Speaking of baseball, these high pressured Giant fans, who are so proudly beating about Carl Hubbell, will take that grown off "King Carl" before this season is out. We cannot conceive of the idea that Gus Monusco, Giant receiver, could rightfully make the statement that the so-coil of "King Carl" was a better pitcher than "Ole Dia," after their performance in the AH-Star game, even though he is a Giant catcher.

Pulling Together

The life boat crew of the Conte di Savoia, Italian liner, won the annual crew race held this year on the Hudson river between leading commercial ships of various astions. Many reasons may be advanced why this particular crew won over the other imposing list of entries, but there is one secret of crew racing that stands out above all others as the one likely to have shoved the Italian prow across the finish line ahead of all others, and that is "pullices together."

ing together."
"Pulling together" in a boat crew means that every individual has not only to keep in perfect co-ordination with every other member of the crew, but he must neither with every other member of the crew, but he must neither pull too hard nor too little. The man, who tries to exert more power than his comrades, will be as detrimental as the one who "rides" his oar and lets the rest of the boys carry him. Everyone must pull with equal force and rhythm if the boat is to attain its maximum velocity through the water.

This "pulling together" is not
