Dr. Darby: From Celery To Midges

Herald Staff Writer

Dr. John Darby, administrator of the University of Florida Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences, Agriculture Research and Education Center in Sanford, doesn't have the opportunity of doing research work anymore and misses it.

"I cannot get that excited about paperwork, but there is some satisfaction in doing it. We solve problems to save farmers a lot of money and thus help with the export of foods from this country, about the only thing that helps our nation's balance of payments," he said. During his 22 years at the Sanford research center, Darby has worked directly or indirectly in all types of experimental work from specialty type rhubarb grown from seed on Zellwood muck to celery investigation.

Some years ago, he notes, Sanford was the celery capital of the world and now only one area farmer is growing celery commercially. The experiment station also has worked with field corn and soy beans, primarily toward increasing yield per acre. Sixty per cent of the station's work is with vegetables, 20 per cent with field crops and 20 per cent in environmental programs. Most of the work is conducted with cooperation from the University of Florida.

This is particularly true in the Zellwood Currently three scientists from Gainesville are working on a celery pest-management study paid for with a $40,000 grant from the Celery Growers Exchange of Florida.

Dr. Darby said that, since the use of certain chemicals has been banned, the "leaf miner" worm have been wreaking havoc on celery crops. The worm mines holes in the celery leaf and kills the plant. The study involves thousands of acres of vegetables. The local station is using eight scouts who go out twice weekly to count spots and observe the infestation. Preparations are inderway to have color, black and white and infrared photos taken of the celery fields for statistical information.

Currently, Dr. Darby is involved as a number of a task force of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce in initiating a research program for the control of the blind mosquitoes, also known as midges, are plaguing the Monroe lakefront and downtown Feeding

Dr. Walter T. Scudder of the University of Florida Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences, Agriculture Research and Education Center, Sanford, tells what is being done locally to help feed the world in Seminole Magazine, Sunday.

Now the station has eight research scientists and career service support averages three per scientist.

dously over Darby's 22-years here and a second station exists in Zellwood on the north shore of Lake Apopka. The work in Zellwood revolves around water pollution abatement in Lake Apopka, Dr. Darby said, noting that farmers in the past pumped water off muck into the lake, with the result that the lake is high in nitrogen and phosphates.

The station there is working on a program developing a method of farmers keeping water in dykes and dams for recycling. The five lakes in the chain stretch north through Sixty-five acres of land is used at the Sanford facility for research work. Another 20 acres near there is rented and the Zellwood station has 25 acres on the north shore of Lake Apopka. The local station also has 18 employes funded through the U.S. Com-prehensive Employment Training Act

Darby and his wife, Marjorie, a third generation Floridian, have two children, John Jr. in his sixth year at dental college at Emery, and a daughter, Beth who lives in Gainesville and teaches at Sunland.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Congress is ready to postpone for 18 months any ban on the use of saccharin, but will require products containing the artificial sweetener to be labeled with warnings of a possible health hazard.

Principal Holds 32 Hostage

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) - Clarence Carl Blanton, the discharged principal of Bethesda Elementary School, held 32 persons hostage for four hours at the school Thursday, then surrendered to school Superintendent Frank Yeager, one of the hostages.

Blanton, whose wife said he had been under a lot of pressure lately and she thought "his mind just snapped," had threatened to kill the members of his faculty he was holding hostage, before he surrendered. He was charged with one count of kidnaping and admitted to the Duke Medical Center for psychiatric examination.

The Bitemark Killer?

Macek pleaded guilty Thursday to the murder of Nancy Lossman and was immediately sentenced to 200 to 300 years in prison.

There were reports Macek also confessed to the slaving of Sally Kandel, 14, who was found beaten to death near her Carol Stream home on Sept. 13, 1972. Richard Milone has been convicted of that killing and jailed. In both cases, the bodies of the victims bore human bite

Mrs. Lossman and her 3-year-old daughter were found slain in their Crystal Lake home in September of 1974, but Macek pleaded guilty only to the slaying of Mrs. Lossman and entered no plea in connection with her daughter's

Macek is serving a prison term in Wisconsin for rape and authorities say he has been implicated in nine He was indicted for the Lossman killings in 1976 after a dental expert reported a human bite found on Mrs. Lossman's breast was inflicted by him. Macek had been arrested in an assault case in McHenry County in 1975 and, at the time, was considered a suspect the Lossman slaying through the bite mark. But Macek jumped bail. When he was arrested in California and returned, all his teeth had been pulled.

Police tracked down the dentist who pulled Macek's teeth and obtained dental records. Dr. Lowell Levine, a Huntington, N.Y., forensic dentist, examined the bite on Mrs. Lossman's body and built a model of the kind of teeth that had inflicted the wound. He said a comparison of the model and Macek's dental records showed Macek had inflicted the wound.

Levine, who was a defense witness in the Kandel case in neighboring DuPage County three years earlier, also said the bite on Mrs. Lossman was identical to a found bite on Miss Kandel's thigh. He said both bites were inflicted by Macek and that Milone was wrongly jailed for the Kandel Milone's parents were told that Macek confessed to the Kandel slaying Thursday. Levine also said he had been informed that Macek confessed.

Rate Increase Likely For Blue Cross, Blue Shield

IN BRIEF

TALLAHASSEE, (UPI) - State Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter says he's not certain hospitals are doing an adequate job of trying to control rising medical costs. Gunter made the comment Thursday following a $29 million rate increase hearing requested by Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Gunter indicated he would grant the increase because Blue Cross & Blue Shield officials said they are on the verge of bankruptcy. Gunter said the medical insurance company presented sufficient information to justify their financial problems but he said he will make a final decision in two or three weeks.

Dade Youth Hall Defects

MIAMI (UPI) - Dade County officials accepted the county's new $9 million Youth Hall from a Fort Lauderdale general contractor even though they were aware of defects in the building, a court-appointed citizens' committee report showed Thursday.

The report was prepared at the request of Juvenile Court Judge Seymour Gelber. Among the deficiencies listed in the report on the year-old building were broken plumbing, roof leaks, faulty locks, peeling paint and crumbling caulking.

Solar Savings For Schools

GAINESVILLE (UPI) - By using solar energy for heating, cooling and hot water the state's public schools could save $43 million a year in energy bills, according to a University of Florida study.

The study, released Thursday, recommends prototype solar systems be put in two Florida schools, one with the solar equipment in-stalled during construction and the other retrofitted to an existing school.

The President And The People

No doubt the creditors of the Democratic Party are glad that President Carter raised more than a half-million dollars for the debt-plagued party with his appearance Oct. 22 in Los Angeles. And no doubt those who grieve over the President's slide in the polls are glad that after leaving Los Angeles the following morning, Mr. Carter cruised up to Minneapolis to give Hubert Humphrey a ride to the nation's capital.

To those around him, Mr. Humphrey radiates popularity, and since Mr. Carter was around him for a half-continental flight, he should be a bit more Yet, despite the money and the dollop of prestige, Mr. Carter's two-day trip to the West will be a net loss unless he shows himself to have learned a couple of things that were quite available for the learning. One has to do with the rhetorical use he makes of populism, the other with something we thought he'd never need instruction in, the anti-Washington sentiment.

It is well-known that, even as a candidate for President, Mr. Carter made much of his closeness to "the people," how he is one of them, how he draws his strength just from them, how he speaks

On his trip, though, it was notable that in the most populous city he visited-Los Angeles-"the people" and Mr. Carter seemed two quite different entities. "The people"—in distinction to the people who paid $1,000 a head to hear Mr. Carter speak were the 3,500 demonstrators outside the Century Plaza Hotel. Their causes were varied - pro-Israeli, pro-Arab, anti-farming-policy, anti-Canaltreaties, anti-neutron bomb, etc.-but it is precisely this variety that one hopes Mr. Carter

The fact is, "the people" are always so dif-ferent as the demonstrators in Los Angeles, their causes always running the spectrums of thought and emotion. So any politicians who claim to speak for "the people" necessarily engage themselves in Lately, for example, Mr. Carter has been claiming to speak for "the people," whom, he says, the energy industry is trying to "rip off." Having looked at the heterogeneous collection of demonstrators outside his Los Angeles hotel, Mr. Carter usefully might reflect whether invocation of "the people" is rhetorically satisfactory.

Indeed, he might reflect whether his repeated use of the term in battling for his energy program might have contributed to its dismemberment in Congress. After all, which people is Mr. Carter

The other thing Mr. Carter had the chance to learn is something he seemed once to have known, back on the campaign trail. Mr. Carter got votes in the primaries by telling everyone how remote and insensitive to ordinary folks Washington is. It is notable, though, that the complaint of farmers in California's Imperial Valley is nothing if not an angered response to the remote and insensitive ways of Mr. Carter's own administration.

Mr. Carter is back in that Washington, and of course one cannot know what he might have learned from his Western trip. But surely some time or other Mr. Carter is going to have to un-derstand the inherent difficulty of populist

And he is going to have to learn that his administration can appear just as remote as previous ones. It would seem that these are items, if recognized, that would contribute far more to Mr. Carter's presidency than his capacities either to raise money or to capitalize on Sen. Humphrey's

Helping Touring Students

WASHINGTON - There's an unfortunate tendency - too frequently inspired and encouraged by the news media - to view the nation's capital as a city populated almost ex-clusively by bumbling and corrupt bureaucrats. Washington undoubtedly has more than its share of scoundrels and scandals, but it has its quota of intelligent, dedicated, creative men and women working to improve themselves and their Typical of the people in that latter category is William M. Burke, a 31-year-old Massachusetts native who is part visionary and part hard-

His unique specialty is providing a full range of services to the hordes of college students who descend on this city every year for internships, work-study projects and other programs that allow them to view their government at work and to participate in that program.

Uncounted thousands of students now make that pilgrimage and their number grows annually. They come from big cities and rural communities. Some stay for only a month; others settle in for a year. Some are highly motivated with clearly defined goals; others are

That faculty member may be one of the country's leading authorities on the Federalist

Papers, but he or she invariably has little or no expertise in finding student housing, locating emporary jobs or lining up guest lecturers.

That's where Burke comes in. After five years at the University of Massachusetts, including a stint as director of its Washington intern program, he resigned in April 1975 to non-profit Washington Center for Learning Alternatives, an organization that provides visiting students with everything from dor-mitory rooms to professionally-taught courses. No fewer than nine banks turned down Burke's request for loans to finance the untested concept, so he scraped together $30,000 from friends, relatives and small loans. The money was used as a down payment on a downtown building with 132 efficiencies and 40 one-bedroom

When Burke quit his job in New England, didn't have a commitment from a single college to participate in the venture. Today there are 174 chools affiliated with the program, many them small institutions that send only two three students per semester to Washington.

Burke convinced the Exxon Educational evelopment of an academic program that now anges from conventional courses on the federal oudget, foreign policy and Congress, to more esoteric offerings on sexual politics and the

Greider Question: To Play, Or Not To Play-

To play, or not to play; that seems to be the question of the week on the Seminole County high school football

The subject of the question is Lake Howell's premier fullback Doug Greider, who has missed the Hawks' last two games with a back injury.

The answer to the question will have a lot to do with the outcome of this weeks' top game - Lake Howell at

Whether Greider plays or not, it should be some battle. Both teams come into this game with 1-7 records; and both want a victory.

There's lots more interesting football action on tap this weekend, besides the big traditional battle at Oviedo.

Lake Brantley and Trinity Prep continue their respective playoff marches; while Lyman's Greyhounds go into battle as the favorites, for a change this season. The Patriots, conference and district leaders with a 6-1 overall mark, will host Orlando Colonial (2-6); while Lyman takes a 1-7 record on the road to 0-7 Apopka.

Trinity Prep (5-2) travels to Fort Pierce Saturday to play John Carroll (4-2). Brantley's game is not a "counter" in district or conference standings, but Coach Jim Raley should have little trouble in getting the Pats up for the game - it is the last home game of the year, and the Brantley seniors will be

Losing Streak: 32, Counting

NEW YORK (UPI) - If there's any justice in this world, or someone up there is looking down on things with any merciful compassion at all, then little MacAlester College of St. Paul, Minn., should win its final football game of the season Saturday. Chances are it won't because the Scots, as they call themselves, own the longest losing streak in the country, 32 straight, and haven't won a game now going on four years. They're hoping to end that all against neighboring Hamline, but don't figure to, even though the Fighting Pipers are having problems of their own with only one victory in eight tries them-

Clint Ewald, MacAlester's businesslike 32-year-old head coach, isn't planning any kind of Knute Rockne pep talk.
"I don't give pep talks," he says. "Not in the traditional sense, anyway. The players know this is our last game and that it would be nice to finish the season with a positive feeling, so a lot of things don't have to be said. The fact this is our last game isn't really that significant. For us, next year has started already."

One look at the team's "perfect" record this year explains why Eight games, eight losses. And every time anybody played the Scots, they turned it into a tailigate party — right out there on the field. Here's how the other teams teed off on them this season: Bethel, 38-7; Washington University at St. Louis, 55-0; Concordia, 97-6; St. Thomas, 51-0; Gustavus-Adolphus, 44-12; St. Olaf, 67-0; St. John's, 70-0; Augsburg, 35-8. "All the players keep trying as hard as they can and there's no self-consciousness on their part regarding our record," says Ewald. "The people here in charge at the school have been fairly

Then due to an unusually severe winter don't think anyone can comprehend the magnitude of this kind of disaster. The only way I can compare it is to picture 50 per cent of the population of Central Florida dying from starvation and

One doe-deer will produce on an average of two fawns per eason. Of this average the male-female ratio is nearly even. Then the next year, that same doe will drop again and her progeny from the year before may be of bearing age, and it will roduce, then the next season she will produce again along with ner offspring and their offspring and so on.

I'd like to see a mathematician set down a formula and heoretically calculate what one doe deer and her offspring would produce over a ten-year period. I think it might be amazing.

Nature generally controls population as most animals will not produce more then their habitat will support. But the falacy here s that we may have a number of good years with a plentiful food supply and then one season have a drought or severe winter. This is where controlled harvesting pays off.

Vicki Lynn Hardin and Douglas Ray Wall were married Oct. 15, at the First Baptist Church of Sanford. Rev. Jay T. Cosmato performed the 4:30 p.m. candlelight and double ring ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Burns Hardin. and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Wall, all of Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a formal gown from the Renaissance Collection fashioned of ivory chiffon and lace. The gown was designed with a square yoke, wedding band collar, tiered ruffled skirt and long bell sleeves accented with ivory Venise lace. Her tiered veil of illusion, secured to a camelot cap, terminated in a cathedral train. She carried an Edwardian bridal bouquet of ivory and sonia roses, stephanotis, baby's breath and ivy foliage. As the bride entered the church she presented her mother with a sonia rose. Upon departure, she presented the bridegroom's mother with an identical rose. Elizabeth Darby of Gainesville, attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a sleeveless cinnamon qiana gown fashioned with a cape effect jacket with the long chiffon sleeves and yoke highlighted with rose-patterned inserts of chiffon. Her floral headpiece was created of sonia roses and dried materials. She carried a crescent bouquet of pompons, sonia

Question: The one thing in my life that really bugs me is my mother-in-law. She's always giving somebody advice-me, my husband, or our children. My husband just ignores these irritations, but I can't seem to shake my anger and resentmen toward her. How should I handle this situation?

Answer: The way your husband does. After all he's lived with the fact of having this mother-in-law in your life, and so what good does it do to let her upset you? No matter how much you want her to change, it's unrealistic to expect it to happen. You can't really change another person, and it's only frustrating to try. But you can tell your mother-in-law how you feel and what bothers you. I think it's always a good idea for family members to talk about the things that hurt and anger them. It's not a good idea to do this, however, when you're angry or upset. A calm statment of your feelings, without accusing or blaming, will make you feel better, even though the situation itself may not change. The question to ask is, why struggle with things you can't change? Why let one problem poison your whole life? A person can have a comfortable home, a happy family life, good health, plenty of food, and still be miserable over one problem. One negative element can so overshadow the good thing in your life that you think of little else. And this discontent easily becomes a bad habit that can blight the happiness of a whole family. There are enough crises and sorrows in this life, so why borrow trouble in the good times?

I'm not trying to minimize your grievances, but I am trying to help you put them in perspective. Since you have to live with your problem, you may as well accept what you can't change. And accepting your mother-in-law exactly as she is will remove some of the conflict and release you from much tension. You will begin to have a peace about the whole situation. You'll be able to see your many blessings and enjoy your life today. The Bible puts it like this, "In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you" (I Thessalonians 5:18).

Ex-Cop Sued Casselberry; Altamonte Next?

She 'Stands Up To Be Counted'

Herald Staff Writer

She came. She sued. She conquered. She's Janet Hasson, a former county employee. And she won an $8,500 settlement from the City of Casselberry 10 days ago after she charged discrimination in the police department's hiring practices in a complaint to the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and filed suit in federal court.

She says she didn't really want the money, which will be 'I want what I am entitled to.

I'm not asking for special favors... used to further her education toward a goal of a degree in criminology. She says she wanted a job, a job as a juvenile officer with a law enforcement agency. Now, she is considering suing Altamonte Springs in ederal court and says she already has charged discrimination in an EEOC complaint against that South Seminole city.

she has been standing up for her rights "to get what's coming to me under the law."

Has she really conquered? Ms. Hasson claims that because she has stood up "to be counted," she has been "blackballed" in the law enforcement community, branded a "troublemaker," and is unable to get a job with any police department.

Altamonte Springs Police Chief Justus East, denying discrimination of any sort is practiced in his department, says that Ms. Hasson voluntarily resigned from his force's police reserves because of injuries she suffered in an automobile accident earlier this year and could reapply for reserve status whenever she chooses."

Ms. Hasson says she may take Chief East at his word, but also reapply for full-time employment with the City of Altamonte Springs Police Department. Ms. Hasson says her goal for a lifetime career is to work with juvenile offenders in parole and probation. She said she completed the 320 hours of training necessary for certification as a law-enforcement officer at

Altamonte Chamber Bids For Crime $$

The Altamonte-Casselberry Chamber of Commerce will apply for a $225,000 LEAA (Law Enforcement Assistance Administration) federal grant to fund a Citizen's Against the Criminal Harassment

(CATCH) program. The 'catch,' according to Dr. Bobby Sharp, vice president of community affairs for the chamber and chairman for the proposed program, is that to prepare the application prior to the Dec. 17 deadline, the committee needs input from a broad spectrum of the

"We need to know concerns and opinions about crime in the South Seminole area," Sharp said. "We need to know what in their pinion are some of the causes of crime and possible solutions. Ideas and opinions, regardless of scope, are vital to this program, I we are to succeed in our anti-crime efforts," he said.

"We are not just concerned with the inessman's views - we would like to hear rom every homeowners association, every civic and professional organization, senior scitizens, youth, churches, motel operators, partment dwellers and the private citizen,

The ideas, opinions, causes and solutions will be compiled in writing as the comnunity's views on crime and submitted with the grant application. This is everyone's opportunity to participate in helping stop crime in the community, Sharp said.

Any non-profit group or non-governmental body may apply for these grants, but Sharp said to his knowledge only one in the state (Daytona Beach Chamber of Commerce) has

Although the cities are not directly involved in the grant application, Casselberry Police Chief George Karcher and Altamonte Springs Chief Justus East are serving on the committee and supplying advice and expertise, according to Sharp.

Helping write the grant application are Mrs. Able and Kathy Russell of the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council, a resident of Altamonte Springs.

There are 75 grants available nationwide under this program. As Chamber Executive Director Bill Taylor see it, if the grant is received a paid director would be named to coordinate the CATCH program with a staff Meetings were held Tuesday and Thursday nights after letters were sent out inviting area organizations to send representatives. Sharp said, although there was not a big response, the 30 or so attending were key people in their groups (such as the president of the South nole Jaycees and the president of the South Seminole Civic Association). The CATCH committee will be meeting again Monday at 4:30 p.m. at the Altamonte City Hall. Many of the homeowners associations believe that crimes in their areas are caused by juveniles. To counter this, they feel constructive activities should be provided for youths.
