"Well on the first day of practice," Colbert continued, "the pert-time coaches didn't show up, so I was on my own. Being a football coach (Colbert coaches the Seminole High junior varsity football team), I assumed the procedure was the same so I had the kids doing push-ups and other such exceptions."

"Chuckling, Colbert resumed his story saying that the swimmers were soon complaining of cramps as football exceptions are in the muscles, rather than relax them for swimming purposes.

"When that didn't work," Colbert went on, "I reasoned that in other sports you run a lot to get in shape, so in swimming you must swim a lot. So I told them to jump in the peol and swim until I told them to stop."

"Now if there were two-mile races, we'd have won," he said, "but in the short aprints of high school swimming, we just couldn't keep up. I was practicing them as if they were going to swim the English Chansel."

Can't Swim The Butterfly

However Colbert has quickly learned skills of competitive swimming, by observing, reading and actually practicing the strokes and methods himself.

"I can do every stroke but the butterfly," he said.
Colbert will join the Sanford Swim Association's AAU program this summer as a coach and this too will add te his knowledge. Next year the Seminole swim team should be stronger. All eight girls return and only two of the boys—Polgar and Dowlen — are seniors.

It's still going to be an uphill battle, but it's also a good bat that the Seminoles will be elimbing, instead of rolling backwards.

Especially, if Colbert can master that butterfly.
