Pet license changes

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Seminole County is planning to sue four animal hospitals for what they say is a failure to pay county license tag fees. The county commission authorized the legal actions on Tuesday.

To resolve future collection problems, the county also is planning to change the license collection program to eliminate veterinary sales of county pet licenses.

The county says the four hospitals owe a total of $2,730 on involces that are up to two years old. Efforts have been made by each of the hospitals to make payments on their accounts and one hospital, Spring Run Veterinary Hospital, has disputed their $216 billing, said Linda Thompson, animal control accountant.

County officials say under normal conditions, the license fee collections often take months, delaying rebates for up to nine months.

Frank Kirk, acting animal control official, said the tag fee collections from vets can lag months because of the licensing system. The license tags are now delivered to vets in batches. typically 100 or more, said Kirk. The license tags are sold for pets that have received their rables vaccination.

Kirk said the license fees aren't due from the vets until the entire batch of tags are sold. sometimes a year later. The vets retain $1 from each tag fee, $6 for neutered pets, $11 for un-neutered pets, for administrative costs.

Of the tag fees delivered to the county, $2 from each fee is used to pay the county's $25 rebate to residents who have their pets neutered. A rebate may take up to nine months after the operation has occured because of the delay in collections from the vets, said Kirk.

SANFORD - The Federal Bureau of investigation is reviewing a complaint made in December against A.A. "Mac" McClanahan, executive director of Seminole Self-Reliant Housing Inc., a San-ford-based affordable-housing business.

In interviews, McClanahan, who also is a Sanford city commissioner. has denied any wrongdoing.

Eddie Bodigheimer, resident agent in charge of the Orlando FBI office, said on Wednesday that he received the McClanahan complaint recently. Bodigheimer said the complaint was forwarded to the FBI by the Inspector General's Office of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Bodigheimer said that the complaint is under review to determine what manpower should be assigned to it to it. Bodigheimer declined to discuss the nature of the complaint or to give the complaintant's name. McChanghan said on Thursday that he was confident no wrongdo-ing would be found in an investigation.

"I have no reason not to," said Dees. "I have no reason to believe Mac is stutity of anything."

The FBI review follows an investigation earlier this year by Carol Bennett, a special agent for the USDA Inspector General's Office in Miami. The office investigates all complaints made to it regarding agriculture department programs, including the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA). Seminole Self-Reliant Housing has received nearly $1.4 million in FmHA grants since 1983 to develop low-cost housing and to repair older homes, said Ron Whitfield, district FmHA director. The grants allowed the housing firm to assist low-income residents to obtain FmHA loans to build up to 220 homes and

Salt endangering drinking water

BROOKSVILLE - Saltwater is seeping inland at the rate of one foot a day along the coasts of southern Hillsborough, Manatee and Sarasota counties, threatening future drinking water supplies.

That grim prediction was part of a Southwest Florida Water Management District study released Wednesday, analyzing the 1,300 square mile water-use "caution area."

Results show that so much freshwater has been pumped from the area that rainfall cannot replace it, and in the next 50 years saltwater could creep as far as eight miles inland.

The $1 million study - which includes a computer model and construction of several monitoring wells - is supposed to help officials decide how much water can safely be pumped from the area. But what they have found so far has convinced many that the threshold already has been passed.

'It sounds to me like we have a very serious problem." said John Hamner, a water district board member from Bradenton.

DEA agent, informant indicted

MIAMI - A U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent and a confidential informant charged with lying to convict a pair of cocaine suspects were trying too hard to bring the two to justice, a DEA spokesman said.

'I think what we have here is a situation where overzealousness took over and resulted in a very tragic situation," said DEA spokesman Jim Shedd. "What we are talking about is perjury in a court proceeding."

A federal grand jury returned the indictment Thursday, charging Thomas Bigoness, a DEA agent in Miami, and Maria Polkowski, a DEA informant, of conspiring to obstruct justice and give false testimony to the original grand jury, judge and trial jury in the case of Evaristo and Balbino Ramos.

The brothers were convicted Nov. 30, 1989, and sentenced to 20 years in prison on cocaine trafficking counts.

Bigoness and Ms. Polkowski didn't act for personal gain but were trying to make sure cocaine traffickers were caught and punished. Shedd said.

The indictment also stated Bigoness and Ms. Polkowski conspired "with each other and with persons known and unknown to the grand jury," but it did not elaborate.

Murderer resentenced to death

SHALIMAR, Fla. - A convicted killer who won a new trial has gotten the same result: a death sentence and a life term for two murders he committed in 1987.

Circuit Judge G. Robert Barron, following a unanimous jury recommendation, Wednesday resentenced Frank Athen Walls, 24, of Fort Walton Beach to die in Florida's electric chair for the shooting death of Ann Louise Peterson, 20.

Walls killed Ms. Peterson and Air Force Senior Airman Edward Alger, 22, originally of Umatilia Lake, during a break-in at the mobile home the victims shared near Fort Walton Beach.

Barron also resentenced Walls to life in prison with at least 25 years before parole, the only other sentence possible for first-degree murder, for slaying Alger, who had been shot and his throat slashed.

Walls couldn't receive death for Alger's slaying because judges cannot impose a harsher punishment on retrial. Alger had been stationed at nearby Eglin Air Force Base.

The Florida Supreme Court reversed Walls' original convictions because of an error during a competency hearing prior to the first trial.

The second trial was moved to Marianna because of publicity about the case in Okaloosa County.

Conservation league ranks lawmakers

TALLAHASSEE - House Finance and Tax Chairman Michael Abrams and Senate Natural Resources panel member Lawrence Plummer were top environmental lawmakers in a bad year for conservation, the Florida League of Conservation Voters said Thursday. "Environmental bills suffered multiple attacks of weakening amendments," league board member and attorney Dan Hendrickson said. "Nearly all major, positive environmental legislation was weakened, compromised and eventually killed.'

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE Southern Bell issues credits

By BILL BERGSTROM Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Florida's largest telephone company says 10,000 customers are getting unwanted charges deleted from their bills after an attorney general's investiga-tion and the number could grow.

Southern Bell began sending bills that itemize charges for extra services such as call-waiting after Attorney General Bob Butterworth said July 13 he was filing suit against the company.

Butterworth seeks $14 million in alleged overcharges for services he said many customers didn't know they ordered.

The most frequent example was a $2.50 a month "wire maintenance service charge' to cover any needed repairs to in-home phone wires and jacks.

In addition to sending itemized bills the company advertised in newspapers encouraging people to check their charges.

Special itemized bills will continue to be distributed to customers until the middle of August.

-Spero Canton, Southern Bell spokesman

The 10,000 asking adjustments so far are a small fraction of Southern Bell's 3.8 million customers, more than half the telephone customers in the state, company spokesman Spero Canton pointed out Thursday.

The figure may rise, he said. "Special itemized bills will continue to be distributed to customers until the middle of August and if anyone has questions or concerns we encourage them to call us."

Judge won' toss Rolling indictment

By RON WORD Associated Press Writer

GAINESVILLE - A judge said he would consider a defens request for more time to prepar for the trial of Danny Harok Rolling, who is charged in the 1990 slayings of five college students.

Circuit Judge Stan Morris de nied Thursday a request to kill the indictment, as asked by th defense on the contention the the grand jury should have bee empaneled outside of Gainesvill and that defense attorney should have been allowed question potential grand jurors. "I see no reason to revisit that ruling at this time," said Morris.

He denied similar requests before the November 1991 grand jury session that resulted in the indictment of Rolling on five counts of first-degree murder and three of sexual battery.

The judge took under advisement a motion from Public Defender Rick Parker for additional time to read evidence and decide if it should be kept from the public.

Parker has received 4,330 computer files, about a tenth of the documents available, from investigators. He said he has had time to read 123 of them.

The Gainesville student murder task force, which at its peak had 200 investigators, put in more than 120,000 hours

The rankings let voters judge lawmakers' actions on more than 200 environmental bills and amendments rather than their campaign speeches, league President Hank Cohen said.

In the 1992 regular and special sessions, lawmakers introduced about 70 bills and scores of amendments that weakened environmental regulation, Hendrickson said. "It's the worst in several years."

The group ranked lawmakers' votes on 218 measures on issues such as wetlands protection, water quality, air quality. endangered plants and wildlife, use and disposal of hazardous materials and garbage and waste incineration.

First in the voting rankings in the House was Abrams, D-North Miami Beach, who favored league positions on 38 of 49 occasions.

"I know you've all heard the rumors about George's health. Some of them are so crazy I really have to laugh," she said Thursday.

Mrs. Bush said some scuttlebutt has it that the president planned to undergo heart surgery the day after the November election.

"Do you really think I would let the man I love more than anything in the world jog. much less run for president of the United States, if he had a heart problem?" she asked.

The audience of about 500 people roared with laughter when Mrs. Bush mentioned another rumor that Bush has the disease lupus.

"Let's get it straight: the dog has lupus," she said. "He (Bush) feels just great."

Bush has begun a busier campaign schedule in recent days, one that will bring him to Jacksonville on Monday for a rally and reception.

Mrs. Bush said voters hungry for change in government should examine her husband's foreign policy record, particularly the fall of communist governments in the Soviet Union and Later in the day, Mrs. Bush visited Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children and Women in Orlando.

When reporters there asked about columnist George Will's suggestion that her husband should step aside, she referred to Will as "just another nut.":

Responding to a newspaper ad by former Florida Republican chairman Tommy Thomas that Dan Quayle step down, Mrs. Bush said, "That's crazy. The vice president has been a superb vice president."

Thomas was unhappy with Bush's choice of Dan Quayle as running mate in 1968, and paid for a full-page newspaper ad which ran Thursday in The Washington Post, pleading with Quayle to drop off the 1992 ticket.

In Tallahassee, she took a potshot at Democrat-ic presidential candidate Bill Clinton, although she never mentioned him by name.

set. "We have been looking at it for almost two years."

Parker told the judge that he has asked Alachua County to provide two fulltime attorneys to assist on the case, but won't know until Aug. 11 if the county will provide the needed money.

He said he still could not provide the court with a timetable on how long it will take to review the documents.

"My inability to do it at the current time, I hope, is not a permanent inability." Parker said.

EDITORIALS Cut and slash

All signs point to a particularly nasty presidential campaign, with each candidate trying to cast his opponent in the most negative light. In politicianspeak, this is known as "defining" the other guy. Euphemisms aside it most oftenis gratuitous mudslinging tht trivalizes and ultimately demeans the electoral process.

The American voters deserve far better than the cut-and-slash campaign techniques that predominated four years ago. An anemic economy, a staggering national debt, rising unemployment, urban decay and inferior public schools are just some of the problems that demand answers, not superficial sound bites and sloganeering.

An increasingly skeptical electorate wants to know precisely what George Bush and Bill Clinton propose to do about the challenges confronting the nation. That is why the candidates would do well to focus on the key issues instead of on innuendo and character assassination.

One of the most effective forums for discussing the issues would be a freewheeling debate between the candidates themselves. Such a format has been proposed by a Harvard University research team. The group is encouraging the television networks to set aside time for substantive discussions of the issues during the nine Sundays between Labor Day and Nov. 3.

The Harvard plan calls for two 90-minute presidential debates and one vice presidential debate. Each debate would be handled by a single moderator, without a studio audience. The next five segments would consist of 40-minute conversations conducted separately with each candidate, focusing on such issues as abortion, taxes and economic growth. A concluding 90-minute segment on the Sunday before the election would feature speeches by the presidential candidates.

To offact their costs and lost revenues, the TV networks would be allowed to sell advertising time to be aired before and after the debates or conversations. CNN and C-Span already have embraced the "Nine Sundays" concept.

last thing any president needs is a vice president who thinks too much. A cognitively overactive Lyndon B. Johnson gave John F. Kennedy a fit.

That so many Republican legislative and executive branch pooh-bahs are openly discusa-ing -- and leaking to the press -- their desire to replace Dan Quayle may attest more to a rearrangement of the deck chairs on the Titanic than to jumping to a safer ship.

Having made the case against Bush replacing Dan Quayle, I still contend that history and current events require exactly that Draconlan decision.

Would any Quayle replacement help the ticket? Well, a few would -- in much the same way that Al Gore ennobled the Democratic ticket.

In this "curiouser and curiouser" year of the on-again. off-again Ross Perot; the evolvement of the "new media," which now dominates the political process; and the solidly uncommitted 20 percent of the electorate hungering for leaders of audacious courage. Bush can still emerge as a national hero.

But in this age of the new media, there's one candidate, ignored by pundits so far, who could electrify the campaign: Iowa Rep. Fred Gandy. I'll take the "Love Boat" "Gopher" over the "Can't spell 'potatoe'" albatross anytime.

JACK ANDERSON Is Baker's rescue mission OK for us

WASHINGTON - If James Baker leaves the State Department to ride to the rescue of the floundering Bush campaign, he would proba-bly be replaced by the department's No. 2 official, Lawrence Eagleburger. As acting secretary of state. Eagleburger would serve more in the role of caretaker than policymaker until after the November elections.

During his 30 years in the foreign service. Eagleburger rose from the ranks and held a wide range of jobs including that of former ambassador to Yugoslavia. In a sense, his chief asset is also a liability. Eagleburger has re-volved in and out of the diplomatic door more than any other government official in recent history. As ambassador to Yugoslavia in the late 1970s, he was an ardent advocate of American bank loans to that country. When he left, he

Ein a sense,

But the three other networks and the political parties are balking. ABC, CBS and NBC are worried they will lose money; the candidates' handlers are afraid they will lose control.

As to viewership, it is likely the debates would draw large audiences, simply because the american people want to see how the candidates differ on the major issues. An actual debate, instead of the custmary parallel press conferences before a panel of jouranlists, would give voters a better oppor-tunity to weigh the pros and cons of each candidate's ideas.

Above all, the unadorned debate format would allow voters to see the candidates apart from the staged settings preferred by their campaign strategists. Such slick packaging of canidates has contributed to the public's disillusionment with the political process.

The corrosive effect of this cynical approach to presidential elections can be seen in a steadily declining voter turnout during the last three decades. In 1968, for instance, nearly half of all registered voters stayed home. With Ross Perot now out of the race, many of his supporters also may revert to the periphery of the political scene and decline to participate in the balloting.

The American people are tired of image makers. They want straight talk from the candidates. "Nine Sundays" is one means of getting it.

"It's that book! Ever since Millie found out that she made much more money then I did, she's been acting funny!"

Perot balked at campaign

WASHINGTON - Refugees from Ross Perot's abortive presidential campaign say that while his appearance at the NAACP Conven-tion in Nashville was the final straw, the wheels actually began to come off the campaign following an Annapolis, Md., press conference on June 24.

Perot's idea of a campaign appearance was a speech in front of his volunteers or some other friendly audience. His idea of meeting the press was to go one-on-one with Larry King or Katie Couric, and possibly answer phoned-in questions from the public. By Annapolis, Perot's candidacy was being taken seriously. and for the first time he faced a room full of political reporters, many from Washington.

The questioning was sharp and direct. Perot faced questions about what he believed in and why, about what he would do if elected, about his business dealings (including questions about an airport project in Ft. Worth in which he is in partnership with his son), and about his personal life (including his membership in an apparently restricted country club).

Later, Perot was livid. As he saw it, the questions were planted by Republican operatives. He had never had his personal and professional ethics questioned, he thundered, and he was not about to let that happen just to be elected president.

According to Ed Rollins, Perot's former campaign manager, this was the first time Perot began to question what he was doing. and the first time he began to really see what the next half-year would be like. It all went downhill from there.

"You know," said Rollins with a laugh, "I've had candidates in the past that I never knew what they were going to say. But this is the first time I've ever had one that I didn't know where he was or what he was going to do."

Often Rollins and his campaign aides would not know where Perot was going until after he had left or returned. One morning Rollins got a frantic early call to turn on his TV. There was Perot doing the "Today" show.

Now, in retruspect, many of the professionals whom Perot hired question whether he ever intended to spend the $100 million he stated publicly - or the "$200 or even $300 million" he told Rollins he was ready to spend.

Rollins brought to the campaign highly respected San Francisco ad man Hal Riney. who created the much-acclaimed 1980 television campaign of Ronald Reagan. Riney's marching orders were to put together a "world-class" media campaign for Perot, and in the week before the ill-fated NAACP speech, he and his ad team flew to Dallas for Perot's approval.

Reportedly, Riney's campaign called for an immediate barrage of image ads to allow Perot to "define" himself and counter the flow of negative charges from the GOP. These would be followed in the fall by spots featuring the issues positions that Perot would have defined by then. Interspensed with these would be longer-form programs, both half-hour bio-graphics and "electronic town meetings."

Riney brought detailed story boards for th initial spots. They were to be shot in film at a cost of about $100,000 each. By Election Day the entire media program --including buying time on networks and local stations -would have cost in the range of $20 million. Expensive, but not out of line for presidential campaigns these days. Riney also asked for an initial check to get the first spots pro-duced and to get He had never h a d h i s time-buying started. Reportedly, he suggested the initial payment should be in the $5 million range.

Perot said no. In a move that deeply shook Rollins and the others. Perot dismissed Riney. Then he had some of those close to him leak the fact that he had not liked the proposed commercials because they were "too slick."

personal and

ethics questioned.

But Rollins and the other political pros he brought in believe that Perot nixed the Riney media campaign strictly because of the cost. In the initial meeting. Perot fought with Riney and Rollins over the use of more expensive film as opposed to videotape. Then, after rejecting the Riney proposal, Perot announced that an old friend and former Dallas TV man. Murphy Martin -- who has never done commercial work -- would put some $2,500 spots together for him.

Later, at a meeting with Rollins and Hamilton Jordan, Perot said that he did not see why the campaign had to buy any television time at all since he could get as much free time as he wanted by calling Larry King or Katie Couric. It was at that moment the political pros knew Perot never intended to spend the money necessary to be elected president, did not understand what it would take to be elected. and that any chance Perot had of ever being elected was finished.

his chief asset ioined the board of is also a liabildirectors of a ity.g Yugoslavian bank that benefited from those loans. While on the inside, he encouraged Yugoslavia to generate hard cash by producing exports. When he was on the outside, he became the top American representative for one of those exports - the Yugo car.

To be sure, Eagleburger is held in high esteem by State Department staffers. His career got its biggest boost during the Nixon administration when he became a protege of Henry Kissinger, followed by his stint in Yugoslavia under Carter. During the Reagan administration, he was assistant secretary for European affairs and undersecretary for political affairs, until he retired in 1984.

When his nomination was pending to become deputy secretary of state in early 1969, we reported how as ambassador and assistant secretary, Eagleburger leaned on American banks to loan money to Yugoslavia, even though loans to East European countries were frowned on by the administration. On one occasion in early 1983. he summoned executives of nine major American banks to Washington to implore them to loan money to Yugoslavia - even if it meant trimming back loans to other East European nations. Treasury Secretary Don Regan was reportedly livid at Eagleburger's meddling.

In a 1985 interview, a Yugoslavian news-paper asked Eagleburger if he felt any culpability in putting Yugoslavia billions of dollars into debt. His reply was: "I believe I did a great favor to Yugoslavs getting them the money they felt was needed at the time. I will not apologize because of this. If now Yugoslavia has difficulties in paying back. then maybe she should not have taken the loans."

These aspects of his past could come back to haunt Eagleburger. In the meantime, many in Congress are loath to see Baker jump the State Department ship in order to run a political campaign - particularly at a critical juncture for sensitive negotiations in the Middle East, where Baker's personal prestige is key to any agreement.

"Baker's an unusual talent." one senior House Democrat told us. "Taking him out of his current position to take over the campaign is really putting politics ahead of the country. It might be the best thing in the world for the Bush campaign, but it's a serious mistake for the country."

This official called Eagleburger "capable" and even "outstanding." but said the pro-blem is he's just going to be an "acting secretary of state. There's going to be a void. .. It's no time to pull your top guy out to save the campaign."

Preschool plans yearlong celebration

By VICKI DeBOS Heraid Staff Writer

SANFORD - The First Presbyterian Church Preschool has been in operation for two decades and they want to celebrate.

The school, operated at the church at 301 Oak Avenue, Sanford, will be starting a school year-long celebration on Saturday morning by having an open house at the school and a carnival at Centennial Park. across the street.

"We're going to have lots of fun." said Gerry Carter, principal of the school. "And we're going to let it go all year."

On Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Carter said the area in and around the school will be alive with clowns, entertainers, games and even some animals from the Central Florida Zoo.

"This is just the beginning." Carter said. "We hope to culmi-

For those who are not familiar with the school, there will be an open house to show off the facilities and have the teachers. available to meet with parents and potential students. There will be an opportunity to preregister students for the fall programs.

The school is currently offereing programs for two-yearolds through kindergarten. In the past, Carter said, there has been a first grade and they may return that program in the future.

"With all the financial trouble the public schools are in we can help out by offering an alternative first grade program," Carter noted.

Atlantis off on 'exotic

By Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL - Atlantia roared toward space today with seven astronauts who will fly a satellite on a 12-mile string in one of the most complicated and exotic missions in shuttle history.

The 100-ton spaceship rose on a pillar of flame at 9:56 a.m. and headed out over the Atlantic Ocean, cutting through a hazy sky. It was a perfect morning for a launch. Forecasters had given rare 100 percent odds of favorable conditions, and the launch team breezed through the final few hours of the countdown. The liftoff was delayed for a minute by what appeared to be a mechanical problem.

Two minutes into the flight, the twin solid rocket boosters dropped into the sea as planned and Atlantis continued toward a 264-mile-high orbit on the thrust of three liquid-fueled engines.

Atlantis and the astronauts will venture into unknown territory during the sevenday flight, commanded by veteran spaceman Loren Shriver. It is the 49th shuttle mission and the first to test tethered spacecraft.

Italy's Tethered Satellite will be recled out from Atlantis on Monday as the shuttle zooms through Earth's magnetic field. The thin cord between the satellite and shuttle is expected to generate 5,000 volts of electricity as a result of the electrically-charged space environment and the speed of the craft.

The 12-mile formation will be traveling nearly 5 miles per second, or 17,500 mph, and will be the longest structure ever flown In space.

NASA says the experiment is safe, though surprises are expected.

We're being prudent in our risk-taking here. We're taking the risk by even sending it out there, which is our business," said Jeremiah Pearson III, head of NASA's space flight program.

There is no chance the tether can wrap around Atlantis or that the half-ton satellite can bang into the ship, said NASA mission manager Billy Nunley. The astronauts would cut the tether long before that happens.

The tether is expected to move very slowly in space, giving the astronauta plenty of time to act if anything goes wrong. Retrieval is expected to be the hardest part of the 30-hour experiment.

"If we get the satellite out and get the data, that's success," Pearson said. "If they

This tether, in addition to being more than 630 times longer, contains copper as a conductor.

Current will flow along the tether from the satellite to the shuttle, and electron beam guns in the cargo bay will shoot the electrona back into the electrically-charged ionosphere, closing the circuit.

The Tethered Satellite system cost $379 million, split almost evenly between NASA and the Italian Space Agency, NASA provided the tether, the satellite-deploying boom and some instruments on the satellite. Italy supplied the satellite, which is reusable.

The other satellite aboard Atlantis, a European Space Agency science platform called Eureca, also is designed to fly more than once. The satellite will be released 18 hours into the flight, and another shuttle crew will retrieve it next spring so scientists can examine the crystals, brine shrimp eggs and other biological samples aboard.

Census finds contrasts, diversity

By TIM BOVEE Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Small town and country living may not be all it's cracked up to be. Census numbers show people in the bigger cities and their suburbs tend to be better educated, better paid and less likely to be poor than the rest of the country. The Census Bureau on Thursday released its most detailed compilation of facts about the nation's 248 metropolitan areas, home to three out of four Americans.

The numbers showed:

• In metropolitan areas, more than three-fourths of adults aged 25 and up graduated from high school, compared with twothirds elsewhere. A metropolitan American is nearly twice as likely to be a college graduate as a person living elsewhere.

• The typical metropolitan household takes in $32,000 a year, about $9,000 more than other households. One metropolitan household in 20 has a six-figure income, compared with one in 58 in the rest of the country.

• People outside metro areas are more likely to live below the federal poverty line of $12,674 a year for a family of four.

• Homes in smaller cities and the countryside, although bigger, are far more likely to lack full plumbing and kitchen facilities or a telephone than homes in the metropolitan areas.

The quality of life outside metropolitan areas has declined along with the population, said demographer Carl Haub of the Population Reference Bureau, a private research group in Washington.

Non-metro areas "don't have the high-paying jobs (and) they have a much older population that's in retirement." he said. "The non-metropolitan counties have really become a small subset of the U.S. population."

The government defines a metropolitan area as a central city and suburbs with a population of 100,000 or more. They range from giants such as New York or Los Angeles, where more than 10 million people swarm, to Boise, Idaho, or Lawton, Okla., where the countryside is a short drive away.

About 60 percent of the 192.7 million people in metropolitan areas live in the suburbs.

Other glimpses of metro America, as portrayed in the 1990 census:

•One person in eight is poor. •One home in six has at least three cars and trucks parked outside.

One metropolitan house in six was built before 1950.

South, West most popular destinations

By THE BOVEE Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Americans are less likely to move to the West, ending what the Census Bureau calls "the most venerable trend in U.S. migration history."

The South and the West remain the most popular destinations for people moving inside the country, the agency said Thursday in a report covering 1980 through 1988.

American migration has been westward since the founding of the nation, and its continuation into modern times made California the most populous state in the nation.

Overall in the decade, the South gained 3.2 million people and the West gained 1.3 million. The Northeast lost 1.8 million and the Midwest lost about 2.8 million.

In 1968, the South, with a gain of 262 million migrants, was still the destination of choice, despite the region's long slide over the decade.

Florida had the greatest net migration, 1.9 million people. New York was the biggest loser. 1.4 million people.

Post 53 Cyclones need help

SANFORD - The Sanford American Legion Post 53 Cyclones baseball team will be traveling to Baseball City for the American Legion B State Baseball Tournament from August 6-8 and the team needs your help.

The squad is in need of donations to help defray the cost of travel and other expenses for the tournament. The length of the season and the cost of traveling to three tournaments already this summer has pretty much depleted the team's budget.

If you can help, please call Mike Powers or Jerry Posey at Seminole High School, 322-4352.

Junior battling for position

ORLANDO - At 32, he's the elder statesman of the Miami Dolphins defense. E.J. Junior is also a man fighting for his job.

The 12th-year pro will start the Dolphins' presesson opener against the Washington Redskins on Saturday night, but only because David Origgs, the team's regular left outside linebacker, is a contract holdout.

Junior, beginning his fourth season with the Dolphins, has been a backup to Griggs for two years. He appeared in all 16 games; primarily in the nickel defense and on special teams, and finished with 25 tackles and five sacks in 1991.

The Dolphins' roster is loaded with young linebackers cager to replace Junior, who has specialized in rushing the passer since coming Miami. That role may be assumed this year by first-round draft pick Marco Coleman.

MARIETTA, Ga. - The Shaw Park (Ga.) Bronco All-Stars are in need of a chiropractor this morning.

Thursday night in the finals of the PONY (Protect Our Nations Youth) Baseball Bronco Southeastern Regional Tournament at Marietta's Shaw Park, the Seminole Central Bronco All-Stars blasted six home runs in crushing the host team 16-7 to win the championship and earn the right to advance to the Southern Zone Tournament in Tampa next week.

Four of the first six batters in the Central All-Star line-up hit home runs in the top of the first inning as Seminole jumped out to a 6-0 lead.

Lake Mary's Tim Raines Jr. greeted Shaw Park starter Matt Sottnick by leading off and reaching on an error and scored ahead of a home run by Casselberry's Donald Taylor.

After Lake Mary's Cory Patterson lined out hard to center field, Sanford's Phillip Eubanks started a series of back-to-back-to-back home runs, with Winter Springs' Jeremy Frost and Casselberry's Jeff Monaco also connecting, ending the night for Sottnick.

Winter Springs' Austin Costin walked, a wild pitch moved the runners to second and third and Casselberry's Ryan Wilder lifted a sacrifice fly to center to chase Hitchier. Shaw Park got two runs back in the bottom of the first inning and added two more in the third inning to cut the lead to 6-4 as the host's ace pitcher, Elder, who Seminole beat 6-2 in the opening game Monday, shut the Central offense down.

But the local nine came back with two runs in the fourth inning and then added another six-run outburst to put the game away.

"I guess we relaxed a little after the opening outburst and let them get back in the game," kidded Seminole Central manager Dave Wilder. "Two big innings basically secured the win. We had a 10-run lead in the fifth inning. If I had changed pitchers we could have won it by the mercy rule, but I wanted all the kids to play.

In addition to the first inning homers, Monaco later hit his second round tripper of the game and Raines also left the yard, his second of the tournament.

Costin worked the first three innings for the pitching victory. Winter Springs' Scott Ferrell and Frost worked two innings each to complete the win. Frost sealed the victory in blazing fashion, with four of the six outs he recorded coming on strikeouts.

This was the first ever Southeastern Regional Championship for a Seminole PONY Baseball team and was the first appearance in the Regional for a Seminole PONY team since 1967.

"We went undefeated and we never trailed," Wilder said of the tournament. "Our defense and pitching were solid."

Contributing to an 18-hit Seminole Central attack were Monaco (3-for-4, two home runs, two runs scored), Eubanks (3-for-4, home run, three Bee Champs, Page 23

Orgeron, 31, was arrested last week on a battery charge after allegedly head-butting a bar manager in Baton Rouge, La. He will be arraigned Monday in Baton Rouge City Court.

SCC Athletic Director Larry Castle said academics often prevent players from advancing to Division 1 schools and other colleges, although there are many chances to go on.

"A lot of it has to do with academics," Castle said. "Regardless of the level of talent, there's a place you can find for anyone to play. Some of the guys have to take an extra year and get their AA (Associate of Arts Degree). Certainly many of our players can play Division I, but it takes more than basketball."

Because of the strick graduation requirements, most junior college players must go to Division II or NAIA schools, but that hasn't hurt several SCC graduates, such as Vanzant, Sanford's Bernard Merthie and Terry Acox.

As mentioned earlier, Vansant helped Rollins to within two wins of the national tournament, while Merthie has returned to SCC as the head coach after playing basketball and graduating from Division II Eckerd College in 1995 and Acox, who left SCC three-years ago, is now playing professionally for the Atlanta Eagles, an USBL team, after playing at Division II Armstrong State.

All y bunting into a fielder's choice and grounding into a fielder's choice, the Dodgers managed to load the bases with two out, but couldn't much across a run. Meanwhile, Lake Howell's Brian Gomes allowed

Recovery one day at a time

DEAR MARY: I am 16 years old and completed my treatment program two weeks ago for alcohol and cocaine addictions. I was court ordered into it because I was having some problems with the law, but it was probably the best thing that ever happened to me. I really want to go straight now, but I'm scared to death to think about going back to school in the fall. I'm afraid I'll slip back with my "old" friends and habits. I'm also afraid straight kids won't have anything to do with me because I've been a "druggie" since 7th grade. I want to figure out a plan for facing this stuff before it hits me in August. I'm not sure I'll be strong enough to face it alone. SCARED EX DRUGGIE

DEAR SCARED: You're absolutely right to want to develop a plan for facing these tough situations. Are you in a support group now? If so, talk about your fears with other group members and ask them how they dealt with the same situations. If you're not in a support group right now, call your treatment facility and ask for a referral. In my opinion, it is imperative that you stay away from your former friends who are still using. Studies have found that this is a major cause of relapse. However. since I think you are right that straight kids who know your past will probably shy away from you at first, perhaps you can get a part-time job or do some volunteer work to structure you out of school hours productively.

Several high schools in Seminole County have Recovery groups meeting on campus for kids who are returning from treatment. Check with your school's guidance office before classes resume to see if this service will be available to you. Remember that your recovery will unfold one day at a time. If you can find one person you trust, either a student, counselor, teacher, or administrative staff person to help you get through the hard times at school, your re-entry will be much less difficult. Good luck.

(Mary Balk holds a master's degree in counseling and is a certified Addiction Prevention professional and counselor with the Drug Prevention Office of the Seminole County School District. Write to her in care of the Herald at 300 N. French Ave., Sanford, 32771.)

Driving drunk Woman cautions motorists about tempting fate

DEAR ABBY: On July 13, 1990, my life was changed forever. What was supposed to be the time of my life turned out to be the trial of my life. I had been happily married for nine years, and we were expecting our first child. One moment, my husband and I were returning from a friend's anniversary celebration, and the next moment, I woke up in the hospital; my husband was dead and my prematurely born baby was in the intensive care unit — all beca driver...and that driver was me! I took a life, and God gave me a life.

I had read about things like this, but never thought it could happen to me. Now here I am in jail, a woman with no husband, my in-laws have lost their son, and my beautiful baby boy is fatherless. I changed so many lives that night because I drove drunk.

I will be going home soon to be with my family. but what about his family, who will never again see the son they loved or hear him say, "I love you, Mom and Dad."

I hope this letter leaves an impact. It could have been another of your readers instead of me - and it will be them if they continue to drink and drive. JACKLYN IN CELL BLOCK S-L. MARION COUNTY JAIL

DEAR JACKLYN: It's to your credit that you're writing from a cell block to warn others so they will not have to experience the horror you have. There is a lesson to be learned from your tragedy: Never, Never drive if you've had even one drink. And pregnant women shouldn't drink at all.

DEAR ABBY: Out of respect for my elders, and the fact that she is my husband's mother, I recently avoided what could have been a nasty confrontation with my mother-in-law.

Fortunately, we live 2,500 miles from my husband's parents, but we call them every Sunday, although we haven't seen them for two years. My husband and I have a 15-month-old son they haven't seen yet, so I try to keep them current on "Eric's" developments. During the course of our conversation, I told my mother-inlaw how tall Eric was for his age, and she blurted out, "Well, just be sure he doesn't get too fat like you; you know how terrible it is to be fat, and I'm sure you wouldn't want Eric to have that problem.'

I was terribly hurt, but held my tongue - even though I was tempted to say. "Yeah - it's as hard for me to lose weight as it is for you to quit smoking." (She has emphysema and a two-plus-pack-a-day addiction.)

The reason for my letter: My in-laws are planning to visit us next month and I would like to tell my mother-in-law to back off. My weight is my problem - not hers. I don't want their visit to be a disaster, which it surely will be if I hear one more comment about my weight. I've sent cards, letters and baby pictures in an effort to show her that I want a friendly relationship but nothing seems to work.

If you publish my letter, I will clip it and send it to my mother-in-law.

UP TO MERE IN VIRGINIA DEAR UP TO HERE: Here's your letter. I hope it helps.

"Hook, Line, and Sinker"

"Pickins' sure are scarce down here today. A hungry fish just doesn't stand much of a chance. Wait...what is that? Do I see a fat, juicy worm? Great! Breakfast at last!!"

Well, our hungry little fish satisfied his appetite, but little did he know it would be his last meal. Temptation dangled, and he grabbed it ... "hook, line and sinker", totally unaware of the consequences.

Although humankind, too, has needs for gratification, God has given us His Word, that we might develop the understanding of which needs we must satisfy, and how to do so appropriately, in order to avoid the dangers of temptation.

Faith, hope, patience ... means by which we can survive the demands of our lives ... the manna which provides strength and satisfaction. You need not hunger. Worship this week. Rely on the sustenance that only God can provide. Don't take the bait.

Gene manipulation interferes in life's meaning, church says

By OBOROE W. COR AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK - Genetic engineering has profound religious implications, touching on the "nature of life" itself, says a new study, the most extensive yet undertaken by a church body in conjunction with scientists and other experts.

"The food we cat, the health care we receive, our biological traits and the environment in which we live are all affected by research and developments in genetic science," according to the study.

The report was drawn up by a Genetic Science Task Force headed by the Rev. Kenneth L. Carder of Knoxville, Tenn., and approved for churchwide educational use by last May's governing conference of the United Methodiat Church.

Some "very serious ethical and theological questions" are involved. Carder said in an interview. He said findings could even shake up the Judeo-Christian concept of human ain.

If it is found that "freedom of choice is affected and behavior labeled ain is genetically determined, we would have to rethink our understanding of sin." he said.

He noted indications that some ailings, such as alcoholism, may have such origins, and there is similar, still inconclusive evidence about homosexuality.

"It may very well turn out to e from a genetic factor," he Carder, 51, active in scienceeligion dialogue, said the hurch study was used last cober in a national conference scientists, theologians, nicists and lawyers at the Oak idge Center for Scientific Rearch.

The study was drawn up in re than three years of work scholars in religion, genetics, agriculture and economics.

including hearings around the country and about 400 written suggestions.

"Genetic developments in medicine and agriculture promise to alter the very nature of society, the natural environment and even human nature," the report save.

It says the potential impact on human integrity and creation itself can either promote or thwart "aspects of the divine purpose."

Genes in cells now are being altered "in plants and animals, even humans, in order to correct disorders or to introduce more desirable characteristics," the report notes.

It says that in undertaking the Human Genome Project to map the estimated 100,000 human genes "genetic science crosses new frontiers as it explores the essence of life."

The implications "force us to examine, as never before, the meaning of life, our understanding of ourselves as humans. and our proper role in God's creation.

The study insists on preserving genetic diversity, including the individually unique, often baffling mix of drawbacks and talents that make up persons in which difficulties may be the thing we want to resist is reducing the human to a mechanistic view, a machine with interchangeable parts.

."We're very complex beings. social, spiritual and psychological, as well as genetic, all interrelated."

Also, he said, "we oppose any kind of engineering to build a superhuman. Who is to decide what's a whole, complete human being? Who decides what characteristics are to be eliminated or enhanced?"

The study takes stands on various other theological-ethical issues involved in genetic development, including these: Opposes patenting life forms for exclusive ownership. such as the "Harvard mouse," a developed creature particularly sensitive to cancer, the only "animal" patented so far.

However, more than 100 applications are pending to patent a wide variety of fish, cows, pigs and agricultural products. "Forms of life should be available to all and owned by all, not just by those who profit from it." Carder said. "Exclusive ownership compromises our concep-tion of life as a gift from God enriching all creation."

 Warns against any releasing of new life forms into the environment without first doing so in a simulation of the environment, so that they can be recalled if harmful effects are determined.

Otherwise, once an organism is released into the real envi-ronment, "it's very difficult to get rid of."

Supports genetic techniques to prevent or cure illneses but opposes it for "cosmetic purposes or to gain advantage over others," such as to produce 8-foot basketball players.

Advocates both public and private funding of genetic research, since private funding alone tends to be guided mostly caring for older people, such problems also have inhibited studies on what would contribute to improving the lives of the elderly. Kathleen C. Buckwalter, a University of Iowa nursing professor and director of nursing research, said her work with aging patients in special care groups sometimes faces interfer-ence from worried family members. Childress said trying to define ethical princi-ples for treating older people runs the risk of further segregating them from the general population. But they have special needs and vulnerabilities, he said. For an older person who is being put into a nursing home and doesn't want to go, the issue is forcing someone to give up their way of living in order to take care of them properly, he said. Once in the home, he said, the patient likely will have to get up at a certain time, cat at certain times and be limited in moving around. "To say to an elderly person you're free to refuse treatment, you're free to commit suicide, is likely to be seen as indifference," Childrens said. But to order someone to undergo treatment is medical tyranny, he said.
