Area city managers meet, discuss adult entertainment codes

By NICK PFEIFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Lake Mary City Manager John Litton said he has some questions concerning the urgency officials in surrounding cities seem to feel about passing adult entertainment regulations.

Litton said he intends to broach the subject at a meeting this morning of area city managers and County Manager Ron Rabun.

The Managers' Roundtable meetings are held on a quarterly basis to allow managers an opportunity to discuss various problems and needs in the areas they serve.

Litton commented early this morning that he believes Lake Mary has already established sufficient ordinances to deal with adult entertainment. "But with Longwood looking into it, and Sanford already hard at work on an ordinance," Litton said, "I plan to bring it up at the meeting."

Litton said he intends to ask the various city managers gathered in Altamonte Springs why they see such an urgent need for this emergency action

Longwood OKs emergency law to stop X-rated shops

By SANDRA ELLIOTT

LONGWOOD — After a lengthy discussion Monday night, Longwood City Commissioners unanimously approved an emergency ordinance to temporarily halt the establishment of X-rated businesses in the city.

The ordinance includes a 60-day moratorium on the approval of conditional use, licenses or permits for the operation of adult entertainment establishments, personal service establishments and adult book and novelty stores. The ordinance also defines those businesses.

The emergency ordinance will afford city leaders time to pass an ordinance governing the adult businesses by placing a temporary halt to any new establishments opening. Interim city administrator Gerald Korman advised the commission the city's occupational license for "personal services" is not well defined.

"We need to get a handle on this," Korman warned. "We need to figure out what personal services is."

He noted several cities and Seminole County have passed rules governing adult businesses. If Longwood does not define its policy on such businesses, Korman suggested more of them might locate in the city.

A Longwood business advertising full-body scrubs by attractive female employees for half-hour sessions sparked concern by Mayor Paul Lovestrand a few weeks ago. The service is advertised in the sports section of the Orlando Sentinel and appears to be aimed at men, the mayor said. The business opera-

Ethics complaint resolved

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — A charge of misuse of office against city commissioner Herbert "Whitey" Eckstein was dismissed by the Florida Commission on Ethics last week.

Revealed for the first time this morning, the ethics commission accepted ethics advocate attorney's recommendation there was no reason to believe Eckstein used his position to attempt to influence a city police officer to seek an apology for comments made by city critic Ricky Sheaffer. Sharon Sheaffer, his wife, is a Sanford police officer.

Eckstein had little comment this morning. "Before and throughout this whole ordeal, I have tried to conduct myself as a gentleman," he said. "Now that it's over, I will continue to act as a gentleman by not commenting."

Eckstein has said previously the stress of the complaint was difficult for him to bear and has suffered from "stalker" jeers from school children as he walked to his class at Seminole High School.

Study: Merger of offices may not save county much money

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — A Seminole County consultant told commissioners yesterday the proposed merging of county and school board offices may provide little savings.

"I'm not sure there's a compelling argument either way," said Glenn Ware, of Hansen Lind Meyer. "It's not going to save a lot of space or a lot of money. It's just not there."

"It doesn't look too promising," said commissioner Daryl McLain, who has fought for the consolidated site as a boost to Sanford merchants. City commissioners are unanimous in their support of the plan.

County commissioners and school board members have considered developing a joint administrative center on Lake Monroe so some services could be shared. A preliminary plan unveiled by Ware Monday suggested a school

Local scout leaders agree with court in excluding agnostics

By DORIS DIETRICH
Herald People Editor

SANFORD — A duty to God has been the creed of the Boy Scouts of America since its founding.

The Boy Scouts' exclusion of youngsters who won't acknowledge faith in God survived a Supreme Court challenge Monday.

On the local front, scout leaders, in general, stand behind the decision 100 percent. Mike Kyle, the father of an Eagle Scout, Steve, has been in scouting since he was in the third grade. He has served in every capacity of scouting including Scoutmaster, and is presently assistant Scoutmaster of Troop #34 of the First United Methodist Church in Sanford.

In complete agreement with the ruling, Kyle said, "It is my opinion that those who don't approve of the organization should form their own group." He added, "Our group was founded on faith in God and formed to serve a specific purpose. Those who do not agree with this should go find another group that fits their needs."

Herman Schroeder, of Sanford, who has been in scouting for more than 25 years said he was excited over the Supreme Court's decision. "We're all for it," he said.

The court, rejecting the appeal of an 11-year-old boy from Illinois, let stand a ruling that said a federal law banning bias in public accommodations does not cover the Boy Scouts of America.

The court's action, taken without comment, is not a ruling on the merits of the Scouts' policy, and carries no direct impact for other legal fights over it.

The organization also is defending itself against lawsuits challenging its policy of barring homosexuals.

Mark Welsh's lawsuit was the first of its kind to reach the nation's

Cuban tot rafter dies of seawater effects

MIAMI — A toddler who drank seawater while adrift on a raft for two weeks with his Cuban refugee family died today just hours after being airlifted from the Bahamas to a hospital here, a Cuban-exile group said.

One-year-old Diosnel Reyes suffered from kidney failure after allowing salt water during the 14-day ordeal, said Fernando Rojas, spokesman for the Cuban American National Foundation.

The foundation arranged for Reyes and his 6-year-old cousin, Dalima Cardoso Reyes, to be brought to Miami Children's Hospital for emergency dialysis treatment.

The girl, who is in critical condition, was being flown in from the Bahamas later today, Rojas said.

The U.S. government on Monday granted a petition from the foundation to bring the children in for emergency medical attention.

A Bahamian fishing boat spotted the refugees on Saturday in the southern Bahamas. The group had been at sea after leaving the Cuban city of Moa on rafts in hopes of being picked up at sea. A member of the group died before rescue, Rojas said.

The Cubans were first taken to Nassau, where most were treated for extensive sunburn and dehydration as arrangements were made to bring the children to Miami.

Rock band's name irks tourism officials

MIAMI — Officials are calling for the cancellation of a performance by a rock band which takes its name from the state's recent violence against foreign tourists.

The Dead German Tourist, a rock group from Tampa, is scheduled to play the Hard Rock Cafe Friday. Miami leaders, disturbed by the name following the violent deaths of two visitors from Germany, want them stopped.

"Bad taste," tourism bureau chief Merrett Sterheim said Monday.

"If this is supposed to be a joke, it is a very sick one," said Miami Commissioner J.L. Plummer.

The group, part of a Tampa radio show, has toured the Southeast for several months. The band doesn't sing about Uwe-Wilhelm Rakebrand, who was murdered about a mile from the Hard Rock Cafe last September.

Plummer circulated a memo to city commissioners asking for help "to bring this to an immediate halt." Neither he nor other leaders think they can stop the group in court, but all of them have requested the Hard Rock Cafe to ax the act.

"People shouldn't be so serious about this," said Ross Reback, president of the Ron and Ron Radio Network, where the band originated. "Remember, people thought the Beatles were in bad taste, too. They were named after a bug."

Police: Shooting of broadcaster robbery

MIAMI — The motive in the fatal shooting of a Haitian broadcaster appears to be robbery, and not political as first believed, after police arrested an 18-year-old man and charged him with the crime, authorities said.

Miami police have charged Jean-Jacques Macton with first-degree murder and armed robbery in the death of Dona St. Plite, the third Haitian broadcaster to be gunned down in the streets of this city's Little Haiti neighborhood since 1991.

"Robbery was the motive," said Miami Police spokesman Ray Lang, quoting homicide investigators. Macton was arrested Sunday evening.

St. Plite, an outspoken supporter of democracy for Haiti, was killed in a parking lot outside Miami Edison Middle School the evening of Oct. 24.

St. Plite's death recalled the unsolved 1991 slayings of Jean Claude Charles, an outspoken supporter of deposed Haitian president Jean-Bertrand Aristide, and of Fritz Dor, who along with St. Plite started a weekly radio show in the mid-1980s.

St. Plite was named in anonymous "hit lists" circulating around Little Haiti earlier this fall. Haitians who had criticized police handling of the St. Plite case and the two previous murder cases on Monday praised the arrest.

Judge finalist has dual homes

TAMPA — Ellen Kalmbacher, a finalist for a circuit judgeship in southwest Florida, owns a second home in Tampa but says it is not an issue.

"The only requirement is that the person reside in the circuit by the time she takes office," said Joe North, a Fort Myers lawyer who heads the Judicial Nominating Commission which recommends judge candidates to the governor.

"She moved her residence here a couple years ago," he said.

In 1988, Kalmbacher bought a condominium in Tampa where she is a lawyer with the Holland & Knight firm. She has a homestead exemption on the condo.

After her 1989 marriage, she and her husband Robert Kalmbacher bought a house in Boca Grande, an exclusive Gulf of Mexico island community in the circuit. Each owns half interest in the house valued at about $300,000. Her husband applied for the homestead exemption in Lee County, which is allowable.

Gay rights Opponents file legal challenge to ban proposal

By JACKIE HALLIFAX Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The state Supreme Court should rule against a proposed constitutional amendment banning any law in Florida that protects gays from discrimination, critics say.

The measure not only has fatal technical defects but also strikes at fundamental rights, the opponents told reporters Monday before filing their brief in the high court.

"I'm completely confident that this proposal is brutally unconstitutional," Charlene Carra, a lawyer with the American Civil Liberties Union, said.

The American Family Association of Florida is trying to collect enough signatures to put the proposed constitutional amendment before voters in November 1994. Nearly 430,000 names are needed by mid-August; almost 47,000 signatures have been verified so far.

David Cato, with the American Family Association, said the arguments against the amendment were political, not legal.

"They're great for controversy and they're great for clouding the issue," he said.

The ACLU is one of several groups that joined Floridians Respect Everyone's Equality in challenging the proposed constitutional amendment, which FREE organized to fight. The National Organization for Women, the Public Interest Law Section of the Florida Bar and several other groups also joined in the brief.

The state Supreme Court reviews proposed constitutional measures to determine if the ballot summary clearly describes the amendment and if the measure deals with only one subject. The high court has scheduled oral arguments for the case Jan. 7.

"The court should not wait to void an invalid initiative until an acrimonious divisive campaign has shattered the political structure of Florida," said Jeff Peters, who chairs FREE.

Peters and Carra conceded it would be unusual for the Justices to pass pre-election judgment on the constitutional issues but argued that the problems are so severe in this case it would be warranted.

However, if the court doesn't agree the constitutional flaws merit immediate attention, there are equally damaging technical defects, according to the opponents.

One problem they cite is the scope of the amendment.

She fought prejudice; now seeks office

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Louise Ray used to think her lifetime job was as a mother. When her hemophiliac sons contracted the AIDS virus, she thought she should be an educator on the disease.

Now, she thinks she's meant to be a Florida legislator.

Mrs. Ray, 35, a Democrat, will seek the seat in the Florida House now held by conservative Republican Marvin Couch of Oviedo. She said she wants the job because "you don't just go from being a housewife to being a governor."

Mrs. Ray and her husband, Clifford, have spent years in the public spotlight because of the prejudice and fear that have surrounded the incurable disease. Their oldest son died last December from AIDS.

The three boys were prohibited from attending public schools in DeSoto County in 1987. When a federal court ordered that they be admitted, the Rays' house in Arcadia, was torched by an arsonist.

"The family moved to Sarasota, where they received acceptance and support, and last year relocated to the Orlando area, where Clifford-Ray works as a correctional officer."

The Rays settled a civil rights lawsuit against the school DeSoto school system in 1988 for $1 million. And they received a $1 million settlement with the pharmaceutical companies that sold them the hemophilia medication for their sons.

Mrs. Ray describes herself as a moderate Democrat with modest goals — no tub-thumping policy reforms involving AIDS or other headline-grabbing issues. She supports abortion rights and the death penalty and wants more money for schools and tougher sentences for criminals.

"I think everybody has a job in life," Louise Ray told The Orlando Sentinel for a Monday story.

"I used to think mine was just being a mother. Then I thought it was as an AIDS educator. Now I think it's as a legislator."

Program has modest but positive impact on welfare

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's welfare-to-work program has had modest success in getting people jobs but has not moved large numbers of welfare recipients into the workforce, a report shows.

The results, though, show that government can change people's behavior, said Judith Gueron, president of Manpower Demonstration Research Corp., a New York City-based nonprofit group that conducted the study.

"It's getting people into jobs and it's getting people off welfare," she said Monday of Project Independence. But, she added, many people remain dependent on government assistance.

"This is not a silver bullet (but) it certainly shows a firm foundation for welfare reform," she said.

Project Independence began in 1987, a year before the federal government made such Job Opportunities and Basic Skills training programs mandatory.

President Clinton's plan to reform the nation's welfare system will build on the JOBS program.

"The new results suggest that, as currently funded and operated, JOBS programs alone will not move large numbers of people off welfare and out of poverty," Gueron said.

But Project Independence did have positive short-term effects on the labor market and Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the country's main welfare program, according to the report.

"Project Independence increased first-year employment rates and earnings and reduced first-year AFDC receipt rates and payments," according to the report.

Project Independence requires most welfare recipients to search for work, enroll in a job-search class or take training. People who don't participate can lose benefits but exceptions are made for women with babies and toddlers and those with health problems.

The study followed 18,000 single parents, most of them mothers, in nine counties between July 1990 and August 1991.

After a year of follow-up, just over 64 percent of the parents participating in Project Independence were getting welfare, compared to just under 69 percent of a control group.

The Project Independence parents earned $157 more per person than parents in the control group.

The report cautions against reading too much into the earnings gains and AFDC savings in the first year of follow-up.

"It is too soon to say whether the relatively modest first-year results will translate into larger impacts in the future," the report reads.

Researchers said their evaluation is nationally significant because it evaluates a welfare-to-work program that emphasizes job placement for welfare recipients with children older than 3.

"This report presents the first findings to date on the effectiveness of a mandatory JOBS program for single parents with preschool-age children," the report says.

In a year, the researchers will issue a follow-up report looking at the costs of providing the training, day-care, transportation and other services.

The state is picking up about a third of the cost of the $3.6 million five-year study. The federal government and private grants are making up the rest.

Cops: Cancer victim paid for own slaying

By STAN MILLER
Associated Press Writer

SUMMIT, Ill. — Susan Potempa was so determined to die that she allegedly paid a teen-ager $2,100 to kill her. And when he botched her strangling, police say, she tracked him down and made him finish the job with an electric drill.

"She wanted to end her life because she was ill," Cook County State's Attorney Jack O'Malley said Monday. He said the 50-year-old Mrs. Potempa had breast cancer, but the extent of her illness was not immediately known.

Reginald Williams, who lives a few blocks from the Potempa house in this tidy suburb southwest of Chicago, was jailed on murder charges Monday.

Investigators believe Mrs. Potempa hired the 18-year-old to kill her over the Thanksgiving weekend, when her husband and son would be out of town at a football game.

Williams tried to strangle Mrs. Potempa on Nov. 24 at her home, but she recovered, got into her car and tracked him down to make him finish the job, O'Malley said.

Her husband and son found her dead in the family's garage on Nov. 26.

Mrs. Potempa had been strangled with an electrical cord and beaten over the head with a heavy object, probably an electric drill, police said.

Investigators did not know how Mrs. Potempa met Williams or how long they had been planning the slaying, O'Malley said. There was no indication the woman's family knew of the plot, he said.

Authorities became suspicious of Williams after the unemployed man paid cash for a used car and stereo equipment, Assistant State's Attorney Jim McCarter said.

Police persuaded a friend of Williams to wear a hidden radio transmitter and talk with him about the slaying. He was arrested Saturday after he was heard discussing the killing and the payment, police said.

Neighbors of Mrs. Potempa had trouble believing the police account.

Carol Bonk, the Potempas' neighbor for 12 years, said Mrs. Potempa would push her grandson by in a stroller and stop to talk, and "there was never even a hint of depression."

"Why would a woman go and track somebody down and have herself killed in her garage in such a violent way?" Mrs. Bonk asked. "You'd have to be despondent and depressed and insane — and she wasn't that."

"And she wasn't dying of breast cancer," she added. "Or if she was, she kept that all to herself and didn't let on to family, friends or neighbors."

Partnership between school and community

Schools and the community have begun to see the merits of joining forces to better educate our children.

Yet, learning can not occur in an unsafe environment, whether that be at school, at home or in the neighborhood in between.

Sanford Middle School officials have seen that need and are helping their neighbors create a safer environment.

Most of the students who attend Sanford Middle School live in the Goldboro community and in various housing authority projects to the west of the school.

Although the area has been plagued by crime, many people would like their community to be known for its caring and interest in educating its children.

A Neighborhood Watch program has been organized with the cooperation of the school and area residents.

The group will meet at the school and develop plans to make the school and the neighborhoods safer.

We congratulate the parents, school officials, and other community members for cooperative efforts.

Students who live and learn in safe environments are more successful.

We will all be better off because of their efforts.

Americans are taxed to the limit

A year ago this month, Bill Clinton was bequeathed the presidency by an American electorate concerned about the moribund state of the U.S. economy. As the one-quarter mark of the Clinton presidency approaches, it is hard to see one domestic policy he has put in place that will have a positive effect on American pocketbooks.

In fact, the opposite is far more likely. Clinton inherited an economy that was showing signs of recovery (the nation's gross domestic product grew a healthy 3.8 percent for the fourth quarter of 1992). But rather than stimulating more robust growth, the president pushed through a huge tax-and-spend package that will be a drag on the U.S. economy for years to come.

A tax hike was the very last thing that working folks needed, given the economic climate. The White House argues that the average American family will pay only a few nickels and dimes a day for this or that new tax. But families are already being nickel-and-dimed into a state of virtual poverty.

The president has done his damndest to put last summer's budget battle behind him. He pushed health care reform to the top of the nation's domestic agenda. And, to his credit, he waged a masterful campaign for NAFTA.

But the American people remain preoccupied with the economy.

That's because Americans are worried about their jobs, about their paychecks. Almost every day it seems some major company or another is laying off workers. The ominous thing is that it is not just the money-losing companies that are shedding workers -- the IBMs of the business world. In the 1990s economy, such prosperous companies as Procter & Gamble, General Electric and AT&T also are shrinking their payrolls.

Meanwhile, even the Americans who still have decent jobs find that they are stuck at roughly the same wages they were earning several years ago. This means that their incomes have been eroded by inflation. An empathetic government might have provided working Americans tax relief. Instead, most Americans face even higher federal and state taxes next year.

It is hard to see one domestic policy he has put in place that will have a positive effect on American pocketbooks.

So, then, when the average American family asks itself whether it is better off now, with a self-styled New Democrat in the Oval Office, than it was four years ago -- or even one year ago -- the answer would be a resounding "no." Under Clinton's watch, it has become harder, rather than easier, for the average family to make ends meet.

The president does not understand that the American middle class is strapped to the limit. Any additional tax burden imposed either by Washington or state government, whether it be a nickel-a-gallon federal tax at the fuel pump or a half-cent state sales tax, is a meaningful hit to the average family's finances.

Of course, Clinton hardly bears all of the blame for the economic decline of the American middle class. The trend actually began some four decades ago, when government at all levels began to gobble up an increasing share of the family paycheck. Since the days when Dwight Eisenhower was in the Oval Office, the income tax burden on middle-income families has risen 150 percent, adjusted for inflation.

Government's confiscatory tax policies have taken a toll on the average American family.

SARAH OVERSTREET

When a firm lacks respect for workers

"R-e-a-p-e-c-t." Aretha Franklin sang in one of the most popular songs of the 20th century. "Find out what it means to me..."

Thankfully, tens of thousands of passengers didn't have to find out what the word meant to 21,000 American Airlines flight attendants. The attendants ended their four-day strike a couple of days before we would have jammed airports all over the country, screaming at ticket agents unable to get us onto the planes that we'd counted on to fly us home to spend Thanksgiving with our families.

President Clinton interceded the Monday before Turkey Day, allowing American Airlines President Robert L. Crandall a face-saving way to back down in his post-strike statements. Crandall referred only to his deference to the president's wishes. But you can bet your lost luggage that American Airlines pilots wouldn't have joined American flight attendants in picket lines, nor would Crandall have backpedaled from his promise that

It takes so little to convey the simple sentiment of respect.

"everybody is not coming back to work" after the strike, if there hadn't been a good chance the walkout would have severely crippled the airline. Chalk one up for solidarity.

And just what does r-e-a-p-e-c-t mean to 21,000 flight attendants, 85 percent of whom are women? In an age when labor unions are supposed to have had all the air sucked out of them, and more and more companies are booting full-time workers in favor of part-timers with no benefits, what made them risk their jobs, insurance and retirement plans?

Well, first, they're pretty sore at management for parading "high labor costs" as the cause of American's $1.2 billion loss over the last three years. There's been nary a mention of the company's "value-pricing" scheme that cut fares by 50 percent and profits by even more. They maintain that a company doesn't show respect for its employees when it blames them for bad management decisions.

And second, they say American treats them as if they're of so little value that they could easily be replaced. "They treat us like we're disposable, a number," 33-year-old attendant Helen Neuhoft told The New York Times. At stake was the $23,000 salary with which she helps to support herself, her husband and two children.

"They told us the reason we were losing money was because we were rude to passengers," attendant Wendy Cook-Palmer told The Times. Cook-Palmer said all American attendants were forced to attend three-hour "Commitment to Courtesy" classes last year without pay. She said they were handed Magic Markers and asked to draw pictures of flight attendants being nice to passengers.

The basic issue is the way they're treated -- the way all employees of this company are treated," Smokey Stover of the Allied Pilots Association told The Times.

"They treated us like we were in kindergarten," American flight attendant Linda Engen said.

No one but an American Airlines employee knows exactly what goes on on the job at that company. But we've all seen cases like the ones the attendants and pilots allege are happening: employers treating employees as if they are easily replaceable, have little value and need the same kind of constant surveillance and correction they received in nursery school.

To hire an employee, train him well and then treat him as if there were 10 better people just sloshing for his job doesn't make sense. It's like marrying a man and spending the rest of your life telling him there are all sorts of other men out there waiting in line, all of whom you could have if you wanted.

How health is linked to nature

If Earth is a celestial ark of life, then the Endangered Species Act is this nation's compact not to throw any of its inhabitants overboard.

Most people accept, I venture, that if nature's scheme created a life form, there's something inherently wrong with knowingly driving it into extinction. What's inherently right about the Endangered Species Act is its commitment to halt intentionally consigning any species to oblivion.

A gut sense of what's right is assuredly the act's major source of public support. The value of protecting the diversity of nature's creatures, however, extends further. Our own health may depend upon natural medical discoveries that will only be possible if we maintain the health of biological diversity.

"Species are disappearing faster than we are able to examine them chemically," says Thomas Eisner, director of Cornell University's Institute for Research in Chemical Ecology. "The chemical treasury of nature is literally disappearing before we have had a chance to assess it."

Take, for example, the shark. Some species are in rapid decline due in part to the efficiency with which a faddish taste for shark fin soup is being satisfied. The loss is frustrating to researchers trying to discover why sharks are unaffected by one of the worst human killers, cancer.

Other scientists are extracting a series of promising new drugs from chemicals produced on the moist skin of frogs. This investigation, however, is competing with an inexplicable die-off in frog populations worldwide.

In this country, the Pacific yew tree was considered a trash species, best burned after logging, until it was found to harbor a chemical called Taxol that's proven effective in fighting ovarian and other forms of cancer. While not a cure, Taxol has demonstrated the ability to extend the life of ovarian cancer victims.

The Taxol discovery was among the first breakthroughs in the National Cancer Institute's program to sample plant species for medicinal value. The program now has four plant substances under development for their potential to combat the AIDS virus. Other natural compounds are being tested as anti-cancer agents.

"For our natural products drug-screening effort to be at all successful, we must have available to us a multitude of species to study, and preservation of the species is critical to this effort," says Michael R. Grever, associate director of the institute's developmental therapeutics program. A combination of global consumption patterns, "perverse" policy incentives and population pressures, he says, threaten biological diversity worldwide.

"Among the ultimate consequences," Grever cites, of destroying natural habitat "will be a loss of raw materials from which medicinal products might be developed."

The NCI now has 50 to 75 natural compounds under investigation at any given time. In the current program, most of them are collected from tropical nations. In this country, the Monsanto Corp. has teamed up with the Missouri Botanical Gardens in St. Louis to survey some 10,000 domestic plant species. They are searching for new medicines and substances to make farm crops disease resistant or more productive.

Some people ask why endangered plants can't just be gathered together in botanical gardens, thus saving the species and opening the habitat to development. Besides enshrining the concept of constraining nature to museum exhibits, the technique would still hamper medical research.

Plants often produce specific substances only when environmental factors such as parasites or infections induce them to do so. "Compounds that they produce when thus challenged are often the very ones likely to prove useful to humans," Eisner says. "There is therefore no appropriate alternative to preserving species in the wild."

At present the Endangered Species Act prohibits the taking or destruction of listed plants on federal land. On private land, however, the Endangered Species Act provides that unless a person knowingly violates state law, there is no penalty for destroying endangered or threatened plants. Twenty-four states currently have no endangered plant protections. The 100 listed plant species that occur in these states can now be taken from private land without requiring any consideration of alternatives.

There should be a better way, one that could be found either by the state legislatures, or by congressional action to strengthen the Endangered Species Act.

The value of protecting the diversity of nature's creatures, however, extends further.

Merger

administration building immediately north of the County Services Building with space west of it for future county services expansion.
If the school board decides not to consolidate buildings, they will build 115,281 square-foot building on a seven-acre site on Lake Mary Boulevard east of U.S. Highway 17-92. School officials hope to begin design in January to speed their move.
Ware told commissioners consolidation would save only 5,820 square feet from a total of 260,500 square feet needed by the two agencies. That represents about a $632,000 savings from the construction costs. Construction of the two buildings, without shared space, was estimated at nearly $24 million. The merger has several complications:

• Lakefront land needed from Jeno Paulucci is expensive.
• Land south of the County Services Building, needed for parking, is inexpensive but far from the two office sites.
• A multi-story parking garage is expensive.
• Also, school officials want to move immediately, but county commissioners have delayed their expansion for a year or more. They haven't appropriated the money for the project.
Commissioners agreed the decisions largely with school board members. City and school officials will meet separately this week, then all three boards will meet Monday.

Burger King earmarks minority franchisees

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Burger King Corp. plans to invest $100 million to support minority group franchisees and suppliers in its restaurant system over the next five years.
"This is a way of making sure our franchisee community is representative of our consumer community," Scott Colabuono, the company's chief financial officer and chairman of the company's diversity action council, said Monday.
Operation Push, a civil rights group that had been negotiating with the fast food chain over minority issues, praised the company for investing in the financial health of minority communities.

Burger King announced the plan on Monday. Of its 8,000 restaurants in the United States, 720 are owned by minorities, the company said.
"This really helps the economy," said the Rev. Willie T. Barrow, chairwoman and chief executive of Operation Push. "Burger King has taken the lead in terms of creating small businesses in our community."
The Miami-based company, a subsidiary of Grand Metropolitan PLC of Great Britain, will provide $10 million per year for five years in development money for minority franchisees. An additional $10 million per year will be provided in the form of loan guarantees for or direct investments in minority suppliers to the Burger King system.

Burger King was sued in 1988 for $500 million by 12 black franchisees, who claimed that black franchisees were charged up to twice as much as other Burger King owners to purchase a franchise. Both the company and Barrow said the latest program isn't directly related to the lawsuit.

Ethics

Sheafer could not be reached this morning and has not returned calls since attending the hearing last Thursday. Sharon Sheafer said this morning she was prohibited from commenting by city policy.
The finding closes efforts by Sheafer stemming from an incident which occurred last February. A complaint made to Gov. Lawton Chiles was not pursued after Chiles' counselor found no laws were broken.
Sheafer's complaint stemmed from an incident following the printing of his letter critical of Eckstein in the Feb. 15, 1993 edition of the Sanford Herald.
An ethics investigation found Eckstein contacted Acting Police Chief Ralph Russell to assure him he did not make the comments attributed to him, unaware Sheafer's wife was a policeman. Russell gave Eckstein the Sheafer's unlisted telephone number, a voluntary act not prohibited by Florida laws.

Eckstein called Sheafer, apparently waking him from his daytime sleep. Sheafer is a night-time service station attendant. The two men argued. Sheafer cursed and hung up.
Eckstein then called Russell again and urged the chief to urge Sheafer to obtain an apology. Russell refused. Then Eckstein contacted Sheafer's employer and threatened to take his family business away if they did not intervene to obtain an apology.
Despite the two calls to request intervention, ethics advocate Stuart F. Wilson-Palton wrote in his recommendation: "Nevertheless, there is no evidence to suggest that the respondent (Eckstein) used his official position to influence either the police chief or the respondent's employer. Nor were these actions necessarily inconsistent with the proper performance of any public duties."
The adult entertainment codes are modeled after a code developed for Orange County. "It is enforceable, and would be upheld in federal court," Reichmann said.
Although no one gave specifics, police Chief Ralph Russell said during the work session that an adult theatre might be considering locating in Sanford.
The proposed ordinance would specifically limit such entertainment facilities to property zoned RI-1, Restricted Industrial, or MI-2, Medium Industrial. It also would establish distance requirements between such establishments and schools, churches, residential areas, parks, or businesses which sell alcoholic beverages.

on adult entertainment operations.
In Sanford, the City Commission is planning to tackle the first phase of an adult entertainment ordinance on Monday. City Planner Jay Marder explained, "This was originally supposed to be in one ordinance, but it's being divided into two separate issues, so the commission will have only part of the proposal to consider on first reading Monday."
Marder said part of the ordinance will require changes in the city's Land Development Regulations, which will require additional action by both the city and Planning and Zoning Commission.
Suggestions on formulating the ordinance were first discussed in Sanford during a commission work session on Nov. 23. Associate City Attorney William Reichmann, Jr., explained the various steps which will be required.
Reichmann is considered a specialist on adult entertainment laws by City Attorney Bill Colbert.

Reichmann had told the commissioners, "What we are looking at are enforceable guidelines that will give the city greater powers to regulate these businesses."

for claims he is awaiting licenses as a beauty salon, but Lovestrand said the business seems to have the most customers not during the day but at night.
The business offering the full-body scrubs is located in a building owned by Korman.
Lovestrand said there are now three adult-type businesses operating in the city. He added there have been two women arrested at one of the businesses for prostitution.
Commissioner Iris Benson urged the commission and interim city attorney Richard Taylor to carefully consider the ordinance wording to avoid violating constitutionally guaranteed rights.
The emergency ordinance defines adult entertainment, adult book and novelty store as any adult: arcade, bookstore, cabaret, dancing establishment, motel or theatre, or any commercial establishment at which nude or semi-nude entertainment occurs.
"For the purpose of this ordinance a personal service establishment shall be defined as a beauty salon other than one which does personal services to the hair, face, hands and feet and to any establishment which give body scrubs or massages except, by licensed massage therapists," pursuant to Florida statutes.

Commissioner Steve Miller said the wording of the ordinance should be "extremely clearly defined" so it does not encroach on legitimate businesses.
In other business, it was announced that City Planning Director Dick Wells has accepted a job as Casselberry Community Development Director and will be leaving Longwood at the end of December.
Although he has only worked with Wells a short time, Korman commented, "I'm really sorry to see him go." However, the administrator acknowledged Longwood is a smaller city than Casselberry and could not match the $6,000 to $8,000 salary increase Wells was offered. Wells, 44, has been with Longwood about two years.
In his new position, Wells said he will work in the areas of planning and zoning, code enforcement and building.

"I'm looking forward to working with the people in Casselberry," Wells commented this morning. "They seem to be a real professional group of people."
He said the increase in salary was the reason he chose the new position.
Most of Wells' experience has been in the public sector beginning with seven years with the Regional Planning Commission, six years with the City of Mailand, five years in the private sector and then working in Longwood.
In accordance with personnel policy changes adopted earlier in the evening, Korman said he will post the job vacancy for present Longwood employees before seeking outside applicants.
After reviewing the commission rules, the commissioners also voted to prohibit telephone voting. Only members physically present at a commission meeting will be allowed to vote. No proxy, absentee or telephone votes will be permitted, under the new rule. Lovestrand prevented former commission Fred Pearl from voting via a telephone call earlier this year, although the majority of the commission said the vote would be allowed. Pearl, Harvey Smerlison and Rex Anderson were all defeated for re-election.

In other business, the commission:
• Approved a resolution asking the state legislature to allow cities to "opt out" of the Florida Retirement System for future employees. However, the commission tabled another resolution to provide money to a fund to file a lawsuit over the issue.
• Reviewed $108,000 in budget cuts proposed by Korman. The commission rejected the plan to cut funding for lights at Reiter Park. In addition, the commission approved lighting the basketball courts at Candler Park and building a restroom at Reiter Park and funding a pump lift station. Cuts from commission legal fees and fire station renovations were suggested. Money will also be taken from reserves to fund the park projects.
• Told the city attorney to pursue collecting about $9,000 in disputed franchise fees for the city from Cablevision.

highest court, but others likely will follow.
Mark and his father, Elliott, sued the Scouts in 1990. They lived in the Chicago suburb of Hinsdale and are described in court papers as agnostics.
Weish said he and his son were disappointed by the court action.
"Encouraging a proper moral standard or proper ethical standard is certainly a reasonable thing to do in a youth organization," Weish said. "The question, however, really is do you make a prejudiced assumption about people's moral and ethical fitness on the basis of whether or not they believe in God."

In an unusual move, the Scouts had asked the justices to review the boy's appeal. The organization cited the huge costs of defending its policy from similar attacks in California, Kansas, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia.
Richard Walker, a Boy Scouts of America spokesman, said Monday that duty to God and country is an integral part of scouting.
"One of the bedrock programs is to proclaim that duty to God because that's how you're going to get the values imbued in these kids that the parents want," he said.

Mark was seven when he applied to join a Tiger Cub Group. He was denied membership for refusing to sign a pledge in which boys promise to "love God."
Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts must promise to "do my duty to God and my country."
Lower courts ruled that the Boy Scouts of America, unlike restaurants, hotels and places of entertainment, is not a public accommodation covered by Title II of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The law bars discrimination based on race, color, religion or national origin.
In the appeal acted on Monday, lawyers for the Welshes relied heavily on a 1969 Supreme Court ruling that said an amusement park's restrictive admission policy violated Title II.
The appeal said the Boy Scouts should be treated as a place of entertainment.
Lawyers for the Scouts said the organization's members have a right to include only those who share their values and beliefs.
Information from the Associated Press is contained in this report.

'Mrs. Doubtfire' leads a dull weekend at the box office

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES — The Robin Williams comedy "Mrs. Doubtfire" ruled at the box office like a no-nonsense English nanny for the second week in a row.

It was an otherwise lackluster weekend at the nation's movie theaters. The Top 10 films made $39.3 million, compared with $57.9 million the same week a year ago. Entertainment Data Inc. said Monday.

Box-office business should intensify with the Friday debuts of "Sister Act 2: Back in the Habit," "Geronimo: An American Legend" and "Wayne's World 2."

"Mrs. Doubtfire," starring Williams as a man who poses as a nanny to be close to his kids, made $14.7 million for first place. It was followed by "A Perfect World," starring Kevin Costner as an escaped convict chased by Clint Eastwood.

GARAGE SALE GUIDELINES

1. Advertise what people want! Children's clothing, dishes, collectibles, tools, books and antiques are the most popular items.
2. Make it convenient to shop at your garage sale! Be sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs with directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors.
3. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handling. Make sure one person is on duty at all times at a centralized location preferably with a calculator or adding machine.
4. Provide prices. Do not make every person ask. "How much is this? Prices make for quick, effective sales or a good place for customers to start bargaining.
5. Get an early start. Set up displays the evening before, if possible.
6. Departmentalize. Separate the inexpensive items from the more costly areas. Group furniture, clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar merchandise.
7. Specialize. Establish one area for "Under $5," another for "Under $1." Consider having a batch of items that are "FREE with purchase of $3." Remember the youngsters, too. Encourage this with small, low-priced items that are appropriate for this purpose.
8. Time your sale carefully! Have it at a time when most people are at home and unconcerned with special events.
9. Combine your efforts! Incorporate your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact.
10. Be specific! When advertising your sale in the newspaper, list individual items. Don't simply say, "several things available." Each time you list an item, you are broadening the list of potential customers.
11. Be generous! If you have items left over, give them to a charitable organization. If you see that some items are not moving well during the sale, mark them down during the last hours. Remember, the prime reason for holding the sale is to turn your unwanted items into cash!

Joycelyn Elders urges better nutrition for schoolchildren

By ROBERT GREENE
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — Students can only be won over to eating more healthful school lunches if they're sold on the importance of nutrition, the nation's senior public health officer said today.

"We need to sell school lunches just like Mr. McDonald sells his Big Macs," Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders told an Agriculture Department forum on improving the quality of school lunches.

She noted an Agriculture Department study released in October that found when schools offered lower-fat menus, the students found them less appetizing. Only 56 percent of students eat a school-provided lunch on any given day "despite the fact that it is superior to any other noontime choice they might make, including brown bag lunches brought from home."

"Even if we build a better school lunch program, the children will not come unless they are taught the importance good nutrition plays in their lives," Elders said. "That means we have to improve our educational efforts."

Students need to know the importance of good nutrition, she said, and parents need to make sure children eat right at home. Schools and food companies need to provide healthy food that students find "attractive," and schools need to give children time to eat the food.

Elders was one of several administration officials, including Education Secretary Richard Riley, to attend the fourth and final hearing by the Agricultural Department on efforts to improve the nutritional quality of school lunches. Previous hearings were held in Atlanta, Los Angeles and Flint, Mich.

The list of witnesses included students, doctors, educators and representatives of the food industry and school cafeteria directors.

Today's hearing was being held at a downtown high school, near the elementary school where in October the department released a report that said lunches average 38 percent of their calories from fat. That's more than the average American diet of 37 percent and well above the 30 percent in nutritional guidelines set by the government.

The study also found that students were getting too much salt from school lunches, served to 25 million children in 92,000 schools each day at a cost of $4 billion a year to the federal government.

Elders, a pediatrician, did note that the lunches provide the one-third of recommended daily allowances for nutrients. The law requires lunches to meet those guidelines.

She also noted that 44 percent of schools offer students a choice of at least one lunch with 30 percent or fewer of its calories from fat.

School food service administrators had been upset in October when the Agriculture Department, in releasing the report, played down the positive achievements by school cafeterias.

Elders noted the need to provide "attractive cafeteria space and sufficient time for the meal" and to eliminate "the need to profit from children's poor nutritional habits to cover the budget elsewhere."

She noted the presence of vending machines and snack bars in schools.

Among the witnesses will be representatives from the frozen and canned food industries, arguing that their products are economical and nutritious. The department has recently announced plans to buy more fresh fruits and vegetables for school lunches, but the purchases would still only account for a fraction of the millions spent on meats and canned and frozen goods.

Airplane fare sale extended into holidays

By DAN BLAKE
AP Business Writer

Holiday travelers got their second chance to buy discounted airplane tickets on Monday as airlines cut fares around Christmas and New Year's. Some of the most popular travel days were excluded.

The sale, offering discounts up to 30 percent, was the second since October for the holiday period and signaled that some airlines still had plenty of empty seats despite earlier discounts.

Passengers have until Friday to take advantage of the discounts that apply to trips from Dec. 13 to Jan. 5. Tickets must be bought seven days in advance. Another sale, begun last week, offers discounts of up to 35 percent for trips from Jan. 8 through March 31 and gives customers until Friday to buy tickets.

"This is still in a reasonable range," said William Berry, spokesman for Delta Air Lines. "This should do a good job filling seats that are otherwise empty between extremely busy travel days."

Marty Hetres, an American Airlines spokesman, said its holiday bookings had been strong, but the carrier would match the sale prices to remain competitive.

Airlines historically cut fares during winter when travel is typically slack, and sometimes hold more than one sale for the holiday period. The latest sale was begun by Northwest, which also initiated the holiday-travel discounting in late October. As has become an industry practice, the airline announced the sale when other airline executive offices are closed.

Northwest announced the sale Sunday and entered the new prices in its computerized ticketing-reservations system, while competitors couldn't get the discounts logged until Monday. The advantage is coveted by Northwest, which also started the previous holiday sale with an after-hours announcement.

Under the discount, a roundtrip Boston-Los Angeles ticket on Northwest, for example, falls to $219 from a regular price of $312.

Some of the most popular Christmas and New Year's travel days — Dec. 22, 23 and Jan. 2 — aren't included. The biggest discounts are for Dec. 13-15, 19, 20, 24, 25 and 31.

Hubble gets new camera

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Two astronaut-mechanics installed a "beautiful, spanking new" camera in the Hubble Space Telescope today, completing the first step in opening the instrument's eyes to the fringes of the universe.

Step 2 comes tonight. Working more than 360 miles above Earth, Endeavour crewmen Jeffrey Hoffman and Story Musgrave deftly pulled out Hubble's old camera like a dresser drawer and slid in the new one, a 620-pound unit the size of a baby grand piano. It took them 2½ hours to make the swap, nearly an hour less than in practice.

The new $100 million wide-field planetary camera has corrective mirrors to compensate for Hubble's flawed primary mirror, which had left the telescope nearsighted.

WORLD BRIEFS

Farm subsidy cuts ironed out

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The United States and the European Community early today reached agreement on farm subsidy cuts and other trade issues but failed to resolve a dispute over film and TV show exports.

News of a partial settlement after almost 24 hours of bargaining apparently solves most of the differences blocking a new, 116-nation trade pact under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

But the inability of the giant trading partners to resolve all their differences will likely make it more difficult to bring the world trade talks to a successful conclusion by the Dec. 15 deadline.

Dec. 15 is the last day President Clinton can notify Congress of a proposed GATT agreement under "fast-track" rules barring lawmakers from attaching amendments that could kill the accord.

Dead workers sought

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo — The government is about to lay off workers who have been doing some serious lying down on the job — they're dead.

In February, the government estimated that 10 percent of its payroll was being paid to third parties in the name of people who had retired or died. Hundreds of other employees were legitimately working, but receiving two or three salaries from the state.

So on Monday, the government announced that it is sending out some 200 canvassers to weed out the deadwood, the double-dippers, from the 80,000 people on the payroll and, it is hoped, save the country $24 million a year.

The announcement reflects the extent of the troubles afflicting this central African country.

Aristide backers disillusioned

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The unraveling of a U.N. plan to bring back ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide has left his supporters disillusioned with world efforts and even questioning Aristide, the man they elected.

Many feel the United Nations buckled under to a small, powerful clique of Haitian military officers, right-wing politicians and conservative businessmen who oppose Aristide's return.

"The United Nations, the Organization of American States, the Clinton administration plunged their noses into dust in front of a few hundred thugs. It's unbelievable!" says the Rev. Gerard Jean-Juste.

Although a U.N. embargo on oil is designed to force Aristide's reinstatement, Haitians who once supported him now wonder why they have been left to suffer, and for how long.

Skin doctors say cosmetics are causing problems

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Hundreds of thousands of American women are using cosmetics that trigger allergies or aggravate medical conditions, skin doctors say, and it may get worse with new preparations now on the market.

Dr. Andrew Scheman, a dermatologist at Northwestern University Medical Center, Chicago, said Monday that after surveying the ingredients of more than 5,000 products, he found that many of his patients' skin problems originated at the cosmetic counter.

"There are a lot of misconceptions and a lot of people who use the wrong cosmetics," he said at a national meeting of the American Academy of Dermatology.

Often the problem is caused by patients who buy and use products containing ingredients that cause existing conditions to get worse or directly block the effects of prescribed medicines. He urged the doctors to pay more attention to the creams, powders and lotions their patients use.

"Most of our topical medications we prescribe are very carefully selected," he said. "Unfortunately, many of our patients are also using cosmetics. Some of the cosmetics they use may interfere with what we are trying to do and may cause dermatological problems."

Scheman said that while patients often chose the wrong cosmetics for their skin type, cosmetic companies confuse things further with vague promises about their products.

"Companies often make a lot of claims on products that actually have very little meaning," said Scheman. "They sometimes can be very cleverly misleading."

The physician said cosmetic companies have to be vague in product labels, to comply with restrictions set by the Food and Drug Administration, but this vagueness "opens the door to misleading claims."

For instance, "hypoallergenic" conveys the idea that nobody will have an allergy to the product.

Since all companies avoid ingredients that will cause allergic reactions, "every product on the market could be called hypoallergenic. It's still going to cause a reaction in a very few individuals," said Scheman.

Some products claim they have been tested by dermatologists, but this is meaningless, he said, "because they never tell you results of the tests."

Despite his criticisms, Scheman said he was generally impressed with the "intelligent design" of American cosmetic products.

"I was taught in medical school that most cosmetics were not very good, that we should tell patients with acne, for instance, not to wear any cosmetics," said the doctor. "But when I looked at these products, I was surprised. Most of them were very good."

Scheman said patients can cause their own problems by buying products based on mistaken ideas about their own skin.

County war dead climbs to 101

By JULIAN STENSTROM
Herald Columnist

The number of Seminole County's war dead has another name to add to the list. In the Nov. 11 Veterans' Day edition of the Herald, the names of 99 war dead were reported. These were the service personnel who gave their lives during World War I, World War II plus the Korean and Vietnam conflicts.

Recently the name of Charles Thurston was added to make the number an even 100. The Herald published Thurston's story Nov. 24. He was shot down while serving as a tail gunner on a B-29 Superfort when the US Army Air Corps bombed Tokyo Dec. 7, 1944. The raid marked the third anniversary of the Dec. 7, 1941 attack by the Japanese on Pearl Harbor.

Thurston's aircraft was shot down over Manchuria and he was listed as missing in action. The Herald reported this was the probable reason he was not listed among those killed in action.

It is now presumed for the same reason the name of Francis Armbruster of Sanford was omitted from the list of war dead. This, then, is the story of how Armbruster came to be listed as missing in action.

Armbruster was a Navy engineman aboard the USS Strong, an American destroyer. It was July 4, 1944. The Strong was one of several Allied vessels engaged in a night battle with Japanese naval forces in the Kula Gulf near the Marshall Islands. The craft was sunk by the Japanese who often sent battle groups down what U.S. Navy folks referred to as the "slot."

Armbruster found himself in the waters of the Gulf beside an injured airman named Tom Harmon. He was the same Tom Harmon who had been the All-American running back for the University of Michigan Wolverines in the 1930s, when his blocking back was another All-American named Forrest Evashevski. The latter continued his football career for a number of years as head coach of the university.

The rest of the story was related one evening when Harmon appeared on the one time nationally known television show, "We The People." Harmon told the show's host, Gordon Bradley (not the same Gordon Bradley who served as the executive director of the Sanford Housing Authority for quite a number of years) that Armbruster rescued him. Harmon said he had been badly injured and would have drowned had Armbruster not gotten a "hold" on him and swam about five miles to the nearest island.

When Armbruster and Harmon reached land Francis hid Tom in a mangrove swamp and made him as comfortable as possible. Then Armbruster, according to Harmon, set out to find fresh water and to determine if Japanese or any other troops, friendly or foe, occupied the island.

Armbruster left the swamp, never returned, and was never seen or heard from again. He was classified as "missing."

When at Seminole High School Armbruster is said to have played football. It is believed he quit school when he reached 17 to join the Navy with his mother's permission. The Armbrusters lived at 804 West 20th Street when he was a lad. He spent a great deal of his time with

John and Ray Fox Jr. The latter became a Navy commander. When Ray retired he and his wife set up housekeeping in Lake Mary and he served several years as a member of that city's governing body as a commissioner.

According to John Fox, this trio of youngsters were highly involved in assembling model airplanes, taking them to the old Sanford airport near Ginderville and flying them.

John said Armbruster's swimming ability came natural. He said when he, his brother Ray and Francis weren't flying model planes, they were swimming in Silver Lake. That is where, John Fox said, Francis became a highly proficient swimmer.

While Armbruster was in the Navy somehow the family became separated. Armbruster had an older brother, Kernal, and a younger sister. The sister, Fox reported, was adopted by a former Sanford Police Department motorcycle patrolman, Officer Charles Shaeffer.

John Fox also served in the Navy's air arm except he was not a pilot. He was a radarman or as he put it, a back seat driver.

After the war Harmon became a sportscaster for the Columbia Broadcasting System's West Coast operation. He worked out of KCBS in Los Angeles. He later became the father of motion picture and television actor, Mark Harmon. One of young Harmon's most memorable roles was his part of serial killer Ted Bundy who was tried in Orlando, found guilty, and was executed in Florida's electric chair.

So, Seminole County's war dead now stands at 101.

Annual auto ratings book picks best bets

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The author of an annual consumer guide to new cars says safety-minded motorists would do better to worry about things like air bags than the handling characteristics of a particular model.

"The main reason handling is overrated as a safety measure is that automobile collisions are, by nature, accidents," Jack Gillis writes in the 1994 version of "The Car Book," which was being released today.

"The key to protecting yourself is to purchase a car that offers a high degree of crash protection."

Gillis' 224-page book rates each car model in a number of different categories, including crash safety, fuel economy, repair costs, warranties, insurance costs, complaint history, and the availability of air bags and anti-lock brakes. The greatest weight is given to crash test performance.

The top-rated cars for 1994 were the Hyundai Excel, which has no airbags, in the subcompact category; the Nissan 240SX, which has no airbags, in the compact size; the Ford Taurus Wagon, which has dual airbags, in the intermediate class, and the Pontiac Trans Sport, Oldsmobile Silhouette and Chevrolet Lumina minivans. The three minivans all have a driver's side airbag and all earned a 10, the highest score given.

The best car in the large category was the Mercury Cougar. It has dual airbags and earned a seven.

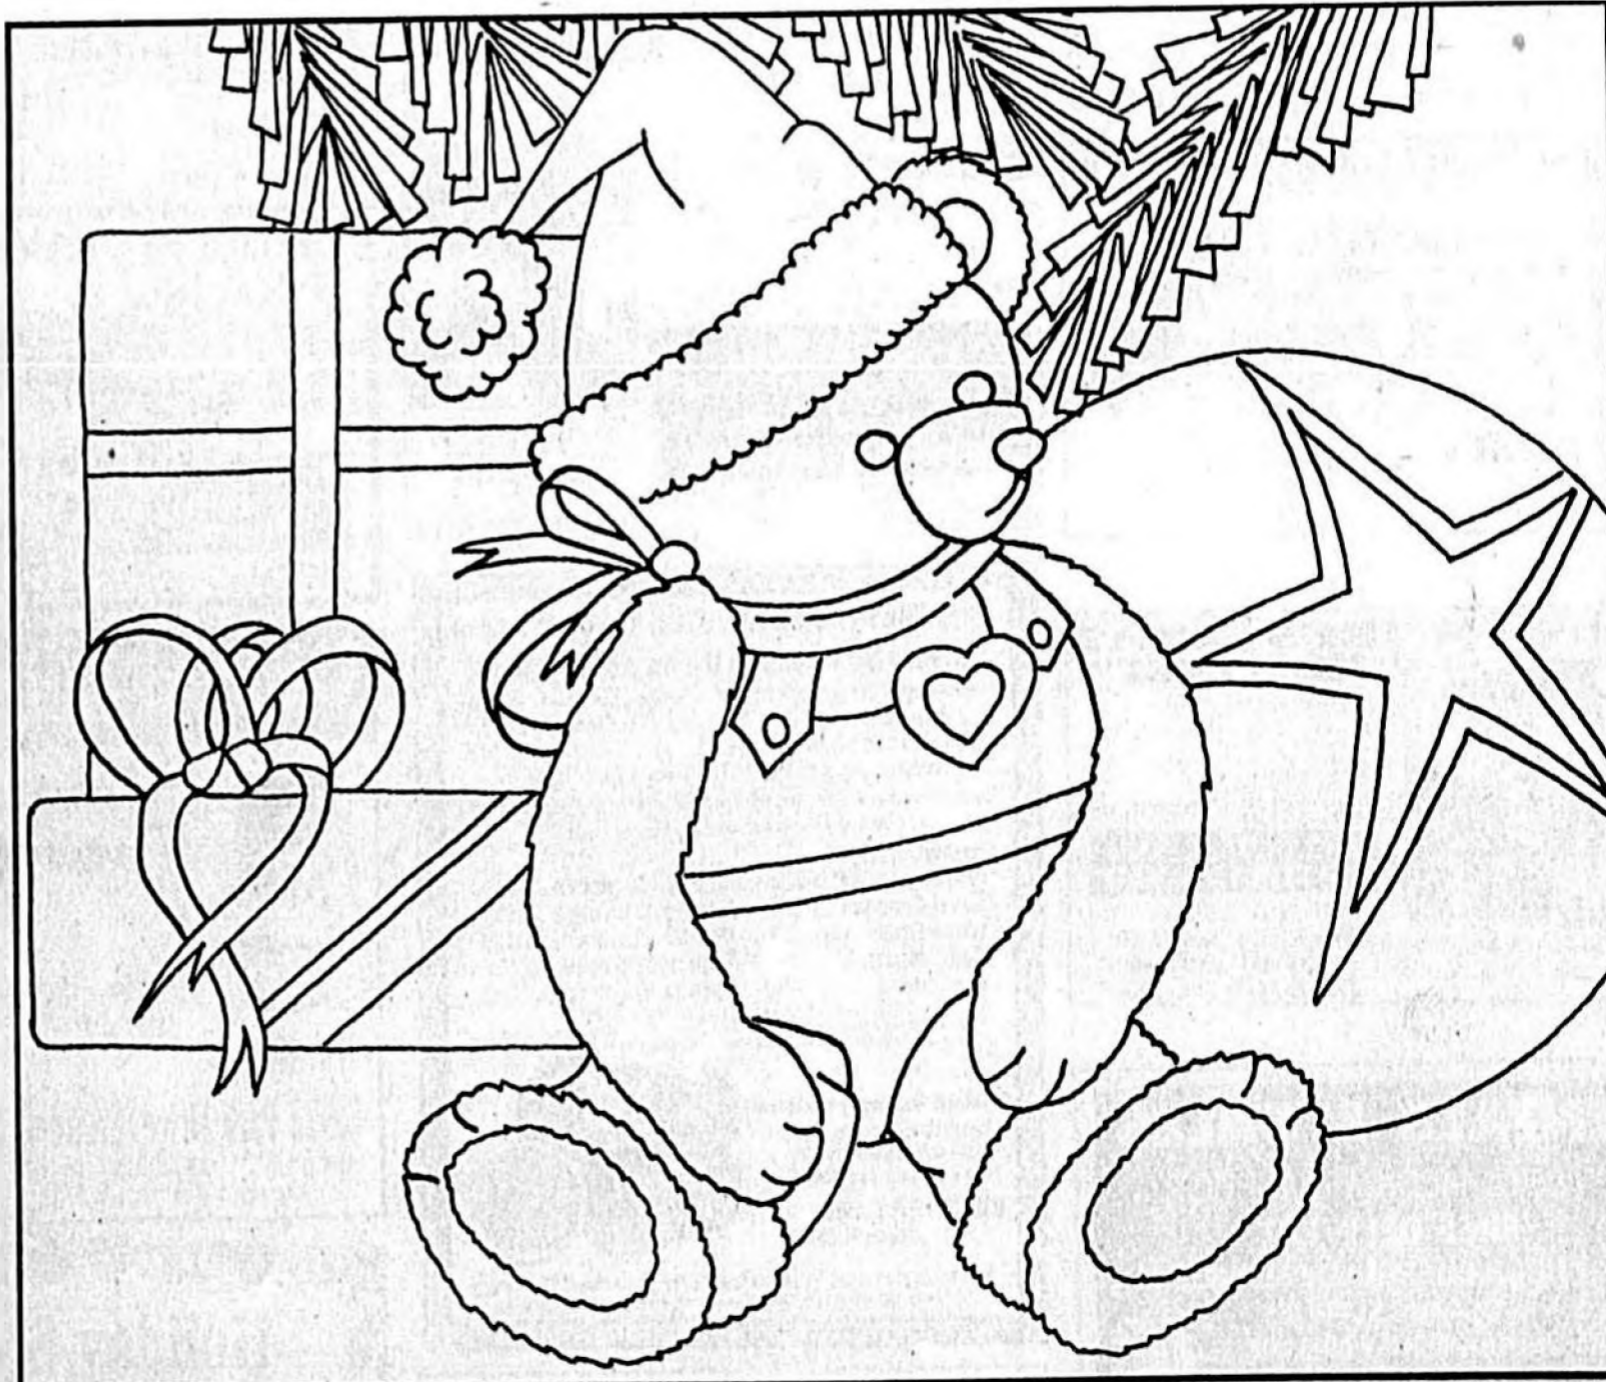

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration will require all cars beginning with the 1998 model year to be equipped with driver-side and passenger-side air bags in the front seat.

Gillis cautioned that minivans, sport-utility vehicles and pickup trucks — the fastest growing automotive segments — do not have to comply with the same federal safety regulations as cars. But such protections are being phased in for those vehicles as well.

Air bags will become standard in the 1999 model year for the light trucks. Many manufacturers already install them though they are not yet required to do so by the government.

Tribe girls win

SANFORD — Chrissy Richards and Shirley Pinto scored first half goals and the defense sparked as Seminole High School edged St. Cloud 2-1 in a girl's soccer match at Thomas E. Whigham Stadium Monday night.

The Tribe's junior varsity made it a perfect evening by taking a 1-0 triumph.

"Everyone was more intense tonight," said Seminole head coach Suzy Reno. "Whether they were on bench or on the field, they stayed in the game mentally. We got an excellent game from our newly promoted goalie, Heather Youmans, who had 12 saves. She's normally a midfielder, but she was forced to fill in after our regular keeper broke a finger last week.

"The defensive unit of Lealie Webber, Brooke Baker, Jessica Lange, Sabreena Sapp, Audrey Brocius and Stephanie Groover did a great job of keeping St. Cloud out of scoring area and our midfielders and forwards had better communication tonight and did a very good job of moving the ball around."

Brocius and Laura Williams added assists as the Tribe improved to 1-5 overall.

Seminole will travel to Lake Brantley this Wednesday night.

Greyhounds trim Wildcats

WINTER PARK — Brian Diebler scored on a pass from Steve Robinson with only six seconds left in the game and goalie Chris Lewis recorded his fourth shutout in seven starts as the Lyman Greyhounds tripped homestanding Winter Park, 1-0, in a boy's soccer game Monday night.

"It was a tough game, one that could have gone either way," said Lyman head coach Ray Sandlge. "We played tough defense and did what we had to do to win the game."

The Greyhounds improved to 4-1-2 on the season and will play at home tonight at 7:30 p.m. against Lake Howell. Winter Park fell to 3-2-1.

Patriots can't hold lead

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Phillip Cianculli scored both goals to give Lake Brantley a 2-0 lead, but Melbourne rallied to defeat the Patriots 3-2 in a boy's high school soccer game Monday night at Tom Storey Field.

"They wanted it more than we did," said Lake Brantley head coach Jim Brody. "That about sums up the game."

Sean Scaver hit a good game in goal for the Patriots with 10 saves, but Lake Brantley fell to 4-4-2 with a trip to Seminole on the schedule today. Melbourne remained undefeated at 4-0.

Help earns Roinco volleyball crown

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Now that's the way to finish a season.

After winning 39 of its last 42 games and finishing with a 61-9 record you would figure that Roinco had probably walked away with the championship of the Sanford Recreation Department Fall Recreation Volleyball League at the Sanford Middle School Gymnasium.

Even after posting that phenomenal record, the Roinco team was still forced to stand on the sidelines biting their nails while second place Westview Baptist Church Team I and third place Fitness Pit battled in the final game of the 10 week season.

A victory by Westview I would tie Roinco for the top spot and force a playoff for the league title. But Fitness Pit ended Westview I's hopes for the crown when it posted an 11-6 triumph.

Westview I, which went 6-1 in each of the league's final four weeks, a record of 24-4, had given itself a chance to tie for the crown by handing Roinco its first loss in four weeks, 11-9, just one round earlier, but did not have enough left to take out Fitness Pit.

Roinco had started the night off in fine fashion by topping Fitness Pit, which also went 6-1 in the final week to finish five games behind with an impressive 56-14 overall record, 11-8 in the opening game of the night.

The top three teams were well out in front of the rest of the eight team field, with Sanford First Baptist Church, trailing up fourth with a 38-32 record and Palmetto Avenue Baptist Church Team II rounding out the top five with a 25-45 mark.

The complete final standings after 10 weeks (with this week's record in parentheses):

- 1. Roinco (6-1), 61-9; 2. Westview Baptist Church Team I (6-1), 60-10; 3. Fitness Pit (6-1), 56-14; 4. Sanford First Baptist Church (4-3), 38-32; 5. Palmetto Avenue Baptist Church Team II (3-4), 25-45; 6. Palmetto Avenue Baptist Church Team I (2-5), 18-52; 7. The Weyh Notes (1-6), 16-54; 8. Westview Baptist Church Team II (0-7), 6-64.

SANFORD HERALD PLAYER OF THE WEEK

Sophomore's numb pain of playoff loss

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — After his Lake Brantley High School football team dropped a heart-breaking 37-38 double-overtime decision to defending state champion Bradenton-Manatee last Friday night, head coach Fred Almon probably felt badly knowing that this was the last time he would be coaching the dynamic duo of seniors Jeff Butler and Jeff Shaw.

But at the same time, the veteran Patriots leader also had to be thrilled with knowledge that two of the better players in this game, Brian Whitman and Dee Brown, are both sophomores and will be around for another couple of years to help Almon try to bring a state championship to the Altamonte Springs school.

Whitman, a wide receiver, scored the first points of the game in the second quarter to give Lake Brantley a 6-0 lead when he got open over the middle and Shaw found him for the 15-yard touchdown. Whitman later caught a 31-yard pass to set up another score and finished the night with 46 yards on two catches.

Brown, who also doubles as the Patriots' back-up quarterback, got an opportunity to show off his running ability as Manatee bottled up leading rusher Butler, forcing Lake Brantley to go to the option portion of the wishbone offense.

Brown responded by carrying the ball 10 times for 69 yards, second only to Butler's team high 75 yards on 20 attempts.

For their efforts, the sophomore duo shares the final Sanford Herald Player of the Week honor for 1993.

Lake Howell, Seminole in state basketball poll

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — Seminole county high school basketball teams were well represented in the FSWA (Florida Sports Writers Association) State High School Basketball Poll that was released on Monday.

Both of Seminole High School's teams, the boy's of head coach Bob Traina and the girl's of head coach John McNamara, received votes this week, but the big news was in the Girls' Class 5A poll where head coach Dennis Codrey's Silver Hawks from Lake Howell High School collected two first place votes and were ranked No. 3 behind a pair of Miami area powerhouses.

The Silver Hawks, 10-0, got 91 votes to trail only Miami-Norland (5-0), with 107 votes, and Miami-Central (7-0), with 98 votes.

The Seminole girl's (4-5) received one vote, which would be good for 14th place in the Class 4A Poll. The Fighting Seminoles will have an opportunity to move up in the polls if they can upset No. 1 Class 4A ranked St. Cloud. The Tribe will travel to St. Cloud to take on the 10-0 Bulldogs this Saturday night.

The Seminole boy's collected three votes, good enough for 17th in Class 4A. Despite advancing to within one win of the state tournament last year, the young Arrow Force II squad is still looking for more respect from the pollsters.

The Department of Commerce, is $2.3 million for U.S. Field Hockey and $3.7 million for the Senior Softball World Series.

The Senior World Series is expected to draw over 120 men's teams from the United States and Canada. The event is played in six age brackets, 50+, 55+, 60+, 65+, 70+ and 75+ in the Men's Division. New for the 1994 tournament will be the addition of a Women's Division. There will be approximately 2,500 competitors and over 2,500 additional family members and entourage.

The World Series will utilize softball fields at the new five-field Seminole County Softball Complex, the three-field Merril Park/Altamonte Springs Recreation Complex and other fields in Seminole County.

"The major factors in our decision were the quality of Seminole County's facilities and the Orlando Area Sports Commission's desire and determination to have the tri-county Central Florida region the reputation as a world-class sports venue," said Clay Caperton, Executive Director, Senior Softball World Series.

"We are very excited about our choice. The Orlando area has so much to offer our participants and their guests."

"The U.S. Field Hockey Festival is the largest field hockey event in the United States and will utilize both the Seminole County Sports Training Center and Seminole Soccer Club at Lake Sylvan Park as host sites for the Festival.

"U.S. Field Hockey is looking forward to working with the Orlando Area Sports Commission in hosting the '94 Festival in Seminole County," said Karen Collins, Program Director for U.S. Field Hockey. "This past year we had 84 teams participate in the festival. "Next year, however, we expect over 1,800 athletes representing over 100 teams to participate in Seminole County. The players will be here for five days."

"I tell you, 1994 will be a very busy year for Seminole County," said Jack Wert, Director of Tourism, Seminole County Convention & Visitors Bureau. "In the summer of '94 Seminole County will host World Cup teams preparing for the World Cup competition. At the end of September we'll be hosting the ASA Men's Class B National Tournament."

"Then a couple of weeks later the Senior Softball World Series, followed by the U.S. Field Hockey Festival over the Thanksgiving holiday weekend. This shows the commitment that Seminole County has made to sports."

American Indians visit school

Students explore Indian lore, customs and history

By SARABECCA ROSE
 Herald Correspondent

LAKE MARY — Lake Mary Elementary School third graders had quite a learning experience when they got to meet real true American Indians at the auditorium of their school on Nov. 18.

Chief Whitefeather and his wife, Princess Hummingbird, presented the program along with Princess Supaya who are Cherokee, and Little Panther, Sly Fox and Lily in the Valley are Mohawk as well as some other Indians from Chief Whitefeather's tribe.

The students were able to learn Indian lore, hear some true stories, see a teepee, watch dances and were able to participate in dancing with the Indians. Tables were displayed with literature and history of some Indians as well as photographs and artifacts.

Also, on exhibit were three life-size Indian statues hand made by Princess Supaya who was married to a full-blooded Cherokee Indian. Her husband died 10 years ago and she made these life-like statues in his honor and to help keep his memory alive for her three sons whom she raised in the true Cherokee tradition, even though she, herself, is not a full Indian.

Chief Whitefeather is one-quarter Cherokee but said, "The other three-quarters were not by choice. If it were my choice, I'd be 100 percent full Cherokee Indian, but that is what I am in my heart and that's where it counts."

He voiced the sentiments of the rest of his tribe who were not born full-blooded Indians. Just as Princess Supaya is a full-blooded Cherokee in her heart.

Lily in the Valley is one-quarter Mohawk and raised her 10- and 12-year-old sons as full Mohawks and, in their hearts "where it counts," they are full-blooded Mohawks.

Chief Whitefeather said that "in all due respect to the teachers and historians regarding Columbus discovering America — the Indians were there first." The Indians suffered and lost in many ways because of the white man's greed and these Indians want to keep Mother Earth and their nature and natural traditions alive, never to be forgotten by future generations. That's why they bring the "Indian lore to schools and communities and are not paid for these shows. They do it from the heart so that children today can see and meet real Indians as they read about them from the past in their books.

"Also," the chief added, "so that these real Indians can explain that the television and movie versions of Indians are not truthfully portrayed, but made in Hollywood to sell movies even if it paints an untrue picture of the Indians."

Chief Whitefeather's favorite Indian was Iron Tail, last of the great chiefs, who was on the old Indian head nickels with the buffalo on the reverse side.

Job applicant wants recognition

DEAR ABBY: I was unexpectedly laid off a few months ago. I had worked for this company for many years and was devastated when I lost my job. My supervisor assured me that they would let me go, but they had to cut back because the economy was in a slump and they had to make some drastic cuts.

I have responded to more than 70 help-wanted ads in the past six months and have received only five interviews, 12 telephone responses and four written responses. I have the education and background for all of the positions for which I applied. I think employers should show some common courtesy by at least calling or writing to those who apply for employment — if nothing more than to acknowledge that they received the resume. I realize that there may be numerous applicants for certain jobs, but an acknowledgment could be a postcard or even a form letter I would be happy to receive anything to let me know my efforts had not been totally useless.

So, to all employers and recruiters: Please show a little courtesy, consideration and compassion to those of us who have shown an interest in your company.
 What do you think, Abby?
UNEMPLOYED AND FRUSTRATED: I agree with you. I'm sure many readers will identify. A form letter — or a form postcard — would have been better than nothing.

Clinton Christmas: Lots of trees, ornaments and one huge cookie

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — After a whirlwind weekend of decorating, the White House is ready for Christmas: 22 trees, 70 homey crafts, 7,500 handmade ornaments and a big of gingerbread cookie called "The House of Socks."

Now for the hard part: Getting the White House residents ready for Christmas.

"The big question mark is how we're going to go Christmas shopping," first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton said with a sigh Monday.

The comment came after a media tour of her White House decorations, a cozy display that included the Clintons' first White House Christmas card.

The card features a portrait of the president and first lady, basking in a gold light in the State Dining Room. Their daughter, Chelsea, is not pictured because her parents want to keep her out of the spotlight, aides said.

The first lady helped Chelsea, 13, and a friend make Christmas cookies recently. "My job was only to sprinkle the little things onto the Christmas tree that make it look like ornaments," Mrs. Clinton confessed.

Next, the family plans to pull out several boxes of holiday mementos "that remind us of past Christmases," she said. These also will put up their own tree in the White House residence, and decorate it with family ornaments.

That still leaves shopping, and the Clintons are not sure how or when they will do theirs.

When he lived in Arkansas, Clinton stashed gifts away long before Christmas then ran out just before the holiday to finish his shopping. But he said his busy first year in office kept his stash smaller than usual. "The circumstances in my life have changed," he said with a smile.

While touring the decorations late Sunday night with his wife, Clinton asked her, "How am I going to go shopping?"

She told reporters, "My biggest challenge is how to get him to go Christmas shopping."

For her first Christmas in the White House, the first lady wanted 70 new craft pieces to scatter throughout the building and hundreds of new handmade ornaments to decorate the trees. Volunteers and staff decked the halls over the weekend with Mrs. Clinton's help.

The West Wing decorations include a Menorah, the first time one has been displayed in the White House, according to Mrs. Clinton.

Standing in the Blue Room beneath an 18 1/2-foot Fraser fir crammed with handmade dolls, balls and bulbs, Mrs. Clinton pointed to two ornaments depicting Socks, the family cat, as an angel.

"There's even a president with a halo," she said, laughing.

"Some are quite elegant and rather magnificent. Some are funky and down to earth," the first lady said. "They run the whole gamut."

"Socks' image was not limited to the Christmas trees. The "House of Socks" is a traditional gingerbread house, a yard-high depiction of the White House featuring at least 20 miniaturess of the "first cat."

One of the ornaments on an East Foyer tree featured the president — complete with his angel's wings, sunglasses and a saxophone.

Does he deserve to be depicted as an angel? "No comment," Mrs. Clinton responded with a smile.

President's mother is battling cancer with grace, good humor

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Virginia Kelley, the feisty First Mom with a hard-luck life story, is staying as busy as ever with poker games, horse races and lunches with her chums. Anything to keep her mind off her cancer.

"She's always running and getting and going," says Estelle T. Blair of Hot Springs, Ark., a longtime friend of President Clinton's mother.

The 70-year-old retired nurse is taking her own advice: In a speech about cancer, she recently told a group of women to stay on the go "to get your mind off your problems."

Mrs. Kelley buried three husbands, one an abusive alcoholic. She moved away from her oldest children two years ago to help her only other child through a drug addiction and — with her family's problems solved late in life — fought breast cancer with a radical mastectomy.

Friends say her cancer has resurfaced, and she is undergoing chemotherapy. The White House will not comment about her health, and Mrs. Kelley — a chatty, colorful character in scores of interviews during her son's campaign — is politely declining requests from journalists now.

There have been hints of her private struggle.

Speaking to a group fighting breast cancer in October, Clinton referred to his "brave mother who struggles on with her breast cancer condition and who has resumed her remarkable life."

In one of a series of speeches on breast cancer, Mrs. Kelley told a group of Louisiana bankers' wives last month, "I don't know how much time I have. But I told my doctor I refused to go until they find a cure for this thing."

Her advice to the women: "You stay busy to get your mind off your problems. If you keep busy, you won't have so much time to think about them."

Mrs. Kelley has given herself little time to fret.

She is working on her autobiography, makes speeches about breast cancer and carries out her functions as the mother of the president, such as the recent dedication of an elementary school in Arkansas.

Her attorney, Robert Barnett, said she works regularly with ghost writer James Morgan, reminiscing with him, talking into a tape recorder, making changes in his copy and "doing a little writing of her own."

The book, scheduled for release by Simon and Schuster next year, "is a very personal story of her journey," said Barnett.

Mrs. Kelley has been to Washington only a handful of times, most recently to go Camp David for Thanksgiving. One day, it poured outside while the family stayed in an old jigsaw puzzles and talked. "That was — by far — her favorite day," said another friend, Johnette Taylor.

After returning to Arkansas, she caught up with the mound of mail from admirers and had lunch nearly every day with a friend.

On Sunday, she and a few pals played poker. Mrs. Kelley is a $2 bettor on weekends at the Oaklawn Park race track in her home town, but the season does not begin until early next year.

Fridays are special. That's when Mrs. Kelley and 11 friends get together for their "Birthday Club." They meet to chat, gossip, celebrate their birthdays and brag about their kids.

"These are 12 marriages that the time each of us get to testify it's time to go home," said Edith Irons, a longtime friend of Mrs. Kelley who was the president's high school counselor.

Mrs. Kelley stays busy on the road, too. She has given speeches about cancer in Washington, Louisiana, Ohio and Canada. And friends say she plans to return to the White House for a Dec. 18 family reunion, a tradition fostered by her son to keep him in touch with the family of his father, who died in a car accident 47 years ago.

Constipation caused by many medications

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been plagued with chronic constipation for the last few years. This seems to happen every time I go on a diet (even those run by a nutritionist). After trying to increase fiber and liquids unsuccessfully, a local health food store recommended my taking a mega-mineral tablet including 500 mg of magnesium and 1,000 mg of calcium. This is the only thing that has helped, yet I am concerned that this can be as habit-forming as taking Milk of Magnesia over a long period of time.

DEAR READER: Alas, you're correct. It's the magnesium in the mega-mineral tablets that stimulates evacuation, much as the Milk of Magnesia does. This substance can, when used for long periods, become habit-forming. The bowel may not function properly without it.

Remember that much constipation is caused by medications of all sorts. In such instances, reducing the dose or changing medicines may solve the problem. Remember also that constipation is associated with a sedentary lifestyle and certain diseases, such as an underactive thyroid gland.

You should bring your symptoms to your doctor's attention. He may wish to obtain blood tests and intestinal X-rays to diagnose your condition -- or he may simply urge you to exercise more.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a discolored big toe on my right foot. I was told by a podiatrist that it is a fungus and the cure is worse than the disease. The nail is raised on top, and I can no longer even wear all my shoes. Is there a topical cream I can use?

DEAR READER: No, there isn't. The best treatment for severe, chronic toenail fungus infection is to remove as much of the nail as possible -- especially the white, soapy residue under it -- and then apply liquid antifungal medication, such as liq-

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Alexander Pope obviously didn't have much time for Bacon or Cromwell. He wrote:

If parts allure thee, think how Bacon shin'd.
The wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind;
Or ravish'd with the whistling name.
See Cromwell, damn'd to everlasting fame!

Well, if Bacon was the wisest, he would solve today's deal successfully; but in his mean season, he would fail.

West, luckily not having a heart, led his fourth-highest spade. How should South plan the play?

Bacon, when in mean season, sees two spade tricks and wins East's spade king with the ace. Then he leads a club. East grabs the ace and returns the spade seven. West being careful to duck the trick to dummy's 10. South may take eight tricks: two spades, three hearts (including the finesse) and three clubs. But when he leads a diamond, East wins with the ace and returns his last spade to West's three winners: one down.

When in a sage stage, Bacon realizes that East must have both minor-suit aces for his opening bid. The correct plan is to lock West's long spades out of the game. And that is done by sacrificing a spade trick. Bacon ducks the first trick. West wins the second trick with the spade queen and leads a third round to declarer's ace, but now the contract is safe. South just plays on each minor suit in turn, coming to nine safe tricks.

It doesn't matter how slowly you start a race as long as you cross the finishing line first. Ask your local hare and tortoise if you doubt it.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Dec. 6, 1993

In the year ahead there are strong indications you might develop several new conduits for generating income. What makes it so admirable is that each may be your own creation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You are still in a favorable cycle for the fulfillment of your hopes and expectations. The secret to your success lies in your ability to translate into practicality that for which you're wishing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions are presently developing in a manner that could enable you to fulfill a secret ambition you've been harboring. Give it priority today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Regard life philosophically today and don't anticipate negative results before you've given things a chance to work out. A positive attitude enhances possibilities for success.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

Sometimes it's unwise to make changes or adjustments in plans which are already in progress. Today, however, you might be able to improve your lot by doing so.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you have to make a choice today between experimenting with new methods or procedures or sticking with traditional ones that have proven themselves, hang onto the latter.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be alert for a shift in conditions today where your work or career is concerned. If you're caught off guard you might miss a window of opportunity that will have a brief existence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone who knows how to make a good presentation might offer some suggestions today that sound nifty, yet are impractical. Don't be taken in.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You might feel like an underachiever today if you don't push yourself to your outer boundaries. Be productive and industrious, but don't take on more than you can manage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you might visualize yourself in the instructor's role, only to discover the person you're attempting to teach actually knows more about the subject than you do. Be a student, not a snob.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Possibilities for personal gain look rather strong today, provided you have a solid game plan and aren't depending too heavily on chance to fill in the bare spots.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You might be a bit more daring than your contemporaries today and this is okay, provided you use good judgment and shift on impulses that are too erratic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Opportunities of a financial nature may be available to you today, but not necessarily to your contemporaries. If you're participating in something privileged, keep it to yourself.
