Central Floridians Open Wallets For Zoo

Herald Staff Writer

Having netted about $25,000 over the weekend, Central Florida Zoo officials could breathe easier Monday with the proof area residents are willing to dig deep into their pockets to back the zoo, despite recent controversy and uphcaval.

In the weeks before jast weekend's back-to-back fundraising events, many observers expressed concern that the continuing flap over the zoo governing board's tiring of Al Rozon as executive director could diminish the zoo's charitable support. But by Monday the counting showed a gross of $35,000 from a sold-out $50-a-plate dinner Friday night and Saturday's Florida Heritage Festival. After expenses, the zoo board expects to net between $25,000 and $27,000, according to Susan Morris, board president.

"It was great." Morris said. "It will certainly help put us in a sound position."

Morris said it was especially gratifying to witness such support on a holiday weekend when so many other activities were taking place throughout Central Florida. She also noted a high turnout of Sanford residents for both fundraising

"The Sanford community gave us fantastic support," she said.

Other members of the board's executive committee were equally delighted. "It could not have gone better," said committee member John Smith. "It all went beyond our expectations."

Wayne Weinberg, the board's president-elect. viewed the weekend's success as a sign that the stir over Rozon's firing "might have burned itself out." and that the climate has greatly improved for the board's detractors to "get back into the fold."

The fundraising started Friday with 305 zoo patrons paying between $50 and $75-a-plate for dinner at the newly opened Townsend's 'Plantation Restaurant in Apopka. The $75 dinner seats See ZOO, page SA

North: Reagan Said 'I Just Didn't Know'

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Lt. Col. Oliver North, central figure of the Iran-Contra affair, began to tell his story today, testifying that he thought President Reagan was aware of plans to divert Iran arms sales profits to Nicaragua's Contra rebels until the scandal blew open and Reagan told him, "I just didn't know.'

North, 43, wearing his forest green Marine uniform emblazoned with six rows of ribbons, told the House and Senate committees probing the affair that he personally never discussed the diversion with the president. .

Under relentless questioning by John Nields, chief counsel to the House committee, North acknowledged that he had shredded documents upon learning of a Justice Department inquiry. But he said he had "no recollection" of shredding a memo on the diversion plan on which the president checked a box marked "approved."

"I never personally discussed the use of residuals or profits from the sale of U.S. weapons to Iran for the purpose of supporting the Nicaraguan resistance with the president." North said. "I never raised it with him and he never raised it with me during my entire tenure at the National Security Council

"Throughout the conduct of my entire tenure at the National Security Counsel, I assumed that the president knew what I was doing, and had, through my superiors, approved it. I sought approval of my superiors for every one of my actions, and it is well documented," the fired NSC aide testifled before a standing-room crowd in the historic Senate Caucus room.

But he added that he was later told by his immediate boss, former national security adviser John Poindexter, that Reagan did not know of the diversion of arms sale profits to the Contras. Poindexter is scheduled to testify before the committees next week.

'On or about Friday, November 21, I asked Admiral Poindexter directly, 'Does the president know?' And he told me he did not." North said.

"And on November 25, the day I was reassigned back to the United States Marine Corps for service, the president of the United States called me, and in the course of that call, the president said to me words to the effect that, 'I Just didn't know.""

Oviedo To Get Fireworks Rerun

Oviedo's planned $15,000 fireworks display, that turned out to be less than expected, will be presented again, said Dennis Paugh, chairman of the fireworks fundraising committee. Date for the rerun will be set later this week, he said.

Winning Ways

Paugh said Santore and Sons, the pyrotechnics firm which provided the fireworks, has agreed to make good on the planned 35-minute show cut to 20 minutes Saturday night for safety reasons after electronic gadgetry malfunctioned.

The shells were not getting the proper lift when launched and tests are scheduled to determine what caused the problem. An electronic circuit board, designed to fire the shells automatically, maifunctioned Saturday night and the shells had to be ignited manually by local firemen and Santore personnel.

"We raised $15,000 in this little community for fireworks," Paugh said."We promised them a spectacular show, and we're going to make good on that promise.'

An estimated 25,000 to 30,000 persons turned out for the Oviedo fireworks display. The Fourth of July celebration was co-sponsored by the Greater Oviedo Chamber of Commerce, Oviedo Jaycees and Oviedo Fire Department.

'I Suspect...Grand Theft'

Longwood To Investigate Police Chief

By Jane Casselberry Herald Staff Writer

Longwood City Commissioners voted unanimously to investigate charges. including theft brought against Police Chief Greg Manning by Commissioner Dave Gunter Monday night. The vote came after Gunter's motion to fire Manning failed by a 3-2 vote.

The police department today reported Manning is on vacation and unavailable for comment.

Monday, Gunter made a motion to have the city administrator dismiss Chief Manning from all city service immediately after he read a nine-page list of alleged violations of city code and complaints about the way the chief has run his department over the past several years.

Commissioner Harvey Smertlson and Mayor Ed Myers accused Gunter and Commissioner Lynette Dennis of conducting a vendetta against Manning. Smerilson said the commission could not fire Manning, because the city's personnel policy states the city administrator has the right to hire and fire department heads and the investigation should be handled under procedures set up in the new personnel Commissioner June Lormann said although she would not vote to fire Manning, she thinks the charges are serious enough to warrant the probe.

Voting with Gunter to dismiss Manning was Commissioner Lynette Dennis, who previously instigated a less extensive investigation of the chief. Dennis also had some harsh words for City Administrator Ron Waller. She told Waller if she did not see "a remarkable change in your performance, I will not hestitate to offer the resolution seeking your dismissal."

"In my judgment your performance of duty leaves much to be desired," she told him. "You have not been as cooperative and aggressive as I had expected."

Dennis said her problem with Waller is that, "Mainly he is not seeing that department heads are doing their jobs. in particular Mr. (Barry) Weeks and Mr. Manning.

"We know the problems with the finance department and the police department and the problem I had getting a report from him that I requested on Manning's behavior. I think what prompted him to finally give me a report was an editorial in the Sanford Herald.

Gunter said he was satisfied with the commission's action in voting to investigate the charges, but had hoped Manning would be relieved from his duties with pay during the probe.

"He shouldn't be around while others are questioned, no other officer would be allowed to be."

Greg Manning

In his statement Gunter said, "Mr. Manning must be held accountable as any other city employee. He is not Immune or above the law.

"There must be put to rest the notion that he or anybody else can do as he pleases without being held accountable. That some things are just now being made known does not diminish their severity in any respect."

Gunter accused the police department of the theft of public money by taking money from the auction sale of confiscated or abandoned property and putting it in the Police Benevolent Fund for partles. Gunter said police officers sold three gold rings (from the police evidence locker) to a local fewelry store operator and were paid $100 and $150 for the rings when they should have been sold at auction. The money was then put into the police benevolent association fund; members of the police department were permitted to pick and choose items and pay the price established by the chief of police or the captain; and that bicycles were the things most in demand by the police department.

"Money sold from the sale of items sold at auction was given to police officers. Here is a quote from a police office contained in a 1986 internal investigation report: 'The captain or the chief would say, hey, take um..take 10, 15, 20 bucks, whatever, go have a good dinner. But bring your receipt and stick it in there, um., the one year that sticks In my mind we went to Seasons. We all had a nice meal."

"There has been a lack of record keeping and accountability that leaves much to be desired." Gunter said. "In fact, the situation is such that apart from administrative action that is clearly warranted. I believe that the FDLE (Floring Department of Law Enforcement) should be asked to investigate.

"I remind you that part of what has been going on in the police department is no different than if people in the water department falled to put money in the cash register when receiving money from people paying a water bill or took money from the cash register and went to lunch... Pure and simple it is called theft of public money.

"To be specific in this case, I suspect that what we have is grand theft."

Kiwanians Urged To Admit Women-Or Else interest among local women to join

From Staff and Wire Reports

Sanford's delegates to the Kiwanis International convention in Washington, D.C., Richard Dunn and Andy Wolf, are expected to vote in the affirmative today on changing membership rules to allow women to join the all-male organization. After flourishing for the last 72 years as a men-only, community service organization, leaders of Kiwanis International urged members to admit women or face "constant, costly litigation." The change was proposed in the wake of recent Supreme Court de-

Geneva Gets Postmark Of It's Own-Again

Back in the 1880s, mail came to Oviedo from Geneva courtesy of a delivery man who walked the dozen or so miles from a Mullet Lake landing to Oviedo toting sacks of

By the turn of the century the situation was reversed, with Geneva's mail coming out of Oviedo and carrying Oviedo postmarks and addresses. As the years went by, the community grew and began longing for a sense of identity, something it could call its own.

That came this week, with U.S. Rep. Bill McCollum's announcement that the Postal Service had granted Genevalts own postal delivery route.

The Altamonte Springs Republican noted the new service to the unincorporated community of about 2,200 people in a statement from Washington Tuesday.

"I am delighted to have worked with the Geneva Citizens Association and the Postal Service. I know how hard the community has worked to gets its own postal identity," he said.

It was not quite an identity crisis. as some called it. "But, heck yes, we want people to know Geneva is here," said Lee Voorhees, an insurance man and eight-year Geneva resident who spearheaded the drive

the commence of the commence o

for the postal delivery route.

Geneva has a post office at the corner of Pine and Second streets, just north of State Road 46. Residents could go there to pick up their mail, which contained a Geneva address and zip code.

It was the home delivery system that posed the problems, said Voorhees. Mail that went to the homes contained the Oviedo addresses and zip codes. When people were not home when the mailman had a registered letter or large package for them, the letter or package would be brought back to the Oviedo Post Office. Traveling all the way to Oviedo to retrieve the undelivered registered letters and packages became a growing inconvenience, Voorhees said.

The volume of home delivered mail containing the Geneva addresses and zip codes is expected to increase slowly, he said.

Once it does, a bonafide delivery route will begin. To this end, he urges Geneva residents with home delivery to notify their correspondents of the name and zip code change.

COUNTY

IN BRIEF

Seminole Begins Search For Deputy Administrator

Seminole County has begun its search for a new deputy county administrator for land management. Woody Price, who handled the job for the past 10 years, left last week to join the Florida Department of Community Affairs as director of resource planning and management, the state agency's number two spot. At their last meeting, county commissioners read a resolution commending Price for his complete on baself of the county. Wishing him well at the key state post, Chairman Fred Streetman said: "We're awfully proud."

This week brought but one resume for the deputy administrator position. However, Herman Romero of the county personnel office said advertising of the position did not begin until this week, and noted he expects the $44,116 to $63,523 a-year-post to attract wide interest. County Administrator Ken Hooper will select a top candidate for the job and submit the candidate's name to the county commission for confirmation.

Job qualifications include a master's degree in planning and four years supervisory or professional experience in municipal or public planning, as well as responsibility for major project development.

Who's Who In Government

Want a run down on who is representing Seminole County at the federal, state and local levels and how to reach them? You'll want to get a copy of the Seminole County League of Women Voters' latest publication, Who's Who in Public Office in Seminole County. The pamphlet is eight pages, packed with up-to-date information on elected office holders, voter registration requirements and meeting and public hearing times of the county commission. It includes a pair of maps detailing the county's state Senate and House districts. To obtain a free copy write the Seminole County League of Women Voters. Post Office Box 1004. Altamonte Springs, 32715-1004. The booklets also are available at all city halls and libraries in the county.

Lake Mary Stalls On Pact

A call for clarification of contract terms led Lake Mary city commissioners Thursday night to delay signing a 25-year sewage-treatment agreement with Seminole County. The contract calls for the city to receive 300,000 gallons per day of capacity in the county's Greenwood Lakes wastewater treatment plant and up to four million-gallons-a-day capacity in the planned Yankee Lake treatment plant. Commissioner Ken King said the commission decided to delay action on the contract until its July 16 meeting to "remove ambiguities" contained in the contract. City commissioners also say they want more Information about the state and federal permitting process that must be completed before the Yankee Lake plant begins operating.

City officials see the Greenwood and Yankee Lake facilities as a way to provide sewer service to the city's urban development area, while allowing other parts of the city to continue using septic tanks.

Impact Fees Hearing Scheduled

A public hearing on fire-rescue impact fees is scheduled for 7 p.m. Aug. 25 in county commission chambers at the west end of the county services building.

Signs are that, if impact fees on development in unincorporated areas to help pay for growth-related fire-rescue needs are adopted, Seminole County will put proposals for any new impact fees on the back burner. Countywide road impact fees were adopted this spring and adoption of the fire-rescue fees is considered likely. But commissioners last month went along with their impact fee committee's recommendation and declined to consider fees on new development to help increase the quantity of books and other items available at county libraries. The committee also received agreement from the commission not to pursue development fees to help fund law enforcement and recreational needs created by growth.

Bad News For Some Boaters

The St. Johns Water Management District had bad news for local boaters this week. The Burrell Lock, in Lake County, which allows boat passage between Lake Eustis and Lake Griffin, won't reopen July 6 as orginally planned. Officials of the water district said fabrication of new parts for lock's slide gates is taking longer than anticipated. Officials say the lock should reopen on July 18.

Navy Jets Ready To Attack Iranian Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) - U.S. officials say Navy jets flew within striking distance of the Persian Gulf only as a warm-up exercise for escorting Kuwaiti tankers but could have Gulf. attacked Iranian Silkworm missiles if neces-

A day before the dramatic weekend rehearsal, Iran put one of the Chinese-made missiles into one of its truck-mounted launchers for a possible test-firing, the administration officials said Monday. It was dismantled within 24 hours, they said, but the launcher was situated just where the United States does not want the missiles along the Iranian coast of the Strait of Hormuz.

"They showed themselves and us that they could deploy the Silkworms," said one of the sources who spoke on the condition of

Whether the United States would attack the missiles pre-emptively has not been declared, and one official said the Navy exercise Saturday "wasn't designed as an anti-Silkworm exercise." Nonetheless, the official said, the planes "were prepared to deal with them."

iran previously test-fired at least two of what the Pentagon has said are its 20-odd Silkworms. The United States has warned Iran against deploying any of the weapons within a 50-mile range that could threaten shipping along the Strait of Hormus, the 30-mile-wide mouth of the strategic Persian

The officials asserted Monday there was no link between the detection of the latest Iranian action, either by satellite or spy plane, and the marshaling of carrier-based aircraft to rehearse the escort mission set to begin this month.

Basically (the Silkworms) are not operational and they're not a threat until they are operational," one of the sources said.

However, the officials said that in addition to the rehearsal reasoning, the Navy jets flew in support of the USS Stark, the frigate now headed home for fuller repairs after Irag's self-described mistaken attack that killed 37 American sailors in the gulf May

The Stark apparently was used as a prop. because its departure from the gulf Saturday, escorted by three other ships, provided an opportunity for light bombers, fighters and radar surveillance planes from the aircraft carrier USS Constellation to conduct the rehearsal over the Gulf of Oman, officials

The jets did not fly directly over the Strait of Hormuz or the Persian Gulf, the sources said, but the show of force and appearance of the diesel-powered Constellation in the Gulf of Oman — farther toward the Persian Gulf than U.S. carrier task forces usually venture - signaled the Navy was gearing up in earnest to escort 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers under American flag protection.

"Practice, practice, practice," one official said simply.

Carrier battle groups on station in the northern Arabian Sea, just outside the Gulf of Oman, and the force of guided missile destrovers and frigates in the Persian Gulf do not generally coordinate their movements. But the gulf mission will require such choreography because the escorts will be shepherding the tankers convoy style through the 600-mile-long Persian Gulf, through the treacherous strait and into the Gulf of Oman. They will take the same route back with empty tankers headed to Kuwait

U.S. concerns center on Iranian threats to attack the tankers even with the escorts because Kuwait has aided Iraq in the nearly 7-year Iran-Iraq war.

The Iranians have been shipping concrete to potential Silkworm sites on the Island of Qeshm and on the mainland for the last several weeks to build hardened launch platforms and bunkers for the missiles. other officials said.

6 Chernobyl Officials Face Criminal Negligence Trial

KIEV. U.S.S.R. (UPI) - Six officials of the Chernobyl nuclear power station went on trial for criminal negligence today, 15 months after an explosion at the plant's No. 4 reactor made the Ukrainian town a byword for nuclear disaster.

The official Tass news agency said in a dispatch from Chernobyl that six people, including the former director and the chief engineer of the power station, have been charged in connection with the April 1986 explosion - the worst nuclear power accident ever.

The three-paragraph dispatch did not list the names of those charged under section 220 of the Ukrainian criminal court, which Tass said related to "a breach of safety regulations at explosion-prone plants".

The agency sald the proceedings were under the chairmanship of Raimond Brize, a Supreme Court judge.

The 16,000 inhabitants of Chernobyl, 60 miles north of power station, were evacuated after the April 26, 1986 explosion. The trial got underway in a decontaminated area of the regional town.

"It's the logical place, the scene of the crime," Alexander Kovalenko, a spokesman for the special Kombinat unit dealing with the accident's consequences, told a group of Western reporters last month.

The explosion at the No. 4 reactor of the Chernobyl plant at 1:23 a.m. killed 31 people, hospitalized 237 with radiation sickness, forced the creation of a 19-mile security zone and the evacuation of 135,000 people.

Viktor Bruokhin, the former director of the Chernbobyl plant. and Nikolai Fomin, the chief engineer, were two of the defendants known beforehand to be in the dock in the Hall of Culture. A third defendant was believed to be an engineer identified only as

The accident was the worst in the history of nuclear power plants.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Gunmen today shot and killed a man in a religiously mixed area of Belfast while Protestant youths hurled acid bombs at police and a suspected police sources said. The violence by both Protestants and Roman Catholics brought to 58 the number of people killed in political and sectarian slayings so far this year. Sixty-one people were killed in 1986.

IRA bomb injured a woman,

The new violence erupted with the approach of the Protestant 'marching season'' to celebrate Protestant domination of the British-ruled province and police warned they expected an upsurge of deaths.

Police said gunmen opened fire and killed a man in a immediately available.

Violence Erupts In Belfast The shooting occurred a few minutes after a suspected Irish Republican Army bomb was set off in a garden in Roman Catholic West Belfast as an army foot patrol passed.

> None of the soldiers were injured but a woman was rushed to hospital with non-serious injuries, police said.

No group immediately claimed responsibility but police suspected the outlawed IRA, fighting to end British rule in the mostly Protestant province so it can be united with the Catholic Irish Republic.

Earlier today, four masked men - suspected Protestant paramilitaries - burst into a Protestant home and forced a woman in her 20s outside, tied her to a lampost and beat her religiously mixed area of north with canes in a suspected Belfast. No further details were punishment attack, police sources said.

Life Moves On, Even For Geeps

Fifteen inventors now have applications before the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to create new forms of animal life. Predictably, the new policy of patenting animals - not just plant-related permutations - has rekindled debate among scientists, ethicists and other groups about manipulating higher

Despite the controversy — a healthy one. we believe — the government's new patent policy should be embraced. The world has survived the patenting of new plants developed by grafting. The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that patenting of genetically engineered, oil-eating bacteria to consume pollution is constitutional. California's experiment with genetically altered microbes designed to protect strawberry plants from frost damage seems to be proceeding nicely.

Opponents of the new policy are resurrecting warnings about an "Andromeda Strain" of life being introduced that would devastate civilization. They question whether scientists should alter something — life — that isn't understood in the first place, and they ask whether anyone should be in the business of custom-designing animal life.

While these concerns make for interesting conversation in a graduate seminar, events in the real world already have made much of the debate a moot point. Today, California is home to five of the eight leading genetic engineering companies whose products represent advancements in the treatment of heart disease, cancer, anemia and burns.

In fact, the "Brave New World" so feared has been around since the 1970s, when gene-splitting was developed.

What raises the most concern is the thought of grotesque test-tube-produced beasties with debilitating ailments and distorted physical features. Genetic engineering opponents point to the "geep" developed at the University of California at Davis.

The geep is no Dr. Seuss creation; it resulted when researchers fused a goat embryo with a sheep embryo to produce an animal that was neither sturdy nor capable of reproducing.

Science is still very far from creating animals from scratch. Actually, what is much more likely than some rough beast crawling out of a Petri dish is that genetic engineering will be used to do what has been done for years through selective breeding. Using a speedier process, genetic manipulation will produce cows that give more milk, cattle that are beefler, swine that are leaner.

Later on, genetic manipulation could hasten development of cures for diseases, lead to clean up pollution, open an industrial era dependent not on fossil fuels but on substances produced through genetic engineering, create plants capable of producing their own insecticides and fertilizers. Perhaps it could even allow the selection of a baby's gender, hair color and other traits.

Criticism abounds when attempts are made to draw the line between altering human life and genetic manipulation of lower life forms. The harshed critics argue that genetic engineering will reduce the animal kingdom to the status of a commercial product to be redesigned and produced en masse at the whim of the biotechnology industry.

However, the patent office policy now bars applications that would genetically alter humans. Time thus remains to argue whether human genetic engineering should be subject to patent laws. Meanwhile, the new patent policy is well conceived. It is aimed at keeping pace with the exploding world of biotechnology by offering commercial protection to those who develop such techniques.

Unmarried, Pregnant, Age 36, And Black

My anecdote-loving father used to tell this one about a conversation between two black women: "You heard 'bout Tildy? She gon' have a

"Oh, that be nice," nodded her elderly friend. "And she gon' get married, too."

"Oh, that do make it nice."

Liz Walker, a popular black Boston television anchorwoman, is going to have a baby. Motherhood is nice.

But Walker doesn't intend to get married. She earns an estimated $500,000 a year. That's very nice.

When a recent news interview reported Walker's pregnancy, over 400 viewers sent supporting letters, with some enclosing babyproduct coupons.

Amazing.

Years ago, a book wasn't worth its titillating salt unless Boston banned it.

Today, Bostonians subscribe to a higher ethic: A baby is God's opinion that the world must go Syndicated columnist Carl T. Rowan isn't impressed.

Aircady God's opinion is in trouble.

Rowan then came up with the kind of "Would-you-want-your-daughter-to-marryone?" non sequitur Southerners once used to rebut arguments for racial equality.

"More than 500,000 bables are born annually to teenagers, over half of them out of wedlock

And how many single teenagers earn $500,000 a year?

But Rowan correctly called the epidemic of teenage pregnancies a "national social tragedy." He's dead wrong in assuming that Walker might "feel comfortable adding to it.

She accepts the public nature of her position. but her pregnancy is a private affair. And she's not "comfortable" being a statistic.

But Rowan wouldn't know because he never called Walker.

There's an old journalism commandment: If your mother says she loves you, check it out.

I called Walker, whom I had met while teaching at Harvard five years ago. Some of the criticism had wounded her. "The father of my baby acknowledges paternity and wants to support the child,"

Walker told me. "I'm not flaunting this. I am meeting my community commitments."

Walker was almost in tears when she recalled that "my mother died in childbirth at 40. I wanted to have this baby."

But she also sorrowfully concedes her contribution to a worrisome statistic - 60 percent of all black babies are born out of wedlock.

Northeastern University law professor Denise Carty-Bennia (also black and single), wryly counters "I wish more 36-year-old black, single women earning $500,000 a year would have

Good gracious, think what that could do for the black median family income.

ROBERT WAGMAN Gorbachev Now Faces Opponents

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Despite his gains at the recent meeting of the Communist Party's Central Committee, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev still has a long way to go before obtaining absolute authority to make economic and social changes, according to U.S. experts.

Western analysts expected some changes in the makeup of the 11-member Politburo, which runs the Soviet Union on a day-to-day basis. They assumed that Gorbachev would attempt to replace old-liners, who think his economic reforms are too radical, with people committed to his policies.

The experts were surprised when Gorbachev was able to place three supporters on the Politburo. However, he only managed to do this by expanding the existing membership from 11 to 14. None of the old-guard "targets" were replaced.

Before the meeting, Western experts were looking at two men to be the keys in assessing the dominance of Gorbachev over the Soviet overnment: Alexander Takoviev. 63, the Westernized long-time Soviet ambassador to Canada and now Secretary of the Communist Central Committee; and Boris Yeltsin, 56. Moscow Communist Party boss.

Both are close Gorbachev allies: both were non-voting members of the Politburo. It was believed that Gorbachev would attempt to have both raised to full voting status.

Yakoviev is one of the three new full-voting Politburo members. As the man in charge of political Ideology on the Central Committee. he is now in a position to challenge Yegor Ligachev. The No. 2 man on the Politburo, Ligachev is the party's chief ideologue, an extremely powerful role within the Soviet power structure.

Analysts have been split over whether Ligachev supports or opposes Gorbachev's reforms. At times he seems to support them. but at other times he seems to be be saying that Gorbachev is moving too rapidly.

Had Yakoviev replaced Ligachev, it would have been a major, clearcut victory for Gorbachev. Having both on the ruling body appears to be a compromise whose long-range impact will be the subject of much Moscow Party boss Yeltsin did not fare as well. Lately he has come under indirect attack by some of the old-liners, and h! status as a non-voting member was not changed. His non-elevation is considered significant in the complicated maneuvering that went on at this party congress.

ROBERT WALTERS

Neglected Fuel

PRUDHOE BAY, Alaska (NEA) -Beneath the surface of Alaska's North Slope lies a huge reservoir of 27 trillion cubic feet of recoverable natural gas. Atop the tundra stands the world's largest gas-handling plant.

But very little of that reaches any market. Indeed, the oil companies operating the sprawling industrial complex here have elaborate procedures for re-injecting into the ground gas that comes to the surface with crude oil.

Although the reservoir here is among the nation's largest and most remote, its treatment exemplifies the indifference displayed toward the valuable fuel throughout the country.

"It would be foolish to ignore a resource of such value indefinitely," says an official of the Standard Oil Production Co. "But the economics (in Alaska) remain unfavorable for the forseeable future."

Devising a method to move the gas to market is difficult, but the oil companies display surprisingly little enthusiasm for meeting that challenge.

In speeches at a recent ceremony here commemorating the 10th anniversary of the start-up of the first North Slope oilfield, industry officials ignored the region's natural gas potential and emphasized instead their determination to explore for additional oil, especially in the nearby Arctic National Wildlife Ref-

Only Judy Brady, commissioner of Alaska's Department of Natural Resources, mentioned gas, "In the next decade," she predicted, "we will be celebrating the movement of natural gas from the North Slope to the rest of the world."

The industry's ability to do that was enhanced earlier this year when the Atlantic Richfield Co.

opened its $700 million Central Gas Facility, the largest gas-handling plant in the world.

Capable of handling 3 billion cubic feet of gas daily, the facility produces gas that is injected into the oilfield to enhance the recovery crude oil. In addition, about 40,000 barrels of natural gas liquids (propanes and butanes) are blended with the crude oil shipped daily through the Trans Alaska Pipeline.

The vast majority of the gas, however, goes to Arco's Central Compressor Plant, where it is reinjected underground so it can be withdrawn for commercial use at some unspecified later time.

The leading impediment to marketing the gas is transporting it to the "lower 48" or some other location where it can be sold, and industry officials insist it would be impossible to use the oil pipeline for that purpose.

But other experts disagree. The Office of Technology Assessment, a highly respected congressional agency, says the natural gas could be converted into methanol and "the existing oil pipeline could be used to transport the methanol from the North Slope" - although both conversion costs and energy losses would be high.

OTA estimates that beneath the contiguous 48 states lie 430 trillion cubic feet to 900 tcf of natural gas readily recoverable using conventional technologies.

That doesn't include gas from low-permeability sandstone and limestone formations. Devonian shales, coal seams, geopressurized aquifers and other "unconventional" sources that require advanced extraction technologies.

Also excluded are the 35 tcf of conventional natural gas reserves in Alaska.

Tracing Pollution Sources

By Rob Stein UPI Science Writer

BOSTON (UPI) - A type of chemical used to help make automobile tires last longer has given scientists a tool they can use to try to trace the source of some water pollution.

Researchers at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory at the University of California found unusual chemicals in sediment at the bottom of the San Francisco Bay while studying pollution in that body of water.

"We found a compound there we didn't recognize at first," said Robert B. Spies, a marine environmental scientist who headed the research. "It started a little detective story."

The researchers, who reported their findings in recent edition of the British science journal Nature, eventually identified the chemicals as benzthiazoles. The substances are used in the manufacture of tires to prolong the life of the tires and prevent oxidation, which can cau the rubber to crack.

Tires wear slowly as cars more along streets, depositing small amounts of rubber on the pavement. When it rains, the water apparently washes off some of the deposits, which contain the benzthiazoles.

Also washed off are other pollutants from a variety of sources, such as car exhaust and oil, Spies said. These often end up polluting nearby streams, rivers and other bodies of

"This streetrunoff is a source of pollution to a lot of water bodies." said Spies in a telephone interview.

The researchers realized the presence of benzthiazoles could therefore be used to trace the source of such pollutants when they are "The significance of this is it acts as a tracer for street runoff," said Spies. "This compound can act as a marker for the sources. If you find the compound in, say San Francisco Bay or Boston Harbor, you know it came from the streets.

The substance itself has not been shown to pose a major hazard to marine life, but it is usually accompanied by other toxic substances that can be hazardous.

"The value is that when regulators are tying to clean up an area, such as San Francisco Bay. the first thing you want to know about is where is it coming from."

WASHINGTON - Whistleblowers at nuclear power plants are supposed to be a specially protected species, because Congress doesn't want unreported safety lapses causing a Three Mile Island accident - or a Chernobyl disaster.

But when Alan Young, a welder at the Philadelphia Electric Co.'s Peach Bottom nuclear plant in southeastern Pennsylvania, told the Nuclear Regulatory Commission about workers' overexposure to radiation, he was fired. The NRC has done nothing for Young, beyond confirming his complaints, and the Labor Department appears to have grown tired of defending him.

As a result, Young has been blacklisted by the utility company and cannot work at the Peach Bottom plant. At last count, he had been fired by four Peach Bottom contractors because of his whistleblowing and Philadelphia Electric's refusal to give him a Young's depressing saga began in June 1983, when he went to the NRC with information that workers welding pipes at Peach Bottom were inadequately protected from excessive radiation. The welders were putting Band-Aid-like strips around the pipes to keep radioactive water from leaking. Each hour they were exposed to the equivalent of five chest X-rays, and in eight days they were "burned out" - having soaked up so much radiation that they could not legally be exposed to any more for a few months, Young reported.

The contractor fired Young after his complaint to the NRC, but a Labor Department review board found in his favor. He was given $11,000 in back pay and a promise that there would be no future discrimination against him. An NRC report stated, "Several deficiencies were identified and commitments were made by (Philadelphia Electric) management to improve practices."

Young was hired by another Peach Bottom contractor in 1984. but again found that welders were getting too much radiation. Again he was fired, and again the Labor Department found that he was right.

In August 1985, Young was hired by a third Peach Bottom contractor - and fired two hours later because Philadelphia Electric refused to grant him security clearance. The Labor Department hasn't even investigated that incident, although it has been ordered to do so by an administrative law judge.

Young was refused security clearance again last October to work at Peach Bottom, even though he had meanwhile obtained clearance to work at Three Mile Island. This time the Labor Department sent out an investigator. Scott Royer. But shortly after he began nosing around Peach Bottom asking questions, a plant official kicked Royer out because he didn't have a subpoena. Royer did learn that Young had been effectively blacklisted by plant management, however. "Whistleblower complaints Young made created a lot of problems," the plant security official told Royer, according to his report.

The Labor Department ordered Philadelphia Electric to give Young his job back and to pay him back wages and compensatory damages. The company was ordered further to expunge from its records "any references or indications characterizing Mr. Young's action or behavior as being inappropriate in this matter."

Philadelphia Electric has appealed the Labor Department decision, but the case has been stalled for more than six months. Meanwhile, Young was hired by yet another Peach Bottom contractor - and apparently laid off because Philadelphia Electric refused him security clearance.

Majors To Face Leesburg; Juniors Begin Wednesday

With their fourth consecutive sub-district title safely tucked away, the Sanford American League All-Stars will bid for their first Florida Little Major League District 4 crown beginning

The 11- and 12-year-old Americans take on the host team. Leesburg National, tonight at 8 at the Susan Street Recreation Complex in

In tonight's first game, starting at 6. Sub-District 3 champion Ocala takes on Sub-District 1 winner and defending champion Ormond Beach. The double elimination tournament is scheduled to conclude either Friday or Saturday with the winner advancing to the Florida Little Major League State Tournament at Jacksonville.

In the previous three years, Sanford American made early exits from district play after romping through the sub-district unbeaten. This time, Sanford lost one game in the and-district before coming back to win the final. That loss, Sanford coaches say, has made the Americans realize they have to play their best every time out.

"That loss (9-4 to Leesburg American) may have been the best thing that could have happened to the team," assistant Albert Anderson said. "They know now that they can't just show up and expect to win. They have to go out and play hard every game."

Either Britt Henderson or Adaryal Jones. the two aces of the staff, will pitch tonight's opener for the Americans. Henderson, a right-hander who deals sidearm, won two games in the sub-district including a complete-game victory in the final. Jones, a hard-throwing lefty, had a 1-1 record in sub-district play. The main men in relief for Sanford are Craig Merkerson, Jamie King and Neville Fuller.

Merkerson, also a second baseman, led Sanford's offense in the sub-district while catcher Terry Williams, outfleiders Leroy Keitt and Jimmie Bailey, Jones and King also had productive tournaments at the plate. Jones. Henderson and King all hit long balls in the sub-district while Merkerson slugged four doubles.

Defensively, King displayed tremendous range and a good arm at shortstop while Merkerson was solid at second. Williams and Jermaine Hartsfield showed strength behind the plate while Henderson and Jones fleided well shifting between the pitcher's mound and first base.

"We've been here (district) four years in a row and I think this team has the best chance of any," Anderson said. "If we play another all-around game like we did against Leesburg. we'll be all right."

JUNIORS — The Florida Junior Major League District 4 Tournament also opens tonight at Ormond Beach. Edgewater and Port Orange meet in the 6 p.m. game while Ormond Beach and Holly Hill plays at 8 p.m.

Sanford, managed by Mike Maples, will play the winner of the Edgewater-Port Orange game Wednesday night at 6.

Maples said he would scout tonight's firstround game before determining who he would start on the mound. He said it would probably be Mike Taylor or James Jackson.

Boston Loves His Oviedo Experience

By Scott Sander Herald Sports Writer

The Little League experience has been a big-league adventure for Tank

Boston said coaching a Little League baseball team is a pleasure that is unparalleled. He said watching a youngster progress and learn is gift that can not be matched.

Boston, the manager of Oviedo's Majors, said it is an experience that he won't soon forget.

"I feel very fortunate to be the coach of this team," Boston, who in his sixth year of coaching in the Oviedo Little League program, said. "I'm just having a tremendous time out here with these young kids, and I'm just tickled to be here.'

Oviedo Little League President Mickey Norton agrees. "Tank has done a great job with the team," he said. "I'm really impressed with the way he has handled the boys."

Boston, who is assisted by Bob Lovel, said that his team, which is made up mostly of 12-year-olds, has looked strong so far in practice. "Everything is going according to schedule," Boston said. "The kids are working hard, and I think that we should have a pretty good ball club."

Oviedo's Cardinals won the Division Top Team Tournament and finished second to Apopka for the District 14 Top Team title.

Oviedo will begin its tournament play in the District 14, Division II, Area

Baseball

1 Tournament on Monday, July 13 at Mount Dora against Mount Dora. If Oviedo wins against Mount Dora, it will travel to Altamonte on Tuesday, July 14 to take on the Altamonte Nationals.

Boston said that if his club can get by Mount Dora and Altamonte, it should be in superb shape. "I'm not looking ahead, but if we beat Mount Dora, the toughest game will come against Altamonte," Boston said. 'They (Altamonte) seem to come up with a strong team every year, and beating them is never an easy task."

Pitching is probably the most important ingredient of any team, and Boston said that his club should not encounter any difficulties on the mound.

"Our pitching staff is very strong," Boston said. "You've got to remember that these are the very best kids in the league, and they show it."

Oviedo will be led by Mark Bellhorn. who played for Boston on the Cards. "Mark is definitely the best pitcher in this division," Boston said of Bellhorn, who tossed a no-hitter during the regular season and another one during the Top Team Tournament against Altamonte's Mets. "He has got an excellent fastball and his curve is pretty tough to hit also."

Bellhorn will be joined on the hill by the Orioles' Chris Wisdom, Rangers' Drew Jackson, and twin Angels' Nick and Octavio Torres. "All in all, I think that our pitching is very strong," Boston said. "Our hitting isn't bad either. A lot of guys on this team hit well over .350, and all of them can make contact."

Andy Taylor (outfield) and Jimmy Baker (catcher) provide depth.

Boston went on to say that he feels the defense should also be adequate. "We are still kind of experimenting with kids, but I think that we will be solid defensively," Boston said. "We still have some work to do, but I feel that these kids will do a good job come game time."

Mets' catcher Timmy Slavik will take care of the duties behind the plate. Bellhorn, also a powerful hitter who set a Major League home run record this year with 16 and added four more in the Top Team, and Jackson will alternate at shortstop when they are not pitching.

Orioles' Chad Shaw will be playing second base. Wisdom and Phillies' Scott Whitley will be sharing time at first base while Mets' Chris Stokes will round out the infield at third.

The outfield will have Braves' Matt Pipkin playing left, Phillies' Mike Rugientus playing center, and Rangers' Jay Busse playing right field.

We can truly go as far as we want to," Boston said. "I told the kids that it is entirely up to them, and it is. If they want to win badly enough, they will."

Mustang All-Stars Prepare For District

By Mike Dame Special to the Herald

Following right on the heels of last week's Seminole Pony Baseball Mustang All-Star Series, the National and American League teams will be competing in the District tournament, which begins Wednesday night at Five Points Complex.

Action begins at 5:30 p.m. on Wednesday, when the Mustang Nationals take on West Seminole Pony League's A team, while the Americans face West Seminole B at 8 p.m.

In last week's playoff series, National came away with an impressive sweep, defeating American 10-8 and 14-3. American manager Mark Kleibl, however, said that series was simply a test for his squad.

"I used the tournament last week as a scrimmage to get my starting nine," Kleibl said.

Several players turned in fine hitting performances in the two games, including Brian Dwyer and Tony Hammett who each had two hits in the 10-8 loss. Kleibl insists, however, that his is not a team of superstars.

Kleibl gave every one of his players his equal share of playing time, and he came out very optimistic despite dropping the series.

'My strength is not one or two players - it's everybody," Kleibl said. "I don't have any idea what to expect (from West Seminole).'

Manager Gary Burger's National team, on the other hand, doesn't appear to have a whole lot to improve upon after sweeping American, but Burger contends that statement.

"We're gonna be running into stiff competition," Burger said. "You have to go over the basics and get yourself into a state where you can make things happen." One way to make things happen is through strong pitching, which National has plenty of in the arms of Mike Johnson, Aaron Church and Kiley Calapa. We had 8-12 strikeouts against them per game while we only had two or three batting," Burger said. "That makes a difference."

Martina War Not Yet Won

LONDON (UPI) - Once the euphoria of victory has settled, Martina Navratilova will find the war has not yet been won.

For the time being, Navratilova can take great comfort from her gutsy performance at Wimbledon, where she fought off the challenge of Steff Graf to earn a record sixth successive singles crown. In the process, she halted Graf's winning streak at 45 matches.

The next big hurdle comes at the U.S. Open, beginning Aug. 31, at which time Navratilova will have to prove once again she is the world's best women's tennis player, a position she has held the last five years.

Three women have won the Grand Slam events this year, Hana Mandlikova beating Navratilova in the Australian final and Graf besting Navrattlova at Paris. This leaves the U.S. Open as the key element in helping to decide who will reign as No.

"Should someone else win the U.S. Open, then I guess the No. 1 ranking will be up for grabs," Navratilova said. "If Steffi or I win it, that person should be No. 1 for the year. I feel my chances are good since the U.S. Open favors serve and volleyers with its fast surface. I feel comfortable playing Graf disagrees she will be at a disadvantage at Flushing Meadow.

"The U.S. Open is going to be a better court for me," the 18-year-old West German sald. "I would say hard court is my best surface, clay is my second and grass is coming up. The U.S. Open may be the next highlight of the year, but there are many other tournaments and I take every one

Although grass was supposed to be her weakest surface, Graf played with superb confidence and skill at Wimbledon, and was highly pleased with her effort.

"It's been a pretty good Wimbledon for me, it still is," Graf said after suffering her first defeat since last November. "Coming to the final is a great thing and even if I lost it I feel good about it. I'd like to play Martina again soon."

If Graf had won Saturday, she would have overtaken Navratilova for the No. I ranking. Now she must be patient a bit more, with the full confidence she eventually will rise to the top. She also is anticipating her next confrontation.

"Why shouldn't I be confident about playing Martina again?," Graf asked. Tve beaten her twice (this year) and lost only once. After you lose you want to play the other one again. Next time I hope I'm going to do better. I think my game improved after Paris, my serve has gotten better. I'm looking forward to the next one because it's always nice to play the No. 1."

Pat Cash upset Ivan Lendl to win the men's final Sunday in straight sets, American Davis Cupper Ken Flach and Robert Seguso won the men's doubles, Helena Sukova and Claudia Kohde-Kilsch took the women's doubles, and Jo Durie and Jeremy Bates provided Britain with its first mixed doubles title since 1936. Cash said Monday that after his Davis Cup commitment for Australia in three weeks against Mexico, his most immediate goal was to do well in the U.S. Open. He didn't play at Flushing Meadow in 1985, and was a first round loser last year.

Howell Blasts Boston

United Press International

Effective relief pitching and aggressive base running made it possible for Jack Howell to win Monday night's game for the California Angels.

Howell blasted a three-run homer with two out in the 12th inning to give California to a 10-7 victory over the Boston Red Sox after a game-saving play and 6 2-3 innings of scoreless relief turned in by Gary Lucas and Greg Minton kept the Angels in the game.

Brian Downing led off the 12th with a double to reach base safely for the seventh straight time in the game and ninth straight over two games. After Devon White grounded out, Wes Gardner, 0.4, walked Wally Joyner intentionally.

Doug DeCinces hit a potential double-play grounder to second baseman Marty Barrett, but Joyner slid hard into second and shortstop Ed Romero could not make the throw to first. Howell then ripped a 2-2 pitch to right field for his 13th home run.

"With runners at first and second they were paying more attention to Downing because he was the winning run," Joyner

Monroe Boat-Ramp-Watching: Amusing Education

Disney doesn't have it all. One of the best forms of entertainment in the area may be the local boat ramp, considering the fact that it's free, it certainly is a good value.

Boat-ramp-watching, as a pastime. has its own group of "regulars," especially at the Monroe Harbor where the activity is high and the walkway near the rivership Romance provides excellent viewing.

Every trailer-boat owner should spend a Saturday or Sunday afternoon boat-ramp watching, besides being thoroughly amused, it can be a real education.

It is also recommended viewing for divorce attorneys: they may find that ramp-watching provides more client leads than advertising. Just ask one of the regulars.

Trailering and launching a boat is a skill that just can't be learned from a book. Don't get me wrong, a boating class that includes the basics of trailering, or a pamphlet describing the procedure, will certainly help, but trailering is a skill that can only be mastered through practice.

If you're about to become a trailerboat owner, here's the four-step plan:

• Step 1. Do some ramp watching. Pay particular attention to boat/trailer combinations similar to what you are going to buy. Try to become familiar with the different brands of trailer and the arrangement of items such as the bolsters (wood supports padded with carpeting), remers and winch.

• Step 2. Talk to your boat dealer. The boat dealer usually can recommend and sell trailers that fit their boats properly. Don't skimp on the trailer. Remember, your boat was designed for the water and a poorly fitted trailer can frustrate its owner, or even worse, damage the boat.

• Step 3. Practice. Find an empty parking lot and set up some plastic jugs to simulate a ramp area. Start the backing procedure with your hand on the bottom of the steering wheel. This makes it simple because when you move your hand to the right the trailer will go to the right and when you move your hand to the left the trailer will go to the left.

• Step 4. Go to the ramp. Do yourself a favor and go on a weekday.

36 Box 138.10

The ramps aren't crowded on weekdays, there usually aren't any boat-ramp-watchers around, and if you're doing this exercise with your spouse, the attorneys are at the office taking care of the business they found on the weekend.

Even experienced boaters can learn from ramp-watching. For example. you might notice other people with boats and trailers like yours have an easier time launching because they back the trailer further into the water - or maybe, not as far.

Boating can be a real pleasure, don't ruin it at the ramp for yourself and others. Be courteous, and don't loiter. See you at the ramp.

For additional information about safe boating or the Coast Guard Auxiliary, call 323-9416.

BURRELL LOCK — The St. Johns River Water Management District officials have announced a short delay in the planned reopening of Burrell Lock.

The building of new parts of the lock's slide gates in taking longer than anticipated, according to Ed Albanesi, St. Johns River Water Management spokesman.

Albanesi said the lock, located in Lake County, will reopen July 18. Burrell Lock allows boat passage between Lake Eustis and Lake Griffin.

Lavainne Breaks Away To Grab Sixth Stage Of Tour De France

EPINAL, France (UPI) - Frenchman Christophe Lavainne of the Systeme U team broke away 22 miles from the finish to win Monday's 105-mile sixth stage of the Tour de France cycle race. Lavainne was closely pursued by Raul Alcala of the Seven-11 team, who turned in the best performance ever by a Mexican rider in the Tour by finishing second, 99 seconds behind. Switzerland's Erich Maechler of the Carrera team, the leader since Saturday, retained the overall No. 1 spot by finishing in the pack at 2:36 behind Lavainne.

Joerg Muller, also of Switzerland, retained second place overall, 44 seconds back, and Italy's Giancarlo Perini remained third, 55 seconds off the lead. Lavainne began the day in 16th place, 3:29 behind Maechler, and moved into fourth place.

The sixth stage, the first in France after five days in West Germany, marked the first mountain test for the 23 nine-man teams. It was on the descent from the first and highest of three mountains that Lavainne and eight others escaped the pack.

The Pepsi Firecracker 400 will be held on Saturday, July

'Obviously, it is much easier on our fans to attend the Pepsi Firecracker 400 when it falls on the weekend," said Daytona International Speedway General Manager John D. Riddle. "We had been at the mercy of the calendar in the past, because the race was always held on whatever day of the week the Fourth of July fell.'

The Pepsi Firecracker 400 has been held on the Fourth of July since the first event in 1959, it was a 250-mile race for the first four years, and it became a 400-miler in 1963.

Walton To Miss Next Season

BOSTON (UPI) - Boston Celtics reserve center Bill Walton, who was sidelined most of the 1986-87 season, will undergo surgery on his right foot and ankle and will miss next season, club officials said Monday.

The medical procedure, aimed at relieving pressure that has caused stress fractures in his foot, will be performed Tuesday in Los Angeles by Drs. Tony Daley and William Wagneron, the team said. Walton underwent similar surgery on his left foot and ankle in 1981.

The Bank of Japan said the dollar closed at 149.45 yen, up 0.20 over Monday's closing of 149.25. Dealers attributed the gain to Finance Minister Klichi Miyazawa's remark dismissing central bank intervention in trading.

The dollar also lost ground in London, with the pound opening higher at $1.6230 against $1.6160. The only exception was in Zurich where the U.S. currency opened higher at 1.5332 Swiss francs against 1.5330.

Gold rose in Zurich to $445.50 per ounce against the previous $443.50 and in London to $446.00 from $443.00.

 A FDLE report stating Manning's not filing the accident report properly was a second degree misdemeanor. This could not be prosecuted because of the statute of limitations. (The accident report was filed at Longwood Police Department rather than in Lake County where the incident occurred and was the subject of a recent investigation by the FDLE at the request of the city. The FDLE found though Manning and LeBruno failed to file the report properly, a misdemeanor, there was no criminal misconduct. Because of allergic reaction to the dog in Baker's family, Baker gave Jeffrey to Manning to take home as a pet. "Would the city be liable if the dog bites somebody?" Gunter asked.

Meanwhile Jeffrey's former handler, who was given a dog named Cajun as a replacement. left the city to go to work for the Seminole County Sheriff's Department and asked to take Cajun with him. Manning agreed to let him have the dog, which was city property, for $800, "As I understand, and I think Mr. Waller can certify, the city owed the officer about $2,000 from which that amount was deducted," Gunter sald. were purchased by corporate sponsors. Smith said he and several other board members had a late-night talk about the success of the

"The general viewpoint was that we were not damaged at all by some of the things that have transpired," he said.

That success carried over to the next day, when an estimated 4,000 people showed up at the Townsend Plantation grounds for the Heritage Festival, an old-fashioned independence Day celebration with a Florida Cracker flavor. "We had people say it was like the picnics they were used to in the old days," Smith said.

Even the weather cooperated; the skies grew threateningly dark late in the day and lightning flashed in the distance, but the rains never came.

The heat was steaming, though Morris said it kept Pepsi and beer sales strong.

The two days of fundraisers originally were scheduled for Memorial Day weekend but delay in the opening of Townsend's Plantation forced a rescheduling to the Fourth of July holiday. In some ways the delay helped the zoo board. For instance, it provided time to line up non-profit community groups to join the Florida Heritage Festival. Morris said the groups included the Center for Drug Free Living, the Apopka Recreation Center, the Sunshine Basketball organization, the Orlando Police Department SWAT team and a number of other organizations.

The next fundralsers are set for sometime this fall, and include the annual Wild West Auction and a concert featuring a yet-to-be-named nationaly known singer or musician.

Weeks leading up to the fundraisers were filled with turmoil for the zoo's board of directors. In late May, a handful of board members met and agreed to fire zoo chief Rozon from the post he had held for 14 years. The board was forced to repeat its action in early June after some members of the panel complained they were not properly notified of the meeting.

A dispute continues over exactly what action the board of directors took at the June meeting, which was closed to the public and press. Morris, Smith, Weinberg and other board members say the governing body voted on a motion to relieve Rozon of his duties and continue paying his salary until a firm decision could be reached on whether to pay him for the two and one-half years left on a contract that pays him about $37,500

Rozon's lawyer, J. Cheney Mason, claims the board is backing out of a commitment it made at the June meeting to fully meet terms of the contract. He has said he will sue the board the first time it misses a twice-monthly contract

"They're writing their own indictments." Mason said in a recent interview.

Adding to the turmoil is a threat of a recall of the present board by lawyer Newman Brock, an honorary member of the board who was blocked from sitting in on the June meeting and has been highly critical of Rozon's firing. Brock said last week he is still contacting members of the approximate 2,200-member Central Florida Zoo Society to gauge interest in ousting the present board.

Some of the money from the fundraisers, according to Morris, will go toward paying the salary of a new director, for which a search is expected to begin in a couple of months.

The problems come at a time the zoo board has an opportunity to receive hundreds of thousands of dollars annually through county voter approval of a tax on tourist accommodations. The state Legislature cleared the way for the tourist tax this year with passage of a bill allowing money from the tax to go to zoos, museums and similar

"It's a man's club," she said. "Don't we have women's clubs? Why certainly we have women's clubs and I don't want men in them," added Mrs. Smith, an 86-year-old former president of the Sanford Women's Club and the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs.

"We each have our place," she said. She added, however, she thinks it's acceptable for men's and women's clubs to join together for civic projects.

A two-thirds majority was needed to amend the International charter, which sets policy affecting 315,000 members in 8,200 clubs in 70 countries.

Kiwanis members at past international conventions have the ugly. I am here to tell it all, I repeatedly struck down the am here to accept responsibility amendment allowing women for that which I did. DiNoto, speaking Monday before 8,000 members who gathered for the general bustness session of their weeklong convention, cited a 2-month-old Supreme Court sexdiscrimination ruling in urging the group to break tradition. "We will be in constant, costly litigation and will be fighting losing battles," DiNoto said. "The international board (of directors) believes this is the most logical response to the legal situation that now exists." The high court ruled laws barring sex discrimination may be used against all-male Rotary clubs to force them to admit women. States using that decision as legal precedent could revoke charters for noncomplying clubs.

Rotary International President

Charles Keller implored the Kiwanis members to take a step toward modernization.

"We are two of the oldest, most respected service organizations with a shared tradition of excellence," Keiler said. "We must increase the role of women as partners in service.

While the Kiwanis delegates have been steadfast in their overall opposition to allowing women, the percentage in favor has grown steadily - from 15 percent in 1977 to 47 percent last year.

"I came here to tell you the truth - the good, the bad and accept responsibility for that which I did not do," North said.

North testified with a grant of limited immunity from prosecution and under a deal he struck with the committees.

However, even with that arrangement, his long-awaited testimony did not come easy. Before North testified, his attorney, Brendan Sullivan, sparred with the committee and sought another delay, arguing that he and North had not been given enough time to study volumes of documentary evidence given him by the panels.

But Chairman Daniel Inouye, D-Hawall, of the Senate committee, refused and directed North to testify. Inouye also declined to allow North to make an opening statement until Thursday, telling him he had not complied with committee rules to provide the committee the statement 48 hours in advance.

Inouye said North was "asking us to bend the law and ... be considered above the law."

"I came here to tell you the truth," North said at one point. T'm trying to do that, Mr. Nields, and I don't like the Insinuation that I'm up here having a convenient memory lapse, as some others have had."

Jilted Woman Still Fired Up For Old Flame

DEAR ABBY: I've been in pursue such clearly selflong-distance romance. [I live in Los Angeles and George lives in San Diego.) We got together almost every weekend, taking turns making the drive. He phoned me a few days ago to say he "missed" me, and could tell his wife he had to be out of town "on business," so if I wanted to drive to San Diego, we could hole up in a motel for a tive to remind her that she had couple of days.

asked: Why do friends and relatives think gifts need not be given to newlyweds unless they have a wedding?

Due to my husband's serious illness, surgery and subsequent early retirement, our thoughtful and considerate daughter and her flance were married by a judge at the courthouse in order to eliminate the expense of a church wedding. Like all brides, our daughter had dreamed of a beautiful white gown, attendants, etc., but she knew we couldn't afford to give her one without going into debt. This was not a "have to" wedding. — both have good jobs and are mature individuals. She's 22 and he's 28.

They've been married for a year and a half, and not one wedding gift was received from either our side or his! This hurts them and angers me, especially since my daughter and we have spent a small fortune on wedding gifts for others. Any comments?

GREATLY DISAPPOINTED DEAR DISAPPOINTED:

There are those who give a wedding gift to express their love and friendship for the newlyweds. This is pure, unselfish giving when nothing is expected in return.

Then there are those who regard a wedding gift as fair exchange for an invitation to a wedding that includes food, drink, music, dancing and all the hoopla that costly weddings of-

Short Line Picked For Long Haul By Rail Operator

By Charles E. Debevec MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Jerry Ross started out 40 years ago heaving coal into a locomotive firebox. Then he ran the locomotive. Now he owns the train and the tracks it runs on.

"It's fun - if you don't run out of money," said Ross, 58, president of Dakota Rail, a line he started in 1982 with 38 miles of track in South Dakota. Later he picked up 44 miles of track in

Ross may not be Cornelius Vanderbilt, or even James J. Hill, the St. Paul railroad magnate of the 1800s known as the "Empire Builder," but he is enjoying himself getting his own small railroad

"It's an opportunity you don't get every day in your life," he said. "I know that the future is going to keep getting better." Dakota Rail, with headquarters in Hutchinson, Minn., about 60 miles west of Minneapolis, is a mom-and-pop-and-son railroad. Ross's wife.

Evelyn, is the secretary-treasurer. His son Michael, 31, is senior vice president. They have about a dozen employees who do everything from laying track to pulling switches to running the six 1950s-vintage locomotives.

Ross, who spent 35 years with the Milwaukee Road, said he became interested in owning a short-line railroad while trying to save his former employer, which went into bankruptcy and was bought by the Soo Line.

Ross said the 1980 Staggers Rail Act, which deregulated the industry, made it easier for short-line railroads to be created. The federal legislation allowed railroads to set their own freight rates and abandon unprofitable or marginal branch lines.

The result has been more than 125 new short-line companies that use about 10,000 miles of track that likely would have been little-used or abandoned by the major railways.

"We are one of the new breed of short-liners who started after the Staggers Rail Act came into effect." Ross said. "We got a lot of exemptions and help through deregulation."

Ross said Dakota Rail can survive as long as the government stays out of the way.

'If we don't get back to regulation, it's a growth industry and the curve is sharp. It's great," he said. "We'll be a benefit to the cities, the shippers and the industry."

Dakota Rail started with its Western Division line, which runs from Milbank to Sisseton in northeastern South Dakota. Ross and other partners - primarily grain elevator operators bought it from the old Milwaukee Road. The Little Crow Division, which runs from Wayzata on the western edge of the Twin Cities to Hutchinson in southern Minnesota, began operation in late 1985. Ross obtained the line from Burlington Northern Inc. He and his wife are sole owners. Ross said he will be getting out of the management of the South Dakota branch at the end of June, although he will retain a minority interest in it. He said the majority owners want to try running it themselves, and he and his family 'are agreeable to that."

"We are going to put all of our efforts into improving our Minnesota line," Ross said.

Ross, who declined to say how much profit he makes, obtained the Minnesota track on a five-year contract from Burlington Northern with little money up front. But he must come up with $2 million by 1990.

Nissan To Recall '87 Sports Cars

DETROIT (UPI) - Nissan Motor Co. U.S.A. Monday said it is voluntarily recalling 180,531 1979- through 1987-model 280ZX and 300ZX sports cars with automatic transmissions because of reports of unintended acceleration.

The Japanese carmaker said it will install a device to prevent the car from shifting into gear unless the brake pedal is applied.

The device, called a shift interlock system, is similar to the units German carmaker Audi is installing on nearly 250,000 1978-1986 5000 models. The Audi installations came after the U.S. government forced it to recall the vehicles following numerous reports of accidents, injuries and deaths resulting from unintended accelera-

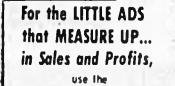

A Nissan spokesman said his company is aware of about 180 incidents involving runaway acceleration of the 280ZX and 300ZX cars, but he said he had no information on how many of these reports involved accidents or injuries. However, a spokesman for the Center for Auto Safety, a private consumer group in Washington, said that about 50 injuries and five deaths among 200 incidents have been caused by the condition and that Nissan is using a "failed fix" to try to remedy the problem.

"Nissan, whose Z cars have the second-highest sudden acceleration rate after Audi's 5000, is trying to play Audi's game of blaming its 1-in-650 accident rate on defective drivers," said Dan Howell of the center. "Nissan is copying Audi's copout that somehow, its Z car owners - unlike owners of other Nissans — can't tell their left foot from their right." Howell said Nissan should find the problem with the cars or buy them back from owners. "The shift lock is already a failed fix," he said. alleging more than 50 accidents have already occured in Audis equipped with the devices.

Nissan stressed that while investigations do not point to mechanical defects in the sporty cars, the device is being installed to "eliminate customers"

The installation, which takes about one hour, will be done free of charge at authorized Nissan dealers, the carmaker said.

Florida Probes Deaths In Delayed Treatment

LAUDERDALE (UPI) -Health officials are investigating the deaths of two people whose treatment was delayed because a lack of surgeons closed most Broward County emergency rooms, smarting from a malpractice insurance crisis.

Amy Jones, director of the state Department of Rehabilitative Services' Division of Licensure, said Monday she has asked for information on the deaths of the victims. taken to more distant hospitals because just three of 19 hospitals in the county provided emergency services during the Fourth of July holiday weekend.

"We're starting to look into it," Jones said. "We have no details. It is too early to tell what happened."

Jones said the department will discipline the hospitals if the investigation concludes inappropriate actions were taken.

On Monday, the number of hospitals offering emergency trauma care dropped to two when Hollywood Memorial Hospital's 11 general surgeons stopped answering emergency room calls.

Since June 29, many Broward County surgeons have removed themselves from emergency room rosters because they cannot afford malpractice insurance. St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co., a major provider of medical malpractice insurance in Florida, raised its premiums by nearly 43 percent in Broward and Dade countles last week.

Officials said they were not sure whether fuster treatment would have saved either victim.

A woman suffering from internal bleeding died at 3 p.m. Sunday on the 20-minute trip by ambulance from Florida Medical Center to the Broward General Medical Center emergency room.

"You can't say conclusively because she came here instead, she died. But I feel bad for the family," said a paramedic who would not give his name. "They'll be left wondering."

Thom Mayer, North Broward Hospital District emergency services director, said the extra travel time was not a factor in the woman's death.

DEAR READER - Our society is seeking solutions to an increasingly severe problem: infirm old people with no one to take care of them. To date, the solutions are elusive. Elderly, partially handicapped citizens live in one-room apartments on meager incomes, sometimes according to news reports resorting to eating pet food for nourishment. Similar patients, with no family, live in virtual isolation in the country, trying - with the help of friends like you - to keep going.

Most nursing homes have long waiting lists. Young people, for various valid reasons, often are 24 Request for not in a position to help their shut-in relatives. As people live 27 Phonograph inlonger, they need more help and support; yet we seem increasingly unable or unwilling to provide these services.

There are several resources you might investigate. To begin with, your friend's doctor may be of tremendous help. Ask him 40 Kidded or her to become involved. A nursing home sounds like a logical choice for your friend, and the doctor should be able to evaluate the situation and take charge of her medical care and probable placement in a facility where she can be taken care of.

Ask your town or municipal Social Service Department for assistance. Social workers are often invaluable in resolving situations like this, as well as obtaining state or federal funds if your friend needs financial assistance.

Finally, check with the Visiting Nurse Association in your 65 Bridge of San community. Visiting nurses are close to being saints, in my opinion, because they can coordinate a multitude of home services for the ciderly. These

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

The North American Open Pairs is a grueling event. Competitors play initially at the local bridge-club level, and those who qualify advance to their unit finals and then district finals.

Two or three pairs from each of the American Contract Bridge League's 24 districts then travel to the site of the spring North American Championships to play for all the marbles. Anywhere along the way, one bad session can send a competing pair to the showers. This year's winners were Denver experts Jan Janitschke and Dick Reed. So it boiled down to a club lead. But which club? When Jan decided to lead the club acc. he netted top score on the deal for his side. The choice of leads made a difference of seven tricks since a low club would allow declarer to win the singleton king in dummy, pick up the
