

THE TOY WIFE
GERTRUDE GELBEN

Chapter One
PLANTATION DEBUTANTE

Gilberte Brigard sighed with delight. "What are you thinking about, Froufrou?" her sister Louise asked. "I'm thinking that for sixteen years life was oh, so dull at school in France. And then, last month we were on the boat making the voyage which brought us from Paris. Yesterday we arrived here at the plantation. And soon maybe tomorrow we'll go to New Orleans, and see all the handsome gentlemen."

Louise frowned in shocked silence. "What I want to know, Louise, Gilberte teased, is when are we going to New Orleans?"

"Not soon," her sister answered primly. "Papa's been away four months fetching us. He'll be needed here, now."

"What a pity!" Gilberte pouted. "Where shall we show ourselves in all our pretty dresses? Among how shall we ever find husbands?"

"Oh," smiled Louise, "so you want a husband. I'll help you."

"Above everything, Mlle Louise! She threw her arms about her sister. "And you? Dare to look me in the eye and say that you don't want a husband, too?"

Louise cast a quick glance toward old Suzanne, the negro slave who brought up their mother before them. "Well," she blushed. "I'll not just give my husband."

"My word!" exclaimed Gilberte. "Do you think I want just any husband? Oh, no. He must be a danseur—she pointed her toe under her ruffled hoop skirt. "Lawdy," cried Froufrou. "Listen to that! Heah dat fine silk rustle! Mademoiselle Gilberte's dress sound lak leaves blowin' or watah runnin'."

ACCIDENTAL DEATH

SHREVEPORT, (AP)—Nonnie Mae Taylor, 18, of West Monroe, brushed her teeth with a poisonous paint remover Sunday. Her throat and lungs were badly burned and she died in a hospital here yesterday.

In Britain, 68.3 out of every 100 families had a license to use a radio at the end of 1937.

"That's why we call her Froufrou when she dresses always sound like that," laughed Louise. "My husband must like to dance," she said. "And he must like to ride—and he must make me laugh and buy me jewelry—and let me do exactly as I please—"

"Don't listen to her, Suzanne," begged Louise. "She's not half so silly as she sounds."

"What silly in loving a man who pleases one in every way?" demanded Froufrou. "Besides, loving isn't so difficult. She prattled about and blew them both a kiss. "I love everybody!"

"The stop," Froufrou! pleaded Louise. "Please go out to the hall and greet the servants. They're waiting for you darling—they haven't seen you since you were a baby—and they're so eager to welcome you—"

Froufrou's eyes danced. "And will I have a slave for my very own, too?"

Suzanne nodded. "You can pick de one you likes!"

"Oh, I must go, then," she cried. In another moment she was out the door, her hoop skirts rustling as she ran.

She found the household slaves lined up in hushed expectancy. "Don't you, all of you, she greeted gaily. "I'm glad to see you—but you must tell me your names—I don't remember them—I was such a baby when I went away." she apologized. She turned to the first asking her name, then the second, the third and continued down the line. She repeated their names prettily to fix them in mind. She came at last to a small black girl huddled against the wall.

"And your name?" she asked.

"Ah, ah! got none, Mam'zell," the other answered humbly. "Dey just call me Pick—short for Pickaninny."

"Pick!" cried Froufrou. "That's lovely!"

Pick sank on one knee and leaned forward eagerly. "And please, Mam'zell!" she begged breathlessly. "Ah, wishes Ah could be yo' own particular darry!"

"You do?" exclaimed Froufrou in happy surprise. "Then you shall be. But—if you belong to me, you've got to wear shoes and stockings!"

Pick rocked with delight. "Shoes and stockings! Oh me, oh my!" Suzanne bustled down the hall. "Yo' papa sent word he's taking Mlle Louise to de Jury Mehin and he wants to know if you want to go, too?"

"Jury Mehin? Why should anyone go to a thing like that?"

Pick grinned up at her. "Dey's always lots of gitemin from New Orleans dere."

Froufrou clapped her hands. "Lots of gentlemen from New Orleans? Oh—that's good—that's splendid—that's perfect!"

She ran down the hall and out the door and made for the carriage awaiting her.

Consul General Hears Protest After Bombs Hit Campus Of American-Endowed School

New Raids Swell Canton Deaths

Insurgent Planes Attack British Operated Port In Spain

WASHINGTON, June 8 (AP)—The American government today protested to the Japanese consul general at Hongkong against the bombing by Japanese airplanes of the campus of the American-endowed Lingnan University at Canton.

The State Department said Addison E. Southard, United States consul general at Hongkong, cabled that three Japanese bombs fell on the campus 200 yards from houses occupied by Americans.

No buildings were struck. The university property is partly owned by Americans.

Japanese warplanes swelled the death toll in Canton by two bombardments today, while Spanish insurgents again bombed towns along the Mediterranean, including the British operated Spanish port of Gambia, 36 miles south of Valencia.

At least 300 new casualties were killed on Honan Island, one of China's industrial districts, during assaults in an estimated 8,000 in 12 days of terrific bombardments in and around Canton.

Two properties in which Americans are interested, Lingnan University and storage tanks of the Standard Oil Company, were struck by the bombs. Spanish insurgent bombing planes disabled a British dredge, destroyed two warehouses and tore up a railroad at Gambia, a modern little port operated by a British company.

Warning Issued Against Placing Seines In Channel

Army Engineer Points To Law Prohibiting Any Obstructions

Fishermen and others plying the river for temporary obstructions in the channel of the St. Johns River were given a warning today in a notice received from Lieut. Col. North, district engineer of the United States Engineers office at Jacksonville.

Lieut. Col. North pointed particularly to the seines and gill nets being stretched across the channels and pointed out that before these temporary obstructions could be made a permit must be secured from the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War.

The Army Engineer also pointed out the law enacted by Congress which provides a penalty of from $500 to $2,500 or by imprisonment not extending over one year or both such punishments for this offense. He also stated that arrangements had been made with the Coast Guards to patrol the channels of the River and report any violations.

Lieut. Col. North added, however, that there will be no objections from the U. S. Engineers office to the use of seines and nets outside the regular channels provided they are properly marked to warn boats of their location.

The notice from Lieut. Col. North is in part as follows: "The attention of this office has been called to the practice, by many parties engaged in fishing, of placing either seines or floating gill nets in the St. Johns River, at various points between the jetties at its mouth and Sanford. These nets in many instances are stretched for practically the entire width of the river, or across the improved or regular navigable channels as shown on charts and indicated by proper markers established by the U. S. Lighthouse Service.

A Conservative Trend

The election results in Iowa seem to indicate not so much the loss of the state by the Democrats as a general trend toward conservatism and a turning away from the more radical policies of the New Deal.

Latest reports from the state, now fairly complete, show that Senator Gillette received 81,100 votes as compared with 41,909 for Representative Wearin, his New Deal opponent. In the Republican primaries former Senator Dickinson, a thorough-going conservative received 149,451 votes to 109,004 for the liberal Thurston.

Thus it is seen that in both the Democratic and Republican primaries the more conservative candidate won, in each case by an impressive majority. And it is also to be noted that 258,000 voters went to the polls in the Republican primary as compared with only 122,000 in the Democratic primary.

If it is assumed that both the Republican candidates were anti-New Deal—and we believe this is a fair assumption—and we take it for granted that those Democrats who voted for Senator Gillette were also anti-New Deal, we have the significant total of 339,000 voters who are against the New Deal in Iowa as compared with only 41,000 who stood by it, or a majority of more than eight to one.

Now ordinarily such a preponderance of sentiment against the Washington Administration might presage an early demise for the Democratic party in national politics, especially in a pivotal state like Iowa which may be taken as a pretty fair gauge for all farming areas throughout the middle west, but we do not believe this is necessarily the case if the more radical policies of the New Deal are dropped.

It should be remembered that in Iowa there is no such sharp distinction between Democrat and Republican as there is in Florida and most parts of the South. It is the custom there to vote for the best man regardless of party politics, and very frequently a man will split his ticket wide open, voting for half the Democrats on it and half the Republicans. And particularly is it not unusual for voters to support local Republican candidates while voting for the Democratic candidate at the head of the ticket.

And so we believe it is quite possible that though the state may go Republican in next November's election and may also go Republican in local elections to be held between now and 1940, it may even yet vote the Democratic ticket for president and vice president, and what is said here with respect to Iowa might equally as well apply to other farm states of the middle west, so necessary to a successful national campaign.

But in order to do this we believe the Iowa primaries prove that it is absolutely essential for the New Deal to drop its more radical policies and substitute true Jeffersonian Democracy for them. That the state is definitely more conservative than the New Deal was positively proved in Iowa on Monday and the only thing for the New Deal to do, if it wants the Democrats to remain in power, is to make itself at least as conservative as the voters.

The Over-Rated Ape

Gene Tunney, who made almost as great a name for himself as a student of Shakespeare as a heavyweight boxing champion, thinks that the gorilla is a greatly over-estimated animal, that he personally could lick any gorilla that ever came out of the wilds of Africa with one hand tied behind his back, and that he knows at least a dozen third-rate prize fighters who could too.

An ape that seems particularly to have aroused Mr. Tunney's ire is Gargantua the Great, the giant gorilla of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus, which has a reputation for ferocity and strength unparalleled in the annals of history. But Mr. Tunney insists that he intends to prove Gargantua is a fraud, though he has no intention of returning to the ring himself.

"If I were in shape," says Mr. Tunney, "I would undertake to belt him out myself, in one round. But I'm not in shape—not in fighting shape I mean—so I'll lick him by proxy." So what the former heavyweight champion proposes to do is to arrange a bout between Gargantua and "any one of a dozen third-rate heavyweights I know."

"The gorilla," he points out, "has a skull which closely resembles the skull of a man. However, encased in that skull is a small brain, smaller than that of a dog. A gorilla has no reasoning process worthy of the name."

"Suppose he was fighting Joe Louis. What would he make of that amazing fast left jab? It would bewilder him."

"A gorilla doesn't know pain, they say. Suppose Louis or Schmeling or any of the first ten ranking heavyweights were to land a punch, let's say on Gargantua's Adam's apple. Then Gargantua would know pain. Were you ever hit on the Adam's apple? It isn't fun. Jack Dempsey hit me there when we boxed in Philadelphia, and I felt as though I were swallowing pineapples for a whole week after."

"Gargantua is a big boy, but a Dempsey left hook landing on his stomach might figuratively tear the poor animal in two and leave him paralyzed on the canvas. He didn't spend years of doing bending and mat exercises."

"A man has 24 ribs. Your encyclopedia will tell you that a gorilla has but 13. Between the ribs, below the breastbone, there are nerve centers. If they are shocked, the shock travels to the spine, temporarily causing paralysis. The ribs and well-developed muscles between the ribs protect these nerve centers. Twenty-four ribs are much more protection than 13."

Mr. Tunney defies the gorilla—as well as the orangutan, chimpanzee, marmoset, gibbon and baboon—to do its worst. There is nothing personal in the attitude. Apes are sterling fellows, says Mr. Tunney. But they can't fight a lick. Pending acceptance of terms by the circus, the anti-gorilla faction is said to be discussing for the services of Tony Galento to represent the human race. Tony regards Gargantua as a bum, and the feeling is said to be mutual.

PUMP PRIMING A FAILURE

By SENATOR HARRY F. BYRD

U. S. Senator from Virginia

As the 1938 fiscal year of the United States Government draws to a close, there appears to be good reason for expecting that the 1930's might be historically recorded as a decade of deficits.

On the thirtieth day of June the Federal treasury will show a deficit for the eighth consecutive year.

On the next day, July 1, there is to begin another fiscal year which is certain to be the ninth consecutive year of deficits.

Eight of these nine deficit years will be years in the billion-dollar deficit class. That is a record never dreamed of before this decade.

Have a look at the deficit now: 1931—deficit $100,000,000; 1932—deficit $2,700,000,000; 1933—deficit $2,600,000,000; 1934—deficit $3,600,000,000; 1935—deficit $3,000,000,000; 1936—deficit $2,500,000,000 (with $1,700,000,000 of bonus deducted); 1937—deficit $2,150,000,000 (with $356,000,000 of bonus deducted); 1938—deficit upwards of $2,000,000,000.

And as we arrive at 1938 with the prospect of another annual deficit, reaching perhaps $3 billion dollars, the largest in history, there is still a deficit on the business ledger of the nation. There is still the same, or greater, deficit on the social ledger of the nation. The relief and unemployment loads are still abnormally heavy. There is no evidence that pump priming is constructive, socially or economically.

Pump priming was largely responsible for the deficits up to now—vast deficits which were said to be necessary to overcome conditions caused by the 1929 depression. Now it is said to be necessary to spend into another series of deficits to overcome another depression which came despite, and with, the unprecedented expenditures of the past eight years.

It was said that the depression of 1929 came as the result of private over-spending and over-speculating.

Can it be that the depression of 1937-38 came as the result of public over-spending and over-speculating?

We have spent great sums of money—billions of dollars—priming the pump, recovering, and relieving. At the end of eight years we are asked to do it all over again because there is another depression—do it all over again with greater spending and deeper deficits.

There is tangible evidence on all sides, at this very moment, to refute completely the theory of spending to save. Yet, we are asked blindly and naively to follow that theory in the same old groove which has led us in a circle whence we started. We are told to continue on the theory which has been so realistically discredited.

Those who would as much as wince at spending whatever is necessary to feed and clothe and shelter those in want are hard to find.

But those chronic and professional advocates of huge spending are everywhere to be heard proclaiming in the name of charity the things which hamper recovery.

For, when they proclaim for government spending they are proclaiming for government meddling; they are proclaiming for government competition with private enterprise; they are proclaiming for government regulation and restriction; they are proclaiming for government waste and extravagance; and though they deny it, they are proclaiming for excessive taxation—ultimately, if not now.

These are the things which naturally accompany government spending. These are the things which must be expected with government spending. These are the things which the nation must be prepared to accept if it is to have huge, abnormal government spending.

These things should not be overlooked by business men and farmers alike who come to the Federal government for loans at a rate of interest lower than it can be obtained through private channels.

If the government furnishes the money, it is only reasonable to expect the government to insist upon a vote in the one to which the money is put.

These are only a part of the subjects to be considered in connection with the question of public spending with a view to relieving what is felt to be the most pressing need in the United States—unemployment.

Any man who is concerned with the welfare of the United States should be interested in these subjects.

Table with 2 columns: Year, Expenditures. 1930—expenditures $3,300,000,000; 1931—expenditures $3,400,000,000; 1932—expenditures $3,900,000,000 (with $300,000,000 subscription to RFC deducted); 1933—expenditures $3,400,000,000; 1934—expenditures $5,100,000,000; 1935—expenditures $6,400,000,000; 1936—expenditures $6,870,000,000 (with $1,700,000,000 bonus deducted); 1937—expenditures $7,400,000,000 (with $356,000,000 bonus deducted); 1938—expenditures $8,000,000,000 (estimated); 1939—expenditures $11,500,000,000 (estimated on the basis of appropriations).

ever has before in any peace time year.

It goes into a new year with an all time high debt lapping upward and upward toward $8 billion dollars of direct obligations, and at least five billion dollars more in contingent liabilities. Of the latter there is no way of telling how much actual debt there is in that total.

It is upon this fiscal foundation that recent reforms are founded. It is upon this foundation that the government is seeking in build recovery.

True liberalism must always be back logged by strong, sound, conservative fiscal policies if progress is to be perpetuated as a step to a more enlightened and prosperous future.

A debt ridden nation with constantly recurring deficits offers no hope in its underprivileged. A debt ridden nation with constantly recurring deficits offers only guidance to recovery and prosperity.

Paying one's bills is always constructive; it is never destructive. That goes for governments as well as individuals.

The result has been deficit after deficit, with revenues falling by far to keep up with the spending despite the fact that the Federal tax bill has grown by leaps and bounds.

Now, the government enters a new fiscal year faced with falling revenues, although there is no reduction in the rates of taxation, and at the same time spending more money than it

Christian Science Group Warns Nations Concealed In Force And Selfishness

BOSTON, Mass., June 7.—A warning to nations "whose governments have been concealed largely in selfish ambition and brought forth by human force" was issued here Monday at the Annual Meeting of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Mother Church, by the Christian Science Board of Directors...

Report disclosed continued growth of the Christian Science movement, increasingly higher standards for authorized periods, and a larger number of requests from groups of non-Scientists for representative Christian Scientists to address them.

Election of Ralph Hastings, Knapp, C.S., of Needham, Mass., as President of The Mother Church was announced. He succeeded Judge Clifford P. Smith of Newton, Massachusetts.

Mr. Knapp is a son of Ira O. Knapp and Flavia S. Knapp, two of the 12 called upon by Mrs. Eddy to reorganize the Christian Science Church in September, 1892.

Mr. Palmer, reading the statement from the directors, reported that The Mother Church has grown substantially in numbers during the past year; is united, harmonious, and without debt.

"This does not mean that the dominant school of medicine and Christian Science are lined up against each other, for many medical men are more ready than ever before to recognize the religion of Christian Science and its healing ministry."

The Directors further called the attention of Christian Scientists to the responsibility they have in respect to upholding such fundamental issues of life as cultivation of good will and preservation of a system of government protecting the civil rights of its people and ensuring to them freedom of speech, of the press, and of religious worship.

Mr. Palmer, delivering his own report as clerk, cited prayer as the practical means of stilling the tumult of the world.

Ultimatum Says They Won't Accept Legislation Without Pay Differentials

Filibuster Threat Is Seen In Action

Compromise Approved Yesterday Fails To Meet Acceptance

WASHINGTON, June 9.—(AP)—A group of Southern senators served an ultimatum on the wage-hour conferees today that they would not accept such legislation without pay differentials.

Seventeen senators caucusing today decided to fight the compromise approved yesterday by a joint congressional committee.

The compromise would provide a minimum pay scale of 40 cents an hour for all interstate industry in seven years, except where it would cause unemployment.

The decision of the Southern senators carried a broad hint of a filibuster if conferees do not accept the compromise within the time limit from the pay legislation.

The irreconcilable Southern faction held out firmly against the compromise otherwise generally approved, and thereby kept uncertain the date congress will adjourn.

Whether the Southerners would be content to vote against the new proposal or would convert their opposition into a Senate filibuster, which might prolong the session for several weeks, (Continued on Page Four)

Ohio Farmers Make Protest Against Crop Control Plan

DAYTON, June 9.—More than 2,000 Miami valley farmers have registered protests over the New Deal's crop control program and thousands of others are expected to receive the opportunity to sign petitions at various township and county meetings held throughout this area. A majority of the program also is being questioned.

I. E. Baker of Phillipsburg, a prominent farmer in this region, speaking before a township meeting, declared that "controlment of crops and the paying out of benefits for not producing is only creating a greater government debt for us farmers to pay."

Col. William E. North of Greenhills indicated that "crop control is the first step toward dictatorship." Farmers with more than 200 acres have reported that they have not been allowed any corn savings. One farmer with 552 acres indicated that under the crop-control program he is allowed to raise only 2.5 acres of corn.

Another storm of protest from Miami valley farmers is expected when and if wheat and tobacco crop-control programs are put into effect in this region. While the Department of Agriculture control placed on tobacco this year due to the lack of any surplus of Miami valley tobacco, farmers already have expressed themselves as wanting to "let alone" carry on their own business without government interference.

Protests throughout the Miami valley on the whole are reported to be in a pronounced condition and some of the most active centers of city sales. Farm families are in a general mood of protest and some of the most active centers of city sales.

Insurgents Bomb British, French Ships

Japanese Airmen Continue Bombardment Of Canton As Casualties Increase

London, June 9.—(AP)—A new Spanish insurgent bombardment of British and French merchant ships in the Mediterranean today piled fuel on the smoldering British-French resentment, giving impetus to a move for an international aerial patrol to curb piracy from the skies.

Five persons were killed aboard the French freighter Barbance outside Denia, Spain, including one observer for the European non-intervention committee.

The British freighter Isador was bombed in the harbor of Casablanca in Spain but there were no casualties.

In Canton the unrelenting Japanese bombardment of this once prosperous south China metropolis started huge fires, crippled the city's utilities, and pushed the toll of dead and injured above 500.

Twenty-five Japanese planes struck at Canton last night in the third raid of the day and the city's second successive night raid in 12 days of bombardment.

The planes dropped incendiary bombs on Canton's west bank, behind the Asia hotel. A huge fire raged just opposite Asia street, the city's foreign quarter.

There was no way of determining accurately the toll of dead and injured in the wave of incendiary bombs which started May 28, but conservative estimates before last night's raid were that at least 3,000 had been killed and 5,000 wounded.

Oil tanks burst into flame and fire spread to the terminal of the Canton Hankow railway. The station and a 16-car train were destroyed.

Main objective of last night's bombardment was an old power plant which supplied Canton with light after a direct hit on the main power station had cut off electric power.

With the air alarm system disabled, police ran from house to house to warn residents that bombers were on their way again. Some 500,000 of the city's 1,000,000 population had fled, and about one-third of its houses were evacuated.

Although anti-aircraft defenses proved ineffective, and no Chinese planes took the air to fight off the attackers, there was little criticism of the Chinese central government for failure to provide help against the continuing raids.

So far as was known, the Canton-Hankow railway, main artery for shipment of munitions and supplies to Chinese armies on the central front, still was operating despite destruction of the station.

Eight foreign doctors published a statement denying previous Japanese assertions that most of the casualties in Canton were caused by anti-aircraft fire.

CASH KIDNAP SUSPECT

L. H. Lewis Asks Support Of New Livestock Mart

Marketing Specialist Urges Attendance At Opening Auction

Farmers in Seminole County and surrounding territories were urged today by L. H. Lewis, livestock marketing specialist of the State Marketing Bureau, to attend the opening tomorrow of the Kissimmee Livestock Auction Mart.

Mr. Lewis declared in an interview that cattle producers should give the market a fair trial by supporting it right from the beginning. The way for them to do this, he said, is to send as many cattle to the market as they can.

They should not quit after the first session of the market but should keep sending livestock to the market each time it opens for auction.

In this manner, he explained, (Continued on page six)

Residents Frightened By Erupting Volcano

MANILA, June 9.—(AP)—Thousands in Albay province fled last night from the fury of Mayon Volcano as it continued with rocks and flames for the sixth day, and lava flowed toward towns at the mountain's base.

Fright killed one man and drove another to insanity. Fear of pillage among overcrowded refugees caused doctors at the Nudya Village camp to take stern sanitary measures. They declared water unsafe for drinking.

A great outburst of steam and flaming lava came thundering from the volcano late in the afternoon. Residents, harassed by the constant rumbling, rushed from their homes. They refused to stay indoors despite assurances that their homes were not in the danger zone, and that an eruption such as killed 1,500 people in 1914 was not imminent.

Gatchel Is Bitten By Water Moccasin

Forest E. Gatchel, local grocery store operator, was bitten Tuesday night by a water moccasin while on a camping trip with his sons, David and Stewart, on Lake Winder at the headwaters of the St. Johns River.

Immediate first aid, however, prevented any serious effects from the bite.

Following a day of successful bass fishing in the vicinity, Mr. Gatchel was cleaning the fish on the edge of the water Tuesday night and nabbed by the snake on a little finger. First aid treatment was administered by his son and no ill effects resulted. Mr. Gatchel completed the two-day camping trip returning home last night.

He reported catching about 30 bass ranging in weight from two to seven pounds and added that his youngest son, David, 14, landed the largest fish, two seven-pound beauties.
