Honesty In Business

In one of his recent addresses President Roosevelt made the assertion that his long experience in government had brought him to the conclusion that the average politician brought far more honest and far more capable than the average business man.

It is difficult for those of us who live in Florida and who are more or less familiar with the political events in this state to reconcile that statement with our own experience. It has indeed seemed to us at times that many a once honorable citizen would do things in the name of politics that he wouldn't think of doing as a private individual or business man.

In some of our more populous counties it is a well known fact that for years gambling joints and dives of one kind and another have been allowed to operate in open violation of the laws of the state, and it is pretty generally known that certain public officials have profited through their operation. It is also rather generally believed that when an honest sheriff or state attorney has been elected to office and has proceeded to close up such places, he has been removed from office by officials higher up.

But such examples are not confined to our own state. If the newspaper accounts from other cities can be taken at their face value, stories from Chicago, which have not been denied, reveal that certain public officials expect tribute from legitimate business enterprises in addition to the regular taxes such places have to pay. If the tribute, or graft, as it is commonly called, is not paid, gangs of thugs call and wreck the place. In numerous instances public contracts are let, not to the lowest bidder, but to the highest bidder.

President Roosevelt would have to look no farther than his own State of New York to find what political corruption can really mean. While he was Governor of New York, Jimmy Walker was mayor of New York City, and the files of the Saboury investigation will show what that meant to the taxpayers and business institutions of that city. The same thing is going on in the Veterans' Bureau a few years ago and the oil graft in the Department of the Interior during the Harding Administration shows that even the federal government is not at times above reproach.

So long ago a Sanford woman drove down to Palm Beach. At Fort Pierce she stopped for lunch. Arriving in Palm Beach she discovered that she had left her pocket-book containing a ten dollar bill and some old change in the Fort Pierce restaurant. She returned to the restaurant, which she discovered had been closed and the old change was returned to her.

Representatives Will Battle For Seats In Senate

Senator Sheppard Will Fight On Hands Next Year

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Although no one dares hazard a guess as to when Congress will wind up the present session, there are indications around Capitol Hill that the 76 elections already are becoming in for serious attention.

Almost every day word of a new contest is passed around the cloakrooms and corridors. Members of the House have their eyes on seats at the other side of the Capitol and are preparing to term after them in the primaries.

Such gossip has it that Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, dean of both houses in point of continuous service, will have a fight on his hands next year. Two members of the House—Martin Dies of Texas and George H. Rader of Ohio—are both reported planning to run against him.

Rumor has it also that a first class contest is in the offing in Kentucky where the party boss, Frank L. Logan, is up for reelection. Fred M. Vinson, a House veteran and author of the middle class tax bill, is expected to make it against him.

Both House and New Mexico's chief Democratic senator, Carl Hatch, serving unexpired terms, will be up for reelection. From present indications the senatorial contests in that state promise to be very much in the national spotlight next year.

There are three questions you should ask yourself about the tires you buy: 1. Will the non-skid tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding? 2. Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection? 3. Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage than making them the most economical tires I can buy?

5 New Players In City To Seek Jobs On Local Ball Club

Simultaneously with the arrival here today of five new baseball players, all of them young and aggressive looking men, came the announcement by officials of the Sanford Baseball Club that a campaign will be launched starting tomorrow morning to sell advance tickets to the Sanford-Cocoa game here next Thursday.

The new players—Joe Hackney, Leo Walker, Chick Burch, Hiram Caldwell, and Dick Mason—were at Municipal Park this morning working out with the Reds and from all indications, each is capable of delivering the goods.

Hackney, Burch and Mason are outfielders, Walker is a third baseman or shortstop, while Caldwell appears to be a natural fixture on first base.

However, only Hackney, Burch and Walker will be eligible for the Sanford-Leesburg game in Leesburg tomorrow afternoon, the remaining two becoming eligible in time for the Thursday game here.

Just which players will be cut from the list to make room for the new men was problematical late today. All players have been asked to take a salary cut, and three of the five new men are here on terms that are in line with the new salary schedule.

Officials of the club determined to make the Sanford club the strongest in the league within the next two weeks have announced that with the arrival of the new men there will be an end to experimentation for the next month.

All clubs have until next Tuesday afternoon to cut their rosters to the 15 or less men who can be used during the last month of the first half. No changes may be made during the last month of the season.

That means that new bats will have but one opportunity to be used in an action before the time comes to make the final cut, and that opportunity will be Thursday when the Reds play at Leesburg next Sunday.

CITY NEWS BRIEF

Cameron who plans to add a room to his home on Myrtle Avenue, while a $150 permit went to Sam Kialaw who plans repairs to his home on Holly Avenue at First Street.

Connelly, and Roy Mann were in Orlando Saturday night, as was Mrs. Branan, attending the annual banquet of members of the American Chapter of the Central Florida Institute of Banking. Court Rules That President Can't Fix Codes For Industry

The federal court decision today by Associate Justice Brandeis ruled on a case brought by Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank against William W. Hartford, 27. The Federal District Court for Western Kentucky and the Sixth circuit court of Appeals upheld the ruling after a farm foreclosure suit valued at $12,000,000 by the Missouri attorney general.

The Supreme court's ruling was unanimous.

The other court had decided on the act some months ago and then ruling it unconstitutional.

The Supreme court also ruled that the President lacks constitutional authority to remove federal trade commissioners except for causes named in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It made this ruling in an opinion delivered by Chief Justice Hughes in the Schechter v. United States case from New York, selected by the government to test its power to regulate wages and the hours of workers through the more than 400 NRA codes of fair competition.

The Schechter Poultry Corporation, the Schechter Live Poultry Market Inc., and four individuals comprising the two firms, if Brooklyn were indicted for violating the live poultry code, and charged with conspiracy to violate the code.

In the Federal District court of eastern New York members of the two firms were found guilty of conspiracy and given prison sentences and with the firms were found guilty on the remaining counts relating to trade practices. The trial court sentenced Joseph Schechter to three months' imprisonment.

He said again today he believed the Legislature has plenty of time to complete its work in the remaining days of the regular session.

Proponents of finance all boiled down to a question of whether schools would be provided for through a direct or indirect sales tax, diversion of gasoline tax receipts from the counties or the general treasury, or both, or from some new sources as yet unmentioned.

Most legislators, particularly those from small counties, said there would be no giving of county gasoline tax revenue to schools. All said a sales tax in one form or another enters into the picture. House and Senate disagreed over provisions of a bill to levy occupational licenses and gross receipts tax on retail business with chain stores paying the heavy portion of the tax.

It was understood the senators working on the new gross receipts tax proposal had in mind eliminating all such taxes in favor of the chain store tax bill, leaving only the occupational license provisions and then introducing and passing the separate tax bill levying taxes on gross receipts for schools.

Georgia Cleric Hits At His Accuser

ATLANTA, May 26.—A clergyman who has been campaigning for repeal of the liquor law, the Rev. E. M. Drayer yesterday lashed his critics before the Georgia legislature.

In a brief talk before a class in a downtown Atlanta first of three addresses of a Methodist Church, Drayer modestly but firmly stated his position on the liquor law.

He said that the liquor law was a "grave national crisis" confronting the country.

"Extraordinary conditions may call for extraordinary remedies but the argument stands short of attempting to defend the action outside of constitutional authority," he said.

The court declared Congress had not provided sufficient restrictions and had not laid down proper rules to guide the President in applying the codes.

Fulton Challenges Farley To Campaign

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 26.—Fulton County Judge James A. Farley today challenged Mayor William W. Hartford to campaign for reelection.

Farley, who is a member of the Federal Trade Commission, said that he had filed a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel Hartford to campaign.

The petition was filed in the Federal District Court for the Southern District of New York.

Farley said that he had filed the petition because he believed that Hartford was not doing enough to campaign for reelection.
