Media awards to be presented

LAKE MARY — The Angelin K. Taylor Annual Memorial student media awards will be presented tonight at Greenwood Lakes Middle School.

The 19 videotaped and computer-generated productions were judged as top winners at the district media festival earlier this month. Judging was done by members of the Seminole County Association of Media Specialists.

The awards will be presented this evening to elementary and middle school students. There were no high school winners.

The winners at the county level will be entered into state-level competition later this summer.

The awards ceremony this evening begins at 7:30 p.m. in the school's media center, 601 Lake Park Dr. in Lake Mary.

Midway fire deemed arson

MIDWAY — Seminole County fire investigators say a fire at The Last Stop bar Tuesday morning was deliberately set.

Fire investigator George Burkett said 5:30 a.m. fire Tuesday was apparently set in a portion of the vacant building being used to store mattresses, clothing and other household items. Burkett said the fire caused $25,000 to $30,000 in damage. He said an arson investigation is continuing.

Correction

SANFORD — Contrary to a preliminary report by the Florida Highway Patrol, it has been determined alcohol was involved in the Sanford automobile accident in which Amy Gongwer of Casselberry was killed on Memorial Day.

This morning, an official with the FHP confirmed that alcohol was involved on the part of Claudia Axonovita of Longwood, the driver of the car which collided with the vehicle in which Gongwer was a passenger.

Axonovita was traveling southbound in the northbound traffic lane on U.S. Highway 17-92 when the accident occurred near the intersection of County Road 419, according to the FHP.

It was also incorrectly reported that Sonah Patel of Sanford had been released from Florida Hospital-North in Altamonte Springs. She is presently in the Critical Care Unit at that hospital where she is in "good condition" and being treated for injuries sustained in that accident, hospital officials said today.

SANFORD — Residents will have an opportunity to review Seminole County's $1.8 million 1991-1992 Community Development Block Grant program tonight.

Boulevard widens into win-win deal

By LACY DOMEN
Herald People Editor

They're saved. Perspiration beads trickled down David Wester's face as he spent yesterday afternoon tending to the 10 trees he saved along Lake Mary Boulevard.

Less than a mile down Lake Mary Boulevard, at the intersection of Longwood-Lake Mary Road, the woody smell of trees that were felled for the widening of Lake Mary Boulevard hung in the humid air as a wood chipper ground them to chunks suitable for landscaping. The wood chips are free.

"Did you see that machine? I think it's great," Wester said. "I knew we couldn't save them all and if you need wood chips for your yard, they're free."

Wester, his mother, Frances, and his sister, Joy, meanwhile banked earth around the trees that were moved earlier in the day. If Wester had not moved the trees by 5 p.m. yesterday, they would have been fodder for the wood chipper late this morning.

Wester said he wrote a check for over $1,900 to buy and move a doomed laurel oak and a camphor tree from adjacent property and move eight trees on his own property.

"Oh, it was worth it," he smiled, surveying the stately oaks in a row by his back property line and the oaks and camphor trees that dot the landscape closer to the road. Look at the shade," he said. "I couldn't have bought them anywhere else for that price."

Wester explained that he still has a lot of work to do to ensure the trees live.

"Some of it is up to God. We need rain," he said.

Frances said she was happy her son had succeeded in saving the trees.

"When David was little in Lake Mary, if you heard a car going past, you'd run out to see. It was a quiet little town full of trees. It means so much to preserve a little bit of old Lake Mary," she said.

Wester said he plans to continue landscaping his property with more shrubs and trees.

"Well, there is this other tree I

County commissioners approve exclusive contract for bus shelters

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners approved an exclusive five-year contract with Fluor Enterprises to provide bus shelters in the unincorporated areas of the county.

Over the objections of two other firms who said they could pay more to the county Fluor was chosen. Fluor is the company chosen by Tri-County Transit to provide covered, lighted plexiglass shelters for bus stops throughout Orange County. Each location would be subject to county approval and the OK of the nearest property owner.

Each kiosk would sport two four-by-six advertising signs. The signs were opposed by SISTER, a Sanford-based women's activist organization, who said the signs would conceal potential assaults and indecent acts. The signs will not carry advertisements for alcohol and tobacco products, and adult products, services and establishments.

Fluor will pay the county $300 per year for each shelter. County land management director Herb Hardin said there are only 10 to 15 eligible locations in the county for the shelters. All of the other locations are in cities, Hardin said.

But Dan Bellows, of Community Services Inc., said he could offer the county $500 per kiosk and a percentage of the advertising revenues. He said the advertising income from the shelters is high. Bellows said the county should offer the contract to all shelter companies on a first-come, first-serve basis.

But commissioner Jennifer Kelley, who represents the county on Tri-County Transit's governing agency, said all companies were invited to apply for the shelter contract. Bellows responded the contract applied only to Orange County, so few companies, including his, applied.

The five-year contract with Fluor was approved 3-1 with commissioner Larry Furlong opposing.

TDC to select 'media relations' firm

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County will move ahead with hiring a media relations firm to attract editors of major publications to write articles designed to attract tourists to stay here.

Commissioners authorized Tourist Development Council members to select a firm from the four seeking the position and return later this summer for financing from county tourist taxes. Firms applying for the position include Reno Publishers publicity firm JEP & Associates, Heathrow and Gilbert

Advertising & Marketing Longwood.

Only commissioner Larry Furlong opposed the suggestion saying it was premature for the county to seek such a promotional effort.

County tourist development director Jack Wert said the firm would have contacts with editors of major northern publications with the ability of publishing major articles about Seminole County's attractions and its benefits. He said many writers may work regularly for two dozen magazines and newspapers so the number of potential travelers they can reach is tremendous.

Among the "targets" would be travel, food and sporting editors writing for national and regional magazines, as well as food and lifestyle publications.

Wert said the county could eventually develop the same leads, but the members felt his time would be better concentrated on advertising and promotion.

Wert said the firm would cost approximately $72,000 for the remainder of the current fiscal year and the following year, which begins Oct. 1, 1991. Wert said he anticipated a $3,000 to $4,000 monthly fee and $1,500 to $2,000

Man sues cigarette company

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — When the smoke clears in a Seminole County Small Claims courtroom in Sanford either an Altamonte Springs man or the mighty Phillip Morris tobacco company will pay for the man's $85 stop-smoking class.

"They have known that smoking is addictive for more than 20 years," said Daniel Walter. "They were well aware of that and yet they continued to market to juveniles which was what I was in 1976 when I started smoking."

Walter filed suit April 19, seeking the $85 for the classes and for additional court costs, now amounting to $49.50. Walter filed suit against Phillip Morris as manufacturers of Marlboro cigarettes, which he smoked at a rate of 1 1/2 to two packs per day for nearly 15 years.

And Phillip Morris responded to the suit Wednesday by sending their attorney, William Palmer Jr., from Tampa. Another Phillip Morris attorney, Sylvia Walcott, refused to comment on the case or why Phillip Morris would pay to send an attorney from Tampa.

Lyman awards tonight

By VICKI BOGGERMAN
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Lyman High School will honor its students, especially the seniors, who have excelled academically throughout the school year. At the school, 1141 County Road 427 in Longwood, this evening, principal Carlton Henley will give praise and plaques to the students in both the college preparatory and vocational courses who have done well.

He will also honor those students who have been presented with scholarships or other awards from outside institutions throughout the year. "This is a special opportunity for us to honor these students in front of their families and friends," Henley said.

Among the honorees this evening will be four students who were National Merit Commended Students and the 26 recipients of the Presidential Academic Fitness Award.

Two student, Syed J. Malik and Bhumi Mehta will be honored for their perfect grade point average.

Henley praises the class of 1991 for their innovations that they brought to the school. He noted that they were helping advance education in the state by being among the pilot schools which was a part of the Blueprint for Career Education, a vocational program which stresses the importance of a well-rounded curriculum for success.

Henley said that the vocational students will receive equal billing on tonight's awards.

"Vocational students make up an important part of the school," he said. "They have accomplished a lot this year. They were top winners in the state's auto technology contest and won awards in the state computer contest."

He noted that the class of 1991 had the lowest drop out rate in the history of the school.

He praised the class for their accomplishments and said that he was proud of what they had done.

"We want to congratulate them for what they have done and for their perseverance," he said.

Frank Swartz, occupational specialist for Lake Mary High School, speaks to group of area business people and others, including school board members, who took part in the school's program to acquaint students with various occupations.

Lake Mary shadows praised

By VICKI BOGGERMAN
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — While the administration at Lake Mary High School had invited business leaders to a luncheon at the school yesterday to praise them for their participation in the "Shadowing your Future" program over the past year, the participants had nothing but praise for their hosts.

Diane Wilson, head nurse at South Seminole Community Hospital in Longwood said that the program is "one of the best educations a teen ager can get." "Shadowing your Future" was the brainchild of Sandy Davis and Anna VanLandingham.

Davis is the school's occupational specialist and VanLandingham teaches applied economics to seniors.

Davis began last summer to try to devise a program with which to help young people decide on a career path. VanLandingham was interested when she heard about the program, because it was a practical way to bring economics to life for her students.

"What better way to learn about business than to be a part of it for a day," she said.

Frank Schwartz, another occupational specialist at the school, praised the program, saying that the young people who had had the benefit of participating in the program were "better prepared for the future than their peers who had not."

Through the "Shadowing your Future" program, students were paired with someone currently working in the field that the youngster hoped to pursue. They would spend a day working together with that person, following the normal routine.

According to Davis, most of the students came back excited about the line of work they had chosen but, she said, some came back with a different picture.

"One young man had always wanted to be a police officer, but after a day on the job he came back complaining, 'All he did was shuffle papers all day long.' He didn't want to do that any more," she said.

Wilson had a similar story. "One girl came in and got sick to her stomach," she said. She added that another student passed out while working with the physical therapist on a "particularly bad wound" in the whirlpool room.

"But what better way to learn than that, though," she said. Yesterday's luncheon was prepared by the food service students at the school.

Safer blood

The American Red Cross is preparing to undertake a major overhaul of its blood collection, testing and distribution system. The reforms are prompted in large part by growing public concern about the safety of the nation's blood supply after revelations that at least one Red Cross center mistakenly released contaminated blood to hospitals.

The Red Cross collects half of the nation's blood supply. The other half is collected by facilities affiliated with the American Association of Blood Banks.

A month ago, the Red Cross placed the director of its Portland, Ore., blood bank on "working probation" after the U.S. Food and Drug Administration issued a report citing the center for gross mismanagement. Among other disquieting discoveries, the FDA found the center inadvertently had released one pint of blood that had initially tested positive for the AIDS virus and two pints that tested positive for Hepatitis B.

In the past year, the FDA has slapped Red Cross centers throughout the country with hundreds of citations for improper handling of blood. An internal review by the Red Cross covering a six-month period in 1987 and 1988 revealed that, of 6 million units of blood collected and processed, more than 2,400 were improperly released.

The Red Cross is served by 10 regional blood banks. For each unit of blood collected by a local blood center, a small sample goes to each of the 10 regional banks for testing.

Rather than administer a uniform test, each of the regional blood banks performs a different test, with widely varying quality. After testing is completed, each of the 10 blood banks enters data into separate computer systems. The end result is 10 different blood tests on 10 different computer systems, with the Red Cross national headquarters pretty much out of the loop.

The Red Cross intends to correct these flaws by spending $120 million during the next several years to reorganize and modernize its regional blood banks and local centers. Its plan calls for consolidation of 83 laboratories into less than 10; standardization of testing procedures for all blood banks; and installation of a new computer system to bring all of the centers under one nationwide network.

These measures will not ensure that absolutely no tainted blood ever makes it into the nation's blood supply. There will remain a negligible risk because no existing blood test for AIDS is 100 percent effective. It is estimated that 1 contaminated unit in every 150,000 properly tested units of blood escapes detection.

But the Red Cross reforms will go a long way toward ensuring that bad blood does not slip into the system because of mismanagement or inefficiency at a regional blood center. This should be comfort to the 4 million Americans who receive blood transfusions each year.

U.S. women must share the blame

When two widows of prominent politicians, 8,000 miles apart, decided to succeed their husbands in public office, they made a powerful statement about the ubiquity of women's double existence.

Teresa Heinz ruled out succeeding her husband, Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania, after he was recently killed in a plane crash. Fluent in five languages and knowledgeable in foreign affairs, environmental matters and family issues, the African-born Heinz was deeply sensitive to her children's concerns about losing another parent's nurturing to politics.

Sonia Gandhi rejected the offer to continue the Nehru-Gandhi dynasty by succeeding her assassinated husband, Rajiv Gandhi, as the head of India's Congress Party. The decision of Italian-born Gandhi, who speaks six languages, may have been influenced by her distaste for politics and an intense devotion to her family.

Neither of the two rejections means that public life is more burdensome for women than men. Many women are both nurturers and politicians. But the fact remains that women do not begin to wield political power in a system defined by males.

"To define is to exclude and negate," wrote Jose Ortega y Gasset. By defining white masculinity as the normative value of American politics, white males have created negative images of women and minorities as national leaders, excluding them from the power structure.

Those exclusions in the United States are especially invidious when compared to the dramatic progress women are making in other countries. A few weeks ago, when France installed a woman, Edith Cresson, as prime minister, that country joined Bangladesh, Dominica, Iceland, Ireland, Netherlands Antilles, Nicaragua, Norway and the Philippines, which all have governments headed by women.

Women are making progress in other countries.

Of those nine countries, none can remotely match Norway for substantive governance by women. The prime minister, Gro Harlem Brundtland, and the heads of the two opposition parties are all women. Of the 168 members of the Norwegian Parliament, 89 (or 53 percent) are women. And both candidates for mayor of Norway's capital, Oslo, are women.

To Norwegians make nervous about women having too much influence, Astrid Nookberg Hoberg, the Conservative Party candidate for mayor of Oslo, offers a reminder: "They still have two-thirds of the Parliament."

Compare Norway's 53 percent to America's 6 percent (29 women) in the House of Representatives. In the U.S. Senate, it's worse: only two women out of 100 (2 percent) serve.

Power is not always a function of numbers, but numerical preponderance helps. Women's powerlessness in Congress is further compounded by their paucity of subcommittee chairmanships — congressional dukedom where the real power is exercised. Women chair only seven of the House's 131 subcommittees.

At first blush, one might be tempted to attribute such powerlessness to a sexist society. That's only half of the problem: women are equally culpable.

SILENT COUP

ROBERT WAGMAN

Book: Dean caused Watergate

WASHINGTON — The first major revisionist history of the Watergate scandal, "Silent Coup: The Removal of a President," has been published by St. Martin's Press.

The complex book has as its chief villain former White House counsel John Dean, who became a whistle-blower and then the chief witness against his former colleagues.

According to authors Len Colodny and Robert Gettlin:

A woman named Erika Rikan was running a high-class call girl ring. Among those availing themselves of its services was the Democratic National Committee. John Dean knew about this, say the authors, because his wife-to-be Maureen was a close personal friend of Rikan's.

Unknown to anyone at the White House, Dean ordered the burglary at DNC headquarters in the Watergate office complex in hopes of either digging up dirt on the Democrats or protecting his wife's reputation. Then, when the break-in was discovered, Dean orchestrated a massive coverup. He repeatedly lied to Congress and Watergate prosecutors, shifting blame to the late John Mitchell and the president.

Meanwhile, say the authors, there was a cabal of high-ranking military officers who distrusted, and even hated, Richard Nixon because he had cut the Pentagon out of strategic decision making. This group of officers, centered in the office of the Joint Chiefs, spied on Nixon and his top aides.

When Watergate started to unfold, they leaked key information to Bob Woodward, a former military officer who had just started work as a reporter for The Washington Post. Their purpose, eventually realized, was to force Nixon out of office. Thus the book's title: "Silent Coup."

The cabal's chief operative is said to have been Gen. Al Haig, a top national security aide to Nixon and later his chief-of-staff. The authors say that Haig, as much as anyone, was Woodward's "Deep Throat."

In a way, this book is an attempt by John Mitchell to reach out from the grave through his closest friends and grab John Dean by the throat. The authors say they researched the book for more than eight years. When they began, Mitchell was still alive and gave the project his blessing.

It is impossible to overstate how much those who worked in the Nixon White House hate John Dean. He is the reason most of them went to jail. This book is really their joint attempt to posthumously clear Mitchell and themselves, by making Dean and Haig the villains.

Nixon himself — easily manipulated by Dean — appears more as a fool than a crook. In fact, everyone seems to have been manipulated by Dean — except the Pentagon cabal, which used what was happening to its own ends.

To those well versed in Watergate lore, this book takes a certain amount of fact, blends it with a certain amount of supposition, then throws in wholesale amounts of pure speculation to reach its conclusions.

For instance, there is evidence that the Joint Chiefs, suspecting decisions were being made without their approval, received information from inside the White House through military officers assigned to the National Security Council staff. In the book, this reverse information pipeline becomes a cabal, and then a coup. Likewise, there has been general knowledge of the call girl operation, but evidence that it serviced DNC clients and friends is scant.

The credibility of a work like this often turns on minor details.

The book makes much of Woodward's long relationship with Haig when Watergate occurred. The authors say the relationship came about because Woodward regularly briefed Haig during 1968-70, when he was stationed at the Pentagon as a low-level Navy lieutenant.

To support this assertion — which has been and continues to be denied by both Woodward and Haig — the authors quote former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs Adm. Thomas Moorer, and his then deputy, former Pentagon spokesman Jerry Friedheim.

However, in response to the book, both Moorer and Friedheim now deny any knowledge of Woodward's having developed any kind of relationship with Haig during the future reporter's year at the Pentagon.

"Woodward was just one of about six staff couriers, and just an average one at that," says Moorer. "Believe me, the JCS never had low-level officers briefing the NSC or its top staff. At the very most, Woodward may have said 'Good morning, General Haig' when he handed him a packet of cable traffic. But I can't honestly say to my personal knowledge the two ever met."

But John Murphy, a spokesman for the publisher, says, "We have the admiral on tape, not one tape but two, and it has been listened to constantly by editors and lawyers here."

The book's publisher had hoped it would be launched with a Time magazine cover story and excerpts, and a piece on CBS's "60 Minutes." Time says it decided not to excerpt the book because it is "too complex and interwoven to lend itself to being excerpted."

An attempt by John Mitchell to reach out from the grave and grab Dean by the throat.

Pennsylvania dibs Pentagon's extras

WASHINGTON — Pennsylvania lawmakers have managed to make their state the first in line when it comes to receiving handouts from the Pentagon.

The political coup means that Pennsylvania can claim excess forklifts, tractors, backhoes, dump trucks, salt spreaders and other heavy equipment in the Defense Department inventory before other states get a chance to look over what's available.

This arrangement was quietly tacked on to the Dire Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1980. It was made possible by the powerful Rep. John Murtha, D-Penn., chairman of the defense appropriations subcommittee. Murtha slipped the "demonstration program" into the bill for his colleague, Rep. Paul Kanjoraki, D-Penn. This regional equipment center is based in Kanjoraki's district and services the entire state.

Pennsylvania got a plum that otherwise would have rotted on the ground.

Pennsylvania's preferential treatment has left members of the House Armed Services Committee irate. At an April hearing, Rep. Richard Ray, D-Ga., noted that Congress had given "Pennsylvania a kind of plum which other states feel they ought to have some of, too."

Kanjoraki admits Pennsylvania got a plum — but one that otherwise "would have rotted on the ground."

Because Murtha is one of the people who controls the Pentagon's piggy bank, no member of Congress is eager to challenge the rationale behind Pennsylvania's sweetheart deal. An Armed Services subcommittee held a private meeting recently at which the issue was raised. But many lawmakers fear that raising the challenge would backfire against their own bids to acquire military bases and projects in their own districts. And they know Murtha has a long memory.

But a few members drafted an amendment to grant all states the same access to excess military equipment that Pennsylvania now holds. Our associate Jim Lynch has learned that the House Rules Committee has quietly killed the amendment.

Kanjoraki told us that the "emergency" appropriations bill was a "good engine" to propel his pet project into law. It would have wasted valuable time to wade through the conventional legislative process to win approval. Kanjoraki also noted that the program doesn't cost the government a nickel.

In the wake of the spending spree of the 1980s, U.S. military warehouses are overflowing with surplus equipment, and much of it is of value to municipalities and the private sector. The glut of surplus will swell further as military bases close around the country.

But few realize the Pentagon has a new pecking order for this excess equipment. It is first offered to all military units, then to Pennsylvania and needy foreign governments. Everyone else gets leftovers.

Despite the dubious manner in which it became law, Kanjoraki's project carries the seeds of a sound idea. Kanjoraki may understand how states can better use the massive military surplus that often otherwise winds up selling at auction as scrap.

The Pennsylvania equipment center glories in comparing itself to Benjamin Franklin's concept of a book library. Its brochure credits Kanjoraki with the vision to create an "equipment library." The project is billed as a key to launching projects in road repair, garbage removal, reforestation and other local needs.

Last year, the regional center received surplus equipment that cost the Pentagon about $3 million. The center's entire laundry list includes 30 backhoes, 25 dump trucks, 20 garbage trucks and 17 cranes.

Teenager says gunshot was accidental

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

MIDWAY — The 16-year-old boy held for shooting and killing Sanford man in a Midway parking lot last week says the gunshot was accidental, Seminole County deputies say.

The gun discharged into the face of Antonio Dwight McGill, 2, last Thursday morning in a parking lot at the corner of Midway and Sipes Avenues, Sheriff's spokesman George Procheil said Wednesday. The youth, who is being held at the Seminole County Juvenile Detention Center, told investigator Tom Artigstall McGill was trying to rob him, Procheil said.

The youth told Artigstall he tried to "pistol whip" McGill with a .32 caliber handgun he was carrying, when the weapon discharged into McGill's face, Procheil said.

Procheil said McGill, of 2741 E. 20th St., had an "extensive arrest history," dating back to 1979 on charges including burglary, carrying a concealed weapon and drug possession. At the time of his death, there was an active warrant for his arrest for violation of probation for an attempted sale of a controlled substance conviction, Procheil said.

McGill died Friday afternoon at Orlando Regional Medical Center after life-support systems were removed. McGill was a life-long Sanford resident and a construction worker. His death leaves a widowed wife with one child.

The youth has been charged with manslaughter. Procheil said a decision will be made at his arraignment next Tuesday whether he will be tried as an adult. The youth's name is being withheld until the decision is made to try him as an adult.

While the youth has told them McGill was trying to rob him, investigators still have unanswered questions in the case, Procheil said.

"That still doesn't answer what he was doing in the middle of the street with a gun and he's 16 years old," Procheil said.

EPA delays report on deaths in non-smokers

By PAUL BAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK — An Environmental Protection Agency official says he has delayed indefinitely the release of a report saying secondhand cigarette smoke kills 63,000 non-smokers a year, including 37,000 from heart disease.

"It has not been approved by the EPA. It may never be approved by EPA," Robert Axelrad, director of the federal agency's indoor air division, said Wednesday. "We are reluctant to put it out with an EPA name on it any time in the near future."

Axelrad emphasized that the estimates do not represent official EPA determinations. Rather, they are the views of scientific authorities commissioned to write the report, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press.

The report was intended to be an informational document for use by professionals in the field of indoor air pollution and passive smoking, Axelrad said. It is a broad review of existing research on passive smoking and disease.

Each chapter was reviewed for scientific accuracy by at least two experts outside the EPA, he said.

A final draft of the report was completed in April.

The report has been the focus of intense lobbying by the tobacco industry, which was particularly upset by a section on secondhand smoke and heart disease.

State goes to court to stop 'deceptive' cable TV offer

Staff and Wire Reports

PORT LAUDERDALE — Florida is seeking an injunction to stop "Encore" from being sent to the state's cable subscribers, joining other states contending the cable company's marketing plan abuses consumers.

In a court hearing Wednesday, Florida Attorney General Bob Butterworth urged Broward Circuit Judge Lavon Ward to ban Storer Cable TV of Florida from offering Encore to subscribers.

Customers will get the 24-hour movie channel for free initially, and then will be billed later for it unless they request that it be canceled.

"I am personally offended by this marketing tool," Butterworth said after the hearing. "It is just plain corporate greed. They don't care about anything but the bottom dollar."

Butterworth has accused Storer of violating Florida's Unfair and Deceptive Trade Practices Act. The hearing was to be continued today.

Mom must face dangerous reality

DEAR MARY: I'm a single mom rearing two sons, ages 10 and 16. My 16-year-old has had problems getting along with people all his life, but it just keeps getting worse, to the point where my younger son and I are both afraid of him. Even if I ask him to do the smallest thing, like picking up his shoes, he flies in a rage, breaking and throwing things. He has hit me a few times, and my younger son is afraid to be in the house with him unless I'm at home. I have tried to get him into counseling but he won't go. He says I'm the "sick" one. He has quit school, sleeps all day, and runs around all night. My ex-husband will have nothing to do with him or me and I don't know where to turn. Can you help me?

MARY BALK

DEAR ABUSED MOM: You and your younger son are in a dangerous situation and you must start now to protect yourself and him. Of primary importance is to keep yourself and your younger child from being harmed or killed while you're making your plans. Let's first acknowledge the reality that your 16-year-old son is out of control, and there is nothing you or anyone else can say or do to change him unless or until he wants to change. Since he is so certain that he doesn't need counseling, you go. Be absolutely honest and direct about the severity of your home situation, then ask the counselor for a referral to a competent attorney who is familiar with domestic violence issues. If your son behaves in a way that makes you feel frightened for the safety of yourself or younger son, get out of the house immediately, and call 911 for assistance. Don't be afraid or ashamed to file charges if that is appropriate, and don't waste any more of your time or mental energy thinking or hoping that something you can do, say, think, wish or demand will make him see what he is doing and straighten up. Keep your focus on yourself and your younger son's safety and recovery from this tragic situation. Your older son will come to terms with himself only if and when he is ready. He's lost to you for now. Good luck and get moving!

(Mary Balk holds a master's degree in counseling and is a certified Addiction Prevention professional and counselor with the Drug Prevention Office of the Seminole County School District. Write to her in care of the Herald at 300 N. French Ave., Sanford, 32771.)

Medicine for elderly can be too much of a good thing

DEAR ABBY: I have recently seen two letters in your column regarding the use of medicines by older people and the problems that medicines may cause, especially in the elderly. People should consider themselves "consumers," not "patients," when it comes to health care, particularly when it comes to the use of medications. Many older people believe that "M.D." stands for Minor Deity, and they don't ask questions of their doctors (or pharmacists) when they should!

Asking questions means taking some responsibility for one's own health care. It helps to know what to expect from a medicine. For example, ask: 1. Exactly what is this medication being used for? 2. How will I feel after I start taking it? 3. How will I know if the medicine is working? 4. What are the most common side effects I can expect? 5. Can I do anything to prevent any of these side effects? 6. How long will I have to keep taking this medicine? 7. Will this medicine be very expensive? About how much? You are doing a major service to older adults and their caregivers by calling attention to this issue, Abby. I hope this letter is helpful to your readers.

MADLEINE FEINBERG.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DIRECTOR, ELDER HEALTH PROGRAM, UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND SCHOOL OF PHARMACY DEAR MS. FEINBERG: Since overmedication can be such a serious problem for senior citizens, I am sure your letter will be of more than passing interest to many. Other valuable tips for using medicines are available. free. Send a stamped (20 cents), self-addressed, business-sized envelope to: Information Officer, School of Pharmacy, 20 N. Pine St., Room 352, Baltimore, Md., 21201.

Specialist needed to treat hiatal hernia

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a hiatal hernia and can't seem to get the help I desire from my doctor. I avoid lettuce, cabbage and spicy foods, eat numerous small meals each day and take Zantac. What else can I do?

DEAR READER: Hiatal hernia, a weakness in the diaphragm where the esophagus joins the stomach, may cause heartburn, bloating and abdominal discomfort. These symptoms are usually relieved by antacids, medicine (such as Zantac) to reduce gastric acid and dietary modifications (such as avoiding food known to cause indigestion). If this program fails to relieve symptoms, I refer patients to a gastroenterologist for three reasons.

First, I could be missing something. The problem may be more complicated than it appears. For example, peptic esophagitis (inflammation of the lower esophagus) can complicate hiatal hernia. Ulcers may be present. Or, worst of all, an undiscovered growth can contribute to symptoms.

Second, persisting dyspepsia and discomfort should, in my opinion, be investigated with a special test. Called esophagogastroduodenoscopy (a truly intimidating word, even for a professional), the test is performed by a specialist who passes a lighted fiberoptic tube into the upper intestinal tract to examine the lining. In this way, a specific diagnosis can be made.

Third, Barrett's esophagus, a pre-malignant alteration of the esophageal lining, appears in up to 10 percent of patients with symptomatic hiatal hernia. This can be diagnosed by a specialist using the test I described above, but may not be evident in the standard upper gastrointestinal X-ray series, which is the way most hiatal hernias are confirmed.

Finally, surgery may be necessary to repair the hernia; the gastroenterologist can make the appropriate referral. Although some of my readers have criticized me for previously mentioning surgery for severe hiatal hernia with intractable symptoms, when performed by a skilled surgeon, the procedure is usually curative.

Ask your doctor to refer you to a gastroenterologist. Since your symptoms are difficult to control, you need the services of a specialist.

WHAT IS

By Phillip Alder

There are times when, as declarer, you can uncover a vital clue from the opening lead. At such times, keeping your eyes open will save you from going down. But even the experts are blind at times.

Today's hand came up in an early round of the Vanderbilt Knockout Teams in Atlantic City last March. When West led the queen of clubs, declarer should have drawn the conclusion that the trumps were breaking 3-1. Against a part-score contract like this, it was unlikely that the lead would be from the singleton queen or Q-J doubleton. And if the suit was breaking 3-1, there was no point in drawing another round of trumps.

However, at one table a player who had won more than one world championship did cash his second top trump. Then he started to run the hearts, discarding the queen of spades on the third. He ruffed the three of hearts in hand and led a low diamond, covered by the jack, king and ace. But now East could return a diamond to his partner's queen, permitting West to cash the jack of clubs to draw dummy's last trump. South ruffed the spade exit and cashed the diamond nine. When the eight did not drop, South's losing tricks totaled four - one trump and three diamonds.

If declarer had started on the hearts at trick two, he could have ruffed the seven of diamonds in the dummy and made his contract.

Note finally the inadvisability of the lead. If West had started with either a spade or the queen of diamonds, the defenders would have come to four tricks - one spade, two diamonds and a trump.

YOUR BIRTHDAY

By Bernice Bode Cool

YOUR BIRTHDAY
May 31, 1991

It looks like you could play a major part in a worthwhile endeavor in the year ahead. But you won't seek the limelight; you'll operate from the wings with more concern for results than applause.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your greatest successes today should come from situations where you can transform something that is presently ineffective into something that is worthwhile and useful. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for Gemini's Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An additional strengthening of bonds could occur at this time with two friends with whom you already have a loyal alliance. This will be due to a new involvement.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you pursue constructive objectives, this could be an extremely productive day for you. Don't waste time on goals of paltry consequence.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may finally have the opportunity today, in a social setting, to establish a contact you've long desired. It could be of value to you in furthering your commercial interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could be luckier than usual at this time in enhancing your financial position. If you have any bright ideas that may spell profit, do something about them now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Two important trend lines are upwardly mobile at this time: One pertains to your popularity and the other to your material circumstances. Be hopeful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Where dollars and cents are concerned today, you're likely to be both ingenious and intuitive. This combination could put you in the profit column before the day is over.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you feel inclined to command attention at any type of gathering today, underplay your role rather than emphasize it. A low-keyed effort enhances your charisma.

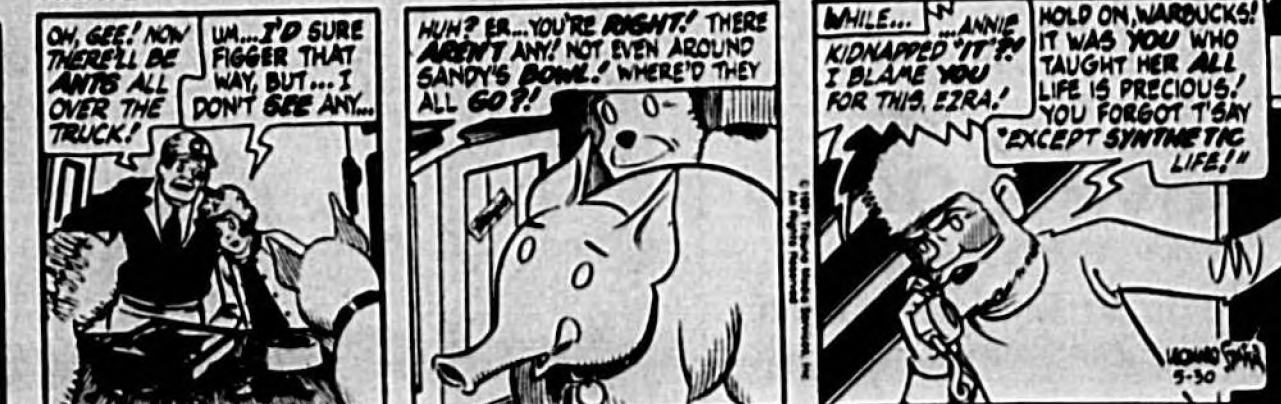

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A series of unique developments could usher in unexpected opportunities today. If you move swiftly, they might help you achieve a secret objective.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Counsel you offer friends today will be both welcomed and utilized. This is because you'll know how to get your points across by teaching, not preaching.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Competitive circumstances will stimulate your ingenuity, resourcefulness, drive and will to win today, especially those that pertain to your career, financial interests or status.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You have the marvelous faculty today to draw out others' good ideas and suggestions and expand upon them in unique, advantageous ways. The results will please you.
