Study: Growth reaches peak

GAINESVILLE — A preliminary study of population shows Florida has passed its growth peak although the state remains a popular tourist destination, a University of Florida researcher said Monday.

Carol Taylor West, forecasting director of the Bureau of Economic and Business Research, said the state had a net gain of 374,000 residents between April 1987 and April 1988 compared with 550,000 in the previous 12 months.

Taylor West, editor of "The Florida Outlook," a quarterly publication that analyzes the state's economy, attributed the slower growth to a variety of factors rather than a single reason.

Frenchman wins Nobel Prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — French Professor Maurice Allais today won the 1988 Nobel Economics Prize for his pioneering contributions to the theory of markets and efficient utilization of resources. The Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences announced.

Allais, born in Paris in 1911, works at the Centre d'Analyse Economique of Ecole Nationale Supérieure des Mines de Paris.

World Series shifts to Oakland

OAKLAND — The Oakland Athletics said they wanted to meet the best team. Apparently, they got their wish.

After winning 104 games in the regular season, plus four straight in the playoffs, the AS found themselves home Monday, trailing the Los Angeles Dodgers two games to none in the World Series.

Unless former Dodger Bob Welch can defeat John Tudor Tuesday night in Game 3, the AS could wind up on the verge of the first World Series sweep in 82 years.

The Dodgers played well here. We've played well in Oakland, said AS slugger Dave Parker, who collected two runs and only three hits in Game 2. "We had the work off. We couldn't score any runs here. We just have to carry on. I haven't seen anything exceptional out there from the Dodgers."

Miami drops to fourth

MIAMI — The UFLA Bruins found themselves Monday in a rare position — atop the college basketball league.

The Bruins earned the No. 3 ranking for the first time in 21 years with 22 of 23 total points and 37 of 40 first place votes from 191 of 164 of coaches.

On Saturday, UFLA beat out Arkansas, 38-21, and North Carolina, Miami 31-30 to upset the Bruins' No. 1 team and end college football's 10th longest winning streak at 16 games. The Bruins now dropped to No. 4.

Oct. 31 repair work will affect local businesses

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald city editor

SANFORD — Two major Sanford railroad crossings will be closed for repairs for about a week beginning Oct. 31, a state official revealed today.

The CSX Transportation Co. crossing of Highway 17-92 (French Avenue) at French Avenue's intersection with 13th Street will be closed for six to eight days beginning at 9 a.m. Monday Oct. 31 according to Steve Homan of the Florida Department of Transportation (DOT).

Closed at the same time will be the crossing of French Avenue just down the street between Sixth and Seventh streets.

Homan said the DOT has been trying for some time to get the crossings repaired, and has finally reached an agreement with the railroad on a date. The work will involve installing rubberized pads and new rails at the crossings, which are intended to make the crossings smoother for both motorists and trains.

Homan said the DOT requires that access to businesses affected will be maintained at all times and that is expected to be a problem for two businesses. Scotty's at 700 S.

French Ave. and Pebble Junction at 702 S. French.

The driveways for those businesses lie between the tracks.

Homan said the railroad has been instructed to keep access to the drive open from at least one direction during the work. This will mean motorists will be able to get to the drive from the north only for part of the time, and from the south only for the rest of the time.

City Engineer Bill Simmons said southbound traffic will be detoured on Third Street to Elm Street and down Elm to 20th Street or an alternate detour will be Third to Park Avenue and Park to 25th Street.

Drivers coming from the east on Highway 46 will be detoured on Park Avenue.

Homan said the area will have signs warning of the road closure in an effort to divert traffic from the entire area.

He said signs on Highway 17-92 at Airport Boulevard will advise through traffic to take Airport Boulevard to Highway 46 in the west part of Sanford.

Local traffic will be able to get to businesses on French Avenue between the 6th Street and 13th Street closures by using streets which intersect with French Avenue.

UCF president staying, but changing jobs

By CAROL RUMSEY
Herald staff writer

Trevor Colbourn, president of the University of Central Florida, will resign that position in August and join the UCF faculty in a teaching position. Dean McFall, director of university public affairs, confirmed today.

McFall said a national search will ensue with the objective of filling Colbourn's post in August. This new president will be the third in the university's 25-year history.

Trevor Colbourn

The celebration of the university's 25th anniversary this year afforded the perfect backdrop for my decision, Colbourn said in a prepared statement. "My continuing interest in teaching and research convinced me that this was a particularly appropriate time for new leadership to take the university into the third decade of classes."

Colbourn is a published historian and authority on early American history. His books include "The Lamp of Experience" and "Lancaster and The Founding Fathers." He has managed to teach at least one course each term since his arrival nearly 11 years ago.

The university was at that time known as Florida Technological University and had an 11,000 student population. That population has grown by more than 60 percent, according to McFall. Residents of east Orlando are still not believing the school's emergence out of what use to be pine woods.

In the early 60s, FTU was designated the state's space college due to its close proximity to NASA. Science and engineering majors were to make up the ranks.

The school now has a new name and emphasis on business and liberal arts. The transition is attributed to Colbourn. According to McFall, two dozen new degrees are now offered. And UCF's student population has increased to 18,000 with growth expected to rival other state universities within 10 years.

But that growth has resulted in problems at UCF. Shortages in student housing enable only 1,000 students dormitory space. The rest live in nearby apartments or with parents, which has earned the university its nickname as the commuter school. Lanes of traffic congestion along Alafaya Trail are

Longwood names city attorney

By SANDRA BOUCHAHINE
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — A heated discussion among city commissioners and the public preceded the 3-2 vote in favor of an ordinance to amend the city code for departmental organization within its government.

The action came during a regular meeting of Longwood commissioners Monday night.

Commissioners also named Richard S. Taylor Jr. the new city attorney of Longwood.

Taylor replaces Michael A. Kramer, but will be employed by the city as an independent contractor. He will receive a retainer fee of $1,000 a month for all services except actual litigation work, for which he will receive $100 per hour, as stated by an agreement between the city and Taylor.

Commissioners Hank Hardy and Ted Poelking were strongly opposed to the ordinance to amend chapter 2 of the code of which states that eight department heads are responsible to Gene A. DeMarie, the city administrator.

Controversy surrounded the hiring of an additional land planning assistant within the community development department for approximately $27,000 to help Chris Nagle, city planner. Nagle would then be promoted to a higher position, Poelking said. He is opposed to this move, stating it is unnecessary because Longwood only has 300 acres to develop and

City considers tax increment district

By SANDRA BOUCHAHINE
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Sanford city commissioners listened to Bob Guthrie, assistant Orlando city attorney, explain how to set up a tax increment financing district. The discussion was during a workshop meeting Monday.

A possible ordinance for a redevelopment district intended to provide money for building improvements to blighted areas has caused commissioners to consider establishing a tax increment district.

Guthrie, who has helped to create a tax district for the city of Cocoa and who was involved with Orlando Church Street Station development, said that tax revenue generated as property values increase following improvements go into a trust fund. The fund would serve to repay debts for the building improvements within the district.

Commissioners will consider the tax increment district to help with renovations in the blighted Goldsboro area on the west side of Sanford.

The renovations underway in Goldsboro are the first projects falling under the Westside Improvement Neighborhood Strategy (WINS) utilizing a $200,000 Community Development Block Grant authorized by Seminole County.

Commissioners also discussed an

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Court issues abortion rules for minors

TALLAHASSEE — The Supreme Court issued emergency rules Monday that spelled out procedures a pregnant minor must follow to receive judicial approval for an abortion under Florida's new parental consent law.

After a hearing earlier this month, a federal judge ruled the so-called snitch law unconstitutional and asked the state Supreme Court to devise guidelines for implementing the statute.

The law took effect Oct. 1, but U.S. District Judge John Moore II issued a temporary restraining order against the law after its constitutionality was protested by three Jacksonville doctors in a civil suit.

Moore said the lack of procedural rules governing how a minor would ask a court for permission made the law constitutionally invalid.

The judge said he would review the rules to see if they pass constitutional muster before deciding whether to lift the injunction against the statute, which was passed earlier this year in the closing days of the Legislature.

The court, which noted it not had time to go through normal rulemaking procedures, ordered the two emergency rules be effective immediately.

Under those rules, a minor or her representative would file a confidential request for consent with a circuit court. The judge could order a hearing, but must rule on the request within 24 hours.

Ex-employees rip law firm

MIAMI — Former employees of a law firm that ran a prolific business based on questionable insurance claims say a lawyer held seminars and told them how to coach clients before their medical examinations, a newspaper reported Monday.

The law firm of Marks & Marks, owned by Mark Marks and his son, Gary, also gave small gold medals to employees who headed one of their divisions, some former employees told The Miami Herald. The medals were inscribed with the words "Mark's Angels," the newspaper reported.

Last week, the Herald reported the firm used questionable insurance claims of poor blacks to run a lucrative, factory-style business. Since then, the newspaper said, it has received more than 125 phone calls, from mostly ex-clients.

Gorillas live together without love

GULF BREEZE — A huge gorilla not accustomed to being around other apes apparently has accepted living with Muke, his female companion, but a psychologist thinks there is little chance they will ever become mates.

Dr. Jay Gould, an associate professor at the University of West Florida, and a dozen students have been observing Colossus, 22, since he arrived at the Zoo in March. He thinks the chance is slim Colossus will eventually mate.

"It will be very difficult to achieve that goal," said Gould, who is thinking of showing Colossus films of other gorillas mating to help him. "We're going to do everything we can to facilitate his breeding."

Colossus was raised in social isolation for more than 20 years and Muke has never successfully been bred since she doesn't get along with other gorillas.

Crawford to end closed Senate meetings

TALLAHASSEE — Incoming Senate president Sen. Bob Crawford said Monday he would make eliminating secret Senate meetings a top priority of his administration.

"It's my intention to explore ways to open up the process as much as possible," Crawford said. "There really is nothing to hide up here and it's a time we face up to that."

Crawford, D-Winter Haven, announced the creation of a committee to write government in the sunshine regulations for the Senate to be enacted before the 1989 session.

If those regulations work to his satisfaction, Crawford said he would try to put them on the 1990 ballot as a proposed constitutional amendment.

Florida's Sunshine Law requires that almost all governmental meetings be open to the public. The Legislature is an exception to that law.

Parents: Scalding victim beaten last year

RUSKIN — The stepfather of a 9-year-old girl scalded to death last week at the Florida School for the Deaf and Blind says she had been injured before and should not have been left alone.

A tentative ruling of accidental death was made in the death of Jennifer Driggers, who died Thursday after an attendant left her alone in a bathroom with two older deaf and retarded girls.

She suffered first-degree and second-degree burns over much of her body from the 130-degree water, but a complete autopsy report had not been released Monday.

The girl's mother and stepfather question the decision to list the death as accidental while the investigation remained incomplete.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Report: Environmental woes chronic

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Florida is in danger of losing its valuable farmland, underground water supply and extensive seafood industry unless rapidly spreading pollution is halted, according to a report released Monday.

"Over 66 percent of Florida's seafood-producing waters were closed at one time or another in the past year because of pollution," said Bernard Windham, a natural resources demographer and environmental expert.

Windham said Florida "ranks in the top states for emissions and sensitivity of soils and lakes" and that a rapidly growing population already is straining the environment.

He said pollution damage to the state's environment may already be over $1 billion a year and that state agencies, along with the federal government, will have to make massive changes in order to deal with pollution problems.

In a study released to coincide with the endorsement by the Florida League of Conservation Voters of Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, Windham painted a grim picture of a state rapidly losing its battle against pollution.

More than 3,000 hazardous waste sites have been identified by the state Department of Environmental Regulation, the report said, and "have contaminated thousands of private wells and hundreds of public wells."

Additionally, of the 1.5 million tons of hazardous waste generated in Florida three years ago — excluding petroleum and battery wastes, the most common hazardous substances — about 1.4 million tons come from large and small industries.

Yet, the report said, Florida has no legal hazardous waste disposal sites and "only about 12 percent of the waste generated by large-quantity generators" was shipped out of state for disposal.

Most of the waste generated by small industry "is disposed of improperly," the report said, "going into landfills, sewers, septic tanks or water bodies."

The cancer risk is higher in Florida than any other state in the nation except Rhode Island, the report showed, with Jacksonville having the highest rate of lung cancer in the country. The lung cancer rate in the Central Florida phosphate region, where radon also is prevalent, is 40 percent above the national average.

Florida lakes and rivers already have been cited for having large concentrations of heavy metals and other pollutants and, according to the report, "the situation is growing progressively worse."

Largemouth bass taken from eight state rivers or lakes last year tested by DER had mercury levels above the maximum Environmental Protection Agency standard of one part per million. High levels of copper and lead also have been found in the bass.

Gulf Coast rivers had the highest increase in the nation of nitrate and phosphate levels, up 46 percent and 55 percent, respectively. DER reports also show hundreds of state lakes and rivers contaminated with pollutants from chemical, commercial and agricultural sources.

If the topsoil loss continues at that rate, the report said, by the year 2000, nearly all the winter vegetable land — which is unique to the state — would be lost.

Silver-Haired Legislature opens

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Silver-Haired legislators said Monday creating a state department of elderly affairs is their top priority for the coming year.

The 160 members of the Silver-Haired Legislature also will debate such issues as capping liability awards in damage suits, requiring annual tests of elderly drivers and requiring deposits on bottles during their 3-day session at the Capitol.

"We are trying to determine the things we want to push and recommend to the regular Legislature," said Silver-Haired House Speaker Ralph Hall. "They (lawmakers) listen — maybe not as much as we would like, but they listen."

The non-governmental Silver-Haired Legislature consists of 120 representatives and 40 senators, all elected by senior citizens in their legislative districts.

All registered Florida voters 50 years old or older are, by law, members of the organization, though far fewer than that play an active role.

The representatives will debate some 90 bills during this year's session, they hope will be adopted by the reg-

Legislature.

Last year, Hall said, the Legislature enacted parts of 20 bills approved by the Silver-Haired group and in 1987, lawmakers adopted seven Silver-Haired bills.

The Silver-Haired Legislature has united in backing Amendment 6, a proposal on the Nov. 8 ballot that would create a department of veterans affairs and allow the Legislature to create a department of elderly affairs next spring.

"The general feeling is a department is the most effective entity for dealing with masses of people," said Senate President Tom Crofut.

"The taxpayers have already put the money there, in HRS (the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services) but they have other concerns," Crofut said.

The representatives also plan to debate proposed Amendment 10, which would limit non-economic damages in civil suits to $100,000.

Silver-Haired legislators approved that concept last year, but many now object because the amendment as worded would affect areas beyond the medical malpractice costs it was intended to address.

Joan develops into fifth hurricane; heads west

MIAMI (UPI) — A tropical system that uncharacteristically gained momentum over land has developed into hurricane Joan and is roaring toward Nicaragua on 80 mph winds across the warm waters of the Caribbean Sea, forecasters say.

At midnight EDT, Joan's center was located near latitude 11.9 north, longitude 74.6 west, just off the northern coast of Colombia. The system was moving west at 10 mph and could reach Nicaragua — 625 miles away — by Thursday, said forecaster Jim Gross.

"Highest winds are near 80 mph over a small area just northwest of the center and tropical storm force winds extend outward 75 miles from the center. ... Some additional strengthening is expected as the storm moves further away from the Colombian coast," he said.

Satellite pictures of tropical storm Joan Monday showed the system was near hurricane strength, but forecasters said the eye was "ragged" and would need up to 24 hours to become better developed.

By 9 p.m. winds had surpassed hurricane status and interests in the south central Caribbean were advised to closely monitor the hurricane, which forecaster Hal Gerrish said would dump up to 8 inches of rain along its path.

He said Joan, the 10th named storm of the Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season, was an uncommon tropical system.

"It's unusual for the system to be this low in latitude, on the north coast of South America. (And) it's unusual for it to be strengthening right on the coast," Gerrish said.

Tropical storm Joan sloshed across the resort island of Curacao Sunday with sustained winds of 45 mph. There were no reports of damage.

The storm worked its way through the Windward Islands Friday night and early Saturday, but there were no reports of significant damage because its winds remained below hurricane force and it made no direct hit on land.

Joan grew into a tropical storm Tuesday afternoon from a tropical depression that formed Monday about 1,000 miles east of French Guiana on the northeastern coast of South America.

Of the 17 tropical depressions this season, Joan is the fifth to reach hurricane status at 74 mph.

POLICE BRIEFS

Attacks on arrested man investigated

MIDWAY — Seminole County sheriff's deputies are investigating two reported attacks on a 59-year-old Midway man who was arrested himself at about 2 a.m. Sunday in connection with a shooting.

Pierce Le Robinson, of 2027 Rut St., told sheriff's deputies he was attacked twice Sunday afternoon after bonding out of jail. Sheriff's deputies have the names of three suspects in the attacks, but report no arrests. Sheriff's reports said Robinson was apparently beaten and kicked by two men who were trying to evict him from his house at about 2 p.m. Sunday. He accused them of also stealing a $250 brass bed from the house. During that attack, which was overheard by a neighbor who confirms Robinson's story, deputies report that one of the attackers fired a couple of shots into the air.

At about 3:30 p.m. Sunday in the yard at 2027 Rut St., Robinson said he was again confronted by a third man who reportedly was at the scene but did not participate in the first attack. Robinson said that man was armed, and sheriff's deputies report taking a .38-caliber handgun from that man.

Robinson's arrest came at 2 a.m. Sunday after he allegedly fired a shot through a door at 2550 Hyrd Ave., Midway, and wounded his grandson Cory Wilson in the foot. He was charged with aggravated battery and shooting into an occupied dwelling in that case. Robinson was also jailed for spouse abuse battery. Deputies said he is accused of battering his wife Lula May Robinson at the Hyrd street address before Wilson was wounded.

Recreational vehicle vandalized

CASSELHERRY — The recreational vehicle of Leonard Caselberry, of 1965 Vienna Drive, Caselberry, was burglarized and vandalized between 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. Sunday, Seminole County sheriff's deputies report.

The windshield of the vehicle valued at $900 was broken, along with a headlight. Three flashlights with a combined value of $45 were stolen and the vehicle was ransacked, deputies said.

Railing stolen from pump station

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — An aluminum railing, about 25-feet in length and valued at $200, was stolen between Sept. 19 and Monday from the City of Altamonte Springs Cranes Roust Pump Station. Police report the theft was discovered at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Glenn elected president of association of counties

KISSIMMEE — Seminole County commissioner Sandra Glenn has been elected president of the Florida Association of Counties.

The election by her peers from throughout the state came during the association's annual conference in Kissimmee.

Glenn, a Seminole County commissioner since 1978, has served the organization representing commissioners from the state's 67 counties since last year. She will serve as the organization's chief spokesman. The association provides technical and educational assistance for commissioners.

Dozens protest shock therapy conference

United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — Dozens of mental health advocates and former mental patients demonstrated Monday against shock therapy outside a hospital where doctors gathered to observe the 50th anniversary of the controversial treatment.

The protest at Friends Hospital coincided with a two-day electroconvulsive therapy conference that was expected to be attended by more than 200 psychiatrists from around the world.

Outside the hospital, more than 60 demonstrators from as distant as New York, Boston and Virginia marched, chanted and carried placards with slogans that read, "Stop shock" and "Of all the things I lost, I miss my memory the most."

Members of The Coalition for Responsible Education and Judgment on ECT, or REJECT, and the Citizens' Commission on Human Rights protested what they called the brain-damaging effects of shock therapy.

Dr. Seth Farber, a psychologist who opposed shock therapy and member of REJECT, said the treatment "should have been abolished years ago."

"We've been opposing the kind of human rights violations that go on every day in hospitals across this country and we believe that the psychiatric establishment has conned people," Farber said. "One example is this electro-shock."

George Ebert, 45, of Long Island, N.Y., said shock treatments he received 15 years ago erased portions of his memory. Ebert said he was forced to relearn how to do such simple tasks as tying his shoes and reading.

"I'm against electroconvulsive treatment — I'm a survivor of that experience," Ebert said. "I remember the first shock, wishing I was dead so I would not have to suffer any more."

"I'm one of the few survivors of this treatment that can speak about it and that is why I'm protesting it," he said. "My life is focused around stopping shock treatment. People ask me if there was any benefit and the only thing I can answer is that shock treatment showed me the extent of man's inhumanity to man."

Inside Friends Hospital, doctors studied new applications for the treatment they said offers new hope for the severely depressed.

United Way reaches 47 percent of local goal

By SANDRA BOUCHAMINE

The Heart of Florida United Way campaign has raised $343,826 in Seminole County, or 47 percent of the current fund-raising campaign's local goal, an official disclosed today.

The Seminole County goal is $734,000 and an the overall goal for the tri-county area of Seminole, Orange and Osceola is $7,850,000, according to United Way Seminole Area Director Robert W. Walko.

This is the first year that the United Way is part of the tri-county organization known as The Heart of Florida United Way, Inc. The three corporations merged on Feb. 19. Executive Director Ed Rawa said.

Walko said this will be to the advantage of Seminole County because funds will be distributed to the agencies according to overall needs. The funds raised in the tri-county area will be shared, he said.

The campaign which started Oct. 1, ends Nov. 1, according to Walko.

"We think it's a good campaign. It always starts a little bit slowly. Somehow we seem to come through," Walko said.

Rawa said that by the end of last week Osceola County had reached 54.8 percent of its goal and Orange County had not set a goal.

More than 82 non-profit agencies within these counties benefit through funds raised by this annual event.

Out of every dollar, 92 cents goes to the agency and 8 cents is applied to the campaign and year-round operations, according to Walko.

Presentations on federal prison site scheduled

SANFORD — The city and the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce are scheduling presentations for residents interested in the proposed federal prison to be located on 200 acres east of the city.

Dave Farr, executive director of the chamber, said the presentations will be conducted during the week of Oct. 31 by federal prison officials who will explain the need and plans for a federal prison.

Currently scheduled are two presentations at noon on Nov. 1 at the Sanford Lion's Club, which meets at the Western Sizzler on U.S. Highway 17-92 and the Senior Citizen's Club, which meets at the Sanford Civic Center. Farr said both meetings are free and open to the public.

Farr said civic groups interested in scheduling presentations can call him at 322-2212.

Carcass of rare whale found on Wassaw Island

United Press International

WASSAW ISLAND, Ga. — Environmentalists took steps Monday to preserve the skull of a rare beaked whale found on an Atlantic coast island.

The whale is believed to be the fifth one of its kind to wash up in Georgia over the past 200 years, said Hans Neuhauser, the coastal director of the Georgia Conservancy.

Neuhauser removed the head over the weekend from the decaying carcass, which will be examined later this month by the Smithsonian Institution.

The whale was discovered on the island, off Savannah, in September by volunteers in a 17-state beach cleanup effort.

California fires threaten exotic animals, ancient trees

United Press International

LOS ANGELES — Flames touched off by a 10-year-old boy on a hunting trip with relatives threatened homes, ranches and a home for 1,000 abandoned exotic animals near Los Angeles, while to the north, firefighters battled to save a stand of redwoods dating back to the time of Christ.

The 10-year-old admitted Monday that he accidentally set the fire that has charred more than 3,200 acres since Sunday in extremely steep and rugged country in the Angeles National Forest. The boy's father and two uncles, who had been chased down and arrested as suspects in the fire, were released after spending a day in jail.

The brush fire came dangerously close to about 20 homes and ranches in Pacoima Canyon, about 25 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles, but firefighters were able to keep the flames from damaging the buildings, U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Kim Vanderhaar said.

Fire lines had been dug around 20 percent of the fire, and the movement of the flames forced officials to postpone expected containment for a day, until Wednesday evening.

Officials warned residents to be ready for a fast evacuation from an area that reportedly has not burned in more than 50 years.

Less than 2 miles from the fire lines, officials at the Wildlife Waystation, which is home to more than 1,000 abused and abandoned lions, tigers, alligators, bears and deer, were prepared to protect their charges if the fire moved closer.

"We have handlers ready to tranquilize them so they won't panic and the fire crews are ready to come onto the compound if necessary," said Jan Brown, the waystation's vice president.

Sheriff's deputies said the fire started when the 10-year-old boy tried to start a campfire while his father and two uncles hunted deer Sunday afternoon.

The three adults were jailed for a day on suspicion of starting an illegal campfire, but were released after the youngster confessed.

Prenatal care system crumbling, experts warn

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The nation's maternity health system is "fundamentally flawed" with nearly one-third of all U.S. babies being born to mothers who receive insufficient prenatal care, a panel of medical experts warned today.

In a 254-page report, a National Academy of Sciences committee said just 68 percent of pregnant women obtained timely and adequate prenatal care in 1985.

And although use of such care rose in the United States from 1969 to 1980, the 10-member panel found the percentage of women receiving it has remained stable or has declined since 1980, particularly among blacks.

Indeed, one of the report's most troubling findings is that since 1980 there has been a marked increase in women receiving late care or none at all. From 1981 to 1985, the last year statistics were available, the percentage of black births falling into that category rose from 8.8 percent to 10.3 percent.

The committee defined adequate prenatal care as medical attention that begins in the first three months of pregnancy and includes nine or more visits before birth. Late care does not begin until the pregnancy's final three months.

"The data ... reveal a maternity care system that is fundamentally flawed, fragmented and overly complex," the experts wrote. "Unlike many European nations, the United States has no direct, straightforward system for making maternity services easily accessible."

"Although well-insured, affluent women can be reasonably certain of receiving appropriate health care during pregnancy and childbirth, many women cannot share this expectation," they added.

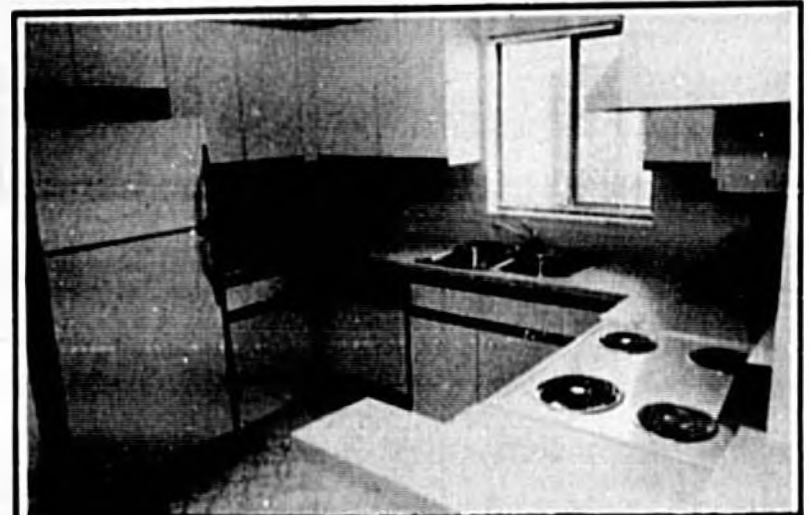

The report cited teens, low-income women, inner-city and rural residents and uninsured or underinsured females as those "likely to experience significant problems in obtaining necessary maternity services."

Urging broad reform in the current system, the committee recommended "top priority be given to eliminating barriers to prenatal care."

Specifically, the panel called on the federal government to require all states to provide Medicaid coverage of prenatal care for women with incomes reaching 185 percent of the federal poverty level. It also advised expansion of Medicaid income limits to cover more uninsured or underinsured women.

Congress and state governments were urged to strengthen laws regulating private insurance coverage of maternity services. Currently, the Pregnancy Discrimination Act allows companies employing fewer than 15 people

Will Congress live by rules?

Stung by criticism that it ignores the rules it imposes on the rest of society, Congress finally seems ready to move a little closer to practicing what it preaches when it comes to civil rights protection and ethics.

By law, Congress forbids employers to discriminate against employees on grounds of race, religion, age or gender. But it has exempted itself from those laws, leaving its own employees unprotected. There is a plausible constitutional justification for that exemption: Allowing the executive branch and the judiciary, which enforce civil rights laws, to dictate the conduct of members of Congress in legislative procedure is arguably a violation of the separation of the powers. But there is no reason the House and Senate, under their own rules, cannot guarantee to their own employees the civil rights enjoyed by all other citizens.

Under the sting of several sexual harassment scandals, the House has now done just that. Under a measure sponsored by Rep. Leon Panetta, it will create an office to handle complaints of discrimination, mediating them where possible but imposing appropriate remedies where members have been found to violate workers' rights. Either workers or members would be able to appeal the office's decisions to a panel of members. Senate employees remain unprotected, and it still remains to be seen whether House members will actually enforce the rules they have passed. But the House action is a useful step in the right direction.

In the last days of this session, Congress also can end a second double standard, which limits the passage of executive branch officials through the revolving door between government and lobbying but does nothing to restrict members of Congress and their employees. The convictions of administration officials Lyn Nofziger and Michael Deaver underlined the pervasiveness of the Washington influence-peddling culture and the need for further controls on former public officials who would exploit their privileged information and friendships with government colleagues for private gain. But the public discussion of the convictions also spotlighted Congress' failure to bring itself under the Ethics Act.

To demonstrate that its criticisms of Reagan administration sleaze are not just self-serving hot air, the Senate has passed legislation to limit what kind of lobbying members of Congress and their staffs may do when they leave public service. It's now up to the House to show that it, too, will stop living by a double standard on ethics.

Open letter to voters: Better keep calm

The last three weeks of the presidential campaign now lie directly ahead of us, and the best advice that can be given to anyone interested in politics is: Stay calm.

This is the time when the side that suspects it's losing will grasp at any straw, and throw any dead cats it may happen to have lying around. If that side is the Democrats (and it is), they can count on our liberal media to multiply by many orders of magnitude the impact of anything they manage to come up with.

So be prepared for breathless last-minute declarations that this or that event (e.g. the final debate), or some unexpected disclosure, has "turned the race around" or at least "made it a horse race again." The polls will follow suit, asserting that the race is now "too close to call." The objective will be to envelop the campaign's closing days in a cloud of hysteria, in which voters may be panicked into changing their minds.

All that, let me stress, is what very probably lies ahead; but, as of this writing, the Democrats' mood, and even the media's, is more accurately describable as one of quiet despair. The polls all show Bush ahead by substantial margins. Such liberal stalwarts as James Reston and Hodding Carter have publicly just about thrown in the sponge.

The basic trouble is Michael Dukakis' personality. The voters have had a good look at him by now, and what they see is a cold fish. George Bush may be a little excitable, and may even mispeak now and then, but he is plainly a warm and lively human being with a sense of humor that enables him to laugh at himself.

Watching Michael Dukakis try to laugh at anything (let alone himself) is rather like watching a sword-wallaher: It's almost painful. After eight years of Ronald Reagan, the American people just aren't ready for that.

But the mood of despair is highly unlikely to last all the way through to Election Day. Something is bound to happen that will administer a whiff of oxygen to the Democrats. Bush may blunder; Dukakis, in some unpredictable way, may shine. Then, with the media baying in support, the Dukakis campaign will get its second wind and make a last mad lunge for victory.

If all else fails, John Sasso, Dukakis' longtime guru, can be counted on to turn up at the last minute with a couple of serviceable anti-Bush smears. I heard of one about 10 days ago, but it hasn't surfaced yet, so presumably John is saving it for some still rainier day a week or two down the road.

The polls, too, probably have one last wild variation in them. Having told us Dukakis was leading Bush by 18 percentage points during the early summer, they have recently sobered up and acknowledged that he is in fact trailing Bush just about everywhere. But most of them will get behind any wheeze Sasso manages to come up with and declare that it has suddenly made the race "too close to call."

Finally, at the last moment (in the case of Lou Harris, it's usually the morning of Election Day), the polls will head for the tall timber, each covering its rear with its "final prediction" — the only one worth the powder to blow it to Hades. If even that turns out to be wrong (like Gallup's spectacular blunder in the New Hampshire Republican primary), they can always claim afterward that they "stopped polling too soon."

Instant replays in politics

SAN JOSE—The sports-bar phenomenon is one I had read about but never experienced until the other week. In pursuit of the Redskins-Cowboys football game (which CBS inexplicably bypassed here in favor of the Rams-Falcons mismatch), I went up the road to San Francisco where an establishment called Pat O'Shea's Mad Hatter was offering the game I wanted to see.

As millions of sports-bar fans already know, these bars are a by-product of communications satellite technology. They pull in from their "dish" a variety of games, direct them to screens in various parts of the room and invite the fans to have their food and drinks while watching the contest that appeals to them.

On this particular Sunday, the Mad Hatter's matinee tea party was offering four different pro football games plus the American League playoff game between Oakland and Boston. The menu near the entrance also promised hockey, tennis and horse racing before closing time.

Aside from the pleasure of seeing the Redskins beat the Cowboys, the Mad Hatter gave me an unexpected insight into the dynamics of this presidential campaign.

The day before the visit to Pat O'Shea's, I spent the afternoon walking a swing precinct here in San Jose—one of the major battlegrounds in the fight for the key state of California. The working families in these attractive, 25-year-old homes were a cross section of California's multiethnic, multiracial electorate.

In 1984, the precinct went 64-36 percent for Ronald Reagan. But these voters are classic ticket-splitters, who in 1986 voted 65 percent for Republican Gov. George Deukmejian, 56 percent for Democratic Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy and 53 percent for Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston. Candidates who want to carry California have to persuade the engineers, teachers, diesel mechanics, technical writers, students, clerical employees, probation officers and postal workers like those I met.

These are busy people. Most of the households have two wage-earners, and most of the wage-earners are time-pressured to balance the competing demands of family and job—especially with traffic slowing the commuting on the clogged highways that are the bane of California life.

How do people this busy get the information that helps them pick a President? This is where the sports-bar experience offers some clues.

At Pat O'Shea's, the customers don't really watch A Game. They keep an eye on all the screens in view—four or five from most tables, or from the bar—and focus on the one that's most interesting.

The sound is turned off on all the sets, lest the competitive babel drown out all conversation. So the cues are all visual. When the fans watching one set get excited, others look to see what has provoked their cheers or groans. But the key technique is to look for the replays.

The instant replay is what makes sports bars work. And it's also the key to our politics. Television sports have accustomed us—home viewers as well as sports bar patrons—to the expectation that anything important will be shown to us several times over. And voters like those I interviewed increasingly rely on the equivalent of "instant replays" for their understanding of political campaigns.

Because they are busy, they keep an eye on the candidates, rather than attempting to follow them through daily news stories in the papers or on T.V. Verbal cues mean little. They discount the candidates' words as being sincere, the newscasters' and commentators' remarks as being of marginal value.

It is the power and the clarity of the political "instant replays" that shape the course of the campaign. Some come out of real-world events; some are manufactured as ads.

From interviews here, it's clear as a bell that George Bush is winning the battle of the "manufactured replays." Asked what campaign ads they can recall, the answers—even from Michael Dukakis' supporters—come from the Bush catalogue. Especially memorable have been the negative spots on crime and Boston Harbour pollution, which have been shown heavily in California, and the positive ad which shows Bush playing with his grandchildren.

Not one of the repertory of Dukakis ads appears to have made such an impression, nor did anything from his first debate with the Vice President linger in voters' minds.

What did stick was the instant replay on hundreds of news programs of the dramatic exchange between vice-presidential candidates Lloyd Bentsen and Dan Quayle, the "You are no Jack Kennedy" putdown. A few disliked it; more were struck by the force of it; almost everyone commented on it.

Overall, the "Quayle drag" is palpable in this precinct. The California Bush operatives knew what they were doing when they sent word to Washington to keep Quayle out of the state for the rest of the campaign.

The pleasure of seeing the Redskins beat the Cowboys.

FCA makes wild deal

WASHINGTON — The Farm Credit Administration may have pulled off one of the more bizarre deals in the history of federal contracting — paying a consulting firm more than $1.1 million and then giving the owner of the firm $63,000 to get out of the picture.

The settlement in mid-July capped a series of curious maneuvers by the FCA as it tried to close the defunct Jackson Federal Land Bank in Mississippi.

The FCA is an independent federal agency that oversees the nation's system of farm credit banks and has the power to put them into receivership if they fail. That had never occurred until the Jackson Federal Land Bank went under in May.

In 1987, Congress passed a law to protect the land banks and avoid possible taxpayer bailouts. For that reason, Congress was alarmed with the announcement May 20 that the Jackson bank had been closed and that the FCA had hired a firm to handle the receivership — to sell the bank's assets, pay its debts and handle its other affairs.

Anxiety became outrage when the House agriculture subcommittee chaired by Glenn English, D-Okla., learned the details. The subcommittee concluded in a report not yet released to the public that "confidence in the FCA has been undermined by the confusion, secrecy and legal questions" surrounding the Jackson bank receivership.

The FCA hired Ronald E. Watkins, a Tulsa, Okla., consultant, to handle the bank closing. Watkins had never handled a receivership before, according to the congressional report. Watkins hired eight people and the FCA agreed to pay salaries totaling $882,000 for the first year. The top salary was for Watkins — $240,000. His co-workers will get salaries ranging from $60,000 to $96,000, plus $750 a month each for housing, $550 for travel and $240 for insurance. That makes the first-year package more than $1.1 million. A study by the General Accounting Office revealed that the average salary for receivers on other federal bank closings ranges from $37,000 to $91,900.

Ten days after the FCA announced the hiring of Watkins, the contract was modified. REW Enterprises, a company owned by Watkins, would be the receiver, not Watkins himself.

A month later, reports surfaced that another company owned by Watkins was mentioned in a fraud suit, according to the subcommittee report. Although Watkins was listed as a "victim" in the suit, which put the blame for the alleged fraud with one of his associates, the image-conscious FCA was nervous nevertheless.

FCA officials flew Watkins to Washington. Two sources familiar with the showdown told our associate Jim Lynch that Watkins was not told why he had been summoned. He was put in a small, hot room for two hours before FCA officials came in with papers for him to sign. The papers declared his resignation from his own company, REW Enterprises. Watkins refused to sign until he talked to his lawyer.

The settlement Watkins finally negotiated continues to amaze members of Congress. The FCA agreed to pay him a lump sum of $83,000 to resign from his company for five years. REW would continue to handle the receivership for the Jackson bank with the FCA running Watkins' company in his absence. On the anniversary date of the receivership for the next two years, Watkins will get $20,000 for the use of his company.

Stocks open slightly higher

United Press International

NEW YORK — Prices opened slightly higher today in moderately active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 7.29 Monday, was up 4.26 to 2144.73 shortly after the market opened.

Advances led declines 398-361 among the 1,238 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 10,000,000 shares.

Stock prices closed slightly higher Monday in quiet trading with IBM and other selected issues leading an otherwise lethargic market.

"This market appears to be poised for some kind of reasonable rally," said Ernie Rudnet, manager of block trading at Mabon, Nugent & Co.

"It seems to be building a decent base. But the biggest problem we face is the malaise within the entire market prior to the election," Rudnet said.

"Money managers are not ready to commit the money that has been building on the sidelines," he said. "It's difficult to get a sustained rally with no new money."

Ricky Harrington, technical analyst with Interstate-Johnson Lane in Charlotte, N.C., said the market seemed to remain neutral.

Dollar opens higher; gold, silver drifts up

United Press International

The dollar was slightly higher today in light trading on most major foreign currency markets. The price of gold edged higher.

Dealers in Japan said the dollar's rebound followed inquiries by the Bank of Japan about the dollar-yen exchange rate. Those inquiries triggered fears of a concerted central bank intervention to support the dollar, which over a week had dropped 5 percent in Tokyo, they said.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 127.70 yen, up 0.50 yen from 127.20 yen on Monday.

In Europe, the dollar began the day in Frankfurt at 1.816 West German marks, up from 1.8105 on Monday.

The dollar began trading in Zurich at 1.5362 Swiss francs, up from 1.5312, in Paris at 6.1965 French francs, up from 6.1665 and in Brussels at 38.43 Belgian francs, up from 38.30.

In Milan, the dollar opened the day at 1,354.25 lire, up slightly from 1,350.80 on Monday.

In London, the British pound opened at $1.742 compared with $1.7495 on Monday.

In early New York trading, the dollar was slightly lower against key foreign currencies in thin trading.

Traders in New York said the dollar eased on general bearishness as many dealers expect the dollar to come under increasing pressure as the U.S. Presidential election draws nearer.

Eastern, Icahn talks end

United Press International

MIAMI — A spokesman for Carl Icahn said Monday talks have ended between the chairman of Trans World Airlines and union leaders at Eastern Airlines Inc. regarding a possible merger of the two airlines.

Mark Buckstein, the general counsel for TWA in New York, said Icahn has not made an offer to buy Eastern and does not expect to do so.

Icahn, the majority shareholder of TWA, held discussions with representatives of Eastern's major unions over the weekend in New York to explore a possible acquisition of Miami-based Eastern.

Icahn's willingness to attempt such a deal reportedly hinges on agreements by the unions to accept certain contract concessions.

attempt to encourage movie production in the Sanford area and expressed enthusiasm about one-stop permitting. One-stop permitting will provide a standard area-wide procedure to secure required permits to help filmmakers economize on time and budget, according to Cathy Savino, director of the Industrial Development Commission of Mid-Florida, Inc.

"Movie people need to get away from a permitting maze," Frank Faison, city manager said.

"California filmmakers are leaving in droves because of the high cost of permitting," Savino said.

One-stop permitting will require that movie producers must give to the Industrial Development Commission (IDC) an certificate of insurance indicating liability limits ranging from $300,000 to $1 million in cases of extreme risk during the shooting of a film.

Commissioners recommended purchase of a new telephone system and software switching system from Southern Bell/Northern Telecom.

The software system will cost $50,799 plus selected options at $9,670 to be financed over a five-year period.

Total cost of the telephone system is $161,836 over a five-year period, including maintenance and Southern Bell line charges and extension lines over a five-year period. Leasing the existing system now costs the city $194,530 over a five-year period.

"It's the best-tailored design and cost-effective system and is already covered in the budget," said Frank Faison, city manager.

Additional funds for the system are not necessary because the yearly cost to purchase the system is less than the city's lease for the existing AT&T phone system, Faison explained.

there were only six site plans this year. He also said that the assistant is going to handle the public because Nagle doesn't know how to and his promotion is only to keep Nagle from dealing with the public.

"I don't have any objection to a department. It's what's going to happen," Poelking said.

The purpose of the ordinance, according to Mayor David Gunter is for the city to come under its own law of the charter by establishing departments.

The ordinance creates a "council manager form of government", according to DeMarle where eight department heads must answer to him. Those departments include purchasing, community development, public works, fire, personnel, police, parks and recreation, and finance. DeMarle said he wants the planning assistant to handle planning, zoning, code enforcement and building and to "provide additional planning expertise."

"We've got it budgeted," said Gunter of the new position.

Several residents spoke against the ordinance saying it put the power in the control of one man.

"I'm very definitely against it," said Bernard Linton, former chairman of the Land Planning Agency, 301 McClintock Street, Longwood.

"The commission is doing something they shouldn't be doing. To put the authority in the pits of one man is all wrong because that is not his responsibility—it's yours," Linton told the commissioners.

Another resident said "I have some problems with the power." Taylor, city attorney, said there were checks and balances in the system and that the city charter is consistent with the ordinance.

"The charter which we voted on gives him the power regardless of whether this ordinance is passed tonight," Gunter said.

The change in the position from a full-time city attorney office to contract employee became effective Oct. 1, 1988. Taylor said that the city can save 50 percent in attorney fees, or about $56,000 annually by making this change.

Taylor has a private practice with offices located at 531 Dog Track Road, Longwood.

At a workshop meeting, prior to the regular meeting, commissioners also discussed merit pay bonuses for city employees who have worked for the city for one year. Bonuses will amount to $50,000 which will be taken from the contingency fund, according to commissioners.

Poll: election gap widening

United Press International

Democrat Michael Dukakis is fighting to turn the tide in his favor in a pair of important industrial states but is swimming in the face of increasing signs that Republican George Bush is putting the presidential race out of reach.

The Massachusetts governor, who reportedly has decided to focus his flagging campaign on 18 states and the District of Columbia, set up an ambitious agenda today in one of those industrial prizes, Michigan, after stumping frenetically Monday through the other, Ohio.

The multi-stop schedule reflected the state of Dukakis's campaign — trailing and scrambling hard to get back into the race with only three weeks left until Election Day. Bush appears to hold a lead in both Ohio and Michigan.

Even as the Democrat moved to put the best face on recent events, however, he was hit with an NBC News-Wall Street Journal poll Monday giving his opponent a startling 17-point edge — the vice president supported by 55 percent of those surveyed to 38 percent for Dukakis, the largest Bush lead of any major poll.

Conducted Friday through Sunday, it represents the first comprehensive survey since Thursday's second and final debate between the nominees in Los Angeles, which generally was seen as a victory for Bush. The poll's authors cautioned, however, that the race could be closer with low voter turnout; they questioned 1,378 likely voters and wound up with an error margin of 3 percentage points.

Bush played down the news Monday, telling a rally at DuPage College in Glen Ellyn, Ill. "I am running as if I were 10 points behind. We are not going to let up and we need to capitalize on our strength."

Dukakis did his best to dismiss the results, saying, "I can only tell you that there are other polls that say very different things about where we are and where the race is. It's very tight and it's a real horse race."

The three-term governor added with some frustration, however, "This business of polls is really having a terrible effect. Now we've got a new set of numbers that has absolutely no relationship to anything we have or other people have (and yet) you spend two or three days responding to questions."

The NBC-Journal survey found a complete reversal in Dukakis's public ratings from one month ago, with only 36 percent of voters now saying they think of him favorably and 50 percent identifying him unfavorably. At the same time, Bush's favorability rating improved from 50 percent to 55 percent.

The poll showed Bush doing far better than Dukakis on a number of specific issues, including Supreme Court appointments, crime, the economy and foreign policy. Voters by a 5-to-3 ratio preferred the vice president in a crisis.

Finally, the results indicated success for Bush's strategy of painting his rival as an unpatriotic liberal out of touch with most citizens. A full 71 percent said the Republican represented "traditional American values" while only 48 percent felt that way about Dukakis.

Dukakis's campaign chairman, Paul Brantner, told reporters flatly that he did not believe the poll's results. He insisted, "The undecided vote is far larger than that (and) the decided is soft and winnable."

Indeed, a majority of voters — 57 percent — said they wished they had choices other than Bush or Dukakis. But significantly, only half of Bush's supporters said they felt that way while 63 percent of Dukakis's backers gave that reply.

Dukakis, maintaining his "spirits are great," walked away from all talk of him lagging behind with a reference to baseball's World Series: "So were the Los Angeles Dodgers a few days ago."

Bakkers begin lawsuit defense

United Press International

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Lawyers for Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker continued to call witnesses today in defense of a lawsuit filed by PTL to recover huge salaries paid the Bakkers and aides during the glory years of the now troubled television ministry.

PTL is suing its founders and former Bakker aide David Taggart for $54 million, claiming salaries and perks the three took from the ministry were excessive.

Monday Bakker lawyer Ryan Hovis told federal bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds that he would prove more than $4.5 million paid the Bakkers in their last four years at PTL were duly authorized by the board of directors.

"Even if they were not properly authorized," Hovis said, "the Bakkers were worth what they were paid. It was a fair salary."

Hovis was expected to call the Rev. Evelyn Carter Spencer, a former PTL trustee to the witness stand today to support his claim that the payments to the Bakkers were approved by the trustees. Spencer is now pastor of the House of Truth Church, Oakland, Calif.

Also Monday at a PTL bankruptcy hearing, Reynolds told the Internal Revenue Service it is "cutting off (its) nose to spite (its) face" by trying to put the television ministry off the air.

"My view is the ministry's got to keep going," Reynolds told IRS lawyer Dick Mitchell Monday. "I feel it's got to keep going until a buyer comes in. What the buyer's going to do with it, I have no idea."

The IRS claims PTL owes $55 million in back taxes and is one of several creditors who have urged the judge to put PTL's daily television program off the air and place the ministry under Chapter 7 liquidation.

But Reynolds consistently has refused to turn off the lights on the once-popular charismatic ministry, which lost its ability to generate money when founder Jim Bakker resigned last year over a sex scandal.

Chapter 7 would require the sale of all assets, including PTL's Heritage Grand luxury hotel, television facilities, water park, shopping center and 1,700 acres of undeveloped land.

"I think you are cutting off your nose to spite your face," Reynolds said. "I'm convinced if we close the ministry we're going to have to close all the doors — and that's not going to be conducive to a sale."

Reynolds told the IRS he will again consider its bid to close down the ministry at a Nov. 16 hearing, when PTL trustee M.C. "Red" Benton is scheduled to recommend a buyer.

Bakker turned PTL over to the Rev. Jerry Falwell, believing Falwell would be a caretaker until the scandal died down and then give it back to him.

But within a month, Falwell announced he would stay at PTL "until Jesus comes." Falwell claimed Bakker was unfit to minister and a homosexual, an allegation Bakker denies.

Falwell took PTL, with an estimated total debt of $130 million, into bankruptcy court in June 1987 and filed a reorganization plan that would have given him nearly complete control of the ministry.

But Falwell quit the following October when Reynolds ordered him to allow Bakker's charismatic followers, whose monies had built PTL, to serve on his board of directors.

"Barring a miracle of God," Falwell said, "Jim Bakker will be back here in six months."

That scenario has not happened, with Bakker trying repeatedly to come up with financing to buy PTL.

Trapped whales battle to survive

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Their snouts worn down to the bone from frantic efforts to keep from being buried under a deadly layer of arctic ice, three trapped California gray whales battled to survive long enough for rescuers to reach them.

Battered and weak from their constant resurfacing for air inside two shrinking holes in the ice, the whales were in danger of losing their struggle against the powerful forces of nature.

Until the National Guard can tow a powerful icebreaking barge 200 miles to where the whales are trapped, local Eskimos and others were hacking at the ice with chainsaws and whale blubber tools that resemble hoses to keep the air holes open in the face of wind and numbing, sub-freezing temperatures.

Congressman pushes for immediate trial

ATLANTA — Rep. Pat Swindall, R-Ga., is pushing for an immediate trial he claims could clear him before Election Day now that a federal grand jury has indicted him on 10 counts of perjury.

The 38-year-old congressman, seeking a third term against actor Ben Jones in the state's 4th District, pleaded innocent at a brief arraignment before U.S. Magistrate William Harber and announced he would act as his own attorney at a trial he expects to begin Monday.

Swindall had said Sunday that his representatives were told of the likely trial date by Assistant U.S. Attorney Craig Gillen. But U.S. District Judge Robert Vining, likely to get Swindall's case, said he was not aware of any change in his court calendar — and another trial was set for that date.

N.H. moose target of hunt

TWIN MOUNTAIN, N.H. — Activists opposed to a three-day moose hunt, the first in New Hampshire since 1901, said the animals have so lost their fear of people that they will provide little sport to hunters.

But the state's chief game warden disagreed, saying that even though the moose has been a gregarious roadside attraction in the state for 87 years, it becomes a "different animal" once it retreats to the woods.

The hunt was to start 30 minutes before sunrise today with a smattering of protests by people who planned to carry signs with anti-hunting messages at weigh-in stations at Twin Mountain and Berlin.

'Pirate' radio station forced off air

NEW YORK, N.Y. — A "pirate" shipboard radio station first heard last year returned to the airwaves for "three great nights" of rock 'n' roll until authorities abruptly ended the broadcast, but defiant disc jockeys vowed early today to fight the order.

Radio New York International signed off within minutes of receiving the federal temporary restraining order at 10:05 p.m. Monday, three nights after the AM broadcasts began from the ship Sarah 4.5 miles off the Atlantic Beach, Long Island shore, officials said.

The Coast Guard delivered the order, which was issued by U.S. District Court and the U.S. attorney in Boston at the behest of the Federal Communications Commission.

The station, which had transmitted on 1620 AM from 9 p.m. to midnight since Friday, broadcast on a powerful signal heard from Maine to Florida, fans told the operators.

LaRouche pleads not guilty

Candidate calls mail fraud and tax evasion charges 'screwball'

United Press International

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Lyndon LaRouche, pleading innocent to mail fraud and tax evasion, decries his indictment as a "screwball" political attack against his extreme views and stubborn presidential candidacy.

"This is not accidental that this action should come three weeks before the election," LaRouche said Monday before he and six associates entered "not guilty" pleas in U.S. District Court in the Eastern District of Virginia.

The indictment, handed down Friday by a federal grand jury, accused them of running a fund-raising scheme in which they solicited and collected millions of dollars by making false representations about repayment. LaRouche, named in 13 counts, also was charged with lying to the Internal Revenue Service.

The defendants were released on personal recognizance after promising U.S. District Judge Albert Bryan Jr. they would appear for trial Nov. 21.

But before his arraignment, LaRouche, 66, held a news conference across the Potomac River in Washington to declare, "This is a screwball charge. ... There is in fact no evidence. They have to manufacture evidence. This is a vicious, malicious prosecution."

Prosecutors maintain LaRouche and his supporters borrowed about $34 million from late 1983 through early 1987 by making false representations to various prospective lenders.

Some children allegedly beaten up to 800 times

United Press International

OREGON CITY, Ore. — More than 50 children brought from Los Angeles to rural Oregon for athletic training designed to steer them away from drugs will be held in state custody while authorities investigate allegations of systematic beatings that may have killed one young girl.

Judge Patrick Gilroy ordered the 55 children held in state custody on Monday after receiving a report from the county juvenile department that said, "The bulk of these children ... were in a regimen which included ritualized beatings."

Court documents said the children were beaten with a paddle or electrical cord up to 800 times while other children were ordered to count the strokes.

Also on Monday, four adults who had been supervising the children were arraigned on manslaughter charges in the death of 8-year-old Dayna Broussard, the daughter of the founder of the Ecclesia Athletic Association, Eldridge Broussard Jr. of Los Angeles.

The four were not charged with murder because evidence indicated the young girl's death was not intentional, authorities said.

The children were taken into custody last week from a farmhouse in Sandy, Ore., 25 miles east of Portland, after four members of the group took the girl's body to a fire station.

Airliner inspections failed to detect crack in fuselage

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Federal investigators are wondering why private inspection last spring did not find a 12-inch fuselage crack that turned up recently on a Continental Airlines Boeing 737 — a flaw similar to that blamed after an Aloha Airlines plane ripped open in flight.

James Kolstad, acting chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, disclosed in a speech Monday that Continental workers had made the "chilling discovery" when paint was stripped off the fuselage of the 19-year-old plane during routine repairs two weeks ago.

Not only was the crack not found during special inspections required by the government after the Aloha accident, Kolstad said, but 29 shorter cracks were exposed along a 30-inch section of a fuselage joint in the "same general area" as the cracks thought to have caused the top of the 19-year-old Aloha jetliner to tear off at 24,000 feet in April, killing a flight attendant.

"It's interesting that the airworthiness directives mandating inspections for cracks only five months ago failed to catch these," Kolstad said pointedly in prepared remarks to an aviation organization in Montreal.

The federal directives, issued in May, required airlines to make detailed visual inspections of all 737s with more than 30,000 takeoffs and precise electronic inspections of those with more than 50,000 takeoffs.

The Federal Aviation Administration said at the time it was concerned a "cold bonding" process used in the manufacture of older 737s to seal layers of the fuselage skin to each other ultimately might lead to corrosion and cracks.

The Continental 737 had 55,000 takeoffs. By comparison, the Aloha jetliner had more than 90,000 takeoffs.

Continental spokesman Ned Walker said Monday that the airline conducted the FAA-mandated inspection of the 737 May 20 and found no evidence of cracks. In the wake of the subsequent discovery, however, all 737s with more than 50,000 takeoffs were re-checked within 72 hours, he said.

The FAA announced Monday it would issue expanded requirements soon to require paint to be stripped from an aircraft if so thick it could hide a crack during an inspection. Greater use of sensitive electronic tests also will be required to detect hidden cracks in fuselage joints, the agency said.

The NTSB has yet to complete its investigation of the Aloha incident, in which the pilots miraculously landed their crippled plane on the island of Maui, so there is no final declaration that fuselage cracks were to blame.

But Kolstad revealed Aloha had discovered a seven-inch crack in the fuselage of another 737 in 1982, and he criticized its management Monday for not taking precautionary action afterwards.

"This finding did not prompt sufficient concern about the potential for a catastrophic failure of fuselage structures in other airplanes in their fleet," he told his audience.

Kolstad also complained about the vague and subjective nature of federal regulations about airline maintenance programs, saying it "leaves much to interpretation" and could lead to "corner-cutting."

Laos says MIA activists to be freed

BANGKOK, Thailand — Two U.S. citizens arrested in Laos while distributing a reward notice for the safe return of missing Americans will be released without charge once investigations are completed, a senior Laotian military officer said today.

The two, Donna Long of Jacksonville, N.C., and James Copp of Hampstead, N.C., were arrested Oct. 3 on the Laos side of the Mekong River.

The arrests came shortly after the couple had scattered currency and pamphlets printed with an offer of a $2.4 million reward for the safe return of a live American prisoner of war from Indochina.

Soviets conduct nuclear test

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union exploded a small nuclear device Tuesday at its main underground testing site in Semipalatinsk, in the Kazakhstan region, the official Tass news agency said.

Tass said the device, with an explosive force of less than 20 kilotons of TNT, was exploded for the purpose of "research into the physics of a nuclear explosion" — an explanation that stopped short of clarifying whether it was a military or civilian test.

The news agency said there was no leakage of radiation from the blast and radiation levels at the test site were normal.

Former Seoul mayor gets jail term

SEOUL, South Korea — A Seoul court Tuesday sentenced former Mayor Yum Bo-hyun, a key promoter of the 1988 Summer Olympics, to five years in prison and fined him nearly $113,000 for taking bribes from a construction firm.

A three-judge panel of the Seoul District Criminal Court also handed down a suspended one-year term to Bae Jong-yol, board chairman of Hanyang Corp., for bribing Yum to win contracts for city construction projects.

Presiding Judge Hong Suk-je said Yum, 58, "betrayed sincere public servants and caused a shock among the public by receiving a large sum in bribe from a business company in connection with his official duty."

"To restore public trust in government officials, Yum must be punished heavily," the judge said before sentencing him to five years in prison and fining him $112,676.

The judge, however, said the court was handing down a lighter sentence than what the prosecution had sought because Yum worked hard as mayor and played a large role in the successful staging of the Summer Olympics in Seoul.

Yum became mayor in 1983, two years after Seoul was selected to host the 24th Olympiad. During his term of four years and two months he heavily promoted the games.

He was arrested April 28 on bribery charges, and prosecutors urged that he be sentenced to 10 years imprisonment.

Thousands may starve in Sudan

May be three weeks before relief can reach 25,000 people

United Press International

KHARTOUM, Sudan — More than 25,000 people are threatened with imminent starvation in the southern Sudanese town of Abyei despite a U.S.-sponsored airlift of emergency supplies to the remote area, relief workers said Tuesday.

The small, famine-racked town of Abyei, 450 miles southwest of Khartoum, depends entirely on the emergency airlift for food supplies as heavy rains have made roads impassable.

Relief officials said it would be another two to three weeks before larger quantities of food can be trucked to the area, and by that time it could be too late for many of the 25,000 refugees who fled to the dusty town to escape civil war and famine.

The U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) is sponsoring an airlift operation that began last week and is expected to transport a total of 90 tons of sorghum to Abyei by airplane over a 10-day period.

The Khartoum-based daily Sudan Times said Monday most children under 2 years of age in Abyei have already died of famine-related diseases, and many of the elderly are gravely ill.

The newspaper and relief workers in Khartoum said that although the situation improved slightly since the start of the airlift, the refugees in Abyei still face imminent starvation.

The $900,000 USAID operation also includes the transport by land of 1,500 tons of sorghum as well as drugs and medical supplies to Kadugli, 370 miles southwest of Khartoum, for distribution to refugees in that region.

Truck convoys are expected to haul sufficient food and medicine to Kadugli to serve 250,000 people for three months, USAID officials said.

Although it is difficult to gauge the extent of the crisis in Sudan's largely inaccessible south, hundreds of people are believed to die every week as a result of the famine.

Heavy flooding in July seriously aggravated food shortages resulting from two years of persistent drought.

A reported intensification of a five-year civil war in the region has further hampered food-distribution efforts.

Southern-based rebels have repeatedly warned they would shoot down any aircraft — including relief planes — that fly over the war zone without authorization.

Guerrillas of the Sudan Peoples Liberation Army have in the past downed planes and attacked road convoys of relief supplies in southern Sudan.

'Black box' may shed light on Rome jet crash

United Press International

ROME — Aviation officials said today they expect the "black box" cockpit voice and flight information recorders recovered from the wreckage of a Uganda Airlines jet to help explain why the plane crashed just short of the runway at Rome's main airport.

Police found the recording devices about 12 hours after the Boeing 707 went down Monday in swirling fog about 800 yards from a runway at Leonardo da Vinci Airport.

Airport officials said 21 of the 52 passengers and crew survived, but at least four were in critical condition. Of the 31 killed, 28 died in the crash and three succumbed to burns and other injuries later in hospitals.

The Ugandan pilot was not listed among the survivors. He was identified only by his family name of Walusimbi.

The 20-year-old jet, named "Pearl of Africa," crashed on its third attempt to land, officials said.

They said the pilot tried twice to land on runways equipped with the Instrumental Landing System but was hampered by fog.

The fatal third attempt was on a strip equipped only with a radio beacon, but visibility was estimated at 1,500 to 1,800 yards at the time the pilot was cleared to make his approach.

"It is evident that the plane was flying too low even if he was on the right route. We don't know what caused this," said Airport Fire Chief Giuseppe Chiucini.

Chiucini said firemen and other rescue workers who arrived immediately after the crash reported the area was blanketed with a heavy, swirling fog.

The so-called "black boxes" record all conversation in the cockpit and automatically register the plane's altitude and flight maneuvers.

Three communist members of Parliament, Michele Ciarfardini, Silvano Ridi and Edda Fagni, demanded that the ministers of transport and the interior issue an immediate ban on landings at night and in low visibility on runways that aren't equipped with the Instrumental Landing System, a device that assists pilots during low-visibility landings.

The deputies noted this was the third air disaster in Italy on a runway without an Instrumental Landing System.

Haiti coup bid points to continued instability

United Press International

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — A failed coup attempt by two soldiers who tried to seize an arsenal at the National Palace underscores the continuing instability of the month-old military regime of Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril.

Government spokesman Frantz Lubin said Monday the two soldiers were arrested and an undisclosed number of Presidential Guards expelled from the army because of Saturday's coup attempt.

Lubin identified the soldiers as Sgt. Patrick Bocharard, head of the national Gaming Commission, and retired Col. Samuel Jeremie. There were no reports of casualties.

A Western diplomat who requested anonymity said Presidential Guards blocked the two soldiers as they tried to seize an arsenal in the National Palace.

Soldiers patrolled Port-au-Prince on Monday but the capital was generally quiet and businesses operated normally.

Avril was escorted by about 300 heavily armed soldiers Monday when he attended a ceremony marking the 182nd anniversary of the assassination of Jean-Jacques Dessalines, Haiti's first head of state.

Analysts said the coup attempt underscores the continuing instability of the Avril government since he was installed in a Sept. 17 coup by non-commissioned officers of the Presidential Guard, who overthrew the previous military ruler, Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

Bocharard was named head of the Gaming Commission, a government agency widely viewed as being riddled by corruption, shortly after Avril assumed power last month.

"Lord knows why he would be starting a coup after getting himself into a notoriously soft spot," one diplomat said.

An officer at the National Penitentiary in Port-au-Prince said Bocharard and Jeremie were taken to the prison late Saturday. He said a third officer, Maj. Pierre Cherubin, was being sought in connection with the coup attempt.

The officer, who identified himself only as a lieutenant, said Cherubin is the nephew of Maj. Gen. Wilton Lherisson, former assistant armed forces chief of staff under Namphy.

Jeremie was convicted of murder and sentenced to 15 years in prison in May 1986, but Bocharard freed him the day after the coup last month, the prison officer said.

Ligachev no longer second in command

United Press International

MOSCOW — A Foreign Ministry spokesman has confirmed that Politburo member Yegor Ligachev is no longer the No. 2 man in the ruling leadership.

Spokesman Gennady Gerasimov also indicated Monday that more power changes might be in the works, saying "not all duties and offices have been distributed."

Ligachev, 67, who had headed the powerful ideological portfolio, was put in charge of agriculture during the Sept. 30 Kremlin shakeup by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Although an obvious loss of power, the job switch did not affect Ligachev's standing as a full member of the 12-man Politburo, the main policy-making body in the country. Traditionally, the holder of the ideological portfolio has been the No. 2 man in the Kremlin lineup. The ideological portfolio is now held by Alexander Yakovlev, a close associate of Gorbachev, but diplomats say who is next in line remains unclear.

Gerasimov was asked at a briefing whether Ligachev was still the No. 2 man in the Politburo behind Gorbachev.

"What you call the No. 2 does not exist," Gerasimov said.

During Gorbachev's absences for vacations and trips abroad, Ligachev had chaired the meetings of the Politburo.

But Gerasimov explained that now when Gorbachev is away, the Politburo members decide who will deputize for the leader at the weekly meetings.

During Gorbachev's last absence during an August vacation, Ligachev made a speech in the city of Gorki warning against the perils of introducing a market economy in the Soviet Union.

Ligachev said unemployment results from the free market. In contrast, Gorbachev has pushed for more market forces to break the control of the socialist economy by inefficient central planners.

When Gorbachev was in Yugoslavia last year, a lengthy article appeared in the press saying that the concepts of perestroika, or reform, were incorrect and were destroying socialist ideals.

The official Pravda newspaper later condemned the article as "a manifesto of the anti-perestroika forces," but not before many newspapers had printed the original attack.

Ligachev, as ideology chief, was thought to have approved the initial article.

Gerasimov summed up the present distribution of power on the Politburo as, "All members of the Politburo are equal and some might be more equal than others."

Although Ligachev was made the head of the commission overseeing agriculture, he failed to appear at a conference last week that dealt with agriculture. The meeting was dominated by Gorbachev, who pushed his market oriented reforms.

For good service, go to Sanford Gulf Service

Sanford Gulf Service, 2518 French Ave. S., has a commitment to high quality and professional automotive service. With its computer age expertise, Sanford Gulf Service remains the friendly, full-service neighborhood station that you can depend on for old-fashioned service.

Sanford Gulf Service is both General Motors Factory and ASE certified. He has 11 years experience with GM and worked for six years as service manager for a Sanford Cadillac dealership prior to coming to Sanford Gulf Service.

Once common in towns and cities across the nation, this type of corner gas station has become an endangered species since the advent of interstate highways, self-service pumps, gas shortages, and high prices.

They have the electronic equipment and trained technicians to diagnose problems with computerized controls and repair fuel injection systems as well as performing basic auto repair and preventative maintenance.

Motorists who pumped their own gas to save a few cents also found they were not getting the care and maintenance a full service station can provide. They missed that extra touch Americans not only want a fill-up, they want service, advice, and mechanical help.

Sanford Gulf does safety checks, engine tune-ups, complete brake repair, wheel balancing, heating and air conditioning service and electrical system repair.

Sylvester Chang, who has owned the business for seven years, and manager Argelio Cruz, have gathered a team of certified mechanics that are knowledgeable in all makes and models of cars. For an appointment or road service call 322-4924. Business hours are 6 a.m. to midnight Monday through Saturday, and 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Sunday. Mechanics are on duty from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Kraft to study $11.8 billion buyout offer

United Press International

NEW YORK — Kraft Inc., the nation's No. 1 food company, said it will study a $11.8 billion cash offer from tobacco giant Phillip Morris Cos. — potentially the second largest merger in U.S. history.

The offer was to commence today and will expire at midnight Nov. 15 unless extended.

In a friendly takeover attempt that surprised analysts, Phillip Morris offered $90 a share Monday for the food giant. The bid represents a premium of nearly 50 percent over Kraft's closing price of $60.125 a share on the New York Stock Exchange.

Richman, in Glenview, Ill., advised Kraft stockholders to defer any decision on whether to tender their shares until the Kraft board considers the offer and makes a recommendation. The Kraft board's position will be communicated to shareholders on or before Oct. 31, he said in a statement.

Kraft issued a statement saying it would consider the offer but that its board of directors previously had concluded the "long-term interest of our shareholders is that Kraft continue to operate as an independent company."

"Kraft has been engaged in a program designed to maximize the long-term value of its shareholders' investment in Kraft. Our board of directors has previously concluded that the best long-term interest of our shareholders is that Kraft continue to operate as an independent company," he said.

If successful, the Phillip Morris bid would be the second largest ever after Chevron Corp.'s $13.3 billion acquisition of Gulf Oil Corp. in March 1984.

The maker and distributor of Kraft processed cheeses, salad dressings, candy and Budget Gourmet frozen dinners, recorded sales of $8.71 billion in 1987.

A Phillip Morris-Kraft combination would create the nation's eighth largest industrial company based on 1987 sales. Phillip Morris is now ranked 12th.

Philip Morris, based in New York, makes Marlboros and is one of the world's largest cigarette producers. It acquired General Foods Corp., maker of Maxwell House coffees and a wide range of consumer foods, in 1985 and owns Miller Brewing Co. and The Seven Up Co. Phillip Morris had sales of $25.4 billion in 1987.

The friendly offer was contained in a letter sent by Phillip Morris Chairman Hamish Maxwell to the chairman of Kraft, John Richman. The cash bid was authorized by Phillip Morris's board after the stock market closed Monday.

"Kraft's food business complements our food business," Phillip Morris's Maxwell said in a letter to Richman.

Curtiss nomination carried no-vote promise on reactor

United Press International

BOSTON — The Senate's confirmation of Republican James Curtiss to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission was held up last week until Curtiss signed a statement promising not to vote on evacuation plans for a controversial New Hampshire reactor, it was reported Tuesday.

Friday by the Senate to a five-year appointment, could not be reached for comment Monday.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., whose state is fighting proposed emergency evacuation plans for Massachusetts communities near the Seabrook nuclear power plant, said he sought the promise because of Curtiss' involvement in the issue while a congressional staff attorney. The Boston Globe said.

In his letter to Kerry, Curtiss wrote that while he maintained an open mind toward Seabrook, "I do believe that the perception of objectivity and impartiality is critical to the integrity of the commission's decision-making process."

Kerry said he placed a hold on the nomination because Curtiss had opposed initiatives to force

Opponents of the Seabrook reactor downplayed the agreement obtained by Kerry, noting that petitions filed by the plant's owners already have been receiving unanimous approvals by the NRC.

"Right now it may not seem that important, but down the road when we get some members seeing our way, it might," said Diane Curran, a lawyer for the New England Coalition on Nuclear Pollution.

Mexican president-elect Salinas agrees to extend economic pact

United Press International

MEXICO CITY — President-elect Carlos Salinas de Gortari agreed to extend the government's controversial anti-inflation plan through December, maintaining a freeze on prices, salaries and peso-dollar parity.

We are going to extend the pact because that is what the people of Mexico want, Salinas said Sunday.

Salinas is scheduled to take office December 1 to begin a six-year term as president.

The plan, known as the Economic Solidarity Pact, was first signed Dec. 15, 1986, by President Miguel de la Madrid and labor, business and agricultural leaders to address Mexico's recent economic crisis.

The pact has helped to bring down inflation from 15.5 percent in January to 0.6 percent in September, the lowest monthly rate in 12 years, although unemployment still runs high in the debt-burdened country.

We have taken this step because of what the results so far obtained indicate to us, Salinas said, "and because current inflation rates are at their lowest levels for a long time."

Salinas also expressed gratitude to the private sector and Mexico's labor unions for enabling the pact to succeed.

We must also thank the people of Mexico without whom this would not have been possible, Salinas said.

The government has maintained that the pact is unusual anti-inflation plans that have failed in other Latin American countries, noting it was not unilaterally imposed.

Beginning March 1, the government froze salaries, the prices of public goods and services and peso-dollar parity at 2,241 pesos to buy dollars and 2,252 pesos to sell.

Under the agreement, the government has promised not to raise prices for public goods and services, and labor leaders agreed not to demand wage increases.

Labor and business leaders approached Salinas at the beginning of the month to call for an extension of the pact.

Salinas, who signed Sunday's agreement as an "honorary witness," said the extension of the pact into its fifth phase would enable Mexico to establish a firm financial footing in 1989.

My government will widen still further the economic solidarity on which the pact is based, Salinas said.

He outlined some of the economic policies he plans to introduce as president.

Filipino legislators slam pact

United Press International

MANILA, Philippines — Filipino senators expressed disappointment today over a two-year interim agreement signed by the Philippines and the United States providing $962 million in aid to Manila for continued use of strategic U.S. military bases.

President Corason Aquino was expected to issue a statement later in the day on the agreement signed by Secretary of State George Shultz and Philippine Foreign Secretary Ben Manglapus in Washington Monday.

Many of the 21-member Senate were displeased by the U.S. pledge in the agreement to secure congressional approval for $181 million in military aid that would expire in 1991, the final year of the 1946 treaty covering Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Base.

The body, expected to approve the pact, said it would keep their options open for a new deal.

The comprehensive package reflected a significant increase from the $180 million in aid the United States currently provides annually for use of the bases in Washington's largest overseas military base.

But it fell far short of the $1.2 billion Manglapus said he would secure in the highly charged negotiations that stretched over six months and were marred by a work stoppage by air dispatches over payment.

We asked for 12 boxes of apples and they gave four bags of peanuts, said Sen. Ernesto Maceda in the Senate, "I'm sure the country's treaty ratifying body will need to make a tough choice between the two."

We will have to make the best of what's available, said Defense Secretary Isidro Garcia. "There's never really enough is there?"

Officials said the interim agreement does not need Senate approval but any new agreement to replace the basic pact will have to pass through the upper house.

The Senate last June approved a tough anti-nuclear bill that awaits action by the House of Representatives.

Washington has a policy of neither confirming nor denying the presence of nuclear weapons at its facilities. U.S. officials have said it would be extremely difficult for the United States to operate Clark and Subic if the nuclear free provisions in the Philippine constitution are implemented.

The agreement in Washington did not address Philippine Senate concerns over the nuclear issue. For the next two years, at least, the status quo remains.

Militant leftist groups denounced the agreement as a sellout of national sovereignty and demanded the immediate dismantling of Clark and Subic, which host 17,000 military personnel plus dependents.

More bargaining expected despite U.S.-Philippine pact

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The interim agreement allowing the United States to continue using military facilities in the Philippines leaves several major problems to be negotiated when the bases treaty expires in 1991.

If the United States is to continue after 1991 using Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Station, the largest U.S. military facilities overseas, Washington and Manila will have to wrestle with the tough by-product of the presence of nuclear weapons on U.S. planes and ships.

The Philippine Senate has already approved a resolution insisting that the U.S. military forces declare the presence of such weapons. The U.S. government, sticking to a policy to neither confirm nor deny, said it will pull all its ships and planes from the Philippines rather than comply.

In the negotiations over a new treaty, Philippine President Corason Aquino will have to come to grips with a sticky issue of nationalism linked to the country's post-war independence from the United States. Does Manila want to remain the Asian bastion of the U.S. military?

But the interim deal signed Monday centered on the amount of U.S. aid and was carried out in the tradition of haggling in an Asian market.

Maceda opened the bargaining by suggesting that the American bases might have to be closed or severely restricted unless the United States came up with more "rent money." It asked for $1.2 billion a year.

The United States now provides $120 million, scheduled to increase to $180 million in fiscal 1989, a companionly bargain when compared to base agreements with Spain ($280 million a year), Greece ($400 million) or Turkey ($914 million).

The Americans countered with a $400 million offer. The talks broke down for a while last summer before the two sides compromised on $181 million.

For the United States, the deal was far cheaper than the prospect of having to find new bases.

For the Philippines, Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus was concerned that without an agreement Manila would continue to get only $180 million a year until 1991. U.P.I. Manila correspondent Fernando Del Mundo reported.

But there is some important fine print in the U.S. offer.

The administration cannot commit the next president nor can it guarantee that Congress will appropriate the necessary funds. Washington merely pledged to make a "best effort" to get that money from Congress.

The Philippine government is skeptical since Congress has cut U.S. aid from $385 million in 1986.

Even the description of the U.S. aid remains a controversial issue. The Philippine government considers the U.S. aid to be rent for its property occupied by Clark and Subic.

Secretary of State George Shultz, who does not want this concept of rent to be adopted by other countries having U.S. bases, refuses to use the term.

A Big Bank Dedicated To Something Even Bigger: The Individual.

Today, in financial institutions all over America, people walk in as individuals and walk out as numbers.

Probably because it's more efficient to treat their customers in "bulk," and serve up "bulk-rate" services.

All this can be very easy for the bank, but very hard on the individual.

A Big Bank Dedicated To More Than Just Getting Bigger.

But, for three million people who bank at NCNB, things are different.

We work to help each one of our customers reach their full potential.

So we're training—and re-training—our people to find out what you want and need before we talk about what we've got.

Banking Services Designed For The Individual, Not The Institution.

We're introducing new services based on your needs—not ours.

For example, some time ago, we introduced a package of services we call Deluxe Value. It works well for most of our customers, but there are individuals with different needs.

So we developed a new package of services for people who are retired or getting close to retirement.

When you need to borrow money, we give you more than a brochure and an application form. Our people are trained to give you what we call "loan advice that's right on the money."

High Tech That Keeps In Touch With People.

And there's more to all this than the people you deal with face-to-face.

Our people behind the scenes have developed a system that helps us offer you same-day answers on loans, 24-hour banking coast-to-coast and customer service phone numbers for up-to-the-minute information on all your accounts with us.

Finally, you don't just get a bank account from us. You also get a connection to other financial areas such as investing and home buying.

The Customer Comes First, Even When A Bank Has Three Million Of Them.

That's a lot of business. So it pays us to see that you get more for your money.

The kind of attention, advice and service that will help you get ahead and stay ahead in the business of life.

If that last part sounds a bit like a small bank, that's the idea. And if the rest of it sounds like the things that only a big bank can offer, that's the idea, too.

If all of it sounds like the right bank for you, that's even better. After all, you're who we're dedicated to.

Flames rout Kings, 11-4

Jiri Hrdina completed his first NHL hat trick with two of the Calgary Flames' club-record seven third-period goals, helping hand Wayne Gretzky and the Kings an 11-4 defeat. Gretzky received polite applause from the capacity crowd of 20,002 when he took his first shift, a minute into the game, his first appearance in Canada since being traded from the Oilers.

The Flames broke open the game with three goals in one minute early in the third period. Brad McCrimmon converted his own rebound 61 seconds into the period. Hrdina scored 35 seconds later, and Joe Nieuwendyk scored his fourth goal of the year at 2:01.

Joe Mullen scored a power-play goal at 9:17 for an 8-3 lead. Mark Hunter scored at 14:50, and Berezan added his second of the game seven seconds later and after Bernie Nicholls scored for Los Angeles. Hrdina capped his first NHL hat trick at 19:05.

BASKETBALL

Bird agrees on contract

BOSTON — Larry Bird, the NBA's three-time Most Valuable Player, Monday agreed in principle to sign with the Boston Celtics through the 1991-92 season.

"Larry will be compensated according to the stature he has with the league," said agent Bob Woolf, who declined to specify dollar figures. "I think he's the best player in the league."

Bird's contract for $1.8 million a year expires following the 1989-90 season and he had announced he may retire after next season unless his contract was renegotiated before this season, which begins Nov. 4.

Pressure to renegotiate Bird's contract increased after Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls recently signed an eight-year contract for a reported $25 million. Bird reportedly sought $3 million a year from the Celtics.

AUTO RACING

Wallace gaining on Elliott

DAYTONA BEACH — Rusty Wallace slowly is making up ground on Bill Elliott in the battle for first place in the Winston Cup championship standings, but he still trails the Dawsonville, Ga., driver by 89 points with three races remaining.

Wallace is doing his best to catch Elliott, and his win Sunday in the Holly Farms 400 at North Wilkesboro, N.C., Speedway was his second straight victory. But Elliott, when he doesn't win, finishes well, and he came in fifth Sunday.

The win allowed Wallace to pick up 20 points on Elliott, but he needs to take a bigger chunk out of Elliott's lead soon if he wants to move into first place. Elliott has 4,028 points to 3,939 for Wallace.

FOOTBALL

Official: Fumble call blown

MIAMI — An official who worked Saturday's game between Notre Dame and Miami in South Bend, Ind., said a fumble call against the Hurricanes at the Irish goal line late in the game was a blown call.

The Miami News reported in Monday editions that the official, who was quoted anonymously due to rules that prevent officials in the Collegiate Independent Football Officials Association from commenting publicly on calls, said the crew "probably made a mistake" when they ruled Cleveland Gary fumbled at the Notre Dame 1 yard line with 7:04 left in the game. The play occurred on a fourth down and seven from the Notre Dame 11 yard line.

Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson vociferously protested the call, and insisted Sunday that Gary either scored a touchdown or was tackled on the 1 yard line.

A's look to rebound

World Series resumes tonight at Oakland

United Press International

OAKLAND — The Oakland Athletics said they wanted to meet the best team. Apparently, they got their wish.

After winning 104 games in the regular season, plus four straight in the playoffs, the A's found themselves home Monday, trailing the Los Angeles Dodgers two games to none in the World Series.

Unless former Dodger Bob Welch can defeat John Tudor Tuesday night in Game 3, the A's could wind up on the verge of the first World Series sweep in 12 years.

"The Dodgers played well here. We've played well in Oakland," said

A's slugger Dave Parker, who collected his team's only three hits in Game 2. "We had the week off. We couldn't score any runs here. We just have to carry on. I haven't seen anything exceptional out there from the Dodgers."

"From the beginning, I've had the proper amount of respect for the Dodgers," Oakland skipper Tony La Russa said. "I'd be very careful with counting us down somewhere. We're going to play better. We have to start chipping away."

Upon finishing the American League playoffs, the A's expressed a preference for meeting the New York Mets in the World Series. The Mets won more games than any National League team, then lost to the Dodgers in the playoffs.

Then Oakland slugger Don Baylor questioned the courage of Dodgers reliever Jay Howell. No one should question anything about the Dodgers now. They are playing too well.

"We've got two wins," Los Angeles catcher Mike Scioscia said. "Until we get two more, it's anybody's Series. We'll play as hard in Oakland as we played here. If you think too far ahead, you get in trouble. We'll take it one inning at a time and one at bat at a time."

Actually, the A's haven't played all that poorly. If ace reliever Dennis Who'd have thought that, halfway through the 1988 prep football season, the Oviedo Lions would be 8-0 overall, 3-0 in Seminole Athletic Conference play and 1-0 in 4A-District 7?

Their coach, Jack Blanton, had an inkling.

"You always hope (for an undefeated start) and you believe in your kids," said Blanton. "I knew if we had no injuries and didn't make mistakes, we'd have a chance to do well."

"So far, everything seems to be going pretty good."

That may be the understatement of the 1988-89 school year. Last Friday, the Lions again pulled out a close game, defeating Lyman 23-20 on a 27-yard field goal by Eric Dullmeyer.

"What is surprising is that the sophomores are playing so well," said Blanton. "They're not making sophomore mistakes. They're playing like skilled veterans."

Despite the perfect start and being assured of finishing with a winning record, Blanton said that the Lions' upcoming district contests against Seminole (this Friday) and Edgewater (on Nov. 11) will make or break the season.

"If we finished 3-7, I would be satisfied as long as we were the district champs," said Blanton. "That's what you get the kids ready for."

Right now, Blanton and his staff are getting the Lions ready for next Friday's district clash against the Seminoles, who are coming off a 34-22 district loss to Leesburg.

Seminole to 2-4 overall, the Tribe is 1-1 in the district (having beaten Edgewater early in the season) and could take command of the district with a win over Oviedo.

"It's always disappointing to lose," said Coach Emory Blake of Seminole. "We basically felt that we'd be at .500 right now. We knew going in that we're a young team, but I feel there were a couple games we should have won.

"We could be 4-2 right now, we should be 3-3."

Still, Blake has seen some positives come out of the last two losses, particularly the play of quarterback Kerry Wiggins, who has passed for over 150 yards in each of the last two games.

"We did some positive things," agreed Blake. "When you're dealing with a young team, you expect them to make mistakes. But I felt we should have corrected those mistakes we made in the first three games by now."

"We told the kids today that if they beat Oviedo, it would set up a three-way tie in the district. We're still in the thick of things even though we're not playing the caliber of ball we expected."

Over in 5A-District 4, the Lake Brantley Patriots took control of their own destiny by beating district opponent Lake Howell 28-16 last Friday night. The Patriots (4-2 overall, 3-0 in district play) lead the pack, just ahead of Spruce Creek (4-2, 2-0).

"The kids are getting better each week," said Fred Almon, coach of the Lake Brantley squad. "Three of the last four games are district games and we're starting to peak right now."

"We had a few letdowns early. Other than that, I think we're playing real well. It's important that the kids learn from their failure. We had a couple of failures early and it looks like the kids learned from them."

After falling behind at Lake Howell last week, the Patriots showed why their coach believed they could just as easily be 5-1 or even 6-0 right now, coming back and scoring a pair of fourth quarter touchdowns for the win.

"We're playing pretty good football," said Almon. "The kids want to win. Now the kids have learned they can win. That's about 80 percent of the battle."

SAC title on line tonight

Whether you're an Oviedo fan or a Lake Brantley fan, Oviedo High is the place to be tonight. You don't even have to be a volleyball fan. If you like good competition, this is one battle you won't want to miss.

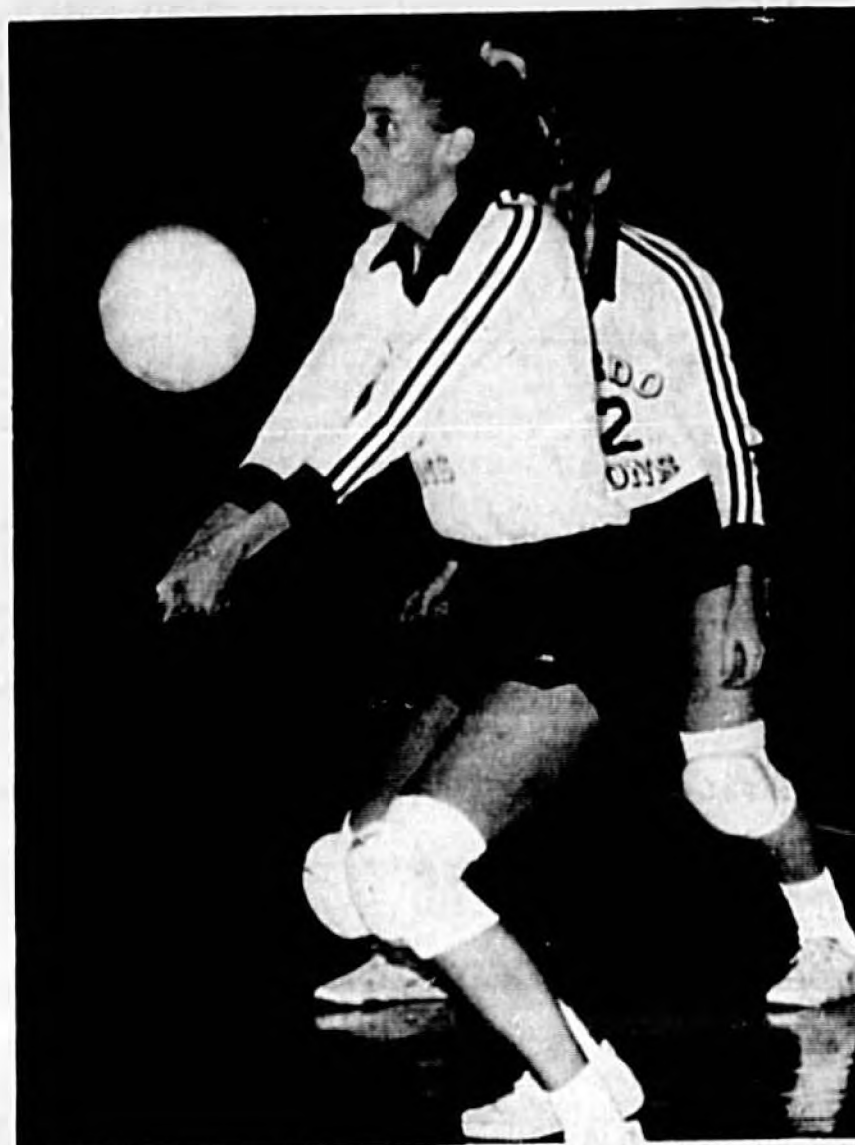

Lake Brantley's Lady Patriots go into the match with a 18-2 overall record and 9-0 in the Seminole Athletic Conference. Oviedo is 14-1 overall and 8-1 in the league with its only loss coming to Lake Brantley. Game time is 7 p.m.

The Lady Patriots, second in the state in Class 4A a year ago, are seeking their first SAC title and can all but clinch it with a victory.

Oviedo, which is coming off its most impressive performance of the year in a 15-0, 15-3 rout of Seminole, is the two-time defending SAC champion and will most likely clinch a tie for the title if it wins tonight.

Both teams possess powerful offensive attacks. Brantley probably has more people it can go to as seniors Dawn Gebhart, Dana Bush, Gretchen Mull, Pam Wittig and Barb Billmyer. Junior Jeanne Seidel and sophomore Tracy Finley are all capable hitters while senior Marianne Rodriguez is a superb setter.

Oviedo is led by senior Suzanne Hughes, who had her best week of the year in three Oviedo wins last week.

Oviedo's Suzanne Hughes gets a pass up to the setter during Thursday's game vs. Seminole. Oviedo, 14-1 overall, hosts Lake Brantley, 18-2, tonight in a match that will most likely determine the Seminole Athletic Conference winner or co-winners. Brantley is 9-0 in the SAC and Oviedo is 8-1.

Lyman High to host Postal Run

By MARK BLYTHE
 Herald sports writer

LONGWOOD — The annual Seminole County Postal Run will take place tonight at Lyman High School with the action to kick off at 6 with the girls junior varsity race.

The postal run is a change from the usual cross country races and lets the runners show their talents on the track instead of a true cross country course. The race will also be parent's night and all parents are encouraged to participate in the event.

The boys team race could be very interesting with Lyman being the odds on favorite. The Greyhounds, though, are still without Darren Marshall and that could hurt them.

Lake Howell and Lake Brantley's teams have looked very impressive in the past few weeks and have strong frontrunners to contend with Lyman. Seminole has a strong front three and need their final two to pull them through. Lake Mary is young and improving as is Oviedo.

The individual race should come down to Teddy Mitchell and Nick Radkewich, both from Lyman High School. Both ran impressively this past Saturday in Gainesville where Mitchell won the meet with a 15:52 clocking and Radkewich placed second at 16:03.

Lyman sophomore Kevin Padgett could set up a possible top three finish by the 'Hounds as he has

Early going rough for NBA expansion teams

By DAVID CORCORAN
Herald correspondent

DAYTONA BEACH — The NBA was in town Sunday night at the Ocean Center as the Cleveland Cavaliers took on the first year expansion team, the Miami Heat.

And even though the Heat's 106-89 exhibition loss to the veteran Cavaliers was expected, the 2,001 fans who were there saw some good play from the Heat at certain times of the game.

But the Heat is simply too slow and lack the height and talent to be a competitive ballclub for their first season in the league.

That's been the history of expansion pro teams in the past.

There, however, were some very interesting side notes to the game.

Pat Williams, the General Manager of the Magic said "This is a unique opportunity for the fans to see Miami here (Daytona Beach). Because the league's 75 mile radius rule that prevents another team like Miami to schedule or play games in another team's (Orlando) territory. And our territory includes Lakeland, Daytona, Tampa, and Gainesville.

"So the only time Miami will ever play in this area again is when they play us (the Magic) at the Orlando Arena during the regular season or during the playoffs in the near future."

Williams also reminded us "that we're three-fourths of the way there on our season ticket total (7,480 as of Sunday). We have to make the big push to reach the team's 10,000 season-ticket goal by Dec. 31 now."

"When David (NBA Commissioner) Stern told us if we don't get the 10,000, the league will revoke the franchise, he wasn't whistling dixie. He's dead serious. So the next 80 days are critical, and the time is now."

Jack Swope, the Assistant General Manager of the Magic feels "playing a year behind Miami will be a big help for us, because we can learn from the Heat's mistakes, and do everything the right way for the fans sake."

"And 53 weeks from tonight, we have a exhibition game scheduled here in Daytona when the Magic plays the Philadelphia 76ers."

John Gabriel, the Magic's scouting director said "for the past year we went all over the Central Florida area to tell the people what pro basketball is all about. We go to different colleges (UCF, Stetson, Rollins, etc.) and tell them how an NBA team could help everyone."

Gabriel also feels that the Magic's running of the Orlando All-Star Classic this past April was a tremendous success.

"We showed all of the top NBA brass and college people that Orlando is a first class place to hold a top college event with the eyes of the nation looking upon us."

That's from the Magic aide.

Now let's hear what Miami feels about all this.

When you talk about the Miami Heat, you talk of two people who were responsible for the city getting the franchise in April, 1987. Lewis Schaffel and Billy Cunningham.

Schaffel is the Heat's Managing General Partner, and runs the day to day operations for the team (Like Al Davis of the LA Raiders).

"I have four other partners with this franchise, but I'm not the type to tell the coach either do it or else. I know it's going to take a couple of years to get the team off the ground, but the fan support in Miami has been tremendous."

Cunningham, the former coach of the 76ers (77-85) and boyhood friend of Schaffel has done it all in the game.

Former All-American at North Carolina, NBA-ABA All-Star, won 200 and 300 games faster than any coach in history as well as a successful color man for CBS-TV during the NBA season after his retirement as a coach. And now, as a basketball executive, he has brought an NBA expansion team to the city of Miami.

Cunningham feels that getting in the ownership (he's a part owner of the Heat) of an NBA team "is a dream come true."

Brantley, Creek 5A-4 frontrunners

Could this be the year of the Patriot? Or will the Creek rise to the top?

Those are two questions that have never been asked before when speaking of the District 5A-4 title chase. Since its inception, three teams have ruled the roost in 5A-4 — Lake Mary (two district titles), DeLand (one) and Lake Howell (tied for first last year).

Yet, this year, Lake Brantley's Patriots and Spruce Creek's Hawks lead the way with 3-0 district records. Lyman's Greyhounds, however, are not to be overlooked as one big win can put them right in the thick of things.

As for the teams that are usually on top of the 5A-4 standings, well, they would be dwelling in the cellar if not for Mainland's hapless Buccaneers. Mainland is 0-4 in the district while Lake Mary, DeLand and Lake Howell are 1-2.

This week marks one of the big battles as Lyman plays Spruce Creek Friday night at Municipal Stadium in Daytona Beach. Brantley also has a district encounter as it plays at home against DeLand. A Lyman win over the Creek and a Brantley loss to DeLand could really cloud the 5A-4 picture and practically throw everyone, except Mainland, into the race.

Last week, the Fearless Fister Forecast (now in its sixth year — you're getting tired of it, huh) was a ho-hum 7-4 and the season mark is now at 35-18.

Lake Howell at Lake Mary

This game could be just for pride since Brantley has a shot at putting a lock on first place in the district. These are probably the two most inconsistent teams in Seminole County this season but both should be at their best Friday night. The Rams should be able to score some points and will hope the defense can stop Lake Howell from scoring as many...Lake Mary by 3

DeLand at Lake Brantley

The Patriots have their defense rocking and their wishbone rolling as they have scored 93 points while giving up 19 in the last three games. Brantley has its sights set on a district title and DeLand's Bulldogs will put up a good fight, but won't be able to stop the Patriots...Brantley by 9

Lyman vs. Spruce Creek

Lyman has a few wrinkles to iron out before it can become a contender in the district. The 'Hounds need some kind of contribution from their kicking game and a more sound passing attack and this is a good week to get on track in those departments. Spruce Creek is due for an off week and never has fared too well against Lyman...Lyman by 7

In other prep games it should be Apopka over Colonial by 10 and Winter Park over Boone by 25.

UCLA takes over No. 1 position

United Press International

NEW YORK — The UCLA Bruins found themselves Monday in a rare position — atop the college football ratings.

The Bruins earned the No. 1 ranking for the first time in 21 years, with 722 of 735 total points and 37 of 49 first-place votes from UPI's Board of Coaches.

On Saturday, UCLA beat California 38-21 and Notre Dame defeated Miami 31-30 to upset the former No. 1 team and end college football's fifth-longest winning streak at 36 games.

The Bruins gained the top spot for the first time since the 1967 season, during which they lost 21-20 to Southern Cal with O.J. Simpson. UCLA's only national championship was in 1954.

"I've never been on a team that's been ranked No. 1 — as a player, an assistant coach or a coach," Bruins Coach Terry Donahue said. "For me, it's a new experience and I'm excited about it."

"There will be a real focus to beat UCLA now, in all candor, though, there's a real focus to beat UCLA anyway. When you're No. 1, 3, 8, as long as you're in the top 10, the opponent is going to be cranked."

And with a tough Pac-10 schedule that includes No. 3 Southern California Nov. 19, Donahue said: "This is not the time to pop champagne corks. I wish it were."

The Fighting Irish earned 670 points and 10 first-place ballots to jump two positions to second.

Southern Cal, which held off Washington 28-27, picked up 647 points and the other two first-place votes to remain third. Miami fell to fourth.

Rounding out the Top 10 were No. 5 West Virginia, No. 6 Nebraska, No. 7 Florida State, No. 8 Oklahoma, No. 9 Auburn and No. 10 Clemson.

Completing the ratings were No. 11 Arkansas, No. 12 Wyoming, No. 13 Georgia, No. 14 Indiana, No. 15 Oklahoma State, No. 16 Syracuse, No. 17 South Carolina, No. 18 Washington, No. 19 Louisiana State and No. 20 Washington State.

Notre Dame, which has failed to land in last seven final rankings, played its biggest game since losing the 1981 Sugar Bowl — and a possible national title — to Georgia with Herschel Walker. The Irish avenged four straight losses — including a 58-7 rout in 1985 — to Miami by stopping a 2-point conversion attempt with 45 seconds left.

"(The Hurricanes) didn't play like it but I still believe they are probably the best football team in the country," Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz said. "We're a very good team, though. I've never been prouder of my players."

Six independents were joined in the rankings by four teams from the Pac-10, three each from the Big Eight and Southeastern Conference, and one each from the Atlantic Coast Conference, Big Ten, Southwest Conference and Western Athletic.

Oviedo's depth too much for SHS

By CHUCK BURGESS
Herald correspondent

OVIEDO — The Oviedo Lions' swim team who used to only have one swimmer competing, have put together one of the premier young teams in the county this season with a full squad of 30 swimmers. This fact was evident Monday afternoon as the Lions pounced the even younger and outmanned Seminole 104-39 in boys action and 101-32 in girls competition.

Pat O'Malley, head Lion swim coach, was most impressed with his boys' performance who improved their dual meet record to 6-1 with their only loss coming from county powerhouse Lyman.

"Overall we're coming on strong," O'Malley said. "It's nice to be swimming faster going into the conference meet. We're going into the meet with a solid team with a lot of depth where in the past we didn't have the numbers or the quality."

The tough Oviedo squad stroked its way to victory in every event but the 100 meter butterfly where Seminole senior Scott Lewis outdistanced the field with his winning time of 1:08.59. Seminole did have three other victories, two by senior Sean Mickle and one by senior Troy Deppen, however both swimmers are ineligible until the first of November so the victories didn't count.

Leading the Lions in the boys meet was Charlie Horne and Mike Hayes. Each of the Lion strokesters left behind the competition for three victories apiece. Hayes took the 50 free in 29.47, 100 free 1:11.59, and teamed with Horne, Torben Jensen, and Mark Winkler in the 200 medley relay to win at 2:15.09.

Horne stroked to a win in the 200 individual medley at 2:48 and teamed with Kevin Hurt, Craig Bunker, and Winkler to win the 400 freestyle relay in 4:36.41.

Other winners for the Lions included Donnie McCuish in the 200 free at 2:48.48, Dan Davidson in the 500 free at 7:33.85, Jensen in the 100 back at 1:10.95, and Chris McCown in the 100 breast at 1:27.2.

The girls meet saw a little more action coming from the Seminole side as junior Cissy Burgess led all competitors by taking two individual firsts. Burgess almost lapped the competition in the 200 I.M. with her 2:41.89 clocking and then powered her way to a victory in the 100 breaststroke with a winning time of 1:26.64.

The Lady Seminole's only other win came from Kristy Merriwether in the 50 free at 35.8.

For Oviedo, Yvette Stillwell led the team victory with her two relay wins and an individual triumph. Stillwell won the 100 fly at 1:34.85 and then teamed with Heather McCuish, Dawn Jones, and Erin Munns in the 200 medley relay to win in 2:42. Stillwell then teamed with Amy Michael, Munns, and Nicki Tolbert to claim the 400 free relay in 5:41.27.

Other victories for the Lady Lions included Tolbert in the 200 free (3:22), Munns in the 100 free (1:21.01), Michael in the 500 free (7:45.23), and McCuish in the 100 back (1:36.98).

been running well as of late. Padgett placed eighth in the prestigious invitational at Gainesville with a 16:22 clocking.

Lake Brantley's Darrin Tugman and Matt Jewell also figure to be at the front of the race along with Seminole's Jason Kaiser. Lake Howell's Kavan Howell and Jason Springhart lead the Silver Hawk charges and will vie for a top five place. Lake Mary's Bob Robertson has shown steady improvement along with Seminole's Dalvin Davis and both should contend for a top ten place.

In the girls team race it should come down to a three way battle, again, with Lake Howell being the favorite going into the race. The Lady Silver Hawks are Florida's third ranked class 4A team and has led the county all season. Lake Brantley turned in a strong performance over the weekend and are the state's fifth ranked class 4A team. Lake Mary is ranked seventh in class 4A and ran well over the weekend also.

The individual race should come down to Lake Brantley's Heather Camino and Lake Mary's Allison Snell. Both finished in the top ten this past weekend and both ran their best time of the season.

Lake Brantley's Joyce Tullis will also look to contend for the championship along with Lake Howell's Sheryl Palumbo and Monica Compton. Lake Howell's Michelle Cook, Jenny Bolt and Natalie Weiberry along with Lake Mary's Meisha Abbaesjad should also look to be with the frontrunners.

costing them only one district loss. A return to early-season form will make Lyman a force in the race.

In 5A-District 4's second division are Lake Mary, Lake Howell and DeLand (all 2-3, 1-2) with Mainland bringing up the rear (0-5, 0-4).

"We're going to go 7-3," said Lake Howell coach Mike Bisceglia with a laugh, adding seriously, "The potential's there. The kids are steadily improving. It's an up-and-down thing."

"With all the youth we have, when they do what they're supposed to do, they look good. Then they break down."

Ability hasn't been the problem for the Silver Hawks; execution has been. Against Lake Brantley last Friday, Lake Howell had a 16-14 lead in the fourth quarter, but couldn't hold on to it.

"It's like a fine-tuned machine," explained Bisceglia. "If one cog isn't working right, the whole machine doesn't work right. That's been our weakness. Every time we break down, it seems to be a crucial point of the game and right at the point of attack."

Lake Mary coach Harry Nelson had much the same feelings. "Right now, I think Lake Brantley's in the driver's seat in the district and Oviedo's in the driver's seat in the conference," said Nelson matter-of-factly. "We've played well enough to win a couple more games and didn't."

"The teams are so even, the difference between winning and losing is very close."

Looking to the stretch-run of the season, Nelson doesn't see any changes to be made, except in the area of execution.

"We're not going to make any changes," he said. "We're going to try to do the things we did in the first half better."

"A win this week (against Lake Howell) is very important. We can't falter any more."

Justice is served with an Eagle Badge

PAOLA — Scott Justice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe F. Justice III recently received an Eagle Badge at an Eagle Court of Honor. The award, the highest given to a Boy Scout, was given to Scott during the ceremony at the Paola Woods Day Care Facility.

Scoutmaster Robert E. Brown officiated the ceremony, aided by Assistant Scoutmasters Dennis Butler, F.C. Irrgang, Wayne Keeling, and Howard King. Members of Troop 529 taking part in the ceremony were Kent Butler, Pat Gerrity, and Senior Patrol Leader Bill Litton.

On his trail to becoming an Eagle Scout, Justice earned 10 skill awards, the 21 merit badges required for an Eagle Badge, and an additional 14 merit badges. Justice held six different posts with the troop. His Eagle project consisted of organizing the members of Troop 529 in a door-to-door food drive which resulted in 842 non-perishable food items donated to the Sanford Christian Sharing Center.

Justice is the 14th scout from Troop 529 in Paola to achieve the Eagle rank. Only two percent of all scouts nationally receive this award.

Scott Justice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Justice III, received his Eagle Badge recently in an Eagle Court of Honor.

New wife confused about husband's relationships

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a widower whose wife had several sisters. They constantly call him on the phone, ask him to do favors, invite him places, etc. He feels obligated to accept their invitations. I don't see why he feels obligated to attend functions, do favors and be available at their whim, but he does. This one sister had her eye on him herself, and sends him "favorite brother-in-law" cards that could be taken the wrong way. Abby, his wife is dead.

I know this is a dumb question, but is he still related to these people? It seems to me that the relationship ended when his wife died. Personally, I am getting tired of going places because he gets a call from one of them. We recently had a picnic and invited our friends. Of course, my friends did not know these people, whom he felt obligated to invite, so I said, "Oh, that's his first wife's family." Meanwhile, I kept asking myself, "Why are they here?"

Am I being picky? Shouldn't these old relationships be put aside? He now has new relarelationships to build on.

NEW WIFE: "Old relationships" cannot be put aside like a pair of worn-out shoes—nor should they be. Although he is no longer legally related to these people, he is comfortable with them after many years and feels that they are "family." Do not demand that he drop them to be replaced instantly by your friends. Go slowly, if you want a happy, lasting marriage with this man.

DEAR ABBY: When I travel by plane during the daytime, I like to look out and see the clouds, mountains, farmlands and little towns below. So, what am I supposed to do when the flight attendant says, "Please close your window shades?"

NO MOVIES, THANKS
DEAR NO MOVIES: Since you are in the minority and the light is distracting, be a good sport and pull your shade down.

Labor Party plans Arab participation in talks

United Press International

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israel's Labor Party, running neck-and-neck in the polls with its right-wing rival, says it will initiate a three-point peace plan for the occupied territories if it wins next month's national elections.

In an unusual joint news conference Monday, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said the first step of the three-point plan would be talks with the United States and the renewal of the initiative by Secretary of State George Shultz to convene an international Middle East peace conference. The second phase would be the formation of a delegation by Jordan.

The third step would be the selection of a Palestinian delegation from the territories "chosen ... in free elections after a period of calm and quiet" lasting six months, Rabin said.

The two men said their party would initiate the three-point plan during its first year in office if it wins the Nov. 1 election.

Polls show Labor running even with the right-wing Likud Party, which advocates Israeli sovereignty over the West Bank and Gaza Strip and limited autonomy for Arab residents there.

A violent uprising against 21 years of Israeli occupation has gripped the West Bank and Gaza Strip for more than 10 months. Nearly 300 Palestinians have been killed.

Rabin said the Palestinian delegates had to be residents of the territories and could not belong to the Palestine Liberation Organization. Previous Labor proposals called for the appointment of Palestinian delegates agreeable to Israel but not direct elections.

The Labor proposal seeks to revive the "Jordanian option," with Jordan as an active participant in the peace process. Jordan's King Hussein scuttled the option July 31 by withdrawing all claims to the West Bank, which Jordan ruled for 19 years.

"It is impossible to reach peace with Jordan alone or with a representative from the territories alone," Rabin said. "We need to sit with both of them around the negotiating table."

Rabin said if no Palestinian-Jordanian delegation was formed within a year, elections would be held in Gaza to form a local administration.

Earlier Monday, Israeli soldiers shot and wounded at least 17 Palestinians during scattered confrontations in the West Bank and Gaza, Palestinian sources said. An army spokesman said he had reports of two wounded Palestinians.

In the Moslem Quarter of Jerusalem's walled Old City, a small homemade bomb exploded Monday night near the apartment of Cabinet Minister Ariel Sharon.

No injuries or damage were reported, police spokesman Rafi Levy said.

Soldiers in the area shot in the direction from where the bomb was thrown, but no suspects were apprehended. A guard is stationed permanently outside Sharon's home.

The right-wing minister's move to the quarter was condemned by Palestinians and left-wing Israelis as a provocation.

In other developments, police arrested two unidentified Israeli Arabs in connection with the shooting death of a West Bank Palestinian suspected of collaborating with Israeli authorities.

The arrest of the two suspects marked the first time Israeli Arabs have been implicated in the killing of a suspected collaborator. At least 12 Arabs suspected of actively cooperating with Israeli authorities have been killed since the beginning of the Palestinian uprising Dec. 9.

Israel bans controversial movie

United Press International

JERUSALEM — Censors banned distribution of the controversial American movie "The Last Temptation of Christ," saying the film would offend Christians in the Holy Land and violate Israeli law.

"It's not that the film deals with some small aspect of Christianity," said Joshua Justman, chairman of the Israeli Film Censorship Board. "What is in the film deals with the very fundamental tenets of the Christian faith. This is no small matter."

The board Monday voted 21-3 with two abstentions in prohibiting the distribution of "The Last Temptation of Christ," the controversial film by U.S. director Martin Scorsese that has provoked outrage worldwide for its portrayal of Jesus.

The board's decision was believed to be the first time the Universal Pictures production has been banned since it opened Aug. 12 in the United States to protests from outraged Christians, vows of support from movie directors and mixed reviews.

"My reaction to it is a scandal and a stupid act," said Ilan Devries, deputy director of Jerusalem's Cinematheque, a major Israeli moviehouse and cultural center across the valley from the traditionally accepted site of the Last Supper.

"Obviously we are against banning of any film," Devries said. "We are against censorship, period. This decision is out of the question."

On opening day in New York, an estimated 1,000 protesters demonstrated against the $6.5 million film, based on the 1955 best-selling novel by Nikos Kazantzakis, a Greek Orthodox.

Some protests took on an anti-Semitic tone, with protesters bearing signs reading "Bankrolled by Jewish Money" outside the Beverly Hills home of the Jewish chairman of MCA, Universal's parent company.

Kazantzakis, and Scorsese in the film, present the young Jesus as a weak-willed collaborator who builds crosses used by the Romans to crucify Jewish rebels and later as a man confused about his divine mission.

In the film, the dying Jesus is shown on the cross hallucinating about the devil's final temptation, which is to renounce his role as Messiah and marry Mary Magdalene. The hallucination sequence includes footage of Jesus having sex with Mary Magdalene.

"The film touches on the very tenets of the Christian faith, and the board felt that showing it would be offensive to the religious feeling of the Christian community," Justman said.

Showing the film in Israel also would violate Israeli law that prohibits offending the religious feelings and faith of others, Justman said. The board received a "large number" of letters urging Israeli censors to prohibit distribution of the film.

Justman said the board was not pressured by the critics. "This is after all where Christ was born and lived, so the feelings are much stronger and people view it as a holy place," he said.

Under censorship procedures, the board can be asked to hear arguments to overturn its decision. If the board affirms its decision to ban the film's distribution, the ruling can be appealed to Israel's High Court of Justice.
