...THE HOPE OF OUR COMMUNITY,
OUR NATION!
The Church...

With a smile

It was a kind of impertinence—building windmills. Man figured he could get God to do his heavy work for him. And God did! He turned the grindstone, and smiled. Man built his mill by a stream. God turned the millwheel, and smiled. Later man built his electric power plant on a dam, and he started to dabble in nuclear power, and he invented the solar battery. And God is still doing man's work... and still smiling.

Revolutionary Role
Christian Dilemma

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
The struggle by Christians for economic betterment and a measure of human rights for the poor and oppressed in Latin America and Africa has once again raised the question of revolution, violence and what role the Christian should play in such a setting.

The issue has been most dramatically highlighted recently with news reports that the Rev. Ernesto Cardinal, the work-revolutionary Nicaraguan priest had gone into exile and joined a group of guerrillas fighting the regime of Nicaraguan president Anastasio Somoza—the first revolutionary priest in Central America.

Cardinal's apparent switch in tactics, from nonviolence to violence, is not new in Christian history. In the United States, among the most ardent supporters of the ragged revolutionaries who founded the nation.

Cardinal's stance, too, has a long and honored place in the Christian tradition.

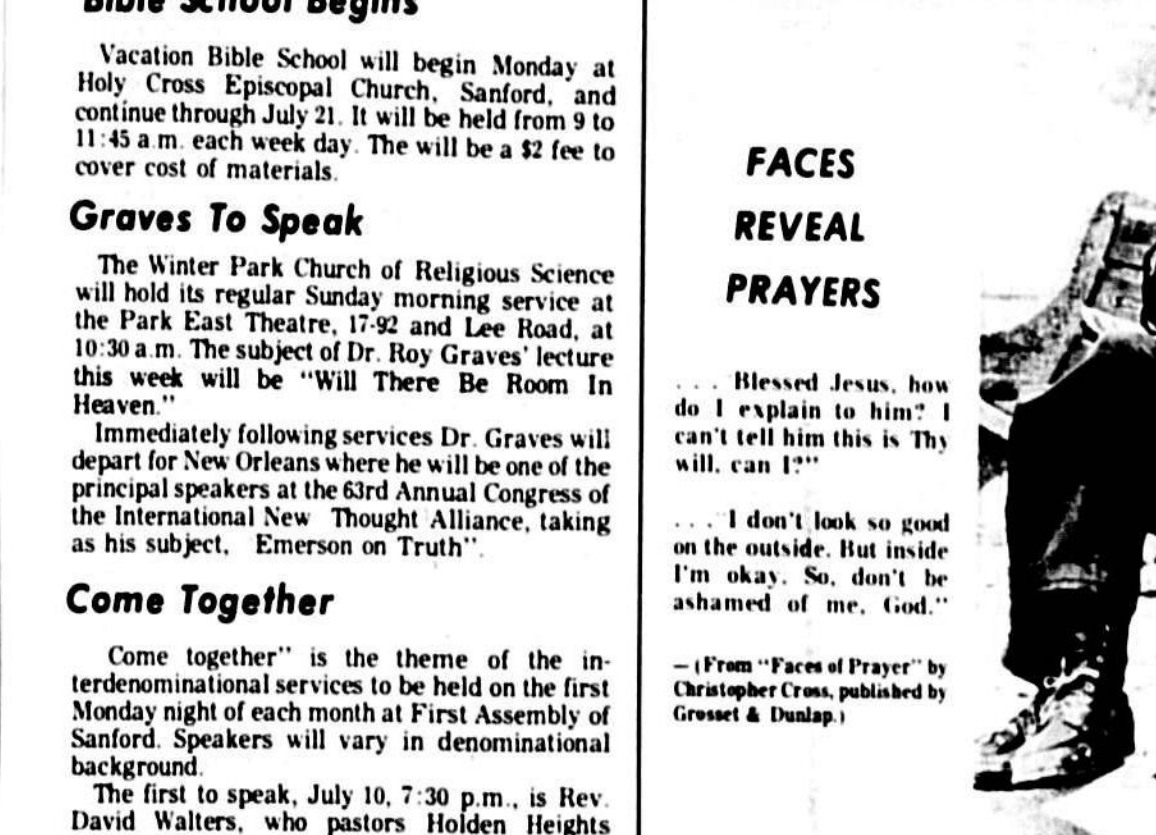

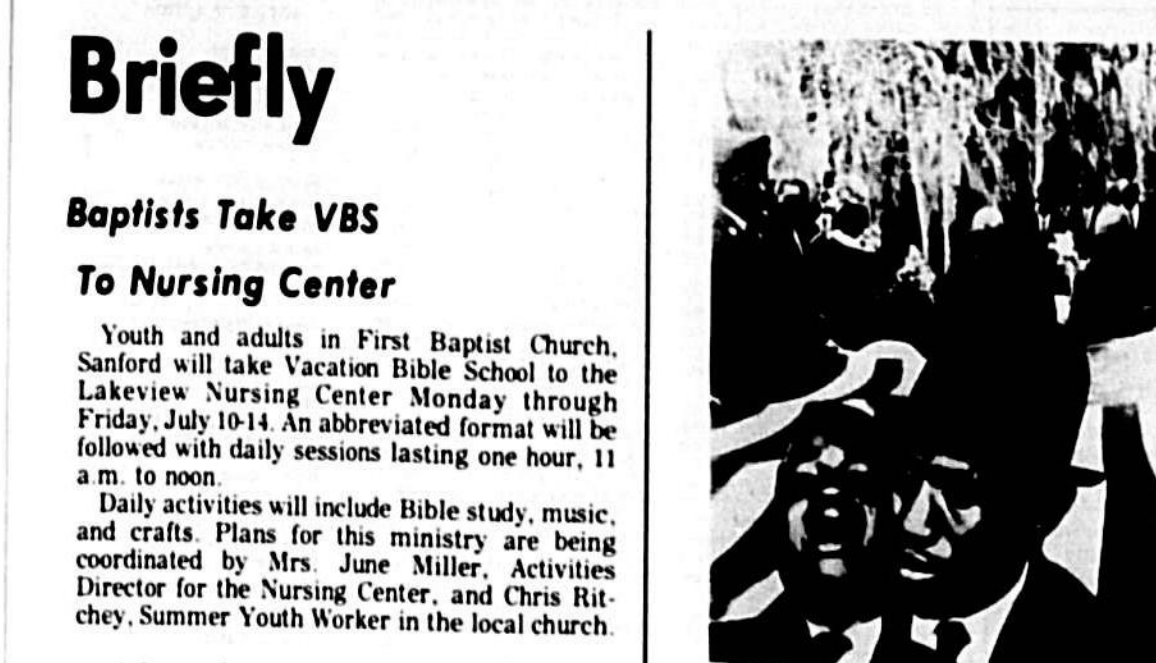

Has It All, But Still Lacks

By FRED R. GARDNER
Not so long ago, I was talking with a successful man who was a good job, success, a nice home, family, money, and status. In other words, he had all this in the eyes of other men.

Rebel Regrets Mistakes

Question: From the time I turned 15 years old, I've rebelled against my parents and God. Now I'm getting older and as I look back I can see what a mess a rebel has made of my life. I'm sorry for what I've done; but with all the mistakes I've made, I don't see how I can ever start over again.

As we talked of the church and about God in general, he made the confession that he was trying to be a good Christian and do what was right in his own mind. He felt frustrated in that he was not growing anymore and his spiritual life seemed to be at a standstill, with no real enthusiasm. He really felt that more than anything else.

FACES REVEAL PRAYERS
Blessed Jesus, how do I explain to him? I can't tell him this is Thy will, can I?

I don't look so good on the outside. But inside I'm okay. So, don't be ashamed of me, God.

Come Together

Come together" is the theme of the interdenominational services to be held on the first Monday night of each month at First Assembly of Sanford. Speakers will vary in denominational background.

Sunday during 7:30 p.m. worship service at Lake Mary Baptist Mission, Terry Cooper and Pat Robbins will present a sacred music concert. Pat and Terry are a mother-daughter-team, who sing and play guitar and write most of the gospel music they perform.

Flanked by the texts of her trade, Aimee Mason leaped back in her desk chair and thoughtfully considered the latest turn into which her life has led her.

Rags-To-Riches Story Embarrassing

DEAR ABBY: When I married my husband he was a quiet, modest man. We have since learned from a "racism" that I must admit I did not enjoy.

Dear Abby: My husband owns his own business. It's small, but fairly successful. He has 18 men working for him and one girl (I'll call her "Jill") who handles the office and does a great job. Jill is only 20 and not super-attractive, but not ugly either.

DEAR ABBY: I fail to see what is "dirty" about the girl's act. I agree with you, husband. Jill has a right to go where she wants. And if you and the other wives are wise, you'll pull in your claws.

Activity Answer To Middle-Age Spread

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you please help me. I am a married woman 62 years old. I have a part-time job but I don't get much exercise. I play tennis once a week. I have gained 10 pounds and just can't lose it.

Dr. Lamb

Do you have a diet that would be good for me, as far as cholesterol goes and what I should have and what I shouldn't? I sure would appreciate your help. I am in good health otherwise.

DEAR READER — You are at the time of life when the "middle-age spread" occurs and it is wise for you to do something about it now. You've put your finger on a major part of the problem — a decrease in physical activity. Rather than restrict yourself too severely with a diet, I'd like to see you increase your physical activity and correct the basic fault. If you could just plan on walking two miles a day in addition to your present activity, in a year's time that would make a lot of difference.

calories per gram compared to four calories per gram for both carbohydrate and protein.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What risk would a man age 60 face in having a hair transplant? DEAR READER — Not much. The usual procedure is to take small plugs of good hair follicles from the side of the head and insert them over the bald area. This is a relatively simple procedure although it is fairly time consuming and therefore costly. I should think that anyone in reasonably good health could expect to have the procedure done without it causing him any major difficulties.

Scott's Grown On Television

Ever since the first film aired many years ago, Eric Scott has played Ben, the second youngest boy on "The Waltons." You could say he's grown up on the CBS series.

Eric Scott was born on Oct. 20, 1956, in Hollywood, Calif. He has been interested in archeology since he was in the third grade. However, his flaming red hair and freckles have proved irresistible to casting directors, and he has spent much of his spare time before the camera.

His television credits include "Medical Center," "The Interns," "Bewitched," "The Donna Day Show," "Lancer," "The Young Rebels," "Norman Rockwell's America" and "The Clowns." He has also worked in commercials and in 10 recording strips for Hanna-Barbera Productions.

Eric is active in scouting, sports and science — particularly chemistry. He was graduated from El Camino Real High School in Woodland Hills, Calif., and is currently majoring in Business Law at Pierce Junior College, also in Woodland Hills. The young actor also sings and dances with another show regular, Joe Conley. They have made several "Dinah" appearances together.

Eric is 5 feet 6 inches tall, and his height, or lack of it, was turned into one of the series' more charming shows this past episode. He weighs 128 pounds, and has red hair and blue-gray eyes. He lives in Canoga Park with his family, which includes his mother and older brother, Alan, and a younger brother, Dana.

MOVIE PARTY

"Grease," stars Olivia Newton-John and John Travolta were reunited recently at a Hollywood party celebrating the movie's premiere. In keeping with the film's 1950s setting, a sound studio was decorated to resemble a high school gym and cafeteria for the gala. Incidentally, Newton-John was 11 years old and Travolta a mere 5 when the real 1950s came to a close.

New Bows Increase Interest In Sport

For hundreds of years bows were little touched by evolution. Wood was the principal material of construction, either carved from a single piece or made from laminating thin pieces together.

Fiberglass bows replaced many of the wooden ones and now the compound bow is sweeping the Robin Hood scene.

Looking more like a hardware store than a conventional bow, it has a combination of pulleys arranged like a block and tackle system between the tips of the bow designed to increase the power of the bow. One advantage is at full draw the muscle power required to hold the arrow on target drops remarkably thus enabling the hunter to hold longer and steadier without muscle fatigue spoiling his shot.

Most of the bows have numerous adjustable sights which can be set for different yardage, and the power itself required to pull the bow can be adjusted to suit the individual.

With the new bows, archery and bow hunting have become increasingly popular in this area. At the Land & Water Sports Center, 777 N. State Road 17-92 in Casselberry a bow hunting league has formed to help hunters sharpen their skills.

Every Saturday at 1:30 p.m. and Thursdays at 6:45 p.m. league members shoot at wolves, deer, raccoons, and other animal-shaped targets.

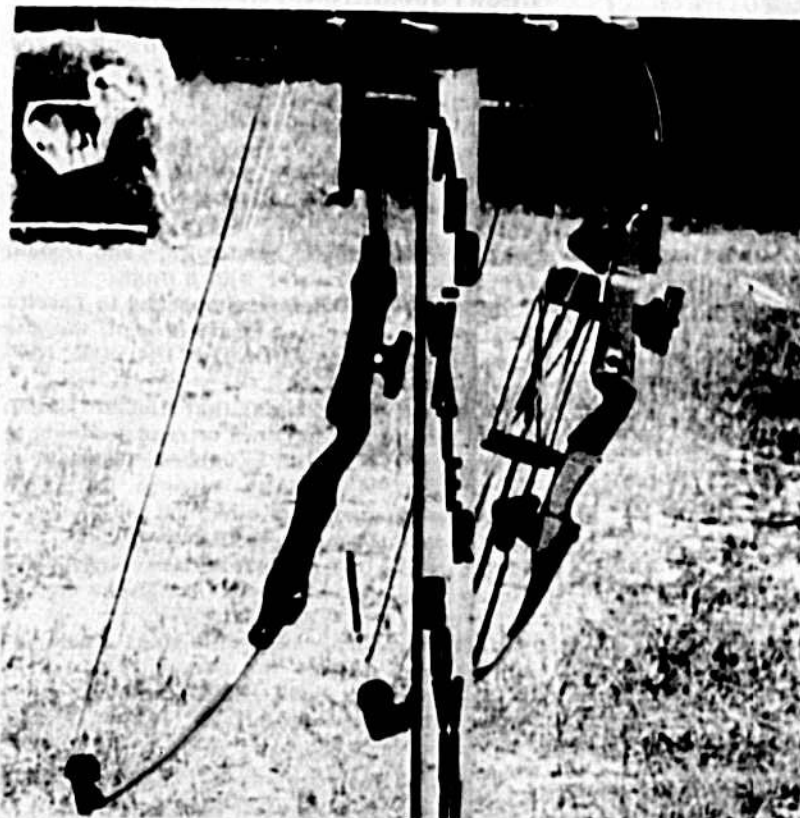

Fred Will of Orlando started shooting in May and joined the league. "I got into it for hunting, then I met these people and if I never went bow hunting it would be worth it just because of the people in the league."

Frank Colon of Winter Springs got started in archery in his native New York shooting at cardboard boxes. He is now one of the high-scoring members of the league who hopes to bag a deer when bow hunting season opens later this year. Whether he gets one or not, he plans to put in a lot of time hunting. "My wife is going to be a hunting widow this year," he said.

Shelley Hack's Patience Pays Off

HOLLYWOOD — Thank Heavens for Joe Brooks. Maybe he's not the greatest movie-maker in the world — there are those who think "If Ever I See You Again" is pretty blah — but at least he has an appreciation of beauty. When I go to the movies, I don't want to see Barbara Streisand faces or Bette Midler faces. I see them every day, walking around the street. To me, the movies are for people who are more attractive than normal.

And, apparently, Joe Brooks feels that way, too. For his film, he picked, as his co-star, one of the reigning beauties of the moment, Shelley Hack. The fact that she is also a charming person is icing on the cake.

She's never acted before, at least not for pay. She's been a model, and one of the top ones around. Everybody knows her as the Charlie girl on those cheerful commercials.

SHELLEY HACK

Everybody — except Joe Brooks. "I don't think Joe Brooks ever even watches TV," Shelley Hack says. "So he didn't know me. I got the part without having to worry about it. As a matter of fact, I read about it in the papers and I was so excited that I called him and he said, 'I'll be right there.'"

But, unlike most models who become actresses, Shelley Hack had always wanted to be an actress and she had studied acting for a long time.

"That's what I wanted to do all along," she says. "But I am patient. I figured I could wait."

She has always been patient. She started modeling when she was 14, and was immediately successful. But she felt she needed a college education, so she patiently went to college and turned down the rich modeling contracts until she was ready. And she was patient about acting. She began studying and she had offers, but she patiently waited until she felt she was ready — "both ready psychologically and ready professionally." When she decided she was, then she sent out looking for work.

She thinks that being a successful model, as she was, is the ideal stepping-stone to an acting career.

"Lots of people," she says, "are critical about models who want to act, and I can't understand why. Having the modeling career enables me to be selective about the parts I take."

Her contract with Revlon, the company that makes the Charlie products, runs for another two and one-half years. And that contract is so lucrative that Shelley can do whatever she wants to do without having to worry about money. It is also hardly all-demanding, she says she works on the commercials possibly 20 days a year.

"If I didn't have that," she says, "right now I'd probably have to take whatever job came up, and go to Yuma or someplace on a B-picture for a couple of months."

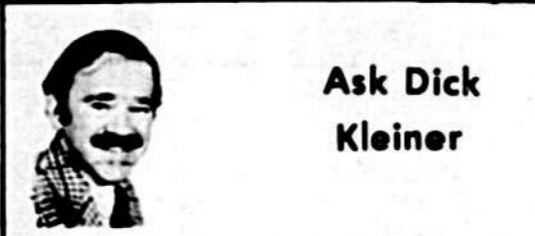

As it is, she has several scripts which have been submitted to her and which she is considering. Slowly, Patiently. She doesn't have to rush off and take the first offer.

Shelley Hack comes from Greenwich, Conn., and hers was a happy and comfortable childhood. She's the oldest of six — four boys, two girls — and that was good "because I always got the toys first."

She's 5-foot-7, but the smallest of the family. Her father is 6-foot-7 and she says all the others are taller than she. But 5-foot-7 is supposed to be the ideal height for a model, so she is content.

When she went to college (including one year as an exchange student in Australia) she studied history and archaeology. And archaeology is still a hobby. She has a farm, her retreat, in upstate New York, and through her knowledge of geology, part of her archaeology curriculum, she unearthed a blue stone quarry on the farm, which is now commercially productive.

Between the Charlie commercials and the blue stone quarry, she can afford to be patient.

Ask Dick Kleiner

DEAR DICK: Could you tell me about Grandma on "The Waltons" and is "The Waltons" going to be taken off the air? SHERRIE WHITEMAN, North Webster, Ind.

The "Waltons" will be back, and Grandma (Ellen Corby) will be among those present. She is continuing to recover from her stroke and, while not yet 100 percent, she is much better. She will be a semi-regular this season. Incidentally, the first show this season will be a two-hour episode, and they're calling it a tribute to Grandma — Will Geer, who recently died. The show will talk about Grandma's death and all the characters will reminisce about him.

DEAR DICK: Which was Shirley Temple's first movie, and how old is she now? I was in Santa Monica, Calif., in '26 and '27 and remember her name then. Will Shirley's age, chronologically, stand up? D.B., Victoria, B.C.

Shirley's age will stand up, but your memory should sit down. Shirley wasn't born until 1928, so if you remember her name from '26 and '27, you have an amazing gift. Shirley began doing short subjects when she was 3, but her first film was "The Red-Haired Alibi" in 1932.

DEAR DICK: Please settle a small argument. Will you please give me the rundown on all the "Airport" movies, their names, who played in each? And how each disaster occurred? LEFT UP IN THE AIR, Bakersfield, Calif.

The original "Airport," still the best, based on the Arthur Hailey novel, was made in '69. That dealt with a bomb on the plane and a blizzard on the ground. It starred Dean Martin, George Kennedy, Helen Hayes, Jacqueline Bisset and a big cast. Then came "Airport 75," with Charlton Heston and Karen Black, about the mid-air collision that left the big jet with a dead crew and a hole in the cockpit. "Airport 77," in which the jet sank and people were trapped underwater, starred Jack Lemmon, Lee Grant, Brenda Vaccaro and James Stewart.

DEAR DICK: On the credits of the show, "Bewitched," it says that the part of the husband is played by Dick York. But sometimes it says he was played by Dick York. Please explain. DEBBY HAMILTON, Portage, Mich.

No mystery. Two different actors played the part — York first, succeeded by Sargent. In the re-runs, sometimes you see episodes with York, sometimes episodes with Sargent.

DEAR DICK: Who played the male lead role in the television series, "Mister Ed"? And, also, the male lead in the movie series, "Francis, the Talking Mule"? P. GUTHRIE, Charlottesville, Va.

Alan Young was in "Mister Ed," and Donald O'Connor had to co-star with a mule.

DEAR DICK: Whatever happened to Loretta Young? Is she living or dead? If dead, was the cause due to drugs? DONALD DRIVON, Redwood City, Calif.

DEAR DICK: Assuming that Ronald Colman is still alive, I haven't seen or read anything to the contrary, is he still in movies? What age is he? MRS. H. MARSHALL, Victoria, B.C., Can.

Loretta Young is still alive and, at 64, still a lovely looking woman. And the very idea that Loretta would take drugs is unthinkable — she is Purity itself. As for Ronald Colman, he died 20 years ago — 1958 — at the age of 67.

DEAR DICK: We have a bet going. Could you tell us when Myron, the accordion player on "The Lawrence Welk Show," started? What year? MRS. D.J. MCGUIGAN, Tucson, Ariz.

Myron Florin joined the Welk group in 1946.

DEAR DICK: Is the lady in the Welk orchestra blind? A. GARRETT, Kalamazoo, Mich.

No. Charlotte Harris is the only female Welk musician, and she has perfect sight.

Working Man's Paycheck

In the midst of last winter's coal strike, Johnny Paycheck told America to "Take This Job and Shove It" in song. It's hard to explain how you feel after 27 years, when you finally hit big," says Paycheck, an ex-professional boxer who himself has never worked a blue collar job.

"I saw my Daddy do enough of that," he explains. "He did a little bit of everything — factory work, bartender. I used to see how tired he'd be when he'd come home from hauling his brains out, so I didn't think that was for me. I'd rather be a singer."

Though Paycheck's first big song was the surprisingly seductive, "Slide Off Your Satan Shoes," these days, championing the cause of the working class has become his way to repay his fans. His latest hit — "Me and the IRS" — kept toes tapping through April 15th and now provides a rallying cry for the taxpayers revolt.

Now, something of a flagbearer for the common man, this is one Paycheck that Uncle Sam won't get a tax bite out of. — BOB PATTERSON released by Paramount Pictures in 1973.

How Douglas To Direct

Douglas portrays Prof. The leader of a gang of vagabonds seeking treasure in Baja California in the 1940's. The men seize a cache of gold from some pirates, then are attacked by Mexican dragons. Some of Prof's men are sent to bury the treasure while the rest continue the fight. But casualties are high; every man who knew where the gold was buried is killed. Only a drunken parrot named Harly knows where the gold is.

The Rolling Stones Still Rule Rock

By BOB PATTERSON

LEAD SINGER MICK JAGGER

Turn up the radio, hit the streets and get yer ya-ya's out. It's 1978, 14 years after they began, and the Rolling Stones once again rule rock. They may have given rock and roll a great shove thrust into the public consciousness. The Beatles may have raised what some called "jungle rhythms" into a high art, but only the Rolling Stones have personified rock and roll.

"The Rolling Stones are more than just a group," reads Andrew Loog Oldham's liners to the Stones' first U.S. LP. "They are a way of life."

It's been a bad boy's life, a steamy, sometimes lawdy drama set on the dark side of the street. The fantasies their songs evoked embodied all the thrills and terrors of rock — sex, violence, dope and revolution of the self and the masses. Later, events like Altamont, Keith Richards' long line of drug binges and the still mysterious death of Brian Jones further reinforced their image as "Clockwork Orange" Druggies.

Even as respectable "dahlings" of the jet set tremble leeches, the Stones never really co-opted. If they were "jets," they maintained the charm of a pack of Dobermans. While folks like Rod Stewart and Elton John tried all too hard to join the "beautiful people," the Stones let Lee Radziwill, Andy Warhol and Margaret Trudeau court them, albeit emotionally, but without losing the defiant posture of rock and roll.

Then came the '70s. And as the Stones slipped into those years like into satin sheets, their music lost the muscle of that rebellious posture. Their last four albums paled in comparison to the four that preceded them. The meat was gone, and in its place was merely jiggling flab.

But fans of Jagger's Banquet, Let It Beed, Sticky Fingers and Exile On Main Street (the golden era of the mature Rolling Stones) need suffer no more embarrassments. Some Girls has all the snap, sassa, bite and fury one once expected from the Stones. And maybe more.

Some of the reasons why are clear. It is the first Stones album with Ron Wood as a fully participating member. Wood's gritty style syncs perfectly with Keith Richards' crunching chords, yet retains some of the precision of Mick Taylor. And with his raggedy cock's combi-couffure topping a quizzical, bird-like face, Wood even looks like a born Rolling Stone.

Charlie Watts' sparse, gunshot-like drumming is one of the few examples of less truly being more. His tight snaps of the snare drive each song of Some Girls with magnificence.

Finally, Jagger and

Richards have come up with an album that is coherent in quality and theme, and pure rock and roll. Though a grown man, he pushes his songs with adolescent angst. Nearly every cut has traces of anger, jealousy, resentment, festering sexuality and confusion. The world and sadistic numbers, "When The Whip Comes Down," "Lies" and "Respectable" (a double edged commentary on both Bianca's chic style and the Stones' acceptance as part of that chic), are snarling, first class rockers.

'Nobody Around Here Liked Him'

Youth Arrested In Stabbing Murder

By TOM GIORDANO
 Herald News Editor

"Nobody around here liked him... He was sarcastic, a mama's boy and his mother was overprotective."

Those are the words of a 16-year-old boy describing his 15-year-old neighbor who sits in Seminole County Jail today in connection with the brutal stabbing death of a South Seminole County woman.

The suspect, Joseph J. Ferrera Jr., of 3513 Balsam Drive in the Eastbrook subdivision, accused of stabbing his victim in the neck.

The victim, Mrs. Shirley Usry, 41, of 3521 Balsam Drive, said by neighbors to have befriended her accused assailant.

The crime, shortly before noon, Friday neighbors reported hearing screams coming from the front yard of the Usry home... of seeing the woman, blood streaming from her neck, run yelling into a neighbor's yard, then collapsing to the lawn.

Why?

Authorities today said Ferrera, who will be held in county jail for 14 days until they decide if he'll be charged with first degree murder and tried as an adult or processed as a juvenile offender, isn't talking.

But residents of the Eastbrook subdivision are. They're talking this morning about some possible motives for the murder.

"Well, people are saying maybe it had something to do with sex, but I hear police said there's no evidence that Mrs. Usry was sexually assaulted; or some people think he needed money; but the most prevalent rumor is that Joe (Ferrera) was looking for the keys to Mrs. Usry's daughter's new Firebird," speculated one neighbor.

One of those neighbors, Tim Hanke of 3485 Balsam Drive, explained why some think young Ferrera was looking for car keys: "I heard Joe on a couple of occasions took the keys to the Usry family truck and rode it around the neighborhood. I guess he was yelled at for that, but a lot of people think he was looking for the keys to the Firebird to take it for a ride."

Hanke also is the neighbor who referred to the Ferrera boy as "sarcastic and a mama's boy."

Hanke and other neighbors said Ferrera often had disputes with other children in the neighborhood and when he was 13 years old, his mother had to walk him to the bus stop because other kids would taunt him.

"Usually, though, it was the older kids. They used to make fun of him and taunt him," another young girl who lives in the subdivision said.

Soon after Mrs. Usry was stabbed and ran out of the house, she collapsed in the front yard of another neighbor, Mrs. Jean Davant of 3520 Balsam Drive.

An ambulance was called, but by the time it arrived, the attendants' attempts to save the woman's life were futile, according to neighbors.

Mrs. Usry was pronounced dead on arrival at Winter Park Hospital.

Authorities said today they have not yet found the murder weapon, but a neighbor indicated reports are he used a knife he took from the Usry home. "He never really was in any trouble as such, people don't think he was carrying a knife of his own," said young Hanke.

Mrs. Usry, a housewife, was alone in the house when the incident occurred, authorities said. Her husband, Marvin, was at work and her children, Vicki, 21, Michael, 19, and Lynn, 11, were at work or in school, deputies said.

Ferrera, an only child, according to investigators, went to the home of two unidentified women and they encouraged him to turn himself in to Winter Park police. The boy did, and soon afterwards he was taken into custody by sheriff's detectives, authorities said.

'Schools Without Walls'
 Thriving In Seminole

By LEN KRANSDORF
 Herald Staff Writer

There are many types of teachers and classrooms. But, during the past five years, several hundred Seminole County high school students have come into contact with a different type of teacher in a different classroom setting.

"It's a school without walls and we have an adjunct faculty of 35 teachers," said Walt Lee. And Lee's statement seems to be the best way to describe the senior job entry program which operates in Seminole County senior high schools.

Lee serves as the coordinator of the students at Lyman High School which, in 1975, was the first county school to implement the program. Four high schools in the county have the program and separate coordinators except Oviedo which shares its coordinator with Seminole High School.

The basic purpose of the program is to provide students with an alternative method of meeting a portion of their graduation requirements. Students can earn from one to five credits depending on the situation. Most of the participants will work at their respective jobs for eight hour shifts instead of going to school in their senior year.

 ... more than cart pushing

During the last school year, 1977-1978, 207 students participated in the program, according to E.S. Tossie county school program director of vocational education.

Fifty five of the 207 students were under the supervision of Lyman's Lee. And, according to Lee, when the program ended in June, and the students graduated from the Lyman program, 28 of the 55 were hired at the job at which they had been working.

One of those students was Dwyra Williams, 18, who currently works at a Longwood clothing store. "I first became interested in the program because I knew I wasn't going to college when I graduated so I wanted something else to do," said Williams.

For Williams, one of the main benefits of the program has been to "have responsibility now instead of waiting to get out of school."

Having responsibility was important to Toby Chapman, but equally important was the idea of getting that all-important jump on future graduates. "I knew I needed to get a job because when everyone graduates that makes that many more people I have to compete with for a job," said Chapman during a break from his job at Winn Dixie Food Store at U.S. 17-92 and State Road 434.

However, while many students may want to get a jump on future graduates, being accepted into the job entry program may be difficult if certain requirements are not met.

Passed by the state legislature in 1973, the program's main requirements for admission include: earning at least 10 credits by the time you enter 12th grade, the completion of all required courses needed for graduation, the completion of at least one credit in an occupational vocational course and a minimum age of 16.

Although 16 may seem like a young age to begin thinking about working and the responsibility that accompanies the job, this was not the case for Kelly Anderson who at 16 is now working at a McDonald's in Longwood.

"I'd rather think about my career early than to worry about it later," said Anderson.

Because of the turnover in employees at this type of fast food restaurant Kelly has gained valuable experience which she puts to practical use. "Many times I will be given the responsibility of breaking in the new people and the trainees," said Kelly who has her sights set on a career as a dental hygienist possibly through the Navy.

The only problem encountered thus far by the blonde-haired Kelly is that "sometimes my fun is restricted because I have to keep my mind on other responsibilities such as paying bills and cleaning my apartment."

This idea of finding out what being in the work world is like was one of the factors that attracted Lori Cameron, 18, to the senior job entry program.

Having attended Lake Brantley High School in ninth and 10th grade she switched to Lyman in her junior year but somehow never really felt comfortable in the customary school setting.

"I was kind of disappointed in high school," she said, "I never really became involved in school activities and usually just went to work after school."

Although her primary interest is in a nursing career there were no jobs available in that field so after first working at a meat market, and then an insurance company she then made her final change to Highland Memory

Initial Proposal
Lake Mary Budget At $3 Tax Base

By DONNA ESTES
 Herald Staff Writer

A preliminary budget for the 1978-79 fiscal year calling for property taxes to remain at $1 per $1,000 assessed valuation has been presented by Mayor Walter Sorenson to the Lake Mary City Council.

Sorenson, in submitting the preliminary budget, noted department requests totaling $569,102 exceed estimated revenue of $426,750 by more than $140,000. "The figures will need a little bit of adjusting," said the mayor. He said the estimates in the anticipated revenue "are extremely rough" and that a final more polished budget will divorce capital expenditures from operational costs.

City Clerk Sig Pearson said the format used in the preliminary budget will be entirely different in the final budget because it will follow the format mandated by new state law.

The proposed rate of taxation will be 34 cents per $1,000 valuation more than the $2.66 certified by county Property Appraiser Terry Gosenbel which will mean, under the law, that the city will have to advertise in bold black letters that the city council is raising taxes.

The law requires that the property appraiser certify a tax rate that will bring in the same revenue as the preceding year plus revenue from growth and increases in property values. Sorenson noted that the estimate revenue does not include sums of cash that will be carried forward from this year's operation nor cash reserves which are not expendable.

Revenues for the new budget year to begin Oct. 1 are estimated at $108,000 less than anticipated in the current year. A major reason for the decrease, according to the preliminary budget, is less use of federally funded Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) project revenue.

While salaries for CETA employees totaled $141,150 during the current fiscal year, only $17,100 is anticipated in the new budget year, a decrease of $124,050.

Here's how the budget requests break down departmentally: administration, up from $91,515 to $107,270 including an anticipated increase in costs for insurance and bonds up from $20,000 to $30,000; increase in salaries and wages from $18,500 to $21,000; major and council expense up from $7,875 to $9,000; building and zoning up from $34,334 to $52,652, including salaries and wages up from $11,500 to $28,000; office supplies up from $400 to $1,000; contingencies up from $3,000 to $5,000; fire department from $25,945 to $69,900, including uniforms up from $200 to $200; gas, oil and tires, up from $2,000 to $3,000; medical supplies, up from $400 to $1,000; repair and maintenance up from $1,000 to $2,500; $1,500 has already been expended so far this year; and machinery and equipment, up from $3,000 to $22,500; parks and recreation department would be reduced from $18,947.52 to $18,243; police department, down from $186,451 to $161,370.77 with the largest decrease shown in CETA employees salaries down from the current year's $82,500 to $19,000 while at the same time regular salaries would rise from the current $57,607 to $86,792.07; public works down from $181,847 to $154,729 with the major decrease in the CETA salaries account, down from $24,983 to $8,811 and sewer, up from $4,527 to $6,378.

The water department account preliminary budget shows revenues this year of $63,300 and revenues in the new year of $102,126.

Pearson said sessions of the council to go over the budget have not been scheduled as yet.

Mideast Pressures Increase; New Fighting Feared

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Under diplomatic pressure not to resign lest new fighting bring a Syria-Israeli showdown, President Elias Sarkis Saturday stayed in office but reportedly threatened to quit if Syrian-Christian battles resume.

Israel has warned Syria to ease up on the Christians and an independent Beirut newsletter said Saturday Damascus has been seeking assurances of Soviet support in the event Israel intervenes against Syria with U.S. backing.

The newsletter Middle East Reporter quoted "East European sources" as saying "if the U.S. and Israel think they are going to have a free hand in hitting Syria, they had better think twice."

It quoted the source as saying a high-ranking Syrian official was visiting Moscow and "Damascus has been assured that if Israel, with U.S. backing, tries to strike at Syria, the U.S.S.R. would not stand idly by."

Sarkis' vow to resign — and the tacit threat of Israeli intervention — allowed Beirut

Saturday to begin its third consecutive day of relative calm since Syrian-Christian battles halted in the pre-dawn hours Thursday.

The independent newspaper An Nahar said Sarkis had decided to "freeze" his resignation due to international pressure, but would "pack and leave" if Syrian-Christian fighting broke out again.

It was feared his resignation would create a power vacuum and increase the possibility of a Syrian-Israeli showdown.

Sniper fire between the two sides of Beirut persisted, however, keeping at a trickle the traffic between the Christian East sector and the predominantly Muslim west.

A Christian woman was killed by Syrian sniper fire in the southeast suburb of Ain Humamneh.

Diplomats said they feared renewed fighting in Beirut could set off a new Middle East war.

The first major burst of shelling in Beirut for 48 hours was reported Friday evening near Ain Humamneh. Police said about eight shells were apparently fired from Syrian positions.

But there were no immediate reports of casualties, nor any indication of a resumption of the full-scale rocket, artillery, mortar duels that have ravaged the capital for nearly a week.

Sniper sniping Friday virtually emptied east Beirut streets. In the main area hospital, Hotel Dieu, patients were moved into hallways to protect them.

The fighting between Syrian peace-keeping troops and Christian militiamen prompted Israeli charges that Damascus was carrying out a "massacre" of the badly outgunned Christians.
