The meeting is open to the general public.

Bulk sales of popular drug

WASHINGTON — The Drug Enforcement Administration plans to ban bulk sales of a popular over-the-counter cold and allergy pill in a drive to keep people from converting it into illegal drugs.

The DEA plans to issue new regulations in Wednesday's Federal Register restricting sales of pseudoephedrine, spokeswoman Rogene Waite said Monday.

The new rules should not affect consumers who buy the pills generically or under brand names such as Sudafed.

"The consumer-type quantities for allergy and cold sufferers won't be affected at all," Waite said.

The DEA is hoping to stop criminals from converting the pills into an addictive drug called methamphetamine, also known as meth, speed or crank. During recent DEA raids, 38 percent of labs were found to be producing the drug, Waite said.

The drug is most popular in California but is spreading east, having already popped up in Arizona and Iowa, she said.

Until now, massive numbers of pills could be bought from wholesale distributors, retail stores or by mail order.

Under rules to take effect Oct. 7, consumers will only be able to buy a 244-day supply of the drug. Those who sell more must register with the DEA and keep records.

Joining fight against crime

Leave lights on tonight

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Though there are no official celebrations planned by Sanford's Citizens for Neighborhood Watch organization or the Sanford Police Department, tonight is nonetheless the National Night Out.

Began more than a decade ago, the Night Out celebration encourages people to turn on their porch lights and go out in the evening and meet their neighbors and to get to know their surroundings.

Often crimes are committed in plain sight of neighbors who don't know who lives in the house next door and don't know who belongs there and who doesn't.

The Night Out is designed to get neighbors to go out and meet those who live around them and to get to know them. In that way, they will be aware of who belongs at a particular residence and who does not.

In other communities, some neighborhoods choose to have block parties so neighbors can mingle and have a chance to chat and get to know one another. Other neighborhoods simply ask residents to turn on their porch lights and, perhaps, make a short swing around the area to greet those who

Neighbors' street patrol has curbed prostitution, drugs

SANFORD — Though they said they are not even aware of the "National Night Out," one group of Sanford residents is taking to the streets every night to help the police fight crime.

A neighborhood watch program formed in the downtown historic district has taken it upon themselves to patrol the streets looking for signs of prostitution or drug activity.

They are not a vigilante group, Bob Kuhn, one of the organizers of the group, said. "We take down plate numbers of cars we see involved in drug or prostitution activities," Kuhn noted. "We call the police and let them take care of things. Basically we are sick and tired of prostitutes and drug dealers occupying our neighborhood."

While the police "dropped the ball" when the group was first forming, he said, they have "responded fantastically" during the last two weeks since the patrols began.

According to Kuhn, volunteers who live in the area patrol the neighborhoods on foot or in their cars. Each group of patrolers has a cellular telephone and members call information into the police as they see it happening.

Mom arrested for leaving son

CHICAGO — A young mother is facing a charge of child endangerment because she left her 3-year-old son at Midway Airport and boarded a plane after being told the boy couldn't ride free on her lap.

Carmen Morales, 22, was on her way to Puerto Rico for a vacation with several other adults. She was taken from the plane at a stop in Orlando, Fla.

Morales believed that American Trans Air would allow the child to fly for free, something most airlines only allow for children 2 years old and younger, airline spokeswoman Mary Cochran said Monday.

When the mother did not have enough money for another ticket, she and her adult traveling companions gave the boy to an employee at an airport counter and asked her to call the boy's aunt, Cochran said.

The phone number turned out to be disconnected, and police were called. The boy, who was not harmed, was placed in state custody.

Morales was booked on the misdemeanor charge and released on her own recognizance after she arrived back in Chicago Sunday, police said.

Former top Dem headed to jail

FORT LAUDERDALE — The former Democratic chairman of Broward County, Russ Barakat, is headed for prison for 21 months for tax evasion.

Barakat quit his Democratic post in May. The party has scrambled to reorganize in a crucial political year when Broward will again be called on to deliver overwhelmingly for the Democrats.

Barakat, formerly director of the Broward County Housing Authority and chairman of the board of the Broward County Housing Finance Authority, was found guilty in May of filing a false tax return.

The case arose out of Barakat's receipt of about $10,000 from Benton and Co., a Knoxville, Tenn. brokerage firm, that was doing business with the Broward County Housing Finance Authority. Barakat paid the $3,254 in back taxes three days before his trial began.

Olympians honored at Disney

LAKE BUENA VISTA — Michael Johnson and other Olympic medal winners were in a motorcade got heroes' welcome at Disney World after the Olympics closed.

Thousands of Disney World visitors cheered and waved American flags as the athletes cruised by in a motorcade.

The medal winners, appearing at Disney-MGM Studios, were Michael Johnson, Dot Richardson, Gwen Torrence, Antonio Tarver and Rod White.

Johnson won the gold in the 200 meters and 400 meters in track and field. Richardson was the star of America's gold medal softball team. Torrence anchored the women's 400 meter relay team that won the gold.

Tarver, a light heavyweight boxer from Orlando, won bronze. White was on the American team that won a gold medal in archery.

Women lose sex suit

TALLAHASSEE — Two prison employees claimed in a $1.5 million lawsuit that they were forced to have sex with their boss, but a jury didn't believe them.

A jury of five women and one man took an hour Monday to decide against the plaintiffs, Connie Yon and Delores Bryant, who were suing the state.

They accused Steve Comerford of demanding sexual favors. He was fired by the Department of Corrections before the trial and now works as a corrections officer in Jackson County.

The 300-pound Comerford testified that the women consented to sex and that it had nothing to do with anyone's job.

As part of their suit, the women claimed corrections officials not only failed to act on complaints but sometimes took retaliatory measures. They noted that Comerford was fired after complaints were filed by Yon, Bryant and three other women. Eight women at two other prisons had also filed previous complaints.

Bryant, who sought $607,000 in the suit, now works as a corrections officer at another prison. Yon, who sought $904,000, is on unpaid medical leave.

Fla. to get some N.C. inmates

BUTNER, N.C. — Relatives of female inmates at a federal minimum security prison are worried about how moving the women to prisons in West Virginia and Florida will affect their families.

"Now the women will rarely see their children," said Diane Edwards of Carrboro. "How are poor families going to be able to go way out to West Virginia? It's hard enough for families from Winston-Salem and Greensboro."

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Radio, TV Marti begin to make a controversial move without money

By The Associated Press

MIAMI — Radio and TV Marti, the U.S. government's broadcasts to Cuba, have begun their controversial move to Miami even though Congress has yet approve money for the move, a newspaper reported today.

Two moving vans packed with furniture, potted plants, and even the status of Cuban patriot Jose Marti, from the Radio Marti office in Washington made their way to Miami last month. The Miami Herald reported today.

The relocation was approved in an appropriations bill last fall and signed by President Clinton but some administration officials have been caught off guard by the relocation. The reason: no money, no office space in Miami, and no plan.

Radio Marti is widely heard in Cuba but the TV Marti signal is jammed by the Cuban government, leading some to question its value.

Critics of the relocation claim Radio and TV Marti should be in Washington where it can reflect the voice of America, and not in Miami where they claim it would fall under the influence of Miami's Cuban exile community.

Cuban exiles in Miami pushed for the move, arguing the radio and TV stations would do well utilizing local contacts and talent.

Rolando Bonachea, the acting director of the Office of Cuba Broadcasting, has been at the forefront of the hasty relocation and has resettled in Miami.

"I look forward to seeing all of you in Miami in the near future," he said in a memorandum to the more than 200 Washington staffers he left behind. He declined an interview with the Herald.

Bonachea's efforts to move have raised questions among some lawmakers.

Rep. Harold Rogers, R-Ky., chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee that oversees funding for U.S. government broadcasting, last month demanded a plan and cost analysis prior to the move.

Rookin' in the water

Sanford Herald correspondent Jim Shupe was on a recent fishing trip when he spotted this little situation. The 25-foot center console boat was perched on top of the north jetties near Port Canaveral. The tide was dead low and the stranded craft was well out of the water. Perhaps the driver of the boat had tried to cut the corner a bit too early at high tide. A barge with a crane had to pluck the boat directly off the rocks later that day.

Jump in complaints may end town's midnight frog hunts

By PAULEY BOBBS
Associated Press Writer

FROG CITY, Fla. — Sour-smelling swamps, muggy nights and the jumpers that got away — hunting for frogs has been practically a rite of passage for boys growing up in the Everglades.

Frogers in airboats creep through the grassy swamps at night, shine a spotlight into the dark water, look for the frog's diamond-like eyes and pierce the jumper with a four-pronged spear.

"It's like poker," said 45-year-old Dan Zocco of Homestead. "It's been just an excuse for guys to get together and it used to be a lot of fun."

And tasty. Frog legs, which are often pan-fried and, some say, taste like chicken, are a delicacy around Frog City, about 30 miles west of Miami.

But now environmentalists want to slap a limit on how many frogs can be caught and ban airboats at night in national parks.

"Now they're throwing us out of our playground," Zocco complained.

Pig frogs, which can grow up to 1 1/2 feet long, are the prize of the swamp. Although the frogs aren't endangered, environmentalists say the air boats — flat-bottomed vessels that glide through the swamp by giant propeller engines — are damaging the marsh grass needed by other species.

Environmentalists have petitioned the National Park Service for a 50-frog-per-day limit and a ban on the boats from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m.

"These requests are not punitive in any way," said Don Berger, spokesman for the National Parks and Conservation Association, which filed the petition along with the Biodiversity Project. "The absence of regulation at this point is a concern to us."

The state doesn't limit the number of frogs that can be caught for personal consumption, but commercial frogging is illegal in Florida nature preserves.

"Many of them just say they were harvesting them for a Sunday barbecue," said Bill Carroll, chief ranger at the Everglades' Big Cypress National Preserve. "Obviously many of these guys are commercial froggers, but it's hard to prove in court."

The environmental groups said the Everglades yielded a bumper crop of pig frogs earlier this year when it reopened after being closed for two years because of high water. In February and March, more than six tons of frogs were taken from Big Cypress, they estimated.

The result, Berger said, was squashed marsh grass. Marsh grass sustains a long food chain in the Everglades, home to such species as the endangered Cape sabbie sparrow, the wood stork and the snail kite hawk.

"The park knew about the damage and did nothing to protect the resources," said Brian Hunt of the Florida Biodiversity project. "Now we're going over their head and asking Washington to enforce the regulations."

The park service hasn't said when it will decide on the request.

With rising costs of fuel and upkeep of their airboats, few froggers can make a living at it. Full-time froggers can make about $18,000 a year, and part-timers can pull in about $100 a week.

Most froggers say that they would agree to a limit but that a ban on night-time airboat operation would kill the sport.

Forgery charges added in coma-wedding plan

By The Associated Press

BRANDON — A man accused of trying to marry a comatose woman on her death bed is now charged with forging the 'her will' and naming himself the sole beneficiary of her $250,000 estate.

Robert H. Meier of Brandon was charged Monday with a count of organized fraud, two counts of exploitation of a disabled person, a count of grand theft and a count of forgery, a Hillsborough sheriff's report said.

Meier is accused of drafting a will for Constance Sewell while she was in a deep coma at Tampa General Hospital after suffering an aneurysm in January.

"The will was made up while she was in a coma," sheriff's Sgt. Mike Olson said. "She had absolutely nothing to do with it."

The will gave Meier ownership of Sewell's three homes and an airplane, among other items, Olson said.

Last week, Meier, 55, was charged with credit card fraud, grand theft, forgery and falsifying public records.

Crime boy

Notorious juvenile making progress at last chance ranch

By The Associated Press

VENUS, Fla. — A South Florida juvenile delinquent who had compiled such a criminal record by his 12th birthday that he became known as "Crime Boy" has a different image at The Last Chance Ranch.

Percy Campbell, now 16, is attentive and respectful and punctuates each sentence with "yes, ma'am" or "no, sir."

Philip Adams, the executive director of the Florida Environmental Institute, said he's never come across anyone with fewer skills and more potential.

"If only people could see him," Adams said. "He has a genuine willingness to accept what is being taught. Most kids push you away, put up a bunch of grief before accepting a new way of thinking. But Percy is tremendous."

Two years ago, Percy was in the Broward County Jail, a delinquent who had racked up 58 felonies.

The Florida Environmental Institute has him now. The institute runs the Last Chance Ranch deep in the backwoods of Central Florida. Percy will live at the 213-acre long-term correctional camp until he's 18.

In the last few years, Percy has grown 8 inches. He now stands 5 feet 9 inches and can bench-press 325 pounds easily. His shirts stay tucked in, pants stay hitched firmly about his waist. He looks people in the eye when he speaks and doesn't mumble. Only a trace of street vernacular peppers his speech.

When Percy was in third-grade, his mother went to prison for attempted murder and he was left with his maternal grandmother, who lives in a neighborhood just west of Fort Lauderdale rife with gun-toting drug dealers.

"No, ma'am, my mom wasn't there for me when I was growing up," Percy said. "I'm not mad at her. But she wasn't there."

Percy doesn't know who his father is.

By the time he was 12, he had evolved into a statewide symbol of what was wrong with the juvenile justice system. Two years later he pleaded guilty to another charge of home burglary and theft, accused with three other boys of stealing $6,000 worth of jewelry and stereo and fishing equipment.

He was booked as an adult into the main inmate population at the Broward County Jail and was looking at 15 years.

The public crowd. They wrote letters urging that Percy be put under the jail. They called radio talk shows to demand that the key to his cell be thrown away.

At The Last Chance Ranch, Percy and 18 other of some of the worst juveniles Florida has tend to horses and cows when they're not working toward high school equivalency degrees. The unruly ones find themselves digging tree stumps from sunset to sundown, rain or shine.

The institute doesn't take juveniles who don't want to come. But Percy's attitude still stands out.

"When I first met him, I'm saying, 'This is Crime Boy,'" said Richard Kingman, Percy's former ranch adviser. "I never had a kid who worked anywhere near as hard."

Kingman has watched Percy go from being barely literate, from slouching and rolling eyes in the classroom to enjoying reading, to taking charge of his life.

Al Milligan, an instructor at the program, said that if he had a son he would want him to be like Percy.

"They told me he was the worst kid in the program," Milligan said. "But when he comes to my house, he's a perfect gentleman. I love him."

Maxine Gilkes, the cook at the ranch, does her best to mother "her boys." She takes them to church and home for birthday parties.

"He was so bitter when he got here," Gilkes said. "It was him against the world. He hated just about everything that was right."

"He's better now, though," she said. "Changed. Not 100 percent. But more than halfway there."

Shine the light on crime

Is it because of apathy or are Sanford residents afraid to turn the lights on and take a stand against crime in their own backyards?

We have seen groups of marchers in at least two neighborhoods take a very visible stand against the drug trade in their neighborhoods, yet no one has taken the time to organize any community efforts to celebrate the National Night Out.

The National Night Out, sponsored by the Citizens for Neighborhood Watch programs across the country, encourages households to turn on their porch light to see their neighbors and to be seen. It encourages neighbors to get to know one another and to know who belongs in their neighborhood and who does not.

If someone who does not live in the neighborhood is spotted, residents know to call the police.

Sanford's Neighborhood Watch groups have chosen not to celebrate the event in any particular way. Only nightfall will tell if residents choose to shed a little light on the situation by flipping on their porch lights.

Lake Mary law enforcement officials complained they had no participation in their community because it is too hot to ask people to venture out of doors, even after dark, to meet their neighbors.

Chief Richard Beary noted that his department has plans to make sure that other educational programs continue through the summer and they are making plans for a Night Out kind of program during the cooler months.

We applaud Beary and his department for thinking ahead toward a possible alternative date for the kind of crime prevention program the National Night Out represents.

Perhaps Sanford should take a lesson from its neighbor.

Even if your neighborhood is not taking part in any official celebration, however, take a few moments to flip on your porch light this evening.

Let the criminals know you have seen the light and are ready to shine it on their work.

Campaign report

As an accountant and one who has served as a campaign treasurer on more than one occasion, I was astounded to read that Seminole County Sheriff candidate Joe Becker turned in a campaign treasurer's report with over 60 errors or violations. I can't imagine that there has ever been a worse report submitted under the serious and precise Election Laws of Florida. It's said that the abilities, attitude and integrity a candidate demonstrates during the campaign mirror the kind of public office holder that person would be. The most disturbing aspect here is that Becker personally certified that he had examined the report and that it was true, correct, and complete.
Sincerely,

Keep it clean

The property owners on the west side of Sanford pay taxes too. But we seem to get neglected in places getting cleaned up. There are piles of trash on parkways and sides of the roads. One back yard is so full-weeds and grass are so high. In one block there are 4 widow women on set incomes who keep their places up. One house has so much trash in the front and back yard till it could be a health hazard. Please city, can't you do something for us to help things be cleaner.

GOP moderates won't get Dole elected

Two roads diverged in a wood, And I, I chose the one less taken. And that has made all the difference. I am reminded of these familiar words of poet Robert Frost as I consider the choice that lies before Robert Dole: Will the Republican standardbearer cast his political lot with the party's so-called "moderates" or will he align himself with the party's conservatives?

Of course, Dole will insist that both moderates and conservatives are equally welcome in the Grand Old Party. And he'll repeat the Republican mantra that the party's "Big Tent" is spacious enough to accommodate pachyderms of all shapes, sizes and ideologies. But it's time Bob Dole got real. All he has to do is look at the election results of the past 16 years to realize that the party's moderate wing has not put one Republican president in the White House. Nor has it delivered either the Senate or House to Republican hands.

Indeed, it was the GOP's conservatives who put one of their own, Ronald Reagan, in the White House in 1980 and 1984. Who elevated Reagan's vice president, George Bush, to the Oval Office in 1988. Who placed Republicans in control of both houses of Congress in 1994.

Given this political record, one would think Dole would shape his campaign to appeal to conservatives. But, in fact, Dole has gone to great lengths to embrace his party's moderates, even at the risk of alienating himself from the very conservative constituencies that produced the Republican victories of the past 16 years.

Take the abortion issue. Since 1980, the Republican Party platform has enunciated a conservative pro-life position. And it didn't prevent Reagan or Bush from winning land-slides in 1980, 1984 and 1988. In 1996, however, the GOP's moderates have persuaded Dole that the abortion language in the party platform needs to be toned down.

And even though Dole has acquiesced, signing off on a platform that expresses "tolerance" toward abortion-rights Republicans, moderate Republicans like Pete Wilson are urging him to go even further, to change the party's official position from pro-life to pro-abortion-on-demand.

It's the same thing on the gun issue. The Republican Party has consistently championed the Second Amendment right of citizens to "keep and bear arms." Yet, GOP moderates have persuaded Dole that he should reverse his previous opposition to ineffectual gun-control measures like the Democrat-passed assault-weapons ban.

The moderates suggest that Dole will win votes by divorcing himself from conservative groups like the Christian Coalition and the National Rifle Association. But the Christian Coalition is 1.7 million members strong, and the NRA 2.5 million members strong. And they have proven their loyalty to the Republicans over the past 16 years.

The abortion-on-demand crowd and gun-control clique have been in the Democratic camp for the past 16 years. And no matter how much Dole tacks to the left on abortion and guns, they are going to vote for his Democratic opponent this fall.

Dole will make the mistake of his political lifetime if he allows his party's moderates to transmute him into a Republican clone of Bill Clinton. If the voters perceive no clear ideological difference between the Democratic incumbent and his Republican challenger, they'll give the benefit of the doubt to the guy who is already sitting in the Oval Office.

MORTON KONDRACKE

Two chances to close poll gap

It's not unheard of for a presidential candidate to close a 20-point deficit through great campaigning and some luck, but Bob Dole's chances of doing so are becoming increasingly thin.

Dole's economic package, representing an election year conversion to supply-side economics, earned him far less than the perfect score he needed for that event. Now he has got to name a winner of a vice presidential running mate and then deliver the speech of his life at the Republican National Convention.

The economic proposal not only opened Dole up to charges that he has abandoned a lifetime record as an honest deficit-cutter, but its timing couldn't have been worse, following recent government reports that the U.S. economy grew by a stunning 4.2 percent in the second quarter of the year.

It's hard to see, too, how Dole can stun the nation with his vice presidential selection, although he may choose someone other than those on his lengthening "short list" of prospects, perhaps former Defense Secretary Don Rumsfeld.

The GOP convention does offer an opportunity for Dole to convince voters that he represents the future of America and not simply the past.

After an uplifting opening night climaxed by a speech by retired Gen. Colin Powell, Republicans plan to slam Clinton using videotapes of his own embarrassing statements that will be shown on monitors around the convention hall and, of course, on national TV.

And campaign aides say that expectations are so low for Dole's acceptance speech - based on his weak past oratorical performances - that he may be able to vastly exceed them, as Gerald Ford did in 1976 and George Bush did in 1988 in the model GOP comebacks that Dole is hoping to duplicate.

Ford trailed challenger Jimmy Carter by 33 points, 62 to 29 percent, when the Democratic convention ended in July 1976, according to the Gallup poll. Ford was still 25 points behind, 57 to 32 percent, when the Republican convention began, and was 13 points down when it ended. And then, despite his debate gaffe in declaring Communist Poland free, Ford still lost the election by only 2 points, 50 to 48 percent.

In 1988, Michael Dukakis led Bush by 17 points, 54 to 37 percent, after the Democratic convention. Thanks to a heavy barrage of negative fire against Dukakis, Bush was down by just 7 points, 49 to 42 percent, prior to the GOP convention. After it, Bush was up 46 to 44 percent and went on to win 53 to 46 percent.

In 1992, moreover, Clinton headed into New York trailing Bush by 8 points, 48 to 40 percent, and emerged with a 56 to 34 percent lead, a 30-point switch. The GOP convention closed the Clinton advantage to 9, and he ended up winning, of course, 43 to 38 percent.

Right now, Gallup shows Dole behind 57 to 39 percent, with the numbers little changed since Dole left the Senate in June.

In the Pew Research Center poll, Clinton's lead is 11 points, 53-42, but other data demonstrate what trouble Dole is in. When 800 voters were asked what one word best describes each candidate, 33 respondents said of Clinton, "good," 18 said "OK," 14 said "trying," 13 "intelligent" and 11 "great."

On the negative side, 17 said "bar," 20 "wishy-washy," and 11 "slick." But when asked about Dole, an astounding 118 said "old," followed by only 17 who said "good" and 17 "conservative."

These are clearly perception handicaps that Dole must make up. Dole occasionally has shown the ability to stay on message and deliver an adequate speech, but his insistence that tobacco is not addictive is roughly in parallel to Ford's refusal to admit that Poland was under foreign domination.

Dole's economic package does not seem likely to erase voter doubts about the GOP candidate. Even before it was issued, the White House was attacking it as "deja voodoo," a clever label meant to remind people of Dole's record as a critic of tax cuts as a stimulant for economic growth - and the fact that the candidate is harkening back to a bygone era, namely, the presidency of that other septuagenarian, Ronald Reagan.

On the search for a vice president, some advisers think that Dole's adding new names to his "short list" is party politics and partly a demonstration of dissatisfaction with those on it.

These advisers think that Rumsfeld has a chance - even though he hasn't held office since 1976 and failed as a presidential candidate in 1988 - because he would have "instant credibility" as a potential president and because he's been the successful CEO of two large corporations. He's also from Illinois, a key electoral vote state.

Can Dole turn this potential rout into a contest? Let's hope so. The country deserves a serious debate about its future.

Bob Dole's chances of doing so are becoming increasingly thin.

SARA ECKEL

It's Round No. 2 for suffragettes

For reasons unfathomable to anyone but themselves, some members of the U.S. House of Representatives are hellbent on denying a small but symbolic victory to American women.

After all the fights on abortion and affirmative action. After all the struggles on welfare, gun control and the minimum wage. And certainly after all the talk about the gender gap, you would think House Republicans would be eager for a freebie.

And that's exactly what the proposal to move a statue of three suffragettes is. The statue - which bears the likenesses of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Susan B. Anthony and Lucretia Mott - was given to the U.S. government 75 years ago, shortly after women gained the right to vote. However, the marble bust was soon banished to the Capitol's basement, where it has languished ever since.

Last summer, members of the Senate voted unanimously to move the statue to the Capitol's Rotunda, which houses 11 statues of great men such as George Washington, Abe Lincoln, Roger Williams and Martin Luther King, Jr. The hope was that the House would affirm the measure in time for the 75th anniversary of women's suffrage, last Aug. 28. But the anniversary came and went - marked by a bitter-sweet celebration in the Capitol basement - while the proposal collected dust on Speaker Gingrich's desk.

"I guess they just thought we'd go away," says Karen Stacer of the Women's Suffrage Statue Campaign.

But the issue did not go away. Press attention and public awareness of the statue put pressure on the speaker and his cohorts.

That's when they started rolling out the excuses.

It's too heavy, was the first one. So Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, ordered an engineering report, which found that the base of the statue could be replaced to make it an acceptable weight.

It lacks artistic and historic merit, they said on the next go-round. The "artistic merit" argument was expected - that's the time-honored excuse that was used to put off the Statue of Liberty. (Congress delayed Lady Liberty's rise for eight years, in deference to the millioinaires who didn't want this freedom-for-huddled-masses idea carried too far.) But historic merit? The women who won the right to vote for half the population lack historical significance? Excuse me?

Finally, they pulled out what they thought was the trump card: it's too expensive.

Never mind that contractors had already volunteered to donate labor costs. Never mind that Capitol Preservation Commission had $27 million in privately raised funds for such projects. Three Republican good girls - Sue Myrick of North Carolina, Helen Chesoweth of Idaho and Linda Smith of Washington - blocked the measure, explaining that they could not abide the use of public funds for the project.

The Women's Suffrage Statue Campaign didn't feel like arguing. "We knew that money was not the issue," says Stacer.

So the statue campaign set out to raise the $75,000 needed for the project by asking Americans to send in $1 each. This is another thing that the suffrage statue has in common with the Statue of Liberty, which was erected in part on the dimes and nickels of schoolchildren, who sent in money after Congress refused to fund it.

But the issue did not go away. Press attention and public awareness of the statue put pressure on the speaker and his cohorts.

Fans rock on with Elvis and the Beatles at benefit concert

By JEFF BERLINCKE
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — For one night, it was 1973 all over again in Sanford. The stadium was transformed into a Las Vegas lounge and Elvis was still alive and in person.

Actually it was Lake Mary's Jack Elton, probably the premier Elvis performer in the world and Sanford Memorial Stadium was host to its first concert in years as Elton and Let It Be, a Beatles cover group, entertained the crowd for over three hours.

Tickets for the event went to benefit the American Legion's and city of Sanford's youth athletic programs. Some of the funds are expected to go to refurbish the stadium, once host to baseball legends such as Willie Mays and Jackie Robinson, and more recently the site of high school and youth activities.

Besides the music fans were treated to a display of vintage cars.

Let It Be, a band based in Miami came on stage around 8 p.m. as the glaring need for lighting began to surface but the band didn't disappoint. They flew in from Nova Scotia for the event and were dressed in 1964 Beatles regalia. With mop-tops and black suits and a dead-on impersonation of Ringo, the group started with "I Want to Hold Your Hand," and played for nearly an hour, covering Beatles tunes from the "pre-psychedelic era" although the band's repertoire consists of the later tunes as well.

After struggling with the sound for a few songs, Let It Be moved into high gear and the crowd joined in, moving to a boarded area in front of the stage to dance the night away.

After the hour, the crowd of several thousand settled back to wait for the main attraction as members of the youth athletics league offered candy, hot dogs, soft drinks and other snacks. The mood was friendly and upbeat and there wasn't a single skirmish the entire evening as Sanford came out to support its community.

Finally, at around 9:30 p.m., police sirens were being sounded and a huge stretch limo came around the field and, as the band struck up the theme to 2001: Space Odyssey, Elvis entered the building to loud applause and a few Happy Birthday signs (Elton added another year to-day).

With a shaking left knee that didn't stop all night, Elvis ripped into "Burning Love" and rarely slowed down except for when he moved the crowd with a ballad such as "My Way."

It didn't take long for the crowd to rush near the stage as Elvis handed out sweat-soaked scarves one after another. After about an hour-and-a-half, the night was over with "I Can't Help Falling In Love With You," and "American Trilogy."

There were only a few flaws in the evening. For one, there was no lighting except from the stage. After the show, the stage lights were shined on the parking lot which was nearly pitch black without them. The sound system took a while to get going at first but the support, especially for a youth event on a Monday night with schools in session was strong.

Next up for Sanford: town officials hope to have a Jerry Lee Lewis (the real one) sometime soon.

Beatles impersonators Let It Be light up the stage at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

Patrol

Many of the cellular phones were donated to the cause and they are hoping to have identifying T-shirts made up for the patrol groups.

Residents are reporting a drop in the number of prostitutes and drug dealers they see on the streets as a result of their efforts, but they don't intend to let up on the patrols.

"We are not giving up on this one," Kuhn promised. "We love our neighborhood and we will do whatever we can to make sure that we don't turn our back on the things that are happening here. We've been turning our back on the drugs and the prostitution for too many years. We're not going to keep doing that. We are determined to make a difference."

The neighborhood watch group will meet tonight as they do every Tuesday night at 6:30 p.m. at the Diamond Glass Company, 305 Palmetto Ave. in Sanford. Currently, they have 40 active members, but they hope those numbers will swell into the hundreds as the news of their successes spreads.

"Let's go on the offensive for a change," Kuhn said, "and show the criminals that this is our city and we care enough to provide for its future."

Cops seek suspect in fondling incident

From staff reports

SANFORD — The Seminole County sheriff's Major Crimes Section has released a sketch of the suspect responsible for breaking into a home near Sanford and allegedly fondling an eight-year-old girl.

According to sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, two separate incidents apparently involving the same suspect have occurred. The first was Thursday, July 18, at a residence on Salsuma Drive in the Ravenna Park area west of Sanford.

McDonough said during the first incident, the girl woke in the early morning hours to find two men standing over her bed. Both were reportedly touching her.

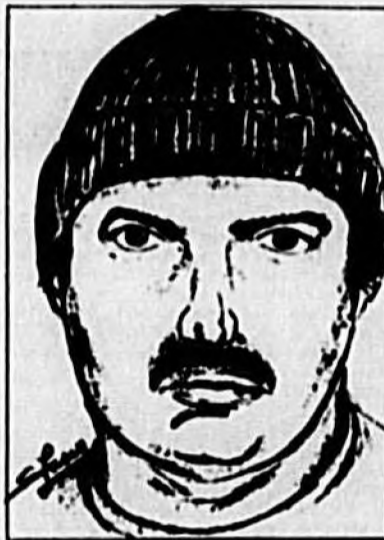

The girl's mother did not report the incident however, because she thought her daughter may have been dreaming, McDonough said.

However, shortly after 2 a.m. Thursday, August 1, a second incident occurred at the same residence. This time it was one man rather than two. Once again, McDonough said, the girl awoke to find a man standing over her bed. The girl's mother also saw the suspect standing outside the sliding glass door that leads to the screened-in patio. He reportedly ran when the woman screamed.

The suspect is said to be a white male, 30 years of age, five feet eight inches tall and weighing 170 pounds. "He reportedly had a tan complexion, brown hair, and a mustache.

He was said to be wearing a blue hooded sweatshirt, dark pants, a dark-colored knit cap and white socks over his hands. He also had several scratches on his face.

A sketch of the second suspect in the first case was not released.

Anyone having any information regarding the identity of this person is urged to contact the sheriff's office at 330-8880.

district along 13th Street shouting their anti-drug slogans.

Marching alongside the residents were members of the Sanford Police Department QUAD Squad.

Officers Chuck Lecher, Mike Pitt and Mark Mitchell work in the community every day, fighting the drug trade and working with community members to make the neighborhood a safe and desirable one. When the community comes together to make a statement against drugs, the officers are behind them 100 percent.

"They are finally getting fed up with what is happening in their neighborhood," Community Resource Officer Aaron

Keith, who marched along the route, said. "They are coming together to help us help them get rid of the drugs in their neighborhood."

While the drug trade has thrived in some of Sanford's neighborhoods such as Goldsboro and Lockhart, the legitimate trade and the residents have suffered great losses.

"They've just said they've had enough," Keith said.

Friday night's protest began at the West Sanford Boys and Girls Club on Peralmon Street, worked its way south to 13th Street, east to Lake Avenue and back to the Boys and Girls Club.

Officers spoke to the protesters, asking them to take the time to report any time they witnessed any drug-related or suspicious activity. A special telephone number (782-3721) has been set up to handle all such calls. Anonymity is guaranteed by the police. They don't want your name or number, they merely want as much information as they can gather on the drug dealers and purchasers.

More marches are planned for other areas around Sanford and elsewhere in Seminole County.

The Seminole Hope Neighborhood Advisory Council, with neighborhood membership in Goldsboro, Lockhart, Midway, Bookertown, Winwood, Georgetown and Oviedo, is looking for more community involvement and invites anyone to join in the marches and other activities.

how the zoo was one of the local recipients of assistance to be given by CBIS at its new location. Others included the local United Way, the Hispanic Scholarship Program, Valencia Community College, and the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Also on hand during the pre-ribbon cutting festivities, were several persons who are active candidates for election in Seminole County. Many of them spent their time shaking hands and talking with other dignitaries.

Orr explained that CBIS has been in Central Florida for many years, starting with 200 employees. "Now," he said, "from this new facility, we have over 750 employees, and we are turning out over 12 million billings per month."

CBIS new location serves as a data center for the communications industry. According to Public Relations Manager John Pratt, "the purpose of CBIS's new state-of-the-art center is to provide the infrastructure, processes, methods and resources necessary to deliver customer care and billing services that exceed client needs."

He said the new facility can process over one billion instructions per second, can store nearly seven trillion bytes of online data on disk, 50 trillion in its robotic tape silos and over 600 trillion in its tape library.

The ribbon cutting event got under way with an open reception at a large tent next to the CBIS entrance at approximately 8:30 Monday morning. Lt. Governor MacKay was to be on hand for the opening at 9 a.m., but because of a traffic standstill on Interstate-4 which lasted for a considerable length of time, MacKay was delayed, and the event did not begin until after 9:30.

In his remarks, MacKay commented how the new business will be good not only for Seminole County and Central Florida, but the entire state. "This is the type of business we live around them.

According to Sgt. Aaron Keith of the Sanford Police Department who oversees the struggling Neighborhood Watch programs in Sanford, there are no official plans anywhere in town for the nationally-celebrated event.

"But we hope people will remember to turn on their lights," Keith said.

The Neighborhood Watch programs that are strong in other areas are just beginning to want," MacKay said, "and it's companies such as this which will place Seminole County and this area of Central Florida in the forefront of our state's economy."

After a large ribbon was cut by MacKay and Orr, spectators were invited to another tent, larger, completely enclosed, and air conditioned, where they were treated to a brunch.

In addition to the construction of the new facility in the Heathrow area, Orr also observed that with the equipment contained in the new complex, the facility overall represents an investment of over $80 million in facilities and technology.

capture the attention of Sanford residents.

Neighborhood Watch involves the area residents in forming a partnership with law enforcement to take control of neighborhoods and drive out the criminal element.

Keith said he believes that in time the Neighborhood Watch program in Sanford will be stronger and will make an impact on crime prevention in the city's neighborhoods.

Lake Mary attorney comfortable with Economic Incentive Program

By NICK PFERPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The attorney for Lake Mary told commissioners a program questioned for its legality by one of them is constitutional.

At a city commission meeting in early July, Lake Mary Commissioner Sheila Sawyer spoke out on what she saw as a problem in the financial operation of her city. The complaint centered on the Economic Incentive Program, in which government pays businesses to locate in the area.

Sawyer questioned if it was even necessary, if it violates the Florida Constitution, and if it could lead to legal ramifications.

Sawyer had also suggested that she feels taxpayer money should be spent on more important priorities in Lake Mary, and if it were continued, might also be considered to assist smaller businesses.

As a result of Sawyer's objection to the program, the city instructed City Attorney Donna McIntosh to look into the situation and report back to the full body.

McIntosh this past week told commissioners that she could find no violation of any laws or anything which may appear unconstitutional. "In checking on this," McIntosh said, "I feel comfortable with what the city has done."

She said she had also reviewed the Economic Incentive Program which is operated by Seminole County, and also felt comfortable with it.

The program is not for all levels of new business and industry. A company applying to the city for the financial assistance must create at least 100 new full-time jobs in the city within the next five years and maintain them for a minimum of two years.

The business must also provide annual average wages of the employees, at a level of 110 percent of the current average in the county. It must also make a taxable capital investment with the city of at least $5 million during the first five years.

The Seminole County Economic Incentive Program is credited heavily with helping bring CBIS, Cincinnati Bell Information Systems into the area. CBIS held its grand opening Monday, just north of the Lake Mary City Limits. During his introductory remarks, CBIS's CEO said it was one of the big reasons the multi-million dollar firm elected to move into the area.

Regarding jobs, it has already expanded from a previous employment of 300 to over 750.

Following McIntosh's explanation of her study of the program, Sawyer observed, "I still have problems with it and I plan to remain cautious over it. But I feel confident in Donna's (McIntosh) support of the program."

At the present time, Lake Mary is only involved in two Economic Incentive programs, with AT&T and BellSouth. AT&T received $731,000 while BellSouth received $800,000. In both cases the money was given by Seminole County, to be repaid over the next five years.

Bullets re-sign Howard, await arbitration resolution

By MARY BOYLE
 Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE — This is one basketball game that will be decided in a court, not on one.

Less than a week after the NBA rejected his seven-year, $100 million deal with the Miami Heat, free agent Juwan Howard has re-signed with his old team, the Washington Bullets.

The Bullets inked Howard to a seven-year deal Monday after agreeing to forfeit their first-round selection in next year's college draft. Terms of the pact were not disclosed, but The Baltimore Sun reported in today's editions that it was worth $98 million.

Case closed? Not so fast.

Both the Bullets and the NBA said the deal is contingent on a judicial decision, expected later this month.

"The Howard-Washington contract is subject to the terms of the injunction issued by a state court judge in Florida, to the extent those terms are valid and binding," the NBA said in a statement.

The mess began after Howard turned down a reported $90 million offer by the Bullets in mid-July and signed with Miami. The NBA rejected the Miami deal last Wednesday, saying the Heat exceeded the league's salary cap by agreeing to pay Howard $9 million next season.

Last Friday, the Heat went to court in Florida, challenging the NBA's decision. Dale County Circuit Judge Joseph Farina issued a temporary injunction prohibiting Howard and the NBA from entering into and/or approving an NBA contract until arbitrators settled the dispute over his contract.

When it was announced last month that Howard had reached agreement with Miami, the Bullets returned their rights to the 6-foot-9 forward, who spent his first two NBA seasons with Washington. But after disapproving the Miami contract, commissioner David Stern determined that Washington was eligible to reacquire Howard's rights, the NBA said in a statement released Monday night.

However, since Washington had engaged in a number of other player transactions after renouncing the rights to Howard, Stern concluded that the Bullets must forfeit their 1997 first-round draft choice if they wished to sign Howard, who finished 10th in the NBA in scoring last season with a 22.1 average.

Howard had nothing to say about the deal. But Bullets spokesman Doug Hicks said Monday that the team held no grudge against him for leaving and then coming home.

Volunteer of the Week

Aide makes volunteering a breeze

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Staff Writer

WINTER SPRINGS — Diana Merkt makes the art of volunteering with numerous organizations look like a breeze. Her many efforts have affected lives in a positive way from Seminole County, Orange County and beyond.

Through her employment with the Seminole County Government as an administrative assistant for Commissioner Randy Morris, Merkt has been afforded the opportunity to see the many programs in need of assistance. This information has aided her in becoming aware of where the needs are and how they can be met.

Since she was a teen-ager, Merkt has labored as a volunteer from her "candy stripper" days at a military hospital to a Teen Club Babysitting Service, Teen Assist Convalescent Hospital Visitations, ElderHelp, Navy Relief Thrift Shop, the Spouse Abuse Hotline, Navy Relief Society Budget Counseling and Navy Ombudsman Program.

Obviously, the military (Navy and Army) has played a large part in her life. She spent the first 24 years of her life traveling the globe with her Army father and later with her Navy husband. The life experiences left her comfortable with interacting with a wide range of people.

She credits her interest in volunteering to her mother, Elizabeth Harper. "She has been my inspiration, role model and mentor," said Merkt. "She works with the Friends of the Library Bookstore in Casselberry, which I am also involved with. She's helped me see the value of volunteering."

Merkt serves on the Parish

Diane Merkt with her boss, Seminole County Commissioner Randy Morris, in his office at the County Services building.

Council, Liturgy Committee and three choirs at her church, St. Augustine in Casselberry. She also became active with Habitat for Humanity through her congregation. "When my church was building a Habitat house, I was the volunteer coordinator for six months," she said.

Other endeavors include a spot on the board of directors for the Good Samaritan Home, and assistance "on and off" with the Rescue Outreach Mission. She has also been a participant with the Crop Walk at Cranes Roost and the AIDS Walk in Orlando. She serves on the advisory board with the Missing Children's Center and regularly attends the candlelight ceremony every year in May to remember these missing children.

Occasionally, Merkt is asked to sing for Habitat. She added that it may be a 20-hour commitment "every couple of months." She presently has become very involved with the Serenity House work and an HIV/AIDS ministry.

"Pastor Jack Flynn is another active participant in the AIDS ministry," said Merkt. "I've been working in the ministry about three years. I went through training with the Catholic Diocese in Orlando. I took training at the Hope and Health Center in Winter Park too. It's a service agency that works with families in the metro-Orlando area. I serve on the volunteer committee and work with the Buddy Program."

Merkt explained that within the "Buddy Program" individuals are "buddied with someone that is HIV positive." The volunteers are there for those suffering to provide emotional support, a listening ear and a shoulder to cry on at times. She added, "The bottom line is that no one should have to suffer the ravages of this disease. We just let them know that someone cares. Laughter works and it helps. It's a healing element. They just need to be loved."

Serenity House, a children's AIDS center, assists over 100 children and infant clients, according to Merkt. "It's a wonderful resource for these children," she said. "Some are orphaned. The center helps those that are affected and infected with the AIDS virus. We sometimes make hospital visits or home visits depending on the need."

Last but not least, Merkt also works often with WMFE's audio reading service as well as Radiohouse of Seminole, Inc. She assists both organizations in whatever means possible. Modestly, Merkt shared that her fellow employees recently nominated her for Volunteer of the Year. Obviously this is a well-deserved appointment.

Merkt has two children, Michael and Elisabeth. She has been a Winter Springs resident for five years, but lived in the Seminole County area "on and off" since 1970.

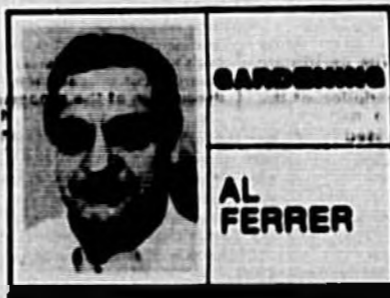

For information on volunteering in the above-mentioned and other organizations, call Merkt at the office of Commissioner Randy Morris.

Are spiders your friends or foes?

Contrary to popular belief, all spiders are beneficial because they are good predators of insects and other small bugs. Almost all spiders possess venom, but only a few are considered dangerous to humans. Some spiders trap their victims with a web, while others rely on their hunting ability to obtain their food.

Most people associate spiders with poisonous creatures, but in reality only two spiders can cause a serious injury to men in Florida, the widow spider, and the brown recluse spider. The widow spiders are found mainly outdoors in protected cavities and around trees. When widows are found around the home, they are usually inside gas and electric meter boxes, furniture and other protected areas.

House spiders: Several species of spiders live in or around our houses. Many of them construct webs which make them a nuisance to homeowners. The southern house spider is very common in Florida and the makes are often mistaken for the brown recluse, but they are really harmless.

Southern black widow: This spider is the most widely distributed widow spider in Florida. It is easily distinguished by its glossy black color and a distinct red hourglass marking on the underside of the abdomen. Their size is about 1 1/2 inches long with legs extended. Females lay about 250 eggs in an egg sac which is pear-shaped, measuring about 1/2 to 5/8 inches in diameter. The eggs hatch in 20 days and remain in the egg sac from 4 to 30 days. Females are known to eat the males after mating. They are found outdoors under rocks, boards, and frequently around old buildings.

Northern black widow: This spider is similar in appearance to the southern black widow, but has two red triangles resembling an hourglass, and a row of red spots on top of the abdomen. This species is found west of Tallahassee, mainly in forests where it produces its webs three to 30 feet above the ground.

Red widow: This spider can be recognized by its reddish-orange head, thorax and legs but with a black abdomen. The top of the abdomen usually has a row of red spots with yellow borders. The markings on the underside of the abdomen are usually one or two small red spots, lacking the characteristic hourglass marking. This spider is found mainly in sand-pine scrub habitats in central and southeast Florida.

Brown widow: This spider varies in color from light gray to light brown to black. The abdomen has variable markings of black, white, red and yellow. The underside of the abdomen has an orange or yellow hourglass. It is often found south of Daytona Beach along the coast, and is also common in orange groves. It usually makes its web on buildings in well-lit areas.

Brown recluse: This spider can be easily recognized by the distinctive dark violin-shaped mark located on the head and thorax. This spider is light tan to deep reddish brown in color, and measures about 1/4 to 1/2 inches in length. It has three pairs of eyes arranged in a semi-circle on the forehead of the head (most spiders have four pairs of eyes).

They can be found inside the homes in bathrooms, bedrooms, closets, garages, under furniture, behind baseboards and crevices. The bite produced by this spider can produce fever, chills, nausea, weakness and joint pain. A blister arises at the site of the bite followed by inflammation. The venom usually kills the affected tissue, leaving a sunken sore. Healing may take as long as six to eight weeks, and the scars might require plastic surgery.

Control: Sprays containing pyrethrin or pyrethroids are very effective to control spiders. Dust formulations containing diazinon or dursban can be used in crawl spaces, attics, and utility areas.

Coed educated in addiction

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 21-year-old college student with a lot of ambitions. I don't smoke, drink or use any drugs. My boyfriend, "John," is 18. We've been together for 2 1/2 years and are very happy. We plan to be married someday. He's my best friend.

The problem is that he smokes pot almost daily, and he drinks occasionally, too. I knew he did this when we got together. In fact, I did it too, but I stopped. This really bothers me because he often puts me second to going out to party with his friends.

When I talk to him about it, John thinks I'm overreacting. I also worry about him because his father is an alcoholic, even though John didn't grow up in that environment and swears he won't screw up his life like his father did. I am beginning to wonder how much control he has over his lifestyle.

I'm very much in love with John and want to spend the rest of my life with him. Do you think this is just a phase that he'll grow out of? I don't know what to do. Please help me.

tion and/or referral to your local help agency.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was ill for many years, but we maintained a large circle of social and professional friends until his death. We were happily married for 58 years and four months.

Now I find myself addressed as "Mrs. Mae Jones" or "Mae Jones." This happens even when I receive mail from family members. My legal signature has not changed, and I'd still prefer to be known socially and professionally as "Mrs. William C. Jones."

I'm sure that many other widows besides me would appreciate guidance in this delicate area, since so many people make this frustrating mistake.

WILLIAM'S WIDOW
IN MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR W.W.: I have mentioned this in my column before, but here's the answer. Photocopy this item and send it to the publishers with a courteous note.

Only divorced women are addressed as "Mrs." followed by their first name. A widow keeps her husband's name until she remarries.

DEAR SAD: The fact that your boyfriend prefers to party with his friends rather than go out with you speaks volumes. It says that he cares more about his friends and his drugs than he does you, and indicates how immature he is.

Is cerebellar degeneration curable?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My father suffers from cerebellar degeneration. Two neurologists say there is no cure, and, worse yet, no medicine can help him. He falls constantly and is now totally dependent on a walker. It's frustrating for him, as well as for the rest of the family.

DEAR READER: The cerebellum is the part of the brain that controls coordination. Therefore, when it becomes diseased, patients experience progressive difficulty with balance and movement, leading to ataxia (impaired walking).

Cerebellar degeneration can be the result of many disorders, including alcoholism, tumors, multiple sclerosis, thyroid disease, stroke, or brain hemorrhage. In adults, certain malignancies in other parts of the body may lead to cerebellar degeneration. Some forms of the disorder appear and progress without any recognizable cause.

If your father's neurologists, using tests such as MRI, have failed to identify a treatable disease causing the degeneration, I'm afraid that his prognosis is very unfavorable. Eventually, he will lose the power of speech and independent movement. This will require residence in a skilled nursing facility, where he will need help with his everyday activities of living.

Unfortunately, cerebellar degeneration is one of those diseases for which medical science has yet to discover a treatment and cure.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "What You Should Know About Nursing Homes." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10154. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My nose is constantly itchy and running. I sneeze and gag from phlegm all the time. I've been tested for allergies and don't appear to have any. The only thing that helps is Drixoral every other day, but the side effects are bitter taste and bad breath. What could my problem be?

DEAR READER: Your upper respiratory tract is obviously reacting to some substance in your environment. An allergy to pollens from trees, grasses and flowers is high on the list, but you have tested negative to them. Therefore, you'll have to investigate further.

Other possibilities include dust, air pollution, tobacco smoke, certain foods, animal dander, industrial fumes, and vapors from building materials (such as urethane foam). You and your allergist have your work cut out, but with patience and perse-

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR READER: The combination of tinnitus (ringing in the ears) and visual difficulties suggests that your brother is suffering from damage to the nerves of hearing and sight. This could be caused by a tumor or an arterial blockage. In my opinion, he should be examined by an ear-nose-and-throat specialist and, perhaps, undergo a CT scan or MRI to identify the basis of the problem.

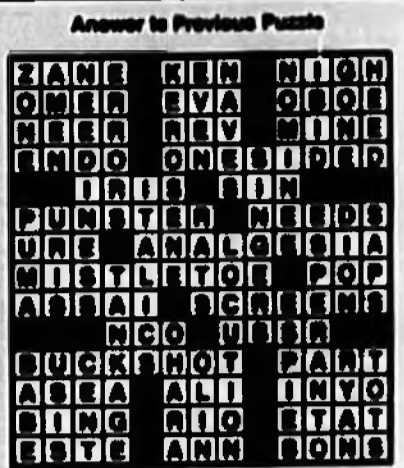

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Ear Infections and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10154. Be sure to mention the title.

Ministerial skill

By Phillip Alder

Last May we went to see the so-called Ice Maiden, the young Peruvian girl who was mummified and buried in ice after being made a human sacrifice some 500 years ago. She was fascinating, but more interesting was the Mongolian exhibition, also at the National Geographic Museum in Washington, D.C. We learned a lot, including that it is thought the correct pronunciation isn't Ghengis Khan but Chinggis Khan.

Did you know that Mongolia even has a stock market? It began trading in the capital, Ulan Bator, last August. On the first day, there were bids on 430 stocks and trading in 16, with a turnover worth 2.2 million tugriks, or $4,850.

Do they play bridge in Mongolia? Not to my knowledge. But they certainly do to the south, in China, where many leading politicians have been competitors. While in Beijing for the world championships last year, I played in a match between a team that included Ding Guangen, the Minister of Information, and five British-born journalists. Ding played extremely well, earning a slam won on this deal.

Leading the diamond ace would have killed the contract, but West opted for the spade five. Ding made short work of the play. After winning with the spade ace, Ding correctly drew only one round of trumps before unblocking his two heart honors. A trump over to the dummy permitted declarer to discard his diamond on the heart ace. Ding gave up a spade and claimed the remainder on a crossruff.

In the other room, North-South stopped in three no-trump, so the Chinese gained 13 international matchpoints en route to victory.

Greater self-reliance is indicated for the year ahead. You will tend for yourself successfully in situations in which you used to depend on others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You won't get much sympathy today if you paint yourself into a corner and try to blame someone else for your mistake. Leo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and $ASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In a competitive, fun activity with friends today, the final score must not take precedence over your relationship with a friend. Try to be a good sport.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You can fulfill your ambitions today, provided that what you hope to gain for yourself can also be shared with others. Selfish expectations will be thwarted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might do well in competitive situations today. However, if you brag to others, they might do all they can to turn your victory into a humbling experience.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Sorting out complicated situations for friends could win you praise today. However, you might not get a passing grade for managing your own affairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In one-to-one relationships today, it will be your responsibility to set the tone. If you treat people with consideration, they will return the favor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If you do not protect your interests today, a competitor might try to claim the rewards you have earned.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Proceed cautiously today in regard to a new friendship. It will take more time to determine whether this person is everything he or she appears to be.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Authority figures who throw their weight around will not impress you today. However, you must take care not to use the same tactics with the people you manage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) When conversing with associates today, you might feel compelled to lose your temper to cover up your lack of comprehension. Do not let your ego dominate you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In a commercial arrangement today, you might feel as if you're doing all the giving and the other guy is doing all the taking. Your partner may feel the same way.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today your competition might try to litter your path with impediments. However, if you don't get rattled, you can push the debris aside and come out on top.
