Crime Spectre Banished, Lance Says He'll Stay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director Bert Lance says he will stay at his job after a government investigation disclosed Thursday it found no indication Lance had broken the law in his personal financial dealings. The comptroller of the currency had investigated Lance's private financial affairs including two loans he received for a total of $6 million. Afterward, President Carter said the report had confirmed his "faith in the character and competence of Bert Lance."

Israeli Camps 'Illegal'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three new Israeli settlements on the West Bank are illegal and will be obstacles to "constructive negotiations" of a Middle East peace agreement, says the Carter administration. The United States made its feelings known in a note delivered to Israeli officials here and in Jerusalem on Thursday.

HONOLULU (AP) — A major earthquake occurred Friday in the vicinity of Sumba Island in Indonesia, according to the International Tsunami Information Center's Observatory here. The earthquake registered 7.7 on the Richter scale here, an observatory spokesman said. There was no evidence that a Pacific-wide tsunami, or tidal wave, was generated, although there may have been a local wave, the spokesman said.

The U.S. Geological Survey said the earthquake struck at 1:09 p.m. local time, 2:09 a.m. EDT, near the Sumbawa and Sumba islands in the southeastern part of Indonesia. It said preliminary readings placed the center of the quake at 10.35 degrees south latitude and 118.54 degrees east longitude.

Australia Outlaws Strikes

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — The Australian Parliament outlawed strikes by government employees today, setting the stage for a showdown between the conservative government and the unions. The government labor legislation and the introduction of a tax-cutting national budget two days ago increased expectations that Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser would seek an early national election to be fought on the issue of "who runs Australia."

French Minister Halts Tour

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — French pride got the better of foreign policy today as Foreign Minister Louis de Guiringaud, angered by Tanzania's refusal to apologize for a hostile demonstration, cut short the last stop of a four-nation tour to promote French influence in Africa.

Crosby's At It Again

CONCORD, Calif. (AP) — about the fall in March that left him hospitalized three weeks with a ruptured spinal disc. "I'm dreaming of a White Christmas," sang 73-year-old Bing Crosby in his first stage appearance in five months following a fall from a stage in Pasadena. "It feels good, it feels right, to be a part of the scene," was Crosby's opening number. He looked a little stiff, but he joked

Sanford Okays City Hall Interior $

By BOB LLOYD
Herald Staff Writer
The Sanford City Commission Thursday tentatively approved a $150,000 budget for interior decoration of the new $1.8 million city hall now under construction. Miss Margaret McCormick, interior designer for the new facility, displayed for the commission boards containing samples of wall covering, carpeting, tile and furniture for the new city hall and received approval for her concepts. She said the color scheme for the decoration is lighter neutral tones with blue and green accents.

Miss McCormick of Tampa said furnishings in the facility will include both new and existing furniture to be repaired, retopped and recovered. The furnishings will include, she said, everything "down to desk blotters," draperies, reupholstering, refinishing old furniture, new furniture, bookcases, wall covering etc. The $150,000 figure was set as a maximum by the commission with Miss McCormick saying that the ultimate cost will probably be somewhat less. City Manager W.E. Knowles reported to the commission that it is still expected the city will move into the new city hall in December. He said that the move has to be made before the project construction is completed because the contractor to complete the contract must also demolish the old city hall and do landscaping.

Legal Advisory Group: Let 'Son Of Sam' Go

NEW YORK (AP) — A pretrial agency recommended that David Berkowitz, who police say is the "Son of Sam" killer of six persons, be released without bail because he had a steady job, a permanent residence and no prior criminal record. The agency recommended Berkowitz' release on his own recognizance even though it knew he was accused of being the 44-caliber killer, Beame said. The mayor said similar recommendations in less notorious cases "could permit dangerous criminals to walk the streets on little or no bail."

Beame, who is running for reelection, ordered an immediate investigation of the procedures used by the agency, which interviews every criminal justice defendant who appears before a judge in New York City and makes "its" recommendations to judges. Beame said he was informed of the recommendation by the agency's board chairman, Nicholas Scopetta, deputy mayor for criminal justice. Scopetta said it was the "apparently absurd result of a mechanical and literal interpretation by the agency of its criteria for recommending bail."

Meanwhile, today's editions of The New York Daily News quoted psychiatrists examining Berkowitz as saying they had "serious doubts" that he will be found mentally competent to stand trial. "At present, we are not inclined to believe that Mr. Berkowitz is lucid," said one source quoted by The News. "He does not appear to be able to understand what is going on around him at all times. He does have rational moments, but for the present, he does not appear able to stand trial."

Grand Jurors in the boroughs of Queens and the Bronx are considering evidence in the 44-caliber killer case. Police say the "Son of Sam" killed two persons and wounded five others in Queens and killed three persons and wounded another in the Bronx. An indictment returned in Brooklyn last week accused Berkowitz of killing Stacy Moskowitz and seriously wounding her date, Robert Volonte, both 20, on July 31.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Twin Voyager Spacecraft To Begin Space Journey

CAPE CANAVERAL (AP) — Twin Voyager spacecraft soon will be hurled through space to probe the mysteries of the universe — and possibly present some of their own. The billion-mile journey to the outer planets and into interstellar space will begin Saturday at 10:25 a.m. for Voyager 2. Voyager 1, to be launched Sept. 1, will fly a faster route and reach the planets first. Both will be launched with Titan Centaur rockets. The Voyagers carry television cameras and sophisticated instruments to study Jupiter and Saturn, the largest planets in the solar system; many of the planets' satellites, and possibly Uranus. The Voyagers also will carry gold records which may puzzle any extraterrestrials who find them. Mounted on the side of each spacecraft, they are messages to any other civilization that might exist.

Breathing May Halt In Sleep

GAINESVILLE (AP) — Hospital patients with severe lung diseases may temporarily stop breathing many times during sleep, medical researchers reported after a study at the Veterans Administration hospital here. The study also notes that the brief cessations of breathing, known as apnea, is not confined to older patients with emphysema and chronic bronchitis. It even occurs among healthy, young people. "It even happens to me," said Dr. Jay Block, who conducted the study along with Dr. James Wynn. Block is in charge of the pulmonary medical staffs of the VA hospital and the University of Florida College of Medicine.

Smitten Counselor Fired

COCOA (AP) — A Brevard County female corrections officer who fell in love with a prison inmate has been fired from her counseling job. Donna L. Knapp, 31 and the divorced mother of two, was dismissed from her job Thursday at the Cocoa Community Correctional Center by supervisor Michael Perez, who accused her of subordination and poor overall performance. Prison officials denied that Miss Knapp, as she prefers to be called, was fired because of preferred reports of her romance with Michael Ryan, an inmate serving a five-year sentence for grand larceny and aggravated assault.

Tot Off Laetrile Therapy

GAINESVILLE (AP) — Four-year-old Nikki Decker is off Laetrile and back in the hospital for chemotherapy treatments. The leukemia-stricken girl's parents, withdrew her from Shands Hospital at the University of Florida in June to put her on a diet of natural food and the Laetrile, a controversial cancer treatment, after judges refused to order she remain hospitalized. She returned to the hospital with her mother, Elizabeth Finn this week. Mrs. Finn wouldn't comment on the family's change of mind. Neither would hospital officials.

'Protect Elderly' Drive Begun

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — Florida officials have kicked off a campaign to "make the venerable less vulnerable." It's all part of an effort to aid the 18 per cent of the population over 65, that officials say may be virtual prisoners in their homes because of their fear of crime. A 15-member ad hoc committee of law enforcement officials and social workers met in Tallahassee Thursday to start the campaign sponsored by the state's Help Stop Crime program.

Twin Voyager Spacecraft To Begin Space Journey

CAPE CANAVERAL (AP) — Twin Voyager spacecraft soon will be hurled through space to probe the mysteries of the universe — and possibly present some of their own. The billion-mile journey to the outer planets and into interstellar space will begin Saturday at 10:25 a.m. for Voyager 2. Voyager 1, to be launched Sept. 1, will fly a faster route and reach the planets first. Both will be launched with Titan Centaur rockets. The Voyagers carry television cameras and sophisticated instruments to study Jupiter and Saturn, the largest planets in the solar system; many of the planets' satellites, and possibly Uranus. The Voyagers also will carry gold records which may puzzle any extraterrestrials who find them. Mounted on the side of each spacecraft, they are messages to any other civilization that might exist.

Breathing May Halt In Sleep

GAINESVILLE (AP) — Hospital patients with severe lung diseases may temporarily stop breathing many times during sleep, medical researchers reported after a study at the Veterans Administration hospital here. The study also notes that the brief cessations of breathing, known as apnea, is not confined to older patients with emphysema and chronic bronchitis. It even occurs among healthy, young people. "It even happens to me," said Dr. Jay Block, who conducted the study along with Dr. James Wynn. Block is in charge of the pulmonary medical staffs of the VA hospital and the University of Florida College of Medicine.

Smitten Counselor Fired

COCOA (AP) — A Brevard County female corrections officer who fell in love with a prison inmate has been fired from her counseling job. Donna L. Knapp, 31 and the divorced mother of two, was dismissed from her job Thursday at the Cocoa Community Correctional Center by supervisor Michael Perez, who accused her of subordination and poor overall performance. Prison officials denied that Miss Knapp, as she prefers to be called, was fired because of preferred reports of her romance with Michael Ryan, an inmate serving a five-year sentence for grand larceny and aggravated assault.

Rent Control And Realism

The history of rent control, that government program created with the best of intentions for the poor, has been an abysmal story of urban decay. Penalizing the very people who can provide housing, rent control has consigned the poor to dwellings for which there is no capital available for improvement. Fortunately, some significant rethinking is being done by the politicians who brought us rent control.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., once believed strongly in the liberal program for local governments to adopt. Now he acknowledges: "Had I been serving on a city council, I, too, could well have voted to impose controls."

Eagleton's reappraisal comes in the August Reader's Digest, and it is worth the reading. The Missouri Democrat, in his role as chairman of the Senate District of Columbia Committee, conducted hearings on rent control in which he learned the brutal truth. His conclusion "It is a cure worse than the disease."

"Studies estimate," Eagleton continues, "that Washington will need more than 1,200 new rental units each year to keep up with demand. Since the implementation of rent controls, however, the city has experienced a net loss in available units. Worse still, the construction of private apartments has virtually ceased."

Not only is capital unavailable for new dwellings, it is also lacking for simple maintenance, having the effect of turning large apartment areas into slums. The reason is obvious enough. Repairs cannot be financed without rental increases.

"Unfortunately," Eagleton writes, "it is the poor and lower-income residents of apartment buildings — the very people rent controls are supposed to help most — who are the primary victims of a system which provides an incentive for decay."

The senator asks us to consider New York City as the prime example of rent control's failure. New York City adopted rent controls 30 years ago, and the result has been a devastated private apartment sector. Landlords have abandoned entire neighborhoods because the compulsory sub-market rents have made owning apartments unprofitable. Their neglect has brought on an epidemic of fire and vandalism.

Nor does Eagleton propose more government measures for saving low-cost housing. Probably sensing that another government program would aggravate the problems of rent control, the senator turns to the free market for help.

"In a free-market economy, price and supply are regulated by demand. If prospective tenants outnumber available apartments, rents will increase, but so, too, will investments, prompting more apartment construction. Ideally, as the number of available apartments increases, prices will stabilize."

That is as heartening a grasp of the way the market works as we have seen from the mind of a senator. Congress could use a massive dose of such economic savvy.

There is significance, then, more than most people would think, in Eagleton's Reader's Digest reassessment. To think that free market economic thinking could be emerging as a basis for public policy makes it reason for cheerfulness.

The Clock

Florida Highway Patrol director Col. Eldridge Beach is mounting an all out campaign by state troopers throughout the state in an effort to keep the highway death toll down over the upcoming Labor Day holiday weekend.

Last year there were 23 fatalities over the holiday. This year the patrol estimates the toll could reach 25.

In an appeal to motorists to help curb the predicted number of deaths, Col. Beach says, "Safe and reasonable driving involves a great deal of common sense and the determination to drive defensively."

Col. Beach says the patrol will be using every available trooper and auxiliary man on duty for the holiday weekend Sept. 25-26. Troopers will be using unmarked patrol cars, aircraft, radar and Vascor speed computers.

The recent slaying of a trooper who stopped a motorist in south Florida spotlighted the dangers involved when an officer makes even a routine traffic stop.

An incident earlier this month thankfully didn't erupt into a shooting here in Seminole, but it had all the possibilities.

Trooper R.M. Tart clocked two cars on I-4 in Volusia County at a high rate of speed. As he stopped the cars just inside Seminole County he radioed a request for a back-up Sheriff's unit. Lt. William Hogan responded and found that Trooper Tart had spotted a rifle beside the driver of one of the cars. The trooper was taken into custody without incident and the rifle turned out to be a .22-caliber weapon that had been sawed off so the barrel was just over 13-inches — making it an illegal weapon.

The 17-year-old Winter Park juvenile who was driving the car admitted to officers that he knew the weapon was in his car and was arrested on a felony charge of possessing a short-barrel rifle in addition to citations for speeding and no driver's license. The juvenile suspect was turned over to state officials at the Sanford Regional Juvenile Detention Center.

The short-barrel rifle incident points out the importance of officers wearing bulletproof vests while on duty. The vests can save lives. Many Seminole officers regularly wear the protective vests.

State officials have now agreed to spend nearly $100,000 for bulletproof vests for all 1,200 Florida Highway Patrol troopers.

It's a sad commentary on what this country has come to when law officers are being killed in line of duty almost every day.

It's also disturbing to realize that it took the bureaucracy in this state three years to approve protective vests for troopers that had been requested in budgets submitted to the legislature. Finally the Cabinet has decided that bulletproof vests have a higher priority than other safety equipment approved by legislators.

ANGLE-WALTERS

Carter Camp Eyes 1980 Race

WASHINGTON (NEA) — President Carter's political operatives already are moving to stifle potential opposition in the contest for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination.

To achieve that goal, Carter's agents are attempting to drastically weaken several of the crucial structural reforms adopted during the past decade to democratize the party and maximize grass-roots participation in the presidential selection process.

The forum for the effort to gut those reforms is the Democratic National Committee's Commission on Presidential Nomination and Party Structure, headed by Morley A. Winograd, chairman of Michigan's Democratic party.

Because there was no formal voting when the Winograd Commission met here earlier this month there was little publicity — a situation greeted with the dispirited proposals surfaced at a task force session.

But the planned changes undoubtedly will generate considerably more passion and controversy when the 58-member commission meets in Detroit next year by the full Democratic National Committee.

The key Carter operatives on the task force were Richard G. (Rick) Hutchinson III, a member of the White House staff who was the Carter organization's expert on the delegate selection process during the 1976 campaign, and Anne Wexler, deputy under secretary of Commerce.

Hutchinson and Wexler did not introduce any of the potentially controversial proposals at the Winograd Commission meeting, but they were among the most vocal proponents of new language designed to water down the reforms.

One proposal would gut the current rule which mandated that any candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination who receives at least 15 per cent of the vote in a state primary or caucus must receive a proportional share of that state's delegates to the national convention.

The proportional representation provision was written into the party rules to guarantee that the views of a maximum number of rank-and-file party members are reflected in the process of selecting a presidential nominee.

But Hutchinson proposed raising the threshold from 15 to 25 per cent, arguing that the concept of maximum representation should be balanced by the need to winnow out marginal candidates and build a party wide consensus of support around the strongest candidates. "The whole point is to move away from a large field," he explained.

Thus any challenger to Carter in the 1980 primary campaign would be required to receive the support of at least 25 per cent of the primary voters in a state before the insurgent would be entitled to a single delegate vote from that state at the national convention.

Bad News On Forced Busing?

Public opinion, a recent Supreme Court decision and the determination of a two-term Democratic Congressman from Cleveland may combine to upset an old house of Representatives tradition. If so, the result will spell more bad news for advocates of compulsory school busing.

Despite reforms in recent years, the House still likes its committee system and members don't like to buck its tradition of letting chairmen decide if and when hearings will be held on a bill. Many a bill has been bottled up by a balky chairman.

When that happens, the procedural remedy is a discharge petition. If the author of the bill gets a majority of the members of the House — 218 — to sign it, the bill bypasses the committee and goes to the floor for a vote. In practice, this rarely happens because many members back off from signing for fear that a rash of discharge petitions would wreck the committee system.

This didn't stop Representative Ron Mott (D-Ohio) from trying. Soon after he got to Capitol Hill in 1975 as a freshman, he introduced a Constitutional amendment bill to abolish forced busing as a means of achieving racial integration. Don Edwards (D-Calif.), chairman of the subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, refused to hold hearings on the bill. Mott tried a discharge petition and got only 17 names.

Early this year, he introduced the bill again. It would have two key provisions. Section one says: "No student shall be compelled to attend public school other than the one nearest his residence." Section two adds: "The Congress shall have the power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article; and to insure equal educational opportunities for all students wherever located."

Again, Edwards refused to hold hearings. And, again, Mott circulated a discharge petition. This time, he got 115 signatures (by early May), but the bill was still bottled up. The bill was eventually divided between Democrats and Republicans (names are made public while a petition is being circulated). Two things had changed: Mott was wiser about the ways of the House; and public opinion was running strongly against compulsory busing, as reflected in polls and a number of school board elections where busing forces rejected advocates.

Busing advocates in the House began to take Mott seriously. Edwards and Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter Rodino (D-N.J.) buttonholed colleagues, asking them to remove their names from the petition. Ten did. But the counter-campaign appears to have been launched too late. As of last week, Mott and a number of his colleagues had managed to push the total number of signatures to 177 — just 21 short of their goal.

Mott credits some of the hardest work on the petition to Representatives Joe Mackey (D-Mass.), Marjorie Holt (R-Md.), Steve Symmes (R-Idaho), Carroll Hubbard (D-Ky.), Skip Ellis (R-Fla.) and Mario Biaggi (D-N.Y.). He feels the tide is running strongly now.

It's Possible!

By ROBERT SCHULLER

I am amazed at how problems often stimulate their own solutions in the most unforeseen manner. For example, located within two miles of my church is one of California's largest freeway interchanges. I know one of the engineers who worked on the complex project. And he told me how the biggest problem surrounding that interchange was solved.

He and a group of engineers were meeting in Sacramento to finalize the plans. Four freeways were to converge and the placement of one major off-ramp seemed unworkable. They struggled with the options through the morning.

Just as everyone was ready to break for lunch, the young secretary who had been taking notes of the morning meeting said, "Why don't you just put the off-ramp here, coming around this point and out over there?"

The men stood looking silently for what seemed like forever and then simultaneously said, "That's it! That's the solution." And that's the way they built the interchange.

Be patient. In the most remarkable way, and the right time, God will turn the light on if you'll keep on believing it's possible.

er," he styles himself, and he wraps his messages in showmanship. "It's the sizzle to help me sell my steaks," he says. And he lays on his zippy maxims of faith in rapid-fire order: "It's fun being saved ... Fun is not a beaning cap and propeller. Fun is having a hand on the handle of life ... It's having your act together, a faith to live by and a purpose to live for ... It's not what you stop doing, but what you start doing."

In an interview, the Rev. Mr. Harrington, 49, a 6-foot-2, 240-pound man in bright-blue leisure suit, a gold-colored pendant at his neck, said with characteristic gusto:

"I walk every day in America to see, every day in America to hear and every heart in America to know it's fun being saved."

Of his words here and his home grounds where he and 10 assistant pastors of three also ordained ministers, have the church and chapel on the second floor above Pete Fountain's club, amid the peep shows, topless bars, jazz halls and pick-up joints, he said: "Down Bourbon Street with a Bible in my hand, the Lord is in my heart and a smile on my face, and people all over the world, not to see me, but to see Jesus Christ with Jesus identified with people where the people are."

Family Home Program Available For Clubs

Divorce Series Scheduled

The Pairs and Spares Church School Class at First Baptist of Sanford will be delving into various aspects of one of the most pressing problems of the community and society as a whole — the breaking up of marriages. The class, made up of single and married persons from 18-30 years of age, will begin a series of discussions this Sunday at 9:45 a.m. in the education building.

The speaker for this week will be Mrs. Martha Summers, a facilitator for the Home Next Door, a family counseling agency in Deland. The topic will be "Divorce — The Female Perspective."

In the four following weeks the discussions will cover divorce from the perspective of the counselor, the male, the pastor and the law.

"There is a far reaching problem and very few people are left untouched by its presence and consequences. When a couple separates, not only do they separate from each other, but frequently are separated involuntarily from friends and relatives," Rev. Scott Harris explained. "Loneliness is more the rule than the exception."

The class will consider what can be done to prevent an ever increasing divorce rate from getting out of hand, what the role of the church is in this area and how should it minister to couples caught up in the process of separation and divorce.

Anyone interested in attending these discussions is invited to meet with the class.

The College and Career Class will hold a "back to school" party meeting at the church tonight at 7:30. On Saturday at 3 p.m. the Casselberry Methodist Youth Fellowship will join youth from Asbury United Methodist and Pine Castle United Methodist for a go-cart rally at track next to Skate City on Seminola Boulevard.

Oral Roberts

Question: I have always resented my father. When we were children, he drank, he had a violent temper, he terrorized us, and repeatedly abandoned us for periods of time. I still get angry whenever I think about him. Why should I forgive the person who caused our family so much pain?

Answer: You can't afford NOT to forgive. Resentment is connected with anger and hate, and these emotions are self-destructive. So if for no other reason than for your own health, forgive him, and your father's the better.

Even though your sonner's cruelty is the cause of your resentment, there really is no justification for continuing to harbor it. Your anger doesn't heal the situation, but it does hurt you. No matter how good a reason you have for your anger, it's still harmful and wrong to hang on to it. Why should you allow your father to continue to upset you? Holding on to your anger is doing just that.

The thing for you to do is get rid of it... release it... forget it. Now the question is HOW? And my answer is, pray for your father. When you give your resentment to God, He does hurt you. No matter how good a reason you have for your anger, it's still harmful and wrong to hang on to it. Why should you allow your father to continue to upset you? Holding on to your anger is doing just that.

As you do this day by day, you will find your resentment and anger gradually draining away. When you stop reacting and begin acting as God would have you do, you open yourself to God's healing power. It's His love that can heal your inner hurt.

I tell you forgiveness is one of the greatest seeds you can plant. When you give your resentment to God and plant forgiveness as your seed, then you can expect to reap a harvest of blessings from God.

In my book A DAILY GUIDE TO MIRACLES AND SUCCESSFUL LIVING THROUGH SEED-FAITH, I discuss the whole question of forgiveness in the sixth chapter, especially pages 177-180. I'd be glad to send you a free and postpaid copy of this book. Just write to me, Oral Roberts, Tulsa, Oklahoma 74114, and I'll send yours right away.

Religious Round-Up

Just before the United Church of Christ general synod met in Washington, D.C., 498 of the 794 delegates returned a questionnaire on sex. Among the results: 65 per cent said they believe "many of the assumptions about human sexuality in the Old and New Testaments have been proved inaccurate." The Bible's "shortcomings" in this area, they held, should be criticized by current Christian ethics. The synod, later, would discuss a controversial study, which looks askance at traditional interpretation of the Bible's condemnation of homosexual acts and takes a liberal view of abortion, contraception, civil liberties for homosexuals, and sex outside of marriage. The synod deplored Dade County's repeal of a homosexual rights ordinance.

The 1,300 delegates to the Baptist General Conference national meeting in Duluth, Minn., sent a letter of commendation to singer Anita Bryant, who has become a national symbol of the drive against the homosexual-rights movement. She was thanked for "being willing to become a rallying point for millions of Christian citizens. A proposed amendment to his bylaws, which would have barred employment of divorced persons in conference leadership positions, was defeated.

Does bingo in a church hall pay off? John J. Capuano, a Roman Catholic pastor in Worcester, Mass., said the weekly games at Mount Carmel-St. Ann Church grossed about $8,000 of which $1,400 was clear profit per week last year, but he's not sure about the pay. He wrote in a parish bulletin: "Bingo has certainly helped us financially and somewhat socially, but is no longer helping us morally or spiritually."

When the parish's gambling license expires in October the games will stop, the priest announced. Sometimes only 100 of the 500 playing are from the parish. Capuano said, "The people who came to play bingo weren't coming to help the church or take part in a parish social. They came to make money." Deciding that bingo stop the play because it has become too "hard to keep innocent and charitable."

Paperwork Blocks Long-Range Planning

WASHINGTON — President Carter is scrambling desperately to get ahead of the paperwork being piled on his desk. Sources close to the president acknowledge that he has become too bogged down in details and deadlines to see beyond the immediate crisis.

His view of the problems on the horizon, they say, has been obstructed by the mountains of paperwork on his desk. "There has been very little long-range planning in the White House," one top presidential adviser told us. "It's all crisis management. Nothing is solved until the deadline approaches."

Carter has advanced from one crisis to another since he concluded his inaugural walk down Pennsylvania Avenue seven months ago. He hadn't finished unpacking before he was confronted with a critical shortage of natural gas.

"The president should have been told in November that he'd be facing a natural gas crisis in January," complained one adviser.

The recent steel price increases also took the White House by surprise. "That could have been predicted six months ago," grumped the adviser.

But some Carter aides are now trying to anticipate the problems before they become disasters. The president's pollster, Patrick Caddell, is trying to devise statistical measures that can predict trouble in advance.

After one Cabinet meeting, for instance, aides were surprised to find that Carter had read and approved the minutes of the meeting. They were initiated, "OK — JC." The president has now been convinced that such duties should be relegated to a secretary.

On substantive issues, however, Carter insists on having complete background data, not just a summary. For example, he recently read nearly 100 pages of memoranda on the problem of shoring up the ailing Social Security system.

A cover memo from Eisenstat described the short-term and long-term problems, public confidence and a series of options. There were spaces for Carter to approve or disapprove the options. Attached were lengthy memos and charts from Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, Health Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano and budget boss Bert Lance.

Some Carter staffers argue that the only way to achieve any action in bureaucratic Washington is to set deadlines. They, for instance, waited to get involved in the congressional wrangling over auto emission standards until two weeks before Detroit's threatened shut-down of production. This was a calculated strategy to force Congress to pass the auto pollution legislation, a top aide told us.

For the first time, the president is deferring to congressional experts on many issues. "Congress is light years ahead of us in many areas," one assistant told us. "We often don't have a position until some congressman calls up and says, 'What's your position?'"

Contingency plans were hurriedly drawn, nevertheless, to allow continued production while sleeping lines are in the polluting cars.

Meanwhile, administration officials agree that planning is urgently needed to deal with the decaying urban areas of America. "There's no comprehensive policy toward the cities," one insider griped. "It's been put on the back burner. Health is over here, welfare is over there — nobody is pulling all the elements together."

Other aides point out that an interagency group is already working on solutions to urban problems. "If anything, we're spending too much time on long-range planning," one member said. The group, however, has no responsibility for reforming welfare, the number one problem for the cities.

Now that most congressmen have filed the humid capital for the summer, Carter finally has a chance to look ahead. He has attended over 20 budget hearings to set priorities for next year's spending. He has also asked his cabinet for the legislative power to produce. This was a congressional House to push next year.

For the first time, the president is deferring to congressional experts on many issues. "Congress is light years ahead of us in many areas," one assistant told us. "We often don't have a position until some congressman calls up and says, 'What's your position?'"

"Take this clear and simple memo of mine and convert it into legalese, so it will sound official!"

Misty View

When you look through the window on a rainy day everything beyond the pane seems blurred in wavy wetness. Even the familiar objects, like the sidewalk and the mailbox seem distorted.

Sometimes the same thing can happen with another kind of view — when we look at ourselves, trying to find meaning and perspective in our own lives. For there are moments when we are at odds with the world and the ones we love, when we don't know where to turn next.

Child Care Worker Earns Recognition

Sanford child care worker Meris Cockerhan has been awarded a national credential in recognition of her capable work with young children. The teacher at the Rescue Child Care Center has earned the Child Development Associate (CDA) credential which is awarded by the CDA Consortium, Washington, D. C. to individuals who successfully demonstrate competence in working with children aged three to five in a group setting.

COCKERHAN

Ms. Cockerhan is a graduate of Barringer High School, Newark, N.J. and received her certificate in Early Childhood Development from Seminole Community College (SCC).

Dr. Faye Moore, who heads the Child Development Center at SCC explained that the college issues a certificate which indicates that a student has satisfactorily completed the competencies required for CDA certification. The student is then required to work in a child care center for eight months before a team from the CDA Consortium evaluates her performance for the CDA credential.

Dr. Moore said that so far only about 17 CDA credentials have been awarded to child care workers in Central Florida, but that the number of workers seeking the credential is growing rapidly.

The CDA Consortium is a private, non-profit organization of professionals in early childhood education-development, founded in 1972. It spent three years developing a system for assessing the performance of child care workers; the system became operational in the spring of 1975. Several states, including Florida, already recognize the credential as one option for meeting child care personnel requirements.

The purpose of the Consortium's program is to improve the quality of care provided for young children in child care centers.

Heads Are Turning...

...To Solar Styling

Tentatively, she touched her new tumble of curls. She peeked shyly in the mirror. She giggled. "Well," demanded her audience, "do you like it?" "The solar look starts with a precision cut tailored to the individual's hair type and growth pattern. Then the movement and curl is achieved with body waves, body perms and curling irons. Heat lamps are more important than blow dryers for setting the solar style. "We are showing the extreme looks," said Wampler, who visited Sanford Wednesday, on his way back to Tennessee from a hair fashion show in Miami. "We hope the stylists reach at least a happy medium." In addition to more curl and movement, Wampler predicts longer hair for the fall and winter. Corns, feathers and other hair ornaments will also be popular, replacing the flowers of summer. Men's hair, on the other hand, is becoming sleeker, shorter — "just the reverse from solar hair for women," said Wampler.

Crooms Class Of '57 Reunited

By MARVA HAWKINS Herald Correspondent "We have climbed the hills but mountains are yet before us," was the theme as the Crooms High School class of 1957 gathered in the area for their 20th year reunion recently. The five-day affair began with registration and hospitality hour at the Sanford Holiday Inn. A reunion dance was held at the Sanford Garden Club with music furnished by the Pure Pleasure Band. A family day picnic followed at the Wekiva Springs for class members, their spouses and children. Later, an informal gathering took place at the Tiquinary Lounge where old classmates and friends gathered for cocktails and memory-swapping.

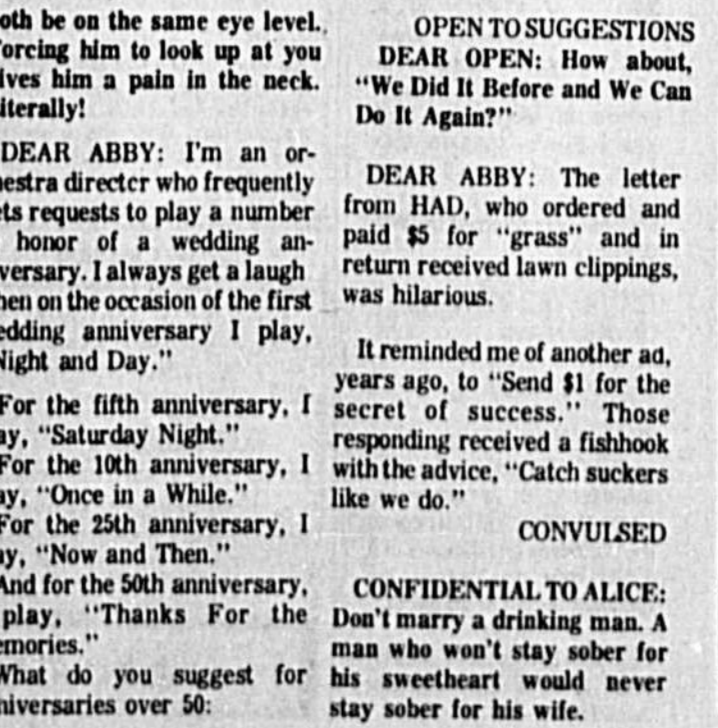

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Graham hosted an after-dinner cocktail party for class members. A memorial service was held at St. James AME Church. Dr. Buck Jones, a class member, delivered the morning's message. Soloists were Shirley W. Allen and Rev. Carrie H. Buie.

Handicapped Can Speak For Selves

DEAR ABBY: My husband had polio as a child. He's been confined to a wheelchair for nearly 30 years, but can do everything an able-bodied man can do — except walk. Now for my pet peeve. When we are in a restaurant, a well-meaning but thoughtless waitress invariably turns to me and asks, "And what will HE have?" This has happened to me so often that I now have a standard reply: "He is perfectly capable of telling you. Why don't you ask him?" Abby, it is amazing the number of people who assume that because someone is in a wheelchair, he is completely helpless and unable to communicate. Please print my letter. It might wake up some folks who think a physically handicapped person can neither think nor speak for himself. Thank you! DEAR FED UP: Your message is an important one. And while we're on the subject of showing consideration for the physically handicapped, when you are speaking to someone in a wheelchair for more than a minute, please draw up a chair and sit down so that you will both be on the same eye level. Forcing him to look up at you gives him a pain in the neck. Literally! DEAR ABBY: I'm an orchestra director who frequently gets requests to play a number in honor of a wedding anniversary. I always get a laugh when on the occasion of the first wedding anniversary I play, "Night and Day." For the fifth anniversary, I play, "Saturday Night." For the 10th anniversary, I play, "Once in a While." For the 25th anniversary, I play, "Now and Then." And for the 50th anniversary, I play, "Thanks For the Memories." What do you suggest for anniversaries over 50? OPEN TO SUGGESTIONS DEAR OPEN: How about, "We Did It Before and We Can Do It Again?" DEAR ABBY: The letter from HAD, who ordered and paid $5 for "grass" and in return received lawn clippings, was hilarious. It reminded me of another ad, years ago, to "Send $1 for the secret of success." Those responding received a fishhook with the advice, "Catch suckers like we do." CONVULSED CONFIDENTIAL TO ALICE: Don't marry a drinking man. A man who won't stay sober for his sweetheart would never stay sober for his wife.

DEBRA GRINER, DENNIS ROBINSON

RAIN HAS COMPENSATIONS

The game may have to be called, but rain has its compensations for New York Mets' coach Joe Pignatano. It's good for the tomato patch he's growing in the Mets' bullpen. Buck Jones, a class member, delivered the morning's message. Soloists were Shirley W. Allen and Rev. Carrie H. Buie. Congratulations to the planning committee on a job well done: Charles (Teddy) McCoy, Joella Butler Singleton, Betty Anderson Freddie, Shirley Wynne Allen, Mildred People Bookhart, Carrie Hunt Bule, Willie Graham, Mercedes Johnson Brister, Mary Wilson Morris, Leonard Smith, Jennell Lawson Walden, Joseph Walden and Alzada Richardson Washington were in charge of the arrangements.

Watch Diet To Control Gas Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB - For several years now I have had gas pains in my stomach area. Lately I have been expelling gas as much as 10 times a day. There is a bad odor and it seems to be quite uncontrollable and embarrassing.

DEAR DR. LAMB - Could you please give me some information on poison ivy and what to do for it?

DEAR DR. LAMB - It is a contact dermatitis, meaning a skin allergy to oils in the poison ivy plant. The first exposure will not usually cause a problem.

Spacecraft Bound For Jupiter Voyager 2 Begins Star Trek

CAPE CANAVERAL (AP) - America's Voyager 2 spacecraft, aloft in Titan Centaur rocket, lifted off from earth Saturday at 10:30 a.m. EDT to start its multibillion-mile journey to Jupiter, Saturn and beyond.

Beginning in 1979, scientists hope the Voyager will be televising live pictures of Jupiter and Saturn and perhaps the outer reaches of the solar system later.

"Voyager is the next logical step in our exploration of space," said Dr. Noel Hinners, associate administrator for space science for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

"Galileo was really the first person to extend our observation with a telescope. The Voyagers are a remarkable extension of man's ability to observe the solar system."
