The Topper Award: In The Right Hands

He exhibits traits of leadership and has always responded when called for service by his community.

That's how Mack Cleveland described W. Garrett White Monday when presenting him with the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce's Topper Award for exemplary service to the community.

An excellent choice. White has been a member of the GSSC since 1956 and served at one time as that organization's president, as well as president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Perhaps most noteworthy among White's comments on accepting the award was his insistence the recognition go to all members of the various chamber committees on whose behalf he said he would accept the award. The mark of true leadership.

The awards committee selected White for his past involvement with different chamber projects over the years, and more specifically the encouragement of industrial development in Sanford.

It's a pleasure to find the citizenry in a community take time out to honor those civic minded individuals who unselfishly leave busy schedules to pursue community projects aimed at improving the lifestyle of all the city's residents.

White fits that bill and the Topper Award found itself in the right hands.

Gas For 25 Cents?

It appears the oil companies will have to spend some of their legendary profit on retuning the pumps at service stations if the price of gasoline goes up to $1 a gallon, as it probably will.

The pumps are not built to register beyond 99.9 cents. Why is the industry so reluctant to alter the meter which is to start selling gas by the liter, the metric measurement that is roughly one quart? True, they'd have to retool their accounting departments, but think of the psychological benefits.

Gas has gone to $2.40 a gallon in France, but the traffic in Paris is as congested as ever. Why? Because Parisians don't realize they're paying $2.40 a gallon. They're only paying 60 cents a liter — and what's 60 cents these days?

Wall Street knows this tactic well. When the price of a stock goes too high, the company declares a split, substituting two shares for one. This cuts the price in half, and the phones of brokers start ringing off the wall with orders.

When gasoline hits $1, the oil companies can quietly switch to liters or quarts and the price at the pump will drop overnight to 50 cents. This will send joy throughout the land, and convince motorists that price decreases aren't so bad after all.

Why, the companies could even raise their prices by 20 percent, and we still only be paying 30 cents a quart. That's cheaper than milk.

On Human Rights

For many years the U.S. commissioner of immigration was a relatively low-profile official in Washington. Not so for Leonel J. Castillo, who took the post two years ago at a moment of rising concern about the complex of immigration and labor problems summed up as the "illegal alien" issue.

Mr. Castillo and his office have become a bridge on one side connecting the alien problem often called the "alien question" and on the other hand, the human rights of alien workers and are attuned to the sensitivities of Spanish-speaking U.S. citizens who see their own interests at stake.

Mr. Castillo cannot rewrite our immigration laws, and it now appears Congress will make no effort to pass new legislation affecting the alien problem at least until 1981. This leaves the Justice Department and the Immigration and Naturalization Service to cope with the problem with the tools at hand.

Mr. Castillo has an arduous task, and speaks as a representative of an agency responsible for enforcing laws and as a member of the ethnic group which has a keen interest in the direction that enforcement takes. That is a fortunate combination and should lend weight to his words.

BERRY'S WORLD

WASHINGTON — In a voice husky from booze and laryngitis, Billy Carter recently joked with reporters about his Libyan connection. He alluded to his big mouth, which has lost friends and alienated people. The Libyans, he cracked, are "the best friends I got in the world right now."

But to Justice Department officials, it is no laughing matter. They want to know how President Carter's younger brother became so close to the Libyans, who have granted arms and asylum to international terrorists and have kidnapped some of the world's most notorious rogues and rascals. This is the man who is in Libya to promote Libyan-American friendship. But the Justice Department is trying to determine whether he has stepped across the legal line and should register as a foreign agent. This would be required by law if he has performed any services for the Libyan government.

The Justice Department asked Carter three months ago to explain his relationship with the Libyans, but he has not responded. Meanwhile, we have conducted our own investigation of Carter's Libyan caper.

Carter was put together with the Libyans through Maria Lemos, an Atlanta real estate operator, as the Libyans' wing; Libya's charge d'affaires in Italy, Ghilsi Shalouf, reached in Rome, told us that he had helped arrange the invitation for Carter.

An entourage of eight Georgia politicians and businessmen, including state senators Floyd Stedman and Henry Runnels, accompanied the president's brother to Libya. They traveled first class, stayed at the best hotels and were flown around Rome and Tripoli in chauffeur-driven cars.

The Libyans picked up all the bills and headed off gifts, including an expensive leather saddle for Carter. One source familiar with the arrangements estimated that the trip must have cost the Libyans over $50,000.

We flew to Tripoli to piece together the story. We learned that the Georgians had discussed establishing a corporation to handle Libyan investments in the United States. They were eager to relieve Libya of some of its petroleum, and American diplomat told us. Significantly, Carter talked to the Libyans about Libya's interest in the C-130 transport planes, which the Libyans have purchased from the United States but which Washington has held up. Intelligence sources told our reporter Andrew Strinsky. The planes have been gathering dust for five years on the Lockheed grounds at

Around

The Clock

By SHARON CARRASCO

Despite temperatures in the mid-80s and sunny skies, the crowd of tourists and Floridians couldn't be bothered by Mother Nature. Even with the lapping waves of the ocean so near, they filed through the doors of Jai-Alai with bets in hand.

I attended my first area Jai-Alai game Saturday and was thrilled. I was amazed at the skill, strategy and concentration these players had to muster to perform before their demanding audience. With tickets in hand, each bettor jealously hopes to win the pot this time around to make his losses worthwhile. It's sort of like a Catch-22 syndrome.

As I walked into the auditorium, I saw an assembly of players wearing different colored jerseys scattered across a long court. They appeared to be hitting a tiny ball with a wicker scoop I later learned is called a cesta.

After each point was scored (they play to seven), screams of hope were heard in response. Others who were not so fortunate reached for a cigarette and sent a spiral of smoke my way.

The betting fever bit me too and sent me to the quinine ticket window with my $2. Two dollars spent now would bring me at least a couple of hundred dollars, I thought. What could be easier?

As I stood in line, I noticed a lot of beer and mixed drinks were being sold across the way to the habitués. A little liquor might have helped them to a thick carpet of yellow, dismembered tickets strewn on the floor was a pretty good indication. It isn't.

As the game commenced, I immediately discovered Lady Luck wasn't sitting on my side. My friend Jim and I both lost but somehow we brought luck to anyone who sat near us.

It was amazing. The first time it happened the couple sitting behind us won $110 on a trifecta ticket. About a half hour later, a young couple sitting to our right picked up $400 with another trifecta ticket. But all we got was a little consolation prize.

It could have turned out worse. "Usually when someone wins, you get a cold beer on top of your head." He was right.

ANGLE-WALTERS School Voucher System

WASHINGTON (NEA)—In California, the birthplace of so many social and political trends, a new popular initiative is gestating which could develop into the Proposition 13 of the 1980 elections.

The issue this time is not taxes but education, a subject which is becoming a sore point for growing numbers of families not just in California but all over the nation.

Sponsors of the initiative, which is still in the drafting stage, are seeking to put on the ballot a new and sophisticated version of an old idea—a school voucher system.

Under such a plan, which amounts to a GI Bill for elementary and secondary education, parents would be given a voucher by the state which they could then use to "purchase" an education for their children at the school of their choice — public, private or religious.

Although the voucher concept is simple enough, the mechanics of such a system are quite complex. No school district in the county had ever actually tried such a system, although there have been several abortive attempts.

The prime movers behind the California initiative drive are John Coons and Stephen Sugarman, two law professors at the University of California at Berkeley and co-authors of a 1976 book entitled "Education by Choice; The Case for Family Control."

Unlike some earlier proponents of the voucher concept Coons and Sugarman are by means associated with right-wing political philosophy. Indeed, one critic of their plan calls them "liberal libertarians."

These basic arguments is that parents can and should be trusted with the primary control of their children's education, and that they should be given the widest possible latitude to choose the type of school their youngsters attend.

Coons, in a recent telephone interview, noted that California over the past few years has experienced a desirable exodus from the public schools to private and parochial schools.

"This is an ominous development," he said. "It means the rich are fleeing, leaving behind those who cannot afford to opt out of the public schools."

With a voucher plan, low and middle-income families would have the same opportunity as the wealthy to choose a private school instead of a public one, although private schools participating in the system would have to meet certain strict conditions.

Among these, Coons said, would be an open letter to fill in the enrollment quota.

The California Teachers Association, an affiliate of the powerful National Education Association, is adamantly opposed to the Coons-Sugarman proposal and is gearing up to fight the initiative drive that will get under way this summer.

"We consider it a very serious threat, even though nothing's moving yet," said OTA executive secretary Ralph Flynn. "All the ingredients are there for real trouble. At the same time, it is a volatile right now that every alienated group in the state might latch onto this thing."

Mr. Castillo cannot rewrite our immigration laws, and it now appears Congress will make no effort to pass new legislation affecting the alien problem at least until 1981. RONALD REAGAN A Better Mousetrap Nets Mouse

Back in 1880, Ralph Waldo Emerson said, "... if a man can build a better house or make a better mousetrap than his neighbor, the world will beat a path to his door." That was 90 years ago and Emerson's philosophy has proved true more times since. Make a better product or offer a more dependable service and you're certain to get a share of the market.

We've also seen that once you've established your reputation in the business world, you can capitalize on that success and expand your operation by setting up a franchise to market your goods or services to an even larger audience. But be careful; become too successful and your competitors may stop at nothing to bring you down. Consider the hassle the Century 21 Real Estate Corporation currently faces.

In several states there are some part-time real estate commissioners who are also full-time non-franchise real estate brokers. They are trying to tell real estate franchisees how to print their signs.

These commissioners have proposed rules designed to restrict the way in which franchisees may use their franchisor's federally registered trademark. While the rules vary from state to state, they generally require the franchisor's "logo" to be reduced in size so that it is no larger than the franchisee's name. Century 21, because it is the biggest real estate franchisor, is in the middle of various legal challenges to these regulations.

The real estate commissioners contend that they are acting in the public interest, protecting the consumer from deceptive advertising. They argue it is unfair, for example, in a given community to benefit from the real estate ad campaign that Century 21 provides.

But the real reason is that they are attempting to stifle competition through costly, burdensome regulation. After all, walk up to the door of any real estate office and you'll see a sign that says "Century 21" (or Red Carpet, or whatever) franchise and you will see a sign stating as plain as day that the office is independently owned and operated. This means that Century 21 is also included in advertising. No, the attempt to shrink the franchise logo by legislation or regulation is an attempt by certain non-franchise brokers to undercut legitimate business competition.

While the franchise system may be relatively new to real estate, it has served other industries well for years — from hotels to service stations to fast food restaurants. When you consider that in 1977 franchisees accounted for one-third of all retail sales in the United States, it's hard to believe that this volume of business was founded on deception.

One of the key principles behind the franchise system is the right of a franchisee to use the franchisor's trademark. It helps give small local brokers a better chance to compete with larger advertising and it enables them to use the franchisor's sales tools and national information network.

Presumably then, the consumer benefits from a consistently higher standard of service throughout the country. Somehow it seems to me that to meet the competition by imposing arbitrary and frivolous rules concerning the size of signs is not what Emerson had in mind.

Lonely Maytag Repairman

By LEROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI)—The current David and Goliath battle in the American industry involves Maytag Co. of Newton, Iowa, and two giants, General Electric Co. and Sears, Roebuck.

There can be no assurance the David is going to conquer either Goliath but it has made a good start.

The fight is over the dishwasher market for individual homeowners. Maytag entered the field not too long ago but already has 5 percent of total sales against 25 percent for General Electric and 40 percent for Design & Manufacturing Corp. of Geneseville, Ind., which is Sears' supplier.

Just as it has made the highest priced washing machines for around 40 years, Maytag is top of the line in dishwashers. "In quality as well as price," insists President Daniel Krumm.

Krumm is a spare, tall man whose sedate appearance is borne out by his status as a prominent Lutheran layman, a Rotarian, a director of the Des Moines Symphony Association and participant in numerous other civic and educational groups.

Maytag is that kind of company. The dominant industry in a town of only 20,000 inhabitants, it has been family owned for many years, has steadfastly resisted mergers and has remained in control on the only son, Krumm says.

But the growth will be relatively small. Maytag never went after the builders' market, figuring it would have to cut quality and manufacture for a price to do so.

On the other hand, Krumm said, the dishwasher market has proved to be a number of two-income families increases.

To such a complex a good dishwasher is a good idea, Krumm explained. The kids can scrape the dishes and stick them in the machine and when Mother comes home, they're all done.

From all accounts, Billy was not his usual fun-loving, care-free, writing-on-the-wall self in Tripoli. He was taken aside by U.S. embassy officials and cautioned about the "sensitive situation" and urged to return to the States. He had just left, it would now become double because the interest.

NATION IN BRIEF

Tight Market Seen For Summer Gasoline

WASHINGTON (UPI)—American drivers are using 4.5 percent more gasoline this spring than they were a year ago, and gasoline stocks as a result are very sharply downward, energy officials have reported. The trend could mean trouble for the winter ahead.

One official Tuesday called the development "a very, very ominous sign" — one that will lead to "a very, very tight gasoline market during this summer."

"We're on an apparent gasoline consumption binge in this country," he added, and when the heavy driving season begins June 1, "it simply won't support the level of driving this country is accustomed to."

Carter Gets Warning

DETROIT (UPI)—United Auto Workers' union President Douglas A. Fraser has warned the Carter administration "to stay the hell away" when union negotiators begin talks with the auto industry this summer.

In a blistering keynote speech Tuesday to the UAW's National Collective Bargaining Convention, Fraser accused President Carter's inflation monitors of "turking in the shadows" as a third party in recent talks between Teamsters union and the trucking industry.

"I have one word of advice for that third party," Fraser said. "They should stay the hell away from our negotiators and let us bargain it out with the auto industry."

3 Years For Threats

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI)—Charles Frederick Jewell pleaded guilty to threatening to kill President Carter and was sentenced Tuesday to three years in a federal prison.

U.S. District Judge George C. Carr, who had heard the operator of Jewell's rooming house testify that he was drunk when he made the threats, recommended that he be sent to the federal prison medical center, Springfield, Mo., or the correctional institution at Lexington, Ky., which also has medical treatment facilities.

Jewell had been charged in two counts with threatening to shoot Carter in phone calls to the FBI from the rooming house Jan. 5 and Jan. 9.

Movie Code Challenged

LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—The American Civil Liberties Union, acting on behalf of two local families, is suing to challenge the right of movie theaters to bar children from attending X and R-rated films.

The suit, filed Tuesday in Ingham County Circuit Court, charges that enforcing the motion picture industry's code constitutes illegal age discrimination under the state's Equal-Literacy Civil Rights Act.

ACLU spokesman Paul Inery said, "The rating system is censorship and it is harmful to two ways. On the one hand, it is the biggest real estate franchisor, is in the middle of various legal challenges to these regulations.

The real estate commissioners contend that they are acting in the public interest, protecting the consumer from deceptive advertising. They argue it is unfair, for example, in a given community to benefit from the real estate ad campaign that Century 21 provides.

Evans' New Date Nears

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI)—Confessed murderer John Louis Evans III faces his second date with the electric chair on April 27, but his attorneys are confident a federal judge will stop the execution so he can challenge Alabama's death penalty law.

The Alabama Supreme Court set his latest execution date Tuesday, four days after the U.S. Supreme Court terminated a temporary stay that had saved him from the electric chair on April 3.

On Due Process

Second Time: ABC Reveals Court Ruling

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Supreme Court has reversed a lower court decision holding that prison inmates up for parole must be afforded certain procedures under due process of law.

In its second disclosure in two days of impending highcourt decisions, ABC News' Tuesday night constitutional due process will apply only during the trial stage of the accused. Once convicted, more restrictive rules will apply.

The decision, reported by ABC News correspondent Tim O'Brien, will not be law until released, and the full implications of the ruling will not be known until the main opinions can be studied.

O'Brien reported Monday the Supreme Court will soon rule that public officials suing for libel may force journalists to tell what their thoughts, opinions and conclusions were while they prepared news stories.

In the due-process decision, ABC said, the court is reversing a lower-court ruling that held state prison inmates up for parole must, among other things, have the right to appear in person at a parole hearing, the right to offer evidence in his behalf and the right to confront and cross-examine adverse witnesses.

The Supreme Court in its decision reversed a decision by the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals. In other action Tuesday, the high court ruled New York can bar resident aliens from teaching in public schools. By a one-vote margin, the high court held the state's interest in furthering education bears a "rational relationship" to its citizenship requirement for teachers.

This refers to difficult to understand in light of prior precedents and may be simply reflect the court's being affected by a more general society-wide intensification of anti-alien sentiment," said Dale Swartz, of the Washington Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law.

The case was brought by Mrs. Susan Norwick, 38, and Mrs. Tarja Daehring, 33, who said they were willing to profess allegiance to the United States but would not seek citizenship.

—Ruled, 7-2, a municipality may sue real-estate firms under the 1968 civil rights law for allegedly "steering" home buyers on the basis of race.

—Decided, 9-4, a six-person state court jury must be unanimous when it convicts someone of a crime.

Puerto Rico Seeks 'First In The Nation' Primary

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Puerto Rican Democrats hope to stage the "first in the nation" presidential primary next year, taking the spotlight away from New Hampshire.

And they're confident they will succeed, despite an initial rejection from national Democratic leaders in Washington, even though the island's residents don't participate in the main event of presidential elections. Local party leaders are counting heavily on the island's main attraction — its balmy weather and sunbathed beaches at a time when New Hampshire is still buried deep in winter snow.

"Don't underestimate the climate factor," said Franklin Delano Lopez, a Puerto Rican statehood advocate who last year wrested control of the local Puerto Rican chapter of the Democratic party from a pro-commonwealth faction in a special election. "It's really miserable up there in New Hampshire in February. And given the choice, I think all of the people involved — the candidates, the television crews and the press — would rather spend their time in Puerto Rico." As a self-governing commonwealth of the United States, Puerto Rico doesn't vote in presidential elections, but both the Democratic and Republican national nominating conventions allot delegates to Puerto Rico.

These delegates had always been chosen at secret smokeshed caucuses. But in 1977 the Puerto Rican legislature passed a law forcing the parties to pick them in primary elections. It set as the date the second Sunday in February — Feb. 9, 1980. New Hampshire's primary presently is set for Feb. 28.

After passage of the law, however, a Democratic National Committee task force headed by Morley

Winograd of Michigan recommended a calendar that would lock existing primaries into their present dates and force any state holding a primary for the first time to go after all the established contests.

That plan, now approved by the Democratic National Committee, would sabotage the Puerto Rican primary since the island has never before held a primary.

Lopez, however, says what counts is that the Puerto Rican law creating the primary already was on the books when the Winograd timetable was drawn up. He will argue before the national committee in Washington that the island should be allowed to hold its primary when it wants to.

"The worst that could happen, as a compromise solution, is that we would be moved back to the same day as New Hampshire," Lopez said. "We would have to amend our local law but that's no problem."

Even if the Puerto Rican and New Hampshire primaries are held the same day, Lopez thinks Puerto Rico will still take the spotlight away from New Hampshire. Puerto Rico commands more delegates than New Hampshire — 38 to 19. And it would be the first Hispanic vote in New York, Florida, Texas, California, Illinois, Ohio, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and other areas.

But Lopez admits that traditions die hard. To tell the Democratic Party and the rest of the nation about Puerto Rico's "first in the nation" primary, Lopez already is writing to inform television networks and likely primary of the plan and inviting them to participate in it.

Lopez won't disclose which "likely candidates" received his invitation to jump into the Puerto Rican contest.

Money-Back Guarantee

Longwood Hires Firm To Get Grants

By JANE CASSELLBERRY Herald Staff Writer

The city commission, having failed on March 12 to act on a contract with International Systems Inc. (ISI), voted Monday night to hire the firm to assist the city in obtaining federal grants.

The action was taken following a presentation by Debbie Day, ISI representative, who renewed the money-back guarantee offer made on Feb. 19 by ISI representative Joseph Hale. Hale said at the time the city would have to act that night in order to take advantage of the special offer to represent the city for $19,000 a year instead of the usual fee of $28,000.

Miss Day said if the firm failed to obtain grants equal to the fee paid the city would get the balance back. She also said the city could split the fee, making two payments of $9,500 each.

Chacey said the money could be taken from the city's contingency fund.

Commissioner Stephen Barton made the motion to subject to review of the contract and approval by the city attorney.

Richard Vanderhoff, a graduate construction engineer from Pennsylvania State University, has been hired as building official for the city of Longwood, City Administrator David Chacey told the city commission Monday night.

Originally from New Jersey, Vanderhoff came to Florida in 1965 and has been building houses in this area since 1973. Prior to that he was a building contractor in the Merritt Hills Road from MH (Mobile Homes) to Planned Unit Development and Commercial.

Chacey, former building official and planner, was named to the post of city administrator last month by the commission.

In other business the commission:

— Refused to adopt the State of Florida Model Energy Efficiency Code.

— Voted to change zoning for Pinkey property located at State Route 67 and Longwood Hills Road from MH (Mobile Homes) to Planned Unit Development and Commercial.

— Approved a site plan for a 30 by 36 foot storage warehouse submitted by Dennis Meridith, Inc.

— Set public hearing on ordinance changing zoning on property being purchased by Medplex Inc. for a 120-bed health facility.

— Approved a site plan for

Highway Anarchy: Truckers Wreak High-Speed Havoc

By TOM TIEDE
WASHINGTON (AP)—When teamster Timothy Andrews drove into a Missouri weigh station a few months ago, to use the lavatory, he was surprised to find the facility closed. Surprised? He was, because he had just been arrested for driving a truck over the weight limit.

records suggest there are about one million big trucks today, which is only one percent of all vehicles, but they figure in 4,000 deaths a year, or nine percent of all road fatalities.

What's more, the big truck record is especially grim when small vehicles are involved. Figures show that when heavy trucks collide with other vehicles, 91 of 100 of the fatalities are in the other vehicles. When trucks hit passenger cars, fully 97 percent of the deaths are in the cars.

This means that big trucks, many weighing as much as 130,000 pounds, are far more menacing than other vehicles. And so are the big truck drivers. The accident rate among all motorists is growing at about 1.2 percent a year, but the rate among haul haul trucks is nearly 14 times as high.

It should be said that most heavy truck operators dispute these figures. They claim the majority of their accidents are beyond their control, because of the accident figures are misleading. Trucks say four-wheel drivers cause most trucking mishaps; also, they insist their job itself is responsible.

Police admit the truckers are right about faulty motorists (studies indicate as many as 14 million Americans drive without valid licenses). And the teamsters may also be right about the killing nature of their work; to some extent commercial trucking and safe at 60 mph and made obscene gestures when she stopped. In California, passenger car drivers have complained of being forced off roads by trucks, then verbally harassed or even beaten.

And Frank Nye of Iowa tells a tale of a highway confrontation that is both chilling and common. Nye, a Cedar Rapids newsman, says he angered a trucker on Interstate 80, and as a result: "I was boxed in the inside lane by five trucks, at 70 mph, and I was not allowed to exit for 20 minutes."

Nye says the truck drivers were angry with him because he was driving too slow. Police say this kind of anger probably occurs on every busy road in America every hour of every day. In most cases, truckers quite naturally contain their frustrations; more and more, though, police say they do not.

In Texas, troopers recall a truck driver who got into a hot argument with a motorist by way of Citizens Band radio. When the motorist tried to pass the truck, the teamster abruptly crossed the yellow line, whereupon the driver of the car lost control and was killed in a spectacular overturn.

Not that the Texas incident is necessarily reflective of trucking in general. On the whole, the National Safety Council says truck operators are exceptional drivers: with 28.5 million trucks in operation, the accident rate is less than six per million miles (the non-truck accident rate is 11.90).

Yet the safety statistics are not totally encouraging, particularly those regarding heavy motor carriers. Federal records suggest there are about one million big trucks today, which is only one percent of all vehicles, but they figure in 4,000 deaths a year, or nine percent of all road fatalities.

What's more, the big truck record is especially grim when small vehicles are involved. Figures show that when heavy trucks collide with other vehicles, 91 of 100 of the fatalities are in the other vehicles. When trucks hit passenger cars, fully 97 percent of the deaths are in the cars.

This means that big trucks, many weighing as much as 130,000 pounds, are far more menacing than other vehicles. And so are the big truck drivers. The accident rate among all motorists is growing at about 1.2 percent a year, but the rate among haul haul trucks is nearly 14 times as high.

It should be said that most heavy truck operators dispute these figures. They claim the majority of their accidents are beyond their control, because of the accident figures are misleading. Trucks say four-wheel drivers cause most trucking mishaps; also, they insist their job itself is responsible.

Police admit the truckers are right about faulty motorists (studies indicate as many as 14 million Americans drive without valid licenses). And the teamsters may also be right about the killing nature of their work; to some extent commercial trucking and safe at 60 mph and made obscene gestures when she stopped. In California, passenger car drivers have complained of being forced off roads by trucks, then verbally harassed or even beaten.

Not all truckers are outlaws wielding 18-wheel weapons and found half of them not fit for the road. The BMCS says brakes are the most common defect on heavy trucks. In the Pennsylvania test, inspectors found that 60 percent of the unfit vehicles had some kind of braking irregularity. Actually, 65 of the trucks had entire pieces missing from their complex brake systems.

BMCS officers believe there are hundreds of thousands of unsafe trucks on the roads today. But most of them roll with impunity. The BMCS employs only 130 inspectors to cover 50 states, or one for every 25,000 interstate trucks; at best then, they can only see one percent of the vehicles each year.

Police likewise miss all but a fraction of the outlaw trucks. Capt. Lloyd Jennings of the Indiana State Patrol says he only has 100 men per shift to cover 92 counties, and "this means that some parts of the state can't be patrolled at all." Small wonder, he adds, that road anarchy triumphs.

Even when truck drivers are caught speeding, or drunk, or floating on marijuana, their punishment normally does not fit the crime. In many states the fine for a speeding, 30-on truck is about $50; that can be the extra profits a driver will earn from faster deliveries.

And so what if citations lead to a suspended license? Ken Nathanson of Washington says drivers often have back-up permits. He should know. A trucker once crashed into his car, killing his daughter; the driver had been suspended in his home state, but was operating on a valid license from another.

So they strut, and bully, and believe they own the road. Last year in Iowa, while state troopers conducted a crackdown on speed, two protesting truckers drew sides by sides on Interstate 80, and held up traffic for miles. When police asked why, one driver said: "We do what we want, Smokey."

Indeed, too often they do. Police say some truck drivers have turned truckloads into warehouses, highways into racetracks, and they've reduced CB radio to a humiliating disgrace. Not all the drivers are raising hell, but those who are have eroded the good public image of an entire industry.

And things may get worse. Researchers predict the size and number of long haul trucks will double in 20 years, but law enforcement staffs will hardly grow at all.

Even many truck operators worry that matters are out of control. Glen Walk, for instance, the 1977 Truck Driver of the Year. He started on the roads in 1926, and covered 3.8 million miles without an accident. Now he's retired, and glad of it. "It's getting to be murder out there," he says.

Journalism was her profession and that of Vladimir's late father, from whom she was divorced. She wrote for the children's department of Radio Moscow for 20 years — until she was fired as punishment for her son's activities.

"I gave advice to parents on how to bring up their children," she recalls. "But I brought up my own very differently." Vladimir's career as a dissident began innocently at 16 when he helped found a high school satirical magazine, prophetically titled "The Martyr." The authorities deemed the publication "anti-Soviet." Vladimir assumed full responsibility for the magazine and was forced to transfer from his school to a less prestigious night school. His mother was told to put him to work in a factory to bring him to his senses. He refused.

"Something had snapped inside me and I was never again the same," he explained in his autobiographical "To Build a Castle." "I knew for sure that I would never go to work in a factory to bring me to my senses. I refused."

NEW YORK (NEA) — Nina Bukovsky still does not see her son Vladimir too often. He is studying for a long-delayed biology degree at England's Cambridge University, while she, lives in Zurich with her daughter and grandson.

But she is content knowing Vladimir is no longer freezing, starving or bleeding behind bars. He spent 12 of his 36 years in Soviet prisons, madhouses and labor camps simply for speaking out against a regime that does not tolerate dissent.

The Bukovskys were exiled from their homeland two years ago, thanks to a worldwide campaign spearheaded by Mrs. Bukovsky of the "Dissent" She described her political awakening through friend and interpreter Ludmila Thorne during a recent U.S. visit.

"Rebellion did not come early to Mrs. Bukovsky. Journalism was her profession and that of Vladimir's late father, from whom she was divorced. She wrote for the children's department of Radio Moscow for 20 years — until she was fired as punishment for her son's activities.

"I gave advice to parents on how to bring up their children," she recalls. "But I brought up my own very differently." Vladimir's career as a dissident began innocently at 16 when he helped found a high school satirical magazine, prophetically titled "The Martyr." The authorities deemed the publication "anti-Soviet." Vladimir assumed full responsibility for the magazine and was forced to transfer from his school to a less prestigious night school. His mother was told to put him to work in a factory to bring him to his senses. He refused.

"Something had snapped inside me and I was never again the same," he explained in his autobiographical "To Build a Castle." "I knew for sure that I would never go to work in a factory to bring me to my senses. I refused."

"He gave me my first lesson in courage," she says. "He did not get them, but the regime did," she explains. "When the KGB gets sacks of what's going on." The Bukovskys' personal nightmare came to an abrupt end in December 1978 when Westerners took up Vladimir Bukovsky's cause. They demonstrated on his birthday before the Soviet mission to the United Nations and sent him countless letters and postcards. "He did not get them, but the regime did," she explains. "When the KGB gets sacks of what's going on." The Bukovskys' personal nightmare came to an abrupt end in December 1978 when sentenced to 12 years of prison, labor camp and internal exile. Those were his mother's darkest hours. "I realized he would probably spend the rest of his life in confinement," she says.

Her repeated complaints to the authorities over the "He gave me my first lesson in courage" treatment of her son went unacknowledged. Barred from communicating directly with Vladimir, she once waited seven months just to find out whether he was alive or dead.

"Finally my eyes opened," she says. "I realized we could not get justice from these institutions."

After losing her job in 1971, she began sending messages out of the country via Western correspondents. She addressed her underground letters to heads of state, to the International Red Cross, to the United Nations.

One of her most poignant messages was to the 1975 International Women's Year convention in Mexico City: "When my son is starved in prison, I cannot eat... When he shivers from cold in his prison cell, I cannot keep warm in my bed... I feel pain in my own body."

But the plight of those left behind is never far from the Bukovskys' minds. Mrs. Bukovsky says she thinks especially of the mothers of other political prisoners, who she fears are treated even more harshly today than they were two years ago.

"The authorities seem to be trying to simply stamp out the human-rights movement by any means," she says. "Luckily, many young people are continuing to carry on the fight."

What can Westerners do to help them? Mrs. Bukovsky uses the Russian word "glasnost" — publicly — through more demonstrations and letter-writing campaigns. She adds, "The hopes of the human-rights movement pivot on it."

"I got on top of my windup, ready to throw a curveball, then I thought better of it," Flanagan said. "It was a hanging curveball. I knew right away it was a mistake."

Chase Crunches Medics; Railroaders, Shell Win

What was expected to be a key first round game in the Sanford Little National League was turned into a Chase run Tuesday as the league leaders made lightwork of Medical Center's ace hurler Scott Kriger and posted an 11-1 victory.

Chase is now 5-0. Daryl Mentlie Tard a one-hitter for Chase and continued his torrid pace at the plate, unloading a triple and single in three at bats.

In other league games Tuesday, the Railroaders blasted Cardinal Industries, 16-4, while Clem Leonard Shell outlasted First Federal, 22-11.

Chase jumped in front 2-0 in the bottom of the first and held a 2-1 lead after two innings before pushing six runs placard in the bottom of the third.

Mentlie and Clint Byington slugged back-to-back RBI singles in the first after a pair of walks to account for the two runs. A two-run single by Theodore Graham and a two-run triple by Mentlie were the big hits of the third inning for Chase.

Dee Johnson had three hits for the winners, all singles, and Keith McGriff and Graham added two singles apiece.

In the first five games, Mentlie is 12-for-15 with six home runs, two triples and two doubles.

Tony Van Burger had the only safety for Medical Center, a second inning single, as Mentlie fanned 11 in five innings.

Shell pounded the First Federal pitchers for 17 hits, including nine for extra bases. Richard Leonard led the hitting attack for the winners with two homers, a double and a single in four at bats, and five runs scored. He drove in five runs. Willie Brown was three for five with a pair of doubles and scored four runs and Lee Frederick was three for five with a home run and double.

Atlanta Stuns Bullets, 107-99

By United Press International
Washington Coach Dick Motta has said any team that plans to take the NBA championship away from his Bullets would have to earn it.

Mr. Motta, meet the Atlanta Hawks. The Bullets posted the league's best record over the regular season — earning the privilege of having the home-court advantage throughout the playoffs — but that's little consolation to the stunned defending champions, who were upset at home, 107-99, by the Hawks Tuesday night. The best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series is now tied, 1-1, and the scene shifts to the Atlanta Omni for a classic matchup of the league's best home and road teams.

"I'd rather be in their position than ours because they've taken away our home-court advantage," Motta said. "Now, we have to go back out there and earn it. They played well. They just plain kicked our fannies."

Bob Dandridge had 36 points for the Bullets, who take a 23-18 road mark into the Omni.

Rangers To Profit From Errors?

By United Press International
The New York Rangers will either profit from Monday night's mistakes or find themselves in the first quarter-final playoff series with the Philadelphia Flyers, which resumes tonight at Philadelphia.

"We have to learn how to relax," Ranger captain Dave Maloney said. "We have to control the puck instead of putting it around the boards."

The Rangers attempted to sit on a 2-1 lead in the third period, but the Flyers managed the tying goal by Bill Barber with 4:58 left in regulation and then won it 4-2 seconds into overtime.

Barber said he couldn't fault the Rangers. "Defending the lead is only a natural reaction," he said. "You keep saying to yourself, 'We've got to keep the pressure on.' But the natural reaction is to pick your man up and not let him get by you. We've been burned by it, too." Ranger Coach Fred Shero, former mentor of the Flyers, said he expects the series to get more physical and doesn't think tonight's game will be as tame as Monday's.

Phillies Rout Bucs, 13-2

By United Press International
If the Philadelphia Phillies' 13-2 rout of the Pittsburgh Pirates Tuesday night was a preview of their season, Manager Danny Ozark is all for it.

"I would like to think this could be a preview of our season, but this game would have an effect on the entire season," said the Phillies' manager. "The Pirates will be with us all the way."

Enrique Romo's first pitch after replacing Jim Bibby in the fifth, with the bases loaded, was slammed over the centerfield fence by Garry Maddox, who said, "The grand slam was the first time I ever saw him pitch. I couldn't find anyone who really knew anything about Romo, so I just went up there ready to swing."

And Maddox was ready to swing all night, as he and fellow outfielder Bake McBride combined for three homers, nine RBI and eight hits. McBride drove in five runs on

COUNTY IN BRIEF

Advisory Committee Meets On Voting Method Switch

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer
The 15-member advisory committee, named by the county commission to study and make recommendations by mid-May on whether the county should continue using conventional voting machines or switch to the computer card method of voting, will hold its first meeting Thursday night.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Courtroom A at the Seminole County Courthouse.
Serving on the committee are: Rod Cable, chairman of the Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee and Kathleen Reynolds, Democratic state committee member; Bill McCullum, chairman of the Seminole Republican Executive Committee and Fred Streetman, Republican state committee member; Allen C. Goetz and E. Ray Mooney of the Seminole County League of Civic Associations; Linda Mays and Susan Warren of the Seminole County League of Women Voters; Mrs. Ralph Austin Smith, appointed by Supervisor of elections Camilla Bruce; Longwood City Clerk Linda Martin, appointee of the Council of Local Governments in Seminole County; and county commission appointees, Edna Staley, Shirley Bennett, DeeDee Schaffner, Pat Chismore and Trudy Nopper.

Bus Service Loan Possible

County Commissioner Bill Kirchoff gave his colleagues the good news Tuesday that he has the $500,000 granted by the U. S. Department of Transportation for the annual operation of the Orange-Seminole-DeSoto Transportation Authority (OSDTA) bus system that serves Seminole and Orange County has been guaranteed.
But, he added, those funds may not be available by May 1 when capital on hand will have been used up. While OSDTA awaits the federal money, it may be necessary for Orange and Seminole Counties to advance funds in the form of a loan, he advised fellow commissioners.
The federal money was delayed by the U. S. Department of Labor while a dispute between OSDTA and the Amalgamated Transportation Union was being worked out. An election is to be held for OSDTA bus drivers in the next few weeks so they may choose whether they want the union to represent them for collective bargaining purposes.

Roth Gets Appointment

Larry Roth, president of the Seminole County Bar Association, will join three other local attorneys as members of the Fred R. Wilson Memorial Law Library advisory committee.
County Commissioners Tuesday appointed Roth to the committee which oversees the operation of the law library at the courthouse.
Others on the committee are William Lettler, Fred M. Hill, and Gary Siegel. Terms are for a period of three years.

Chickens Vs. Mosquitoes

The Seminole County Health Department within the next few weeks will begin a "light trapping" program using chickens set on known feeding and breeding places of the mosquito that carries the St. Louis encephalitis virus in the county.
County commissioners approved the expenditure of $1,180 Tuesday for the program. This will be the fourth year in a row the trapping program has taken place.
While the program last year showed the mosquito, which carries the virus, was present in Seminole County, no St. Louis encephalitis cases involving Seminole residents occurred.

SEA Plans Pursuit Of School Board Suit

By SHARON CARRASCO
Herald Staff Writer
Although a former insurance company has pledged to make good its unpaid claims, the Seminole Education Association (SEA) still plans to pursue its suit filed against the school board.

Gene Grooms, executive director of SEA, said today the association will not withdraw its suit against the school board because of the "harassment" school employees suffered in 1977.
The association filed its suit in 1977 when the school board refused to pay the unpaid claims of the defunct Old Securities Insurance Company of Kansas City. The insurance company went into receivership in 1977 and left almost half million dollars of unpaid school employees medical, dental and life insurance claims.

School Superintendent William P. Laver announced Tuesday the insurance company has a "good chance" of making good its unpaid claims for approximately $46,000 in the next several months.
David Forbes, spokesman for the receiver, in a letter to Laver, said the insurance company may be able to pay "100 percent on the dollar" for the unpaid claims.
But Grooms said the recent development doesn't change the status of the lawsuit.
"That letter (to Laver) was gotten from some teachers writing to the receiver," Grooms said. "This matter should have been taken care of two years ago."
"The contract was between the school board and the insurance company. When it defaulted, all those claims should have been taken care of by the school board," Grooms contended.
"As a result, some of these employees have been harassed and bugged by creditors. Some

Supreme Court Overturns Libel Ruling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 6-3 today that a journalist who is sued for libel by a public figure may be compelled to disclose thoughts and opinions he held while preparing a news story.

In 1964, the Supreme Court made it difficult for public officials or other prominent people to bring successful libel suits by ruling they must show "actual malice" or "reckless disregard" of the truth in order to win damages in such a suit.

Today, however, the court majority said reporters allowed to have special First Amendment privileges that shields them from being questioned about the editorial process that would produce evidence of "actual malice."
The court acted on an appeal by former Lt. Col. Anthony Herbert, who is pressing a $447,000 libel suit against the Columbia Broadcasting System, correspondent Mike Wallace, "60 Minutes" producer Barry Lando and Atlantic Monthly magazine.

Personal Income Increases

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The personal income of Americans rose $19.2 billion—or 1 percent—last month for the largest increase of 1979, the Commerce

Department reported today. The sizeable gain was anticipated by government economists because the number of persons holding jobs advanced by 195,000 in March and retail sales jumped 1 percent, the same gain as personal income. March's rise was stronger than the 0.7 percent rise in February and the 0.4 percent January increase, the Commerce Department said. It was the largest since December's 1.4 percent gain.

Cook Of The Week

She Finds Chinese Food Is Generally Fat-Free

By ELDA NICHOLS
Herald Correspondent
Jackie Harmon, of Casselberry, is especially fond of Chinese food, but enjoys all types of cooking. In trying to keep away from fatty foods, Jackie has found Chinese dishes are generally fat-free.
"The recipes I'm giving you aren't too heavy. That's why we all like Chinese food," she said.
Having recently acquired a microwave oven, Jackie finds it most convenient for defrosting. "I'd always forget to defrost meat ahead of time, and now that's no longer a problem," she laughed.
She found a slow-cooker a great help when she worked. "But now that I'm not working, I don't use it as much."
A collector of cookbooks and recipes from newspapers and magazines, Jackie's favorite cookbook is the "Orange Cook Book." The Grange is an organization in the North. "We're from Pennsylvania, and the cookbook is a collection of recipes from Grange members," she explained. While living in the North, Jackie always had a garden. "I did a lot of canning and freezing then. Now, we only have a few tomato plants here," she said.
Cheryl, Jackie's 10-year-old daughter, is learning to cook. "She's working toward her Girl Scout badge and can already mix up a few simple things," said Jackie.
Jackie learned to cook in Home Economics classes in school. "In fact, I won a Betty Crocker Cake Contest when I was in high school," she admitted.
Making grocery money got further these days is no easy task, but Jackie says she saves money by going to a discount store where you buy your own groceries. "It's really quite a savings. I also try to use recipes where I already have the ingredients. Cheaper cuts of meat may be used and you still get the nutrition," she said.

"Because her daughter is not supposed to have salt, Jackie has been trying to keep all salt out of her recipes. "We really can't tell any difference," she said.

Dad Worries Sports Nut Will Make Poor Husband And Father

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, Amy, is engaged to a fellow who is a sports nut. Jerry follows baseball, basketball, football, hockey — any sport. He's an authority. He knows the names and numbers of all the players, how much they earn, who was traded for whom, etc. Jerry would sit and watch TV replays and live games all day if he could. And when he's not watching sports, he's reading about it or talking about it. I worry that after they're married he'll make a poor husband and worse father because all he seems to live for is sports. I've tried to warn Amy, but she doesn't listen. Amy doesn't enjoy sports as much as Jerry, but goes along with it just to please him. Jerry is a nice enough fellow otherwise, but being sports crazy, what would you say their chances are for a successful marriage?

AMY'S POP
DEAR POP: Who knows? In spite of Jerry's preoccupation with sports and Amy's lack of enthusiasm for it, they could have a great marriage. You sound like a well-intentioned father who's raising interference for his little girl who might well be able to call her own signals. Rock on, Dad.

LENNY IN THE BRONX
DEAR LENNY: It's humiliating to be corrected in front of people because if I walked and corrected him later, he'd claim he never said what I said he said, and then we'd have a fight.
Sometimes I correct him in front of people because if I walked and corrected him later, he'd claim he never said what I said he said, and then we'd have a fight.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I divorced after a 20-year marriage. My girlfriend has been living with me for the last nine months.
My eldest son, 19, has his girlfriend living with him, and the problem is that his girlfriend does not like my girlfriend at all. My son and his girlfriend told me they're getting married in July. They've made wedding plans and have decided that my ex-wife and I will be invited, but neither of us is allowed to bring a date. This plainly means the girl I live with is not invited.
I am ready to tell them that if I can't bring my girlfriend I will not attend either. My girlfriend is so hurt that I'm not even sure she'd go if they changed their minds and invited her.
I'm leaving the decision up to you.

MIXED-UP MESS
DEAR MIXED-UP: First find out whether your son and his fiancée will change their minds and invite your girlfriend. If they won't, and you want a good relationship with your son, go without her. If they DO invite her, try to persuade her to attend with you. If she refuses, go alone.

Getting Married?

Engagement and wedding forms are available at the Herald office to announce these events. The forms may be accompanied by professional black and white photographs if a picture is desired with the announcement. Wedding forms and pictures must be submitted within two weeks of the wedding.

Marriage, Work Pressure May Drive Women To Drink

The Herald Services Work may be driving married women to drink, according to a study of 1,100 women nationwide, the Health Insurance Institute reports.
Dr. Paula B. Johnson of the University of California at Los Angeles' department of psychology, who analyzed the data, says she believes this is due to pressure a built up by both roles.
For example, there's no indication that non-married working women have an unusual alcohol problem. Nor is there evidence that married women who don't work have any special drinking problems.
"Yet we concluded," she says, "that married women who are employed have significantly higher rates of both problem and heavier drinking than either single working women."
"No similar relationship occurs for men," Dr. Johnson says, "raising the distinct possibility that this

Correct Cutting Is The Key To Success Of Stir-Frying

Stir-frying is a method of quick cooking that more and more Americans are adopting. This Oriental technique of cooking relies upon correct cutting for proper tenderness of the meat, poultry or fish and proper crispness of the vegetables.

Taking a tip from Chinese chefs, Americans are using peanut oil for its lightness and high burning point when stir-frying.

This chicken dish starts with cut-up chicken breasts marinated in soy sauce and chicken broth. The chicken is cooked quickly in peanut oil before combining with stir-fried squash, mushrooms and pea pods.

For the classic beef and peppers, quickly cook thinly sliced flank steak. Then combine it with green-pepper strips, onions, soy and tomato sauce.

Heat 2 tablespoons peanut oil in large skillet or wok until sizzling hot. Add garlic. Cook 2 minutes. Remove and discard garlic pieces.

Remove chicken pieces from soy mixture. Drain on paper towels. Reserve soy mixture. Cook chicken quickly in hot oil, stirring constantly. Remove chicken; keep warm.

Add remaining 2 tablespoons oil to pan. Heat. Add squash and zucchini. Toss in oil to coat. Push to one side.

Add mushrooms and pea pods. Toss to coat with oil. Add chicken pieces and reserved soy sauce mixture.

Cover. Reduce heat. Simmer 5 minutes or until vegetables are crisp tender. Makes 4 servings.

CHINESE BEEF AND PEPPERS

1 flank steak, about 2 1/2 pounds
1/4 cup peanut oil
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 teaspoon ground ginger
2 large green peppers, seeded and cut into thin strips
1 cup chopped onion (1 large)
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 can (about 1 pound) bean sprouts, undrained

Freeze steak about 1 hour to make it easier to cut. Cut into very thin diagonal slices. Heat oil, garlic and ginger together in large skillet or wok. Add steak slices. Cook over high heat 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove meat from skillet or wok.

Add pepper strips and onion to oil left in pan. Cook 2 minutes. Add soy sauce, tomato sauce and pepper. Cook 3 minutes.

Return meat to pan. Add bean sprouts. Cook 2 minutes to heat through. Serve with hot cooked rice, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Stir-fry vegetables with chicken or beef for an authentic Oriental treat.

Restaurant Menus Easily Made At Home

Many well-known restaurants' menus are featuring hot dishes made with canned tuna. In addition to the traditional appetizers and salads, such dishes — easy to adapt because of tuna's convenience — can add new interest to your own table top.

By the same token, seafood restaurants often have shellfish specialties that can be deliciously revised with tuna replacing the more expensive (often unavailable) species of the briny deep.

In the first category is an ambience new restaurant located in New York's colorful Chicago Center Market, Alfredo the Original of Rome. Inspired by Alfredo Di Lelio, whose father's recipe for Fettucine All Alfredo made the famous restaurant a mecca for visitors to Rome — celebrities and non-celebrities alike — over the past 30 years.

The Chicago Alfredo has been designed in the manner of contemporary restaurants in Italy. The menu is streamlined, too, making it possible to serve quality foods at affordable prices. Among the main dishes, are perfectly cooked, al dente pastas served with a variety of authentic sauces. The star of the menu is, of course, Fettucine All Alfredo, made here exactly as it is made in Rome — with only butter and Parmesan cheese as the sauce.

Among the other excellent pastas, however, is Linguine del Pescatore, the long noodles topped with a flavorful regional tuna marinara sauce. The blend of flavors is most felicitous. The restaurant's recipe is simply itself to reproduce. Spaghetti is suggested instead of the linguine, since the latter may not be available all over the country.

On the west coast, Cigo's in San Pedro is a number one choice with southern Californians for Cioppino, that savory Portuguese seafood stew.

PASTA DEL PESCATORE ALFREDO
(Spaghetti With Tuna Marinara Sauce)

1/4 cup salad oil
1 cup chopped onion
4 cloves garlic, minced
1/2 cup chopped parsley
2 cans (10 ounce) tomatoes, drained
3 cans (8 ounces each) tomato sauce
2 bay leaves
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon dried leaf basil
2 cans (6 1/2 or 7 ounces each) tuna in vegetable oil
8 ounces cooked spaghetti or linguine

Cooked Rice Popular In Tasty Salads

American cooks and diners are getting a tour of the world via the salad bowl. The increased emphasis on controlling weight and eating a wide variety of fruits and vegetables for both taste and nutrition makes for more experimentation by the home chef.

Cooked rice will be popular in a potpourri of spring and summer salads for more experimentation by the home chef.

Chill until ready to serve. Add chicken, celery spinach, green onions and tomato. Toss lightly. Serve on salad greens. Garnish with ripe olives. Makes 6 servings or about 8 1/2 cups rice salad.

Rice can be refrigerated up to one week. Cover tightly to prevent rice grains from drying out or absorbing flavors from other foods. Rice can be frozen for 6 to 8 months. Defrost before using.

HONEY-FRUIT-RICE SALAD

1/2 cup cooked converted-brand rice, chilled
1/4 cup honey
1/4 cup salad oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
1/4 teaspoon celery seed
1/2 teaspoon salt

Combine honey, oil, lemon juice, mustard, celery seed and salt. Add to chilled rice to taste. Toss lightly. Chill until ready to serve.

Add cantaloupe, grapes, banana and peaches. Toss lightly. Serve on crisp salad dressing and garlic salt. Makes 6 servings or about 8 cups rice salad.

Dish Up Lemon Soup Either Hot Or Cold

Everyone is shifting into gear for more outdoor living after a rugged winter. Memorial Day weekend is the lead-in to more relaxed cooking and eating. Those who enjoy a refreshing soup will find a good combination of flavors in a California version of the Greek lemon soup called avgolemono. Made with convenient canned and frozen foods, the soup is easier to prepare than it is to pronounce.

The base is condensed chicken-and-egg soup with egg yolks, lemon and pared frozen chopped broccoli added. It may be served hot or cold, but is delightful cold with a dollop of sour cream.

GREEK BROCCOLI-LEMON SOUP

1 package (10 ounces) frozen chopped broccoli

DEVIL'S FOOD CAKE
(Makes one 8-inch layer cake or 12-ounce pan)

2 cups sugar
1/4 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
1/4 cup cocoa
1/4 cup shortening
3 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
Grease and dust with flour two 8-inch layer pans or one 12x8x2-inch pan. Combine dry ingredients in large mixer bowl. Add milk, shortening, eggs and vanilla. Blend ingredients on low speed 30 seconds; beat on medium speed 2 minutes. Pour into pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes or until brownies begin to pull away from edge of pan. Cool; cut into squares. Sprinkle squares lightly with confectioner's sugar, if desired.

1/2 cup butter or margarine
1/4 cups raw, regular cooking rice
1 can (10 1/2 ounces) condensed chicken broth
Water
two-thirds cup seedless raisins
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
one-eighth teaspoon ground red pepper
1/4 cup coarsely chopped macadamia nuts

Melt butter in a medium saucepan. Add rice and sauté, stirring, for 5 minutes or until lightly browned.

Combine broth with water to measure 3-one-third cups. Add to rice along with remaining ingredients except nuts. Bring to boiling. Cover, reduce heat and simmer 25 minutes or until rice is tender and all liquid is absorbed.

Add nuts. Fluff rice with a fork. Turn into serving dish and serve. Makes 6 portions.

Beat eggs in small mixer bowl; gradually add sugar and vanilla. Blend in melted butter; beat well. Combine flour, baking powder and salt; add to creamed mixture. Remove one cup batter; stir in chopped nuts and maple flavoring. Add cocoa to remaining batter; blend until combined. Spoon batter into a greased 8-inch square pan in four alternate rows. Sprinkle rubber spatula or scraper through the batter lightly, being careful not to blow too well. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes or until brownies begin to pull away from edge of pan. Cool; cut into squares. Sprinkle squares lightly with confectioner's sugar, if desired.

Possible Sunshine Law Violation

County Warned On Voting Procedure

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

A memo will be sent to the Seminole County Commission advising the board its method of voting this week on certain federal projects may be in violation of the sunshine law, a spokesman for State Attorney Douglas Cheshire's office said today.

"It will be advising the commissioners their actions could possibly be in violation of the sunshine law," said Chris Ray, Cheshire's chief assistant in Seminole County. "The law is so all-encompassing, sometimes officials don't know they are in violation when they might be. They would have to know and intentionally take action in violation of the sunshine law to be guilty of a violation."

The question of whether the sunshine law might be violated was posed to Ray today after county commissioners, following the usual practice, cast votes on federally funded Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) programs Tuesday by marking ballots favoring or disapproving the various programs.

The votes were tabulated by Hank Newell, Manpower manager, and the results of the voting announced, but not how each commissioner voted on each item. The ballots and the votes cast by the individual commissioners were made a part of the record later.

"That method of voting probably constitutes a violation of the sunshine law," said Attorney General Frank Vickery from his office in Tallahassee. "The whole intent of the law is that a person should be able to be at the meeting and at that point know what is going on. According to opinions issued by our office, voting by ballot, without the individual votes being announced, is not proper," Vickery said.

The attorney general's opinion referred to by Vickery included AGO 71-32 which states "if at any time during the meeting the proceedings . . . are not wholly exposed to the view and hearing of the public and news media, then that portion of the meeting becomes violative of the statutory requirement imposed by the phrase 'open to the public at all times.'"

Vickery also referred to AGO 73-344 in which the attorney general advised the public service commission to discontinue its practice of circulating vote sheets among the members so that voting could be done privately.

In addition he spoke to the Florida Supreme Court decision involving the "Town of Palm Beach" in which it was stated an "action which was taken in violation of the law is void ab initio (void from its beginning)."

"I don't believe the CETA programs of the past are voided by an unintentional act," Ray said today.

Meanwhile, County Commissioner Bob Sturm said it was not his intent, nor the intent of his colleagues, he believes, to violate any law by the ballot method of voting. "To avoid even a question, however, we should remove the technicality," he said, adding he does not object to voting on any of the projects publicly. "If we were to go over every project on a one-to-one basis, I would not change my votes any. Sometimes things are done for expediency.

It would not add an inordinate amount of time to the meetings, perhaps 10-15 minutes more to vote on each project," he said. Sturm noted he "prestudied" the projects and asked questions in advance about two or three projects. "The intent was clear. I marked my ballot in the view of the public and the votes were recorded," he said.

Commissioner Dick Williams said he doesn't "really believe the attorney general's opinion applies to marking a ballot when each commissioner's name appears on the ballot. "There was surely no intent to make anything secret and there was nothing secret in fact," he said.

Williams also pointed out that often the county's budget, as an example, is gone over in greater detail at workshop meetings of the county commission than few members of the public attend rather than at the official meetings. "When it comes time to vote on the budget there are many things various commissioners don't

Fire Destroys Unused Plant

The walls came tumbling down today when a fire that began at 6:58 a.m. destroyed the Rand Yard ice plant. Cause of the fire is under investigation by the Seminole County fire department, according to County Public Safety Director Gary Kaiser. The plant is located about a mile west of Sanford on Rand Yard Road.

Three fire units from Seminole County, assisted by a tanker from Lake Mary Fire Department providing mutual aid, were still on the scene late this morning trying to control the blaze.

"It is a difficult fire to control," said Kaiser, "as there is no water supply at the scene and water has to be trucked in."

An earlier fire last year had severely damaged the interior of the building and it was not being used at the time of this morning's fire.

"The ice plant was very well insulated, it was like a building within a building," said Kaiser. There were two exterior walls a foot apart and two roof layers with the four-foot space between filled with cork and heavy timbers making it difficult to put out a fire."

He said when the fire occurred last year more than 100,000 gallons of water were pumped in by relay from a lake and six pieces of equipment were used to fight the blaze for 12 hours "and it still didn't help much." — JANE CASSELL-BERRY

Gas 'Price-Gouging' In Sanford, Vicinity Set For DOE Probe

By GEOFFREY POUNDS
Herald Staff Writer

Federal investigators from the Department of Energy (DOE) have been called to Sanford to investigate the alleged pricing practices of Sanford area gas stations, DOE officials confirmed today.

The matter came to light when William Budzinski, 42, of Monroe Harbor, Sanford, contacted the energy department in Washington and told officials he suspected a Sanford discount station of price gouging.

Budzinski said today he decided to report the store to the DOE after he noticed the price of gas there had risen 9 cents in a 3-day period and said he considered that price gouging.

However, his statements were refuted by the chain's headquarters.

"There's no way we would give an order like that. We are strictly in line with the president's price guidelines," a spokesman with the chain's home office said.

The guidelines on gas prices set by the president earlier this month call for a base rate per gallon similar to that of May, 1978. The price of gas can be adjusted upward proportionate to increases in the wholesale price to the dealer, rent and utility increases plus a 3 cents per gallon increase for non-product cost increases to the dealer. The latter would include the cost of labor, Bill Webb of

K mart Opening Set

The 68,337 square-foot K mart discount department store on Orlando Drive in Sanford will open to the public at 10 a.m. May 17, according to the company's management.

The Sanford K mart will bring the number of K mart stores in Florida to 74 as the K mart Corporation continues its expansion of its stores in the state. On May 17 there will be a total of 1,337 K marts in the United States, Puerto Rico and Canada.

Sanford officials and top executives of the K mart Corporation will take part in a ribbon-cutting ceremony at the main doors of the department store immediately before opening.

Because record crowds of all ages are expected to participate in the grand opening, police have been asked to give special attention to the traffic on the streets surrounding the store during the first few hours of opening. This is for the safety of the motorists driving by.

Once a car is in K mart's parking lot there should be no congestion, company officials said.

The new K mart, selling nationally advertised products and backing all sales with a "satisfaction always" policy, will be a discount department store in its pricing policy.

Following are highlights of the merchandise the department store will carry: appliances; building tools; floor coverings; draperies; yard goods and sewing materials; women's fashions; men's, boy's, girl's and infant's clothing; bedding; jewelry; camera supplies; books and records; pets and pet supplies, and health and beauty aids.

The K mart will have a complete automotive center with an auto music section featuring stereo tape players and tapes. The store will also feature a sporting goods department, a building materials department and a pharmacy.

More than 70 area residents will be given full-time employment when the new K mart opens, company officials said. Additional personnel will be hired part-time during holiday seasons. "A staff made up of entirely local people will assure that K mart is alert to all the needs of its new customers," a company spokesman said.

"The first K mart opened in a suburb of Detroit in 1962. Company management conceived K mart as a store selling top quality merchandise at a small profit to induce high volume. This concept brought immediate and overwhelming acceptance, resulting in the world's fastest growing mass merchandising chain," the spokesman added.

First Three Months Of 1979 Economy Slows Dramatically, May Help Inflation Fight

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The nation's economic growth slowed dramatically during the first three months of 1979 from the blistering pace of last year's final quarter, the government reported today — a development which may help the fight against inflation.

When the economy slows, inflationary pressures are eased.

The Commerce Department said the value of all goods and services produced in the United States — the Gross National Product — increased at an annual rate of 6.7 percent during the January-March period after adjustment for inflation.

It was the most sluggish performance for the GNP — value of the nation's goods and services adjusted for inflation — since the first quarter of 1978 and considerably below the 8.8 percent advance registered during the final quarter of last year.

The Commerce Department also reported that inflation during the first quarter rose at an 8.7 percent annual rate compared with 8.2 percent during the previous quarter. The small increase in economic output came as a surprise.

Several government officials, including Federal Reserve Board Chairman G. William Miller, have said publicly in recent days they expected economic growth to be about 2 percent or a little less during the first quarter.

But the new Commerce Department report said a sharp slowdown in retail sales held down overall growth.

In recent weeks, some members of the administration have been engaged in an internal debate over whether additional actions were needed to rein in economic growth in order to combat inflation.

Miller and President Carter have said they believe current policy already in place is sufficient to do the job.

But other officials, including Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, disagreed.

They urged the Federal Reserve to tighten credit another notch, but Miller has so far refused.

The administration has predicted that economic growth during all of 1979 should be about 2.5 percent — a pace they believe is sufficient to make progress in the anti-inflation drive without the country lapsing into a recession.

But the slower-than-expected growth rate during the first three months of the year may change that scenario.
