Trailer Park Will Close Rather Than Make Repairs

By MAX ERKILLETIAN
Herald Staff Writer

San-Mo-Park mobile home park, on South Highway 17-92, will close rather than bring electrical and fire safety conditions at the park up to standards required by the city of Sanford.

The park was given 15 citations for violations of city safety standards in an inspection made June 8 by a city building inspector.

The number of residents in the trailer park is unknown — but 19 families still remain in the park.

Residents will have until July 10 to move from the park, according to Bill Braceland, Sanford Building Inspector. On that date the city commission will hold a condemnation hearing to review the inspection report.

"If the property is officially condemned by the commission," said Braceland, "we will post a notice that the property is not to be occupied after that date, then it is up to the property owner to evict the residents."

Normally property owners are given up to 90 days to clear the land or bring facilities up to city standards, according to Braceland.

However, William McVickar, of Water Park, owner of the trailer park, said today he will not attempt to meet city standards.

"I'd have to spend too much money to bring it up to date and the property is worth more than the trailer park."

McVickar said he thought notice had been given to tenants and said he will maintain electrical services for the park until all tenants are relocated.

"If the rent's paid we're going to let them stay," said McVickar. "We're not going to let people stay indefinitely of course, but the people who've got their rent paid we're going to try and help."

Among the violations listed were unsafe electrical junction boxes; rotted electrical power poles that are in danger of falling; splices in electrical cables; evidence of overflowing septic tanks; a broken sewer line; broken glass and torn screens on trailers; broken-down washing machines left outside in tall grass behind trailers.

Health hazards or potential safety to life and property hazards," noted the report.

A January 8 inspection of the park by fire officials resulted in citations for electrical and fire hazards.

John McDonald, manager of the trailer park, is planning to leave town Saturday. However, 19 families still occupy trailers in the park. Many of them have refused to pay rent in light of the closing, according to Mrs. McDonald.

Residents of the park will be required to receive one week's notice of the closing.

Someone Up There Likes Him?

DAVID BEST

One can't be certain that the Lord is with Orlando attorney and Democrat David Best in his bid for Congress.

But at least one 90-year-old person thinks life is.

The Best campaign headquarters in Orlando received in Thursday's mail a letter postmarked Orlando, but unsigned.

The message was brief. "I have read about you and the Lord prompted me to share this with you for your spiritual and personal needs. I will be 90 years old in July. Read Romans 8:1 and Philippians 4:4. May the blessings of our Lord Jesus be upon your Spirit."

Enclosed in the envelope with the letter were three $100 bills.

"The first name on the list is: 'There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit.' The second verse is 'Rejoice in the Lord always; and again I say Rejoice.'"

Best's press secretary, Jack Calderon, said the Best campaign people believe the money was meant as a legitimate gift. "We don't think it was a ploy or a plant. The bills are not numbered consecutively. People active in politics for years tell us they have never seen that quantity of money sent anonymously."

"We appreciate the thought," said Calderon, adding, however, that the Federal Election Commission regulations, section 110.1, says a candidate receiving an anonymous donation in excess of $50 must dispose of the amount over $50.

The money is being given away in four gifts of $75 each to: the Dr. Phillips Nursing Home, Orlando; First Baptist Church, Orlando; St. Andrew's Catholic Church, Pine Hills; and Beth Shalom Synagogue in Citrus County.

"I think we've covered all the bases," said Calderon.

Some Teacher Pay, Fringes Withheld

By LEONARD KRANSORF
Herald Staff Writer

In a departure from previous procedure, the Seminole County School Board on a split vote has decided to withhold additional money and fringe benefits for most employees pending adoption of a new contract.

The affected employees are the approximately 2,729 employees in the clerical, bus drivers, non-instructional personnel and teachers unions which are now negotiating contracts with the school board.

Not affected by the new policy are the approximately 110 administrative staff employees who do not negotiate contracts.

When the policy proposal arose at the Wednesday school board meeting Seminole Education Association (SEA) President Bill Moore noted: "This is undue pressure on teachers to consent to an agreement at the negotiating table. It is unthinkable you would think of this."

However, Roger Harris,

BILL MOORE
...undue pressure' assistant superintendent of business and finance, who made the proposal, stressed that despite the fact this is a first ever policy the board is not trying to hurt any union.

"Collective bargaining is a new thing and we are just now learning what the full implication of the bargaining process is," said Harris.

Harris said his computations show that in one year the granting of salary increases and fringe benefits to employees totals $700,000.

"When you are talking about $700,000 of taxpayer money, we believe it should be negotiable," Harris said.

Last year the cyclical raises were awarded during the negotiation process, according to Ann Neiswander, personnel assistant at the school board office.

For a teacher with a bachelor's degree and one year experience the adopted policy would mean not getting $348 for that year's experience and for a teacher with a doctorate it would mean not getting an equal amount for a year's experience.

The motion passed 4-1 with E. C. Harper, Pat Telson, Allan Keith and Robert Feather

"As far as the customers are concerned," said Mercer, they will see the same faces at the same place with the added convenience of being able to make deposits and withdrawals at either of the two bank facilities or at the drive-in windows at Sanford Plaza."

The Flagship Bank of Sanford, formerly Florida State Bank, was founded April 20, 1928, and the U.S. Bank of Seminole was founded Feb. 27, 1969.

Both banks were members of the old McNulty Group of banks of which U.S. Bank was the 12th to join.

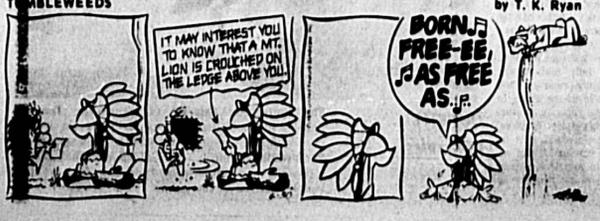

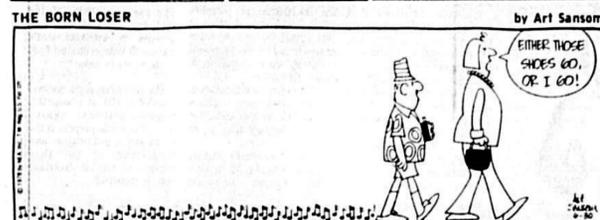

The McNulty banks were the nucleus for later mergers with the United Bank of Tampa and the United Bank of Moore to form Flagship Banks, Mercer said.

Howard McNulty, son of the late C. H. McNulty founder of the banking group, is on the board and executive committee of Flagship Banks Inc. He is a former president of Florida State Bank of Sanford and Flagship Banks Inc.

Reduced Weight Will Help Heart

DEAR DR. LAMB—I had a heart attack a year and a half ago and the doctor said I didn't need any surgery but I have weight problems and lung congestion. I weigh 180 pounds and am 66 years old. I don't smoke or drink. I take Slow K, Lasix and Lanoxin. Will I ever be able to recover completely? How come my heart controls the fluids coming out of my body? My ankles swell up and I get short of breath also.

DEAR READER—Often the weight gain a person has with heart failure is associated with the accumulation of fluid. And it does accumulate in the ankles and can accumulate in the abdomen, or it can accumulate in the lungs and chest cavity.

DEAR DR. LAMB—Is non-fat dry milk powder really non-fat and contains very little cholesterol. It is an excellent substance to use in cooking as you can make milk gravies, puddings and use it in baking products and be using a milk product that is non-fat and very low in cholesterol. Not only that, you can increase the amount of non-fat dry milk powder called for in the recipe and enrich the amount of protein and calcium in any foods that you prepare with it.

of spades, but couldn't afford a third spade lead. Obviously a diamond lead away from my king would be right up to declarer's aid. How about a club lead? It wouldn't hurt at all if my partner held the king. It also wouldn't matter if he held neither king nor the queen, but if he held the queen, my club lead would cause his queen to be wasted on dummy's nine.

Then I saw a way out of my troubles. I led my eight of trumps. Declarer played dummy's queen. Four old B played low. He held only low cards, but South thought he had located the king. He led the seven and finished. I cashed my king and could now afford a spade lead. I was out of play and South was out of all chance to make his game.

Not only does it have 13 percent protein, but an enormous quantity of whey is being produced today. There will be even more of it in the future.

Retrieving nutritious components from suitable food wastes is becoming an increasingly attractive solution to the costly disposal problem such environmental standards pose for the food industry. It is a solution that not only gets rid of some of the waste but supplies a salable product.

Not all food wastes, of course, are sources of protein. But a surprising number are. Some of the food by-products that have been considered as possible protein sources are whey (the watery substance remaining after cheese is made), the grain mash left over from distillery and brewery operations and a

I'm frightened to death of having people in because when the conversation lags, I'm tongue-tied. I can never think of anything clever to say. I am not sure that what I cook will be good enough, and I'm not sure I'll serve it right.

10,000 Gals Eyed: Who's The Ultimate Bunny?

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — When the cameras stopped clicking and the lights stopped flashing about 50 young women covered their bikini-clad bodies and hoped they would become Playboy magazine's 25th anniversary centerfold girl.

Actually the 25th anniversary of the magazine is not until 1979, but executives within Hugh Hefner's magical kingdom are getting a jump on the planned celebration with the beauty searches.

And in this land of sunshine, golden tans and beautiful women, the show-case was mind-boggling.

One free-lance photographer who wished to remain anonymous may have summed up the session the best.

"I just hope," the bearded cameraman muttered, "that some doctor somewhere has the surgical knowledge to put my eyeballs back in my skull after today."

The women came from all walks of life, in a wide range of photography sessions, only one was asked to stay past the "Polaroid stage," as the photographers put it. Wanda Reed, a stunning 22-year-old model, had caught the eye of the cameraman and was asked to go through a series of poses in front of a 35mm camera, the "real stuff," the photographer said.

Of the estimated 10,000 young women across the nation who will be photographed at audition stops by Playboy, only one will be selected as the 25th Anniversary centerfold.

But for all the others, there is always the Playmate of the Month to shoot for. In 1949, the first year the magazine published, a young blond bombshell appeared at the Playboy studios and after a long process of elimination, was selected as a Playmate of the Month.

For Marilyn Monroe, it was the first step in a long climb to the top.

"I'm here because my boyfriend wanted a professional picture of me in a bathing suit," said 22-year-old Argy Diamantides. "I don't plan on winning or anything, but it's a great way to get a good picture of yourself."

"And who knows," the curvy brunette legal secretary added, "they just might like me."

Playboy's search for the ultimate bunny has included stops in Boston, New York, Austin, Texas, Miami, Baton Rouge, La., Philadelphia and many other cities. In most cases advertisements in newspapers or on the radio caught the attention of the women, and they took care of the rest.

FLYING THE HULL IN THE BREEZE

SAIL PATTERNS ON THE MARINA

You've Come A Long Way In The Wind From The Cave, Baby...

More than likely the first sailboat was invented when a caveman sitting on a raft held up an animal skin and found himself moving with the wind.

A few improvements have been made since that time, but the principle remains the same: wind blowing over a sail causes an object to move through the water.

The raft has been replaced by a fiberglass hull and the skin has evolved into an aerodynamically designed dacron sail. Aluminum masts and stainless steel rigging have completed the design.

Out of all the modern-day sailboats on the market, the twin-hulled catamaran is the undisputed grayhound of the yachting world.

Which of the catamarans is best? That question will start an argument among sailors about as fast as asking which car is best at a convention of car dealers.

But if you directed that question to any of the skippers at the Monroe Marina last Sunday, you would have heard in a loud, clear voice: the Prindle!

A dozen Prindles, a 16-foot catamaran, with their skippers, crew and friends from around central Florida, were invited by fellow Prindle owner and dealer Danny Swartzbaugh for a day of racing and picnicking on the beachfront at Lake Monroe.

Chris Schutte of Longwood has owned a Prindle for two years, and while waiting for the first race to start gave his impressions of the boat.

"It's a better boat and a fast boat without a lot of fancy rigging. And it's good in light air."

Sunday's air at noon was definitely light. So light, in fact, that the only breeze to be felt came when the top was popped from a can of something cool to drink.

Races were scheduled and races were to be run. Swartzbaugh, a Longwood resident, announced at the skipper's meeting that the first race would be a chug race.

"We'll have a Le Mans start and the skipper will chug whatever he happens to be drinking, push his boat to the first buoy, sail out between the markers then back to the first buoy. He'll then jump out, race to shore, pick a crew and they'll both chug whatever they happen to be drinking, and race back to the boat."

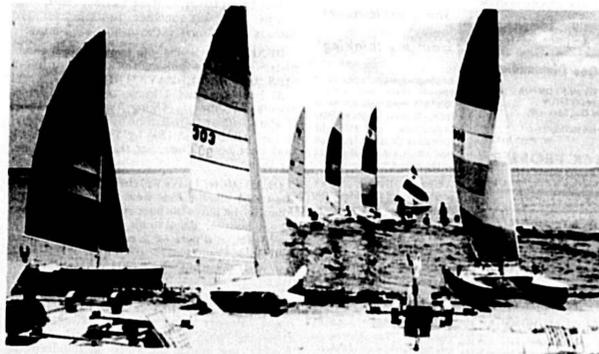

This was to be repeated until a total of four people were afloat and the winner was the boat with all four racing back to shore and downing whatever they happen to be drinking.

Paddling with hands was allowed because of the light air. When that was announced, the long-awaited wind naturally appeared. Three heats were held. There was a lot of splashing.

Some favorite crew members were shanghaied to other boats. One foot was cut, a lot of Coke and other beverages disappeared, and at least one boat without a crew was spotted heading towards Osteen.

I wonder if that caveman knew what he was starting?

PENNY SWARTZBAUGH, 9, IN THE TRAPEZE

'International Velvet': Liz' 'National' Encore?

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—There is an unwritten law that movie sequels seldom if ever surpass the original film in either quality or box-office attraction.

Be it "Son of Lasse," "Building Drummond Strikes Back," "The Godfather, Part II" or "The Bride of Franchese," the second installment rarely measures up to the first of the genre.

For that reason and others, producer-director Bryan Forbes is quick to point out that his new movie "International Velvet" is not a sequel nor a remake of "National Velvet," the 1944 classic that made Elizabeth Taylor a major star.

Englishman Forbes speaks with authority. He wrote the screenplay for "International Velvet" from scratch. The only character carried over from "National Velvet" is Velvet Brown, now a grown woman 38 years after having won England's "Grand National" horse race.

Elizabeth Taylor, who played the central figure of a young girl embarked on a sealer's mission to win the race, achieved reprising her role as an adult. The part is

"It's truly a landmark film" played by Nanette Newman, the wife of producer-director Forbes.

But the story still involves a pretty young girl and a horse, the combination that made "National Velvet" a hit. The girl in the new picture is portrayed by Oscar-winner Tatum O'Neal.

Richard Shepherd, head of production at MGM, telephoned Forbes in England last year suggesting the director look at "National Velvet." Shepherd wanted to make a film with the same appeal.

"It is truly a landmark film," Forbes said. "When it was first released, we all fell in love with Liz, which is not a hard thing to do.

"I'd seen the picture several times before, but I was still moved by it. I told Shepherd, however, I wasn't interested in a remake. He didn't want a remake either, but felt the film had

"I was still moved by it" moved by it.

"National Velvet." His camera techniques and the acting are more sophisticated, too.

"The story and characterizations are not on a single plane," he said. "And that is not to criticize the original picture either. It was very well made.

"I put the first picture out of my mind while I was producing this one. But I didn't eliminate the classic novel from my thinking. If you saw the first picture, you will have an added satisfaction in seeing the new one. If you didn't see 'National Velvet,' you won't miss it.

"Tatum is involved in three equestrian events of the Olympic games as a member of the English team. The essential message of the film is based on the Olympic ideal—that the important thing is not the winning but taking part."

Forbes calls himself "the last of the idiots" for living and working in England where the movie industry is in a state of confusion.

"MGM gave me the option of shooting the film anywhere I chose," he said. "I looked at locations in Massachusetts, Vermont, Kentucky and Virginia. I worked up some comparative budgets for the $5 million.

"I chose England because it had a slight edge economically and because the industry is so depressed. I suppose that's chauvinistic of me. Tatum is the only American in the cast and I would say 80 percent of the labor costs flowed directly into English unions.

"We turn out 30 pictures a year now. I say I'm an idiot because they've put me in the 83 percent tax bracket. I'd have been richer if I'd made 'International Velvet' in the United States.

"But my roots are in England. I support my aged parents there and it just wouldn't seem right for me to leave. However, with so little production it will be necessary for me to travel all over the world to make films in the future."

When Forbes isn't producing or directing, he's busy writing. He is the author of four novels and an autobiography. His latest book is "Ned's Girl," a biography of his close friend Dame Edith Evans, the peerless English actress who died in 1976.

"I'll be returning to England soon," Forbes concluded. "I'm working on two new books and, of course, keeping an eye out for a new film."

Ask Dick Kleiner

DEAR DICK: How many Oscars did "Star Wars" win, and in what categories? MARGARITA PINDAK, Mobile, Ala.

There was a bunch of them—seven, to be precise. There was one special one, for creation of alien creatures and robot voices, then they won six regular ones—sound, visual effects, art direction, costume design, editing and original score.

DEAR DICK: Both my mother and I are going crazy over this one. We saw a movie in which Charles Bronson played a writer in London and married a schoolgirl, Susan George, but no one believes there was such a movie. We can't find out the name of it anywhere. Please! What was the movie title so we know we didn't imagine it? N. MOONDELLO, Tucson, Ariz.

You're crazy. There was such a movie—it was called "Lola"—but I can understand why nobody believes you. It was pretty bad, and was in and out of the theaters in record time.

DEAR DICK: Who or what is the name, please, of the charming gal who plays her part to perfection in the soap operator called "One Life To Live." She is Jennie's sister Karen, the doctor's wife. Are you stumped? E. W. JESSE, Roseville, Mich.

No, not stumped. Just curious about that soap operator, which is a very nice way of putting it. Anyhow, the actress you are referring to is named Judith Light.

DEAR DICK: Who played the Frenchman opposite John Wayne in "Rio Bravo"? DEBBIE STUY, Sumter, S.C.

I think you mean "Rio Lobo," which was a remake of "Rio Bravo." There was no Frenchman in "Rio Bravo," but there was a character named Pierre in "Rio Lobo," and the actor who played the part was Jorge Rivero, a Mexican brought up to be a big star who never made it.

DEAR DICK: For a very long time I have wondered if Rose Marie was the little girl I lived next door to. We were then about the same age—seven—and she was always busy performing, taking lessons, etc., and called herself Baby Rose Marie. She was cute, had freckles and was sweet. This was in Los Angeles, around Normandie-Exposition Blvd. I'm very curious if that was Rose Marie who is now famous. MARVEL SCHOENLY, West Covina, Calif.

Alas, that was another Rose Marie. The famous Rose Marie grew up in New Jersey.

DEAR DICK: Would you know if the Lennon Sisters ever had a book written about their lives? MRS. LILLIE MURRAY, Mattson, Ill.

At least one that I know of, "The Lennon Sisters: Sweethearts of Song," was written by A. H. Parr, with an introduction by Lawrence Welk. It was published in 1960 by Doubleday. There may have been others, but there was that one, for sure.

DEAR DICK: I have watched the "Lou Grant" show ever since it first went on the air. Mason Adams, who plays the part of Charlie Hume, has a very familiar sound to his voice. I say that he used to have a part on a radio program some time back. Could you please tell me if this is so, and what program? PAT WILLIAMS, Bangor, Mich.

You have a keen ear. From 1946 to 1960, Mason Adams played the title role in the old radio soap opera, "Pepper Young's Family." You may also remember him as Dr. Prescott on "Another World," and his is the voice on hundreds of commercials, too.

'The Scarlet Letter' On Small Screen

Back in high school almost every kid had to read "The Scarlet Letter," for their first taste of not only Nathaniel Hawthorne, but perhaps some of the repressed passions that are so small a part of life, whether in Puritan New England or modern America.

Now a lot of those kids will get to see the book come to life, when PBS presents a mini-series in early 1979. Meg Foster, Kevin Conway and John Heard have won the major roles in the WGBH-TV (Boston) production, and it is the first time any of them has worked on a PBS program. Meg Foster has long been recognized not only for her talent but for two of the most dazzling eyes to ever hit the screen.

She is currently reaping rave reviews as the middle-class lesbian who falls in love with a homosexual man ("Ferry King") in the romantic comedy "A Different Story."

Miss Foster's arresting beauty and unconventional personality make her well-suited to portray Hester, a thoroughly modern character in circumstances centuries old.

Meg Foster studied at New York's Neighborhood Playhouse, and she has acted in several major television roles, as well as playing Nora opposite Cliff de Young in the series, "Sunshine," and last year's "Sunshine Christmas."

She has appeared in several films and Off-Broadway plays, and was seen last season in "Washington: Behind Closed Doors."

John Heard, who made his film debut in "Between the Lines," will play opposite Miss Foster in the role of Dimmesdale, the young minister who fathers Hester's child, and whose repressed sensuality is the equal of Hester's passion.

Heard has appeared on Broadway and Off-Broadway in Joe Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival, and productions of "Moonchildren" and "The Wager." He originated the role of Billy in "Streamers," at its premiere at The Long Wharf Theater in New Haven. Heard has also starred in the TV productions "First Love" and "On the Yard."

Kevin Conway, one of America's finest character actors, has been cast as Chillingworth, Hester's husband and the destroyer of her lover.

Conway had a major role in Sylvester Stallone's last film, "F.I.S.T.," and will also be seen with him in "Paradise Alley."

He's appeared in the past in "Slaughterhouse Five," and "Portnoy's Complaint."

On stage, Conway has appeared in the Broadway production of "On Mice and Men," and Off-Broadway in "When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder?" and played McMurphy in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

The four-part serial dramatic production is just beginning production in Newport, R.I., at an appropriately monumental setting. Fort Adams, a weathered and romantic revolutionary fort overlooking the harbor.

'Into Mouths Of Babies' A Formula For Trouble?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Multinational firms are selling the image of a well-fed, thriving Western baby in the form of infant formula — but too often what mothers in undeveloped countries are buying is severe malnutrition for their children.

The problems the infant formula has caused in the theme of the first segment of the documentary on formula, no one questions the nutritional value of infant formula — a large section of the audience who will watch the show was raised on it.

In the documentary on formula, no one questions the nutritional value of infant formula — a large section of the audience who will watch the show was raised on it.

The problems arise in countries such as the Dominican Republic, where the average age at which malnutrition first occurs has dropped from 18 months to 8 — a critical age in brain development.

If the formula is okay, what's the problem? Mothers too illiterate to read package instructions or understand the need for sterilization, whose water source is contaminated, and who poverty sometimes drives to dilute the formula so that it becomes nutritionally unsound.

Ethel Merman: 'I Don't Want That Any More'

By DICK KLEINER
HOLLYWOOD—Enough already. That is the way Ethel Merman feels about the stage. She's had it, positively, definitely, finally, once and for all. And so I look back on all those happy hours spent in theaters while Merman belted out the great songs up there.

'Who'll Carry Telethon?'

While some are calling the taxpayers revolt, begun in California, a way to spit in your own eye, others see it as freedom simple from over-taxation. But comic Mark Russell has the most interesting thoughts on the subject. "After Proposition 13 (the tax reduction plan), the only question remaining is which of the networks will carry the California telethon?"

like to do other things, and so I say no more. "Lots of people have said they would write shows for me, but I said no, don't bother. Even Irving Berlin—I spoke to him on the phone a few weeks ago, just before he turned 80. "He's a dear man, and I understand he's been writing all these years and so he has a lot of songs already written, and he said—he told me—he wanted to do one more show before he died. Wouldn't that be wonderful? But not with me."

ALONE TOGETHER

When their father dies, four orphans, played by Matthew Brill, Jan Smithers (holding Helen Harmon) and Julie Gholson, must keep it a secret so they can stay together on a repeat of CBS Family Film Classics, "Part II" airing July 1.

Kangaroo's Goal: Quality Kids' Shows

NEW YORK (UPI)—Captain Kangaroo wants to see more local programming for children — and a greater station-by-station commitment to quality broadcasting for young people.

You can't have one without the other because without the commitment it is difficult to broadcast quality programming that gets knocked out of the box by the competition's lineup of superhero cartoons.

Bob Keeshan, who is Captain Kangaroo's off-camera alter ego, has no illusions that quality on the tube can be easily transferred into quantity in the bank.

"If Captain Kangaroo depended on income, we'd have been gone back in 1964," Keeshan said in the morning children's show that has been on CBS for 25 years. "We were losing well over a million dollars — some years several million — we were a big financial loser for CBS."

Most experts would agree that CBS' continued support of "Captain Kangaroo" ranks as a real contribution to quality children's entertainment. The network now has another contribution — it is holding a week of workshop-seminars with 24 of its affiliate stations to encourage them to develop local children's programming.

Keeshan said in an interview, "Kangaroo" in the east where the time zone difference means an extra hour of local access before network programming begins, and in the half-hour before the evening prime time begins on weekdays.

The big advantage to locally originated shows, Keeshan said in an interview, was their ability to pinpoint their audience and broadcast directly to the special needs of a specific community.

game shows and soaps during the week and the network lineup of children's shows on Saturday.

CBS has no intention of encouraging affiliates to drop network shows in favor of locally originated programming.

The local children's shows mostly would be aired in the hour before "Kangaroo" on weekday mornings, in the hour directly after "Kangaroo" in the east where the time zone difference means an extra hour of local access before network programming begins, and in the half-hour before the evening prime time begins on weekdays.

Keeshan is wary of being too specific about the kind of programs he would like to see local stations produce.

"What's a good show for one child or group of children to watch might not be for another."

He told about the woman who ran a Texas home for children awaiting adoption — six, eight, nine and ten years old who likely were too old ever to be adopted.

"The show she wouldn't permit them to watch was 'The Donna Reed Show,' which was at the top of everybody's saccharin list. There was the nice Mommy and the nice Daddy and the nice family — all the things those kids were deprived of."

"This was the kind of show that encouraged those unfortunate children to hostility and possible violence, the program that was wrong and bad for them.

Keeshan has no great admiration for much children's programming even on networks, where it is almost nonexistent after school except for specials, nor on independent where the cartoon characters run violently rampant. He blames the parents, however, who he believes must take final responsibility for what their children watch.

"One of the problems is that parents don't really support good television for children," Keeshan said.

"We have good programs — 'Sesame Street,' 'Mister

Rogers, 'Captain Kangaroo,' the afternoon special, Saturday programs like 'Lively Arts.' They just don't have large audiences because the children are watching cartoon programs and situation comedies, soap operas and game shows not designed for children.

"If you think prime time is too 'adult,' you should watch what goes on in soap operas. They have their place for the adult woman for whom they were designed — not for children."

He concluded, "If the parents across America really were supportive of good children's television, those cartoon shows would be off the air in no time."

How a couple of illustrators view the continuing controversy over what commercials should or should not be aired for children. The controversy centers largely upon the advertising of what many consider junk foods or foods containing unhealthy ingredients.

'Fragile, Fluffy' Pelikan? Forget It — That's Not Lisa

HOLLYWOOD — One of the hottest young actresses around these parts is Lisa Pelikan. If you know her work, you visualize her as a dainty young girl, perhaps a precocious 16 or 17, fragile as a painted egg. Wrong again.

Lisa Pelikan, even though most of her parts have been as an adolescent, is past that.

She won't say how far past — "age really isn't relevant" — but she does admit that she is old enough legally to order a drink in California, where the drinking age is a ripe old 21. And, as for that air of fragility she projects, forget that, too.

She's an outdoor girl, an experienced mountaineer who sailed through a Wyoming survival school with flying colors — and they weren't black and blue, either.

Still, her on-screen age is something entirely different. There have been many more. Lisa Pelikan is the title character in the current "Creme" like feature, "Jennifer."

She was the Irish maid in "Beacon Hill." She was one of the larcenous ladies (with Lauren Bacall, Sandy Dennis and Ruth Gordon) in the TV movie, "Perfect Gentlemen."

And, coming up, perhaps her biggest role — the female lead in the six-hour TV movie, "Studs Lonigan," set to air next winter, with a big cast and a big budget.

So things are going well for Lisa Pelikan, who is building a career the old-fashioned way — talent and hard work.

And her life, in some ways, hasn't been easy. There have been setbacks, mostly physical, which she has turned to her advantage. Every knock has become a boost.

To begin with, Lisa Pelikan is really Lisa Pelikan. The name is Czech and — surprise! — in the Czech language it means "pelican."

Her father is Robert Pelikan, a noted international economist, currently director of the Office of Developing Nations Finance for our government.

In the past, he has held posts in Rome and Tokyo, so much of Lisa's childhood was spent in those cities. She still speaks Italian and Japanese fairly well.

But it was in Bethesda, Md., that she spent her high school years, as her father worked in Washington.

And it was there that she decided that the ballet was her life. She had studied dancing since she was a child, ballet in Rome, then later modern dancing as well.

But that dream went up in smoke, or whatever it is those surgeons use these days.

"She had two operations for the removal of a bone tumor in the marrow of her left leg.

"I had had the first operation when I was six," she says, "and it was very frightening. This was in Washington. I came to quicker than the doctors had expected. I was in the recovery room, and I looked around.

"The room was full of what looked like cribs. I was strapped down and couldn't move anything except my eyes.

All around me, in the other cribs, were older women, breathing through their modems, making terrible gasping sounds. I was sure I had died and gone to Hell."

But she recovered and they thought her leg was fine, but it wasn't and the condition recurred.

This second operation, when she was in high school, was more serious. She was forced to spend a year in bed, during her senior year in high school, while her leg bone healed.

"That made me so angry," she says, "that I decided to do something with my life, and, with the help of my mother, I decided on acting. I didn't think I could ever be a good dancer any more, but I enjoyed being on stage, so acting was obviously the next best thing."

She went to New York, auditioned for Juilliard, won a scholarship, and has been acting ever since.

'Star Trek' Recipes: Far-Out Dining

NEW YORK (UPI) — Astronauts in the dawn days of the space age may have eaten glop from tubes, but that isn't Kevitons they eat aboard the star ship Enterprise.

News of the favorite foods of the "Star Trek" crew — and even some of their Klingon enemies — comes from Bantam Books in a paperback titled "Official Star Trek Cooking Manual."

Bantam is the paperback company that has been making money as if it were printing it, just by issuing the "Star Trek" series that network television refuses to revive and fans refuse to forget. The cooking manual is compiled by Mary Ann Piccard from the logbook of Nurse Christine Chapel.

It is divided into segments featuring the favorite foods of Vulcans, Romulans and Klingons, as well those picked by individual officers from Captain Kirk to Ensign Chekov.

Some of the recipes are quite serious — Kirk's steamed pumpkin bread, Klingon Kiroo Kai Faki (pigs feet and pea soup), Chekov's beef Stroganov and McCoy's plantation rice.

Intertwined with the recipes are bits of "Star Trek" lore, such as what was in the sandwich that Captain Kirk ordered but the Tribbles intercepted. And speaking of Tribbles, there's even a recipe involving bread baked with their favorite grain — quadrigrain — although you can substitute present-day Terran approximations.

In case any "Star Trek" fans wonder about the source of the Klingon recipes — some were exchanged during a brief truce with Klingon enemies battling furiously for eternity while it fed off their emotions.

Another source was Cyrano Jones, the leader who first brought Tribbles on the scene and later showed up with a Klingon roadblock.
