Lease corp, school board meet

The Seminole County School Board will take a "temporary recess" during their meeting this evening in order for the Seminole School Board Leasing Corporation to convene.

The district's bond counsel, Greenberg Traurig, has prepared a ground lease agreement between the school board and the leasing corporation for at least 30 years for Winter Springs High School; South Seminole Middle School; the additions at Lake Howell High School, at Lake Brantley High School and at Seminole High School; and for the new Education Services Center.

The school board's board of directors will be asked this evening, following an opportunity for public input, to approve the corporate officers, the corporate by-laws, the membership certificate and seal of the corporation.

The corporation will be comprised of board chairman Barbara Kuhn, who will serve as president; vice chairman Sandy Robinson, who will serve as vice president; Supt. Paul Hagerty, who will serve as secretary; and John Pavelchak, executive director of finance and budget, who will serve as treasurer.

The district and the leasing corporation need to hold the public hearing to approve the ground lease. The ground lease is necessary so the board and the corporation can enter into the master lease agreement as part of the certificate of participation financing program.

The school board meeting will begin at 7 p.m. It will be at the board headquarters, 1211 S. Mellonville Ave., Sanford.

Standoff continues

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — As of this morning, the stand-off continued at 309 Continental Court in Altamonte Springs. Sheriff's deputies were waiting out Warren Battle, 47, who reportedly barricaded himself in his house yesterday. According to sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, "The situation began at 9:45 a.m. yesterday, when Battle told his girlfriend and doctor that he was going to kill himself."

McDonough said sheriff's deputies and hostage negotiators were called to the scene, and attempted to talk to Battle throughout the night, with no success.

A command post has been established at the Magnolia Industrial Park, on C.R. 427 in Altamonte Springs.

Contract for Siemens

U.S. Rep. John L. Mica announced last week that the Rolm Company, an affiliate of Siemens Stromberg-Carlson in Lake Mary, was awarded a $2,177,913 contract to provide a Digital Voice Telecommunications System (DVTS) for the new Space Station Processing Facility located in Kennedy Space Center's Industrial Area. The DVTS will provide telephone service to employees in the new building.

"I am pleased that most of the work for completing this contract will be done at the manufacturing facility in Lake Mary. These are the kinds of high technology projects I want to see our companies involved in," Mica said.

Siemens will be manufacturing, installing, and testing the telecommunications system, as well as training on operation and maintenance of the system.

The Space Station Processing Facility will serve as the central preflight check out and processing point for Space Station elements.

Time running out for county to buy natural lands

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Fearing a growing cost of operations and maintenance of land bought under the $20 million Natural Lands Program, Seminole County commissioners slowed purchases until a maintenance cost analysis could be prepared.

"We need a comfort zone before we continue so we can get a handle on the costs," said commissioner Pat Warren.

Colleen Logan, the county's natural lands planner, said the annual cost to maintain the lands will range from $20 to $75 per acre. Activities included at the lowest rate of pricing include periodic burning and removal of unwanted vegetation to limited-access lands. At the high end, is maintenance of a "passive" park with nature trails, restrooms and other facilities.

Buying land is like buying a car; if you don't put oil in it, it'll break down.

—Commissioner Larry Furlong

Popular Wekiwa State Park costs $95 per acre to maintain and operate, said Logan. See Land, Page 5A

Commissioners, new administrator down to business

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — City commissioners officially welcomed a new city administrator on board and cleared the way for a new business to open during their Monday night meeting.

The commissioners approved the conditional use request for Casablanca Theater and Bistro in the Plaza Del Sol Shopping Center, 1155 West State Road 434.

The theater will contain two cinemas, each with 70 seats, with beer, wine, soft drinks and food service. The commissioners OK'd the project with the amendment that the cost of admission will not be included in the gross revenue figure used to determine the revenue from drink sales vs. food sales. To comply with city codes defining restaurants, alcoholic beverage sales cannot exceed 40 percent of gross revenue from the restaurant portion sales.

W. Shelton Smith attended his first commission meeting as new city administrator and received a warm welcome as well as a little financial help.

Foster care for future guide dogs

LAKE MARY — At the gala reunion Sunday on the grounds of Markham Woods Presbyterian Church, hosts Doris and Roy Houchins served their guests dogfood.

Doris Houchins serves as area coordinator for a Palmetto, Florida-based guide dog school. Her group has raised nearly 60 puppies for the school, and she is currently overseeing the rearing of 21 more, placed in homes from Lakeland and Kissimmee to Daytona Beach.

The overall organization is Southeastern Guide Dogs Inc., Puppy Program. Last year, Southeastern placed 125 puppies with host families. The families give a year of their time to raise a puppy they hope will grow to help a blind man or woman find independence through the use of a guide dog.

Families then return their fostered dogs to the school for formal guide dog training at about 14 to 16 months of age.

Sunday's event was the reunion of a group of littermates. The star of the day was "Disney," a 13-week-old yellow Labrador retriever puppy, raised by a Disney employee.

The event was Disney's first training session with his fellow pups.

Doris Houchins was named 1994 Puppy Raiser Volunteer by Southeastern earlier this month in honor of her contributions to the organization.

In addition to raising dogs, her group raised about $7,000 for Southeastern's 8th Annual

Summer recreation programs change with year-round schools

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Summer recreation programs are things of the past in Lake Mary. The city must now consider how to handle recreation needs for year-round schooling.

"We'll have a six week program before the start of school this fall," said Parks and Recreation Director John Holland, "but from then on, it looks as though some type of year-round program will have to be set up."

Holland will be discussing the See Lake Mary, Page 5A

SANFORD — This summer's city recreation program in Sanford will appear unchanged for the time being. A seven week session will be held from June 13 through July 29.

"In July however," said Recreation Supervisor Lisa Jones, "we'll begin changing to go along with the year-round school program. We will be arranging for three-week long recreation programs to serve students who are mostly in the Green Track in their schools."

Jones said the Green Track appeared to be the one most used by local area students. "We will be working to see what can be done for the other track students however."

she added. For the Green Track, the first three-week program will be held in October of this year. Another is set for February of 1995.

"We are starting with this one series in the beginning," Jones said. "We will have to walk before we run with any massive overhaul of the program to serve all of the students all of the time."

LONGWOOD — The summer recreation programs of the past have ended for Longwood. The program will now continue on a year-round basis through an agreement with the Seminole branch of the YMCA.

Parks and Recreation Director Sandra Lomax commented, "We are working on an arrangement where youngsters who would get involved in the recreation programs, would sign up with the 'Y' for whatever time periods they want."

"As this would be a combined project," she added, "the programs will be held in the city facility, at the Ed Meyers Community Building, just west of City Hall."

The new program is planned to begin in July, and Lomax expects the cost to be approximately $55 per week per child, although she indicated families with more than one child may be given some reduction.

"Davia Clements at the YMCA is handling that side of the program." See Longwood, Page 5A

Spreading the word

Martha Wells of Sanford helps the city inform residents of the downtown historic district about Old Sanford Regulations, based on codes suggested by architect Andres Duany. The codes regulate renovation and restoration of the homes in that area. At her own expense, Wells had 100 copies of the codes printed and she spent Monday evening distributing the copies to her neighbors. Neighbor Dave DeVaughn of 701 Magnolia thanks her for the information.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

'Fat Danny' refused federal bond

MIAMI (AP) — A man who prosecutors say is an associate of the Lucchese organized crime family was denied bond on federal marijuana smuggling charges.

The government sufficiently presented a case showing that Daniel "Fat Danny" Laratro could be a danger to the community if released, U.S. Magistrate Stephen Brown ruled Monday after an hourlong hearing.

Laratro, 45, will continue to be held in pre-trial detention, Brown said. He is charged with conspiracy to import and possess 38,000 pounds of marijuana with intent to distribute. If convicted of the charges, he could face life imprisonment and fines up to $8 million.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul Schwartz said Laratro was part of the crime family that operates primarily in South Florida, New York and New Jersey.

Head and torso found

PALM BAY — Authorities are trying to determine whether a head and torso found in Turkey Creek were those of an elderly Alzheimer's patient, and if he had been attacked by an alligator.

Dental and medical records for 84-year-old Cubie Harris were turned over to the Brevard County medical examiner's office for a possible match, said Sgt. Don Smith of the Palm Bay police department.

Harris wandered away from the Palm Bay Care Center, about a mile away from the creek, Feb. 14.

The remains were found Saturday. A left leg was discovered March 3 about a block east of where Saturday's find was made.

Saturday's remains were so decomposed that police could not determine sex, race or age range.

Sunken barges cough up coal

PENSACOLA — Workers armed with rakes and shovels combed a Florida Panhandle beach, gathering coal coughed up by sunken barges.

Four barges owned by Warrior and Gulf Navigation Co. sank March 1 in the Gulf of Mexico near the mouth of Pensacola Bay. They were carrying 5,600 tons of coal destined for the Gulf Power Co. generating plant in Pensacola.

The barges and a tug may have been drawn from the bay into Pensacola Pass by strong tides during rough weather, said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Richard Wells. He said the crew may have cut the barges loose to prevent the tug from also being sunk or a cable may have broke under the strain of high seas.

About 3,500 tons of the coal, in chips and chunks ranging up to the size of baseballs, spilled into the Gulf.

Intruder kills woman, wounds 2

COCOA BEACH — Police suspect robbery was the motive in the fatal stabbing of 21-year-old woman and the wounding of her mother and stepfather in an attack at their riverfront home.

Brevard deputies were looking for a white male suspect as they collected evidence in the stabbings, which occurred after the family returned from church Sunday night.

"Robbery appears a likely motive," but investigators had been unable to determine what was stolen. "They were apparently attacked by a lone assailant."

The fatal victim, Charlotte Amy Gellert, managed to escape from the house, ran across Highway A1A and collapsed from her wounds in the parking lot of an apartment complex.

Dr. Robert Lehton, a psychiatrist, and his wife, Charlotte, were severely wounded but were expected to recover and investigators hoped to question them at Cape Canaveral Hospital. Lehton was in critical condition and his wife was in serious but stable condition, a nursing supervisor said Monday night.

Deputies agree there was a burglar because of forced entry they found at the home. However they have not confirmed that the burglar was already in the house when the family arrived home.

Miss Gellert was studying music recording at Brevard Community College.

Boy Scouts mentally disabled men

ORLANDO — These Boy Scouts range in age from 28 to 41. Two of them have been in Troop 290 for 20 years.

The troop members are mentally disabled, but they follow the same routines as regular Scouts, progressing from Tenderfoot through Eagle Scout by earning merit badges in many fields of endeavor set out in the Scouting handbook.

Frankie Gadsen is 28, works at a hotel and is still a Tenderfoot after two years. Bill Rich, 33, is a First Class Scout and the scoutmaster's son.

"It's no sin to be retarded," said Scoutmaster Pete Rich. "It's something we live with — some families better than others. You think there isn't a lot that can be done, but there is if you work at it."

Rich was saddened when he saw his son — 8 years old at the time — unable to keep pace with his fellow Cub Scouts because of his cerebral palsy.

Lawmakers air public nudity

Bill dressed with loopholes for nudists, dancers, models

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A Tampa lawmaker is ready to outlaw nude beaches with a bill dressed up to exempt nudist colonies, topless bars and artists' models.

The exemptions were added to appease some of the "special interests" objecting last week to Sen. John Grant's effort to ban virtually all forms of public nudity in Florida.

Others simply oppose the Legislature's involvement in "morality" issues such as school prayer, school character-development classes — and public nudity, the Tampa Democrat said Monday.

"Some of the opponents are people who just think you shouldn't have laws that tell you when you should wear clothes," he said. "But that's what this legislative debate's all about."

Groups from the conservative American Family Association to South Florida Free Beaches, a Naturist Action Committee affiliate, were ready to testify on Grant's proposal (SB 1280) at a Senate Criminal Justice Committee last week. The panel ran out of time and put off debate until Wednesday.

American Family Association state director David Caton said his group favors the bill to battle a trend toward public exhibitionism.

Shirley Mason of South Florida Free Beaches said it was a solution to a problem that doesn't exist.

Mason said Florida has about three miles of "clothing optional" beaches on 1,200

MIAMI BEACH — Deborah McDonnell stands topless, nursing her 7-week-old son on Miami's trendy South Beach, looking serenely at the sun-drenched turquoise of the Atlantic Ocean — completely on vacation.

Some Florida legislators would rather see the tourist from Boston in handcuffs, being carted off to the slammer. Under a bill being debated this week in Tallahassee, she would be subject to a year in jail and a fine of $1,000 for being topless on the beach.

Student shoots 2 at school

By Associated Press

RIVIERA BEACH — A 14-year-old boy, apparently upset over a missing video game cartridge, shot two students when he fired into a crowd of youths gathered on a school basketball court.

Students at John F. Kennedy Middle School said the teen-ager had been acting strangely and was angry at another student before he came to school Monday.

According to police and witnesses, the student was playing basketball when he left the game, crawled through a hole in a fence into the woods and returned with a .22-caliber pistol.

"He said, 'The devil is in my eye,'" said sixth-grader Sinyonson Bisserech.

He pulled the gun from his trousers and began firing, witnesses said.

Corey Collins, 12, was shot in the shoulder and listed in good condition at St. Mary's Hospital in West Palm Beach.

Clarence Johnson, 14, was shot in the back and the bullet lodged in his neck. He was in serious condition Monday night at St. Mary's.

Police did not release the name of the attacker because he is a juvenile. Riviera Beach Police Chief Lorenzo Brooks said the boy will be charged with aggravated assault and attempted murder, but it will be up to the state attorney's office to decide whether to prosecute him as an adult.

Police refused to discuss the motive for the shootings, saying they are still investigating. But students said the 14-year-old was aiming for Johnson, who wound up with his Genesis basketball video game cartridge on Friday.

After firing three shots into the crowd, the boy turned and started shooting toward the street. He then sat down by a tree and was arrested without a struggle.

Clintons find respite from Washington woes

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

BAL HARBOUR — President Clinton and wife Hillary came to Florida to boost their health care plan, praise local Democrats and lash out at recalcitrant Republicans.

But the president's brother-in-law, Hugh Rodham, said they also came to relax, get some sun and play golf away from the pressures of Washington. The Clintons stayed on the exclusive resort at Fisher Island off Miami.

Rodham, former public defender and Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, said he and Clinton enjoyed a Monday round of golf with partners including pro golfer Raymond Floyd. Who won?

"We didn't keep score."

The president addressed a $3.5 million fundraiser Monday night, noting the administration's successes of the past year and angrily criticizing Republicans for engaging in "politics of division, distraction and destruction."

He told the audience "the Republican Party has not always been against change and unity. It has not always been obsessed with personal power and just in a suit because they didn't have the White House."

The president got the biggest applause when he mentioned the hemispheric summit planned for next December in Miami.

Jam session arrests

Members of a band were arrested by Longwood police Saturday at a residence at 1210 Logan Drive. Police said they had been called to the residence regarding loud band noises which they reported could often be heard two blocks away. Other complaints include hearing gunshots, and reckless driving. Officers said they had been summoned a total of 29 times to that same address between Friday and Saturday. Deborah L. Deuso, 39, of Orlando, was charged with breach of the peace/intoxication. Dolph P. Hale II, 22, of the Logan Drive address was charged with breach of the peace/intoxication and carrying a concealed weapon. James T. Herring, 23, also a resident of that home, was charged with breach of the peace/intoxication. Police said they uncovered two handguns during their investigation.

John Doe arrest

A man was arrested by Seminole County sheriff's deputies Friday in the east bound rest area on Interstate 4 near Longwood. A security guard, checking a vehicle reported to have mechanical problems, told deputies he saw what appeared to be marijuana in the front seat. When deputies arrived, they said they found four persons standing near the vehicle, and uncovered 90 grams of marijuana in a bag on the front seat. Deputies said the driver of the vehicle identified himself as Mario Morena, and told them he had purchased the marijuana in Tampa and was taking it to Daytona Beach to sell. Later, he reportedly told deputies he was Juan Carlos Munoz, age 20, and admitted being in the country illegally.

He was arrested for possession of marijuana, and obstruction by disguise. At the John E. Polk Correctional Facility, it was found that the man was also wanted on a warrant issued in Manatee County, for having no valid driver's license. Pending verification of his name, he was arrested as John Doe. The others with him were not charged.

Man arrested for bogus crack

A 27-year old man was arrested for selling counterfeit cocaine to an undercover CCIB agent Friday night for $20.

Agents of the City County Investigative Bureau were conducting an undercover operation targeting street level cocaine dealers near Market and Haymen streets.

Anthony Mendel Lovett, 27, who refused to give his local address, was arrested after selling an agent what he alleged was crack. The report stated, a test showed the substance was not cocaine. Lovett's bond was set at $5,000. At the jail, he was also served with a warrant from the Florida Parole Commission for aggravated battery. He is on a no bond status on the warrant.

Breakup leads to charges

Kardell V. Slater, 27, 99 Seminole Gardens was arrested by Sanford Police and charged with criminal mischief and domestic violence after an alleged fight with his girlfriend.

The woman said Slater became upset when she told him she did not want to see him anymore. They both left the Seminole Gardens residence. Slater allegedly returned sometime later and wrecked every room. Furniture was turned over mirrors and lamps broken, food from the refrigerator and cupboard thrown around. The police report stated clothes were taken from drawers and a bed and mattress was taken outside to a dumpster and set on fire. Clothes were also burned. The woman said she was afraid of Slater, who was apprehended near Lake Monroe Terrace after attempting to contact the victim by telephone.

Man faces drug charge

James Edward Burleson, 27, 5171 Thomas Sible Road, Sanford, was charged by sheriff's deputies with possession of more than 20 grams of marijuana after a traffic stop Friday at County Home Road and Hwy 17-92.

Burleson's passenger, James Frable, 23, 213 Odham Drive, was taken into custody on an active warrant from the Florida Parole Commission.

While being questioned, the deputy observed Frable give Burleson a list of telephone numbers. As Burleson put the paper in his pocket and retrieve another, a small partially burned hand rolled cigarette fell out, which tested positive as marijuana, the arrest report stated. A black bag containing over 20 grams of cannabis was found on the motorcycle the two men had been riding along with some prescription medication for which neither man had a prescription, the report stated. Both men were jailed.

Domestic Battery

Christopher John Bullett, 40, 951-205 Birdbay Ct., Lake Mary, was charged by sheriff's deputies with battery/domestic violence after his wife reported a verbal altercation, according to the police report, turned into a physical fight Friday night.

Driving under the influence

Craig Warren Blease, 31, 327 Silver Pine Drive, Lake Mary, was charged by Lake Mary police with DUI after a traffic stop Friday. Blease was driving north on Rhinehart Road when an officer stopped him. After being advised of field sobriety tests, Blease allegedly told the officer he was two blocks from home and the police should be looking for real criminals, the police report stated. He was arrested after failing sobriety tests. Breath tests showed his blood alcohol level was .149, the police report stated.

Arrested for drugs

Donald Edward Major, 31, 109 Belhune Cir., Sanford, was arrested by city police Friday night at 1506 W. 13th St. for possession of cocaine. An informant told a special investigations unit officer a subject was selling cocaine with the use of a pager, the police report stated. Major was arrested after a drug buy by an undercover agent, according to the report.

Caught going to jail

Dwight Deon Oliver, 20, 1261 Dundar Ave., Lake Monroe, was arrested by sheriff's deputies early Saturday morning and charged with possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana. A deputy answering a noise complaint found two subjects asleep in a vehicle at McKay Street and Dunbar Avenue, with the motor running, according to the police report. A small plastic bag of cannabis was lying on the dashboard of the vehicle. When the officer awakened Oliver, he said he was going to jail to turn himself in on a warrant, the report stated. The other subject was not arrested. The outstanding Seminole County warrant for Oliver was for failure to appear on a charge of resisting without violence, according to the report.

Warrant arrests

- Terrence Anton Moore, 19, 30 William Clark, Sanford, failure to appear/driving while license suspended or revoked.

IRS commissioner moves tax collection into computer age

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — IRS Commissioner Margaret Mihner Richardson knows she'll never be loved as the nation's chief tax collector. But some respect for the efficiency and fairness of her agency would be nice.

Richardson, a 50-year-old tax attorney, is the Internal Revenue Service's 14th commissioner and only the second woman to head the gigantic agency.

She was sworn in last May and already has learned too well how to stop a conversation — just mention what she does for a living. She broke up a White House event by declaring "I'm from the IRS and I'm here to help."

In a recent interview in her spacious office, she said her agency really is here to help, even if it is to help people do something they may not feel thrilled about — pay their taxes.

"I don't harbor any illusions that people will enjoy paying taxes," she said. "Some of the jokes are inevitable, but people can respect you and feel you're efficient and effective."

"We're not perfect," she allows, but quickly adds, "I would submit there's no service business that has as many interactions as we do that are positive."

Her goal as commissioner is to increase the number of those positive interactions and in so doing make sure as many people as possible are paying their taxes.

The IRS estimates it collects about 83 percent of taxes due. Richardson wants to raise that to 90 percent by 2000.

It's not that the IRS' 115,000 employees aren't efficient, she said. They are. But they're handicapped by not having the equipment that a private company of comparable size would.

Until last year, IRS managers did not have computer access to up-to-date budget information. And until this year, the IRS did not have switching equipment to automatically transfer taxpayer calls to the least-busy service center. The result was three out of four callers either got a busy signal or hung up after automatically being put on hold.

The next big step in the IRS' Tax Service Modernization program, scheduled to be finished by 2001, should come in 1996 when new document-processing equipment comes on line. It will automatically read taxpayers' paper returns and put the information into the agency's computer.

"People are used to doing business with their credit card companies and banks, using the telephone, and ... they want their account information instantly and to be able to solve problems. We will be able to do that," she said.

The massive transition from paper to computer has not been without some hitches, as Congress' General Accounting Office has pointed out. But if anyone has the drive and toughness to get it done, friends and colleagues say, it is the soft-spoken Richardson.

"She talks gently, but there is a tremendous strength and backbone in Peggy Richardson. She commands respect," said attorney Lawrence Gibbs, who was IRS commissioner from 1986 to 1989.

Tax lawyer Patricia Lewis said it was clear Richardson was going places, even a decade ago when she and other female tax attorneys started to get together regularly for lunch on Fridays.

"If 10 years ago we had thought about who among us would be commissioner, there's no doubt we would have picked Peg," Lewis said. "She has the presence and the determination. She has the ability to accomplish a lot of things without appearing to exert effort."

Asked about her friendship with Mrs. Clinton, Richardson demurs. "We have mutual friends. There are not many women lawyers in my age group that don't know each other," she said with a laugh.

But, on an end table near Richardson's paper-crowded work table is a picture, taken at the White House, with Clinton beaming at his new IRS commissioner. And Mrs. Clinton is giving her a big hug.

Her Texas roots give her a link to Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, and she's a friend of both President Clinton and his wife, Hillary.

That helped her persuade the administration to support a plan to hire 5,000 additional IRS employees devoted to increasing tax collections, Tobias said.

Learning to live with it

Human beings are often known as creatures of habit. Changes in what we consider as routine in our lives, often cause us to object.

Eventually however, once we understand that a change has to be made, most people learn to live with it. Eventually, the circle of life revolves and in time, another change will be necessary.

Ten decades from now, if something which was changed today returns to where it once was, the new generations will object just as strongly as many of us would today.

Such a situation is now ready for a major change. Cities which have had summer-long recreation programs for children during the three month school vacation, are making changes.

Rapidly, more and more of our schools are going on year-round operations. Groups are being put into what are called tracks and multi-tracks. They attend school for a certain length of time, then take three week vacations. Children who may be the same age, or even from the same families, may not have vacations at the same time.

The need for this change is apparent. We have outgrown the capacity of our schools. We will not or can not pay heavy taxes which would be required to build more schools.

Looking at schools which have been standing idle for three months each summer, we begin to see one way out of the problem. Have school all year, which we will be doing beginning this fall.

Subsequently however, the move will require families to re-align their vacation periods. It isn't going to be easy, especially for families which may have students in separate tracks, taking vacations at differing times of the year.

It also means a complete revamping of city recreation programs. Lake Mary is pondering what to do. The City of Sanford is working on recreation programs of 3-week lengths in keeping with what is called the "Green Track." Students in other tracks will be left out of recreation availabilities for the time being.

This isn't going to be easy to work out. No doubt city recreation departments will undergo many changes before they can be consolidated with vacation times of all age children.

In the meantime, as soon as track times are established, we suggest family meetings to work out vacation schedules.

For city recreation programs, we urge people to accept the fact that there will be changes. They may not be what is best for every individual student, but this is a change that is coming.

People have a choice. Jump up and down and express outrage, or talk about it and learn to live with it. The latter will be the best for everyone concerned.

No surprises in Cooper's health plan

Rep. Jim Cooper's, D-Tenn., free ride is over. Now that President Clinton's fatally flawed health reform plan has been picked apart and all but fallen by the wayside, scrutiny will now be directed at the Cooper's supposed "moderate alternative."

While the Cooper plan steers clear of some of the obvious pitfalls that have the Clinton plan stuck in reverse — like government-guaranteed universal coverage and employer mandates — the rival reform plans actually are more alike than different.

Cooper acknowledged as much last month. "Our bills are very similar," he said. "(They) have a lot in common, and we're very proud of that."

All right. So we know that Cooper is proud of a health reform plan that has more opposition than support among the American people and he apparently is untroubled by the recent CBS News poll in which a majority of respondents said the plan "not fair" to "people like me."

The "people like me" are the vast majority of Americans who have health insurance, are happy with their coverage and are satisfied with the quality of care they receive. The Clinton plan will muck up their insurance, dictate what basic coverage they are offered and, ultimately, diminish the quality of care they now enjoy. And the Cooper plan would do much the same.

Indeed, like Clinton, Cooper would turn over control of America's health care system to the government. As if the government can be expected to do a better job of managing health care than it has of, say, curbing welfare dependency or protecting the law-abiding from criminals or reducing the national debt.

Cooper would create vast new health care bureaucracies — regional health cooperative boards, a health plan standards board, an agency for clinical evaluations (to oversee federal medical research) and a benefits, evaluation and data standards board (to oversee a national health data system). To govern this veritable health care Pentagon, Cooper would establish a Health Care Standards Commission.

The rival reform plans actually are more alike than different.

Also, like the president's plan, Cooper's calls for a uniform set of benefits to be included in a standard insurance policy. But while the White House plan specifies the benefits, Cooper would leave that up to his new government-run health plan standards board.

The Clinton plan's basic benefits package has been criticized as "one-size-fits-all" because insurers would be prohibited from offering anything else. Cooper avoids this political pitfall by allowing insurers to offer plans that are more generous than government standards.

But there's a catch. The Cooper plan would limit the tax deductibility of health insurance to the lowest-cost plan in a given region, posing a tremendous disincentive to businesses and individuals that desire better coverage. Essentially, the government would use the tax code to impose a de facto cap on insurance premiums.

The purpose of this cap is to steer the 65 percent of Americans covered by "fee-for-service" plans into health maintenance organizations.

Lessons learned from movies

WASHINGTON — Recent consternation over the insensitive reaction of a group of Oakland black and Hispanic high schoolers to Steven Spielberg's Holocaust epic, "Schindler's List," stirred several reactions in me. Including:

• Gratitude that the Washington Post article I read covered every base. The piece described how, after a student's blurted comment during a murder scene and the resulting chorus of snickers, all of the students were told to leave by the theater's Jewish owner. The piece quoted every player: the owner; kids who were ejected; outraged parents; patrons supportive of the kids' ejection; and, most tellingly, the teen-agers' well-meaning but disorganized teacher — who admits to getting the kids to the theater late and failing to prepare them properly for the film's somberness. And anyone would concede that a three-hour black-and-white tragedy is an odd choice to precede a high school ice-skating jaunt.

• An ironic chuckle over a recent movie outing near my home, in which the disruptive loudmouths were a quartet of white, silver-haired grandmother types, who offered comments on every other scene in "Grumpy Old Men," to the dismay of a grumpy young columnist.

• And, most pointedly the uncomfortable realization that a week earlier, I had a similar experience watching "Schindler's List." Despite the film's glowing reviews, I'd put off seeing "List" for the same reason that I didn't rush to "Philadelphia" — the movie was bound to be a downer.

Although I was an adolescent who wept over "The Diary of Anne Frank" and who read everything I could find about the Holocaust, I don't think I know "enough" about that period — it's always intrusive to be reminded of the awfulness of which humans are capable. And I'm not among those black folks whose frustration over the lack of movies depicting slavery's horrors — Washington, D.C., director Halle Gerima couldn't even find a distributor for his powerful "Sankofa" — injures me to Jewish people's pain.

Following the Oscar nominations, a pal and I decided to attend a matinee of the much-nominated "List," promising each other sufficient Kleenex and moral support to get through it.

The three black women, whose accents suggested they were foreign-born and who ranged in age from mid-40s to about 60, seemed pleasant enough; — making extra room for me when I sat down, saying "excuse me" whenever they left their seats. But as the movie's re-creation of the horrors of Nazi-occupied Poland became increasingly graphic, I noticed something else:

Scenes that prompted flinching, gasps and tears from the rest of the multicultural audience — the murder of a youth who'd hidden in a piano, the offhand execution of a dignified woman engineer — had another effect on the women. Their response: whoops, giggles and an occasional, "Uh-oh!"

As expected, watching "List" was torturous. Seeing it beside seemingly nice people whose response was more appropriate to a Steven Seagal adventure was excruciating. At one point, I even left the screening room. I was so rattled that it was hours before I realized that I could have asked the theater management to make the ladies hush.

When their chuckles greeted a grueling scene involving children, I turned to the woman nearest me. "Do you really think this is funny?" I whispered, close to tears.

She looked surprised — by my question and obvious emotion. "No," she said evenly. "But it's a movie."

Well, yes it is. As a movie, "List" isn't real — although the inhumanity it depicts really happened. I wondered if those women were from some place where film's inherent unreality is acknowledged, where people just don't give themselves over to films' quasi-reality as I always have.

I described the woman's response to a sensitive friend, who confessed, "movies just don't get to me...I'm much more moved by plays." I couldn't relate to him any more than I could to those women. I had an easier time understanding my reactions to what happened in Oakland.

I asked myself why the theater owner didn't give the kids a warning or remove the most egregious offenders while letting others remain.

I acknowledged that some would mistakenly see the incident as proof of the overhyped, oversimplified "gulf" between blacks and Jews, ignoring that kids in every culture sometimes make light of that which tweaks their tenderness — especially when they're in groups.

I wondered if the teen-agers' response was at all the result of living too long in a nation that worships violence on screen and tolerates it off.

Finally, I prayed for the insight to understand those three women and whatever lesson I was supposed to learn from them.

She looked surprised — by my question and obvious emotion.

Being fair to college athletes

"One stays, one goes," the headline reads. The newspaper article beneath it is just as somber, describing the axing of the wrestling program at Southwest Missouri State University.

SMSU, which is in Springfield, Mo., has a new president. He's reorganized the university's objectives and programs in many ways. Cutting the men's wrestling program will give SMSU more money with which to comply with Title IX, the intellectually enforced 1972 law that mandates equal opportunities for men and women in college sports.

The article begins: "Two athletes. Two sports. Two futures. Both came to Southwest Missouri State University to continue their sports careers. One will. One won't." Photos show the wrestlers disconsolate.

The article quotes both men and women athletes who think the program-cutting was a horrible thing to do.

Women athletes at the college understand how devastated they would feel if any of their programs were ended. Those who have an understanding of history empathize only too well. Their mothers and grandmothers had no chance at collegiate athletic careers open to them today.

No one is happy about the men's wrestling decision, but many of the older women wonder: Where were the cameras 25, 35, 45 years ago, when "The one who goes" was always a woman? Where were the TV films of promising women athletes who had no college sports programs, no places to play, little or no budget for uniforms, coaches or equipment?

It's an especially bittersweet saga for SMSU sports fans, as we watch the careers of perhaps the two most beloved female basketball stars in school history come to an end. Melody Howard and Tina Robbins have provided four years of thrills that helped pack our arena, exceeding attendance at our men's games and leading women's basketball crowds throughout the nation. This occurred despite significantly less funding for every aspect of their program. They traveled to games on buses while male players flew.

After graduation, there's no place in this country for Howard or Robbins to play professionally. Had Title IX been adequately implemented and enforced, women's programs would have started pumping out players of their caliber shortly after it was enacted 22 years ago. It would have quickly raised the level of the game to the exciting pace we've seen in the last few years at the women's NCAA championships, producing millions more fans and, I think, a women's pro league that could support itself.

Throughout the 22 years that schools have not complied fully with Title IX, they've used the excuse that "women's sports just don't bring in enough revenue to justify spending the same money we do on men's sports." That's not a legal leg to stand on, mind you, but it sure works fine when no one enforces the law.

That excuse is close to wearing itself out at SMSU. The average women's basketball attendance was 8,033 this season, compared with 7,588 for the men. At 4,707 season tickets sold, they're only 215 season tickets away from the men's mark of 4,922. The women's tickets don't cost as much as the men's, and the Lady Bear boosters don't want them to. They'd rather keep prices lower, a payback to fans who brought attendance from a few hundred a game to the highest in the nation.

It will be interesting to see how revenues rise if SMSU ever takes full financial advantage of the Lady Bear craze.

The article quotes both men and women athletes who think the program-cutting was a horrible thing to do.

Students thinking hard to prepare for Brain Bowl

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — They are in training. Serious training. The Seminole County Academic Brain Bowl team has about a month and a half to prepare for the state competition where they will take on teams from all over Florida in one of the most mentally challenging contests around.

"This isn't just trivial pursuit," coach Charles Coursey said. "This contest really makes you think."

The students, three of them from Lake Mary High School, two from Lake Brantley and one from Lyman, are studying, reading and thinking.

Coursey said they are going over Academic Brain Bowl tests from the last four or five years. They are challenging one another with complicated questions.

And they are getting to know one another's strengths and weaknesses so they can work together as an efficient team.

According to Coursey, the questions asked in the brain bowl are designed to make the contestants think.

"For example, a math question might be asked in Spanish or a history question might be asked in French," he explained. "They have to be able to work together to translate and then answer the question."

During the contest they have no more than one minute to answer a question and once they push the buzzer signaling they are ready to answer, they have three seconds to respond.

Coursey said the students who are involved in the contest have been preparing for the April 28, 29 and 30 contest since November.

Nate Holladay, Adrian Sisser and Evan Farkash of Lake Mary High School, Annie Grodin and Matt Chidester of Lake Brantley High and Donna Goggin of Lyman will represent Seminole County at Walt Disney World, the site of the state championships.

"It's a shame the competition doesn't draw more spectators," Coursey said. "It's so exciting. So satisfying. You can just feel it."

Nudity City

miles of shoreline. The clothing optional beaches include stretches of a mile or less in South Florida's Dade County, the Canaveral National Seashore, and the Panhandle's Escambia and Santa Rosa counties.

There are more areas where topless bathing is accepted, Mason said, but said that doesn't equate with immorality. "How many people have been running around naked in the streets and the malls? Give me a break," she said.

Opponents said cities and counties already have the power to ban nudity. "I've always been mystified by the need for the legislation to begin with," said Rep. Mike Abrams, D-North Miami Beach.

In answer to opponents who say the bill would hurt tourism and other businesses, Grant said he'll propose an amendment to exempt commercial establishments offering nude dancing, nudist camps, movie productions shooting nude scenes and artists' models.

The bill would allow nudity in places such as doctors' offices, motel rooms, dressing rooms and restrooms.

And it would let local governments sanction nude beaches by an "extraordinary" vote of a majority plus one.

"If Miami wants to have nude beaches, let their city commission pass an ordinance, and they could have them," Grant said.

He sponsored the bill after a federal magistrate threw out a case in November against eight beachgoers cited by U.S. park rangers for nude sunbathing at Canaveral National Seashore.

State law only bans public nudity if it is lewd and lascivious, or offends someone, U.S. Magistrate David Baker ruled.

"The present scheme is sensible. It recognizes the fact that there are some situations where someone could be nude, and it really isn't a big deal," said West Palm Beach attorney Don Murrell, who defended those cited.

But in an election-year Legislature, Murrell said he is worried the measure might win approval. "There are so many people trying to say, 'I can be tougher on crime than you are,' that I'm afraid it might pass."

the city charter, Smith began work a little more than a week after being hired. Smith moved from Georgia. His furniture was placed in local storage because he has not been able to find a home. The commissioners agreed to pay the additional storage and moving costs for Smith until May 1.

The commissioners commended Gerald Korman, who served as acting administrator for 120 days between the resignation of James McFellin and the hiring of Smith. Mayor Paul Lovestrand presented Korman with a plaque on behalf of the city.

In other business, parks and recreation director Sandra Lomax told the commissioners the draining of a swampy area and clearing of brush by the public works department near Reiter Park may allow the city to make a soccer field at the site. In addition, three city owned lots near fire station 17, on Wayman St., may be used for a T-ball field.

In other business, the commissioners:

- rejected a request from a home owner to erect a basketball goal in a cul-de-sac due to possible city liability. The commission rejected a similar request about two years ago.
- tightened control on city extensions or changes in city contracts by the city administrator and purchasing director.

- OK'd a $10 per square foot assessment for residents of Second Place for street improvements because former city administrator Don Terry accepted a petition for that amount several years ago. The city will pay an additional $13,200 to make the street improvements. The city planned to assess $13 per frontage foot but residents protested the higher figure so the commission, acting as the Equalization Board, agreed to do the work billing property owners the lesser amount.
- agreed each commissioner will submit a performance review for the city administrator, then the live reports will form a composite evaluation. The performance review will be on the administrator in six months and annually thereafter.
- directed Smith to do a salary comparison study of city employees both in-house and with other similar sized cities for 1994-95 budget preparation.

- approved the consolidation of the planning/zoning and building departments into the Department of Planning and Building Services.
- nominated Ken Pedlow, owner of florist shops in Longwood and Altamonte Springs as business person of the month for April.

Land

Commissioners Warren and Carlton Henley initially called for a hiatus from purchases until they had a better understanding of the long-range costs involved with the program. They consented to completion of pending purchase deals while estimated cost assessments are completed.

"It distresses me that we're talking about this now instead of up front," said Henley. "It seems to be somewhat irresponsible to continue purchasing more property without a pause."

But county staff warned there is not much time left in the program. The remaining $12 million of the initial $15 million must be committed before May 1995, said Logan. Pending property acquisitions will require that amount, she said. About 3,000 acres has already been purchased, she said.

The county held back $5 million of the voter-approved $20 million for future purchases.

Commissioner Dick Van Der

Weide asked whether a portion of the remaining bond money could be diverted to a trust fund to generate money for maintenance expenses if voters approve. County Attorney Bob McMillan said federal bond laws prevent investment of bond proceeds. The money has to be spent within three years of the bond sale, McMillan said.

Commissioners Daryl McLain and Larry Furlong called for the program to continue while the maintenance estimates are established.

"Buying land is like buying a car," said Furlong. "If you don't put oil in it, it'll break down."

Furlong said he's seen the destruction done by kudzu in some places in the South which, in a matter of weeks, can completely cover a lot and everything in it.

"I do not want us to stop the acquisition program at this time," Furlong continued. "We made a promise to voters to do it."

McLain supported Furlong, but said the maintenance costs need to be established.

Lisa Thorsen Thomson, stewardship coordinator of The Nature Conservancy, said "resource management" was important to preserve land in its natural state and to prevent the takeover of Mahaleuca, Brazilian pepper, Australian pine and other destructive non-Florida species. A single Mahaleuca can spread to a densely-populated acre within 10 years, said Thomson.

"Resource management does not have to be expensive," said Thomson. "Fire management of Wekiva State Park represents about 6 percent of its total annual budget."

Logan said commissioners said a property assessment would provide them with a maintenance cost for each property acquired by the county. The assessment would determine the species on the land, constraints due to surrounding land uses, restoration needs, public access availability and detailed costs, she said.

The assessment for the 646-acre Fore property which the county is about to buy could cost $15,000 because of the diversity on the property, Logan said. Other site assessments could cost as little as $7,500, she said.

Topless

"I might still do it if it was illegal," said Ms. McDonnell, a stockbroker. "The body is a beautiful thing; obviously I'm comfortable with it."

Her husband, Kenneth, and other son, 10-year-old Tyler, said they supported her nudity. One of the arguments by supporters of Sen. John Grant's bill is that nude sunbathing exposes juveniles to unseemly behavior.

"I think it's healthy for children to see naked bodies in not a lascivious way," Ms. McDonnell said.

Not so, says Ann Folino, an 82-year-old, who also was vacationing from Boston.

"I think it's awful," she said from the deck of the Whiteclaw Hotel. "There should be a beach of their own."

Michael Flume, 35, a film producer from Basel, Switzerland, believes the pending legislation is just another example of how Americans are uptight about sex.

"That's America. I'm from Europe where it's the normal thing," Flume said. "I wish they were not so concerned about naked breasts and would do something about the violence here."

"Of course we always need more help," she added. "I hope anyone who would like to get involved in this will give me a call."

problem with the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board during the April meeting.

Starting this fall, all schools handling Lake Mary youngsters, except the high school, will be operating on single or multi-track terms. That will have some students on vacation on a rotational basis, throughout the entire year.

"What surprised me," Holland said, "was the number of people who have come forward and suggested the city do nothing about providing this recreation. They seem to be of the opinion that the schools, by establishing the year-round system, caused the problem, and they ought to solve it."

"With some children on vacation for three week periods almost the entire year, some form of recreation or enrichment programs will be needed," Holland added.

During last week's city commission meeting, Holland presented a list of possibilities the Advisory Board may consider. They included the following:

- Lake Mary could provide a city facility (Community Center) for the YMCA to staff and operate. The city would be required to subsidize the funding of the program and registration of Lake Mary residents. The city would not receive any income from this program. There would also be a loss of income from cancellations of existing programs and rentals of the Community Center.
- The City could provide an expanded list of programs offered in the daily recreational scheduled and develop an enrichment program which would establish a year-round opportunity for half-day, full-day, and weekly attendance.
- Place more responsibility on the Seminole County school system for providing enrichment programs and day-care for their students.

Holland said Seminole Community College might be involved in the program. "The problem here," he commented, "is that they don't have the space, and we may look into providing the space through the use of one of our city buildings, but that still hasn't been closely examined."

Holland predicted that the final solution could be some form of combination of the three basic concepts. "As far as we are concerned," he said, "the good old summer recreation programs we have been presenting for many years will be a thing of the past, with the new year-round school system. It's going to take an entire re-vamping of the recreation needs."

Sanford

Registration for this 1994 summer program will open on May 2 at the recreation department office, Sanford City Hall. "It will be on a first-come first-served basis," Jones explained. "As for the subsequent three-week programs, we have the October one planned but specifics still remain to be worked out."

Longwood

Lomax said, "All the money will go to the YMCA, with us furnishing the building."

Clements was not available to comment on the project, but Lomax said the YMCA is involved in similar projects with other cities which are now facing the need to change the recreation programs.

"The matter hasn't been officially approved by the city commission at this time," she commented, "but the city manager and several individual commissioners have indicated that it should have no difficulty in being approved. It should come up for action in the very near future as we want to start this July when the year-round school sessions begin."

Marriage on the rocks in France, magazine riding divorce trend

By CHRISTOPHER BURNS
Associated Press Writer

PARIS — Starry-eyed honeymooners from around the world may flock here for romance, but France is losing its own taste for marriage. Now unhappy spouses have a new magazine to show them how to untie the knot with sang-froid.

"Sexuality: Are You Ready For Adventure?," "Alimony: Act Against Deadbeats," and "A Free Partnership — Marriage or Not?" are some of the articles inside the slick covers of Divorce, along with pictures of attractive models.

"Divorce isn't a bad thing," said the magazine's director, Jean-Michel Pascali. "It's the failure of love translated into a solution."

New statistics show one in three married couples in France is opting for divorce, up from one in 10 in the 1980s. The new rate matches U.S. figures, which are among the world's highest.

And the French increasingly prefer to shuck up than shuffle to the altar in the first place, much to the chagrin of the religious right.

The number of weddings last year fell to 254,000, 40 percent less than 20 years ago. Unmarried couples account for one-third of births.

Pascali's monthly, with a 10-member staff that includes a lawyer and a psychologist, is not all downbeat. It gives tips on how to save failing marriages as well as handling legal battles, helping children through their parents' divorce and looking for another mate.

"People don't divorce to be alone," he said. "You divorce to separate yourself from difficulty and to get together with someone else. And you don't want to fall into the same mistakes."

Divorce, which ran its first issue in November, is the brainchild of a group of journalists that includes a woman who went through a painful split herself.

"She bought a women's magazine that had a story on it and found it lacking," Pascali said.

But the new magazine doesn't sit well with religious traditionalists.

Abbe Paul Olanier, head of the Priestly Fraternity of Saint Pie X, blamed the rising divorce rate on two centuries of secularism and laicism.

"The rupture and instability between couples is a new slavery. There remains only sadness," Olanier said. "Catholic doctrine is necessary for social peace."

Divorce magazine's first few issues have sold 60,000 copies each, enough to keep the publication economically viable, Pascali said. About 65 percent of the buyers are women.

The director says people prefer the magazine to buying a book because they can relate to it better.

"A magazine is open, you can write to it," said Pascali, 40, whose parents are divorced. "It shows people they're not alone."

The magazine receives 3,000 letters a month, many answered in subsequent issues.

With 40-odd pages for $3, Divorce has virtually no advertising. Family-oriented advertisers like automaker Renault "wouldn't run them for people who are divorced," Pascali said. "And we don't want any phone sex ads."

Magazines in best financial health these days don't depend on ad revenue, which fell 14 percent last year alone after double-digit increases in the 1980s, said Pascale Marie, head of the national magazine publishers' association.

But she added: "The press cemetery is filled with magazines that were great for two or three issues. I bet you that happens to this one."

Divorce isn't looking for subscriptions, any more than ads.

"We hope our readers don't have to subscribe," Pascali said. "We hope after eight or nine months that they will have worked it out."

Grand jury: Harding was in on plot to attack Kerrigan

By BOB BAUM
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Just a week after Tonya Harding ducked jail in a plea bargain, a grand jury concluded she was in on the plot to attack Nancy Kerrigan.

After more than two months of investigation, the grand jury said Monday that Harding and the four men who confessed to the crime conspired to injure Kerrigan to knock her out of the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in January.

"There was a great deal of evidence pointing toward the fact that she was involved from the beginning or very close to the beginning," said grand jury foreman David Holt.

Last week, Harding reached a plea bargain in which she admitted hindering the prosecution. But she continued to insist that she did not learn of the plot to attack Kerrigan until after the fact.

Harding escaped indictment last week by reaching the plea bargain, Holt said. The grand jury had little evidence other than what the public already knew, he said. But that was enough.

"I believe she was so close to a lot of the things that were going on that there's no way she could not have known," he said.

The attack, which cost less than $5,000, was paid for with figure skating association money meant for skating expenses, the indictment said.

The grand jury indicted the men who have admitted carrying out the attack — Shawn Eckardt, Shane Stant and Derrick Smith. They pleaded innocent to charges including racketeering, conspiracy and assault and unlawfully obtaining communications. The last charge involved a meeting that was tape-recorded secretly.

The indictment said the three agreed with Harding and her ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, to "cause physical injury to Nancy Kerrigan by means of a dangerous weapon."

In a statement, Harding's lawyers said the skater "categorically denies prior knowledge of, or participation in, the assault on Nancy Kerrigan. Had the government chose to actually charge her, with prior knowledge or participation, it would not have prevailed at trial."

Beverly Connor, co-owner of Cafe' Books, shows off some of the many, many books ready for your enjoyment.

Books Are Brewing At This Cafe'

PROLOGUE

Before Cafe' Books brewed the first cup of coffee or put the first book on the shelf a great deal of time and energy went into preparing for the business. Since moving to Florida from Ohio, Beverly and Ray Connor spent hours pouring over business ideas. After reading book after book no one single venture appealed to them. One day, while looking for business ideas in their personal library, they were struck with inspiration. They had found their new business in every book they picked up and with every page they turned. Each and every book held the promise of their new business no matter what the ideas inside. All along they had been searching for a business idea within the books when the books themselves already presented the possibility for a fulfilling and profitable business. Over a year was spent planning and researching to turn their inspiration into a solid business.

CHAPTER 1

Beverly and Ray Connor, owners, have made Cafe' Books the kind of store that every book lover searches for but can never find. Starting with a clean and well-lit store, they have created an open, comfortable and friendly atmosphere that encourages customers to browse through their collection of new and used books, rare and collectible books, gourmet coffee, and art. You'll find a large (and expanding) children's section including classics and young adult fiction, an excellent cook book section, and sections for sports, contemporary women, romance, science fiction, horror, true crime, suspense, business, reference books, biographies, literature, and much, much more. After browsing, sit and relax with a cup of their gourmet coffee.

CHAPTER 2

Cafe' Books strives to offer the best quality books for the best price. All new and used paperbacks are 1/2 price! Hardbacks are generally 1/3 of the cover price or less. Customers are always welcome to trade in books. If you trade in a paperback book, you will receive 25% of the cover price towards the purchase of other paperbacks. Hardbound books are traded, with a few restrictions, based on their condition and value. At this time there is no cash required with a trade in or a fee for trading. Cafe' Books will also purchase books. Beverly and Ray are always looking for books in excellent condition to purchase or trade and pay top prices for books in quality condition. Beverly and Ray will even come to you if needed especially for a large collection.

CHAPTER 3

Do you need to find an out of print book or have a special order? Let the staff at Cafe' Books help you. Beverly, Ray and their two employees will do out of print book searches or special order that new book you're dying to read. They are in the process of establishing "frequent customer" files to help keep track of titles you've already read. COMING SOON to Cafe' Books will be new books on tape which will be provided on a rental basis.

EPILOGUE

Here's your chance to write the ending to a story! You have two choices. Will you go to Cafe' Books in the Seminole Center, adjacent to Wal-Mart on 17-92 just north of Lake Mary Blvd. to see the vast collection of books for yourself? Or will you call 322-6117 to find out more about their upcoming rental of books on tape? We're all waiting to find out how the story ends.

Rosewood Massacre

Hearing officer asks for reparations for victims of 1923 attack

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A claims officer recommended that Florida compensate victims of the 1923 Rosewood massacre, in which rampaging whites destroyed a black village.

"A moral obligation exists to redress their injuries," said Richard Hixson, who oversaw reparations hearings for lawmakers.

In a report Monday, Hixson said the Legislature should set up a fund to compensate victims or their families who can prove they lost property.

He also recommended lawmakers pay survivors $150,000 each for the trauma of being uprooted from their community, set up a scholarship fund for descendants, and see if charges can be brought against those responsible for the attack.

A state House committee will consider Hixson's report on Wednesday.

"I am pleased about the recognition and confirmation that the Rosewood massacre occurred," said Martha Barnett, a lawyer for the survivors.

The violence began after a white woman accused a black man of assaulting her. A white posse rampaged through Rosewood, burning buildings and driving out every resident in the town of 120. When the bloody week ended, six blacks and two white were dead.

Hixson suggested lawmakers incorporate his recommendations into a compensation bill they had been considering. That bill would set up a $7 million trust fund for 11 survivors and 45 descendants who accused government officials of failing to protect them.

Hixson said that while it isn't possible this long after the fact to pinpoint fault, "it nonetheless is clear that government officials were responsible for some of the damages."

The state already is investigating the slaying of a black man who was accused by a group of whites, tortured and shot.

Experiment would transport movies by phone lines

By JEANNINE AVERSA
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS — Pacific Bell's plans to test sending movies directly from the studio to selected theaters could change the way motion pictures are distributed and could provide new revenue streams for movie theater owners.

Digital video transmission over phone lines would cut duplicating and shipping costs to theaters, curb pirating of films and improve the quality of the picture, Howard Gunn, vice president of marketing and business development for Alcatel Network Systems, said Monday.

In a test this summer, PacBell will use Alcatel-designed equipment to send movies through fiber optic telecommunications networks to 12 California theaters. Federal and state regulatory approval is needed for the technology test.

Theater owners are hungry for ways to bolster their audiences and to bring in additional revenue, said PacBell's Bob Stewart, product manager for digital broadcast video services.

These owners could use the service to provide video conferencing to businesses or others in their theaters during the daytime and could provide local viewings of professional sports events or concerts — all on big screens with high-definition TV quality, Stewart said.

High-definition TV promises sharp pictures that rival 35 millimeter film, which is shown in theaters today.

But movie owners would have to pony up around $50,000 for HDTV projectors and a special screen to show the pictures, said David Waechter, an assistant vice president at Alcatel.

After the test, PacBell plans to roll out the service commercially, also pending regulatory approval, to 100 movie houses in California by the end of the 1995. Theaters in metropolitan areas would be targeted before suburban counterparts because fiber lines are already in place, Stewart said.

Alcatel, which is coordinating the venture, is working with the five major Hollywood studios, film distributors and theater owners to offer the service through telephone companies nationwide.

PacBell also would have to rely on a long-distance company to shuttle the digitized movies across local telephone boundaries, something PacBell is forbidden from doing under a 1982 consent decree that broke up the old Bell system.

Alcatel's equipment would enable a studio to digitize films and send a digital copy over fiber optic lines to a computer, known as a server, which will be part of PacBell's telephone network.

Movies would be stored in compressed form in the server and be distributed over the fiber lines to local servers that would be part of local telephone networks. A movie house owner could retrieve the film from the local server and with a special decoder, located in the projection room, decompress the film.

Alcatel has developed a switch that phone companies can use to route the video traffic. Each switch can carry 1,438 high-definition-quality movies, said Alcatel associate vice president Tim Phillips.

From a Hollywood studio to a movie house on the East Coast, a 2-hour movie would take 45 minutes to transmit, Phillips said.

Satellites have routinely delivered digital video to news organizations, cable operators and others, but are shown in analog form because receiving equipment is not yet available for consumers.

Hale plea opens new chapter in Whitewater probe

By RICHARD KEIL
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — In closing out his first criminal case, the Whitewater special counsel is adding a new charge that involves a federally backed loan company and a failed S&L already at the center of his probe.

Former Municipal Judge David Hale was scheduled to plead guilty today to conspiring to defraud the Small Business Administration and a new mail fraud charge, Randy Coleman, Hale's attorney, said Monday.

Without elaborating, Coleman said the additional charge — which was not in Hale's original four-count felony indictment — centers on transactions between Hale, his company, Capital Management Services Inc., and the failed Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association.

Special counsel Robert Fiske is trying to learn whether funds from Madison — whose failure cost taxpayers between $47 million and $60 million — were diverted to a real estate development company in which President Clinton and his wife, Hillary, were partners with Madison owner James McDougal and his former wife, Susan. He also wants to learn whether depositor funds were improperly used to help retire Clinton's 1984 gubernatorial campaign debt. Hale, accused of conspiring to defraud the SBA and lying to federal officials, has alleged that Clinton, then governor, urged him to make a $300,000 loan to a company owned by Susan McDougal. About $100,000 of that money eventually ended up in the checking account of the Whitewater Development Corp., the real estate venture involving the Clintons and McDougals.

The plea agreement reached between Hale and Fiske over the weekend follows a pattern used by special prosecutors in other complex cases such as Iran-Contra or the Reagan-era housing funds scandal.

"Obviously, Hale has convinced Fiske that he has something of value to offer in his larger investigation," said Ira Raphaelson, formerly the Justice Department's special counsel for financial institutions fraud. "He is getting this deal because the prosecutor thinks he can be helpful."

Clinton, meanwhile, has steadfastly denied any wrongdoing on Monday, he angrily dismissed Hale's allegations as "a bunch of bull."

Also on Monday, the General Accounting Office, the investigatory arm of Congress, released a review of Hale's operations and concluded that his lending practices were in violation of SBA policy, which stipulates that grants and loans should go to economically disadvantaged individuals and companies.

Hale has already begun to assist Fiske's investigation, his attorney said Monday.

"He is going to cooperate fully in terms of testimony and anything else that is required of him," Coleman said.

Later, Hale is expected to testify before a grand jury to elaborate on his earlier allegation that Clinton encouraged him to make a questionable loan to a Whitewater business partner — an accusation that Fiske has said in court papers is "fundamental" to the investigation.

Documents obtained by The Associated Press show that people connected with Madison and Hale's company had numerous dealings, most commonly in the form of loans that flowed from one to the other.

Among the questions Fiske is investigating is whether Hale's company may have been used to move troublesome loans off the books at Madison and out of the sight of federal regulators, according to several witnesses who have been subpoenaed by the prosecutor.

At Hale's recent pretrial hearing, lawyers and witnesses talked about a potential scheme involving several businesses and "bogus loans" that helped prominent Arkansans.

The beneficiaries were not identified.

Hale's company was backed by the SBA to make loans to entrepreneurs who were "socially and economically disadvantaged." But many beneficiaries were in fact prominent Arkansans.

Thousands of vets exposed to radium?

By MELISSA B. ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — As a young submariner nearly 30 years ago, James Garrity once emerged from a training tank with bleeding eardrums. Following standard practice at the time, a Navy doctor stuck radium capsules up his nose — a treatment Garrity now blames for his nasal cancer.

"I have been so sick over the last 10 years," Garrity, 47, said in a telephone interview Monday from his home in Quincy, Mass.

"I was losing my voice for months at a time. Every time I eat, my nose runs... My teeth were breaking off."

Two weeks ago, Garrity said, his condition was diagnosed as nasopharyngeal cancer — a rare disorder affecting the nose and throat area.

Garrity believes many veterans may have gotten cancer from the radium treatments, and he plans to ask the federal government to provide free treatment and possibly disability pay for those who can be located. He has set up a "Submarine Survivors Inc." hotline (1-617-471-5047) to collect data on veterans and others exposed to the treatment. He says he has logged more than 800 calls, mostly from cancer patients.

Radium capsules were widely used both in military and civilian medical practice to treat hearing problems from the 1940s to the late 1960s.

At least 5,000 Navy submariners and 14,000 members of the formerly combined Army and Air Force received nasopharyngeal radium treatments until the military stopped the practice in the late 1960s, according to researcher Stewart Farber, who has been looking into the subject for more than a decade.

In most cases, the patients received much higher concentrations of radiation than those subjected to other experiments the federal government carried out after World War II to assess radiation effects, Farber said.

"You're talking 20,000 times greater in certain cases, and we're talking thousands of men," Farber said, adding that the treatments persisted even though there were widespread scientific reports on the possible health hazards of radium by the 1950s.

The radium treatment involved inserting 50 milligram radium capsules into each nostril. Submariners, on average, received four treatments, each lasting 10 minutes and given a few weeks apart.

Garrity said he received the treatment after rupturing his eardrums while training in a submarine tank at New London, Conn., at a depth of 100 feet. The capsules were used to prevent a recurrence of the problem. Garrity said his eardrums healed, although he suffered some hearing loss.

Among civilians, radium was used to correct hearing loss or adenoid problems, particularly in children, Farber said. The capsules cleared the Eustachian tubes and were used for submariners and pilots who had trouble adjusting to depth and altitude pressure changes.

Farber wants the government to study veterans who received the treatments to determine if there any high rates of cancer among them. Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., also has asked state and federal agencies to investigate and develop a plan to help the veterans.

The Defense Department acknowledges using the radium but has been reluctant to release medical records and track and notify veterans who may have been exposed.

In a Feb. 23 letter to Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., Rear Adm. W.A. Buckendorf said the Navy in 1991 considered studying submariners for latent effects of the irradiation but decided against it because it could not find the records of those treated.

"A blind, record-by-record search could not be conducted in a timely or cost-effective manner," Buckendorf wrote. Buckendorf also said the records were covered by privacy laws and could not be released without the individuals' consent.

However, Veterans Affairs Secretary Jesse Brown told Lieberman at a Senate committee hearing earlier this year that he would work with the Navy to find affected submariners and help them receive care and compensation.

Garrity, for one, does not want to wait.

Some veterans have been turned away from VA hospitals that do not know how to treat their illnesses, and many were never told they were treated with radiation in the first place, he said.

"I'm trying to get in touch with as many people as I can talk to," said Garrity. "And I will talk to them until the day I die."

Protein in blood may signal cancers, research suggests

By MALCOLM RITTER

TUCSON, Ariz. — A recently discovered protein shows up chiefly in the blood of some cancer patients and may prove to be a useful indicator of breast and prostate cancer, a researcher says.

Blood tests for the protein may one day help in early detection and in tracking the results of therapy, said Margaret Hanousek of the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Smithville.

She presented early data on the protein Monday at a seminar sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

"It appears to be the most promising (tumor marker) I've seen in a long, long time," said

Dr. Harmon Eyre, the society's deputy executive vice president for medical affairs and research.

But Dr. Michael Torosian, a surgical oncologist at the University of Pennsylvania, said Hanousek's data suggest the test would not be useful for early detection of breast tumors.

Hanousek said the protein can be found by a simple blood test. She said the function of the protein, called p65, is not known.

She did not offer detailed findings involving prostate cancer, saying the company she did that research with is keeping results confidential. But she said p65 levels were much higher in 311 prostate cancer patients than in 353 men with benign enlargement of the prostate.

AROUND THE STATE

Bucs sign Marts

TAMPA — Linebacker Louie Marts, an unrestricted free agent who spent the last four seasons with the Kansas City Chiefs, signed a three-year deal with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Marts, 25, started 15 games for the Chiefs in 1993, recording a career-high 73 tackles.

Reekie traded

TAMPA — The Tampa Bay Lightning have sent Joe Reekie to the Washington Capitals for Enrico Ciccone and two draft picks. Ciccone, 23, appeared in 46 games this season with the Capitals and had one goal and one assist. Reekie, acquired by Tampa Bay from the New York Islanders in the 1992 expansion draft, had one goal and 11 assists in 73 games. In addition to Ciccone, Tampa Bay also will receive a third-round pick in this year's NHL entry draft and a fifth-round selection in 1995.

Marlins maul Yankees

FORT LAUDERDALE — Gary Sheffield and Bob Natal each knocked in three runs and the visiting Florida Marlins routed the New York Yankees 11-1 in an exhibition game. Florida opened the scoring in the fourth inning when Chuck Carr led off with a double, moved to third on Alex Arias' groundout and scored on Sheffield's bounce to short. Sheffield extended Florida's margin to 3-0 with a two-run double in the sixth. Natal's three-run homer, his first of the spring, highlighted a six-run Marlins' seventh inning. Ryan Bowen (1-1) worked four scoreless innings of three-hit ball.

Panthers held to tie

MIAMI — John Vanbiesbrouck saved 40 shots and Florida rallied for a 3-3 tie with the New Jersey Devils that made the Panthers the most successful expansion franchise in NHL history. Florida surpassed the record for points in a season with 74. It shared the mark with Hartford (1979-80) and Philadelphia (1967-68). The Devils outshot the Panthers 43-28, including 32-18 over the final two periods and overtime. But they settled for a tie and moved one point behind the Atlantic-leading New York Rangers, who have the NHL's best record. New Jersey is 9-1-3 in its last 13 games. Florida moved even with Washington for the seventh playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. The Panthers are five points ahead of Philadelphia and the Islanders for the final spot. Florida is 5-1-2 in its last eight games.

Home runs stop Lions in softball

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

OVIEDO — Two swings, seven runs.

That was all it took, two swings, to turn a 3-0 lead into a 10-3 deficit as the Deltona High School Wolves came from behind to blitz the Oviedo High School Lions, 18-7, in a girls' lastpitch softball game at the Oviedo Sports Complex, Monday afternoon.

After two runs scored on a throwing error and a steal of home to cut the lead to 3-2, Deltona senior Debbie Hinson ripped an inside-the-park grand slam into right-center field and, after another run scored on a wild pitch, Gina Mangelli mashed a three-run, inside-the-park homer to deep left.

Oviedo scored a pair of runs in the fifth inning to cut the lead to 10-5, but it would not get closer as the Wolves put a six-spot on the board in the top of the seventh inning.

After starting the season with five straight wins the Lions have now lost three of their last four, which has first year head coach Anna Hollis very concerned.

"I think Spring Break will do us some good," said Hollis. "We need to get that winning attitude back. Motivation has to come from within and we haven't seemed very motivated lately. I don't know what the problem is. But I do think we have been relying on our defense too much and not hitting.

"We also have a couple of players out injured and I have two girls playing the infield who have never played infield before, so the break will give us time to get healthy again."

The Lions took advantage of some shaky fielding by Deltona to take the 3-0 lead.

In the first inning, Beth Pratt reached on an error and came around to score on a pair of ground outs and an RBI single by Tonya Bellamy.

The second inning started about the same way as the Wolves' first baseman dropped a throw on a grounder to short by Whitney White. Courtesy runner Nicole Ruggenius moved up to second on a passed ball and scored on a single by Shannon Munns. Munns advanced to second on a grounder, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Pratt.

White (1-1), the starting pitcher for Oviedo, was cruising along with a one-hitter, but lost the strike zone in the third.

Tasha Mathis led off with a single. See Homers, Page 2B

Jordan sent down to minors

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

SARASOTA — Far beyond the fence at Ed Smith Stadium, back where the big leaguers do not stray, Michael Jordan quickly learned about life in the minors. There was no scoreboard, no dugouts and only two umpires on the field where Jordan played Monday. Not that there was any less pressure on baseball's most-recognized rookie.

As expected, the Chicago White Sox reassigned Jordan to their minor-league camp in the morning. He was not sent to a specific level, and general manager Ron Schueler hopes to know in a week or so where the 31-year-old outfielder will start the season.

"I don't feel disappointed, because what I tried to do was a longshot by any standards," Jordan said. "I can utilize this opportunity to improve my skills."

Jordan, a three-time MVP in the NBA, went 3-for-20 in 13 exhibition games for the White Sox, and hit the ball out of the infield just three times. He has said he would play a year in the minors if he and the White Sox thought he had a chance at making the majors.

In his first game on the farm, playing for Prince William against Baltimore's Frederick team in a meeting of Class A clubs, Jordan went 1-for-4 with an RBI single and a walk. He struggled in right field, dropping an easy fly and got twisted around on another.

Jordan changed lockers, moving from a prime row near Jack McDowell to farther back in the clubhouse. He will be allowed to stay in the major-league locker room rather than the small, cramped quarters of the minor leaguers, mostly for security reasons.

On Sunday, a female fan jumped out of the stands in Miami and ran to Jordan. The White Sox do not want a repeat episode, and will try to keep him close to home.

That means Jordan probably will not travel to minor league games at other spring camps in places such as Port Charlotte, St. Petersburg and Bradenton. Instead, he will play with whatever teams are in Sarasota; he may be with Triple-A Nashville on Wednesday and Double-A Birmingham later in the week.

Because he likely will not be on the road, Jordan won't have to ride the dented, 20-year-old school bus used to shuttle their minor leaguers to games. The bus, white with a Sox logo, has tattered seat covers, two cracked windows and no air conditioning.

"I've always been a team guy. I never tried to separate myself," he said. "But when it gets to 16- or 18-hour bus rides, I hope they can go with me," perhaps on a plane, Jordan joked.

Steven Spielberg: Whiz kid finally gets his Oscar

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES — No longer will he be known as the whiz kid who couldn't sit with the grown-ups. Steven Spielberg now finds himself at the head of the table.

He got there with the most adult film imaginable, "Schindler's List," a searing, three-hour portrait of heroism and evil during the Holocaust, shot mostly in black and white and without any Hollywood stars. The childlike wonder of "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial" had been replaced by the horror of genocide.

"It's such a dream," Spielberg said in finally winning an Academy Award, "and it comes from such a nightmare."

The film won seven Oscars in all Monday night, including best picture and best director.

The industry seemed anxious to make up for 20 years of snubbing its own box-office champion. As Spielberg's dry spell at the Academy Awards was finally broken, his peers stood and applauded, long and loud, as if to honor his whole career and not just "Schindler's List."

"I actually have friends who have won this before, and I swear I have never held one before," said a beaming Spielberg, clutching the statuette for best director.

Spielberg reacted calmly at first, running down a list of thank-yous. He ended, however, in a choked voice as he spoke of the "six million who can't be watching this ... telecast tonight," a reference to the Jews killed by the Nazis.

When he won a few minutes later for best picture, he urged teachers to get in touch with the "350,000 survivors of the Holocaust alive today."

"I implore all of the educators who are watching this program — please do not allow the Holocaust to remain a footnote in history. ... Please listen to the words and the echoes and the ghosts," Spielberg said.

"Schindler's List," which had led all competitors at the 66th annual Academy Awards with 12 nominations, also won for screenplay adaptation, art direction, film editing, John Williams' original score and cinematography.

It was the most wins for a single film since "Dances With Wolves" three years ago.

Much of Monday night's ceremony was a contrast between celebration and sadness, with "Schindler's List" hardly the only film with grim material to receive any Oscars.

Tom Hanks of "Philadelphia" was cited as best actor for his portrayal of a lawyer with AIDS. Bruce Springsteen's "The Streets of Philadelphia" took the Oscar for best original song.

"It's hard to find a graceful way of accepting the award when there's so much suffering going on around the issue (of AIDS)," Springsteen said backstage.

"The streets of heaven are too crowded with angels," Hanks said in tribute to people who have died of AIDS. "We know their names; they number a thousand for every red ribbon worn tonight."

Holly Hunter won for best actress for her depiction of an unhappy, mute bride in a forced New Zealand marriage. She thanked director Jane Campion, who won the Oscar for best original screenplay.

"Thank you for giving me a character and an experience that was so difficult to say goodbye to. It became it's everybody's now," Miss Hunter said.

In the most unexpected win, 11-year-old Anna Paquin captured the supporting actress Oscar for her part as Miss Hunter's interpreter in "The Piano." She became the second-youngest Oscar winner, trailing only 10-year-old Tatum O'Neal of "Paper Moon" two decades ago.

Approximately $125,000 cash for fees is required to be paid by the successful bidder at the sale. Full payment of an amount equal to the highest bid plus applicable documentary stamp taxes and recording fees is due within 24 hours after the advertised time of the sale. All payments shall be cash or guaranteed instrument, made payable to the Clerk of the Circuit Court.

Tommy Lee Jones, the dogged pursuer of "The Fugitive," won for best supporting actor, beating Ralph Fiennes, who played a sadistic Nazi commandant in "Schindler's List." Spain's "Belle Epoque" won for best foreign-language film and honorary Oscars went to Paul Newman and Deborah Kerr.

Before the evening turned serious, it was highlighted by whoopi Goldberg's sharp humor.

Replacing Billy Crystal after four years as emcee, Miss Goldberg kept the show moving at a brisk pace, poking fun at everyone from alleged Hollywood madman Heidi Fleiss to Lorena Bobbitt. "Lorena Bobbitt, please meet Bob Dole," Miss Goldberg said of the Republican senator.

Is there a cure for staph infection?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Just what is a staph infection and what will cure it? I've had one for four years and am told there isn't any medicine that will completely and finally beat it.

or Head and Shoulders), hydrocortisone cream, ketoconazole cream, or other preparations.

If your family doctor has successfully treated your seborrhea, fine; otherwise, see a dermatologist.

DEAR READER: Staphylococcus bacteria are ubiquitous in nature. For example, all of us carry millions of staph germs on our skin all the time. By and large, staph are not a serious health problem. They cause pimples, boils and other relatively innocuous ailments.

However, some strains of staph are exceedingly dangerous. They may cause deep infections — in the bone, for instance — that are highly resistant to antibiotics. For this reason, extensive or deep staph infections require a medical diagnosis and usually have to be surgically drained or removed. In addition, special anti-staph penicillin derivatives — such as methicillin and cephalosporins — have been developed to eradicate staph infections.

Although occasional staph infections are serious, most can be cured using modern antibiotics and surgery. Despite therapy, however, some staph infections, such as those in bone, can become chronic and last several years. I suggest that you seek a consultation with an infectious disease expert, many of whom are associated with teaching hospitals.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Where does seborrhea come from? Is the condition contagious and how long will I have it? Should I be seeing a dermatologist or stick with my general practitioner?

DEAR READER: The cause of seborrhea is unknown. Appearing as an oily, scaly inflammation of the scalp and face, it affects newborns ("cradle cap") as well as adults (dandruff). It is not contagious.

Treatment consists of various shampoos (such as Selsun Blue

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

It is amazing what has been calculated. We know when solar eclipses will occur for centuries into the future. And I have a chart for learning on which day any date from 1700 to 2499 has fallen or will fall. For example, it has just taken me only 11 seconds to discover that February 2, 2222 will be a Friday. If things stay as they are, that will be five days after Super Bowl XLVI. I wonder if the name of the Seattle Seahawks will be engraved on the trophy by then!

Today's deal is a rarity too. It was declared by two computers and one human. All three went down. Against six spades, West leads the heart king. Declarer ruffs and cashes the spade ace, but East discards a heart. How should South continue?

Looking at the North-South hands, you would like to be in seven spades. But how do you find out that North has three trumps and that perfect club holding? In this computer auction, three clubs was a double negative, showing a very poor hand.

Both computers drew trumps. Then they played three rounds of diamonds. East happily won and cashed another diamond trick one down.

The human, after East discarded at trick two, immediately played three rounds of diamonds. But East won and led his last diamond, allowing West to ruff with the spade jack one down.

South should cash the AK of clubs at tricks three and four. Then he leads a low spade from hand. This forces a trump entry to the dummy, and South's diamond losers disappear on the Q-J of clubs.

HOROSCOPE

YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 23, 1994

Your chart indicates strong probabilities in the year ahead for profiting in some manner from something originated by another. Luck could be a big factor in bringing this about.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Schedule your agenda today so that your responsible priorities are more weighted than your pleasurable pursuits. Without an organized form, significant time could be wasted. Aries, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There is a possibility today you might base your judgment and decisions upon emotional rather than logical aspects. You could fare better if the emphasis is reversed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A project you've set for yourself might not turn out as easy as it looked on the drawing board. However, don't use this as an alibi to scrap the endeavor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you are financially irresponsible early in the day you might severely regret it later. Extravagance could emerge victorious if financial discipline isn't maintained.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In order to cut a deal today it looks like you might promise or give away much more than you should. Be fair, but also be sensible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be sure you're able to distinguish the difference today between positive thinking and wishful thinking. The former enhances success, the latter invites failure.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Material opportunities continue to hover about you at this time, but there is a chance you might not recognize them for what they are owing to an indifferent attitude.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not expect others to do things for you today that you can manage more competently on your own. The only person you can really count on is yourself!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually you're a rather perceptive individual, but today you might be taken in by accepting something at face value instead of investigating it for yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be wary of taking financial risks on involvements today which you do not personally control. Don't be put in a position where you have to pay for someone else's mistakes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Unfortunately, not everyone with whom you'll be dealing today will abide by the high standards you set for yourself. Don't trip over your own naivete.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You have a sharp eye for details today, but it might be difficult for you to see the entire picture. Stand back a bit to where you're able to analyze the whole view.
