Principals To Act On Teacher-Student Chumminess

By Kathy Tyrity Herald Staff Writer

At least two Seminole high school principals say they will use information from a Sanford Herald series on teacher-student relationships to train new teachers, but other principals said they hadn't read the stories that ran Feb. 15-17.

The series quoted students and teachers saying that personal information, such as indications of a woman teacher's pregnancy, is being exchanged in classes which are informally structured. Close teacher-student friendships were cited - to the point that students have spent weekends with their teachers.

The closeness developing between teachers and students is probably much wider than just the two schools at which interviews were conducted, said the two principals.

"We've all known of people who did things like this," said Lake Brantley High School Principal Darvin Boothe.

"We have had occasion where kids tell us the teachers aren't on task. Kids don't know who to talk to about this. I think we can use these articles as an excellent way to show the younger teachers what can and does happen - that these things aren't always viewed the way they might casually think."

He said he would be making copies of the series and keeping them on hand to give new teachers.

Lake Mary High School Principal Don Reynolds and Seminole High Principal Wayne Epps were quoted in the series. Lake Howell High School Principal Richard Evans said he hadn't read the series and had no comment. Lyman High's Principal Carlton Henley did not return a phone call on the topic.

Booth said, "I think this series is a good way to make you understand there are problems and parents should bring these things to the principals and administrators," he added. "The good part is that parents must stay in contact with the kids about what's going on in school if something bothers them. Serious students are bothered by this sort of thing because they realize education is their ticket to a better way of life."

Boothe said the proper education of young. people is incumbent upon their parents to demand and when education falls short, everyone is shortchanged.

"Parents have the right to expect conscientious instruction, not exposure to values extraneous to the teaching program. When teachers violate that contract, they're stepping over a very important

Girl Wins Battle With Deadly Reye's

By Susan Loden Herald Staff Writer

Thirteen-year-old Natalie Jacobs looks like a fashion conscious teenager with her short-top hairstyle and pierced ears adorned with gold hearts.

But Natalie's hairstyle is the result of her head having been partially shaved for life-saving medical procedures after she fell victim to Reye's Syndrome in early December. Her pierced cars are her recovery reward.

She requested the ear-piercing when she came out of a medically-induced comaafter 14 days in pediatric intensive care in Orlando Regional Medical Center. During those two weeks machines kept her alive while her parents and uncle kept a 24-hour vigil at her bedside.

Natalie's parents, Bill and Jean Jacobs of Winter's Springs, said they couldn't deny Natalie's request to have her ears plerced. They were too happy after learning on Christmas Eve she was going to survive her bout with what in many cases is a killer or brain-damaging disease.

They said she could have gotten just about anything she asked for they were so grateful that she had survived.

They credit her survival to prayer and the care she received at ORMC and her quick transport to that hospital via the ORMC helicopter from Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford.

The first word Natalie said when she awoke was "Pepsi." And within a couple of days, even though she could hardly speak, she had asked for and gotten her plerced ears, three years ahead of sched-

Her 17-year-old sister Jennifer told her she should have asked for a car.

Natalie also has an 8-year-old brother, Jason. She was babysitting with Jason when it became apparent that she wasn't recovering from a the flu as well as her parents thought. After a week of keeping her home from school, they left her with Jason on a Saturday night early in December.

They called home again and Jason answered the phone and told them Natalie refused to talk to them on the phone.

The Jacobs arrived home to find Natalie incoherent. A doctor was called to the home to check her, but he didn't order her hospitalization. Sunday morning, when the Jacobs couldn't awaken Natalie, rescue workers were called.

She had difficulty breathing and when paramedics administered oxygen she "suddenly became really combative, yelling, screaming, fighting," her father said. It took at least four of them to put her on a stretcher.

She was transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford and then transferred via helicopter to ORMC at about 9 a.m. By 4 p.m. ORMC doctors had diagnosed Reye's and explained the seriousness of the situation.

Until it was diagnosed at ORMC her parents knew almost nothing about Reye's. "I knew it was serious." Jacobs said. He said ORMC doctors Joseph Chiaro and Mark Swanson were frank with them from the beginning in explaining the disease, their approach to treating it, and Natalle's chances of survival and recovery, he said.

Natalie has no memories of her 14 days in intensive care. But it was two traumatic weeks for her family.

"It's the most terrifying situation, because it's not like treating other things they have a cure for. The doctors did not

Apartments Site Plan Unacceptable

By Karen Talley Herald Staff Writer

Sharp criticism from a Sanford Planning and Zoning Board member and city staffs' reservations provided momentum for a 5-4 P&Z vote to deny site plan approval for a 140-unit apartment complex off Hartwell

The developer, Joseph Kantor, said he'll seek another board review after addressing the cited shortcomings with city building and engineering staff.

P&Z member Brent Carli accused Kantor of "just throwing 140 apartments at us without giving anything back to benefit the community. Kantor rebuted the charge. which came before Carli moved for site plan denial. Kantor said the project, which he later put at $4.5 million, was planned "to be first class all the way.'

The project is proposed for 10 acres lying between 24th and 25th streets and Georgia and Hartwell avenues.

Insufficient buffer area and excessive distance to garbage dumpsters were cited by city staff as project shortcomings during Thursday's review.

Carli agreed with staffs assessment and added several other criticisms while charging that residents in the nearby area would suffer from the project, as would its tenants, if the site plan was approved.

Carli's motion for site plan denial was supported by Shella Roberts, Jay Malone, Gary Davidson, and Eddle Kelth. Those opposed were chairman John Morris, Lon Howell, Hortense Evans and John LeRoy.

Carli said the number of apartment units was too close to maximun allowances for multi-family zones. The zones allows 20 units per acre. Kantor came in with 14 per acre, along with a pool, an 1,800 square foot clubhouse, green area and required drainage and paving.

Carli said plans for the apartments to be build with wood and stucco "could possibly be a fire hazard." He also indicated potential negative impacts the project could have on the Georgia Avenue canal, which drains into the Smith canal he said the city uses.

Carli said Kantor had only met minimun city standards in regard to parking and questioned "what kind of activities you plan for a clubhouse that's smaller than my home."

Kantor said his proposal was "to create a quality project." with units averaging 1,000 square feet and sufficient on-site landscaping. Kantor said he had posted a $40,000 performance bond with the city, at commissioners request, to ensure the paving of Hartwell Avenue. which will be the project's access route.

He also said "minimum" requirements were met in regard to parking, "but if we have to add more we'll hire a civil engineer."

The city's site plan process requires development criteria be met through staff reviews before presentation to the P&Z. Staff members' reservations Thursday were expressed after six weeks of working on the plan with Kantor.

In other action Thursday, the board unanimously approved a conditional use request for a church to operate in a genral commercial zone. The 25-pew All Saints Deliverance Church will operate from a two story building at 709 W. Ninth Street once site plan approval is securred. The plan will be submitted to the city next month, a church representaive said.

Black History Seen Shortchanged

By Genie Lindberg Herald Staff Writer

The participation of Afro-Americans in the growth and development of America has been systematically excluded from the majority of American history books, according to Dr. Lurlene Sweeting, counselor and instructor of Black History at Seminole Community College.

The vold must be filled, said Ms. Sweeting, if there is to be a more informed understanding of the Black Experience in America.

Ms. Sweeting said her course in Afro-American studies is a survey course of the political and socioeconomic experiences of Blacks and the concomitant psychological impact of these experiences. Students examine historical events along with the issues that precipitated them, she

"I approach the course not just from an historical view, pure facts, but also from the sociological and psychological impact of these things on the people," she said. "History is the relationship of a people to its government, whoever they are and wherever they are."

Ms. Sweeting talked about the importance of the two textbooks required for her course. One of the books, In The Matter of Color - Race and the American Legal Process: The Colonial Period, by A Leon Higginbotham, Jr., is used as a supplemental text because any course in Afro-American history has to explore, in detail, the dynamics of slavery in the various states so that people can have complete information about the system, Ms. Sweeting said. She said she is working on getting Higginbotham to guest lecture at SCC in the fall.

What Higginbotham has done in his book, Ms. Sweeting said, is to actually research the court records and the laws existing in the colonies during the 17th and 18th centuries and the relationship of those records and laws to the slaves. For instance, in Georgia, for the first 15 years, slavery was prohibited,

Lake Mary Eliminates Work Sessions

By Genie Lindberg Herald Staff Writer

Lake Mary Commissioners, voting on a 12:30 a.m. motion Friday, agreed to no longer hold work sessions and to return to their former procedure of holding only regularly scheduled commission meetings the first and third Thursdays of each month beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The work sessions will officially end after the March 2 session which it was too late to cancel because items on the 16 item agenda are already being advertised.

Commissioner Ken King made the motion at the early hour during a regular commission meeting that began at 7:30 p.m. Thursday with a several-item city manager's report, a two-item consent agenda and a combined total of 17 items under old and new business, many of which entailed lengthy discussions involving citizens, developers, engineers and lawyers. At one point during the meeting. Mayor Dick Fess commented on the over-flowing city hall crowd of people by saying "Now you know why we need a new city hall."

King said he believed there was no need to continue having a work session the Monday before the regularly scheduled Thursday meeting when the agenda is usually very similar. Commissioners Monday discussed. but could not take action on items included in an almost identical agenda. King said at future commission meetings he would like to stick as close to the agenda as possible and spend more time between meetings to review the items that will be discussed. He said he did not want to see an item appear on the agenda that he had not become acquainted with beforehand.

Commissioner Paul Tremel commented on the citizen involvement in Lake Mary that was evident from their attendance at commission work sessions and meetings on a regular basis and added that the work sessions were "placing a double burden on

Commissioner Charlie Webster said there was no need to have such full agendas. "There ought to be a cutting off point," he said. "We're loading ourselves up and we don't have to take it." It is not fair to have someone's attorney come in here and walt all evening for us to reach an agenda it and then table it. Webster said. He said agreed with King's motion to discontithe work sessions and that is why seconded the motion. He also pointed that he was the one who seconded Comm sioner Petsos' motion a few months ago begin scheduling commission wo

Fo example, items could be listed with pros an cons or simply listed as items "for informa tion." he said.

Two of Sanford's Planning and Zoning Board members have apparently touched off board sentiment in favor of spearheading a development code review, rather than seeing the city pay $30,000 for a private firm to undertake the effort.

The members, Brent Carli and Jay Malone, came out strongly Thursday against a staff proposal for the firm to be paid about $30,000 for preparation of sweeping revisions to the city's land development regulations.

Malone and Carli said they preferred seeing the voluntary P&Z board head the time consuming project, with assistance from the staff members who proposed the firm's hiring.

The board's other members indicated they'd be willing to commit the necessary time to the review, even chairman John Morris, who also expressed a preference for the firm to be

It was agreed the P&Z would "hear what the consultants have to say," probably at a session on March 19. The firm is already preparing the city's new comprehensive land use plan and is slated that night to discuss its progress with board members.

Carli and Malone said the P&Z's handling of the development review would not only save the city money, but keep the effort among those already familiar with the city's development philosophies.

Engineering and Planning Director Bill Simmons had asked for an "endorsement" from the P&Z to approach city commissioners about retaining the firm, Ivey, Bennett, Harris, and Walls, Inc., of Orlando.

Reagan's Secret Directive Gave CIA Powers To Kidnap Terrorists

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Despite a secret directive signed last year by President Reagan giving the CIA sweeping powers to kidnap terrorists and bring them to the United States, no apprehensions have been made, administration

No terrorists were kidnapped under the clandestine "finding" signed in January 1986 mainly because most are in hiding and are rarely spotted, an official said Friday.

Reagan's authorization, first reported Friday morning in the Wall Street Journal, gave the CIA - and later a special group headed by National Security Council aide Oliver North — virtual carte blanche in executing the policy.

The Journal said a new counterterrorism center in the CIA, set up by the finding, has mounted a number of efforts to sabotage terrorist operations in Lebanon and elsewhere.

Appointee's Past Causes Flap

WASHINGTON (UPI) - John Koehler, a feisty conservative newsman who as a 10-year-old briefly belonged to a Nazi youth group, says the controversy over his past will not stop him from becoming White House communications chief.

Koehler, named Thursday to succeed Patrick Buchanan, returned to Washington Friday to meet with White House personnel director Robert Tuttle after reports that the president did not know his appointee was a member of Adolf Hitler's Jungvolk for six months when he was 10 years old.

The disclosure briefly embarrassed the White House, although the native of Dresden, Germany, explained he never in his career as an Associated Press reporter and editor or U.S. Army intelligence officer concealed his membership in the Nazi organization.

After Koehler met with Tuttle, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "The president made his decision

Fourth Avalanche Victim Found

BRECKENRIDGE. Colo. (UPI) - Search teams guided by witnesses of the huge avalanche that buried four skiers recovered the frozen body of the last victim missing beneath a wall of snow 30 feet deep and half a mile wide.

The body of Alex Cates, 17, of Locust Valley, N.Y., was discovered at about 1:22 p.m. Friday in out-of-bounds back country outside the Breckenridge Ski Area on a mountan known as Peak 7, ending the three-day search for

"That's all the missing skiers as far as we know," said Summit County Undersheriff Gary Lindstrom. "We're all through searching."

Cates' body was found on a part of the peak that had already been searched, but witnesses to Wednesday's avalanche were taken back onto the mountain and were able to show where they saw the four skiers vanish in the

MOSCOW (UPI) - "Refusentk" Yosif Begun, who went to Jail rather than give up teaching Hebrew and was pardoned this week, spent his first Sabbath in freedom in four years today with his wife and son.

Begun's daughter-in-law Yanna said Begun, 54, was released fom Chistopol Prison, 600 miles east of Moscow Friday, and reunited with his wife and son.

"He is free. It has been a difficult struggle," Yanna said after speaking with Begun on the telephone. She said although his wife, Inna, said "he did not look well, his voice was cheerful.

She said the family, who are Orthodox Jews, chose to remain in the Tartar Republic tow of Chistopol until Sunday before returning to Moscow because of an admonition against traveling on the Jewish Sabbath, which began at sunrise Friday.

Syria Sends More Troops

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Syria will send more troops into the capital today to end vicious battles between Moslem militias that have killed more than 200 people in the worst fighting in west Beirut in three years. Lebanese Moslem leaders said.

The Moslem Voice of the Nation radio said 4,000 Syrian troops, backed by Soviet-made T-54 tanks, were already grouping in the mountains southeast of Beirut.

There was no indication when the force would move into the capital to restore order after five days of heavy combat between the Shiite Moslem Amal militia and leftist forces, led by the Druze Progressive Socialist Party.

After a night of relative calm, sporadic clashes were reported in several neighborhoods. Police said the clashes between the Amal and leftist forces using rocket-propelled grenades and heavy machine guns erupted in the disputed Watwat and Zarif areas of the city.

central nervous system disease and it can cause permanent brain damage or death. It is not contagious

Not all cases are severe, but professional medical help should be sought immediately for any child suspected of have this disease.

Early diagnosis and treatment at a medical center equipped to deal with this disease is the only hope.

The disease is not common and the Centers for Disease Control report that in the U.S. each year there are about 1 to 2 cases per 100,000 children reported to the centers. Some cases go unreported, or are misdiagnosed.

Symptoms, which usually develop when the child seems to be on the road to recovery from a virus-caused disease, include: Sudden and persistent vomiting, weakness, lethargy, quiteness or listless behavior. In sever cases the victim becomes agitated, irritable and agressive, with other personality changes. They may become confused, disoriented and finally develop convulsions and slip into coma as pressure within the brain increases.

The erratic behavior of some victims, may lead parents or medical personnel to believe the teenage child showing such symptoms might be under the influence of drugs. But there are blood tests that will show an increased ammonia level in the liver, which leads to a diagnosis of Reye's Syndrome.

Treatment of the disease varies, but a primary objective is to reduce the swelling of the brain and to flush the excess ammonia from the system.

At least 70 percent of Reye's Syndrome patients survive. but not all recover fully. Some may suffer brain damage that can vary from slight mental retardation to very severe brain dysfunction. -Susan Loden

Tax Changes May Scare Corporations From State

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Fears the expanded state sales tax proposed by Gov. Bob Martinez would cut into their profits have prompted several firms to reconsider plans to expand operations or move to Florida, it was reported Friday.

The companies include the American Automobile Association, which was planning a move from northern Virginia to Orlando, and Tampa-based GTE Data Services, which was planning a $500 million expansion.

the Tampa Tribune reported. Aides to the governor said company officals have begun requesting meetings with Martinez to discuss their fears.

GTE officials have said changes in the state's sales tax could result in higher corporate taxes and lower profits. AAA officials feared they would have to pay sales taxes on free services to members, such as towing.

James Oglethrope, who was a trustee in Georgia for a group of "absentee landlords" who were still in England, secured a charter to found Georgia and passed a law that "expressly banned importation of blacks into Georgia," Ms. Sweeting

The people in Massachusetts at that time were highly skilled shipbuilders and because slave-trading was so economically profitable, they used their? shipyards to become "deeply involved in the African slave trade," she said. So, slavery was not practiced the same everywhere and people need to study and examine it, she said.

"All of us, not just blacks, need to face the true history of this country and not just the idealized version that excludes blacks from their participation in the building of this nation."

The other book Ms. Sweeting requires for her black history course is Long Memory: The Black Experience in America by Mary Frances Berry and John Blassigane. She requires it, she said, because it is a very comprehensive book which addresses the important points of blacks' interaction in this country in such areas as family and church, sex and racism, the political arena and others.

The past, present and future are part of a continuum and if any part is missing, then you're not the whole person you can be," she said. "In the past, we've had snatches of black history, and what we're doing is focusing on a few black leaders when, in essence, we need to examine the relationship of the masses of blacks to their government from 1619 to the present."

Ms. Sweeting said that when she uses the term "we," she includes all Americans. "We were interacting with them (whites) in Georgia and Massachusetts; this is not just black history, it is American history."

"With all the morphine and everything in her system, when she woke up she was like a little wild animal, frightened," Mrs. Jacobs said. Natalle tried to bite her mother and father and continually tried to pull medical tubes from her body. For five days after she awoke she couldn't sleep. She was afraid to sleep, her mother said. Sleep came only after she had a scizure.

During her time in intensive care Natalle's body was not allowed to function independently, because any movement might have stimulated her brain and caused increased swelling of the brain, which would lead to death or extensive damage. Jacobs said.

"We couldn't touch her, except maybe to hold her hand. You couldn't move her head or any part of her body," Jacobs said.

She was hooked to monitors that sounded alarms when there was any interference with her mechanized respiration, or any of the other life support elements that performed her bodlly functions. Jacobs said he would leave the room any time an alarm sounded. "They called me Mr. Chicken, I just couldn't stay knowing she was in trouble."

Tears welled in his eyes when he recalled; "But she looked great, even though she was unconscious and her head was shaved and she had all of this stuff going on, she was still beautiful.'

Although she's normally the squeamish one of the family, Mrs. Jacobs said she had the opposite reaction when hearing an alarm. She was unable to leave the room until the crisis passed, she sald. But even now, when she hears any type of alarm sound she jumps.

"When we would walk into her room we would look at the monitors before we looked at her, because that would tell us

Normally pressure within the by Mrs. Jacob's brother, Mike skull is measured at a level of Capko, of Longwood, in main- 10. When Natalie was first hospitaining a 24-hour watch over talized her intercranial presure reading was 24 and until her symptoms subsided Christmas Eve it never fell below 20, with it soaring above 40 early in her hospitalization.

The last resort would have been a surgical opening in the skull to allow for further expansion of the brain, but that risky treatment turned out not to be necessary.

Since there is no standard treatment for Reye's and its symptoms, the ORMC doctors were working according to their own theories, Jacobs sald. And the treatment proved successful in controlling the awelling of her brain and flushing impurities from her system, until the illness ran its course.

The doctors told the Jacobs of their successful treatment of a 17-year-old boy who had the disease in 1986 and that gave them hope. But the Jacobs didn't learn until after Natalie was recovering that a 13-yearold boy with Reye's had died at ORMC last year.

"I can't tell you how anxious those two weeks were because there was something going on all the time," Jacobs said. There were ups and downs and we never knew if it was going to get worse." But the worst of it, Mrs. Jacobs said, was the 20 minutes of travel time between their home and the hospital, when they were out of touch with the doctors and didn't know what might be happening.

She said they received outstanding support from doctors, nurses and hospital counselors as wells as friends and strangers who were praying for Natalle and the aircare team to get them and sending her cards and gifts.

"I made a lot of promises," prayers for Natalle.

A nurse was keeping Natalie's classmates informed of her condition and explained her illness and told them it is not contagious.

'My hair has got to grow, then I'll be 100 percent recovered." said Natalie, who has apparently suffered no permanent, serious damage. She has some numbness in her lower legs and feet and a bald spot on the back of her head, which is also numb. The loss of hair was caused by her having to lie in one position, in a medically-induced paralyzed state for two weeks. Blood flow to that area was cut off, Jacobs

She has returned to her studies for a couple of hours each school day at South Seminole Middle School, where she is in the eighth grade. Her mother has returned to her job part-time and her father is back at work full-time.

Natalie receives physical therapy once a week. After her Jan. 2 release from ORMC she had to have some speech therapy to help her remember words she had forgotten or tended to transpose with others. She also had to be re-taught simple things such as how to tle her shoes or button her clothing.

During her illness a surveyor from Yale University visited the Jacobs and collected data on her symptoms and her activity leading up to the Illness, to aid in a program which is trying to pinpoint a cause and treatment for Reye's.

Medical experts believe there may be a link between the use of aspirin by children who are suffering from a viral illness and the onset of Reye's. Natalle did take some aspirin while she had the flu. Mrs. Jacobs said she will no longer allow her children to take aspirin, but Jacobs said he isn't convinced that aspirin had anything to do with Natalie's developing Reye's.

It is critical, Jacobs said, for there to be a greater awareness of Reye's as well as knowledge of the urgency of the need of an early diagnosis.

"It's important for them to know we have ORMC in this area there as soon as posible. It's important to know you can Mrs. Jacobs said, referring to her detect by tests if some one has it."

line that makes our profession special; they need to examine themselves professionally. There have been occasions when we've seen this type of thing; we see the teacher who is fired because of their allowing their relationship to become physical. These types of close associations (mentioned in the series) and lowering the barriers sometimes lead to other things ... '

But he said the severity of cases outlined in the series was probably "Isolated," because "most teachers come to class prepared and stay on task the whole time. They are patient and listen to their students trying to give them a better education." At his school teachers are evaluated regularly, but he said teachers never appear to be "off task" when an administrator is in the room.

At Oviedo High School, Principal Charles Webb said he found the stories interesting.

'We are leaders and role models whether we choose to be or not," Webb said. "The article might give this person (a teacher) thoughts as to the proper conduct, because whether we realize it or not we are leaders. This goes on not just at those two schools but other schools, too.

"I encouraged all the teachers to read it. We need to be reminded from the top down this is an awesome job."

It was Webb, in fact, that gave administrator Jack Heisler the plaque that was quoted at the end of the series. Webb found the words in an article in a professional journal by author, Ms. M.E. Jenkins. The plaque says:

"No assembly of people, whether scientists, spacemen or statesmen, could be more impressive or important than the members of America's teaching profession, for no group wield greater power and influence over the future than you. Every pupil you have carries in his mind or heart or conscience a bit of you. Your influence, your example, your ideas, and values keep marching on - how far into the future and into what realms of one spacious universe you will never know."

"That says a lot," Webb said.

Basketball Fans? Seminole County Missing Persons

The Seminole Community College Raiders' basketball team is the best buy in Seminole County sports. They perform several levels above prep basketball, soccer or wrestling and do so free of charge.

Yet, seldom do 400 fans watch coach Bill Payne's Raiders perform. So a winner brings out a crowd does it? Not so in SCC's case. The Raiders, currently 29-4 and bound for the Junior College State Basketball Tournament, are the epitome of a winner.

They play an exciting, aggressive style. Team work is at its best as the Raiders fly up and down the floor. Payne is a flamboyant coach, a show within himself on the sidelines. The "Rag Patrol," coach Jack Pantelias' baseball bunch, torments the opposition and delights the home fans.

The Raiders do have a small but dedicated following. Many of them are leftovers from Payne's coaching days at Seminole High. They never miss and are trueblue basketball fans. Knowledgeable fans, too.

After years of pondering this lack of following, there can be just one conclusion: Seminole County sports fans would not recognize a great basketball team if you laid it on their doorstep.

That is exactly what Payne has done. He has taken a group of predominately Central Florida players (plus a St. Petersburg Connection) and developed it into one of the finest units ever to ever hit the hardcourt.

These kids are not typical funior college players. They are well-behaved, disciplined and go to class. Those qualities are ary to most JuCo perform.

As is the SCC tradition established by ex-coach Joe Sterling, 90-95 percent will graduate and go on to a fouryear school. This is not some line from the SCC recruiting brochure. This is a fact. Payne, and Sterling before him, recruited attitudes as well as players. And if that attitude was a little off key, they would bring out the tuning fork until it came

Yet the Raiders of present day play before fans who come disguised as empty seats. This never ceases to perplex. There are schools in the north where the fans would stand in line in 20-degree weather to watch the talents of Malcolm Houston, Vance Hall, Darris Gallagher and Claude Jackson.

The excuses are many. The weather, the beach, SCC is a commuter school, etc., etc., etc. There is only one excuse: there are not legitimate basketball fans in Central Florida.

How many audiences of dwindling porportisns must one witness to discover this fact? In real basketball country, SCC's gym would be packed to its 2.500 capacity every time Payne dimmed the lights to introduce the starting five.

Yet on the average, the exploits of these young men are viewed by die-hards numbering 200-plus. Where are Seminole County's basketball fans? Are they not intelligent enough to understand basketball played above the rim, up and down the court in major-college style?

Sad but true. Seminole County is a place where parents watch their kids play sports. There is, of course, nothing wrong with this. Kids need the encouragement much more than JuCo players who have grown accustomed to playing in empty gymnasiums.

But where is the returnee? Where is the fan who attends a game, enjoys it and returns for the same thrill of a Houston 3-pointer, a Gallagher dash through the press, a Hall blocked shot or a Jackson dunk. This is what is disturbing. Fans and followers are not being created despite one of the most appealing games around. These kids can play and play with anyone. Central Florida or Rollins would want no part of the game these Raiders play. But it is not just Seminole which does not cultivate its potential fans. Look at Orange,

Volusia and Osceola. There is See COOK, Page 4B

Special to the Herald

CASSELBERRY - Seminole High showed it means business from here on out by terrorizing Lake Howell's Silver Hawks, 90-50, in Seminole Athletic Conference Friday night before 401 fans at Lake Howell High School.

The Seminoles, ranked 18th in the Class 4A poll, completely dominated the Silver Hawks from start to finish while posting their eighth victory in a row and 18th out of their past 19 games to conclude the regular season mark at 24.5 overall and 10-0 in the SAC. The Silver Hawks, who earlier in the week broke a 12-game losing streak, fell to 5-16 overall and 2-8 in the open-court passing. conference.

Seminole head coach Bill Klein was pleased with his team's performance as the Seminoles head into the District 4A-9 tournament at Sanford next

"We played very well tonight," he said. "We got real far ahead of them early, which made them have to run, and we run the ball a lot better than most teams do."

Trailing, 6-1, after two minutes of play, the Seminoles proceeded to outscore the Silver Hawks. 27-0, on their way to a 45-14 halftime lead. Although the Seminoles first playoff step is to win the District 4A-9 championship, Henderson couldn't help but look ahead to the teams' ultimate goal.

"Our dream is to go to state this year," he said. "We've been waiting for the chance to go since we were freshmen."

Rams Dominate Melbourne, 3-0, For State Berth

Chris Fister Herald Sports Writer

LAKE MARY — Despite winning 20 games, district and regional titles, Lake Mary's Rams felt they still hadn't put it all together on both ends of the field in one gmae.

Friday night, Lake Mary played its most complete game of the season and dominated Melbourne's Bulldogs, 3-0, for the Class 4A-3 Section title and a berth in the Class 4A State Soccer Tournament before 550 fans at Lake Mary High School.

Lake Mary, 21-3-4, will go up against Section 4 winner Miami Killian in the state semifinals this Friday. Killian advanced with a 4-1 victory over Hialeah Miami Lakes Friday night. Lake Mary Principal Don Reynolds said Friday night he will try to get the state tournament at Lake Mary High.

In the other state semifinal, top-ranked and unbeaten Tampa Leto will take on Orange Park. Leto advanced with a 3-0 victory over St. Petersburg High while Orange Park blanked Pensacola Woodham, 3-0.

The Rams came out blazing Friday night, ripping 17 shots on goal in the first half compared to two for the Bulldogs. The Rams had a comfortable 2-0 lead at halftime and added another goal with eight minutes left while goalkeeper Pete McNally and the Rams' defense recorded their fourth shutout in five post-season games.

"I had a good feeling when we had a 2-0 lead but I knew we had it when we got the third goal," Lake Mary coach Larry McCorkle said. "It's not going to be easy in the state but anything we do right now is just icing on the cake."

McCorkle is returning to the state tournament after taking Orlando Bishop Moore to the 3A championship in 1982. In his fifth year at Lake Mary, McCorkle's team won its first district title and now gets its first state tournament berth.

"Mr. Reynolds jokingly said he would give me five years to get to the state tournament," McCorkle sald. "That was a pretty good forecast."

For the first 30 minutes Friday night, Lake Mary continually created excellent scoring efforts and cold easily have scored five or more goals. The Rams once hit the crossbar, hit the post once and had a goal called back because of a phantom hand ball. Any time Melbourne got within striking distance, the Bulldogs were turned away by the Rams' defense. Lake Mary finally broke the ice with 10:58 left in the first half when Jon Brooks scored on an assist from Pete Kinsley. Lake Mary took a 2.0 lead with 2:11 left in the half when Ernie Broennle fired in a right-footed shot from the top of the penalty area.

The Rams had a chance to take a 3-0 lead with 12:18 left to play but Scott Schmitt's penalty kick sailed over the goal. Lake Mary put the clinching goal on the board with 8:40 remaining when Kinsley made a nice pass to Brooks who headed the ball over the charging goalkeeper's head.

Sutcliffe Puts Up $100,000 For Dawson

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) - Chicago Cubs pitcher Rick Sutcliffe is demonstrating that he is a team player.

Sutcliffe has told Cubs General Manager Dallas Green he would give up part of his salary, reportedly $100,000 to help the club sign free-agent outflelder Andre Dawson, formerly of the Montreal Expos.

"I don't think there's a team in baseball that wouldn't love to have Andre Dawson," Sutcliffe said Friday when the Cubs became the first Cactus League team to open spring training.

LEFTIES ARE IN NEWS

Left-handed pitchers dominated spring training news Friday, with free agent Steve Carlton working out with the Philadelphia Phillies and Ted Higuera announcing a holdout from the Milwaukee Brewers.

Carlton, 42, a four-time Cy Young Award winner, donned his familiar No. 32 uniform for the workout. He spent most of his career with the Phils until being released last June. He then pitched briefly for San Francisco and the Chicago White Sox.

"We'll look for velocity on his fastball, command of his breaking pitches and how well he can throw his screwball and split-fingered fastball." Philadelphia Manager John Felske said.

Higuera's agent said the 20-game winner will not be in camp when the Brewers open spring training Monday. "That's absolutely true," agent Brian David said, "We won't get anything done

By Sam Cook Herald Sports Editor

Lake Mary and Seminole, two of the better wrestling teams in Central Florida, journeyed to Jacksonville Forrest High School this weekend to continue their rivalry. And after two rounds of the Class 4A-1 Region Wrestling Tournament action. the feud could not be finer.

Coach Doug Peters' Rams, with his six-gun of Troy Jackson, Bill and Rob Richards, Enrique Carbia, Scott Flores and Wayne Clayton smoking, have forged a 10 point lead over the Seminoles, 54-44. Fort Walton Beach Choctawhatchee is third with 42 1/2 while Gainesville Buchholz, with 42, and Jacksonville Wolfson, with 34 1/2, are the other contenders.

"I like the position we're in." Peters said Friday night. "But we're not comfortable. Seminole is in good shape and so is Buchholz, I'm worried about both of them."

Sanford's chances received a big boost when Mays, trailing, 7-2, with 15 seconds left in the match, executed a miraculous five-point move to tie William Zambie in the 116 pound quarterfinals. Mays then used the same move — a Spladle — to take a 4-0 lead over the Orange Park grappler in overtime. Zamble then put Mays on his back but Mays fought off the pin attempt for a 4-3

Sator Has Triumphant Return As Buffalo Clobbers Rangers

United Press International

The New York Rangers welcomed the return to Madison Square Garden of former coach Ted Sator by playing like Sator's Rangers.

Sator, now coach of Buffalo, guided the Sabres Friday night to a 6-3 triumph over the Rangers. Sator had started the season coaching the Rangers, but was fired Nov. 21 following the team's 5-10-4 start.

The Rangers, under the guidance of Tom Webster and Phil Esposito, have rebounded, going 20-16-4 since Sator's departure. Esposito, the team's general manager, became coach when Webster was sidelined by an inner-ear problem.

Sator marked his return to New York by wearing a funny nose and glasses in the dressing-room area before the game. Afterward, he downplayed a revenge factor.

We're fighting for our lives for a playoff spot, so we can't afford to get too emotionally involved in any one game,' Sator said. "If we're going to make the playoffs, we've got to do it by taking the points ourselves, not over some other team's downfall. It's great to get out of New York with two points when we would have been happy with one."

Sator was hired Dec. 22 by a struggling Sabres team and is 14-9-2 with Buffalo. Friday's victory left the Sabres six points behind Quebec for the final Adams Division playoff Elsewhere. Detroit crushed Quebec 6-3. Winnipeg trounced Boston 6-2. Calgary whipped Toronto 7-2 and Washington downed Vancouver 6-3.

DePaul Program Thrives On Television Exposure

CHICAGO (UPI) - Television exposure can play a vital role in helping to build - or maintain - a top college basketball pro-

Nowhere is that more in evidence than at DePaul University VIIIKOff in Chicago.

The Blue Demons enjoy perhaps the most exposure of any basketball program in the country. In addition to selected national telecasts on CBS, NBC, ESPN and USA. DePaul enjoys national exposure on superstation WGN.

"We've enjoyed a good relationship with WGN and there's little doubt it is helping us in recruiting," said DePaul Coach Joey Meyer.

All but three of Del'aul's games, home and away, were on some sort of national hookup this year, enabling prep recruits from New Mexico to Maine to get a first-hand look at the DePaul program.

It is a mutually beneficial relationship. WGN fills primetime programming with DePaul games and the Blue Demon program has been one of the most successful in the nation the past six years.

"The exposure that DePaul gets is amazing. We get letters and notices from fans all over the country," play-by-play announcer Joe McConnell said. "It's a definite tool for them and they use it to the hilt."

Other schools are benefiting from similar exposure, although none as widespread as DePaul's. Schools in the Big East used the package ESPN arranged with Commissioner Dave Gavitt to vault into prominence. Big Ten schools, most already located in major media centers, also have their own syndicated ESPN package. But because DePaul, which Sunday hosts Georgia Tech on NBC, is seen so often and so widely, it can use the game as a tool for national recruiting.

"I'm sure some of the players, including those from California and New Jersey that we've gotten, saw us on TV and were impressed with the facility and the program." said former De-Paul Coach Ray Meyer, now a broadcaster for WGN radio. "We weren't aware at first of the signsleance, but it's been a great relationship for the university."

"There's no doubt of the impact television has on recruiting." said Dick Vitale, color commentator for both ABC and ESPN. "The more exposure you get, the more it helps in recognition. I'm not so sure when oversaturation makes a difference. But I'm sure in the case of a DePaul, it makes a difference."

Just how many times a rival coach goes into the living room of a blue chip prep and finds him watching DePaul on the tube isn't known. What is known is DePaul's high recognition factor and the ability of television to make a top flight player into an overnight celebrity.

Other schools could try to duplicate DePaul's status on WGN, but the two other major superstations, WTBS and WOR, don't have exclusive deals with college teams like DePaul. WTBS has all but abandoned college basketball in favor of the NBA, while WOR does selected Big East games.

"We know we've got a good situation," Joey Meyer said. "But it can work against you in some cases. Everything we do is seen and reviewed by a lot of media."

The weekend fare (all times EST):

College baskethell
NBC Sunday game of the week (1-3 p.m.). Georgia Tech at DePaul. CBS Sunday game of the week (2:30-4:30 p.m.) Georgetown at Syracuse. ABC game of the week (2-4 p.m.) Louisville

Unique 3-Dimensional Creations Have A Strong Tie To Architecture

By Susan Loden Herald Staff Writer

Perry Allen is a nontraditional sculptor who is beginning to establish a reputation with his work, which has a strong tie to architecture.

Allen, along with his artist wife Debbe and their 4-year-old daughter Lauren. has lived in Sanford about two years and moved to Central Florida from his native Texas about seven vears ago.

They are at home on South Park Avenue in an older home they are gradually restoring. There is space for both Allen and Mrs. Allen to work. Mrs. Allen's artistic efforts are mainly focused on prints and etchings with some overlay-techniques coming into play on her prints.

During the last five years Aften has locally displayed his creations, primarily of wood, with some metal, clay and other materials added, at sidewalk shows and galleries.

The typical reaction to his 3-dimensional creations. some of which resemble houses, is, he said, 'What is It, a doghouse, a mailbox?"

by those who are looking for a function in what is a non-functional artistic creation. "People have trouble getting past the idea that three dimensional art doesn't have to be functional. It doesn't have, to be a fountain, a birdbath. Since I'm doing the house now I get a lot of birdhouse comments maliboxes, that sort of thing. That was hard at first. It's something sitting on the street (at a sidewalk art show) on a weekend and being exposed to that. But it's something you get used to." 38-year-old Allen said.

"I think our temperaments are very much alike," Allen said of he and his wife. "Yeah, we are tempermental. That's my biggest problem in working is my temperament and trying to control that through a normal forty hour work week producing something specifically for some-

Although Allen said he has been on a roll winning awards and recognition for his work during the past year, with a recent showing with five other Central Florida artists at the Maitland Center for the Arts, he said he can't support his family if he devotes full time to his sculpting. So he works for a Longwood company that makes vacuum form molds and plastic automotive parts.

He has also worked for Disney World doing everything from sewing bear and gorilla costumes to assembling clay models. He and Mrs. Allen worked together in a Casselberry sign shop and he also has made artificial rocks and water fountains.

"Most of the things I've done have been somewhat creative. If I don't watch myself I put too much of myself in that and then I don't have the energies for what I want to do when I come home.

"Also, I'm going past the direction of whomever I'm working for. I'm a perfectionist. Some of these things they want out quick. I don't want to do it that way, so occasionally something will fly across the shop. People . are kind of getting used to that," he said.

The techniques Allen has practiced in his everyday work sometimes carry over into his art. A few years ago when he was creating a cross between pop and folk arts he sald the bright colors he worked with at the sign shop influenced his choice of bright colors for those pieces.

His current work has a more natural character, with bits and pieces of natural wood and more subdued colors worked into the de-

"I can walk out in my yard and pick up limbs and do something with that. I've had to cut back on expenses because a lot of these pieces l hang on to for a long time. Three dimensional work in this area just doesn't sell that well, so I can't afford to, unless it's commissioned, put a lot of money into a piece."

At this point most of the money earned with Allen's art is through show awards instead of sales, he said.

"In Central Florida the audience is not very aware of work past traditional standards. When they think of sculpture they think of it mostly in the figurative sense and I don't do figurative work. People from the North seem more aware because they've had more exposure. Here there's just not that much exposure." Allen said sooner or later his works all get titles. "The titles don't always come right after I've finished a piece. Sometimes I have to think about it awhile. Sometimes a title will suggest the piece.

"I try not to let the title Influence the piece too heavily, because then it becomes too literal. And whereas these things are in a sense narra-Ideas I put together, I don't like them to be so exact that a person would walk up and say. 'Yes, I know what that is.' I want the viewer to have to think about it. I want it to have more of a wide range of possibilities, so I try not to be too obvious."

Many of his pieces, Allen said, reflect "very much kind of an agrarian culture of the South. Things I grew up with. Things I've seen." His creation, 'Doing the Pulaski Shuffle', which was part of the Maitland display, reflects an image of the hometown of his great grandmother, Pulaskt, Tenn., which was also the site of the founding of the Ku Klux

"People think that's a funny piece, but if you look at it and see the tar and feathers, I used a house-like structure, which is acutally a person with the tall structure on top, which is not a roof. It's the type of hat the Klan wears. So it's actually a pretty violent piece. It's one that comes from a vilent type history and it's not that

"But then too, the robes that the Klan wear are actually kind of beautiful, shielding that type of violence," he said.

Allen, who said ultimately he would like to teach art on a college level, said as a child he was interested in art. But he attended small Texas schools and never had an art course until college.

In recognition of American History Month, winners of the American History Essay Contest were also honored at the meeting. To celebrate the 200th birthdy of the American Constitution, the subject of the essay contest sponsored by the DAR nationwide was: "A Letter to the Editor, September, 1787."

This contest was for fifth, sixth and eighth grade students and according to Dr. Sara Irrgang, American History Month committee chairman, "The response in our county has been outstanding, with the most entries seen in years. The essay quality was extraordinarily high which

Nostalgia Scores In 'Radio Days'

RADIO DAYS (PG) It's a sad comment on today's film scene that Woody Allen is virtually alone in pursuing his artistic vision in movie after movie. This is the only thing that's sad about his film career, though. "Hannah and Her Sisters," while slightly overrated, was one of 1986's best movies. Allen's new work, "Radio Days," will doubtless remain one of this year's signal achievements.

"Radio Days" is narrated by Allen and seen through the eyes of a boy named Joe (Seth Green) growing up in Rockaway in a crowded, lively Jewish household. Joe's memories, triggered by songs and programs he heard on the radio, take the form of genial shaggy-dog stories. A few dozen characters inhabit these anecdotes, with some familiar faces turning up only briefly. (Diane Keaton shows up at the end to sing, reminding one how magical the musical moments have always been in Allen's films:) This anecdotal style makes for a rambling narrative. but it's just right for a movie about radio - a medium in which anecdotes flourished.

Allen's humor is increasingly fused with lyricism. Light but not slight, "Radio Days" is a perfectly proportioned comedy. and the cast is a seamless ensemble. Mia Farrow is delightful as a squeaky-voiced eigarette girl who transforms herself into a sophisticatedsounding gossip columnist. Dianne Wiest is memorable as Joe's Aunt Bea, a woman forever disappointed in her quest for Mr. Right. The score includes evocative recordings that range from "September Song" to "If I Didn't Care." This short, sweet film mines a rich vein of nostalgia. GRADE: 31/2 stars.

LIGHT OF DAY (PG-13) Joan Jett is a good, surly rocker, but she's not an actress, and so her surly non-performance brings down this curiously moralistic drama. Jett plays a rock singer trying to make it in a group with her brother (Michael J. Fox). She's also an unwed and in-sensitive mother who's estranged from her parents (Gena Rowlands and Jason Miller). Halfway through the movie. the mother, who's been acting like she's in the early stages of Alzheimer's, turns out to have ovarian cancer, and the picture starts to behave like "Terms of Endearment."

Michael J. Fox gives a creditable performance, and Gena Rowlands almost makes her inscrutable character scrutable. But writer-director Paul Schrader's movie is finally screwy. The title song — by Bruce Springsteen, sung by Jett - sounds pretty good. GRADE:

MYBEAUTIFUL LAUNDRETTE (R) Lorimar. $79.95. Stephen Frear's original. volatile 1986 comedy focuses on an extended family of Pakistanis in London's South End and their efforts to fit into Margaret Thatcher's England. The pivotal relationship is between a Pakistani teenager (Gordon Warnecke) and a punk layabout (Daniel Day Lewis) who together refurbish and operate a rundown laundrette. Along the way, the chums fall in love.

Written by Hanif Kureishi, who's half-Pakistant himself, the movie is less about a gay affair than it is about race, class and the vestiges of colonialism in contemporary England. This may sound forbidding, but it's an enjoyably dense and witty movie. Daniel Day Lewis's performance marks the birth of a young star. GRADE: 31/2 stars.

BACK TO SCHOOL (PG-13) HBO/Cannon, $79.95. Some of us prefer Rodney Dangerfield as an unregenerate heel (as he was in "Easy Money"). But this slapdash farce in which Rodney takes on the halls of academe was a huge hit, and it has plenty of leering laughs. GRADE: 21/2

Film grading: 4 stars excellent, 3 stars - good, 2 stars - fair, 1 star - poor).

Good Will At Office Parties Stirs Bad Feelings At Home

DEAR ABBY: I grew up in a religious home believing it was a sin to smoke, drink or dance. My husband didn't grow up with those beliefs. We love each other and have a good relationship until party time, then I have trouble accepting his slow dancing with the women in his office. There are eight of them, and he says their feelings would be hurt if he didn't ask them to dance at the Christmas parties, etc. I notice not all the men in his group dance with their coworkers, and I can't understand why my husband thinks he has

I trust him, but I just don't think God meant for a man and woman to rub their bodies together in slow dancing with anyone except their own spouses.

Am I normal to feel Jealous? If most wives feel jealous when their husbands slow-dance with other women, then I'll say. "Thank God, I'm normal!" JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: Rejoice. you're normal. Moderation and discretion are recommended at these dancing parties. Your husband shouldn't leave you sitting while he slow- (or fast-) dances with other women. Nelther should you expect him to give up dancing entirely if he enjoys it.

DEAR ABBY: I am really hurt! A friend and I decided to go out together to celebrate a special occasion because neither of us had a date. (We are both a number of years, and his wife, females.)

Three hours before we were to leave, she called and said that a guy she used to date called her and she accepted a date with him. She said her date wouldn't mind if I came along, but she didn't sound very sincere, so I

Am I being overly sensitive, or do I have a right to feel snubbed? THIN-SKINNED

DEAR THIN-SKINNED: Snubbed? Maybe, maybe not. You may have misjudged the depth of your friendship. Ask yourself: If a guy you used to date had called and asked you for a date, what would you have done? If you would have turned him down, then you have a right to feel snubbed.

DEAR ABBY: I recently became friendly with a very dear and wonderful lady I'll call Betty. Betty told me that she had given her twin boys - who were 3 years old at the time - to a minister and his wife who put them up for adoption. Betty now wants more than anything in the world to see her twin boys just once in her lifetime. (The boys are now 29.)

The minister has been dead for who lives in the Philadelphia area, is still in touch with Betty, but she refuses to give her any information about the twins' whereabouts.

I seem to recall that you wrote about an agency that puts adopted children and their natural parents in touch with each other. If there is any cost involved, please advise and I will forward the fee immediately. A PRIEND IN PHILADELPHIA

DEAR PRIEND: Because I am opposed to natural parents intruding on the lives of children they have placed for adoption, as well as adopted children "finding" their natural parents, unreunion, I recommend the International Soundex Reunion Registry (ISRR), P.O. Box 2312. Carson City, Nev. 89702. Please enclose a long, stamped, selfaddressed envelope when writ-'11

Persons who have been !! adopted and want to find their 12 natural parents may register with the above agency. And a birth parent who has placed a child for adoption and wishes to locate that child may also register. If a match is made, a reunion 🖖 takes place. There is no registration fee, but because this is a "? not-for-profit agency, contributions are welcome. I have dealt with ISRR for many years and have found the people there to be efficient, honest and in total agreement with my feeling that neither the natural parents nor the child shall be "found" unless they want to be.

Ecumenical Group Tackles Farm Crisis

By David E. Anderson UPI Religion Writer

Although the economic crisis affecting rural America has vanished from the front pages and the top of the evening news, It remains a major concern of the nation's Christian and Jewish leaders.

To undercore that continuing concern,. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish leaders, joined by farmers, academics and a politiclan or two, recently met in Chicago to look at various aspects of the problem, including pondering the possibility that the family farm was not savable.

The conference was sponsored by the National Council of Churches' Rural Crisis Issues Team, the National Catholic Rural Life Conference and the American Jewish Committee. They were joined by a number of other Christian groups and farm advocacy organizations such as Prairieffre Rural Action.

After two days of discussion, the group agreed that despite assessments arguing that family farms are no longer economically viable and essentially obsolete, it is worth the effort to try to save them.

"We Insist that the dismemberment of chairman of the conference. rural society and the disappearance of the family farm adversely serves the interest of our nation, for our country has been built on the moral and ethical values inherent in a system of family farms." the group said in a statement adopted at the end of the sessions.

"The destruction of this system also jeopardizes the base on which our strong urban centers are built," the statement

Indeed, one of the central threads that ran through the Interreligious Conference on Rural Life was precisely the notion that, in the words of Roman Catholic theologican John Pawlikowski, "the threat of economeic viability and political stability doesn't stop at the door the doorsteps of a few hundred

Although the current crisis can be traced to a number of causes, participants agreed, they expressed special concern about the impact of large agribusiness firms and the growing concentration of the agricultural market share in the hands of fewer and fewer companies that can operate at larger economies of scale, making it tougher for smaller firms to compete.

That concentration also allows the large corporations to exercise a degree of political influence the small farmer - whose very way of life is often based on "going it.alone." according to Rudin - cannot match. resulting structuring federal agricultural polcies tilted toward agribusiness.

In the declaration adopted at the conference, participants established a public policy agenda that would "ensure stable and profitable levels of income for family farm producers" while providing for an "adequate, affordable supply of quality food for American consumers."

They called for development a national food and land policy "rooted in the principles of justice that form the founda-

Catholics, Koop Clash On AIDS Prevention

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) - The refusal of most Catholic schools to teach any AIDS prevention methods other than sexual abstinence has put the nation's largest private educational network at odds with the surgeon general and some Catholic

An article in the Feb. 20 issue of the independent newsweekly National Catholic Reporter says Catholic educators find themselves in the midst of an increasingly contentious debate over publicizing the use of condoms.

The Roman Catholic Church teaches that sex outside of marriage and the use of contraceptives, including condoms, is unacceptable.

Surgeon General C. Everett Koop has said dissemination of preventive information, including educating students about the use of condoms, could save thousands of lives. The article said Catholic resistance to full AIDS education is being met with mounting criticism.

"As a physician, and as a Catholic, I cannot sit by and watch people die when Information can make a difference," said Dr.

German Maissonet, medical director of the Los Angeles Minority AIDS Project.

"We're not going to stop kids from having sex." Maissonet said. "God knows we've tried. So I'm in favor of providing the information because this virus (AIDS) does not forgive and does not forget."

Catholic schools, with nearly 3 million students, comprise the largest private educational network in the United States.

The Chleago archdiocese, which has the nation's largest Catholic high school population, is considering AIDS education but will not mention the role of condoms in preventing transmission of the disease, the article said.

'My understanding is that condoms are a widely used device for contraception," said Sister Cathy Campbell, a spokeswoman for Chicago Catholic Schools. "Therefore, it would be contradictory to advocate it on one hand (for health reasons) and oppose it on the other (contraception)."

The newspaper, which is published in Kansas City, Mo., said that among "significant Catholic schools systems," so far only Oakland, Calif., plans to discuss condoms in AIDS education programs.

"I don't see how you can avoid it," said Oakland Catholic Schools Superintendent Sister Rosemary Hennessey, "It's medical fact. If we're afraid to talk about condoms, and all the other Issues AIDS raises, then we're really missing it. And in the meantime, people are dying."

However, most Catholic educators feel that providing information concerning the use of condoms implicitly condones artificial contraception in violation of church teaching, and may encourage premarital sex, the article said.

"What we need to do is to be more forceful and forthright about what we've always been teaching," said the Rev. Tom Gallagher, education secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, "If our teachings had been followed all along by everybody we wouldn't be in this (AIDS) mess."

Sister Catherine McNamee, director of the National Catholic Educational Association, concurred.

"Monogamy, celibacy — the only safe sex is a monogamous relationship wihin marriage," she said.

Forget Superwoman, Bring Back Mom

Welcome back monogamy, motherhood and family. Welcome back the old-fashloned mother who is there when the children get home from school. Exit Helen Gurley Brown, the Cosmo Girl. 9 to 5 (for married women) and "having it all." Exit, 100, "dinks" (double income no kids).

It would be nice to report that a desire to return to the traditional values is behind this dramatic shift in our lifestyles.

But it is probably truer to say that fear of AIDS and a desire for status is responsible. The AIDS scare has brought a return to commitment in human relationships and a move away from casual affairs. This also has resulted in a decline in drinking.

Women are on the marriage bandwagon with 72 percent of single women in a recent poll saying they would like to get married in the next year.

"Singles are cocooning. They want a safe haven with somebody," is how one pollster analyzes the statistics. An amazing 42 percent of women discuss marriage and children on a first date.

How is the return to home and hearth tied in with a craving for status? Well, in a day of many millionaires, money no longer confers status - especially if it children, in that order of imtakes (wo paychecks to get you portance. Now it has dawned on what you want. consider vulgar and proletarian. 'Moms at home are in. Working moms are out," says a New York research firm. "Women are going home again. It's an indication you are living the good life if you can stay home with your kids."

It's also worth a rung or two up the social ladder for a man to be able to say his wife doesn't work - which translated is to say, "she doesn't have to work."

Women will remain in the work force in large numbers, but unless they are single it is likely to count against them with the membership committee at the country club.

It isn't only a desire for status, however, that has turned women's faces toward home again. The dream wasn't work-

Leaving Teaching With A Touch Of Class

By Genie Lindberg Herald Staff Writer

Archie Cannon, a teacher at Seminole High School for over 30 years, said he has not been the 'typical" teacher that many people may visualize a teacher being.

"I like to give students freedom in the classroom, more or less, to be themselves, Cannon said. "I feel if they don't mind coming to my class. maybe I can Impart some math knowledge to them."

Cannon, 58, retired Jan. 30, ending a career in teaching that began in 1954 at Denton High School, Denton, N.C. He recently talked about some of the changes he has seen in the educational system over the years.

"I'm a liberal teacher," Cannon sald, "and if I can't teach students like that, I don't consider myself successful. I don't like a lot of rules — I like few rules."

Cannon said that since about 1962 with the advent of the hippie movement and the rebelling against society, students have had to abide by more rules and stricter discipline. High school students are young adults who are almost old enough to vote, Cannon sald. "They don't want a bunch of elementary-type rules" such as having to keep their shirttalls in or having to get a haircut. He sald he remembers a time when there were fewer rules and that students were better behaved, easy to get along with, and were more responsive to the material you were trying to teach them.

"I respect students' individuality," Cannon said. "Ninety percent of the people would probably disagree with me, but I think that strict discipline is a detriment to education." In general, though, some rules are needed, Cannon sald, citing getting to school on time and showing respect for one another as prime examples.

Cannon said with the increase in school enrollment as a result of the county's growth spurt, it was diffleult to get to know the approximately 100 teachers in his own school. So communication is poor, he said, and "it seems to have somewhat of a depressing factor" here and in other counties too. Teachers need a way to interact better, he sald.

Also, administrators should listen to teachers more and ask for teachers' advice in placing students in their proper course levels, Cannon sald. "It's a waste of a student's and a teacher's time for a student to be in the wrong level of math, for example." But administrators are more and more in control of those decisions, Cannon said. "When you get out of the classroom, sometimes you forget how it is in the classroom."

Cannon said he thinks those things could change if teachers were allowed more input concerning decisions about a student's course level placement. "Who knows more about whether a person is a good math teacher than a fellow math teacher."

There is no excuse for the lines of communication being broken down between teachers and administrators. "no matter how big the system gets." Cannon said. "If I were an administrator, that's one of the things I would insist on with all teachers." He said that an advisory board of retired teachers who could work with the superintendent might be a good idea because "many principals don't want a teacher's advice. Principals have too much control in their schools and should be made more accountable to the superintendent than they are."

At the high school level, a lot of administrators have been physical education teachers or coaches. Cannon said, because the big thing in high school is the Friday night football games. "The public wants to see the gladiators on the field." If a principal does not have a winning team, the public wants to know "What's wrong with our football team?" Cannon said. He said he remembers a time at a school open-house when the principal told parents about the school's curriculum, rules and expectations, then asked if the parents had any questions. The first question from a parent was "What's wrong with our football team?" And at other times. when the school invites parents to attend activities more related to academics, Cannon said, "few parents attend."

His advice to teachers starting out in the profession today is to go and get a degree in administration and move up the ladder, even though he said he, himself, never cared about going into administration. "I love teaching; I've always loved it." Cannon said.

"I had motivated, college-bound kids and I was happy. It's such a pleasure to work with students like that - they're the cream of the crop."

So, "why are you leaving, Mr. Cannon?" he said his students have

He thought about retiring for quite awhile, he said, but it came on quickly. "I got fed up with the

Cannon said he no longer got to take trigonometry students to the advanced math competition after he was assigned to teach pre-algebra classes. The competition is sponsored by the Seminole County Council of Teachers of Mathematics each year. He said he is proud of the plaque he has, which shows that Seminole High, between 1976 and 1982, had beaten Lake Brantley more than 50 percent of the time. He sald that 1982 was the last year he took students to the competition. "I'd always looked forward to that

Raising Minimum Wage Reduces Work Force

EAGLE MOUNTAIN, COLO. — A warm, sunny day in February here is about as rare as, well, a warm, sunny day in February. We have had a week of them.

I took advantage of the good weather to walk over to the other side of Eagle Mountain to visit my neighbor. George.

George was sitting on his front porch, rocking furiously.

George usually likes to rock very slowly. Hard rocking means big trouble. Lasked him what was wrong.

"It's them dad-burned boys over to Washington," he sputtered, rocking even faster.

I told George to calm down and poured a cup of hot tea. That slowed him up a little.

"Them boys is crazier'n a coyote in an empty hen house. They're fixin' to go and jack up the bottom wage again."

The bottom wage?

"You know, the wage what says you cain't pay lessin it."

The minimum wage? "Whatever, Anyways, them boys is aimin' to

I told George that it hadn't been "upped" in a long time. I asked what would be so bad about raising it now.

"On account of the unemployin' effect. They go and tell you you cain't pay less'n somethin' what is more'n you want to pay, then won't nobody hire folks no more. That's the unemployin'

George had put his finger on the problem, but what kind of life can you have for $3,35 an hour?

"Better'n life without no job no how," he snapped. "Anyways. I got me a idea that'd fix those folks up purtier'n a yellow crocus poppin' up from a spring snow."

George was rocking more slowly now.

"My idea," he said, "is this. The way I figure it. we want folks to be able to get jobs. But a whole lot of folks what are in a skills lackin' way just cain't get 'em. Did you see where the unemployin' amongst black younguns was way up last month? Well, I figure we got to get those folks hooked up with somethin' of an employin'

"I also figure it oughta be somethin' of an employin' nature in the private parts of the economy."

"Whatever, Anyways, right now it ain't worth the while of business folks to hire folks what are lackin' in skills. That's where this idea o'mine comes right along slicker'n a smooth rock in a wet river.

"I calls it the 'benchmark split," he said proudly. His rocker was barely moving.

The benchmark split?

"Yup. What you do is get rid of the bottom wage. Folks what can only make 50 cents an hour could make 50 cents an hour."

I told George I could imagine just a bit of objection to his scheme.

That's where my benchmark split comes in." he said. "The boys in Washington'd set a benchmark, maybe $8 an hour. Then for any person what was makin' less, the feds'd chip in half the difference 'twixt what the person was makin' and the benchmark.

"See how it works? The person who could only make 50 cents would get some extra. Let's see...$8 minus 50 cents...drop one off it...put in the dot...that's $7.50. The boys in Washington'd kick in half that. Let's see...two goes into the seven first, that leaves one...then fifteen, tarnation!"

"Right, thankee. So the feds kick in the $3.75. The person gets the 50 cents plus the $3.75...let's see...twelve, carry the one...$4.25! The person'd make $4.25 an hour. Still not a lot, maybe, but it'd be better'n a kick in the knee with a frozen boot. The idea is that anybody could get work produce somethin' — and still get a livin' wage.

"I figure we could get rid of the welfare and all that. Put folks to work. Show those furriners that the U.S. of A. can produce. Get this country a-movin' again. By thunder, we could...'

George's rocker had stopped moving. His mind, though, was racing. He gets that way when he's on to something.

Science Update:

Treating Babies' Psychological Problems

By Gayle Young UPI Science Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) - Dr. Stanley Greenspan's favorite case of successful baby psychology involved a 4-month-old Infant who would not look at a human face.

The baby boy, alternately abused and neglected since birth, would lie in his crib and stare at the ceiling. When anyone approached, he would turn his head to the wall.

But he would look at the colors red, yellow and black, so a psychologist painted a cardboard mask in those colors and put it on her own face.

"He'd look at it and then she'd pullit away and show him her own smiling face," said Greenspan, a founding father of baby psychology.

"Within a month that little boy who wouldn't look at any face became a baby who was in love with the world," he said. "He was bright and smiling and perfectly normal."

The treatment of the psychological problems of babies is a new field, but It is growing at a rapid pace with a dozen treatment centers nationwide and hundreds of experts emerging only in the past five years.

The experts say recent research has indicated bables from birth to age 3 can suffer depression, become emotionally withdrawn and racked with tension. Proper and early treatment, they say, can eatch developmental problems at the source and produce well-adjusted children who grow up into well-adjusted

Some psychologists dismiss the new field, saying they fear overanxious parents will become prey to unscrupulous "baby shrinks," but most view it with a combination of enthusiasm and caution. "Some of the most exciting work that's happening in social behavior is with infants," said Bonnie Strickland, president of the Ameriean Psychology Association and professor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, "I think researchers and psychologists are approaching this with sensitivity and caution." According to Greenspan, professor of child development at the George Washington University Medical School in Washington, research has shown babies pass through stages of emotional development just as they pass through stages of physical development. A well-adjusted baby "falls in love with the world" somewhere around the second month of life and experiences a gamut of emotions, including anger, joy, fear and frustration by the first year.

Even very young babies try to control their emotions, Greenspan and other specialists said. By the time they are toddlers, most children understand the concept of emotions and how to use them.

"Basically they're manipulative little things," Greenspan said with a

However, psychologists say babies need interaction with other humans in order to pass through these stages. Without stimulation from a parent or other care-giver, babies can get "off track," setting the stage for possible psychological problems in later life.

"It's becoming obvious that the earlier the intervention, the better," Strickland said.

Almost all babies now treated for psychological problems are abused or abandoned - not children from stable, loving families, according to psychologists.

"An abused baby may not consciously remember the abuse, but it will be a factor in how they function in the future," said Eleanor Stokes Szanton, executive director of the National Center for Clinical Infant Programs in Washington.

"We're not saying it's now or never. We aren't saying a baby can't learn emotion later in life," she said. "Adults can learn to read, but it's easter when they're children."

Doctors said it is simple task to tell which babies are well adjusted and which are in need of psychological treatment. "A baby should be a giggly.

cooling, playful baby that makes eye contact and plays funny games with faces," said Dr. Steven Bennett, chief of child and infant psychology at Harlem Hospital. "The babies we see don't make eye contact. They have dead faces."

Bennett's sparse office on the fifth floor of Harlem's main hospital reveals the budgetary confines of his pioneer center. A cardboard box on a table contains its only toys - a headless rag doll, a well-chewed plastic doll and a square box with missing round pegs.

"We're taking an enormous quantity of theory and applying it to the public where it's needed most," he said. "I see these townhouses on the east side now with these high-priced doctors treating babies. We're here on the battlefteld."

Spanish Pride Vs. U.S. Bases

Washington and Madrid are currently engaged in a major renegotiation of a treaty allowing American air and naval bases in Spain. For the United States, it is a clear issue of maintaining an important set of military facilities in southeast Europe. For the Spanish, it is a question of national pride.

The problem involves three U.S. air bases and a naval facility established in the early 1950s during the reign of Spain's late fascist dictator, Gen. Francisco Franco. At the time, the U.S. was interested in bases for its nuclear-armed bombers aimed at the Soviet Union, while Gen. Franco was attempting to curry international respectability.

But Spain is now a functioning democracy and a member in good standing of both NATO and the European Community. While the bases contribute to NATO's defense, many Spaniards find the bases an offensive reminder of the Franco era. The Socialist government of Prime Minister Gonzalez, during his successful campaign to keep Spain in NATO, promised the "progressive reduction of the U.S. military presence in Spain." It is a promise that many Spaniards demand that he keep.

Some fear that a U.S. pullout from Spain could lead to a general U.S. military pullout from Western Europe. Those fears are overstated. It should be possible to draw a new treaty that takes into account Spanish feelings while retaining the bases for use by NATO. What must be kept in mind is that this is not an anti-American move by the Spanish. A local mayor wants to turn one of the bases into a Disneyland. "I'd gladly exchange all those (U.S.) jets for Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck," he said.

Two Masters?

A specter is haunting the avowed atheistic. communist leaders in the Kremlin, and that specter is religion. The Soviet press has indicated that religious participation within the Soviet Union is both widespread and growing.

During his visit last fall to Soviet Central Asia, Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev made a major address to the Communist Central Committee of Uzbekistan. Along with his criticism of poor economic planning and performance, Gorbachev demanded "an uncompromising struggle against religious manifestations and the strengthening of political work among the masses and of atheistic propaganda."

The newspaper Pravda also took note of "The complicated religious situation" in Uzbekistan and that "atheistic work to counter religious influences, especially that of Islam, is being conducted in an unsatisfactory way." A similar complaint was registered in

That religion is still a potent force in Russia after nearly 70 years of communist rule and atheistic education campaigns, should surprise no one. Persecution of religion will often have the very opposite effect from what the persecutors want.

But what makes the latest Soviet ealls for "a serious improvement in atheistic and moral education" so interesting is the fact that the problem of religious practice involves not only the "masses" but Communist Party members as well — particularly in the Islamic areas of Soviet Central Asia.

This should be of the greatest concern to the Kremlin, for as the Soviet leaders know all too well, "No servant can serve two masters."

Bush Seeks Distance From White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Vice President George Bush is ever so slightly trying to put some distance between himself and the White House as he moves into the position of a presidential candidate. It won't be easy.

Bush has been the loyal, dedicated team player. He has not made any mistakes as far as President Reagan is concerned.

So the White House is showing a lot of understanding of Bush as his "political" posture emerges, along with an attempt to display some independence from the administration. particularly in terms of the Iran arms-Contra aid

Bush was the first to test the waters, going so far as to acknowledge "mistakes were made." But he has gone a step further now, no longer denying that a trade of weapons to Iran for the American hostages in Lebanon may have been a prime motivation for the secret dealings that have unglued the administration.

Bush's dilemma is not new and Hubert Humphrey was the classic case of a man with a similar problem. As vice president to the all-powerful, all demanding President Lyndon Johnson, Humphrey was kept on a tight leash even after he began to seek the Democratic nomination for president in 1968.

It is going to be very difficult for Bush to separate himself from the major decisions of the administration as they unfolded, good and bad. He was a member of the National Security Council and in fact he presided at most of the crisis meetings with the advisers.

Reagan threw everything but the kitchen sink at him in terms of his range of jurisdiction. Any time a problem came up it was handed over to Bush, who would head yet another task force on the subject - involvement in the Central American problem, regulation, fraud and waste, and international terrorism.

In addition to that, during the Reagan re-election and congressional campaigns. Bush has been constantly on the road. He is the president's No. 1 surrogate. He also has traveled around the world as Reagan's emissary.

For all that he is viewed as Reagan's heir apparent. Political observers still believe he has the best chance for the nomination. Reagan and Bush have lunch once a week in the Oval Office. Bush also meets with Reagan daily with White House chief of staff Donald Regan.

He has played his cards well, never appearing too anxious, holding back from any appearance that he would infringe on presidential power when Reagan has been ill or following the assassination attempt.

For all that Reagan must consider him a good soldier." Whether that will be his political passport to the GOP presidential nomination is a question.

SCIENCE WORLD Copying Human Digits

By Rob Stein UPI Science Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) - John Hollerbach grabbed an empty Coke can from among the schematic drawings, scraps of wire and pilers on the workbench and twirled it in his palm.

"All the fingers come into play when manipulating an object," said Hollerbach, pausing to let his impromptu demonstration sink in. "It's an incredibly complex action."

Inches away, a robot hand was bolted motionless at the end of an arm-like metal extension — looking ROBERT WAGMAN like the skeletal remains of a dismembered limb of some futuristic half-man, half-machine.

It was the MIT-Utah hand -- the product of a collaboration between the University of Utah and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to produce the most advanced, most human-like robot hand ever developed.

"lt's a very difficult problem," said Hollerbach, an associate professor of brain and cognitive sciences leading a six-member research team at MIT. "We don't really understand, by any means, all aspects of human hand function.'

During a demonstration, the hand sprang to life to play "Mary Had a Little Lamb" on an organ, lift a beaker of fluid and pour it into a glass and nimbly pick up a butterfly nut and twirl It onto a screw.

Most robot hands only have two vice-like "fingers," limiting their abilities to simple clamping functions. Each hand is usually designed to perform one task, such as grasping an object, lifting it and moving it to a new location.

But the air-powered MIT-Utah hand, with its 16 joints on four fingers, has the capacity to perform vastly more diverse and complex forms of grasping, manipulation and dexterity.

Users can operate the device by inserting their hand into a glove connected electronically to the robot hand, which will exactly mimic the glove's movements.

Seven copies of the hand have been sold so far for $100,000 each, including copies to Bell Laboratories. New York University and NASA. Researchers, however, are not satisfied. They want to ignificantly increase the hand's abili-

"We think there's a great need for the subtlettes of grasping." Hollerbach said. "Only when we get more advanced in our research program will we really understand how complex people's use of hands really is.

"Understanding dexterity is extremely complex," said Barry Hanover, president of Sarcos Inc., the Salt Lake City, Utah, company manufacturing and marketing the hand. "Humans spend their whole life getting better and better and better with their hands."

Contras' Infighting

MIAMI (NEA) — Almost forgotten in the furor over contra funding is the fact that the anti-Sandinista movement is so sharply divided from within that even some of its most fervent supporters believe it is close to disintegration.

Nominally, all the contra groups have, since mld-1985, been united under one umbrella organization -United Nicaraguan Opposition (UNO). It is based here in Miami and headed by a three-person "directorate" in which Arturo Cruz, former Nicaraguan ambassador to the United States, had been considered first among equals until he had a falling out with the commandants in Managua.

But in reality UNO represents a Washington-ordered shotgun marriage that is pleasing few of its participants.

UNO is actually engaged in a bitter internal feud, pitting the largest of the individual contra factions, the Honduras-based Nicaraguan Democratic Force (FDN) headed by Adolfo Calero, against the faction headed by Cruz and Alfonso Robelo, another civilian who served in the Nicaraguan government for a short time before failing out with the Sandinistas.

Since 1981 the FDN has received the lion's share of U.S. aid. It is reported that Calero believes Cruz and Robelo, with the backing of Washington, are trying to ease him out and submerge the FDN's identity and specific goals.

According to contra sources in Miami, one incident last fall shows how bitter this split is.

Several contra leaders were brought to Washington before Congress adjourned to lobby for increased aid. The trip was abruptly canceled when two of the leaders got into a vicious fist fight in a Washington hotel room.

More recently, 150 contra officers. almost all from the FDN, "graduated" from a six-week training course at a U.S. military base in Florida. But when FDN military commander Col. Enrique Bermudez attended the graduation ceremony. he was outraged to see that all had been issued UNO insignias for their uniforms and had been taught -"brainwashed" was the term Bermudez reportedly used — UNO political objectives.

When the officers returned to Honduras, Bermudez reportedly stripped them of all UNO insignas and kept them segregated from other FDN officers while he had them "deprogrammed."

This reportedly has led to a bitter confrontation between Calero and

Cruz has started his own political movement called Democratic Action (AD), and Calero accuses Cruz of trying to take over the contra movement. It now seems the two are trying to line up the support of other smaller contra organizations like the Nicaraguan Democratic Fomentation (FODENIC), another Honduras-based, primarily political (as opposed to paramilitary) organization.

All this has Washington in a state of near panic.

The Reagan administration and contra backers fear the public will perceive the contra movement as being sharply divided and generally ineffective. This might doom any chance of future congressional fun-

In recent weeks Washington has tried to force the warring factions into some kind of truce. Two dozen anti-Sandinista leaders from across the whole political spectrum were brought to Miami for a round-theclock weekend session aimed at smoothing internal disputes and finding a unified political and military strategy.

A similar session was held in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, to create a better day-to-day working relationship among the factions. The message at both sessions was the same: You had better get your act together quickly or face a cutoff of U.S. aid.

Making Claims To Power

Two prominent South African politicians have been visiting the United States in recent days, talking with George Shultz and other high officials, and attempting to stake their claim to power in that country. One is Oliver Tambo, the exiled president of the African National Congress. The other is Gatsha Buthelezi, leader of the Zulu nation. the most numerous black grouping in South Africa, and a mortal enemy of the African National Congress.

If the present system of white rule in South Africa collapses, Tambo and Buthelezi are likely to be the leaders in a black civil war, with unforseeable consequences.

The Zulus comprise about one fourth of South Africa's blacks, six of the 24 million, the rest are distributed among other tribes. The Zulus and Buthelezi dominate the province of Natal, located in the northeastern corner of South Africa. It is a prosperous farming province, and the Zulus get along well with the largely British white population. Natal enjoys the advantage of a deep water port at Durban.

Buthelezi, a descendant of 19thcentury Zulu kinds, talks a good pro-Western and free-market game. and he may even mean it. In some ways he resembles Jonas Savimbi in Angola. Savimbi says that he learned from Mao Tse-tung how to run a guerilla war and how not to run a country. Savimbi claims to be pro-West and capitalist.

Oliver Tambo and the ANC are Third World socialists and sympathetic to the Soviet Union. If onesimply eliminated all whites in South Africa and let Inkatha and the ANC fight it out, the likelihood is that Inkatha and the more consolidated Zulus would win. There is nolikelihood that they could be militarily dislodged from their home base in Natal.

But, of course, the white South Africans are not going to disappear. and they possess far more firepower than either the Zulu Inkathas or the Marxist African National Congress.

It is easy to "abhor" the present system in South Africa. But there are four steps to take in any political analysis, and without them all talk is frivolous.

One: Define the goal you are recommending, give us a model of the desirable condition to be achieved. Two: Explain how we get from here to there. Three: Give us an estimate of the price to be paid. And four: Who will pay the price. and why should be pay it?

Unless those questions are addressed, all talk is hot air. I doubt that they have real answers where South Africa is concerned, and I predict a slaughter.

State Dept. Cans Beirut Embassy Plans

By Jack Anderson and

Joseph Spear WASHINGTON - The State Department's Foreign Buildings Office has finally agreed to drop its plans to rebuild the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, which was destroyed by a sulcide bomber four years ago. Last December, we pointed out the absurdity of either a) sending American construction workers into Behrut to do the job, or b) having it done by Lebanese workers, which would mean that the new building's secret security arrangements would be known to terrorist groups as soon as they were installed. We quoted one insider as saving in exasperation that the proposed reconstruction was "simply crazy. Foggy Bottom's embassy builders took exactly 30 days to see the light. On Jan. 29 they informed Sen.

Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., a leading critic of the project, that Secretary of State George Shultz "has approved postponement of the (embassy) project pending review in January 1988."

In a column last year, we pointed out that blueprints of the new embassy had been distributed to potential Lebanese contractors and nobody knows who else thereby undercutting security safeguards before the first brick was laid. We also noted that the department had decided against using U.S. contractors because of the danger to American construction workers from terrorists.

One critic pointed out the fatal fallacy in this decision, telling our associate Lucette Lagnado: "We are asking for trouble if we do not feel that a bunch of hardhats would be sale, yet we are ready to send acknowledged this point at length. saying: "The security situation in Beirut has not improved since 1985 when plans were first made for the reconstruction of the (embassy). We foresee no lessening of the threat for U.S. government employees there. This project would require an increase in the number of U.S. personnel resident in Beirut and a consequent increase in the number of Americans for whom we must provide security. Further, this highly visible project could provoke additional hostile attacks by various terrorist elements." Before their change of heart, FBO officials had criticized the current situation in Beirut, where a skeleton embassy staff is operating out of makeshift quarters in the ambassador's residence in the hills outside East Beirut. Now they have decided that staff safety is, after all, more important than an impressive U.S. "presence" in downtown

"The present Beirut compound, with its temporary office facilities, is as safe as we can make it," the officials wrote to Zorinsky.

The belatedly prudent decision to postpone construction of the new embassy for at least a year entails certain costs. The Lebanese contractor, who had already begun clearing rubble from the site, will have to be bought out of his contract. We have learned that if and when the proposal is dusted off, the State Department will have to get a new contractor - and new blueprints. And the $900,000 spent on the existing blueprints will be dargely wasted.

The sprint to the 1988 presidential election is on. At least two candidates are officially in the running, and more than a dozen others are lining up support in preparation for formal announcements. But in the midst of the stampede, the candidates are overlooking a problem that tainted the 1986 election — one that shows signs of spreading: religious intolerance in poli-

The 1986 congressional election was a showcase of such intolerance. From coast to coast, candidates and political organizations attacked opponents for their religious affiliation. Some, not satisfied to debate the issues and leave judgments to the voters, went so far as to claim God's endorsement. Some examples:

• Rep. Mark Siljander of Michigan said his re-election was necessary "to break the back of Satan."

• Rep. William Cobey of North Carolina described his role in Congress as that of "an ambassador of Christ" and urged voters not to replace him with "someone who is not willing to take a strong stand for the principles outlined in the Word of God.'

• In a House race in California, Rob Scribner charged that his opponent "is diametrically opposed to nearly everything the Lord's church stands for in this nation." He urged local ministers to "link arms with us as we literally Democracies thrive on the dynamic tension of political debate, but how do you debate someone who claims to speak for God?

'take territory' for our Lord Jesus

By and large, the voters repudiated this kind of intolerant rhetoric: with a few exceptions, those who allowed their campaigns to sink to religious attacks or to claiming divine endorsement ended up on the losing end.

But the Republican Party demonstrated a disturbing willingness to cater to it. During the final weeks of the campaign, the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee ran a radio advertisement in three Southern Senate campaign states that began: "Ever think what's important to you? It's probably simple — a steady job, a healthy family, and a personal relationship with Christ."

In Michigan's Third Congressional District, the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee paid for a letter attacking Democratic incumbent Rep. Howard Wolpe and actor Ed Asner both Jewish - for raising campaign funds from "members of their religion.'

roundly criticized from all quarters. Quite the opposite is occurring today. as candidates stumble over one another in efforts to appeal to the Religious Right. One of the '88 hopefuls, Jack Kemp, is on the board of directors of Christian Voice, a group that has made a specialty out of intolerance in every election since 1980. Christian Voice publishes a scorecard "revealing" the biblically correct view on political issues. To get Christian Voice's "pro-Biblical" rating last year, senators and members of Congress had to support aid to the Contras and oppose the Equal Rights Amendment, to name just a few. Last year, all the ministers in Congress flunked the test.

Another likely candidate, Vice President George Bush, is now talking about his religion on the campaign trail as if it were just another entry on his resume. In 1980, Bush made the flippant remark that he was the only candidate who had only been born once. But in a recent appearance before a group of Religious Right televangelists, though intimate look at his "personal relationship with Jesus Christ."

Taking Care Cheryl

Case Managers May Help Open Communication

Your elderly mother lives in another city. When you visited her during the holidays, you found that she seemed unable to care for herself in many ways, hadn't paid her bills and didn't have enough food in the house.

You're worried, but since you are unable to care for your mother yourself. you feel that a nursing home might be best. You hire a geriatric case manager to look into nursing-home placement. You want the case manager to keep this a secret from your mother but to later talk your mother into accepting nursing-home placement.

But it isn't that simple: Families and geriatric case managers must deal with ethical issues. In the case above, the obvious questions are: Who is the real client — the parent or the child who hires the case manager? What about confidentiality? What about the parent's rights?

Two key issues families face when dealing with professionals in case management are confidentiality and self-determination, says Barbara Silverstone, executive director of The New York Lighthouse for the Blind. Silverstone headed the Task Force on Social Work Case Management for the National Association of Social Workers, which set standards and guidelines for this relatively new field. (Not all geriatric case managers are social workers, but many are.)

A case manager should not promise confidentiality to the child when that information affects the older person, says Silverstone.

"You have to set down the parameters of confidentiality." she says. "A case manager might say to a daughter, 'Our relationship is confidential, but this will not extend to issues related to your mother. I can't carry it to the extent where we are working behind your mother's back."

The adult child is often relieved, says Silverstone, since he or she feels uncomfortable about operating behind the parent's back. If the adult child refuses to accept this, the case manager may want to turn down the case for ethical reasons. Such confrontations, however, rarely occur. Silverstone

The social-worker case manager wants to promote open communication and planning within a family. Silverstone says. This can be very helpful to adult children who are often afraid to discuss touchy issues, such as nursing-home placement or the fact that they can't let the parent live in

"Very often, when you look into these situations, this information — what the adult child is or is not able to do - has not really been conveyed to the older person," she says. "The issues have not really been openly atred. They're afraid of the parent or feel guilty about saying, 'I can't do it.'"

When there is disagreement over a solution or a suggestion, the case manager's job is to work out a compromise that everyone can live with and that takes the rights of the older person into account.

"We're not talking about children or adolescents — we're talking about adults with full-blown rights to have control over their own lives," says Silverstone. "The older person must be involved, but the family also has rights.

"There are moral or ethical issues here that differ from family to family. but there is nothing in the laws of the land that says an adult child must care for an aging parent.

'Amerika': Is It The Kind Of Civics Lesson We Need?

By David Kusnet

When it comes to generating controversy. ABC's miniseries Amerika made broadcasting history even before its first episode went on the

The $35-million extravaganza was lambasted by the left for warming over that 1950s nightmare: a Soviet takeover of the United States. It was ridiculed by right-wing critic Reed Irvine for not portraying the Communist conquerors as sufficiently beastly. It was faulted by such foreign policy experts as Jeane Kirkpatrick, Alexander Haig, and Dean Rusk for defaming the United Nations by presenting the Soviet-controlled occupation army as a U.N. peacekeeping force.

And then Amerika suffered the unkindest cut of all: the loss of $7 million in advertising from the Chrysler Corporation, which explained the show's gloom-and-doom was an inappropriate medium for commercials boasting "The pride is back, born in America!" After the television audience has time to digest all seven episodes, the miniseries may be most controversial not for what it says about the Soviets or the United Nations but for what it tries to tell us about ourselves.

As the folks at Chrysler understood, Amerika paints a gloomy picture of Americans, portraying a defeated and demoralized society ten years after the Soviet occupation, with many people gladly collaborating with their new rulers, most reScriptwriter Donald Wrye says his purpose was to offer a 'civics lesson' by confronting Americans with the consequences of our complacency.

maining apathetic, and only a brave handful

Responding to critics, scriptwriter Donald Wrye says his purpose was to offer a "civics lesson" by confronting Americans with the consequences of our complacency. But, as with its horrifying portrayal of the ultimate outcome of international erises. Amerika's "civies lesson" is undone by its alarmism about our lack of national spirit.

Amerika's premise is implausible because there's little reason to doubt that today's Americans, like previous generations, would rise to a dramatic challenge such as a Soviet invasion. The question is how we as a people are responding in the less dramatic day-to-day challenge of maintaining our democratic system. Yes, most of us would defend our rights against a foreign foe. But how many of us are exercising our rights when the only enemy is the decay of our political system?

We can't blame an alien army of occupation for the depressing statistics revealing more than half our fellow citizens are succeeding their right to eff-government. In last year's elections, only 38 percent of the eligible voters actually went to the polls, and more than 100 million stayed home. The voter turnout in 1986 was the third lowest rate of voter participation in history, and turnout in the United States as a percentage of the adult population ranks 27th out of 30 major democracies throughout the world.

These statistics are the most tangible measurement of a threat to the basic principle of the American experiment: that our system of government not only derives its legitimacy from the consent of the governed but depends upon the active involvement of the people in shaping their own destiny

When our nation's founders began the Constitution 200 years ago with the words "We the People." they surely envisioned an acvitist model of citizenship where people would inform themselves about public issues, participate in public debates, run for public office, and keep a close eye on the doings of their public officials.

Two centuries later, the citizen is less a political activist than a political consumer, watching candidates' commercials on TV and choosing among rival contenders as if they were competing products. Americans are losing interest in even this passive model of citizenship; statistics show a steady decline in voter turnout since 1968.

Recent headlines suggest a few explanations for thus problems negative campaign factics which make people suspicious of all politicians and, ultimately, the political system itself; the excessive influence of the wealthy, symbolized most recently by the Senate Finance Committee Chairman's "breakfast club" for lobbyists, where the price of admission is $10,000; and a succession of shocks from the Vietnam War to

Watergate and now the Iran-Contra arms affair. Meanwhile, young people aren't learning some of the most important lessons the schools should teach: that democracy requires participation, important issues can be resolved through the political process, and one person can make a difference. People For the American Way's recent review of civies texts found most fail to convey a sense of the excitement of the political process or the urgency of citizen participation; indeed, their dull writing style inspires only boredom. Today's listless students may become tomorrow's lethargie citizens.

If Amerika reminds Americans that citizenship entails responsibilities as well as rights, it will have served a useful purpose. But if, as is more likely, its lasting impact is a lack of confidence in our country's defenses and our fellow citizens' patriotism, then television's "civies lesson" may be as damaging as the dullest high school textbook David Kusnet is a vice president of People For the American Way, a 250,000-member nonpartisan constitutional liberties organization.

No One Likes To Admit Fault In Malpractice

One reason the so-called malpractice crisis seems insoluble is that none of those involved are willing to admit they have anything to do with the problem.

Attorneys argue they are simply protecting the rights of their clients, who have been ripped off and maimed by those "damn bloodsucking doctors.

"If you have a mother who is hungry, living without heat and has no support network then she's not going to be an effective mother," he said.

Other psychlatrists and psychologists who treat infants agreed that much of their time is spent with parents, showing them how to respond and interact with their children.

"Frequently we help the mothers more than the babies," said Dr. Taghi Modarressi, a psychiatrist and director of the Center for Infant Studies at the University of Maryland School of Medicine in Baltimore.

But doctors said they also try to interact directly with unresponsive babies in an effort to proper emotional development.

The doctors described a variety of techniques, most of which sound like old-fashioned tender loving care.

"You have to start by introducing sight and sound in a way that's not too frightening," Greenspan sald.

"We show them new sights or sounds, carefully, over a period of days, or even weeks, until he gives us a little smile," he said. 'Then we know we've got him."

Greenspan said it is important for someone — parent, psychologist or social worker to stimulate a despondent baby, to attempt human contact.

"If a baby reaches out you have to gurgle or coo back." he said. "That's how a baby learns the meaning of emotions, how to interact."

But the baby experts also said too much stimulation too soon may make a despondent baby even more wary of a world perceived as hostile.

The tourist who wants to know just how much an overseas trip might cost can get a rough idea from the Frommer guides published by Prentice Hall. These are the books that used to take you to Europe on $5 a day, and now offer tips on seeing countries on $15 a day (India) to $45 a day (Hawaii). Prentice Hall also offers Frommer's Dollarwise guides that list establishments in all price ranges.

This year's updated Fielding's guides cover Mexico. Europe and Bermuda and the Bahamas — all history. The American Associa- pleasant places to escape the winter blahs. Rachel J. and Walter Christmas tell you where and when to go to the Bahamas and even what cruise lines to take (270 pp., $7.95). The guide to Mexico (711 pp., $12.95) by Lynn and Lawrence Foster gives cultural and historical background, in addition to essential tourist information.

Mexico is known for shopping bargains, but there are great buys in Europe too. The "Selective Shopping Guide to Europe" (335 pp., $6.95) will warm the cockles of any buyer's heart, from the discount shopper to the antiques hound. Joseph and Judith Raff also have produced volumes on "Economy Europe" (563 pp., $9.95) and "Europe" (830 pp., $12.95).

One of the greatest pleasures of traveling in Europe is taking Eurail, the continent's very efficient transit service. Visitors armed with a Eurail pass will find that trains are a bassle-free way to see the sights. "Ferguson's Europe By Eurail" (Burt Franklin, 640 pp., $8.95) assumes that the reader will use one of 21 cities as a base and suggests almost 100 trips from those places — a most practical suggestion.

American Library Assn. The 1987 Newbery Medal, for the most distinguished children's book published last year, was awarded to Sid Fleischman for "The Whipping Boy" (Greenwillow, $11.75, ages 9-12). Jemmy, an orphan plucked from the streets, is the designated whipping boy for all the pranks pulled by spotled Prince Brat. When the young bored prince runs away, he takes Jemmy with him. Kidnapped by villians, the boys exchange roles. After a climactic pursuit through rat-infested city sewers, the boys escape and the chastened prince escorts his former whipping boy back to the eastle. Fast action, great plot and characters in disguise make this a top-notch adventure story.

Among this year's three Newbery Honor books is Marion Dane Bauer's "On My Honor" (Clarion, $11.95, ages 10-13).

old Joel Bates' life change him forever. Tony Zabrinsky, his daring, assertive, but likable buddy, goads Joel into going on a 12-mile bike trek to climb the bluffs at Starved Rock State Park. Joel Is surprised when his father says yes -with the admonition to go only to the park. Tony gets sidetracked when he becomes intrigued with the treacherous Vermillion River, and Joel is caught up in one of Tony's schemes — this time to swim the river. In a race, the current overpowers Tony and drags him under. Late that night Joel and his father talk, and Joel realizes that he will have to live with what has happened for the rest of his life. Patricia Lauber's "Volcano: The Eruption and Healing of Mount St. Helens" (Bradbury, $14.95, ages 7-10) is a spectacular book. Lauber's description of the eruption, aftermath and gradual return of life to the Mount St. Helens slopes devastated by the 1980 cruption is anchored with stellar color photographs that show each phase of the destruction and the healing. The presentation gains additional depth from Lauber's decision to place the natural disaster in its rightful perspective. Volcanoes destroy, she explains, but they "also make the Earth a planet of life" by adding gases to the atmosphere and land mass and soil to the

The 1987 Caldecott Medal, for the most distinguished illustration, has gone to "Hey, Al" (Farrar, $13.95, ages 6-8). illustrated by Richard Egielski and written by Arthur Yorinks. Eddie, the dog. lives with easygoing Al. a janitor, on New York's upper West Side. Eddie is dissatisfied with life. The chance for change comes when a bird sticks his beak in the bathroom window and offers to get them out of town. At is reluctant, but Eddie prevails, so off they go to a lush. bird-inhabited island where all they do is swim and sip tropical drinks. But, as the author says. "Ripe fruit soon spoils."

Before long they start turning into birds. A dangerous escape gets them back home, where they realize that "paradise lost is sometimes heaven found." Egielski uses contrast nicely: The narrow linear lines and browns and tans of Al and Eddie's everyday world open into rich tropical colors and full-page spreads of paradise.

Among this year's three Caldecott Honor Books is Ann Grifalconi's "The Village of Round and Square Houses" (Little Brown, $14.95, ages 4-7). In a blend of folklore, anthropology and fiction. Grifalconi relates the legendary history, social structure and lifestyle of Tos, a remote village in central Africa. In Tos, the women and children live in round houses and the men in square ones. In the fictional part of the story, a young woman tells of her happy ehildhood and of her grandmother, whose description of the eruption of Old Naka, a nearby volcano, is the heart of this picture book. The harmonious hues and rounded forms of village life give way to harsh clashes of color and jagged edges as the volcano crupts.

Clever and inviting, "Alphabetics" (Bradbury, $15.95, ages 4-6) offers an ingenious graphic display. Suste MacDonald takes a letter and forms it into part of the picture that illustrates the letter's sound. "M" becomes the mustache on a mysterious-looking face. The graphics are colorful and energetic. making optimal use of clear color, unlined shapes and dynamic composi-

Cannon said he likes to see former students of his in the area whose lives he said he feels he "has touched somewhere along the line." His dentist was his student and he has taught many teachers in the area including his son, who is a math teacher at Lyman High School, and Mrs. Karen Coleman, school board spokesman, and former Florida "Teacher of the Year," he said." He also mentioned doctors, lawyers and even a Harvard physicist he taught in North Carolina. who eventually went to work for the space program.

Cannon said he no longer got to take trigonometry students to the advanced math competition after he was assigned to teach pre-algebra classes. The competition is sponsored by the Seminole County Council of Teachers of Mathematics each year. He said he is proud of the plaque he has, which shows that Seminole High, between 1976 and 1982, had beaten Lake husband has always enjoyed Brantley more than 50 percent of the time. He said that 1982 was the last year he took students to the competition. "Pd always looked forward to that contest," Cannon said, "like a coach at a bowl game, and I always felt successful."

During his last Friday of teaching at Seminole High, Cannon's students had a party for him in their classroom which included a cake that said on it. "Good Luck Mr. Cannon." Many students hugged him and cried when they said good-bye.

Laura Ellerbee, one of Cannon's students said "Mr. Cannon makes his students feel they're something; that they're worthwhile, and he makes us feel better about ourselves. He encourages us to be the best we can be because he cares; he knows we can and we're capable of it.

Ellerbee continued, "He's not like other teachers - he talks with us and he doesn't tell us what to do. He's a friend; not like comeone who's above us. I'll remember him for a long time."

Another student of Cannon's. Michael Isom, said "Mr. Cannon takes pride in his students; he gives the personal touch to his students. He gets riled up sometimes, but he's been a very good friend - and I'm sorry he's leaving."

Cannon's wife, Isabel, said her going to school to teach. "I've seen him so sick some days that he had to lean against the wall; but he went to school anyway because he loved to go."

Now retired, Cannon no longer goes to school.
