Germans Can Spot Americans Easily

BERLIN (AP)—If you're coming to Germany this summer, don't be surprised if you're immediately spotted as an American. "I can tell Americans 500 yards away," one perceptive German said recently. "And it's not just because they walk around with their hands in their pockets, either." The hallmarks of an American are many, for example: If he strolls down the street with a woman, chances are he walks on the outside, or curb side, in Germany, the woman is always on the man's right. The reason for the difference is that the American is following the old Anglo-Saxon custom of protecting his lady from being splashed by passing vehicles. The German keeps the lady on his right—or at least his great-grandfather did—because he wants to keep his left side, or sword side, free for action. When you go into a restaurant and begin eating, you will be an object of attention because of the ritual through which you put the knife and the fork, i.e., placing the knife on the edge of the plate after cutting the meat, and switching the fork into the right hand. Germans, like all Europeans, grasp the knife firmly in the right hand, the fork in the left, and generally keep them there until the meal is finished. Their left hand is interrupted only for sips of beer or wine. Other identifying characteristics of an American: 1. Short hair cuts. Germans, despite the shaved neck tradition of old Prussian officers, like hairdos that are long and thick. 2. White shirts. No sensible German would think of wearing a white shirt on a weekday. He saves white shirts for special occasions, like parties or church. Laundry costs are higher. 3. Light colored suits. Summers seldom get too warm in Germany, so most German suits are of a dark and heavy material.

Wives Write Essays On Service Life

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— June brides who quail at thoughts of looming separations from husbands in jobs that will take them far afield might find consolation in the experience of Army and Navy wives.

Some 150 wives of men in the armed forces wrote about it recently in a statewide essay contest in California. Maybe they were whistling in the dark, but a good many cited compensations for the enforced absences of their husbands.

"Taking one another for granted can kill the best marriage and that's one pitfall you're jarred out of," wrote Mrs. Thomas B. Place, wife of a major at Hamilton Air Force Base.

The assigned subject was "Why I am Proud to be a Service Wife" and a $100 prize was noted by the Associated Clubs of Wives of the Armed Forces. It went to Mrs. Alden A. Read of Berkeley, wife of a chaplain aboard the USS Bon Homme Richard.

The essays dealt with many phases of service life, but almost all the writers touched upon the painful partings.

"When our husbands are home, we value every moment; when they are away we remember the dearness of their presence," wrote Mrs. Reed. During the absences, she added:

"We know we must take over our husbands' responsibilities at home, and we learn to do it and develop our own capabilities and potentialities, which many civilian wives never face until they are forced to it."

Nowadays many jobs take civilians away too—airplane pilots, engineers, technical experts of all kinds, salesmen, trouble shooters. Chain stores, networks and branch systems, mean travel for executives in many lines of business, and lonely home stays for their wives.

One Navy wife, Mrs. Harold L. Powell, wife of a lieutenant at Moffett Field, said this about it: "I love my husband and resent any time we are parted. But it is a tremendously maturing process to discover one is capable of being the temporary head of the household."

When he returns... "How comforting it is to have a firm shoulder to lean on—and yet with the inner satisfaction of knowing I can cope without panicking when I am on my own."

Some mentioned the pleasure of getting letters from a husband away, noting they can be a "wonderful addition to marriage."

"It is amazing how many philosophical ideas and concrete expressions of love find their way onto paper that otherwise would have remained just hazy thoughts," said one.

Mrs. J. E. Davies, wife of a major in the Marines, put it like this:

"The family separations have learned to strengthen rather than jeopardize our marriage. Our reliance can be a very gratifying realization. Then the reunions have made a series of honeymoons. Joe and I probably would not have enjoyed it if we'd been constantly together."

The service wives told of traveling about the world, unaccompanied by their husbands, with babies and bottles, toys and tonics. They said women make deeper friendships with each other sometimes because of the help they are able to give each other.

The contest brought out a lot of reasons why women who make a success of it like life in the services. From nearly all came useful tips on how to make a home quickly around your own belongings, whether the structure that contains them is a quonset hut on a Pacific island, an apartment in Manhattan, a remodeled stable at Newport, or a summer cottage in New Jersey without plumbing.

NATO'S 3 Wise Men, Start Historic Mission Monday

PARIS (AP)—NATO's "Three Wise Men" set out Monday on their historic mission of reshaping and invigorating the Atlantic alliance to combat Soviet Russia's new trade-and-aid program.

The study committee of three foreign ministers chosen by the 15-nation Atlantic Council—Canada's Lester B. Pearson, Italy's Gaetano Martino and Norway's Halvard Lange—plunged into the task of devising new strategy for countering the Kremlin switch to "soft tactics."

The trio sorted out a batch of proposals on political cooperation and economic aid to win the neutral third of the world to the side of the west.

Among the ideas was a U. S. proposal for creation of an "Atlantic cabinet" or cold war general staff to unify the West's global policies.

Before leaving for Washington after four days of meetings with foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, U. S. Secretary of State Dulles told the "Three Wise Men":

"You are entrusted with the most important task since NATO was founded."

The "Wise Men" committee—so dubbed by British Foreign Minister Selwyn Lloyd—was set up in response to a call by Dulles for an "ideas" drive that would defeat communism in the contest for the hearts and minds of the neutral peoples of Asia, Africa and the Middle East. It is to report back to the NATO Council of Foreign Ministers before December after consulting with the member governments.

Lloyd said on his return to London that NATO would remain primarily a military alliance.

"But there is no reason why we should not take the offensive in propounding our political ideas throughout the world," he emphasized.

Pearson conferred last night with Lord Ismay, NATO secretary general, on the possibility of setting up a European headquarters and secretariat for the "Wise Men" committee.

Pearson, Martino and Lange left for their respective capitals to obtain the approval of their governments for their new duties.

The most ambitious proposal in their briefcases is the U. S. plan for an Atlantic cabinet.

Dulles told the NATO Ministerial Council that he and President Eisenhower favored a panel of Atlantic nation leaders which would sit in almost continuous consultation to iron out differences among the Allies and harmonize their economic and political attitudes toward the rest of the world.

Members of the Atlantic cabinet would be leaders second in stature only to the foreign ministers. They could work either within the framework of NATO or in some other free world context.

Dulles said such a consultative body might be the instrument of preserving Allied unity and thus saving Western civilization from being overrun by communism.

You Have Guarantee Hospital Is Always On Guard For Health

Every community is interested in its hospital and the quality of care it offers. You want to know how well their hospitals measure up to standards. What are these standards? Who establishes them? Who checks that standards are maintained? All this is done by an organization known as the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals. It surveys hospitals in the United States and Canada to see if they are properly administered and if a sufficiently high grade of clinical medicine is practiced in them.

The primary responsibility of a hospital is to provide good medical and nursing care. One simple way exists for knowing whether the service it offers is adequate. If it is approved by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, a hospital has voluntarily submitted to a survey of its facilities and an appraisal of the quality of care it offers.

The program of accreditation was begun in 1918 by the American College of Surgeons. It was transferred by the ACS in 1982 to the newly formed Joint Commission, members of which are the American College of Physicians, American College of Surgeons, American Hospital Association, American Medical Association, and the Canadian Medical Association. Each year it costs a half million dollars to keep commission, surveys in the field, constantly checking and rechecking hospitals.

This means that when you enter Seminoles Memorial Hospital, which is striving to be accredited, you are assured of modern, up-to-date care. It is necessary for a hospital to be in operation for one year before it can become accredited, however, the Seminoles Memorial Hospital is adhering to standards of accreditation and expects to request a survey within the next nine months.

Here is what the commission tries to assure you, if you are a patient in an accredited hospital:

The building is clean and properly maintained. Every precaution has been taken to prevent fire hazards. There are adequate diagnostic facilities, well supervised, including a clinical laboratory and an X-ray department.

The medical staff is organized to ensure that the professional work is constantly reviewed. If you have previously been a patient, your medical records are complete and are available to your physician. And they must be kept up to date.

If you are to undergo surgery, you will receive excellent care before, during and after the operation. Fire and explosion hazards have been eliminated in the operating room. Instruments and dressings are sterile. If your physician has any question about his findings, he will discuss your case with another physician. A competent person administers your anesthetic. After the operation tissue removed in surgery is sent to the pathologist for examination, and your surgeon's diagnosis is confirmed.

This, in brief, is what accreditation means to you. There are many other standards met by institutions like Seminoles Memorial Hospital, which are approved by the joint commission. They add up to a guarantee that your hospital is constantly on guard for your health.

'Personal Contact'

Years ago, those running for public office tried to shake hands with every voter . . . the "personal contact." Then, progress set in and, more and more, the candidates depended on mass coverage. First, display ads in the daily papers, along with high-powered press agent news articles. Later, the media of radio where the candidate's voice could be carried nation-wide. In recent times, by television, the candidate can both be heard and seen.

Now, in 1956, something has happened. Things have changed and the candidates are going back to the "old method." Even presidential candidates are going down the street, shaking hands just like in the "old times." The same is also true this year in most state and local campaigns.

This all goes to prove that those who are in charge of mapping out the various campaigns are realizing that there is nothing as effective as "personal contact," seeing the people . . . talking to them . . . shaking hands with them.

Businessmen can take a lesson from this year's candidates. Even with our high-powered methods of building good-will, there is no substitute for "personal contact" . . . showing appreciation to our business friends and those with whom we desire to do business . . . seeing them personally . . . shaking hands with them . . . that "personal contact."

It doesn't make any difference what office you are running for . . . president or alderman . . . the method of getting votes is about the same. The same procedure will pay dividends in securing business, whether it is selling brushes or locomotives.

No business gets so big that "personal contact" is not imperative to progress. The proper leader will take the time to build good-will for his organization by seeing and knowing as many people as possible, by constantly keeping in touch with customers. Everyone is hungry for appreciation, and business leaders should, in every way possible, show their appreciation to their customers for their business.

This is the year of "personal contact" for votes . . . business is more highly competitive than ever and 1956 will be the most competitive year in our history. Some will try to keep their business progressing by their usual methods, perhaps by remote control. Others will be on the ground personally asking for the business and expressing their appreciation to their customers. They are the ones who will go forward in 1956.

Get to know your customers and prospects . . . shake hands . . . be a "favorite-son" candidate for business.

W. Jones Is African White Hunter

By MAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Wally Jones is the only Southerner I know of who can say "ninyl yote" without feeling self-conscious.

Jones, a former cub scout from Birmingham, Ala., at 25 is an African "white" hunter, and "ninyl yote" in the Swahili tongue means "you all."

Wally shot his first rabbit at the age of 9. At 16 he saw an African movie, and decided right then and there he had to become a professional white hunter.

"I couldn't think of anything life held that could pleasure me more," he recalled.

Thousands of American boys hold the romantic dream briefly, then outgrow it. Wally didn't.

He quit college, joined the U.S. Marines, saved his money. He had $1,000 when he left the Marines in 1932. A few days later he was on a tramp steamer headed for Africa. The authorities in British East Africa made him post a $300 bond to insure his ability to return to America. That left Wally practically penniless on a strange continent.

He went to a white hunter in Nairobi, Kenya, and told him his ambition. The man liked the courage and determination shown by this chunky, blue-eyed Alabama youth. He took him on as an apprentice.

Wally learned so quickly that within a year he had won a hunt for himself. Since then he has had 15 safaris, shot everything from leopards to elephants. Recently his skill won him the job of technical adviser on "Safari," a Columbia Pictures film starring Janet Leigh and Victor Mature.

Jones is one of two Americans among the 30 to 40 white hunters in British East Africa. At 25 Wally is among the youngest. The career of a white hunter is relatively short.

"After 40 or 45 most of them get $100 a day to go on safari. Most are well-to-do, but they range from Indiana schoolteachers to airplane pilots and Texas oilmen.

"The Texans are about the best hunters," said Wally. "Some of them can stalk game as well as we can. In fact I've learned a few tricks from them."

Many married couples now go on safaris. Papa holds the gun, mama holds the camera.

Economists Usually Disagreeing

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP)—The little man gets pains in his head and dollar signs before his eyes when he hears talk about economics. The economists always seem to be disagreeing about money, inflation, deflation, credit.

And when they disagree most they can sound the most positive. Even when they look into the future, as they are always doing, they don't see the same things. The little man thought the pains in his head might go away if he just studied up a bit.

Then he could be positive too, and even if he was wrong he would feel more comfortable because he could be wrong without having doubts about being right.

He opened a book called "Modern Economics." The first sentence told him: "In these times almost everyone regards himself as something of an economist."

This was wonderful news. From now on no matter what he thought he would always have plenty of company. He thought he had plenty of company already.

He had heard sales of automobiles and farm machinery were falling, that there have been layoffs in both industries but that employment in general has gone up while basic wages are rising.

But it was talk about credit that had been giving him those pains in the head lately.

Last March Rep. Patman of Texas reflected on the borrowing Americans were doing—they were doing it at a record rate—and seemed to think it was pretty good.

"Credit," Patman said, "is the poor man's capital." And he said "I don't see any harm in it," if consumer credit was twice its present size. But the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve system was getting worried about borrowing.

It thought too much of it might push inflation. So it raised the discount rate for its member bankers. This was meant to put a bit of a brake on borrowing because people would have to pay a little higher interest rate on the money they borrowed.

Immediately experts began disagreeing on whether this was good or necessary. President Eisenhower backed the board last week. But two members of his Cabinet had some opinions on the subject—at least, before Eisenhower expressed his.

Secretary of Labor Mitchell said the brake on borrowing "may have been a mistake." He said "I see no threat of inflation at all." Secretary of Commerce said "money is tight" and he thought making it harder to borrow might be a handicap.

Weeks' Commerce Department in its most recent report on the economy, painted a pretty picture. It said there was some leveling off from 1955 but the economy is on a high plane.

Its latest figures show: as of March 31 consumer credit was $33,537,000,000 or 3 1/2 billion dollars higher than last year, installment credit was $27,964,000,000 or almost five billion, and noninstallment credit was $7,572,000,000 or more than half a billion.

This report showed just how much people were up to their necks in new automobiles. Auto installment credit was $24,865,000,000, or more than half the nation's total consumer credit of 35 1/2 billion dollars.

Guard Rest Of Family From Danger Of Measles

By HERMAN M. BUNNEN, M.D.
If you have one measles patient in your home, you've got to be careful not to infect the rest of the household. While the death rate for this disease has declined considerably during the last half century, measles still is a highly contagious disease—and it still causes some deaths.

If you are the one who is caring for the patient, you're the only one who should enter the sickroom. Keep everyone else out.

Upon entering the patient's room, put on a smock, apron or some washable covering to protect your clothing. Take it off as you leave.

Scrub your hands thoroughly with soap and water upon leaving the sickroom, too. This point is extremely important.

Use disposable tissues or cloths for discharges from the patient's nose or throat. It's probably a good idea to keep a paper bag pinned to the bed where you can safely discard them. Then burn the bag.

The youngster's pajamas, bed linen, dishes, silverware and other such washable objects should be boiled in soap and water each time they are used.

Scrub And Water
Wash the thermometer with soap and water after each use. Then place it in a solution of 70 per cent alcohol until it's needed again.

Air the sickroom thoroughly once each day. Open the windows at the top and bottom. Keep the door open, too, so the air can circulate through the room. Better put a few extra blankets over the youngster to keep him comfortable during this brief sitting-out process.

Dust Room
Dust the room each day with a damp cloth to keep the dust at a minimum. Clean the floor with a vacuum cleaner or an oil mop.

If two or more of your youngsters have measles at the same time, don't place them in the same bed or even near each other. Complications might spread from one to the other.

As soon as one of your children comes down with the disease, it's probably a good idea to have any of the others who have not had measles given injections of gamma globulin. If given within five days after exposure, this should immunize them for from two to three weeks. Even if they do catch the disease, the gamma globulin will make the attack a mild one.

Double Ring Ceremony Unites Janette Gardner, C. S. Young

The Stafford Memorial Methodist Church was the scene for the wedding of Miss Janette Grace Gardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Gardner and Charles Shelton Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Parker of Atlanta, Ga.
 A reception was held immediately after the ceremony in the church annex. A tiered wedding cake centered a large serving table which was decorated with bride's flowers and greenery. Baskets of gladioli and other flowers were used throughout the room.
 Mrs. C. C. Stinson, aunt of the bride, served the cake while Miss Rose Neiswander presided over the punch bowl. Miss Carolyn Noble, the bride's cousin, kept the bride's bouquet.
 The new Mrs. Young chose for her going away outfit a navy blue shantung suit with white accessories. She wore on her lapel the orchid from her bridal bouquet.
 The couple left immediately for a honeymoon destination in the Smoky Mountains. After May 10 they will make their home in Atlanta, Ga. at 3562 Birch Rd. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. William L. Parker and daughter Jean of Atlanta; and Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Thomas and daughter Vickie of Columbia, S.C.
 Miss Gardner attended school in Sanford and graduated with the class of 1954. She was an active member of the Pep Club for three years and was employed by the Navy Exchange, NAAS.

Mr. Young attended schools in Atlanta, graduating with the class of 1952. He is presently employed there.
APPLESAUCE BREAD PUDDING
 To crisp up one cup of stale dried bread put it into a frying pan with a little butter and brown sugar and cook over the direct flame of the top burners, stirring constantly. Add an equal amount of applesauce. Have it hot. Serve with cream, whipped or not, or with ice cream. Delicious!
 Mrs. Gardner chose for her daughter's wedding a nylon blue lace dress with white accessories. She had a pink carnation and rose corsage.
 Mrs. Parker wore a pink embroidered silk eyelet dress with Gas-operated log heaters made of newly developed ceramics are rapidly replacing the old-fashioned living room fireplace. Clean and economical, the gas log provides a constant, more efficient heat than the natural log.

A COLUMN OF SMOKE (top) rises over the White Sands Proving Ground, N. M., marking the crash scene of a new Aerobee research rocket. Bound for a hoped-for altitude record of 165 miles up into the ionosphere, the rocket plunged from a height of 18,000 feet as the booster broke away and its own engine failed to start. The missile burst into flames as nitric acid, aniline and alcohol fuels caught fire. At bottom, Navy officers and scientists probe the crater left by the crash only a mile from the 15-story high launching platform. Another rocket will be ready to try again in a few days. National Radio Week

NEW YORK (AP)—Next week being National Radio Week, I'd like to say a word for what one television-bred child called "that funny little box that talks but has no eyes."

Personally, I like radio more since the big money and most of the high pressure entertainment left it for TV. Radio, I now find, is more relaxing, more intimate, less stereotyped and more stimulating.

There are, of course, many fine things to watch on TV along with a horrendous assortment of retarded claptrap. But in any case, good or bad, I find that if I watch too much TV in one sitting—say, more than three hours—I get up from the couch with a vague feeling of shame and atrophy.

The trouble, I suspect, is that TV lays out too much for us too often. In giving us sight and sound, it asks us to do nothing but absorb like a sponge. Radio solicits only our ear, and radio—that is, good radio—invites us to use our mind and imagination.

Take music. I have never been one of those who needed to look at anything while listening to good music except the visions stirred by the music itself. Actually, watching the singer or orchestra, I find, is only distracting.

Take news. In this department, television has never caught up with radio, and maybe never will. When there is only a voice telling you the news, it is easy to concentrate on the words, on the facts, on the essential product—the news. On TV it is more difficult to absorb because there are competing elements—the face of the man reading it, his desk, the globe, teletype machine and other synthetic props.

And there are many kinds of dramatic productions that radio will always do better, it seems to me, than television. Especially the fanciful things whose only limits are words and which are not anchored down by rigid sets or the range of a camera.

Radio is a fine antidote when you feel perturbed by TV.

GUBERNATORIAL CAMPAIGN COSTS $600,000

TALLAHASSEE (AP)—The Democratic campaign for governor in the first primary which ended today cost the four major contenders at least $600,000.

Reports filed with the secretary of state showed $570,138 had been spent through last week. With each of Saturday's and none of yesterday's spending reported, it was certain the cost would run $600,000 or more.

Gov. Collins reported a total of $225,816; Sumter Lowry $97,410; former Gov. Fuller Warren $170,073; and Rep. Farris Bryant $44,857.

MOTOR MAIDS

Bad Drivers Blacklisted

By Jeanne Smith, Dodge Safety Consultant

BOYFRIENDS with bad-driving habits are up against strong feminine opposition in Livonia, a Detroit suburb of 40,000. They're being boycotted by GASAFETY. The abbreviation stands for "Girls' Automobile Safety Assn. for Educating Youth." Members of this newest threat to unruly hotrods and crazy "chicken" drivers are all between the ages of 10 and 21.

They meet once a month to discuss ways and means of curbing youthful motorized mayhem and to learn more about how a car operates.

Safety lectures by automotive engineers and police officers teach them what good drivers should do to avoid accidents.

GASAFETY members vow always to drive in a safe, sane manner. Further, they've all agreed not to date any boy who is a notoriously wild driver, not even if he's a football hero with a sleek convertible. And they loyally stick to their pledge.

Blacklisted are careless characters like "Road Hog Harry" and "Lover Boy Larry," dates who turn a corner on two wheels, go over hills in the center lane, or drive with one arm around a girl.

"Girl-drivers who take unnecessary chances are labeled by GASAFETY too. These include "Anxious Annie," who guns the motor at a traffic signal and then shoots into the intersection the second the light turns. Another is "Nervous Natalie," who, while driving punctuates every word with hand-wringing gestures.

But GASAFETY's main target is the "hotrod men in their lives." By refusing to date bad drivers, they no longer risk ending up in the emergency ward of a hospital. Leave it to the girls to find one sure way of putting the reins on "less young motorists."

Employment Jumps 900,000 Last Month

WASHINGTON (AP)—Employment jumped 900,000 last month to a new April record of 62,990,000, while joblessness dropped by 270,000, the Labor and Commerce Department reported today.

The unemployment total dipped to an estimated 2,544,000, the department said, even though jobless amount auto workers increased and unemployment among factory workers generally failed to show the normal springtime decline.

The gain in total civilian employment was 912,000 from March to April, and the number of jobholders reached a level two million above the employment total a year ago. Seasonal factors, including a 700,000 rise in farm employment, were responsible for most of the gain.

Factory employment at 18,728,000 was virtually unchanged. Layoffs in the auto industry, where idleness has increased by 120,000 since December, were virtually offset by pickups in other manufacturing fields.

The joint statement by Secretary of Labor Mitchell and Secretary of Commerce Weeks said the decline of unemployment was much smaller than the rise of employment because most of the additional farm workers were housewives and students who had dropped out of the labor force dur-

Company Reveals Electronic Control System Developed

GREAT NECK, N. Y. (AP)—The Sperry Gyroscope Co. has announced development of an electronic control system for B52 intercontinental jet bombers that enables their crew to "find and hit any target in the world in any weather."

The announcement Monday quoted Air Force Secretary Donald Quarles as saying the B52 "is range, bomb load and highly skilled crews, coupled with electronic equipment which enables its crews to find and hit any target anywhere in the world in any weather, constitute a weapons system which no other nation can match."

Big St. Louis Zoo Romance Brewing

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis zoo's biggest romance is in the making.

A candidate for affections of the two-ton sea elephant Moby Dick has arrived by air from California. The 500-pound male was termed a regular beauty in sea elephant circles yesterday by Zoo Director George F. Vierheller.

She already has shed her fur and is a fine jet black. The cow was kept in a separate enclosure overnight and was to be launched today in the pool where Moby Dick is king.

Delayed Chase

FAIRMONT, Minn. (AP)—Three telephone company linemen were at work when a man drove up in a panel truck, grabbed their pole Jack and sped away. The three shimmied down poles, hopped into their big truck and gave chase. When the smaller truck out-distanced them, they stopped and telephoned the sheriff's office. The linemen later admitted they had not thought to cut in with the phone each carries and cut the sheriff before coming down the poles.

"Either side may be fickle and romance is impronderable," declared.

George Doubts Country Will Accept Policy

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. George (D-Ga.) said today he doubts the country will be willing to accept a permanent policy anything less than equality with Russia in a long-range bombing force.

George, who heads the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he does not disagree with President Eisenhower that the United States has tremendous air striking power from a chain of bases and in a highly mobile Navy.

But George said he doubts the country will accept Eisenhower's thesis—expressed last Friday at a news conference—that while it is vital to have what is needed in intercontinental bombers it isn't necessary to outbuild the Russians in this one weapon.

"The country has been taught that the long-range bomber is the core of our striking force," George said. "It will remain disturbing to the country to be constantly reminded that the Russians are building up an enormous air force but that we are not keeping pace."

George said he agrees with Eisenhower that the chain of American bases provides this country with atomic striking power through medium bombers that should be a deterrent to any Russian attack. He said he assumes U.S. bases may be supplied with atomic weapons.

George said this latter question may come up in his committee's examination of the military assistance portion of the administration's $4,000,000,000 foreign aid request.

John B. Hollister, director of the International Cooperation Administration, said during a television interview yesterday that economic aid to foreign countries will have to continue as long as there is "military danger."

Chicago's Midway Airport Nation's Busiest In '55

WASHINGTON (AP)—Chicago's Midway Airport was the nation's busiest in 1955 for the fourth straight year, the Civil Aeronautics Administration said today.

Midway had 381,737 aircraft "movements"—takeoffs and landings. Miami International was second with 276,729 movements, and New York's Laganardia was third with 256,058. Next were Los Angeles, 263,316; and Atlanta, 246,709.

From the standpoint of "illuminant" operations—a category excluding purely local flights—the top airports ranked in this order: Chicago Midway, New York Laganardia, Washington, Los Angeles, Dallas, Atlanta and Miami.

UNHATCHED FISH COUNT

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP)—It's all right to count fish before they're hatched. In fact, it's the thing today, says Dr. H. C. Hardy, English marine biologist.

The Oxford university authority on fishery predictions told an international symposium: "We can count fish by counting fish eggs. This is so, not because we can predict how many eggs will become fish, but because the number of eggs is an accurate indicator of how many fish there are in the breeding stock."

The dragon tree of the Canary Islands produces a dark red resin.

He said a "big shift" is on to channel large portions of foreign aid away from Europe to the Far East but added that it "would be a great mistake" to throw too much in the direction of Asia.

"Some people seem to believe that the Far East is in a better situation as Europe slips into war," Hollister said. "They realize that to spend a great deal of money needlessly as was done with the Marshall Plan you need an economic base."

Griffin Predicts Southern Demos Closer Together

ATLANTA (AP)—Gov. Marvin Griffin has predicted that "the Democrats of the South will be closer together this year than they have ever been because so many wolves are trying to gobble us up."

He made the statement at his news conference in commenting indirectly on Gov. Allan Shivers' loss to Sen. Lyndon Johnson in a battle for control of the Texas Democratic party.

Griffin later expanded the comment to include the recent Alabama election in which Gov. James Folsom was defeated by an ardent pro-segregationist in his bid for Democratic national committee.

"but especially on segregation." He declined to comment directly on either the Alabama or Texas situations but indicated that he was referring Shivers' bolt to Eisenhower in 1953 and Folsom's criticism of the Alabama legislature's passage of pro-segregation legislation.

Griffin said he meant principally the forces opposed to segregation. He later amended that to include "modern concept wolves." In recent speeches, Griffin has criticized the U.S. Supreme Court for decisions which he said were based on the court's idea of "the modern concept" rather than on legal grounds.

Natural Woods—A Bride's Best Buy

Choosing furniture for a first home will be a lot of fun if you keep a few basic rules in mind. Most important is to choose the lasting satisfaction is to avoid fads and choose genuine natural materials, such as fine woods.

Most brides panic at selecting furniture because of the permanent nature of the investment.

That's why beautiful real woods are a bride's best friend. Fine woods have a timeless, undated air that's always in good taste. They offer a wealth of original, natural wood grain and figure patterns that add interest to even a sparsely furnished room, and prevent any feeling of bulk if you need to use many storage chests in a small apartment. And real woods are the most versatile material, as wood's many natural patterns and colors are harmonious.

Just decide whether you prefer formal or informal furniture styles. You can then mix woods and furniture styles of the same general mood within a room, as the natural wood colors and grain variations will blend the various woods and styles. This is important, since most couples start out in smaller living quarters and will want to add more furniture later. To get the greatest decorative versatility, look for finishes that reveal the full depth of beauty of the wood's grain and figure, and avoid flat, "painted" look finishes. The natural tones give wood much of its blendability, and also form rich backgrounds for any fabric and accessory colors. He sure, too, that the furniture you select is real wood, for moment.

ous printed wood imitations lack the natural versatility. Also, hardwoods grow more plentiful as they mellow with age and wear develops the rich patina you see on antiques. To help keep you from being temporarily fooled by imitation woods, many leading manufacturers of fine wood furniture and tv-hifi sets are using a new "genuine hardwoods" seal to identify their quality woods.

Buy the best furniture you can afford. You'll find quality wood furniture in every price range. Look for bonded plywood construction, sometimes called "veneer." Today's finest furniture uses modern bonded plywood for large flat and curved surfaces because it's stronger and more stable... makes possible the greatest variety of interesting wood figures and grains... and gives you the finest woods at moderate cost.

Most furniture combines bonded plywood and solid wood, as in this dropleaf dining table from the large "Sirocco" collection. A good choice for brides, this space-saving table features a strong walnut plywood top with rich, random grain variations, and uses solid wood for the carved legs and structural parts.

If you're the "sterling silver" type who loves fine things but you're worried about careless guests, you'll be happy to know that many modern finishes for wood resist abuse. In fact, there's a new "beautyguard" process that gives real wood resistance to burning cigarettes, alcohol and nail polish.

Lake City Voters Reject Proposal

Mary Earle, Sloan Will Be In Runoff For Tax Assessor

Paralleled with a problem confronting the City of Sanford, the City of Lake City defeated a move by the city to take over municipal ownership and operation of the Florida Power and Light Company's electric service facilities. In a hotly contested election, Lake City voters rejected by a proposal by the City. The proposal, estimated to cost three to five million dollars included construction of a city-owned diesel generating plant. Advocates of the plan, confined principally to city officials, waged an intensive campaign on the theory that a city-owned utility would pay no taxes and, therefore, provide a good money-maker. Strong opposition was voiced by a citizens committee of some 60 business and civic leaders who opposed it as a step toward socialization.

Robert H. Fife, President and General Manager of Florida Power and Light Company hailed the election as a resounding endorsement of the American free enterprise system.

"Florida welcomes new industries and venture capital," Fife said, "and Lake City is in the forefront in this attitude. It's a strategic location, abundant raw materials, transportation and friendly labor conditions make it an attractive site for new industries."

The opposition to municipal ownership, spearheaded by the Citizens Committee, centered around the uncertainty of electric rates since the advocates proposed continuing the company's present rates. Furthermore, rate regulation under municipal ownership does not exist in Florida which meant there would be no protection against rate increases.

Another objection was that a small city plant could not provide dependable service and might even become obsolete in a few years with atomic power development.

Sanford is situated in a similar position relative to the operation of a local power system. Present discussions center around a proposal to oust the City of Sanford by an engineering firm to determine the feasibility of building a city-owned power plant.

None of the discussions relative to the City's plans have been made public up to the present time.

Double-Header Is On Tap Here Tonight

A double-header baseball bill for free is on tap tonight at the Memorial Stadium starting at 7:30 p. m. and it carries all the appeal of seeing young stars making their way up the ladder of diamond ability and of viewing once more some of the popular figures seen in the local ball orchards not so many years ago.

Mayor F. D. Scott will toss out the first ball prior to the hostilities between the Rotary league's champions, the Cubs, and the circuit's All-stars. This fray packs all the rivalry that can be jammed into youthful hearts in an athletic contest. The five innings should show plenty of baseball ability and be a dandy for the fans.

In the second game a team of Rotarians will tangle with the younger wizards of losses and swings who will have just finished their games and should be red-hot to take on their challengers.

In the civic club's line-up will be such well-known men as Dr. John Morgan, Dr. A. W. Epps Jr. and his alert brother, Dr. Billy Epps, Orville Touchton, Dr. Charles Park Jr., Sonny Powell, F. D. Scott, Bob Cornall, Bill Bush and Frank Perkins, also will see if a little more baseball savvy can overcome the advantages of the loose muscles and the teenage vigor of their adversaries. These five innings should be a delight to the on-looker.

Prior to the opening "play ball" Empire W. C. (Red) Hires and the informative announcements of WTRB's John Keeling on the public address system, there will be a presentation of gold miniature baseballs to the pennant winning Cubs. Also the Sonny Powell and Roy Hoiler trophies for most valuable player and outstanding sportsmanship will be awarded.

These latter selections gave the officials many a headache because of the closeness of the competition. Several bats were considered for each trophy—and all seemed to deserve the distinction. Finally, it simmered down to detailed consideration of many factors, it was

Members of the Sanford Rotary Club are reminded that the regular weekly meeting next Monday will be held at the B. O. Q. of the Sanford Naval Air Station (that is the new designation for the installation that has heretofore been called the Sanford Naval Auxiliary Air Station. The news of the re-designation which makes it Sanford Naval Air Station has been received with enthusiasm by local citizens and business men, today.

All civic and service clubs have been invited to hold their meetings on their regular meeting days at the Air Station where arrangements have been made by Capt. Robert W. Jackson, commanding officer, to have the visitors identified at the Main Gate and passed on to the meeting place where they will be served their luncheon by their regular caterer, Mrs. Robert's Canteen.

The program, which will be in observance of Armed Forces Day which comes on Saturday, will be put on by the Navy. Attention is called by president William (Bill) Bush, of the Rotary Club, that this is a regular meeting and members are urged to attend to get credit for their attendance. There will be no checking in at the Youth Club as Dr. R. W. Rupprecht, medical officer, will be checking in at the Naval Air Station.

Jackson Arrives Today

The Sanford Naval Auxiliary Air Station formally became the Sanford Naval Air Station this morning.

Notified by wire from the Secretary of the Navy, the local NAAS was redesignated as a Naval Air Station.

The notification came this morning from R. H. Foxler, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and directed to the Commanding Officer of the Sanford Naval Auxiliary Air Station.

However, Captain Robert W. Jackson, the SNAAS Commanding Officer, had not yet arrived in Sanford from Washington today at press time and could not be reached for comment.

The mission of the redesignation, according to the dispatch received this morning, would be to "maintain and operate facilities and provide services and material to support operations of aviation activities and units of the operating forces of the Navy and other activities and units as designated by the Chief of Naval Operations."

Word of the redesignation has added much optimism to the proponents of a permanent Naval Base here at Sanford.

The expansion program, already started, is expected to be accelerated with the news of the redesignation here at Sanford.

In all probability the redesignation would mean that additional personnel would be provided to staff the Sanford Naval Air Station.

The Sanford Board of City Commissioners is expected to meet Captain Robert W. Jackson on his arrival at the local station today from Washington to present him with a resolution, addressed to the Secretary of the Navy, praising Captain Jackson for his untiring efforts on behalf of Sanford and the Sanford Naval Auxiliary Air Station.
