cold injury to your landscape plants. One way to reduce the likelihood of cold damage is to use only cold hardy plants or to use plants native to this area.

Keep plants as healthy as possible, healthy plants are less likely to be damaged by cold weather. Reduce injury to plants by thoroughly watering plants before cold weather hits. Wet soil is a better conductor of heat than dry soil and it releases heat to the atmosphere faster than dry soil, which helps to warm the air surrounding plants. Watering plants will also help prevent leaf scorch by replacing the water lost to the strong winds that often accompany cold weather. Don't prune in late fall. Pruning promotes new growth which is more easily damaged by the cold. Plants should be pruned in late winter or early spring to avoid possible damage of new growth. Physically protect plants by covering the plant to the ground with cloth, polyethylene plastic or paper. If the covering comes in contact with the leaves your efforts may be useless. Coverings draped over plants afford little or no protection in freezing weather. Be sure to remove all coverings immediately after danger of a freeze has passed.

If all your efforts fail and you lose a plant, don't become discouraged. The loss of a few tropicals is no "biggie." Just replace them with one of the thousands of other suitable plants.

End added to organ donation story

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing a copy of an article that appeared in the Baltimore Sun. It states that a Florida woman had donated her son's organs, but instead of being thanked for her humanitarian efforts, she received a bill from the hospital for $41,000...the cost of keeping her son alive so the organs could be removed.

The article went on to say that there have been vague promises that a donor bank may eventually pay much of the $41,000, but the mother had received no guarantee, and she's now struggling because a lien has been placed on her son's estate.

The article reported that the $10,000 in insurance money that could pay for the funeral could not be used because the hospital had a lien on it, which is standard operating procedure for the hospital.

ADVICE

Abby, this is appalling. And it brought to mind that we and thousands of your other devoted readers listened to your advice and joined The Living Bank. We feel that you should investigate this terrible injustice and determine what really happened. Your readers would like to know the facts — either pro or con — about organ donor programs. Especially the one you championed.

CARL E. AND MARIE K. HUEBNER, BALTIMORE
DEAR CARL AND MARIE HUEBNER: Yours was one of many letters I received voicing concern, so although the article did not concern The Living Bank (which I do promote), I called its director, Bruce Conway, to ask for more information. He replied:

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for providing us the opportunity to correct for your readers, and the general public, the misunderstanding concerning the Florida mother who was supposedly charged for donating her son's organs. I have been in contact with Les Olson, the director of the University of Miami Procurement Center who procured the organs, and he advised me that the perceived problem presented in a national news story has been resolved.

The 24-year-old man was involved in an automobile accident on Sept. 12, 1993, and was taken to the hospital with severe head injuries. He was admitted to the trauma center, where all efforts were made to save his life. Upon arriving at the hospital, the mother was advised that her son was brain-dead and on a respirator, and she was asked to donate his organs. She gave consent, and the medical procurement team proceeded with the testing and procurement.

She was advised the next day that five vital organs had been utilized and five recipients' lives had been saved due to her generous consent.

The hospital sent an un-audited bill to her within a week, which is standard procedure. The organ procurement center was contacted; they reviewed the statement and will pay 95 percent of it. The remaining portion of the bill was for the trauma room treatment prior to the donation while attempting to save her son's life. (His medical insurance will cover this portion.)

Please continue to stress that a donor family does not incur any more medical expenses than they would if their loved one were not a donor. The mother continues to be a strong advocate of organ donation and gains a great deal of comfort in knowing that her son made it possible for five people to live.

Again, thanks very much for your continued support for organ tissue donation. You will never know how many lives you have saved.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR,
THE LIVING BANK,

Anti-fungal treats yeast infection

DEAR DR. GOTT: My wife suffers from thrush on her lips and on the inside of her mouth. She's seen four different doctors. Has been prescribed medication costing $6.85 per tablet, and we're at our wit's end. With all due respect, we feel these doctors don't know what to do next. Do you?

Too much zinc can cause anemia and vomiting. The mineral has been reported to reduce the severity of acne, a common skin disorder in adolescents. However, doses above 50 mg a day should be avoided because of the risk of side effects.

DEAR READER: Thrush is a yeast infection caused by the fungus called candida. The term "thrush" is usually reserved for children; the term "oral candidiasis" for adults.

Candidiasis is common in people with impaired immunity and a susceptibility to infection, such as caused by AIDS and diabetes. Therefore, your wife needs appropriate blood tests to confirm or reject these diagnoses. Also, ill-fitting dentures can cause yeast infection in the mouth.

With respect to therapy, I've had success with Nystatin oral suspension ("swish and swallow"). Patients swish the anti-fungal preparation in their mouths and then swallow it. Ask your wife's family doctor about this -- and the tests I mentioned. Further, if she wears dentures, she should have a dental examination. Fortunately, candidiasis is not particularly contagious.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I haven't read anything in your column about the role 15 mg of zinc can play in curing acne. Apparently the diets of young people are often lacking, and I've found this simple addition is a sure-fire remedy.

DEAR READER: Zinc, a mineral vital to many of the body's enzyme systems, is abundant in meat, eggs and seafood. The Recommended Daily Allowance is 15 milligrams.

Zinc deficiency can cause abnormalities in sexual functioning, including poor sexual development and low sperm counts; it can also lead to a diminished sense of smell, poor wound healing, night blindness and birth defects.

MEDICINE

ically, 15 mg of supplemental zinc is not harmful and may, as you stated, improve the complexion, especially when used in conjunction with standard treatment such as cleansing creams.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

When I use a quotation to start a column, I sometimes feel like Wilson Mizner: "If you steal from one author, it's plagiarism; if you steal from many, it's research." However, in bridge, no matter how many opponents you steal tricks from, it's profit.

On today's deal, North's two-heart response was a transfer bid, promising at least five spades. South jumped to three spades to show a maximum with four-card spade support.

West led the club jack; queen, ace, four. What should East have played now?

Not really giving the matter much thought, East returned the club seven. South allowed the defenders no second chance. He won with dummy's king, drew trumps, played a heart to dummy's king, returned a heart to his ace, and ruffed a heart in the dummy. Back to hand with a trump, declarer ruffed his fourth heart. Then he cast a trick with his last club.

West had to win the trick and either lead a diamond, giving declarer his 10th trick with the king, or play a club, conceding a ruff-and-discard.

Let's return to East's decision at trick two. From the point-count, West is marked with only five or six points. To have any chance to defeat the contract, West must hold an ace. And not just any ace -- it must be the diamond ace. If West has, say, the spade ace, the defense will get at most one spade and two club tricks.

East should put South on the spot, switching to a diamond at trick two. With the jack in the dummy, South will probably put up his king and go down in his contract.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bado Osof
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Dec. 28, 1993

Substantial effort might be spent in the year ahead on bringing various segments of your life into better balance. The transitions could be difficult, but the end results will be gratifying.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) As a rule partnership arrangement usually turn out rather fortunate for you. Today, however, could be an exception. Try to operate independently, free from alliance entanglements.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might have many responsibilities with which to contend today, so schedule your agenda methodically. Do what you can without becoming frustrated if you can't do everything at once.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today you might be privy to some hearsay information conveyed to you by a talkative friend. Trouble could result if you repeat it to others without having its validity checked.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Associates won't think less of your courage today if you deliberately avoid problem areas where the odds are stacked against you. Actually they'll admire your judgment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Generally speaking, you're a rather good listener who doesn't usually turn a deaf ear to sound advice from others. Today, however, you might see little virtue in the suggestions of pals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be sure to thoroughly protect yourself today in your commercial dealings if there are persons involved with whom you never dealt with previously.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your judgment might not be up to par today if you're compelled to make important decisions under stronger than usual pressure. Postpone matters until conditions are more favorable.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Responsibilities you failed to attend to properly in the past might make their presence felt again today. This time you won't have as much latitude as you had previously.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is not a good day to champion an unpopular cause. If you try to force your views on others, the reception you're likely to get may be anything but friendly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If your household is in an uproar today, it looks like you might be the major contributing element. Keep this in mind before pointing a finger of blame at others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be extremely careful today regarding verbal commitments you make to others or things you put in writing. Your words, spoken or penned, could later come back to haunt you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you need an emissary or someone to represent you in matters that affect your finances or security, be very selective. A poor choice could spell problems.
