Appeal Of County Commission Denial

Rezoning Rejection Prompts Suit

By Sarah Fischer
Herald Staff Writer

Developers of The Plantation project have appealed a controversial decision by the county last month to deny rezoning for the high density residential construction along the Wekiva River.

The petition was filed in circuit court by Winter Park attorney Peter A. Paul, representing Amcor Investment Corp. The Phoenix, Arizona-based company is disputing the county's rejection of the plan to develop 573 acres to the west of Markham Woods Road.

In response to the lawsuit, county commissioners Tuesday authorized their attorney to defend the county against the action. Deputy County Attorney Bob McMillan had no immediate response to the lawsuit, other than to say the matter is under review by his office.

The request, which drew much opposition from local residents concerned about the development's impact on the Wekiva area, was denied by the county commission last month by a 4-1 vote.

Commissioners decided the proposed project was not consistent with the county's comprehensive land use plan and said they would not initiate such a change.

They also denied a request to rezone the property from agriculture to planned unit development and turned down approval of the project as a development of regional impact.

Patricia Harden, president of the Friends of the Wekiva, one of several groups who spoke against the development, said Tuesday she was "not surprised" at Amcor's decision to appeal.

"We expected it. They disagreed with everything that the county said," she said, adding that her group remains opposed to the project.

Amcor Investments is requesting that the court determine the county commission "improperly and incorrectly" found the proposed development was not consistent with the local comprehensive land use plan and that commissioners "improperly" denied the rezoning. The company asks that the court direct or order the commission to approve the rezoning application.

If the court finds that a land use change is in order, Amcor asks that the commission be ordered to proceed with an amendment to accommodate the proposed development and that the commission approve the rezoning upon the land use plan being amended.

Amcor also says it is entitled to compensation because the commission's actions "constitute a taking of petitioner's property without due process of law." The company asks the court to determine the amount of the compensation to be awarded.

County Land Use Requests: 4 Yea, 2 Nay

By Sarah Fischer
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County Commissioners Tuesday night said no to two requests to change the county's comprehensive land use plan.

Residents of northwest Seminole County applauded a decision by commissioners to deny a plan amendment from general rural to commercial land use for 2.9 acres at State Road 46 and Orange Boulevard.

Presenting the most vocal opposition during the four-hour public hearing, the citizens objected to the proposal by E. Parker Harrison. They claimed the change would set a precedent for the area and lead to higher property taxes and uncontrolled growth.

The residents asked the county to maintain the area's rural atmosphere, although project backers said the buildup of nearby communities has created a demand for a commercial service center.

County Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff, who moved to deny the amendment, said the future of the area is toward commercial, but that the request is premature at this time.

Commissioners said the area is destined to have commercial activity and that it will be studied in conjunction with the land use plan update, slated to be completed next year.

The county commission also denied a request by Charles Gramlin to change the land use of one-half acre at Midway and Granby Avenue from low to medium density residential.

Residents of the Midway area protested the change, saying Gramlin's planned duplex would bring in transients and increase the area's drainage problem. They asked the county to preserve the single family nature of their neighborhood.

Six out of 17 land use changes were considered by the commission Tuesday. The changes represent the first set of comprehensive land plan amendments the county has dealt with under new state growth management guidelines.

While the commission denied two requests, the following were approved:

- Joe Baker, change from low density residential to planned unit development (commercial/industrial) for 24.2 acres on County Road 427, west of Sanford Avenue.
 - Mike Hattaway, change from general rural to medium density residential for 23.8 acres east of Sanford Avenue, south of Cardinal Industries.
 - Hagen Homes, Inc., change from low intensity urban to low density residential for 9.1 acres on C.R. 427, one-fourth mile west of U.S. 17-92.
 - Hagen Homes, Inc., change from low density residential to medium density residential for 20 acres south of Bonnie Drive, one-fourth mile east of Bear Lake Drive.
- The county will hear the rest of the amendments at a June 3 public hearing, when it will adopt all approved changes by a consent agenda. Under state law, the county can only consider land plan amendments twice each year.

Widow To Carry On Spouse's Work

Dance Contest Chairman Named

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

A newly widowed former Macy's executive, content to be in the background since retirement, is stepping back into a leadership role to carry on her late spouse's volunteer work with seniors.

Helen Kaminsky

Helen Kaminsky has been named by Golden Age Games Chairman Jim Jernigan as chairman of the Games Dance Contest, a position held for many years by her late husband, Sam, who died May 4.

"It is what Sam would want me to do," she said. "The last thing he would want is for me to just sit around. It's something he enjoyed, getting people together and being around people."

They were both active in the Over 50 Club, which sponsors the Wednesday afternoon Sanford Serenader dances for seniors at the Sanford Civic Center, as well as the Games Dance Contest and dinner dance.

Mrs. Kaminsky was group manager in charge of the main floor operations for Macey's Department Store in New York City before her retirement in 1973. She said she was in management and Sam, who worked in the dairy industry, was active in his union, making for some interesting discussions. "It helped us understand the other side's problems," she said. "We would have been married 55 years this November, so I guess it didn't hurt us."

Mrs. Kaminsky has two children and four grandchildren. She said she just returned from Kansas, where she attended the high school graduation of her youngest grandchild.

"Okay, I'm retiring," she told her husband, "you do the work and I'll support you. I've been in the limelight long enough."

So since they came to Sanford, she has been in the background supporting her husband in his various activities, such as the Federation of Senior Citizen Clubs of Seminole County of which he was president. "Whatever he did, I did," she said. "Sam was a colorful character and I'm just a character."

The Kaminskys, who enjoyed dancing and bowling, moved to Sanford in February of 1974. They heard about the first Golden Age Games (then Olympics) and said "Let's go see what it's all about."

"We met many people there who became our good friends and started getting active in senior activities," Mrs. Kaminsky said. The next year they began working with the Golden Age Games Executive Committee and have been involved every year since.

Yankee Lake Litigation Costs Mount

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

Sanford racked up $90,287.55 in attorney fees during its unsuccessful effort to condemn Yankee Lake. City counsel was paid an additional $2,156.11 to defend Sanford against the suit former Yankee Lake owner Jeno Paulucci filed in response to the attempted condemnation.

The $92,443.66 total pretty well wraps up counsels' billing for the last seven months of Yankee Lake litigation, City Attorney William Colbert said today.

The figure was reached Tuesday night when city commissioners approved $8,426.44 in billings from Colbert's law firm and $1,048.11 in billings from Thomas Julin, one of two counsel Sanford retained for Yankee Lake litigation.

Colbert's law firm, Stenstrom, McIntosh, Julian, Colbert and Whigham, has been paid $60,873.25 by the city, when Tuesday's billing is added to the firm's previous Yankee Lake charges. Colbert was the firm's primary representative during the Yankee Lake effort.

Julin, a Miami attorney specializing in the State Government in the Sunshine Law, has now been paid $16,345.68 by Sanford.

The city's other Yankee Lake counsel, appellate law attorney Marcia Lippincott of St. Petersburg, has been paid $15,224.73.

Sanford is charged $65 an hour by Colbert's firm, $115 an hour by Julin and $100 an hour by Ms. Lippincott. In addition to the hourly billing, counsel also charged the city for suit related expenses, such as mailings, photocopies and conference calls.

Since December, Julin has also billed Sanford for auto rentals, plane fares, a subscription to the Evening Herald and the time he spent on the phone with the newspeople in regard to the Yankee Lake matter.

Julin has additionally charged Sanford for his "review of a ... Herald article regarding (the) Yankee Lake problem."

Commissioners voiced displeasure last month when approving Julin's vouchers for conversations with the press. A survey of local attorneys has determined the practice is not wide spread.

Sanford remains liable for condemnation suit billing from counsel for the prevailing side, although the parties, Paulucci and Seminole County, have yet to petition the court for these fees.

Both Sanford and Seminole County targeted Yankee Lake last fall as the site for their waste disposal programs. The county's purchase of Yankee Lake in November prompted Sanford's condemnation attempt.

Sanford's condemnation effort prompted Paulucci's $28 million civil claim against the city. Its five commissioners and its manager, Frank Faison, in January.

According to Paulucci attorney Mack Cleveland, his client's suit is expected to be dropped this month, following Sanford's decision not to appeal the condemnation suit's dismissal.

SWOP Expansion Needs Cited

By Jane Casselberry

Space is again at a premium at Seminole Work Opportunity Program (SWOP) in Sanford.

With the addition of new clients, customers and larger jobs, expansion of the plant will be needed, according to the facility's annual report to be given at the yearly meeting of Kathleen Anderson Comprehensive Work Center, Inc. on Thursday night.

Officers for the coming year will be elected at the meeting scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. at the SWOP facility, 3422 W. Orlando Drive. Richard Wollner, a certified public accountant with Riles and Raker of Altamonte Springs, is up for reelection for a second term as president.

SWOP Executive Director Bill Poe said the board of directors has appointed a special committee to oversee the search for expanded space. Although SWOP accommodates up to 78 mentally and/or physically handicapped workers, a growing waiting list contains 57 names.

Poe said the waiting list is of great concern to the staff, the board of directors, the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS), the Seminole County School Board and parents. Over the past year, representatives of each group met to establish viable alternatives for those exceptional students presently in the school system and a solution for those on the SWOP waiting list. Poe said six new clients have been integrated into the program this past year using HRS and United Way funds and an effort will

NATION IN BRIEF

President Buys Time On SALT 2 Pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, responding to the right on Soviet arms control violations, chose to buy time rather than risk the political consequences of making good a threat to renounce the SALT 2 treaty.

Pushed by hardliners in the Pentagon and Congress to send a strong signal to Moscow, Reagan all but repudiated the arms limitations of SALT 2 Tuesday while deciding to keep the United States in technical compliance for now.

The decision, intended to quiet conservatives and put pressure on Moscow, did not end the fierce debate over SALT 2, but postponed a possible showdown until late this year when the United States bumps up against a limit on B-52 bombers capable of carrying cruise missiles.

Reagan ordered two 20-year-old Poseidon submarines scrapped to enable the USS Nevada, a newer-generation Trident submarine, to begin sea trials today without exceeding SALT 2 limits on multiple-warhead strategic missile launchers.

The 1979 treaty, unratified but observed by informal agreement, limits the superpowers to 1,200 launchers. Without retiring the two Poseidons, the Nevada would have pushed the United States to 1,222 launchers.

Clinton Spoils Faubus Comeback

Democratic Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas easily won renomination in Tuesday's primary, ending the political career of former segregationist Gov. Orval Faubus, while Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., a member of the House leadership, fought for political survival.

Faubus, who admitted before the votes were counted that he might get "clobbered," lost to Clinton nearly 2 to 1. Faubus announced the campaign was his last hurrah.

In Idaho, Connie Hanson was solidly defeated her battle to capture the GOP nomination for the House seat held by her husband, George, before he was convicted of lying to Congress about his financial affairs.

With about 37 percent of the vote counted, broadcaster Mel Richardson led the field, getting 46 percent of the vote, while Mrs. Hansen was in fourth place with 15 percent.

In Kentucky, Republicans picked Louisville lawyer Jackson Andrews to mount the uphill battle this fall against popular Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky.

Bush, Robertson Do Well

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Backers of Vice President George Bush claimed victory in the first step to picking Michigan's 1988 Republican delegates — the earliest ever start to a presidential campaign.

Bush backers said they recruited the most candidates as Republicans filed petitions Tuesday for the state's August primary. But Bush appeared to be closely shadowed by the Rev. Pat Robertson in what was seen as an organizational test of strength among undeclared presidential aspirants.

Backers of the Rev. Pat Robertson said the evangelist's Freedom Council may have recruited more than 4,000 of the candidates who filed for the Aug. 5 primary. Supporters of Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., said his Michigan Opportunity Society accounted for about 3,000 candidates.

Soviets Close Corn Deal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An apparently routine deal between the Soviet Union and private traders resulted in sale of 100,000 tons of American corn.

The sale for undisclosed terms, announced Tuesday by the Agriculture Department, raised to 6.6 million tons the amount of U.S. grain the Kremlin has bought in the third year of the U.S.-Soviet grain agreement.

Sales of American grain have been running at a relatively slow pace this year, and the latest sale appeared to be no different.

Although grain prices rose after the Soviet nuclear disaster at Chernobyl, with the expectation the Kremlin would buy more grain, U.S. officials have said there has been no increase in Soviet agricultural trading.

U.S. To Reduce Forces In Spain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and Spain have agreed to meet in Madrid July 10 to start discussions of a phased reduction in the U.S. military presence in Spain.

Secretary of State George Shultz and Spanish Foreign Minister Francisco Fernandez-Ordóñez said Tuesday that representatives would meet to adjust to "the realities arising from Spain's membership in the European Community and the Atlantic Alliance."

A communique issued by the two leaders said the membership of Spain in NATO, which was confirmed in a national referendum last month, will mean that the Spanish armed forces will assume some of the responsibilities currently undertaken by U.S. forces in Spain.

FAA Installs New Radar

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Administration has installed a new radar system at Huntsville, Ala., to study weather conditions such as wind shear, the prime suspect in a deadly crash last year, officials said.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said Tuesday the chief goal of the Huntsville experiment will be "to perfect a radar system that will reliably display airport wind shear conditions for air traffic controllers."

Wind shear is a sudden and violent change in wind speed and direction that is believed to have caused the Aug. 2, 1985, crash of Delta Airlines Flight 191 near the Dallas airport, killing 137 people.

The tests will be conducted for the FAA by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Lincoln Laboratory using two Doppler weather radars, which have the capability to see inside storms.

Bill Trims Library Costs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan has signed legislation requiring future presidential libraries — excluding his own — to be less of a burden to U.S. taxpayers.

The bill, signed Tuesday, requires that presidential libraries possess a private endowment large enough to pay at least 20 percent of their operating costs.

Although built with private funds, presidential libraries are maintained by the taxpayers, currently at a cost of about $14 million a year.

The seven existing libraries house the papers of Presidents Hoover, Roosevelt, Truman, Eisenhower, Johnson, Kennedy and Ford. The Carter library is under construction.

Reagan's friends plan to build a $45 million library to hold his papers, but that library will be exempt from the endowment requirement.

Suspended After Marijuana Charge

Hughes To Suggest Custodian Be Paid

By Paul Schaefer
Herald Staff Writer

A Seminole County high school custodian suspended after being charged with possession of marijuana may be back on payroll after tonight.

Superintendent of Schools Robert Hughes will recommend the school board continue the custodian's suspension from work, but with pay, while the investigation into the incident continues.

The school board will meet at 7 p.m. in their final regularly scheduled night session of the school year at the county school offices, 1211 Mellonville Ave., Sanford.

Junior Blake, 58, 2420 Granby St., Sanford, was suspended without pay by Hughes May 5, following his May 2 arrest by Lake Mary police for alleged possession of over 20 grams of marijuana.

Blake was arrested at 10:15 p.m. at Longwood Lake Mary Rd. and Washington St. after police from several departments reportedly had anonymous telephone tips that Blake could be found at that location, and that pot was hidden near the gas tank filler cap of his pick-up truck.

Blake's attorney, Jim Perry, Orlando, has contended that his client was "set-up" and that the drugs were planted on Blake's vehicle. Perry and sources near the investigation have said that Blake had successfully passed a polygraph test, and that indications have been pointing toward the "set-up" theory.

Reinstating Blake's pay, "seems to be an appropriate action at this time," according to county schools spokesman Karen Coleman.

"It appears... Mr. Blake has cooperated fully with the investigation," she continued, noting the polygraph test results.

School officials have said that if the case against Blake is dropped, he will be reinstated to his job, and be given back pay held while the incident is investigated.

In other personnel action expected at tonight's meeting, a former assistant principal at Lake Mary and Lake Brantley High Schools, will be recommended to become the district's new Director of Personnel Services.

John Reichert, 36, 5487 Orange Blvd., Sanford, Assistant Director of Personnel Services, will be recommended to replace former director Ann Neiswender, who took a leave of absence last month to run for Jean Bryant's county school board seat. Bryant recently announced her candidacy for re-election.

Reichert is also a past Dean of Students at Seminole High School, and entered the county school system as a Seminole High math teacher in 1972.

Floridians Unaffected By Court's Phone Decision

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — A U.S. Supreme Court ruling allowing states to set depreciation formulas for the telephone industry will not affect Florida consumers, Florida Public Service Commission officials said.

Richard Tudor, assistant PSC communications director, said Tuesday the commission has not granted a rate hike based on depreciation rates so the ruling will not make any difference to current phone rates. He said it might affect future cases.

Mark Wilkerson, a depreciation specialist with the PSC, said Florida's depreciation rate is similar to the FCC's but the state uses different methods to arrive at the rate.

"Pre-emption yes or no is not going to cause the little old lady to lose her phone," Wilkerson said.

Depreciation is an accounting method by which utilities gradually recover from customers plant and equipment costs for such items as telephone lines and poles.

FDIC Relieved Of Potential Liabilities

By Henry J. Reske

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday a "standby letter of credit" is not the same as a cash deposit in a decision that relieves the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. of potentially billions of dollars of liabilities.

The court, in the 6-3 ruling, overturned a decision by the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in a case brought by the Philadelphia Gear Corp. and involving the Penn Square Bank collapse.

"We believe that ... Congress did not ... intend to protect with deposit insurance a standby letter of credit backed only by a contingent promissory note," Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote for the majority. "We thus hold that such an arrangement does not give rise to a 'deposit.'"

In another key decision that could mean lower telephone rates for thousands of people, the justices ruled 5-2 today that the Federal Communications Commission cannot order states to use a certain method for determining the rate of depreciation of telephone equipment.

The FCC formula, designed to modernize the industry, has resulted in massive rate hikes, including a $16.1 million increase for Maryland customers of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., of Maryland and $40 million for customers of South Central Bell in Louisiana.

With today's ruling, phone companies may find it harder to seek higher rates to quickly recover capital expenditures for new and improved equipment.

In other actions today, the court:

— Agreed to decide, in a Missouri case, if states are justified in restricting inmate mail and marriages in an effort to combat prison violence. The case involves a class-action suit brought by inmates who say the rules violate their rights of free expression and privacy.

— In an 8-1 decision, said private shippers may not recover antitrust damages for overcharges resulting from conspiracies by regulated transportation companies so long as the companies had filed their rates with the Interstate Commerce Commission for approval. The decision kept intact a 1922 precedent, despite Justice Department arguments the law was inconsistent with modern antitrust doctrine.

In the letter of credit case, the government argued in its appeal to the high court that if such letters are considered the same as a deposit, "it will bring under the FDIC's insurance umbrella the almost $120 billion worth of outstanding standby bank letters of credit, while making banks liable for more than $100 million in additional insurance assessments."

The FDIC, formed after the bank failures of the Depression, is a federal insurance program to protect depositors' accounts from bank failures. It gets its money from assessment made against member banks.

A standby letter of credit is a guarantee by the issuing bank that a customer's bill will be paid. The letters generally are not supported by money on deposit with the bank, because the bank does not expect to pay out the funds. If the customer cannot pay a bill, the bank is obligated to pay it and then collect the money from the customer.

The standby letter contrasts with traditional commercial letters of credit, which are not contingent on a default. They function as a mechanism of payment and are backed by money. The bank receives a bill and pays it with its customer's money.

The appeals court ruling that letters of credit were the same as a deposit sent a chill through the banking industry. The Council on International Banking, an organization of some 335 banks in the eastern United States, also pressed for high court review.

The case involved the Orton Manufacturing Corp., which was issued such a letter for $145,200 by the Penn Square Bank of Oklahoma City on April 23, 1981. The letter was intended to guarantee the Philadelphia Gear Corp. would receive payment for materials sold Orion.

In turn, Orion, in a "promissory note," promised the bank it would reimburse any money the bank had to pay out on the letter of credit. Penn Square also received an issuance fee for the letter.

On July 2, 1982, Penn Square was declared insolvent — a collapse that triggered a major banking industry crisis — and the FDIC named its receiver.

During the next several weeks, Philadelphia Gear tried to collect from the FDIC for money it was owed by Orion.

The FDIC refused and Philadelphia Gear brought suit in federal court claiming the letter was a deposit and therefore insured by the FDIC.

The district court found the letter was a deposit because it was backed by the promissory note and therefore the FDIC was liable for it. The appeals court, in December 1984, agreed and the government appealed to the high court.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: A stagnant foul weather system hovered over much of the eastern two-thirds of the nation today, spreading rain from the central Plains to the Atlantic Coast. Forecasters said the inclement weather will persist for the next few days because the jet stream, which normally sweeps weather patterns across the United States this time of year, has taken a more northern course through Canada. "I see no real movement in the system," National Weather Service meteorologist Bill Barlow said. Greer, S.C., was soaked with 1 1/2 inches of rain during a one-hour period Tuesday night.

Farther east, Lincoln, Ga., was hit with one inch in 60 minutes, and more than half an inch doused Huntsville, Ala., in 30 minutes. Rainfall over the Northeast ceased today as a cold front pushed into the region and drove the clouds out over the Atlantic, Barlow said. Winds gusting to 69 mph blew across northern Utah Tuesday and dense fog blanketed parts of the Midwest, delaying flights at two Chicago airports. Heavy thunderstorms in southeast Kansas spawned a tornado near Moran that damaged buildings. In the Kansas City area, 1 1/2 inches of rain fell in just 30 minutes in Westwood, Kan., and marble-size hail pelted Roeland Park, Kan. Thunderstorms dumped heavy rain across parts of south-central Texas, prompting a flash flood warning in Bexar County. Storms drenched Jefferson County, Texas, with just over 1 inch of rain in one hour.

Del Rio, Texas, and Dubuque, Iowa, each had just less than one inch of rain, the weather service said. In Utah, easterly winds gusting to 69 mph at Farmington and 41 mph at Hill Air Force Base in Ogden. A high-wind warning was posted for western slopes of the Wasatch mountains in northern Utah.

Chernobyl Nuclear Disaster Victims Still Gravely Ill

MOSCOW (UPI) — An estimated 75 Ukrainians remain gravely ill with radiation poisoning caused by last month's nuclear disaster, according to the doctor treating them, who also said hospitals near the disaster site were unable to deal promptly with all the victims.

Dr. Angelina Guskova, the Soviet doctor in charge of the victims affected by radiation emitted by the crippled nuclear reactor at Chernobyl, told the newspaper Izvestia that 120 people remained hospitalized, with between 70 and 80 taken to Moscow for treatment still in serious condition.

Guskova said the next few weeks would be the most critical time for those suffering from radiation exposure.

But the American radiation sickness expert invited to Moscow to treat the injured held out hope for the severely ill survivors.

"Most of the most critically ill patients, the worst affected, have died," Dr. Robert Gale said, adding that the deaths had slightly surpassed the official toll of 19.

Arabs Reject Thatcher Demand

LONDON (UPI) — Moderate Palestinian leaders in Israeli-occupied territories, repeating their support for Yasser Arafat, rejected pleas by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher that the Palestine Liberation Organization recognize Israel's right to exist.

"We told her she has to respect our determination that we have chosen as our leadership the PLO," said Hana Seniora, editor of Al-Fajr newspaper in East Jerusalem.

Thatcher, concluding a three-day visit to Israel, said Tuesday at a news conference in Jerusalem, "I tried in every way I could to persuade the ... PLO to renounce terrorism and to accept (U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, recognizing) Israel's right to exist, as a condition of our negotiating with them."

Hostages In Lebanon Threatened

A threat to murder all the American, French and British hostages being held in Lebanon and then dump their bodies in west Beirut failed to materialize, and political sources questioned whether the warning came from the kidnappers.

Several hours after a telephone call to a Lebanese radio station Tuesday saying that pro-Iranian radicals would murder the hostages and dump their bodies in the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital, security sources said no bodies had been found.

"We will execute all the Americans, four French and a British hostage today (Tuesday) and will dump their bodies somewhere in west Beirut," warned the caller, who claimed to speak on behalf of Islamic Jihad.

The pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad claims it has "executed" an American and a Frenchman. Their bodies, however, have not been found.

All of the missing foreigners were abducted in the Beirut area in separate incidents dating to early 1984.

Political sources in Beirut and in neighboring Damascus said they doubted the authenticity of the anonymous caller's message.

Response To Berlin Wall Crisis

BERLIN (UPI) — The Western allies will seek to forge a united response to East Germany's apparent bid to turn the 25-year-old concrete wall dividing East and West Berlin into part of its international border, allied spokesmen say.

The foreign ministers of the United States, France, Britain and West Germany were to discuss the new Berlin crisis in Halifax, Canada, Thursday and Friday during the semiannual meeting of NATO foreign ministers.

Secretary of State George Shultz will represent the United States at the session, which opens tonight with a dinner.

Politics And Principles

Who Says George Bush Is A Wimp?

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The 1988 presidential elections are still more than two years away, and no major prospect has yet announced an intention. But at least one of the widely presumed candidates has already been subjected to the serious scrutiny and scholarly debate that characterizes off-season politics.

George Bush has been called a wimp.

That is to say the vice president has been charged with what amounts to the forfeiture of his philosophical manhood. The argument is that he has given his soul and his substance to the Ronald Reagan wing of the democracy, in return for future considerations, and the whole matter has become unseemly.

The critics say Bush has buried his personal views to curry favor from conservatives. They add he has swallowed his individualism to join Republican Party consensus. The man is even said to talk like a wimp lately, choosing words like "gosh," "neat" and, in one memorable gaff, "deep-doo-doo."

So the vice president's image has been put to a sore test. And the truth of it could suffer as much as his future. Bush has been in public life for 20 years, he was a World War II hero before that, and this may be the proper time to recall that he has served the nation with frequent measures of courage.

I submit one illustration in which I was involved in a tangential way. It took place in the early part of 1974. George Bush was the chairman of the Republican National Committee then. I was a newly arrived journalist in Washington, and the Watergate burglary case had been heard and reheard in Congress.

Many Republicans were, of course, trying to dismiss those hearings. And Richard Nixon took to the public airways to close his eyes as well. He said he had no private knowledge of the burglary, nor did he play a role in any subsequent coverup, and he felt the nation should now get on to other things.

That message only fanned the flames of growing public doubt, however, and I thought it would be instructive to talk with Bush about the controversy. I arranged an interview at the Republican headquarters on Capital Hill, and met Bush with his sleeves rolled up in a large but mostly unadorned office.

He was 50 years old at the time. And he had a full if checkered history. He had served two terms in the House of Representatives, and he had also lost a pair of campaigns for the Senate. He was therefore past the point of being a hot Republican prospect, and he was more like an executive on call.

He had served as Nixon's ambassador to the United Nations. Now he was the president's choice as the GOP national chairman. He said to start with that he admired the commander in chief — that's how it put it, "commander in chief" — and he followed that with a meaningless colloquy on political criminality.

He said the Republicans weren't alone in their transgressions, or words to that effect, and he hoped that the American people would remember that campaign corruption is usually an isolated curiosity, whenever it occurs, and neither one political party nor the other should be blamed in the entirety.

I don't remember who yawned first. Bush tried to look earnest. I tried to look interested. Finally, I asked him if he would forget for a moment that he was the Republican chairman and speak as a private citizen. He didn't know me, he certainly didn't owe me the requested option, but he agreed.

He said then that he was personally ashamed of Watergate. He said it was a betrayal of the trust of every American. He said it didn't matter what party was at fault, political chicanery robs the democratic process of its validity, and he thought the nation should insist that it be cut away for the rot it is.

He said one way to do it would be to create wholesale and bipartisan political reforms. He wanted goof-proof checks and balances. He said people should start study groups throughout the nation and pass their ideas to Congress, then legislation could be enacted to see that Watergate would not happen again.

And what about Nixon? I asked.

If he's guilty he should be punished. Bush replied.

How?

In accordance with the law. Impeachment?

Yes, if it came to it.

That was what I was waiting to hear. And even now I'm surprised Bush said it. He was the top Republican executive, beholden to the Republican president, and committed in that regard to absolute loyalty. He offered his comments on principal, however, and I rather think he would do the same thing today.

By the way, I remember he called me after the interview. He said he had read my story, and so had some other Republicans with whom he had talked. He said he was glad that he said what he did, but the others were not, and, gosh, it looked as if he might be in whatever the synonym is for deep-doo-doo.

Lake Mary High Senior Wins National Merit Scholarship

A Lake Mary High School senior has been awarded a National Merit Scholarship.

Jennifer L. Denton, Longwood, was awarded an $8,000 scholarship by the Evanston, Ill. based National Merit Scholarship Corporation, the NMSC has announced. She said she will use the $2,000 per year, four-year award to attend the University of Miami.

The corporate sponsor of Miss Denton's award is Stauffer Chemical Company, Westport, Conn.

Miss Denton is a three-year National Honor Society member, and a three year Mu Alpha Theta member, where she served as secretary and president. She has also been a member of the Key Club for three years. She is a member of the symphonic band, and editor of the senior section of the yearbook.

The year's Seminole County seniors are expected to collect over $5 million in scholarships and military academy appointments, school officials have said.

"Our new heat pump saves more than enough money to run the VCR and TV. Do you think FPL knew that when they helped us buy it?"

Sure we did. FPL is encouraging everybody to manage their energy efficiently because lowering peak energy demand delays the need for new power plants — an expense everyone must share.

Installing a high-efficiency central heat pump can cut your heating costs up to 40% because it's more efficient than a conventional electric heating system. In the winter, the heat pump extracts heat from the outside air (yes, there's always heat in the air) and transfers it indoors. And in the summer, it cools by removing heat and humidity from inside.

You might also want to install a heat-recovery water heating system with your new heat pump to save even more money.

Smell The Roses Then Come Back

One measure of a person's worth is the extent to which that person becomes involved in community affairs and the depth of his or her loyalty to that community.

And while Sanford is blessed with a long list of loyal citizens committed to community improvement, one man certainly stands out as a totally devoted citizen whose prime goal over the years has been to promote a city he loves.

That gentleman is Mr. Jack Horner, president of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, who has announced he will resign that post effective June 30. Mr. Horner is 65 and says it's time he and his wife, Peggy, travel around the country and Canada "to smell the roses," and to visit friends while he and Peggy "are still in good health."

Horner has lived in Sanford since 1957 and assumed the top post with the chamber in 1973. Since then, Mr. Horner's seemingly boundless energy in a broad range of activities designed to enhance Sanford's image has become a well-known fact.

And, usually, everywhere that Jack went, Peggy was sure to be found at his side, encouraging, helping, "fixing" things that needed fixing. And while most in the community said they were stunned and disappointed to learn of Horner's decision to retire, one saving grace is that he promises to return to Sanford — with Peggy, of course — to continue community work on a volunteer basis. To that, we can only say amen.

Keep It Tidy

The Senate Finance Committee has produced a good tax reform bill, supported by all the committee members. Now the bill will have to be defended on the floor of the Senate from lobbyists representing special interests.

The floor debate, which is expected to occur next month, will be the first major debate in the Senate to be televised. Americans watching C-SPAN, the public service television channel, will have an opportunity to see their senators in action.

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the Senate minority leader, has endorsed the Senate Finance Committee version of tax reform, as has the Senate majority leader, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Byrd called the bill real tax reform and said he doesn't expect great changes to be made in it on the floor of the Senate. He doesn't think it will become a "Christmas tree" tax bill.

If anyone could decorate this bill with tinsel and baubles for the special interests, it would have been done in the Senate Finance Committee, where the special interests have historically achieved their purposes. But it was not done. Miraculously, Sens. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., the committee chairman, and Bill Bradley, D-N.J., a champion of income tax reform, managed to get a relatively clean bill out of the committee and onto the Senate floor.

Real estate interests called the bill "a meltdown" because it destroys real estate tax shelters.

The elimination of Individual Retirement Accounts for employees covered by other retirement plans is causing great commotion. The IRA tax exemption was a good idea, stimulating individual saving and investment. But comprehensive tax reform is a better idea, and it would certainly be preferable to pass the Senate Finance Committee tax reform bill intact rather than to open it up to a process of amendments which would give the lobbyists a field day.

The package as the committee wrapped it is a good one. The Senate should not unwrap it. Pass it on to a Senate-House conference committee without any amendment. That will make it harder for the special interests to tamper with it.

Quirks And Quips From Capitol Hill

By Elaine S. Pavlich
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rushing out of a House-Senate bargaining session on the budget, Sens. Lawton Chiles of Florida and Pete Domenici of New Mexico found themselves on the other side of the Capitol complex with barely minutes to spare to make a Senate vote. They dashed into the street, waving frantically at a Capitol Police car going the other way. The car braked and did a smart 180-degree turn to pick up the demanding senators.

A group of tourists stood by, fascinated — what power! Well, not always. Just as the patrol car made its way into the intersection, it stalled. Repeated efforts by an increasingly embarrassed and frustrated officer failed to restart the blue and white squad car.

Chagrined, the two senators hopped out and began a brisk walk across the Capitol grounds as a group of reporters followed behind, laughing. The two made the vote — barely — and only because word was sent ahead that they were "delayed" incoming.

The vote topic: "Compelling the presence of absent senators."

Calling Senator Quorum

C-SPAN, the public cable television operation that televises the House floor and will be bringing Senate debate to homes beginning in June, recently publicized a few tips for Senate-watchers. "Casual observers of Senate TV might think the Senate's day consists of nothing but quorum calls," said the C-SPAN Update newspaper.

Close observers might think that too, and they would be correct. The Senate spent a third of its session last year in quorum calls — essentially a stalling device during which senators names are slowly read, alphabetically, over and over.

No Excuse

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole controls the Senate's schedule but lost control of his own the other day when he had to wait 15 minutes to testify at a Senate committee hearing on hunger.

Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch apologized to his leader. "I misread my schedule and came to the wrong building," Hatch said.

Hatch said that by the time he got to the right hearing "I was so nervous keeping the majority leader waiting I had to go to the bathroom. It's been a terrible experience for me this morning."

Long-Distance Lobbying

Secretary of State George Shultz was so concerned about House efforts to cut the foreign aid budget that he telephoned House Budget Committee Chairman William Gray from the Far East where he was traveling early this month. Shultz reached Gray, D-Pa., just as he was in the middle of a day-long budget session.

Unwilling to leave the room, Gray took the call on a phone at his seat in the hearing room and begin listening to Shultz with one ear and the discussion with the other. Shultz went on and on, insisting that foreign aid money was needed for security reasons.

Finally, exasperated, Gray said he told Shultz: "You want more money, you tell your president to bring it by," an oblique reference to President Reagan's reluctance to raise taxes to finance favored activities.

WILLIAM RUSHER

The GOP's Laxalt Factor

A good many thoughtful observers are by no means convinced that the 1988 Republican presidential nomination is "all locked up" for George Bush, despite the vice president's continued (though diminishing) lead over various possible rivals in the polls.

At the same time, they note that Rep. Jack Kemp has thus far failed to project himself as the chief, let alone only possible, alternative to Bush. In order to win the nomination, Kemp must not only persuade the GOP's powerful conservative bloc that he is its tiger but that Bush — and for that matter anybody else — just won't do. Thus far Kemp has failed to make any such demonstration, and as a result his candidacy hasn't yet "taken off."

The nomination, therefore, may very well still be up for grabs. And that may be why there is increasing speculation these days about Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada.

Laxalt's assets as the possible 1988 nominee are several and impressive. At 63 he has served four years as a governor and is now retiring from the U.S. Senate after two full terms there. He is well liked by his colleagues — and also by President Reagan, who regards Laxalt as his closest friend and ally in the Senate. On the safe assumption that the 1988 Republican convention will want to nominate someone who is Reagan's ideological soul mate, committed to carrying on Reagan's program, Laxalt fills the bill.

In addition, Laxalt is familiar with the gritty details of party work, currently serving as general chairman of the Republican Party. People familiar with his work in that capacity speak favorably of his skills as an administrator — useful attributes not always found in a legislator.

In some ways most important of all, Paul Laxalt is a man of the West, where (along with the South) the Republican Party has its greatest strength today. As pointed out recently in this space, all but a small handful of the names on the "long list" of possible Republican presidential nominees belong to Easterners or Midwesterners. Not counting Bush (who moved to Texas to go into business and politics but remains almost the archetypal Easterner), only three people spring to mind: California Gov. George Deukmejian, Colorado Sen. William Armstrong — and Laxalt.

Businessman Endures Libyan Nightmare

By Jack Anderson And Dale Van Atta
WASHINGTON — This is the story of an American businessman who recently returned from a Libyan nightmare and is now in hiding from Moammar Khadafy's killers. The story has been confirmed by witnesses, who fear retaliation. We have agreed, therefore, to withhold all names.

The businessman, tempted by a multimillion-dollar offer to sell textiles to Libya, flew to Khadafyland, where he was cordially received. Contracts were signed; the profits rolled in. All the while, Libyan authorities gave him the red-carpet treatment.

But on his last trip to Libya, he was unaccountably arrested by secret police who questioned him for 16 hours — from noon until 4 a.m. He was taken to his hotel to pick up his belongings; then he was hauled back to secret police headquarters, which were located in a villa that had once been a private residence.

He was stripped naked and

CHUCK STONE

Meese's Mindless Minions

Americans who believe in virtuous living, clean minds and pure hearts owe a debt of gratitude to Attorney General Edwin Meese's Commission on Pornography.

This courageous group of men and women went beyond documenting the pernicious pervasions of pornography pervading our lives. They have inadvertently proved that what helped win World War II is now losing the war against crime: Dirty pictures. They just don't come right out and say it.

Instead, the commission's 211-page introduction to its soon-to-be-released report tpadances to the conclusion that pornography "bears some causal relationship to the level of sexual violence, sexual coercion and unwanted sexual aggression."

Stripped of its sociological jargon, this suggests that all of those naked girls in exotic poses on World War II barracks walls got GIs so aroused they vented their sexual frustrations by beating up the Germans and Japanese.

But whether or not "dirty pictures" helped America win World War II, they're losing the war against crime, according to the gospel of the Meese commission.

Pornography is flourishing as a national industry. From the mere portrayal of naked breasts in National Geographic and Playboy to the sexual perversions in Penthouse and Hustler, these pictures are deemed responsible for stimulating weak-minded men to rush out and rape and batter women.

And the weak-minded men and women (except for two dissenting panel members) on the government's pornography commission have rushed to report this epistemological garbage as if it were fact.

It isn't. Even Meese's moral midglets cannot demonstrate any empirical connection between horniness and harassment.

But the Meese commission did prove Thucydides' theory that history repeats itself. His commission is part of a recurring cycle of actions by civic-minded white middle-class malcontents who refuse to accept Thoreau's thesis that "the mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation."

Black people don't have time for anti-smut crusades. They're too busy trying to survive and keep Edwin Meese from returning them to "separate but equal" plantations.

Even that conscientious custodian of our morals today, columnist James J. Kilpatrick, concedes in his masterful book, "The Smut Peddlers," that "Many of the things that seemed obscene to Comstock in the 1880s surely would offend few persons in our more sophisticated time."

Obvious, of course. Except to the mindless minions of the attorney general's pornography inquisition.

Nobody denies that cruel, exploitative forms of pornography exist. If a society is to maintain a consensual civility, some outer limits must be established. But who makes that determination? Some omniscient federal commission on values?

Morphine May Help The Dying

By Gayle Young

NEW YORK (UPI) — Doctors and nurses are reluctant to give morphine to pain-ridden terminally ill cancer patients because the powerful drug is taboo in the medical community, according to the American Cancer Society.

The Cancer Society is attempting to reverse the prevailing opinion with a report advocating the use of the powerful narcotic in the treatment of pain in cancer patients who are terminally ill.

"There are concerns with morphine but they are not appropriate to a dying patient," said Dr. T. Declan Walsh, a fellow at Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, who wrote the report. "There are many misunderstandings about morphine. Its additive quality is just one of them."

Morphine was first used to alleviate cancer pain over a century ago but was all but discarded in the 1960s because it is powerfully addictive and doctors perceive it as having overwhelming negative qualities, according to the report.

Walsh said many doctors are misinformed about the side effects, dosage needed for effective pain management and other facets of morphine administration. He said the Cancer Society's report corrects these misunderstandings and offers dose guidelines and information.

The majority of the estimated 750,000 Americans who will die of cancer this year will suffer some pain, according to the report. For many, the pain will be chronic and debilitating.

Walsh said the push over the past decades to find a cure for cancer pushed the treatment of cancer pain in the background. For centuries, physicians could only treat cancer's symptoms, he said.

"As the treatment of cancer has developed, the palliation of patients' symptoms has been downplayed," he said. "There has not been systematic research into the treatment of pain because doctors have been trying to find a cure."

But in recent years the trend has reversed somewhat, Walsh said in the report. New research shows morphine to be a safe, effective treatment for pain.

"A movement has started. If we are not curing them let's try to improve care," Walsh said. Recent reports, including one in the New England Journal of Medicine, have indicated the cure rate for the disease is not as high as previously thought.

cluded, so he would do their bidding. The carrot had been the multimillion-dollar contracts; the cruel imprisonment was the stick.

He was told to contribute 5 percent of his profits to the Libyan African Trading Co., he said. He was also put in touch with a mystery man who went by the name of Hajj Ali; the American was instructed to lure anti-Khadafy leaders out into the open by promising them lucrative business opportunities.

The businessman made discreet inquiries and was told that the Libyan African Trading Co. was a front that finances Khadafy's worldwide terrorist underground. He also learned that other businessmen had been dragged into the basement prison for torture and intimidation.

The businessman agreed to follow instructions. But as soon as he got out of Libya, he hurried back to the United States and told his story to the FBI. Now he fears for his life and constantly watches over his shoulder.

...There's No Future Here'

Biggest Irish Export: The Irish

Robert Mackay

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — Decades ago people often snickered that Ireland's No. 1 export was people. Irish emigration — and the joke — is on the rise again.

About 14,000 Irish emigrated to other countries in the year ending in April 1985 — more than double the previous year. Thousands more are believed to be flocking to the United States to work as illegal aliens.

Altogether, total legal and illegal emigration for the year 1984-85 could total 25,000 people, the most since the 1950s and '60s, said Labor and Public Service Minister Ruairi Quinn.

"Unemployment, high taxation and family restrictions are the main reasons people go," said Kate Shanahan of the Youth Emigration Action Group, a government-subsidized organization set up to advise people on the pitfalls of unprepared emigration.

Ireland's unemployment rate is 17 percent. In some rural towns it's as high as 40 percent. A walk down Dublin's O'Connell Street reveals large numbers of young people, idle and with no prospects of a job.

In addition, Ireland has the youngest population in Europe. More than 50 percent of Ireland's 3 million people are under 25.

"It's an attitude here," Shanahan said. "There's a lot of cynicism — the country's going down the drain; there's no incentive to do anything for yourself."

"You get so fed up with the place you just want to get out," added Clare Culloty, in her early 20s, who along with Miriam Slattery works with Shanahan in the action group.

"It's hard to get a rent allowance here," Shanahan said. "If you're still living at home, your parents sort of look at you when you're 18 and wonder, 'what are you still doing here?'"

"It's the people with the 'get up and go' that leave," she said. Most legal emigrants head for London, where they believe jobs to be more plentiful and where they can be given an apartment and a weekly paycheck under the British welfare system.

Illegal emigrants go to the United States on a tourist visa and stay, working at odd jobs, usually in heavily Irish communities in Boston and New York.

"I don't know anyone who's gone over (to the United States) legally," Culloty said. Slattery and Shanahan agreed.

The U.S. Embassy in Dublin in the past year received a 50 percent increase in the number of requests for American immigration visas and is so backlogged it is still working on 1983 requests.

"Now that the (Irish) economy is down again, emigration is going back up again," said an embassy spokeswoman. "About 1,000 people a year are emigrating (to the United States) legally."

She said about 45,000 non-immigrant visas were issued last year to Irish men and women who said they were going to vacation in the United States.

"How many of those people came back, who can tell?" she said.

"Emigration is a very volatile issue here," she said. "Economically forced emigration is not a pleasant situation. It takes it into a political sphere."

She and the young women at the action group said emigration now is unlike the '50s because Ireland is losing more than its farmers. It is losing its best and brightest young people who have technological skills.

"Fifty percent of college graduates in 1984 were unemployed last year," Shanahan said. "About 20 percent of those with master degrees left the country. There are qualified solicitors (lawyers) who are working in bars across the street."

The better educated are chosen first for legal U.S. immigration.

"Ireland is losing its more technically motivated," the embassy spokeswoman said.

Shanahan said the Catholic church and government officials are reacting to the increased emigration as if it were the same as the farmers in the 1950s and '60s, when an average of 40,000 people a year were leaving.

"They were people who never wanted to leave," Shanahan said. "They were trying to save money to come back here."

"Most of my friends (now) are not thinking of going for one or two years. They're thinking of going for good."

Irish-Americans find it hard to understand the desire of the young people to leave Ireland, Culloty said.

"They see Ireland as a romantic place," she added. "They don't understand there's no future here."

Some illegals are exploited in the United States, where Irish-American businessmen put them to work in restaurants and bars at wages far below the legal minimum, knowing they cannot complain to the authorities, Shanahan said.

In addition, the U.S. Embassy spokeswoman said there have been "horror stories" of Irish women answering newspaper ads to care for two children in the United States, only to find too late that they will be taking care of five children and doing housework for slave wages.

The Irish government "is concerned" about the rising emigration rate, a labor ministry spokesman said, but "it doesn't seem to be anything to the extent that it was years ago."

"Emigration seems to have increased, but so has the population," he said.

By the time of Irish independence in 1921, the republic's population was 3 million. It declined to 2.8 million during the 1940s and '50s. But since the early '60s the population has increased to 3.5 million.

"If you look at it in that context, it (emigration) is not as bad as in past years," he said.

Labor minister Quinn said migration changed "from an actual net inflow of people in the second half of the 1970s to an average annual net outflow of 6,000 per annum from 1981 to 1984 and 14,000 in the year to April 1985."

One government reaction was to set up Shanahan's action group to look at the problem and put together an information book for young people thinking of emigrating.

"We have clear evidence ... that too many young people leave Ireland ill-prepared and badly informed about what they should seek and what to expect," Quinn said.

But troubles experienced abroad — no jobs or low pay and discrimination — have not stemmed the flow.

"I think people are getting fed up with that very Catholic attitude — count your blessings because you're poor," Shanahan said.

As director of the action group, Shanahan said she earns $107 a week. Her colleagues make $83. Their jobs in the organization — created as a temporary government "employment" — end in October.

"Then we'll be back on the boat or plane," said Culloty, who emigrated to England for a while before returning to Ireland.

"As soon as you get home, you think 'what did I come home for?' I wouldn't have come home but I couldn't get a decent job" in England, she said.

The actual extent of illegal emigration to the United States is unknown, but the U.S. Embassy spokeswoman said it's believed to be "a drop in the bucket" to the number of other illegal aliens in the United States.

Friends Reflect On Norman Floyd

"He was a great administrator," Altamonte Springs Commissioner Eddie Rose said of former Altamonte Springs Mayor Norman C. Floyd Sr., who died Monday. "While he was mayor he improved city services, yet kept taxes down. He was probably the best stand up guy I ever knew. I worked for him for 7 years and 9 months when I was in charge of running the city's civic centers. If you were straight with him, he was straight with you."

Floyd, a retired Army major, was mayor of the city from 1974 to 1980. After he retired in 1980, the city changed from a full-time mayor to a city manager form of government. "He was a strong mayor when the city needed one, but by the time he left office, the city had grown to the point a city manager was needed."

Bill James, director of leisure services, who was director of recreation under Mayor Floyd said, "Norm Floyd was a very fair individual and he treated people in a very equitable manner. During his term the city made great strides in recreation. In 1978 the city obtained the Westmonte Center and many amenities were made on the Eastmonte Center."

"He was a great supporter of recreation and program for kids. It was a key element, perhaps it came from his background in law enforcement. He felt if kids had something to do they wouldn't get in trouble, James added."

Funeral services for Floyd, 58, who lived at 24 W. Thrush St., Apopka, will be held Friday at 2 p.m. at the Forest City Chapel of Baldwin-Fairchild Funeral Home. He will be buried with full military honors in Glen Haven Memorial Park, Winter Park, following the service. Visitation for friends will be at the Forest City Chapel on Thursday from 6-9 p.m.

Amcor said that the development would be located in an unmapped planning area, which has no land use classification although it is characterized as general rural.

In the petition, the company stated, "there is no legal basis for the finding (by the county commission) that the proposed project is not consistent with the existing comprehensive plan."

Denial of the project should be based on "a legitimate issue of health, safety and welfare, or other appropriate finding, but not upon the administrative convenience to the county," Amcor said in the petition.

Such refusal to permit a land owner to use his property as requested "is a denial of the right to use private property and constitutes a taking without due process of law."

The general rural land use classification has no basis "other than an alleged preservation of the quality of life for the benefit of a small segment of the public at the expense of a private property owner."

Despite a decrease in the development's density from 1,600 to 1,240 units, the county planning and zoning commission recommended denial of the project in March.

Both the P&Z and county commission heard pleas to deny the project from the Friends of the Wekiva River, several local homeowner's associations and other concerned citizens, who said the request was premature in light of the county's land use policies. They also said approval would create a domino effect for other development in the area.

Opponents feared negative impacts on the environmentally sensitive Wekiva area and charged developers had not adequately addressed stormwater and wastewater management concerns.

Project backers maintained the land should be developed at a greater density than the one unit per acre under the county's land use policies, and they cited two existing developments there, Heathrow and Kingwood, to back up their argument.

The developers had proposed to install an interim water and sewage treatment system, however county staff said the sewage disposal method was only acceptable for a maximum of 182 dwelling units.

County Commissioner Barbara Christensen, who cast the dissenting vote at the April public hearing, predicted the county's decision to deny would lead to a court battle.

Mrs. Christensen said she felt the procedure used during the meeting denied the developer "due process and a fair hearing."

She said aspects of the project, such as sewage and water quality, were not addressed at the meeting, only comprehensive land use issues.

Mrs. Christensen said the commission should have been open to the possibility of changing the land use plan to permit the development and that its decision precluded any type of compromise with the developer.

She said the development is a victim of the new state growth management law, which requires the county to study land use changes in a more comprehensive manner.

The regional planning council earlier recommended the project be approved as a development of regional impact.

Poe has prepared a request to submit to the Central Florida Capital Funds Committee for $79,000 worth of production equipment for SWOP, the majority of which will be in the areas of packaging, mail preparation and woodshop. This thrust, he said, was chosen because they have contracts in these areas and existing equipment is constantly in use.

SWOP, which promises "quality work by the handicapped," does work for 120 different companies and the list grows rapidly. Poe said. The addition of the woodshop located at the Port of Sanford has given a new area of expertise and a variety of new skills to learn.

'Old Age' Symptoms Often Due To Overmedication

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Symptoms blamed on old age often are signs of drug reactions and overmedication — the cause of up to 20 percent of dementia and the problem behind about one in seven hospital admissions among the elderly, experts said.

Drug interaction and overmedication may cause such symptoms of aging as senility, forgetfulness and disorientation, said Dr. George Simpson, director of clinical psychopharmacology at a psychiatric institute run by the Medical College of Pennsylvania.

"The more pills that you get, the more possibilities there are for drug interaction," said Simpson, who is studying the effect of medicines on the elderly. "Somewhere along the line, some of these drugs can have negative effects."

The signs of drug problems are dismissed by older people and their families as symptoms perhaps expected over age 75. Younger people who suffer the same symptoms, however, are more likely to suspect they are experiencing the side effects of medication.

Little is known about how elderly people react to drugs, because medicines are usually tested on younger subjects, he said. But adverse drug reactions are responsible for about one in seven hospital admissions among the elderly, he said.

National Institute on Aging figures show that up to 20 percent of diagnosed cases of dementia may actually be misdiagnosed drug reactions that cause people to act as if they have a mental disorder, spokeswoman Pamela Jones said.

"Even in a healthy older person, there are biological changes that are going to occur and make drugs act differently," Jones said.

Simpson and Dr. Ira Katz planned to study the effects of commonly prescribed drugs in 20 elderly people, using people between the ages of 35 and 50 as a control group.

He said he hopes their research, to be completed within a year, will yield information on the correct doses of drugs frequently taken by the elderly.

However, she warned, there are no firm guidelines for adjusting the dosage. "It seems like the older the person, the lower the dose you should start with."

Rules Of Order Apply, Even To Filing Secrets

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When Steven Garfinkel heard about the recent U.S. air raid on Libya, he braced himself in his government office. He knew that once the bombs stopped falling on Tripoli, there would soon be military explosions of a related if secondary nature.

No, he was not worried about terrorist reprisals. He was thinking about a paper detonation. Garfinkel is in charge of the Information Security Oversight Office, the group that monitors the nation's classified information, and he says that kind of data is a prolific byproduct, almost like shrapnel, of the activities associated with national defense.

The attack on Libya, for example, produced secret documents concerning pilot briefings and munition loads. The talks with foreign authorities were also classified. No one can say how many confidential papers will eventually be set aside by the mission, but it might well go as high as 100,000.

Whatever the number, it would not be surprising to Garfinkel. He is used to dealing with mountains rather than hills in this regard. He says he counted the filing of 22.3 million

The United States has stashed a Himalaya of hush-hush through the years.

American secret documents in 1985, which is a record for the times, and the number could swell to some 24 million in 1986.

What's more, even these figures are tiny in the ultimate overall. Garfinkel says the United States has stashed a Himalaya of hush-hush through the years. He says he doesn't know the exact total, perhaps it's classified too, but, at a guess, the government now has a quarter of a billion secrets in storage.

That storage is said to contain everything from soup to nuts. The government classifies some of the logistics involved in feeding soldiers in the field. In addition, it has squirreled away data on the speed of its ships, the yields of its missiles, and, no kidding, the status of its weather reports.

For all of the variety, however — and a synonym is hodgepodge — Garfinkel says there is a kind of order to the business of secreting secrets. It starts with the premise that information must fall within the boundaries of several criteria before it can be placed behind the closed doors of classification. Garfinkel says one criteria is that the government must own or control the data. A second is that it must be connected to categories such as foreign relations or military intelligence. Finally, the information has to be of a kind where its public release would damage the nation's security interests.

So it is that armed affairs generate most of the secrets. Garfinkel notes that something like the Department of Agriculture may file something like crop predictions for the Soviet Union, but, otherwise, the Pentagon and the Central Intelligence Agency account for 98 percent of all classified materials.

Yet even the defense staff has to submit to the rules of order. Garfinkel says information can not simply be sealed and sent to the vaults by whim. He says the data must first be perused and verified by people called authorized original classifiers, or it must be associated with material already classified.

After that, the U.S. secrets are locked up in various places, from the National Archives to overseas embassies. And sometimes they are eventually forgotten. Garfinkel says the military still stores papers from World War I, and millions of documents, old and new, are probably not secrets at all.

For instance, when Britain fought its war with Argentina, disputing the Falkland Islands, the United States classified the weather reports in that part of the world. The reports were collected from open sources, however, and everyone, friend or foe, had equal access to the same climatic conditions.

Garfinkel says people have a right to challenge the need for secrets such as that. And when they do he and his organization get involved. The Information Security Oversight Office is a small agency (13 people), supervised by the National Security Council, and, aside from keeping track of the flow of secrets, it is authorized to review them for validity.

If that validity comes into doubt, the oversight office may persuade the submitting authority to release the secret. Or the authority may persuade the oversight office to keep it on ice. When all else fails, and an impasse develops, Garfinkel can arbitrarily order the declassification of materials.

But he claims he doesn't have to do that very often. He says officials are usually cooperative about releasing protected material. The government may have locked up 22 million documents last year, he goes on, but it also reviewed 20 million others that were on file, and turned 8.1 million back to the public.

"The United States is still the most open society on earth," Garfinkel insists from his view of the mountain. "The reason we produce so many secrets is because we produce so much information. And the fact is that the secrets we keep are just a small fraction of the information we make available."

Sunniland's Rally Tops D.A.V., Holds First Place

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

Three outs away from falling out of first place, Sunniland rallied for seven runs on six hits in the top of the sixth inning Tuesday night and went on to claim a 15-9 victory over D.A.V. in Sanford Little National League action at Westside Field.

The win enabled Sunniland, 9-2, to hold its half-game lead over First Federal in the league standings. D.A.V. fell to 4-8.

Going into the top of the sixth, D.A.V. had a 9-8 lead and needed only three outs for the upset victory. Alex Dunn led off the inning with a single and Ned June followed with a base hit. With one out, Don Hunt lined a single to score Dunn with the tying run and Quinn Byrd then rapped a base hit to drive in June with the go-ahead run.

After KoJack Hunt drew a walk to load the bases, David Dunn belted a double to drive in two more runs as Sunniland took command. Alex Dunn later added a two-run single to cap off the inning.

David Dunn, who came on in relief in the bottom of the fifth, retired D.A.V. in order in the bottom of the sixth. Dunn pitched two hitless innings, striking out three and walking none, for the win.

Sunniland had 16 hits in the game led by David Dunn who had three hits with Don Hunt, Ray June, Alex Dunn, Ned June and Derrick Brinson contributing two hits each.

Phillip King, Brent Deese and Bernard Sparrow had two hits each for D.A.V.

FEDERAL TRIMS RINKER

In a game in which the strike zone was as hard to find as a needle in a haystack, First Federal came away with a 14-12 victory over Rinker Materials in Little National League play at Fort Mellon Park.

First Federal, 8-2, remained in second place with the win while Rinker fell to 3-8.

First Federal managed just five hits in the game but took advantage of 13 walks and a multitude of passed balls and wild pitches. Four of First Federal's five hits were doubles including two-run doubles by Mike Dillon and Larry Bradley in the third inning, a lead off double by Cedric Butler in the fourth and an RBI two-bagger by Corey Anderson in the fifth.

Rinker was held to just two hits but kept the game close by taking advantage of 16 walks. Ronnie McNeil had both hits for Rinker including an RBI single in the first and solo homer in the third.

Reliever Dillon was the winning pitcher for First Federal while Corey Bennett took the loss.

POPPA JAY'S NIPS 'ROADERS

Demetry Beamon survived a shaky first inning and went on to allow no runs on one hit the rest of the way as Poppa Jay's downed the Railroaders, 8-6, in Little National League play at Bay Avenue Field.

The Railroaders had just one hit, Richard Washington's RBI single, but took advantage of seven walks to score six runs in the bottom of the first for a 6-4 lead. Beamon then settled down and gave up one hit, Randy Bowling's fifth-inning single, and walked just three the rest of the way. Beamon struck out seven for the game.

Beamon also helped his own cause with two hits while Mike Thomas added two hits and two RBIs and Maurice Fisher contributed a pair of singles.

RICH GETS RICHER

Quint Hunt hurled a one-hitter and Raydon Byrd cracked a pair of home runs Tuesday as Rich Plan won its sixth straight game, 15-2 over Rinker Materials, in Sanford Pee Wee League action at Chase Park.

Rich Plan, 6-0, has a two-game lead over Kokomo Tools while Rinker dropped to 0-6 with the loss.

The only hit Hunt allowed was a single by Willie Williams with one out in the third inning. Hunt struck out six and walked eight.

Byrd smashed a solo homer in the second inning then unloaded a two-run shot in the third. Lloyd Dixon also homered for Rich Plan.

KOKOMO DOWNS SHELL

Four-run outbursts in the second and third innings carried Kokomo Tools to a 14-9 victory over Leonard Shell in Tuesday's second game at Chase Park.

Kokomo, 4-2, remained in second place in the league while Leonard Shell dropped to 2-4.

Kokomo Tools had seven hits in the game led by Kenny Keys and Joshua Watson with two each. Mikey Hayes came on in relief on the mound for Kokomo in the top of the second and allowed just two runs on no hits the rest of the way.

Leonard Shell scored seven times in the top of the first with Ernest Weststone's three-run homer and Ty Washington's two-run double leading the way.

Bird's Style Disrupts 'D'

BOSTON (UPI) — A chart of Larry Bird's play in the recent Boston Celtic playoff sweep of the Milwaukee Bucks shows the NBA star has some definite tendencies that would allow a team to plan a concerted defense against him.

There are, say coaches and players who have studied him, only two problems: 1. Bird is one of the game's most changeable technicians, seldom, if ever, sliding into one style of play long enough for it to become a bad habit. 2. His ability to improvise by calling upon a wide-array of different "moves" makes any well-planned defense futile.

In the first two playoff games against the Bucks, Bird showed a pronounced preference for getting the ball about halfway down the right side of the lane, four feet away from the point.

In Game 1, he set up to the right of the lane and received the ball at the same spot 21 times. In Game 2, the ball was passed to him there nine times out of the 15 times he received it inside the three-point arc when the Celtics were running a set offense.

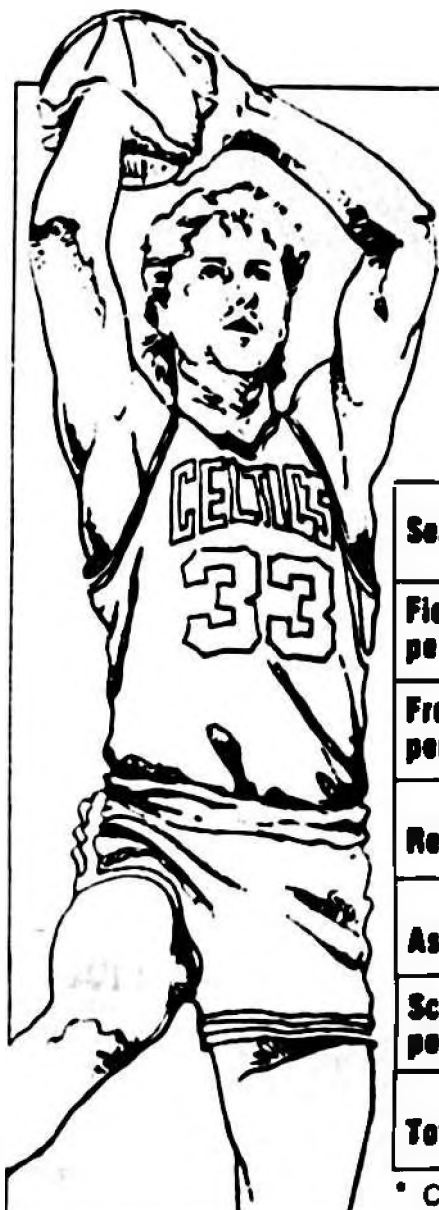

But, says Celtics' assistant coach Chris Ford, once Bird's his favorite spot has been located by the opposition, they still face a player with a frustrating assortment of options.

"From there Larry can drive, throw the left-handed running hook, pass, hit a step-back or move out for a three-pointer," said Ford. "He has so much in his arsenal that you can't play for one shot or move."

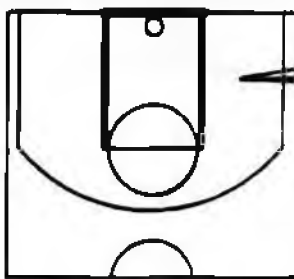

Bird's offense starts from there with one of two positions: posting up the defender with his back to the basket while waiting for his man to commit himself, or turning sideways with the ball off his left hip, putting his right shoulder into the defender's chest.

Ford warned that no opponent should depend upon Bird's "habits," for they are always being reformed.

"Most players have one spot they favor, but for Larry the whole floor is his favorite spot," said Ford. "Now that he's added

Boston Celtics Star Larry Bird

During the playoffs, the Celtics have shown a tendency to give Bird the ball at this spot on the court. From there, Bird sets up his shots at will.

the three-pointer to his regular repertoire, it's even tougher on the guy playing him."

Celtics coach K.C. Jones, who played with Boston in the 1950s and 1960s with the Bill Russell championship teams, said Bird has simply gathered his sport's best weapons and adapted them to his own purposes.

"The moves come from the earlier players. The Jerry West and Elgin Baylor would invent something and the next players who come along, like Magic (Johnson) or Larry, put that into their bag then come up with an improvement on it," he said.

"An example of what he can do so well is read the defense and react to an obstacle, so he has more than just one or two options," Jones explained.

"I don't try to imitate anybody," said Bird. "I'm limited in the things I can do. It would be impossible for me to do some of the things Michael Jordan does. I just can't do them."

During Bird's seven years in the league, defenses have adapted to his moves and initial preferences, so the Celtics star has, in turn, adjusted his game.

"The defense is dictating that that is where he can get a good shot," explained teammate Scott Wedman. "Two years ago, Larry wasn't setting up at that spot much at all, he was using his stepback shot and outside shot. But the defenses learned how to shut him down a bit so he just went somewhere else where he could be effective."

"A lot of players are pretty limited in what they can do and where they can score from. I wouldn't consider Larry a shooter but a scorer, because he can score from anywhere on the court," he said.

A crucial element of this success is Bird's faking ability, Wedman explained.

"Larry doesn't have the fastest release, but the number of fakes is what's amazing. On any one play, Larry might fake three or four times," said the reserve forward. "A fake is a very hard thing not to honor, because you don't know which one is the fake."

"Sometimes he might skip the fake and take the shot on the first move. Then the next time he may fake once or twice or three times. And, the closer you get to the basket the more effective the fake is, because people are more anxious to stop you," said Wedman.

Lions, Howell Join Seminole For Jamboree

By Scott Sander
Special To The Herald

With an intrasquad game tucked under their belts, the Seminole, Oviedo and Lake Howell football teams will join DeLand for the conclusion of Spring Football practice with a four-quarter jamboree Thursday at Seminole High School.

Tickets are $2 in advance and can be purchased at all the high schools. The tickets are $2.50 at the game. FACA, FHSAA and faculty passes will be honored. Cheerleaders in uniform also get in free.

The first period will pit Oviedo against DeLand at 7:30 p.m. Seminole and Lake Howell will battle in the second quarter. The losers meet in the third quarter and the winners come back for the fourth quarter. In the event of a tie, the tiebreaker system will be used.

Seminole's Dave Mosure, Oviedo's Jack Blanton and Lake Howell's Mike Bisceglia were all pleased with the results of their intrasquad games. Each said his team is looking forward to hitting someone other than themselves Thursday night.

"At Sanford Mosure, who begins his second season this fall, is still trying to solve his quarterback problem. "I'll announce a starter during pregame warm-ups," Mosure said. "Both Herb Hillery and Jerry Blankenship have done well in different areas. They are very close in talent and it will be a tough decision as to who will start."

The quarterback problem appeared when Jeff Blake suffered a broken leg and arm in a motorcycle accident on May 4. Blake, who possesses a rifle arm and good saavy, will miss the 1986 season due to the compound fracture of the leg.

Football

Mosure said that he was happy with his defense and offense last Friday. "In the first half our defense stole the show," he said. "But in the second half our offense came alive. We played a little longer than we originally planned, too, but I think that it helped us in the long run."

On offense Mosure was impressed with running back Ed Banks. "Ed showed a lot of strength on the short yardage plays," Mosure said. "He did a great job blocking and some times people overlook the blocking."

Defensively, Mosure was happy with the way that linebackers Earnie Lewis and Steve Warren played. "They did a real fine job," Mosure said. "Hopefully they will keep it up." The Seminoles lost the services of running back Jerod Jones for the remainder of spring due to a broken lower fibula. "He took a late hit," Mosure said. "It was a really unfortunate situation."

Mosure said the 'Noles are eagerly anticipating the jamboree. "They can't wait to play," he said. "The jamboree is a lot of fun. There is a good flavor of excitement in the air."

Mosure said that the Seminoles will stick to the basics. "We won't do anything fancy," Mosure said. "We will run what we have been running all spring."

"We have limited our hitting all spring," Mosure added. "We are looking forward to the jamboree tremendously."

At Oviedo, Blanton said that his team is also anxiously awaiting the jamboree. "We are

Celtics Are Wary Of Game 2 Slump

BOSTON (UPI) — One year ago, the Boston Celtics slumped badly after opening the NBA Finals with a Memorial Day Massacre. They have not forgotten.

As the Celtics looked ahead to Thursday's Game 2 of the championship series against Houston, they also looked back at the lessons of last year. Boston thrashed the Los Angeles Lakers 148-114 in the series opener, then lost four of the next five games, including Game 2 at Boston Garden, thereby surrendering the home-court advantage.

"I don't think we realized how important our second game with LA was," said Larry Bird after practice Tuesday. "You could just sense it didn't mean to us what it should have. There was a letdown."

"Everyone remembers how great we played in the opening game last year," said Danny Ainge. "And we went downhill from there. We didn't win the championship last year, and that's the reason we won't be overconfident. We're not going to be beaten by a team that wants it more."

Teammate Robert Reid put it more bluntly.

"We were lazy," Reid said of the Rockets' play in Monday's 112-100 loss. "We gave those guys the open shots. We didn't have that hustle we did against LA (Lakers, in the Western Conference final)."

While the Rockets search for their desire, they can also look for the right defense.

The Rockets' one-on-one approach in the first half resulted in Boston's big men scoring 48 of the team's 61 points. A halftime switch to double-teaming the Celtics' front line resulted in the guards scoring 24 of Boston's next 32 points.

"They can't do just one thing to stop us," said Ainge. "This will be a series of adjustments, and a lot of adjustments will be made out there in Game 2. It's just a matter of reading what's available, and we're geared to taking the best shot available."

Crowded Finish

It isn't often that more than two greyhounds are in a photo-finish picture for the win. During a Grade C race at Casselberry's Seminole Greyhound Park recently, five greyhounds made a mad dash for the finish line. River Julie (No. 8), of the Dick Andrews Kennel, just did nip No. 4 She's An Oily for first place. Wydie Eeyleyio (No. 3), Day Is Done (No. 6) and For The Gipper (No. 1) were next in line. The Seminole Greyhound Park has racing nightly at 7:45.

Cleanup Crews To Have Indy Ready For Saturday

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Cleanup crews working under deadline pressure say they expect to have the Indianapolis Motor Speedway ready by Saturday for the third attempt to start the Indianapolis 500.

More than 200 people began sanitation work under sunny skies and warm temperatures Tuesday. But the nice weather arrived too late for Speedway officials, who decided late Monday to postpone the race for a second time until Saturday because of bleak weather forecasts.

The National Weather Service predicts a chance of thunderstorms over the southern half of Indiana early Saturday, with clearing through the rest of the weekend.

The decision to wait until the weekend broke a Speedway tradition of holding the race on the next available day, ABC, which had planned to revert to its format of televising taped-delayed highlight coverage, now is scheduled to make the first live Indianapolis 500 television broadcast on Saturday.

Speedway officials said many of the more than 300,000 ticket holders would be able to make the race on a weekend, but not during a regular work day.

Early Tuesday, Speedway chief steward Tom Blinford said a special 30-minute "yellow flag" practice session will start at 9 a.m. Friday. Speeds will be controlled during the session, but Blinford would not say what limits would be placed on the drivers.

The special session is to be the first track time for cars since Thursday, when a four-car crash cut deeply into the final scheduled practice session.

Although the race was postponed Sunday and Monday, hundreds of thousands of people packed the Speedway, leaving bottles, cans and boxes strewn across all areas of the mud-covered infield and rain-soaked bleachers.

Last year, workers removed about 2,000 cubic yards of garbage, not counting several sofas, refrigerators and cars, including one burned vehicle. It took about 10 days.

Noah's Bid To Repeat Has Rough Start

PARIS (UPI) — Yannick Noah's bid to repeat his 1983 French Open championship got off to a rough start Tuesday.

The local hero struggled through sun and rain for almost four hours before pulling out a heart-stopping five-set victory in an opening-round match. The fourth seed squandered one match point in the fourth set and another in the fifth before capitalizing on his 16th ace to stop fellow Frenchman Tarik Benhabiles, 6-3, 6-4, 6-7, 6-7, 6-4.

Benhabiles, who won the tie-breakers by scores of 7-3 and 10-8, was limping slightly in the final two sets, but said later it was caused by nervousness, not cramps.

"I didn't really expect it, but he played some great returns, some great passing shots," said Noah, the 1983 French champion. "I never knew where he was going to pass me. I think he played really well."

The match started in warm sunshine and continued for 3 hours and 47 minutes into the cool night air, with light rain falling at the end. In another match that ended at 9:15 p.m. (3:15 p.m. EDT), defending champion Mats Wilander defeated Ricardo Acuna, 6-0, 4-6, 6-1, 6-1.

Much earlier in the day, Martina Navratilova, the No. 1 women's seed, played very well in beating Italian Sandra Cecchini, 6-3, 6-3. Cecchini, who lost to Navratilova on the same court in last year's quarterfinals, surprised the American left-hander with five aces in the second set, three in one game.

Three seeded players, including No. 6 Joakim Nystrom, were eliminated on the second day of this Grand Slam championship, and another, No. 15 Jimmy Arias, withdrew because of a sprained right ankle.

Arias was one of two American men to be seeded here, and said if he had tried to play he could have put himself out of action for three months.

Nystrom, claiming he was very tired, was knocked out by 31-year-old Australian Paul McNamee, 1-6, 6-3.

Tennis

6-2, 6-0, and said he was looking forward to two weeks of rest.

The other seeds to lose were No. 16 Heinz Gunthardt and Anne White, seeded 15th among the women. Gunthardt bowed to Damir Keretic, 4-6, 6-3, 4-6, 7-6 (9-7), 8-6, and White fell easily to Laura Gildemeister, 6-1, 6-3.

Two other seeds barely escaped opening-round defeats as No. 11 Martin Jaitte overhauled Ronald Agenor, 6-1, 3-6, 0-6, 6-2, 6-4, and No. 14 Emilio Sanchez pulled out a 1-6, 2-6, 6-2, 6-1, 6-1 decision over American Todd Witsken.

Adding further to the delight of French fans were victories by eighth seed Henri Leconte and No. 10 Thierry Tulasne. Leconte had little trouble with David De Miguel, 6-3, 6-1, 6-3, and Tulasne overcame Francesco Cancellotti, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4.

Other seeds to win were No. 7 Anders Jarryd and No. 9 Anders Gomez. Jarryd beat Bud Schultz, 6-1, 6-3, 6-1, and Gomez topped Canadian Glenn Michibata, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Joining Navratilova in the second round for the women were No. 4 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, No. 5 Hana Mandlikova, No. 7 Kathy Rinaldi, No. 8 Manuela Maleeva, No. 10 Zina Garrison, No. 14 Andrea Temesvari and No. 16 Terry Phelps.

Among them, Mandlikova and Temesvari were extended to three sets, Mandlikova beating Sabrina Golea, 6-7 (5-7), 6-3, 6-3, and Temesvari defeating Christiane Jolissaint, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4. Mandlikova, winner here in 1981, rallied from 1-5 in the opening set to win four games in a row, but then dropped the tie-breaker.

In the fourth set tie-break between Noah and Benhabiles, no more than a point ever separated the two and Noah had match point at 7-6. Benhabiles saved with a backhand volley, and evened the match on his third set point when a diving Noah was unable to reach a crisp backhand volley.

With the Center Court crowd loudly urging on both players, Noah broke in the third game of the decisive set, gave it back immediately, then broke again in the fifth, this time nursing his edge.

"I'm sad I lost," said Benhabiles, who had 11 aces. Benhabiles hurt himself, though, with nine double faults to three for Noah.

NOTEBOOK

French Open Notebook
PARIS (UPI) — Paul McNamee said his surprising victory over sixth seeded Joakim Nystrom Tuesday at the French Open was not as pleasing as his upset of John McEnroe six years ago. "McEnroe was a bigger win, he was No. 2 in the world," McNamee said of that 1980 victory in a third round match that included four tie break sets. The 31-year-old Australian overcame Nystrom, 1-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-0, in their opening round match and said, "Anytime you beat a highly seeded player in a Grand Slam it's notable, I'm really happy to be competitive in the Grand Slams." McNamee underwent emergency kidney surgery last Oct. 1 and was sidelined five months before returning for a satellite tournament. He said he went into Tuesday's match "reasonably confident" with a plan to mix up his game.

TENNIS ANYONE?

Bayhead Moves: Anderson Goes, Pelletier Arrives

Bayhead Racket Club has a new pro. After a year or so with the club, top-flight teaching pro, Tim Anderson has decided to get out of the sun and pursue another profession.

Tim will leave the pro tennis field after spending most of his life on the courts and is going into real estate.

Those of us at Bayhead wish Tim and wife Joy and the little one all the best in the future, knowing Tim he will do well in whatever he does.

Bayhead owners do not let much grass grow under their feet, though. They are a motivated bunch of go-getters so naturally they have already hired a new pro.

By the way they seem to have really hired a good one. They had plenty of choices because I understand at least 20 pros in the area expressed interest in the position. They had many outstanding people to choose from and their No. 1 selection and the new pro at Bayhead is a 23-year-old, native of Tennessee named Steve Pelletier.

Steve is a graduate of Bartlett High School in Memphis. He graduated in 1980 and was an outstanding high school player. He competed in national events as a 16 and under competitor and as an 18 under player. He was highly ranked in the Souths as both a 16 under player and 18 under player.

Steve competed in professional U.S.T.A. satellite events from 1981 to 1983. His background and record as a player are outstanding and in 1985 even achieved the lofty ranking of No. 5 in men's tennis in the South.

As impressive as Steve's playing record is his experience as a tennis teacher is just as good. From 1985 to present Steve has been an assistant at Rosemont Country Club in Orlando and the Mission Inn Golf and Tennis Resort.

His duties included, teaching summer camps, working with women's tennis, teaching junior academy and of course teaching private tennis lessons.

Steve has also been an assistant pro at the Lighthouse Racket and Yacht Club in Lighthouse Point and the Lighthouse Point City courts. Steve also was an assistant pro at Crystal Lake County club in Pompano Beach.

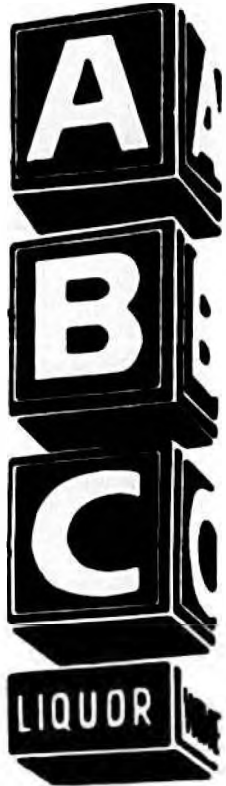

In getting Steve Pelletier as its new pro, Bayhead gets a very experienced player, (perhaps the best player in the Orlando area) on innovative pro and a very enthusiastic teacher of private lessons.

It is the wish and hope of this writer that things go well for Steve and for Bayhead in this new venture. Bayhead needs a pro who will stay with them a few years. One who will give some stability to the programs and have all provide some leadership for the young players at the club. Bayhead is going to grow (with all the new people moving into the area) and has a chance to develop into one of the finest tennis clubs in Central Florida. Good luck Steve and Bayhead in the months and years to come.

Cook Of The Week

He Calls Himself A Typical 'Redneck' And His Recipes For Wild Game Are Different

By Dorothy Greene
Herald Correspondent

When the "call of the wild" summons Kirk May, our Cook of the Week, you can be sure there's going to be something good and something different coming out of the kitchen. "I've been cooking since I was 9 years old," says May, with a laugh, "but I learned HOW to cook as I got older. I guarantee you, my recipes are different." Recalling the first meal he tried to make all by himself, Kirk says, "My mother was working, so I thought I'd make supper for her. I cooked some fried chicken, mashed potatoes, and biscuits — the whole works, but the biscuits were a flop!"

The son of a Baptist minister, Kirk is the descendant of native Sanfordites and was raised in Sanford from the age of six. "Both my mother and father graduated from Seminole High School and my mother is coming in from Texas this month to attend her 50th class reunion," Kirk says. Kathleen (Adams) Thomas is eagerly looking forward to this special occasion and the opportunity to visit with her former classmates and enjoy a family reunion at the same time. Kirk has a sister, Cindy Holden, who is a professional gospel singer, has her own group and has recently cut a commercial record for a major company.

A 1963 graduate of Seminole High School himself, Kirk recalls "getting on the bus every summer" to go to northwest Florida to work on a cousin's farm. "I also sold newspapers for the Evening Herald and the Florida Times-Union when I was about 12 years old," he says. Calling himself a typical "redneck," hunting and fishing have been a great part of his life, as are his horses, dogs, and "a little farm on the other side of town that we fool with. I call it a farm," says Kirk, "because we have some chickens and a vegetable garden."

Kirk and his wife, Lucy, are both employees of the Amtrak-Auto Train family and can still be called newlyweds in every sense of the word. "We met in October of 1984 and went together for about a year before we got married," says Kirk. "Some friends introduced us at a dinner party at their house," he says. "Actually, it was a blind date." Married in September of 1985, Kirk acquired a ready-made family with Lucy's two children, Jeff, 15, and precocious little Katie, 6 years old.

Kirk May answers the 'call of the wild'

Kirk, who is a locomotive engineer, presently toils away at the switching yards in Orlando. "We deliver commodities to the people in downtown Orlando," he says. "We're really a railroad family," he exclaims. "My wife's daddy was an engineer on the railroad for 44 years, and her brother was also an engineer."

Relating a little bit of family history, Kirk says, "My grandfather on my daddy's side was raised by Indians. His family was killed by a hostile Indian tribe, and he was raised by a Cherokee chief, who put him through college. Then, when he became of age, about 21, he sent for a 'mail-order' bride, from Arizona. I believe, and got my grandma. They rode a covered wagon from out West and settled in Winter

Park."

Most activities at the May household are family-oriented and always include the children. "We hunt and fish and ride horses," says Mr. May. "We like to hunt deer, turkey, squirrel and we fish for anything that's edible. We have a lot of fish fries. A beat buddy of mine, Sam Brown, has a hunting camp and we spend a lot of time out there. We save up all our fish and then get everybody together and go out there and have a big fish fry. The kids go with us, wherever we go, and they enjoy it. You mention deer camp to Katie, and she gets her boots out."

Lucky Lucy says, "What I like is that old Kirk is one of these men who will come in and start helping you cook. He won't just sit in the living room while you're in the kitchen doing it all. Most of the time I'm his helper. He's good about helping on weekends. His line is, 'Hey, Babe, what do you want to eat today?'" Kirk confesses that he's not into grocery shopping, and says "as long as somebody does the shopping, I'll do the cooking."

Many of Kirk May's recipes are done to taste and he admits that his measurements are helter-skelter depending on what he's cooking. And while not too many homemakers have a raccoon or two hanging around in the freezer, Kirk assures us that substitutions can be made, although the finished product might not be quite the same. For all the game-hunting fans out there who may now know exactly what to do with their catch of the day, give Kirk May's easy, down-home recipes a try.

Listed below are some of the May family favorites:

WILD DUCK

6 ducks or 6 Cornish hens
Make a marinade out of 1 quart white wine, 1 quart orange juice, and 1 box of bay leaves. Cut up a large onion and add to marinade. Place ducks in marinade and refrigerate for 24 hours, occasionally turning ducks in sauce. After 24 hours, rinse ducks thoroughly. Stuff ducks with 2 boxes of stuffing mix, following package instructions. Place a cube of butter inside each cavity before stuffing. Roast ducks at 350° for 1½ hours, basting occasionally with butter.

Wild Rice accompaniment:

Cook two boxes of wild rice. After ducks have cooked for 1½ hours, take wild rice and place around ducks in pan. Pour 3 cans of cream of mushroom soup on top of rice. Return to oven for 30 more minutes before serving.

RACCOON HASH

Here you may substitute leftover roast beef or possibly corned beef.

After raccoon has been dressed, parboil until meat starts to come off bones. Remove meat from bones, strain, and let cool. Next, prepare three pounds new potatoes, sliced thin and two large, sweet onions, sliced. Fry onions and potatoes in ½ stick of butter. Take 'coon meat and stir into pan with potatoes. Add salt and pepper to taste. Serves 6.

Seminole Students Honored At Disney

Three outstanding students from Seminole county were specially honored at the third annual "Dreamers and Doers" awards ceremonies conducted by Walt Disney World.

The students honored are, Jeffrey W. Hall of English Estates Elementary, Anne Downs of Milwee Middle, and Scarlet Marie Harwell of Lyman High.

They are among 116 students statewide who were honored for exemplifying the 4 C's that Walt Disney felt were necessary to fulfill dreams. Students were chosen for displaying courage, curiosity, confidence and constancy during academic and extracurricular activities.

Guest speaker Malcom-Jamal Warner, who stars as Theo on "The Crosby Show," declared during the ceremonies that the dreams of Walt Disney "continue today with each of these kids, and they will discover that dreaming is only half the fun."

The "Dreamers and Doers" program which began two years ago in Orange, Osceola and Seminole counties was extended this year to include outstanding students and teachers from throughout Florida.

This year's outstanding teacher award went to Candice Parker of St. Cloud High School in Osceola County.

Microwave Magic

Blanching With A Microwave Can Be Quick And Easy

There seems to be a growing interest in blanching of vegetables, especially corn, using the microwave. For those of you with small gardens, this can be a real time saver. Since garden vegetables do not ripen at the same time, smaller quantities will blanch easily and quickly with a microwave. When you have a larger batch of produce to freeze you'll probably prefer conventional blanching methods.

BLANCHING VEGETABLES

1. Prepare vegetables as you would for cooking.
2. Measure amount to be blanched and place in glass casserole.
3. Add water as directed.
4. Cover casserole.
5. Microwave as directed on the following chart. Use 100% power. These timings are for a 600-700 watt microwave oven.
6. Stir about halfway through cooking time.
7. Let vegetables stand in covered casserole 1 minute.
8. Empty vegetables into ice water to stop further cooking immediately. Once the vegetable feels chilled, spread on paper toweling to absorb excess moisture.
9. Package in freezer containers or freezer bags. Seal, label and freeze quickly.

To have the highest quality frozen vegetables: pick and select vegetables of top quality blanch and preserve immediately. Be accurate with amounts and timings, have plenty of ice available. Allow vegetables to freeze quickly by placing single layers on the freezer shelves in the coldest area of the freezer. Keep the temperature inside the freezer at 0°F or below.

Now is the time to enjoy some fresh Zellwood corn and at the peak of the season remember to put some in the freezer to enjoy in August and September. The fall corn crop from Zellwood will be available again in October.

If carrots happen to be good producers in your garden and you have some to freeze, you may enjoy this recipe for their use.

CASHEW CARROTS

- 2 cups frozen, sliced carrots
 - 1 Tbls. butter or margarine
 - 1 Tbls. brown sugar
 - Fresh parsley, snapped
 - 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
 - 2 Tbls. coarsely chopped cashews
- Place carrots in 1 quart casserole. Cover with lid. Microwave on 100% power 5-6 minutes or until tender crisp, stirring once. Drain. Add butter, brown sugar, parsley, and nutmeg. Cover. Microwave on 100% power 1-1 1/2 minutes or until butter is melted. Stir to coat evenly. Sprinkle with cashews.
- Change the appearance and the flavor of vegetables with herbs and cheese.

CORN ITALIANO

- 2 cups frozen cut corn
- 2 Tbls. butter or margarine

Food for Thought

Super simple and simply delicious is frozen banana puree, a dessert that's naturally sweet. Peel ripe bananas, cut into quarters, and freeze well. Puree in blender and top with berries for contrast. (One banana per person makes a generous serving.)

Iceberg lettuce will stay fresh longer if you remove the core. Turn core side up and press down hard on the "stem", then twist it out.

Need a cocktail spread in a hurry? Blend a small package of cream cheese with a small can of crabmeat, drained, and so much cocktail sauce as makes you happy. Serve with crackers.

You can "ripen" an avocado in your microwave oven. Pierce skin with a fork and microwave it on high for 1 to 2 minutes.

Americans are eating more fresh vegetables—100 pounds per person per year. That's because more and better produce is available today than ever before.

Sandwich Time Is Microwave Time

By Aileen Claire

Use your microwave to put the final touches on special sandwiches, such as a toasted cheese-pickle sandwich or hot croissant with cheese, ham, egg, raisins and pickle.

They'll be piping hot to go with a soup and salad for lunches.

TOASTED CHEESE-PICKLE SANDWICHES:

- 8 slices pumpernickel bread
- 3 tablespoons mustard
- 4 slices cooked ham
- 1/3 cup sweet fresh cucumber pickles
- 4 slices Swiss cheese

MICROWAVE METHOD: Toast bread. Spread 4 slices of bread with mustard. Add pickles and one slice each of ham and cheese. Top with remaining bread. Place on paper towel. Cover with second paper towel. Microwave on High for 2 to 3 minutes or until cheese is melted.

CONVENTIONAL METHOD: Prepare sandwiches as directed above. In shallow bowl, beat together 2 eggs and 1/4 cup milk. Dip sandwiches into egg mixture to coat both sides. Place on greased baking sheet. Bake 5 minutes; turn and bake 5 minutes longer or until toasted. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 4 sandwiches.

- 1 hard-cooked egg
- 1/2 cup chopped spinach
- 1/3 cup diced Swiss cheese

Stir in mayonnaise until evenly blended. Spoon mixture over bottom halves of croissants. Top with remaining croissant halves. Place on paper towel. Cover with another paper towel. Microwave on High for 2 minutes or until cheese melts. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 4 servings.

Sanora Yard Of The Month

Sanora Homeowners' Association grounds committee has selected the yard of Connie Fowler, 208 McVay Drive, as YARD OF THE MONTH for May. According to Lavelle Thompson, chairperson of the facilities and grounds committee, the house is bordered by juniper with well placed trellis of running roses that seem to interrupt the border in just the right places. "The well kept lawn with its lone birch shade tree makes one take a second look at this attractive setting," Mrs. Thompson says.

Husband Wants Old Marriage Altered So New One Will Fit

DEAR ABBY: I was divorced three years ago, after a six-year marriage. My husband has remarried, and his new wife is a Catholic. My ex-husband and I were both brought up in the Lutheran church.

I heard from him recently; he tells me that in order for his wife to take communion, his marriage to me must be annulled. Is that true?

Abby, I kept my married name for the sake of convenience. If my marriage is annulled, will the legality of all the documents I've signed with my married name be questioned? And how can an annulment be initiated when an individual has already been divorced? I always thought an annulment declared the marriage to be non-existent, and a divorce acknowledges the fact that it existed but is dissolved.

Is this a process that involves only the church, or does it have legal ramifications as well? There are no children involved. My husband is sending me some "forms" to fill out and I need the above questions answered first.

NO NAME OR TOWN DEAR NO NAME: Your ex-husband's Catholic wife cannot go to communion since she married a divorced man — that is why you ex is trying to get his marriage to you annulled.

Unless you had your maiden name restored in the divorce decree, you're entitled to use your married name. There's no way any effective question could be raised about the legality of documents you've signed since your divorce.

As for the annulment and the "forms" your husband is sending you, watch out! Annulment and divorce are entirely different. Inasmuch as you were divorced, there must have been a valid marriage that was dissolved by a divorce decree. A valid marriage cannot be annulled. A final word of advice: Do not sign anything that is not true, and see your lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I seem to be locking horns on the subject of toothpicks.

Is it proper to pick your teeth in public during or after a meal? My husband started picking his teeth at the table while we were in a restaurant. I politely asked him to go to the restroom to pick his teeth, and he became very upset with me.

Personally, I find it very repulsive. I wonder what other diners think? I don't care if you put this in the paper, but please don't use my name.

MILWAUKEE SENTINEL FAN DEAR FAN: Not only is it improper to pick one's teeth in public, it's crude, inconsiderate and a show of bad manners.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for six years and we are very happy. The only thing that ever comes between us is that I never receive gifts from him on special occasions.

Although he can't afford to buy expensive presents, he doesn't understand how much I would like to get at least a card on Christmas, our anniversary and my birthday.

Last Valentine's Day, I bought myself a sexy nightie, had it giftwrapped real nice and I showed it to my bridge club, saying it was from my husband. I know it wasn't honest, but I was ashamed that he didn't even give me a card.

Is there something wrong with me? Or is it him?

ELLIE DEAR ELLIE: Nothing is "wrong" with you or him. But there is something wrong with your communication. Let him know how much it means to you to be remembered — even if you have to remind him as the date grows near. And do it with a sense of humor. For example, one week before your birthday, tape a note up on his bathroom mirror: SEVEN DAYS BEFORE ELLIE'S BIRTHDAY; the next day, ONLY SIX DAYS BEFORE ELLIE'S BIRTHDAY, etc. Get the idea? Good luck.

Special Olympics Support Achieves Halfway Mark

Special Olympics Support (SOS), the supermarket industry campaign to raise money for Florida Special Olympics, has reached the halfway mark of its eight-week program with $55,190 pledged for the state's mentally retarded athletes.

The SOS program will culminate on June 7, on the heels of the state games. They will be held at the University of South Florida in Tampa from May 30 through June 1.

"We thank our supermarket sponsors, our national brands and most of all, Florida's supermarket shoppers for putting us past the halfway mark," said Thomas R. Rice, SOS organizer and president of food broker Budd Mayer Company of Tampa, Inc. It is the second year in which Budd Mayer has organized the supermarket industry program, broadening it this year to 30 counties across central Florida and to 600 stores of nine participating grocery chains.

Also, two high-appeal radio stations, WRBQ-FM (Q-105) in Tampa and WHLY-FM (Y-106) in Orlando, are devoting major portions of their programming to promotions for SOS.

ONION RINGS

1 pound large, sweet onions
2 cups self-rising flour
1 cup yellow cornmeal
3 eggs
1 tablespoon worcestershire sauce
1 cup milk
1/2 cup honey

Peel and slice onions, separating into rings. Mix remaining ingredients until thick and smooth. Set in refrigerator to chill. Dip onion rings in batter and deep fry until golden brown.

DEER RIBS (Venison) FOR THE GRILL

Try the same thing with pork or beef ribs.

Take two large slabs of ribs and set out to reach room temperature. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, garlic, or whatever suits your taste. Cut up potatoes, celery, carrots, onions, bell peppers, or any of your favorite vegetables into small chunks. Place vegetable mixture on one side of ribs, season to taste. Sprinkle with worcestershire sauce. Place remaining side of ribs on top. With twine, sew ribs together with vegetables inside. Season both outer surfaces of ribs to taste. Wrap stuffed ribs in heavy aluminum foil. IMPORTANT: Do not put on direct heat over open fire. Place on grill away from direct heat and cook slowly for 4 to 6 hours, turning once each hour.

The last hour, open foil and brush on your favorite barbecue sauce. Serve when ready to 6 or more hungry guests.

SWAMP CABBAGE
3 heads swamp cabbage
2 cans corned beef
2 cans whole tomatoes
3 large, sweet onions
Cut and clean cabbage as above. Boil for 20 minutes, then strain. Put tomatoes, onions, and corned beef in a large pot. Add swamp cabbage, and salt, pepper and garlic to taste. Cook about 45 minutes, stirring occasionally. Serves 6-8.

A variation of swamp cabbage: Prepare 3 heads swamp cabbage as above. Take 1 quart of raw oysters, season to taste, and bring to a boil. Add 2 sticks of REAL butter, stirring until melted. Let cool. Add 2 large containers of pure cream, 1 teaspoon baking soda, and 1 cup of milk. Add swamp cabbage and simmer for 30 minutes. Serve with saltine crackers.

Sleepiness Normal But Get It Checked

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 81, a diabetic and get about six hours of sleep a night. I find myself falling asleep quite frequently while reading a newspaper or looking at TV. Is this normal for a man my age?

DEAR READER — To an extent, yes. However, I'm concerned that any treatment you may be getting could be adding to the problem. For example, periods of low blood sugar — caused by insulin shots or diabetes drugs — will often promote sleepiness. I think you probably need to have the status of your diabetes investigated and should try to get eight hours of sleep at night.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My father was a clean person, brushed his teeth, used mints, gargled, and still had the worst breath in the world. Once he started to brush his tongue, he had no more bad breath. Maybe this idea will help some of your readers.

DEAR READER — OK. I can't see that it could do any harm.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am male, 67, and have a full head of nice thick hair. During the last few years, I've lost almost all my underarm and pubic hair. My voice is deeper, too. What's going on?

DEAR READER — You are getting older. Loss of axillary (underarm) and pubic hair are common consequences of aging. (Hooray for the hair on your head!) Aging also causes relaxation of muscles and ligaments in the larynx, resulting in a lower voice for many men. In your 80s and 90s, your voice may tend to become weaker and more high-pitched. That, too, comes with age.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Our daughter, 41, has had a constant brownish discharge from both nipples for about two years. She's had two breast exams and mammograms. Both found nothing wrong. Aren't there additional tests to find out what is causing this?

DEAR READER — Yes. She should probably have her hormone levels checked. The type of discharge you describe is not ordinarily normal.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My problem is that I feel faint and dizzy all the time. Sometime I wake up with the room spinning. All tests have come back negative. I've been to eye doctors, ear doctors, internal-medicine specialists and neurosurgeons. The only thing that shows up is a prolapsed valve. I'm 34. Where do I go from here?

DEAR READER — Patients who have mitral prolapse often suffer from cardiac irregularities that can cause faintness and lightheadedness. Go to a cardiologist, who will probably order a portable 24-hour electrocardiogram.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

The North and South hands of today's deal were held by Lisa and David Berkowitz, the winners of the North American Mixed Pairs Championship in Portland last March. The deal illustrates that partnerships that discuss the myriad situations that can occur in the bidding may have an edge over those who just play "down-the-middle" bridge.

After Lisa's takeout double of West's opening bid and after East's weak jump to two spades, Dave, South, had an easy three-club bid. North now cue-bid three diamonds, a forcing bid that implied a very good hand. David did not care for no-trump and so "raised" the cue-bid, showing the ace. The double by West not only served no purpose but enabled Lisa to redouble, clearly announcing second-round control in diamonds. South could now show his singleton spade. Although Lisa might have believed that the spade cue-bid showed the ace rather than a singleton, she had all the information she needed. She jumped right to six clubs.

There was nothing to the play. With the spade ace onside, declarer could draw two rounds of trumps and claim the contract. It's surprising that their result was a top score in a national championship, but maybe the other pairs in the field knew that David and Lisa wanted a deal that would impress their eight-month-old baby.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY
MAY 20, 1986

Do not waste your time and talents on petty objectives in the year ahead. You're not in an opportune cycle, and it's time to raise your sights.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have been overlooking something that can be of great personal benefit to you. Fortunately, today you'll start seeing it for what it is. Trying to patch up a romance? The Matchmaker set can help you understand what it might take to make the relationship work. Send $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A valued relationship that has not been up to par lately can be mended and put back on track today. Be a Mr. or Ms. Fixit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Something profitable is in the offing for you today, but it will be in an unfamiliar area. Handled with caution and prudence, you stand to gain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your attitude will determine the type of response you get from others today. Good things will happen if you are courteous, thoughtful and cooperative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your sense of accomplishment, as well as your material reward, will be greater today if your efforts are spent on behalf of those you love and not just on yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your executive qualities are exceptionally keen today. People you're involved with would be wise to let you organize things whether it be for fun or business.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Everything comes to those who wait. This will be true of you today if you are negotiating a delicate matter. Keep clinging to your vision of victory.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Use your curiosity constructively today. Start asking in-depth questions about something you and a pal are involved in.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today there are two special areas where providence will provide for you. One is financial, and the other is something confidential.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't let the size or scope of a venture cause you to feel uneasy today. Your luck comes into play when you do something big and important.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In your commercial affairs today be especially cognizant of your hunches and premonitions. The positive ones will be on target.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There must be harmony of purpose in joint ventures today. If everyone involved has the same objective in mind, it will succeed.

Thrills And Comedy Top Summer Films

By Frank Sanello
HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Sylvester Stallone is back this summer, but not as Rambo. This time he is called "Cobra," and he's playing a tough cop who hunts down criminals — instead of commies.

The urban thriller, which co-stars Brigitte Nielsen (Mrs. Stallone) as a fashion model pursued by a serial killer, opened nationwide on May 23.

"Cobra" is typical of this summer's fare, which, as usual, includes lots of science fiction, teen exploitation comedies and urban thrillers.

What's different this season is that not a single dramatic adult film has been slipped in for that shrinking minority of filmgoers who like to think while they watch. Even heavy hitters like Meryl Streep and Robert Redford are starring in comedies.

Industry analyst Art Murphy understands the reasons behind the lightweight fare perennially offered summer moviegoers.

"Even adults go to Disneyland and Disney World," Murphy says. "The kids are on vacation, and so are the parents. Escapist films are released in the summer because that's the mood people are in. Even those who prefer thoughtful films the rest of the year are in the mood for a 'Star Trek' or a 'Superman.'"

While neither Captain Kirk nor the Man of Steel returns this summer, there will be plenty of other science fiction and fantasy adventures.

Hollywood has always had a love affair with remakes and sequels, which benefit from original films' popularity and instant name recognition. This summer the affair continues with a passion. Among the releases:

• "The Fly": a remake of the 1958 cult classic in which an accident turns scientist Jeff Goldblum into a giant insect.

• "Aliens": Actually "Alien II," with Sigourney Weaver returning to battle multiple monsters from outer space.

• "Invaders from Mars": A remake of the 1953 horror fantasy concerning a boy who discovers aliens in his backyard. They turn out not to be from south of the border.

• "Psycho III": Tony Perkins makes his directing debut (and reprises his role as Norman Bates) at the Bates Motel.

• "Poltergeist II": Craig T. Nelson and JoBeth Williams return, and little Carol Anne (Heather O'Rourke) is again abducted by obnoxious spirits.

• "Big Trouble in Little China": John Carpenter's latest concerns ghosts who live underground in Chinatown.

• "Spacecamp": Teenagers end up taking an unscheduled space shuttle voyage.

• "Vamp": Grace Jones is a kinky vampire.

Starring in "Big Trouble in Little China" are, from left, Kim Cantrell, Kurt Russell, Dennis Dun, and Suzee Paltow. It's described as a "mystical, action, adventure, comedy, kung fu, ghost story."

• "The Peanut Butter Solution": A boy has "magic hair."

• "Howard the Duck": George Lucas's latest, based on the Marvel Comics series about a duck from outer space.

• "Solarbabies": A futuristic world is troubled because water is more precious than human life.

• "The Manhattan Project": A high school student builds an atomic bomb — as a science project.

Major dramatic stars are also in the theaters this summer.

Jack Nicholson and Meryl Streep play thinly disguised versions of Watergate reporter Carl Bernstein and his wife Nora Ephron in a comic account of their divorce called "Heartburn" (based on Ephron's book of the same name).

Robert Redford and Debra Winger play dueling attorneys defending Daryl Hannah in "Legal Eagles." In her second film, Whoopi Goldberg returns to her comic roots in "Jumpin' Jack Flash" as a computer operator whose dull life is transformed when she becomes a secret agent. Danny DeVito tries to kill his wife Bette Midler in Disney's "Ruthless People."

Not enough? Ted Danson and Howie Mandel tussle with the Mafia in Blake Edwards' "A Fine Mess." "Armed and Dangerous" stars John Candy and Eugene Levy as incompetent security guards tussling with the Mafia. Rodney Dangerfield is a multimillionaire who returns to college in "Back to School."

Stallone's "Cobra" will have to compete with a full roster of adventure films. Arnold Schwarzenegger plays an ex-FBI agent who infiltrates the Mafia in "Raw Deal." Ralph Macchio and Pat Morita slug it out in Okinawa in "The Karate Kid Part II." Anthony Michael Hall gets involved in murder at a punk rock club in "Out of Bounds." Exiled director Roman Polanski's "Pirates" sets sail with Walter Matthau as head swashbuckler. And rock star Prince plays a pianist who embarks on a romantic adventure on the French Riviera in "Under the Cherry Moon."

College Not Always Job Ticket

LAKE BUENA VISTA (UPI) — Getting a college degree may seem the ticket to a job, but fewer than half of all Americans agree with that opinion, according to a poll of over 6,500 visitors to Walt Disney World.

Of 6,553 adults surveyed at Disney's Epcot Center, only 49 percent say that the best route to a job after high school lies in getting a college education.

Forty-four percent of the respondents say that the best path to employment is learning a trade or skill in demand.

Seven percent of the poll participants were not sure of an answer or gave no opinion.

The higher the respondents' levels of education, the more likely they were to advocate college for job-seekers. Of those who did not complete high school, 54 percent said learning a trade was the best path to employment.

In contrast, 70 percent of college graduates said getting a college degree was the better way to find a job.

Billions Of Dollars, But What Did It Buy

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — Imagine crisp green dollar bills in a pile. Make that pile the size of four tennis courts and as high as the Empire State building. That would equal Latin America's debts.

Now picture trucks edging fender to fender up the Pan-American highway, laden with dollars. The convoy is six miles long. That is the annual interest these countries must pay, come rain or shine.

The figures are huge: $360 billion in loans and $35 billion in annual interest.

But tens of millions of Latin Americans live just as miserably as did their fathers, largely untouched by the benefits of the borrowing they are being called upon to help pay back.

And the very poor missed out all along, even back in the late 1970s when Latin America was borrowing hand over fist.

Where did it all go? Despite enormous social costs, Latin American nations do have something to show for their borrowing spree — besides bills.

Much of the region has changed greatly in recent years. Countries that at the end of World War II were essentially peasant-farmer nations now make cars, refine petroleum, build supertankers, carry out nuclear research and — in the case of Brazil — prepare to launch a satellite on a home-designed rocket within five years.

Millions study at universities and have 20th century worries such as cancer, stress and heart disease. Many will live 10 years longer than their parents.

Most of this progress was paid for by local investment. But there are also factories, subways and irrigation schemes, not to mention MIG fighters and Exocet missiles, that were built or bought on borrowed cash.

Economists disagree about how much the foreign loans contributed to development.

Rio's Winston Frisch said, "At a wild guess, the average Brazilian is twice as well off as he would have been otherwise."

But Paulo Schilling, well to the left of Frisch, said the loans made little difference.

They agreed the loans expanded Brazil's ability to invest. But Schilling said if the country had not borrowed, most of the useful and viable projects would have been undertaken anyway, either as direct commercial investments or with other sources of finance.

Moreover, Schilling argued, the extra investment from foreign loans was a relatively minor factor in helping Brazil grow. "What really made the difference was that basic working wages were held down by the military government and the country grew by exploiting cheap labor," he said.

Peru, in the words of economist Oscar Ugarteche, set about realizing "one of its oldest dreams" by irrigating its Pacific coast desert. Foreign bankers with open checkbooks made it possible.

The farming and hydroelectric scheme, which President Alan Garcia recently slammed as a "swindle," has so far soaked up around $1 billion.

Although the first thorough soil check, years into the project, showed it was inadequate for high-yield agriculture, at least 7,500 of the planned 150,000 hectares are irrigated. It is something next-generation Peruvians can see for their money.

Colombia spent a fair part of its $12 billion debt on rural dams. "Hundreds of small towns now have electricity," presidential adviser Diego Pizano said, although critics argue too much work went to foreign companies, passing up an opportunity to stimulate local industry.

Argentina has little or no development to show for its $50 billion debt.

Brazil, which owes $100 billion, shot its economy into eighth place among free-world nations thanks to huge mining complexes, dams and factories. Many of these now give headaches to their less-efficient American and European competitors.

Brazil backed losers as well. Cows graze along the overgrown embankments of a $3 billion railroad designed to carry iron ore to a giant smelter that was deemed uneconomical before it was finished.

The country is littered with government-run industries that do not pay, jungle highways that go nowhere and luxurious state offices dripping with imported trimmings.

But of all the investments made in Latin America, perhaps none was so dramatic, so effective and as ironic as the quest for oil.

The 1970s explosion in petroleum prices led many countries to borrow heavily, searching out and developing oil fields. Mexico is the prime example, but Venezuela, Peru, Ecuador and Bolivia went into hock on the strength of their supposed underground wealth.

Ten years ago, Mexico ranked 15th among world petroleum producers and owed foreign bankers $20 billion. Now it boasts petroleum reserves to rival many Arab nations and owes $100 billion.

Back in 1978, President Jose Lopez Portillo looked at the way world oil prices went: up and up. He trashed a 2-year-old austerity program and took 60 million Mexicans on a borrowing binge.

In 1981, the peak year, Mexicans signed up for loans at the rate of almost $100 million a day. Finance Minister Jesus Silva Herzog estimated 40 percent of the petroleum industry was built on borrowed money.

Khadafy's Libya

Security Problems And Green, Green, Green

Editor's Note: UPI Paris bureau manager Marie Colvin was in Tripoli during the U.S. bombing raid and remained there for two weeks after the attack. Here are some of her reflections on Libya in the aftermath of its confrontation with the United States.

By Marie Colvin
TRIPOLI, Libya (UPI) — Col. Moammar Khadafy is responsible for the greening of Libya. He calls green the color of his revolution and it is everywhere.

Green national flags line the streets. Car licence plates are green. Crowd control officials at demonstrations wear green scarves instead of identity cards. Green tape wraps the stocks of automatic rifles carried by revolutionary committee members. Green cloth is draped over coffins for burial.

Tree trunks outside Khadafy's house, bombed in the U.S. raid April 15, are painted green. Building cranes at construction sites are green. In the souk, the ancient market, women weave cloth at a huge green loom.

The day after the U.S. raid, workers painted the inside of the main hospital windows to enforce a blackout — and used green paint. Motorists painted headlights green.

Most buildings in drab downtown Tripoli are peeling, but window shutters and gates pulled down over store fronts all are freshly painted green.

The only well-stocked shops in town are those selling Khadafy's "Green Book," a collection of the eclectic political and economic thoughts he calls the "Third Universal Theory." There are shelves and shelves of the books. Most are covered with dust.

On sale in the same stores are green pens inscribed with Khadafy's sometimes obscure slogans. One favorite: "In need freedom is latent."

An upper-class Libyan woman asked a visitor to send a dress from Paris. Colors were discussed. How about green? the visitor asked.

The Libyan wrinkled her nose and groaned.

In what President Reagan portrays as the capital of terrorism there is at first a nagging feeling that something is wrong. Then comes the surprising realization — security is less visible than in most capitals, including Washington. Few uniformed soldiers are on the streets. Checkpoints sprouted in the days after the U.S. raid but quickly disappeared.

Almost none of the marchers in military parades carry guns. No armored vehicles roll between the troops.

Crewcut soldiers appear less interested in speeches at rallies than in flirting with the young women Khadafy put into uniform, to the dismay of traditional parents who prefer their daughters at home.

A visitor can walk through the unguarded gate of the British consul's residence, check the tennis court for signs of activity, then walk up to the door and ring the bell without seeing a soul.

Most embassies have only an unarmored guard at the gate.

Streets are deserted at night. There is virtually no street crime. The only night life is a handful of restaurants, sometimes open, sometimes not. Menus are unheard of and the fare is always the same — Libyan soup and chicken or beef.

The security forces can be astoundingly inefficient.

For days after the U.S. attack, journalists were banned from leaving the hotel. So they sneaked out through the back door, then baffled guards by re-entering through the front.

After several days the leak was discovered and a guard appeared at the back door. He must have misheard his orders — he allowed reporters out but would not let them back in.

Journalists were banned from the port of Sirte to see damage from U.S.-Libya clashes in the Gulf of Sidra. So three hired a cab and drove the 250 miles. A Ministry of Information official then confronted one reporter, saying: "I see you have been to Sirte."

Reporter: "Yes."
 Official: "How did you get there?"
 Reporter: "I walked up to the corner and took a taxi."

(Pause.)
 Official: "I shake your hand."

But beyond this official's apparent esteem for a victory over the security system, there is a more sinister side.

After the raid, young men wearing jeans and carrying guns appeared outside the Al Kabir hotel, the base for foreign journalists. They were almost certainly members of revolutionary committee Khadafy has set up as a parallel authority to the government.

The young men returned only stony glances to questions about their identity. Ministry of Information officials appeared frightened of them. They vanished several days later.

Libyan hospitality is a surprise to foreigners made jittery by Khadafy's "mad dog" reputation.

"You kind of expect a terrorist on every corner," said one first-time visitor. It isn't like that.

Officials at Tripoli International Airport noticed an American waiting more than an hour for clearance and brought over mint tea on a pewter tray. It was served under the anti-American posters that cover the walls.

At the Tripoli post office the postmaster leafed through stamps featuring Khadafy in his colorful wardrobe. He poured a cup of tea from his thermos and handed it through the grill to his American customer with a wink, joking, "Have some whiskey." Alcohol is forbidden by Khadafy's strict interpretation of the Koran.

At a military rally in a stadium, rows of uniformed recruits chanted "Down, down, USA" as a group of Westerners walked in front of the stands. Then they laughed and waved. Next time around the soldiers threw the foreigners a few oranges.

A coppermith in the souk invited an American visitor into his workshop and took special pains to demonstrate welding a handle onto a pot. At another shop, copper pot in hand, the visitor was stopped by a jeweler who called in a woman from the narrow street. Her traditional robe covered her head and was held in her teeth so that only her dark mysterious eyes showed.

After consultations, the jeweler explained the pot needed "finishing" if it was to be used for cooking. The visitor left it at the shop.

The next day the jeweler had lined it with silvery tin. Asked the price, he said, "You are American? No, no money. Welcome."

Even after the bombing, Westerners walked the streets of the capital without encountering hostility. Libyans were shaken: many shuttered their homes and left to stay with friends in the countryside.

"You don't understand," one said. "We are Libyans. We are not used to being bombed. Maybe in our grandparents time during the war, but that was long ago."

For Libyans, news is state-controlled — and distorted.

Television anchors read from a stack of papers, turning the pages one by one, speaking in flat voices and rarely looking up. The set is always the same — a wall map of the world. But there are subtle messages.

At the beginning of April, the map's continents were white except for Egypt, colored black because of its pact with Israel. Libya, of course, was green.

After the raid, the United States, Britain and Northern Ireland turned black.

Announcers use a shorthand peculiar to Libya. After the attack they began referring to Britain's prime minister as "child-killer Thatcher." Then the description became simpler, leading to news items that included: "Opposition leader Neil Kinnock criticized the child-killer today."

Reagan speaks from the "Black House," as opposed to the White House.

The average Libyan takes it all with a grain of salt. Most admit they listen to the BBC World Service, easily picked up in English or Arabic. They constantly ask foreigners for their opinions of outside events.

Diplomats throw in the whole salt shaker. Asked about a Khadafy statement, one senior West European diplomat said matter-of-factly:

"Half of what he says is true and half is untrue. I do not know which half this is."

Who Shot Mollie Mercedes?

PALM BEACH (UPI) — Who shot Mollie Mercedes, the tattered tabby that washed ashore aboard a Venezuelan freighter and made a luxurious home on an island oasis?

Lilly and Enrique Rousseau will pay $500 to find out.

"Wretched. Whoever did this is a fiend," said Lilly Rousseau.

The Rousseaus were given the gray tabby by their friend, socialite Mollie Wilmut. She found the cat aboard a rusty freighter, Mercedes 1, which washed onto her beachfront and crashed into her seawall during a 1984 Thanksgiving Day storm.

The Rousseaus named the new family member Mollie Mercedes, and introduced her to the good life.

"It was a real rags-to-riches story," Wilmut said.

Two weeks ago — after more than a year of weekly combings, lizard-chasing and life in splendor at the Rousseau's estate — Mollie Mercedes was found in a driveway with a severed spine and six BB pellets in her skull.

"Right smack in its poor, little head," Lilly Rousseau said. A veterinarian put the tabby to sleep.

"She was a wonderful little cat," said Rousseau, the ex-wife of Peter Pulitzer and a dress designer. "It was the dearest."

It took salvors more than three months to free the Mercedes 1 from Wilmut's sand. The crew jumped ship immediately and had no use for the 6-month-old cat. Wilmut could not take the cat in.

"It was sitting there looking so rejected with those pirates," Lilly Rousseau said.

"It's a terrible tragedy," Wilmut said.

Coastal Piloting Course Offered

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla 41 will sponsor a coastal piloting course.

The objective of the course is to provide the recreational boater with basic navigational skills. This includes reading a chart, determining your position, plotting a course and more.

Proof of successful completion of either the Coast Guard Aux. basic boating and skills course, or the United States Power Squadron's safe boating course is required.

A certificate of completion will be issued to those who successfully complete all course requirements.

Registration is scheduled for June 2 at 7:30 p.m. at the Seminole County Agriculture Center, Junior College Road, Sanford. The classes meet Monday and Thursday evenings from 7:30-9:30 with the final test June 26. Registration is limited.

Cost of $12 per student is for materials only.

More information may be obtained by calling 323-6126 or 323-9416.

Ballot-Count Equipment Tests Set

Testing of ballot counting equipment in preparation for the upcoming Metropolitan Transportation Authority special referendum election will be held 3:30 p.m. Friday in the county supervisor of elections office, county services building.

Members of the public and local political parties are invited to attend the session, at which the logical and accuracy test for automatic ballot tabulating equipment will be administered.

Elections Supervisor Sandra Gourd said the equipment, which counts ballots following the closing of the polls, is tested to make sure it is operating properly prior to election day.

The transportation referendum is slated for June 3.
