

Sanford's New Bank Starts Next Month

Seminole County Bank Will Be The Third One Of Prominent Business Men Of Seminole County

The Seminole County Bank is the name of Sanford's latest banking institution. The articles of incorporation are published in this issue and will be of interest to the public, as every one has been on the qui vive for many days awaiting the announcement of the incorporators and directors and officers.

The original incorporators are as follows: Forrest Lake, D. L. Thrasher, A. T. Rosetter, Joe Cameron, N. H. Garner, F. L. Woodruff and T. E. Wilson.

The officers and directors will be Forrest Lake, president; D. L. Thrasher, vice president; ———, cashier; and Forrest Lake, D. L. Thrasher, A. P. Connelly, A. T. Rosetter, Joe Cameron, T. E. Wilson, N. H. Garner, F. L. Woodruff, W. H. Wight, J. C. Bennett and John Meisch as directors.

The capital stock of the bank will be Fifty Thousand Dollars.

The Seminole County Bank expects to open the doors for business about September 15th and the success of the new institution is already assured.

The board of directors is a strong one, being composed of the solid business men of the city and surrounding country.

The feature of the Seminole County Bank is the fact that it will be strictly a home institution and every one of its officers and directors are residents here and engaged in business and in building up the city of Sanford and the celery delta.

The large increase in business along every line during the past year made the field for another bank in Sanford and this city will have three strong financial institutions, the First National Bank, the Peoples Bank and the Seminole County Bank.

The president of the new bank and prime mover is Hon. Forrest Lake who has grown up to manhood's estate in this county and by his own efforts and indomitable pluck and energy demonstrates that the south holds out the strongest inducements for the young man who is willing to work. Mr. Lake in his early youth showed a remarkable aptitude for business and politics and many years ago was the mayor of Sanford and engaged in the manufacture of ice. Going to Cuba during the Spanish war he managed a large ice plant in Santiago and made good. The love for Sanford lured him home again and about seven years ago he returned here and purchased the Sanford Ice and Water Co., and also owned the Sanford Ice Co. With his multitudinous duties he also found time to devote to the city's affairs and was honored by the people two terms as mayor and two terms as Representative from Orange county. He has always been identified with public affairs and is a progressive of the pronounced type, being president of the Commercial Club and in the forefront of all public matters. He is also a director in the Heard National Bank of Jacksonville and is honored and esteemed not only in Sanford but throughout the state of Florida.

D. L. Thrasher, the vice president is another young and progressive business man who has been in Sanford since the early days and stood by the city in weal and woe. For many years he was engaged in the clothing business, selling cloth to become a druggist and being appointed superintendent of public instruction for Seminole has disposed of his business interests to devote his time to educational matters. Mr. Thrasher served two terms as alderman and has ever been a public spirited citizen in the fullest sense of the word.

The other directors are equally as well known as the officers.

A. P. Connelly, for years superintendent of the Seaboard and an officer of the A. C. L. until ill health forced him to relinquish his work. He assisted materially in starting the Sanford Building & Loan Association, the Sanford & Everglades Ry., the Sanford Tractor Co. and many other enterprises. He is secretary of the Building & Loan Association and has become a state authority on building associations. He was general manager of the S. & E. and the Sanford Tractor. He is also engaged in the insurance and real estate business.

T. Rosetter, Joe Cameron and John Meisch are prominent growers and business men who have made good in the celery delta by their progressive methods.

More Paved Streets For Seminole's Capital

Sanford The First City In The South For Streets

With The Many Streets Now Being Paved Sanford Has More Miles Of Brick Streets

With all the brick paving already put down on Sanford streets the city council is going ahead with the good work and a gang of men are busy this week finishing the stretch on French avenue from Seventh street to Ninth street. This will make a belt line of brick almost two miles in length and will give the public two routes to the depot.

The Atlantic Coast Line also has a large force of men laying brick on Ninth street from the branch line to the building and all the approaches will also be bricked, making this new structure one of the finest in the south.

With the many side streets that have been bricked lately Sanford now holds the prize for being the best paved city of the south and one can travel almost anywhere in the city and never leave a brick. The new idea of making the side streets nine feet wide is being watched with much interest and if this width proves popular with the public all the Seminole county roads will be made nine feet wide. The main business thoroughfare of Sanford is sixty feet wide and the side streets that were laid several years ago are all wide streets, much wider than the average city at Sanford and our beautiful streets are the wonder of the stranger, being our most valuable asset.

At the present rate of making brick streets Sanford will have over fifteen miles of brick streets. Living the pioneer in the making of brick streets Sanford seems destined to keep up the pace and leads the cities of Florida in this great work of development.

Sanford and Seminole county is looked upon as the most progressive in the matter of good streets and county roads.

Seminole County Cases

The litigation in the courts of Orange county which are to be transferred to Seminole county have all been counted out, and the file cases containing them were all piled up on a desk in Clerk H. M. Robinson's office yesterday.

They had been separated with respect to the attorneys who were managing the cases. There were probably two hundred of them, though nobody had taken the trouble to count them. Many of them were cases that had been brought from time to time and covering a period of some years in the name of the city of Sanford on municipal government here, and there were many others.

Clerk Robinson has a neat little sum in the way of costs tied up in the litigation, which will probably be paid before the papers were turned over to Seminole county.

Messrs. Johnson and DuBois, who are digging out the figures for settlement between the two counties according to the terms of the agreement reached between the county boards are getting along satisfactorily with their work. Their figures will be submitted to the boards of the two counties before they will be given out as final.—Orlando Sentinel.

Desperate Young Negro

A negro youth about 14 years of age named Willie Ware was in the county court on Tuesday on the charge of cutting two young negro girls. He is the same boy who about a year ago cut young Joe Miot with a knife and he had just returned from the county jail for this offense and having some difficulty with the girls started to carrying them up and only a miracle saved the life of one of them. Judge Whitner decided to salt Willie away in a state reform school, where he will learn a trade unless he is set free and where he will have no chance to cut any one for some time.

Tried In Seminole

In the habeas corpus proceedings argued before Judge John W. Perkins yesterday at DeLand, it was determined that Arnold Baxter, the alleged cattle thief should be tried in Seminole county, but the effort to reduce his bond from two thousand dollars to eight hundred was not considered with favor by the Judge. While the cattle were stolen from Orange county citizens, they were butchered in Seminole county, and the crime has been charged to Baxter, near whose slaughter pen the buried hides were found.—Reporter-Star.

Other News And Bits Of Gossip Cleared From Here And There In Florida

John P. Stokes, representing Dr. C. W. D'Alemberte, has brought suit against the Western Union Telegraph Company in the circuit court at Pensacola, and claims $2,000 for negligence and carelessness on the part of the telegraph company in handling a message. It is alleged that a few weeks ago Mrs. D'Alemberte was visiting in North Carolina. She sent a message to the doctor to the effect that she would leave for Rome, Ga., to visit relatives and would spend the night at the Piedmont Hotel at Atlanta, and when the message was delivered it was so garbled as to read that she would leave for home, and the doctor prepared for her return and made a trip to Flomston to meet her. He sent messages to various points, including the city where she had been visiting. It was not until she had reached home and sent a telegram of her safe arrival that his mind became easy. It will be the first suit entered under the provision known as the "mental anguish" law.

Celebrated His Birthday

Dr. L. F. Webster, landlord of the New Hotel, Longwood, received a large gathering of friends and neighbors on the spacious porch of the hotel Sunday afternoon, August 17th to celebrate his 76th birthday. All extended congratulations and good wishes and a few gifts were presented.

Dr. Webster made a short address, giving a sketch of his life, and the great changes that had taken place in the past seventy-one years. Dr. Webster was born in the town of North Bridgewater, Mass., what is now known as the city of Brockton, Aug. 17th, 1837. He was in the practice of medicine in New England for four years, but since coming south fifteen years ago has been engaged in hotel business more or less. Rev. Mr. Hardaway of Longwood and others made very pleasing remarks on the occasion and it was a day long to be remembered. All extended best wishes for success and prosperity to Dr. Webster and family, and the future of Longwood's town hotel, which is open to the public, and it will be the pleasure of Dr. Webster and wife to serve their guests at all times with the very best.

Putting in Elevator

Workmen are busy this week tearing out the walls of the front part of the West front and two upper rooms of the Peabody building for the installation of a fine elevator service. This will make the Wilborne block one of the most convenient office buildings in this section and will also be of great help to the court house and the officials. Instead of climbing the golden stairs to the heights above as formerly the general public can take the lift and be there in a jiffy, as all the county offices are on the second floor and the court room and offices of other kinds are on the third floor the elevator service will be greatly appreciated and the Seminole county court house will be one of the few temples of justice in the state that can boast of an elevator service.

New Patent Sprayer

The Geo. H. Fernald Co. is demonstrating a new sprayer this week that will revolutionize the spraying business in the celery delta. The pipes will be made to fit any kind of cart or wagon and the bordeaux or other mixture is forced out of the sprayer by gasoline engine placed on the wagon. By the patent sprinker the mixture is given out to the celery in a fine and uniform mist, thus obviating the large quantity on a few plants as the old method formerly used. The objection to the bordeaux mixture raised by the government last season cannot be sustained when the growers use the new sprayer and the Myron system. The demonstration at the Fernald store has been witnessed by many of the growers and several of them have already placed an order for the outfit.

Had a Great Time

Messrs. Thrasher, Douglas and Hand attended the basket picnic at Chubuta yesterday and they state that they never before did get quite so much to eat or have such a good time. They were the guests of the Juggernaut and the Sunday school class. Mrs. Tilden Jacobs and the entertainment and picnic were all that could be desired. The Herald would like to ask why Tilden Jacobs pulled off this stunt on Thursday—a day that no newspaper man could ever take for a vacation.

Messrs. The work is proceeding as well as expected, and very satisfactory headway is being made. It is no small job, however, and sometime will be required to complete the work before then.—Orlando Sentinel.

DRY KANSAS

Many Funny Stories Being Circulated About the Drought

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 22.—Drought conditions in southeast Kansas, in the vicinity of St. Joseph, Mo., and in the Wichita, Kans., district, were little better today than before the first showers in weeks fell last Saturday. Blacksmiths are working day and night repairing farm implements gone to pieces because of heat shrunken wooden parts. Wagon wheels are falling apart. Automobile owners say the heat is ruining their cars, burning the woodwork till the paint scales off and scorching the wheels until the spokes shrink and rattle in the hubs.

Many new wells are being dug and hardware dealers doing double business in windmills. Many farmers are using tractors for plowing by day and harnessing them to pumps by night. Nearly every farm is surrounded by plowed fire guards, as a spark in the dry grass and wheat stubble would start a conflagration. Many farmers whose supply of feed has been ruined are feeding their hogs wheat because it is cheaper than corn.

Strange stories of heat pranks come from all parts of the state.

From Alma comes a report, vouched for by one of the city fathers, that a woman in a moment of desperation, wishing to verify or kill forever the old story of frying an egg in the sun, had prepared a fresh laid one nicely in a skillet with butter and "fried it to a T" on a flagstone before her door with only the sun for heat.

Fire which did nearly a thousand dollars damage in the home of Dr. Theodore Kroesch at Enterprise was attributed by the doctor to the sun's rays shining through a lamp chimney in his study window upon papers on a desk.

MODEL INSTITUTION

Mix-Up in Asylum for Insane When Governor and Mayor Meet.

By GEORGE MUNSON.

The State insane asylum at Pottersfield was a model institution. It represented the last word that had been uttered upon the subject of the mentally deranged. Although the rooms for the insane were arranged in a circle, secured by double doors, they were splendidly furnished, while for those who were harmless there was little or no restriction inside the spacious grounds. In fact, when it celebrated its fifth anniversary by a garden party, the governor, the mayor and a score of distinguished guests, their wives and their friends, walked freely within the walls, investigating, talking with keepers and inmates, penetrating into every nook and cranny. There was no skeleton in the Pottersfield asylum, nor any blemish to be concealed.

Thus it happened that two men met in one of the spacious corridors, and made friendly by the festive occasion and the dinner, at which visitors, guards and patients had sat down together, entered into conversation.

"This is a beautiful place," said the older, a dignified gentleman wearing a frock coat and carrying a silk hat in his hand. "Though I am mainly responsible for its having been created, I confess that I am astonished at the perfection of all the details."

The other shot a keen glance at him. "You were responsible, sir?" he asked.

"Yes," said the other. "I am Governor Pike, you know."

"I'm very pleased to make your acquaintance, governor," said the other, grasping the speaker's hand warmly. "I was late for the dinner or I should have met you before. I am the mayor of Pottersfield—Arthur Jenkinson Grubbe."

The first man retreated a step. "Indeed, Mr. Mayor? I am delighted to meet you, even here," he said, with a forced smile. "Shall we go outside?"

"I'd prefer to show you something of our arrangements first, governor," the other responded. "Won't you walk ahead of me? I know this institution pretty well, seeing that I laid the foundation stone during my first term of office."

The governor complied, somewhat grudgingly. "I suppose you have some interesting cases here," he said, with a display of interest. "Many of them doubtless think that they are sane."

"Most of them do," answered the other. "The majority of them imagine that they are celebrities confined for political reasons. For instance, out on the lawn at this moment there is a man engaged in telling his friends and acquaintances that he is Mayor Arthur Jenkinson Grubbe."

"But he isn't," stammered the governor. "You are the mayor and nobody else can claim the title. By the way, aren't you related to King George of England?"

Arthur Jenkinson Grubbe stood still and stared at the other in amazement. "How did you know that?" he whispered huskily. "Yes, I'm his half-brother. And to be frank with you," he continued, "I am also a half-brother of King Ferdinand of Bulgaria. In fact we used to play together on the board walk at Atlantic City when we were children. Won't you walk this way?"

"You amaze me!" responded Governor Pike.

"And you—you look as though you were of kingly blood," the mayor continued, with a searching glance.

"Yes, yes," said Governor Pike hastily. "That is, queenly. I am a sister by marriage of the princess of Montenegro."

"Why, that's extraordinary," said the mayor. "Do you know, there is a lady in one of these apartments who claims to be the princess of Montenegro herself!"

"My sister," cried the governor. "You amaze me!"

"But to be frank with you, governor, I am afraid a dreadful error has been made. I hardly care to mention it, but we have never believed her statement. How terrible if we have incarcerated a sane lady by mistake! A dreadful wrong may have been done. You must remedy it."

"I wish I could," the governor sighed, looking backward. "I think," he stammered, "that my uncle-in-law, the duke of Saratoga, who is outside, can help in this. He knows all the Montenegro family very well. Let me look back for him."

"No, no," protested the mayor, taking the governor by the arm. "She is in here reading at this moment. I know she will recognize you. We will just see her for a moment. A very interesting character, my dear sir, and a most accomplished creature. Here we are."

The outer door of the room at which they stopped, slightly ajar, disclosed an inner door within, which stood wide open, and a heavily barred window looking out upon the lawn. The two men passed through the outer door and stopped. They looked at each other menacingly. Suddenly the mayor gave the governor a violent push which sent him staggering upon the floor, slammed the inner door, and pulled at the handle of the outer one.

It was locked. It had closed behind them.

Even as the mayor realized this the inner door opened and the governor, white with rage, sprang upon his assailant, at the same time shrieking at the top of his voice. They fought all over the room.

"Help! Help!" yelled the governor, and the mayor re-echoed his shouts. They heard answering cries from the lawn-beneath. Then steps came quickly along the corridor, and the door flew open again, disclosing two disheveled and panting antagonists seated upon the floor with puffed eyes and scarred faces. Two doctors came running in.

"Governor Pike!" shouted one, hurrying toward him. "My dear governor, are you recovered? Who is this man?" he continued, turning upon his conferees angrily. "How did he get here? I told you to keep the violent patients in the padded cells all day."

"But—but this is the mayor, Mr. Arthur Jenkinson Grubbe," shouted the other. "This is a hideous mistake, sir."

"But why did he assault the governor, then? How did he get him here?"

"He told me he was the sister of the princess of Montenegro," said the mayor sullenly, as he began dusting his clothes.

"You told me you were a half-brother of King George."

"To humor you, sir; to humor you. I thought you were in the primary stage of acute mania."

"Ah, well," said the governor, stretching out his hand, which the other took reluctantly, "I believe in open primaries now. Don't let that door close, doctor."

Will Fly at Chattanooga

Green's Cardui Flyer

Chattanooga, Aug. 22.—(Special)—The Charirman of the Grand Army Entertainment Committee has closed a contract with Johnny Green, famous Cardui birdman and waterfowl, to make three flights in Chattanooga during the G. A. R. Reunion, to be held in Chattanooga September 15-20.

Green is the man who made the record flight in Cardui Flyer No. 1 over Lookout Mountain during the U. C. V. Reunion in May last. He was the first man to attempt that dangerous flight, refused by so many prominent aviators. A feature of his exhibition next month will be a flight in his Cardui Flyer No. 2, equipped with hydroplanes, up the Tennessee river. This will be the first hydroplane flight ever made by any southern aviator.

Visitors to the G. A. R. Reunion will do well not to miss these flights by the famous aviator, free to all, and should look out for the dollar bills, which he drops among the crowds below, as he goes hurtling through the air.

STOMACH TROUBLE FOR FIVE YEARS

Majority of Friends Thought Mr. Hughes Would Die, But One Helped Him to Recovery.

Pomeroyton, Ky.—In interesting advices from this place, Mr. A. J. Hughes writes as follows: "I was down with stomach trouble for five (5) years, and would have sick headache so bad, at times, that I thought surely I would die. I tried all the treatments, but they did not seem to do me any good. I got so bad, I could not eat or sleep, and all my friends, except one, thought I would die. He advised me to try Theodor's Black-Draught, and quit taking other medicines. I decided to take his advice, although I did not have any confidence in it.

I have now been taking Black-Draught for three months, and it has cured me—haven't had those awful sick headaches since I began using it.

I am so thankful for what Black-Draught has done for me."

Theodor's Black-Draught has been found a very valuable medicine for derangements of the stomach and liver. It is composed of pure, vegetable herbs, contains no dangerous ingredients, and acts gently, yet surely. It can be freely used by young and old, and should be kept in every family chest.

is to ask the vender for his credentials and a showing that the concern has a permit to do business in Florida.

If the stock offered is that of a corporation located in the county in which it is offered no permit will be necessary to make the offer. If the concern is not located in the county in which it offers its stocks or securities for sale, then the public will not only be protecting themselves, but will be assisting greatly in the administration of the law if they make it a point to find out if the salesman is a duly registered agent of a concern having a permit to do business in the state.

With the hearty cooperation of the public the investment fakirs will be driven from the state, and it is well known that Florida has suffered her share of losses from the sale of fake stocks and gold brick propositions to its citizens.

FLORIDA A GREAT CATTLE STATE Science of Feeding Beef Cattle Will Make Great Improvement

That Florida is destined to become the greatest cattle raising state east of the Mississippi is a fact that gains credence by those who have studied conditions, and a brief review of a few statistics will show the rapid growth of the cattle raising industry in the last ten years.

Climate, as an asset, has never been adequately valued by the live stock raisers of the United States. Florida possesses unlimited possibilities in this line.

With excellent transportation facilities, both rail and water, and located in close proximity to the best markets of the world, the opportunities presented will not be long neglected.

Cattle and hogs can be, and are being grown in Florida under the most favorable conditions, at the least expense and closer to remunerative markets than in any other part of the North American continent.

Florida is essentially an agricultural state. Her future depends largely upon the intelligent development of her agricultural resources. Her timber, muck, prairie and other wet lands are of great productivity and wide adaptability, while her climate is unexcelled. Upon her great agricultural resources, vast herds of cattle, sheep and hogs may subsist all the year round at nominal cost.

Hence Florida is already a great beef producing state, and the hog industry is steadily developing. At county fairs as fine cattle, hogs and sheep are exhibited as can be raised in any state.

The value of some of the various kinds of domestic animals, and of poultry and bees as reported in the United States census of 1910 was as follows:

Cattle, $9262,292; horses and colts, $4,854,699; mules and mule colts, $3,545,821; swine, $1,848,731; the total figuring, $20,591,187.

Florida's domestic animals, poultry and bees, during the ten years prior to 1911-1910 increased 84.4 per cent.

The greatest absolute increase occurred in cattle, amounting to 46 per cent., while mules showed the greatest relative increase, 229.9 per cent. Horses more than doubled in value, increasing 112 per cent. Value of swine increased 163 per cent., while the value of poultry increased 708 per cent., and that of sheep 7.4 per cent.

Florida is the only state in the Union producing cheap, nutritious roughage for cattle the year round. Rhodes grass frequently yields thirteen tons to the acre, and there are unlimited quantities of Knudzu and Bermuda grasses. Upland rice and cowpea hay is a feed for cattle, velvet beans have no superior, and hogs thrive on them, while Japanese cane is of phenomenal value.

Among many other advantages, cattle raisers in this state are the following facts:

Native cattle graze out all the year obviating the labor and expense of winter feeding.

A large part of the state is free for grazing purposes, affording and cheap range year in and year out.

Unlimited quantities of nutritious roughage of all kinds for cattle can be produced 12 months in the year.

Hog raising is equally successful. Hogs get fat on nuts and make gains that cost owners practically nothing.

The corn crop of the state approximates 10,000,000 bushels annually, but the corn grower is independent of corn, as the velvet bean furnishes an even better and more easily produced concentrate.

Florida by producing a forage of such value is obviously in a position to demonstrate its capacity for beef and pork production, industries now lagging elsewhere, owing to the high cost of feed and steady increase in land values.

Her beef industry should quadruple within the next five years.—Fort Lauderdale Sentinel.

CRIPPLE HAD THE SPEED

Sprinter Who Has Established Records Found Himself Far Outclassed in Chase.

John C. Hammond, who steered publicity for Wilson during the campaign, has returned to New York from the flood district of the west. Mr. Hammond is about as heavy as a hairpin. Any time that he can get properly startled he can sink the intercollegiate sprinting record on a route of ground.

"One day," says Hammond, "I walked through a street in Columbus, Ohio. Ahead of me I spied a man hobbling painfully on two crutches. Suddenly I heard the cry: 'Dam's busted! Run for your lives!'"

"So I ran for my life. On ahead I could see the cripple getting over the ground like a giant swing. By and by I caught up to him. In natural compassion I sought to aid him, but he shook me off.

"You carry these crutches, mister," said the unfortunate, "and give a cripple a chance."

Mr. Hammond further alleges that it was almost an hour later before he finally succeeded in running down the cripple in the uplands of Columbus and returning his crutches.—New York Times.

Triumphant Blind Man.

Dr. Jacob W. Bolotin, who has just been appointed attending physician at the tuberculosis hospital of the Dunning Asylum, Chicago, is not only blind, but is the first blind man who has ever taken the full course of four years in medicine and passed the present Illinois examination for medicine and surgery. He is only twenty-five years of age, but has examined 3500 patients at the municipal tuberculosis hospital in the last fourteen months. His diagnosis is made wholly by touch. He can give the exact temperature by feeling the skin, and an exact pulse without the aid of a watch. At fourteen he graduated from the Illinois State Hospital for the Blind, and traveled over the country selling typewriters, finally earning money to enable him to study medicine.

Wholesale Invitation.

There have been many innocent mistakes made by parsons. Among them is one told of a certain clergyman who left a notice in his pulpit to be read by the preacher who exchanged with him. The minister neglected to denote carefully a private postscript, and the people were astonished to hear the stranger end by saying "You will please come to dine with me at the parsonage after service."

She Remembered.

Minnie, aged two years, asked her mother's permission to throw away some flowers, as they were dead, she said. Her mother corrected her and told her to say "withered," not "dead." The following day a military funeral was passing and the baby astonished everyone by saying "Come here quick, mother; someone else has withered!"

Mother's Way.

A friend of mine, a teacher, had just received a very handsome fan, and took it to the classroom for the edification of the children. Selecting one of the pupils, she asked what the lovely thing was. The child did not know. "What does your mother use to keep her cool in summer?" asked the teacher. "Beer," was the reply.

Embarrassed Police Sergeant.

Cause for Worry.

Friend—"Why, Elvira, what's the matter?" Elvira—"Oh, I don't know, only I'm worried to death! I've had the same girl six weeks, and she doesn't talk about leaving yet!" Friend—"She doesn't?" Elvira—"No, not a word! She must be in love with my husband!"—London Opinion.

Laughter Pays Well.

Laughing as a business-getter attracts favorable attention, makes pleasant impressions, transforms gruffness into cheerfulness and leaves the work done with a contented after-feeling.

Courage Most Needed.

The greater part of the courage that is needed in the world is not of an heroic kind. Courage may be displayed in every day life as well as in historic fields of action. There needs, for example, the common courage to be honest, the courage to resist temptation, the courage to speak the truth, the courage to be what we really are, and not to pretend to be what we are not, the courage to live honestly within our means.—Smiles.

Have you anything to say,

His Finest.

Jones—"Do you know, I fancy I have quite a literary bent." Friend—"All right, my boy. Keep on and you'll be worse than bent; you'll be broke."

DUST VERSUS HEALTH

Obsolete Methods Of Cleaning Menace To The Health Of The Household

State Board of Health

The feather duster is a crime against society!

In the hands of the irresponsible servant or in those of her intelligent mistress, it scatters the bacteria of tuberculosis and spreads the germs of suffering and death. The utter uselessness of this implement to accomplish what it is intended to accomplish should relegate it to the scrap heap or to the mantel as a bit of bric-a-brac. Presumably it is a tool for cleaning, for removing the accumulations of dirt particles which floating in the air eventually find lodging on exposed surfaces. The duster dislodges it, scatters it, fills the air with it and permits it to find new resting places or to return to the spot from which it has been removed. The only real good that has been gained is the satisfaction that comes to the zealous housewife, who imagines that she has really "dusted." The modern housewife has banished it from her home. She uses the dampened cloth and when it is filled with the gathered dirt, it is taken out of doors and vigorously shaken in the wind. After using it is consigned to the laundry.

The Florida State Board of Health through the twenty five years of its official existence, has waged a war against uncleanness. It has urged upon the people a campaign of education, by which it has sought to warn against the dangers that lurk in unsuspected corners and cracks and crevices. And this campaign is bearing fruit. The feather duster has been one of the objects of special antipathy by the board, and it has endeavored to drive it from the public places, from public conveyances and from the homes.

The great transportation companies, which control public conveyances—some of them, at least—have been impressed with these ideas of sanitation and have taught their servants, those that come into contact with the traveling public, the necessity of neatness and cleanliness. The feather duster has been removed from the Pullman Company's sleepers and chair and dining cars. It has been replaced by the cloth, usually dampened, with which the accumulated dust is removed from seats and window ledges while passengers occupy these conveyances. The old way would have been to flit the feathers over the dust laden places, fill the air with the disturbed and possibly germ laden silt for the travelers to inhale to their great inconvenience, discomfort and danger.

But not all these great corporations operating in Florida have this consideration for their patrons. At more than one semi-terminal, where railroads cross and exchange traffic, it is the practice for railroad employees to enter the passenger coaches, usually partly or wholly filled with travelers, and vigorously sweep the accumulated debris from the aisles, and this without the suggestion of a drop of water wherewith to sprinkle the filthy floors. Repeated protests from passengers have brought no returns and it would seem that the responsible employers, have no power or authority to stop the dangerous practice—tacit confession of weakness, or is it simply carelessness?

It is but fair to note and comment upon the results of the efforts of the state health officers to lead the people of Florida to better ideas of sanitation. Floridians generally appear to appreciate more keenly than those of many other states, perhaps more than those of all other states, the vital importance of public sanitation.

When the constant and wide prevalence of pulmonary tuberculosis is realized, more often than not in every public place, whether it be the theater, the church or the club house, the danger of those who are free from the disease may be appreciated. The habit of spitting is said to be distinctly American. Perhaps that is one reason why tuberculosis is more prevalent in this country than in any other on earth. Certainly the habit is widespread in the United States, and that it is a habit is shown by the lack of inclination to expectorate in private homes and in places where no receptacle is provided.

Several months ago the streets of Jacksonville were liberally placarded with warnings against spitting on sidewalks and promising a penalty for infractions of the rules. The signs were posted under the authority of the City Health Department and the offence was therefore under the jurisdiction of the city court. So far as is known, not a single arrest has been made in Jacksonville for this misdemeanor and a careful observation shows that the habit, quite generally prevalent before, has vanished from the streets of the city.

A sense of common decency has practically banished the filthy practice from the street cars of the city, greatly to the advantage of the traveling multitudes. The moral effect of these signs has been strong in stopping the unnecessary practice. It has proven the existence in the normal citizen of the desire, at least a dormant willingness, to be clean and to regard a very important factor in public sanitation and cleanliness.

In these very modern days the doctors and health officials of the cities and states are making it much easier to attain advanced age by lessening the multitude of bacterial dangers that have threatened us on ever's hand. At least, they have instructed the people how to avoid these dangers. They have lowered our death rates and our sick rates by teaching us how to take care of ourselves.

FLORIDA'S BLUE SKY LAW

Investment Fakirs Cannot Operate Longer in This State

Tallahassee, Aug. 18. In view of the fact that stock venders and investment fakirs have enjoyed some mighty good pickings among the unsuspecting public of Florida, especially during the last few years, it is well to note some of the provisions of the act of the recent legislature with regard to stock salesmen, which became effective on July 1.

This law is generally known as the "Blue Sky Law." It is now unlawful to offer for sale outside of the county in which the company may be located, the stocks, bonds or securities of any control of the railroad commission, without an official permit.

This is a very wholesome piece of legislation and is more far reaching than many would suppose upon first reading of the act. It requires every concern located in or out of the state except those specially exempted as enumerated above before offering for sale any of their stocks, or character outside of the county in which they are located, to submit to the comptroller complete financial statements and get a permit signed by the comptroller and attorney general. The law requires also that when the company is given such a permit that they register every agent and a registration certificate is given every agent.

Before the comptroller and attorney general may issue to any investment company a permit to sell its stocks, bonds or securities in this state they must make such examination of the concern and of their plans of doing business as will satisfy them that the concern has a fair, just and equitable proposition to offer, but the law does not permit the comptroller and attorney general to recommend any company's securities.

The investing public should be slow to buy any kind of stock or security offered them until they have satisfied themselves that it is no gold brick proposition and the "blue sky law" makes this easy to do. All that is necessary

Office in Herald Building Telephone No. 148

Seminole county court house will have an elevator service. Can you beat it?

Garden county with Winter Garden the county seat is the proper stunt to pull off.—Winter Garden Times.

Sanford will have three banks and all of them good, solid institutions. This demonstrates that Sanford is growing some.

Mr. Myers will hold a primary to decide who should be postmaster. This is the most progressive way for the post-office matters to be settled.

Sanford needs an up town ticket office and the Atlantic Coast Line officials should be approached in the matter. It would be of great convenience to the travelling public.

The Times-Union will devote a page to poultry with an eminent authority, as editor of the chicken dope. This feature of the T.-U. should be recognized by the farmers.

Senator Stokes is taking advantage of his mental anguish bill by taking the first case in Pensacola against the telegraph company. Stokes evidently knew what he was doing when he framed that bill.

Huerta of Mexico comes down from his perch and now acts like he really believes there is some country to the north of him. Harry Floyd will not need to head the Coca-Cola Rifles that way for some time to come.

Almost anything is better than the present currency system, hence the bankers and the business men alike want something done by Congress to put the currency on a sounder basis. Further, most of them are agreed on the remedy.

Editor Howard of the Orlando Citizen says that though he is willing to print the laws he does not endorse them. How sad! Had we known that Mr. Howard did not endorse these laws we would never have printed them in The Herald.

"Sanford Trying to Locate Post Office" says a head line in the Tampa Tribune. Folks in Bobhollyville must have been pretty careless to lose it.—St. Augustine Record.

Havon't lost it yet, Harry. We hope to have the new building till to ourselves.

The Herald wishes to commend the city council on their building brick streets. The side streets of nine foot width seem the proper idea and if more of them can be built let us have them. The nine foot street should not be a hardship either on the city or the property owners and we can have more of them at a very reasonable price. The idea of the city laying their own streets is also commendable and economical and the aldermen deserve the praise of the citizens of Sanford for their efforts—and well directed efforts—along this line.

SEMINOLE BRICK ROADS For the benefit of the many anxious ones who have asked about the brick roads so many times The Herald wishes to call attention to the following notice that is now in this paper and this ought to satisfy the skeptical that despite the hitch in the first proceedings we intend to sell the bonds and build the roads: Notice is hereby given that the Road and Bridge District No. 1 of Seminole county, Florida, will receive bids for the purchase of $200,000 par value of Road and Bridge District No. 1 of Seminole county, Florida, bonds at Sanford, Florida, at the court house at 10 o'clock a. m., on Tuesday, Sept. 15th, 1913. Said bonds are dated January 1, 1913, payable thirty years after date in denominations of $1,000 each and bear interest at the rate of five and one-half per cent per annum, payable semi-annually on July 1st and January 1st of each year. All bidders shall accompany their bids with a certified check for $500.00, as security for compliance with bid. Both sealed and unsealed bids received. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids. Address all bids to E. A. De glass, Clerk Circuit Court, Sanford, Fla., marked Bids for Bonds for Road and Bridge District No. 1. By order of the Board.

PROGRESSIVE FLORIDA Is it any wonder that Florida is progressing at a rate which arouses the astonishment of all who come from far away sections?

As work by which goes by, winter or summer, more profit comes to the surface of the development that is bringing the best state in the Union into her own. Here a county votes for good roads, there a railroad is pushing a new artery of trade down into fertile but undeveloped territory, another place a city votes for schools, still another for bonds, great tracts of land are being developed, big manufacturing plants, immense hotels, new lands by the thousand dotted over the fair state—from the Perdido down over the counties to Key West the work splendidly goes on.

Thursday was an excellent example of the magnificent public spirit which stops at naught when community advancement—the foundation of a states' progress—is a question at issue.

On that date Orlando voted a substantial sum for brick paved streets, Ocala voted overwhelmingly for bonds for new public schools, Dunnellon followed suit, Fernandina by a ratio of nineteen to two voted bonds for water works, municipal ice plant and public wharves—in every city the vote indicated the sentiment of Florida's citizenry.

Other counties and cities are soon to vote upon similar public improvements. There is little doubt but that the improvement issue will win in each instance. With men thus loyally at work for city, county and state, can anything check Florida's advancement and growth? St. Augustine Record.

And last but not least, Sanford voted for bonds to the tune of $50,000.

THE VALUE OF PUBLICITY Though a newspaper is a business enterprise and is conducted for the purpose of making money and the merchandise in which it deals is publicity, it gives away as much as it receives pay for and its value to the community in which it is published has a price far beyond the coin that drops into its till.

Any man that has a business that he is not ashamed to call to the attention of the world and has the money to pay for his space can purchase advertising in a newspaper; but it must be a reputable business and such as a reputable paper can afford to mention in its columns. But there is only one department of the true newspaper that is for sale; that is the advertising department. The columns in which are chronicled the happenings of the day are beyond purchase and the editorial department in which are reflected the paper's opinions, is without price.

But for the very reason that these departments cannot be bought are they more precious; and mention in these columns is worth many times more to the men whose names are therein spoken of than are the advertisements that they pay for at so much per inch. Names are not called in the unobtainable spaces for the material gain that may result thereby to the paper, but because the owners of those names have earned the right to publicity, because that in some way they have achieved eminence in the community that renders their doings and sayings of interest to those who read.

Those who have climbed to the top where we are told there is always room in any of the lines of human activity and endeavor—in the law, in medicine, in the ranks of the clergy; on the stage; in the many phases of the sciences and in engineering, even in the evil eminence that crime brings, names are mentioned in the news columns because by reason of position and of achievement those names have a new value. Even in the editorial columns is there comment and expression of opinion because of the large place in the ken of the people that these men fill and the importance of their deeds in the community life.

Newspaper publicity has made, as it has marred, the success in life of many a man; without it many a career that has progressed and ended in the brilliance of victory would have lingered in obscurity and been hidden in the shadow of defeat. This reflection should cause those who direct these all-powerful agencies to exercise the greatest care and circumspection to be always just and to speak the truth that the deserving and also the unworthy be rewarded in accordance with their deserts.

The fact that these greatest of the departments of the newspaper are not for sale causes them to belong to the public in the largest sense. If the news and editorial columns could be bought they would be but parts of a private business enterprise and would be controlled through the business office. But in order for the news department to be efficient and for the opinions of the editorial page to continue to be respected they must remain the property of the public at large, purchased by no man's money. Tampa Times.

THE NEWSPAPER Looking at the map of a continent we see head lands jutting out from the shore. Some of them are mere sand spits, washed by the waves during storms, others are rocks whose summits are always above the seas, and others, again are very high and surmounted by beacons.

Whether lowly or lofty they mark the trend of the shore line and breast the waves and their force from the more landing strands.

To those promontories may be likened the newspapers of the country. Whether they stand out like a commanding Cape Horn or a low crested Cape Hatteras they are the nation's bulwarks against despotism, injustice and ignorance. The news paper is a paradox, for while any other kind of moral power cannot exist without wealth to support it, the power of the press was born and exists without material wealth. Another paradox: In other callings the product is the subject of its maker, whereas the editor is absorbed by his own product, and only his "paper," not he personally, is considered by the public.

To successfully conduct a newspaper requires a man who is born for the calling. If he cannot see above the heads of others, he cannot work without the sympathy of others, has not unlimited forbearance and charity, intact, he will not survive; but these qualities given, the editor can and does do more good for the locality he influences than all other agencies combined. He educates, for "the paper" is in many instances the only reading ever indulged in by the subscribers; he does more for good morals than courts and preachers, for the fear of "getting into the paper" is the greatest deterrent to crime; by discussing the qualities and doings of public men, and the needs of the people, he promotes good government. By making suggestions to business men and farmers and by sending his paper to remote places, introducing his town to outsiders, he promotes business and growth. We praise the telephone, the telegraph, and the rapid mail service for the quick communications they afford and the help they are to the world's business, but have you ever thought of the benefits newspaper advertising affords—how it facilitates quick buying and selling and the finding of lost things and persons?

So far we have mentioned only the more meaty benefits conferred by the newspapers. As most people, especially the women, peruse the news columns first of all, it proves that the news items are interesting and often valuable. You read about yourself and your acquaintances and become introduced to strangers. Indefinite rumors are told in a definite way. The paper praises good deeds, encourages the struggling, condoles with the sorrowing. "Please say nothing about it in the paper," "What does the paper say about it?" "When the paper comes we find out;" "I will put it in the paper," are heard all the time and show the importance of the paper.

The newspaper office is the town's information bureau. No matter how poorly equipped, it possesses a map or two, a dictionary, a "World Almanac," a railway time table, a mailing address list, a pile of exchanges, etc., as a reference library. The first place an intending settler goes to in the town is the newspaper office. When a promoter of any enterprise comes to the town, whom does he call on first of all? The editor. The first man an aspirant for office consults is the editor. No public improvement is ever undertaken, before it has been discussed in "the paper." If it is worthy the editor can find a hundred reasons why it should be made for every dozen reasons advanced by others. If not worthy, "the paper" will not support it and tell why. The evangelist and the government demonstrator, no more than the circus man, can hope to do anything in the town without the aid of "the paper." And the intending settler, living in a distant state, gets acquainted with the town and learns to like it and decides to move to it because he has read about it in "the paper"; "Mr. Editor, please send a couple of copies of your paper to this address. He thinks of moving to this state and perhaps we may induce him to come to our town," is a frequent request and in one sense shows the value of "the paper." Though very few ever offer pay for this service, the papers are invariably sent.

These multifarious little services, whereby the public and the individuals become the paper's debtors, give "the paper" its power, and this power is never used for anything but good. How long do you, dear reader, think civilization, peace, progress would hold out if newspapers should cease to be issued? And you, dear business man, what would be the state of all business a year from now if the newspapers should cease to print advertisements? And if publicity should cease to be given the deeds of public men for a few years, what would be the state of the country then?

For all this the newspaper is never appraised at its intrinsic value, and while it is a necessity to every subscriber, the debt for subscription is seldom paid before all other debts are liquidated—and perhaps not even then. This neglect of duty to the paper is a relic from bygone days when it was considered simply a matter of charity to "support the paper." That time has passed. The newspaper has redeemed itself to "fill a long felt want." These days men are actually invited to new towns to start papers; for it is well known that a newspaper is the first requisite for the upbuilding of a town. This newspaper man has come into his own at last and can demand cash in advance for his Telegram.

Baseball Extra There have been many queer baseball games, but the following clipped from a southern paper, described the queerest one yet.

The game opened up with Molasses at the stick and Smalpox catching. Cigar was in the box with plenty of spoke. Horn was on the first base and Fiddle on second. Backed by Corn in the field he made it hot for Umpire Apple, who was rotten. Az came to the bat and chopped. Cigar let Brick walk, and Sawdust filled the bases. Song made a hit and Twenty made a score. Cigar was out and Baloon tried to pitch, but went straight up; then Cherry tried it but went wild.

Old Ice kept cool till he was hit by a pitched ball, then you ought to have heard Ice Cream. Calhago had a good head and kept quiet. Grass covered lots of ground and the crowd cheered.

Broad loafed on third and pumped Organ, who played fast and put Light out. In the fifth inning Wind began to blow about what he could do. Hammer began to knock, and Trees began to leave. The way they roasted Peanut was a fright. Knife was put out for cutting third base. Lightning finished pitching the game and struck out six men.

In the ninth Apple told Fiddle to take his base and then Song made another hit. Trombone made a slide and Meat was put out on the plate.

There was lots of betting on the game but Soap cleaned up. The score was 1 to 0. Door said that if he had pitched he would have shut them out.

"Model" News Story Speaking of newspaper writing, here is a gem from the rural correspondent of the Lancaster (Pa.) Journal, sent the Tribune by a friend:

Miss Anna M. Snyder was stricken last Sunday night with acute indigestion and has been very ill ever since and on Tuesday afternoon became very ill and started to scream and her father hearing it in the yard where he was reading hurried to her apartment and at the head of the stairs ran against his wife who was hurrying down stairs to see where her husband was and the blow of them coming together knocked the Rev. down stairs backward and head foremost and he landed in the corner of the stairway on his neck and shoulders with his head wedged into the narrow corner and was lying there for over five minutes unconscious when his wife succeeded in raising his heavy body off his neck and resuscitated him and calling his neighbors they offered temporary relief until Dr. J. M. Biever arrived and rendered aid to father and daughter; Rev. W. H. Snyder is a very lucky man for his weight and build to fall the way he did and still being alive is a very marvellous escape from sudden death. Tampa Tribune.

Sent Editor Plums The following letter was received yesterday from Frank McDannel of Owasso, Mich.:

Friend Holly: Am sending you by today's "Parsons Post" a sample of our Burbank plum crop. Our trees were sure a sight this year. We have taken off 25 bushels and are still picking. Hope they will reach you in good condition. I note with pleasure the continued improvement in Sanford. Let the good work go on.

Mother sends us The Herald each week after she reads it and its a toss up between the Mrs. and I who reads it first. Kindest regards to all. Very truly yours, F. J. McDANNEl.

And the box followed and say, they were great. They are just about the finest thing in the way of plums that we have ever received and much better than the political plums that we have never received.

We return due thanks to the generous donors and assure them that the plums have gone the way that all good plums should go and when Mr. and Mrs. Mac return to Florida we will take them home in our near car.

Death of Tampa Citizen The Tampa Tribune says: J. M. Cathcart, deputy clerk of the criminal court of record and widely known as a veteran of the civil war, being for a long time commander of Camp Lejeune, died at midnight at his home, No. 1064 North Jefferson street, after a brief illness. He had been ill only since Saturday, when at 4 o'clock in the afternoon he left the court house in company with his brother, Walter, came by the Tribune office for a few minutes, then went home.

Notice Horse Owners I have a first class expert horse shaver. Give him a trial. W. H. Underwood.

FLORIDA BOOSTERS STUNT Special Advertising Train Will Leave Florida Last of September The purpose of the Florida Boosters' Special, the great statewide advertising project, has already met with a sufficient amount of endorsement that justifies the management in saying that it will be a success. We are now working on a complete itinerary which will be published just as soon as some minor details can be settled between the manager and the transportation companies. The train is to be made up of standard, first class Pullman cars for passenger service, a dining car for the convenience of meals, and a baggage car to carry the advertising matter. We expect to make the train up at Jacksonville and hope to get out of there early Sunday evening, September 28th, which will give us an all night run putting us into Birmingham or Atlanta for breakfast day morning. We are not positive that everything will be arranged to get out on this date, but are working to this end, and if the people throughout the state will get busy and give the project hearty cooperation at once we will accomplish the desired purpose. The train will make a circuitous route with Chicago at present as a terminus. However, telegraphic invitations from the trade bodies of the Twin Cities, St. Paul and Minneapolis, have been received at this office and we are urged to extend the itinerary to these cities. Sufficient stops all along the route going and coming will be made at cities and large towns for the Florida Boosters to distribute advertising matter, making speeches and live long friends for the great Sunshine State of the Sunny South. The trip will not only be enjoyable to those who avail themselves of the opportunity of going, but highly profitable to the entire state of Florida. At the present rate (and we expect to get it much cheaper) the entire trip ought not to cost more than $125.00 for each official representative. Considering the great amount of work that it is possible for a live man to do this is extremely reasonable. This estimate is based on the entire expenses, best of fare for a ten days' trip. In order to secure representation on this train it is necessary that the matter should be taken up with the manager at once stating how many representatives or persons, desire to go from your section, whether male or female and kindred relations. There will be a berth allotted to each passenger, but in arranging for me and their wives, daughters, etc., we should know the particulars so as to make it all absolutely agreeable. More definite information will be issued from time to time. For the two fold purpose of advertising this project in the state, and also to assist the management in meeting the heavy expenses of putting the proposition through successfully, we have placed on sale a beautiful silk ribbon Boosters' Badge. These are furnished at ten cents each, just a trifle over the cost of manufacture. You may greatly help this project along as a statewide advertising scheme by sending an order for a supply of these badges and distribute them in your section. They are being worn from one end of the state to the other, many individual orders for a single badge having been received and a few orders from Trade Bodies and business concerns in lots of as many as fifty badges to the lot. Inasmuch as this is the only source of revenue from which the expenses of the manager are met we urge every patriotic citizen, trade body and business concern in the state to give us liberal support. Governor Park Trammell is preparing a letter of official endorsement of the Florida Boosters' Special, which will be published at an early date, and has been invited to act as Master of Ceremonies on the trip. W. L. MARTIN, Manager. Leesburg, Florida. QUIET BOND ELECTION Very Few Voters Had Paid Poll Tax In Time to Vote Tuesday The election for bonds to the amount of $50,000, carried by a vote of 32 for and 14 against. As the majority carries the bonds can now be advertised and sold and a bunch of outstanding indebtedness taken up. There were eight who voted against bonds who loved the trustees well enough to vote for them anyhow, although how they expected the bond trustees to hold the job unless said job was created by the bonds being voted is beyond the knowledge of ordinary man. The bond election was a very tame affair and but few people seemed to take any interest in the matter although it was of vital importance to the city in taking up a bunch of indebtedness and repaying outstanding vouchers. The success of the bond issue will also enable the city council to proceed with the work of bulldozing the lake front and constructing more sidewalks, in which Sanford Heights will be paved from Tenth street to Hugley avenue. Like all questions that affect the public the said public failed to take enough interest to walk down to the polls and vote and the ones who had forgotten to pay poll tax and vote in Tuesday's election will have the most to say about the election in the future. The privilege of the humblest citizen who owns property is to have a vote on all these questions and yet the apathy displayed by the average man on public questions is absolutely painful. WHY THE CITRUS EXCHANGE FRUIT FINDS THE MOST READY SALE

FACT THAT PACK IS BEST HAS BEEN WIDELY ADVERTISED IN PAST YEARS.

One Hundred Thousand Dollars Spent to Spread the Gospel of Citrus Fruit, Has Adversely Exchanged Quality Throughout the United States.

The time has passed when any product, no matter how good it may be, can be depended on to sell itself. The merits of the goods alone will no longer find them a general and profitable market, all the big manufacturers have found out.

The Florida Citrus Exchange has recognized this fact from the beginning of its existence. Accordingly it has gone further than the effort to pack and put on the markets in the best and most economical way the finest Citrus Fruits that are grown anywhere in the world, and has taken another step and told the consumer at the other end of the line of the superiority of Florida Grapefruit and Oranges, and of the excellence of these fruits, when bought from a box bearing the Exchange trademark.

All told, in the four years that it has been in the field, the Florida Citrus Exchange has expended for advertising in the neighborhood of one hundred thousand dollars. No one associated with the Exchange in a responsible capacity would claim that all of this money has been spent to the best possible advantage; the advertising of Citrus Fruits for their quality was an unknown field when the Exchange took up the work, and a good many expenditures were made before the best methods could be determined. The general results have been increasingly satisfactory, however, and the advertising has done the State of Florida untold good. That it has contributed directly to the splendid average of prices obtained by growers affiliated with the Exchange, through a large and more steady demand for the fruit shipped by them has been conclusively shown through the investigation made in the leading markets where the advertising appears.

Salesmanship nowadays is being rapidly transferred from the person behind the counter to printed pages. If a man or woman wants to buy a ready-to-wear suit, a hat or breakfast food or a box of Oranges or Grapefruit, they read carefully the different advertisements in the different magazines and newspapers, then go to the men behind the counter, and tell them just what they want, instead of asking what they have, as used to be the custom.

Good advertising is nothing more or less than specialized salesmanship carried into thousands of homes through the mediumship of newspapers and magazines. The Florida Citrus Exchange, appreciating these facts more and more each year since it began advertising its fruit by its superior pack and grade, is preparing to advertise extensively again this season. Discriminating buyers of Citrus Fruits are now our regular customers who have heretofore not used Florida Oranges at all, and it has expanded the market for Florida fruits in general until we feel more than justified in the expenditure.

HAPPENINGS DURING THE WEEK

Here The Reader Will Find a Brief Historical Spring Flowing For Hurried Readers

George Layder Carnegie, Harry Thaw's brother-in-law, accompanied by Mrs. Carnegie and a New York attorney left last night for Sherbrooke, Quebec. They expected to reach their destination at 9 o'clock tonight. Hasty arrangements for the trip were made after Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie had talked over the telephone with Thaw. At the railroad station Mr. Carnegie was asked if he was going to Canada to aid his brother-in-law. "You bet I am," was the reply; "and it will be some fight."

An attack upon the reputation of Leo M. Frank, through testimony introduced to refute that of defense character witnesses was made by the state today in the trial of the young factory superintendent for the murder of Mary Phagan. Ten witnesses, all women, formerly employed at the National Pencil Factory, swore that Frank's general character as to his attitude toward women was bad. By ruling of court attorneys were not permitted to ask concerning specific instances of misconduct.

If Albert Sidney Burleson don't watch out he will find a large size Presidential boom on his hands. Already there is talk of nominating Burleson as the Democratic candidate for President in 1916. In fact, the Presidential boom may be said to be fairly under way. It is the very latest wrinkle in national politics. There is a reason for the Burleson boom. It stands for something. It is as much of a protest as it is a boom—a protest against the inactivity of President Wilson and the other cabinet officers, except Burleson, in the matter of turning Republicans out of office, and putting Democrats in.

Enthusied by the new spirit of road building in Missouri, thousands of volunteers marched forth from every county in western Missouri today to become a part of Governor Major's army of 350,000, which in response to his proclamation began a two-day campaign that was expected to add $1,000,000 in betterments to the public highways of the state. This, the first statewide movement in favor of better roads, was expected to be not only an epoch in the development of Missouri, but an example that would be followed by other states and thus lead to a general improvement of highways all over the United States.

WRONG MR. REEVES

But The Right One Was Near, And Quickly Settled A Vital Situation

Like a man running into a shower of gold, a pauper finding a diamond in the dust of the street, an invalid suddenly discovering an elixir of life, Dugald Morris gave a great shout as he read in a newspaper he had picked up on a park bench a brief, but to him a vitally suggestive item. It ran: "Honorable Walton Reeves of Colorado, newly elected congressman, is at the Hampton hotel."

A vivid picture dream ran riot in the mind of Morris. It seemed as though a sudden blaze of golden sunshine had come to illumine a life beset with clouds. He had drifted here to the nation's capital with his motherless daughter, Beulah, hoping to find some governmental position. He had been a rolling stone, but he was getting old and would be glad to settle down. Lecturer, manager of an operatic troupe, travelling salesman, he had a sure living only about six months in the year. Always loyal and patient, Beulah had catered to his enthusiastic impulses and as sturdily met the seamy side.

"It's luck. I knew it would come!" piped the optimistic little man jubilantly. "Just to think of it—five years, and here up at the top notch is the young man I befriended! Congressman! Well, then, all I have to get is his word to obtain any position I want. I must tell Beulah."

Dugald Morris was a trifle depressed when he imparted to his daughter the inspiring information that he had found a real friend at last. When her father named Walton Reeves a strange quiver crossed Beulah's face. Then she flushed, and when the story was ended she said simply:

"I would ask no favors of a person who has possibly long since forgotten us, and who probably has newer acquaintances to consider."

"Oh, don't you think it!" cried the ingenuous Morris, who loved all the world and therefore fancied that all the world loved him. "I reckon you have forgotten what close friends he and I were five years ago down at Frankton. When he got a call on a surveying job out in Colorado he owed money in Frankton that I paid, being flush at the time. Then that big chance with the lecturing tour came along for us and we left Frankton. I have never heard from him since."

"It may be some other Reeves," suggested Beulah.

"Oh, no. It was to Colorado our friend went. I'll be glad to see him, outside of who he may give me in getting a political job."

ture. He had led her to believe that when that future was assured they must become "great, great friends."

Beulah had put aside the shattered remnants of that old love dream. Her father's disclosure, however, could not help but open up the old wound. She was too cheery-hearted and philosophical to allow it to burden her bright spirit. If she had been nothing, as it had turned out, to the poor, struggling surveyor, what could she hope for from the neglectful lover elevated to a position of honor and wealth?

She said nothing as her father got ready the next morning to call at the Hampton hotel. She even ironed out his best but rusty tie, brushed and mended his coat and sent him on his way with a smile. Her heart ached a bit, but she did not mind that now.

Dugald Morris arrived at the hotel to find that the Hon. Walter Reeves occupied Suite A on the parlor floor. He was admitted to the ante room. An officious usher asked his business. "I want to see Walter Reeves," replied Dugald in his blunt, friendly way. "Name, sir, if you please?"

Very carefully the night previous Morris had cleaned one of his old-time cards he had used when he was in the lecturing field.

"My name will be enough," he said, "but there you are."

Morris was so filled with pleasing anticipations of the warm welcome he felt sure he would receive that he passed the room impatiently until the usher returned.

"Sorry, sir," announced the latter, returning the card, "but Mr. Reeves doesn't know you."

"What's that!" fairly shouted Morris. He was so overcome that he fell straightway to the nearest chair and stared unbelievably at the usher. "Walter Reeves doesn't know me—me, Dugald Morris, who—oh, say! there's some mistake."

"I have reported my message, sir," responded the man incisively, and waiting for the visitor to vacate the room.

Dugald Morris bowed his head on his hands. He thought harder than he had ever thought before. Suddenly he jumped up. His face was fiery with honest indignation and excitement. In a flash it had occurred to him that Walton Reeves did not want to know him. Raised to a position of pride and influence, the ingrate had forgotten the friends of his humble youth!

"Young man," he spoke, his voice quivering, "you go back to your master and tell him that old Dugald Morris is in this room, wants the eighty-seven dollars he paid out for him five years ago, and that he won't stir a peg from here until he gets it—with interest!"

"What's that?" voiced a portly, dignified man, appearing at the doorway of the inner room. "Dugald Morris? eighty-seven dollars? Jones, you had better call an officer."

"Not until I see Walton Reeves!" declared Morris staunchly.

"I am Walton Reeves," announced the newcomer.

"Eh, you? eh, I've made a mistake, and I'm sorry to have troubled you," said Morris in a crestfallen way. "You see, I knew a Walton Reeves years ago at Frankton, and I thought—"

"Oh, you mean my nephew and namesake," smiled the congressman, something in the earnest, honest face of Morris appealing to him. "He is my secretary. This way, Mr. Morris."

The high heart of hope and delight of Dugald Morris rose chokingly as two minutes later the real object of his search gave him the welcome of his life! And then explanation—money sent to Morris at Frankton, returned unclaimed. "Advertisements" inserted in the newspapers, unseen by Morris. And finally, a vital, eager question from the young man:

"And Beulah—that is, Miss Morris? She is—is still single?"

"Oh, yes; she would never leave her old father!" vaunted Morris. He changed his mind, as coming home two evenings later, puffed up a trifle with the consciousness of at last having a fat government job, he found two consciously smiling persons on the porch.

"It's all right, Mr. Morris," observed Walton Reeves with a gay, happy laugh. "Beulah isn't going to leave you, and neither am I; we are simply going to take you in to live with both of us."

A MAN OF SYSTEM

Discipline Was His Rule, but One Can't Prevent Young Folks Being Natural.

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH.

"You are a pretty hard old taskmaster, Adam Brill, and you can't make babies of your children forever."

"I bring my children up on a strict, right basis, and if anybody wants to dispute it, I'm here to protect my methods—not forgetting that, man and boy, for forty years I have been the champion wrestler, boxer and sprinter of the county," and the speaker put up a sample arm that a blacksmith might have envied.

"No, no, friend Adam!" laughed his nearest neighbor, retreating promptly. "None of that for me! I know your prowess too well. Only I think you draw the line too tight with those two children of yours. Not that both are the finest in the town. Morton is a model young man, and as to Luella, I envy the man who gets her for a wife."

"That will be some time ahead, if I have anything to say about it," declared the stalwart parent. "They have been motherless since they were very young, and I've felt a double responsibility in bringing them up right. Discipline and system have been my rule. It's going to continue until Morton is twenty-one—why, say, that's tomorrow!" exclaimed Brill, "and I came near forgetting."

"What?" inquired Dunn, but Adam Brill was on his way and chuckling in his grim way to himself. He knew well enough "what"—and so did bright, lively Morton, his son. The old man, however, did not hear the brief soliloquy of the man he had just left to the effect that, "You can't help young folks from being natural, no matter how hard you try."

It was the twenty-first birthday of Morton Brill tomorrow, sure enough, and his father recalled it half with sadness, partly with a comical look on his face, as if it revived some whimsy that pleased him. Ever since Morton was fifteen years of age, Adam Brill had put in force an iron-clad regulation of his own fierce tempered sire. Exactly one minute before the midnight hour he had made his son remove his coat. Regularly he had administered the strap—the strokes corresponding to the years attained. Then, when the performance was over, he would place in the hands of the lad exactly as many bright silver dollars as he was old.

"The last time!" ruminated the obstinate old fellow, as he reached home and removed from a drawer in a kitchen cabinet the time-honored strap of twogallies. Many a time had Morton thought of stealing it, of running away from home to evade the annual castigation. A thought of the money reward following the whipping, however, had kept him in line.

"Last time!" soliloquized Brill. "Well, in a way I'm glad of it. This little reminder, though, has probably kept him the clean, honest lad that he is. Now he's a man, and a good one. Only Luella left, and in another year she will be of age. I declare, how time rolls on!"

At nine o'clock that night Luella came into the house from the garden, where her unsuspecting father supposed she had been with some girl friends. Her fair peach-blow face was deliciously pensive and flushed, but Adam Brill attributed that to the exercise of play of walking. Luella retired to her room. The old man glanced at the clock, placed the strap over the back of a chair, took off his coat and went out into the garden.

"I told Morton to be here at nine o'clock sharp," grumbled the old man, "and it's after ten now. I want to give him a final lecture before I gave him his last whipping. I suppose the rascal is keeping out of the way purposely, when I intended to make him a downy present this time."

Brill stroled out into the garden. As he neared the little summer house he chanced to glance up at the window of Luella's room. He was in time to see his daughter's head instantly disappear. Then as he entered the summer house, he ran straight into some one.

"You, Morton!" he cried, grabbing the figure. "Sneaking out of the way, eh? No, you don't! I thought you was too wise to fancy your dad couldn't handle you, old as he is."

In one instant the athletic blond of the old man was on fire. His captive had resisted his iron grasp. Then with a superb clutch he had his adversary on equal terms. Back and forth he went, his heels moved, in a wrestling bout such as Adam Brill had not enjoyed for many a year. And then, breathless, astonished for the first time in his proud career, worsted by an opponent fully worthy of his skill, Adam Brill was tripped and sent hurtling five feet away upon the soft grass, prostrate.

"You've done it, Morton," he cried, "and I'm proud of you."

"I am not Morton," interrupted a calm, even voice.

"Eh!" ejaculated Adam Brill, arising to his feet in wonder and staring strangely at an utter stranger. "Who are you, then?"

"A respectable college graduate," was the evasive reply.

"Should think so, and you've got a new wrestling trick I'll give you ten dollars to teach me."

"Tomorrow!" laughed the stranger, gaily, gave a leap and was over the rear fence and out of sight in a twinkling.

"Well, I never!" gasped the old man. "There's some mystery about this, but the fellow is a good one. To think of it—never beaten at my own game before!"

Adam Brill returned to the kitchen. His defeat had set him thinking, and had exhausted his vitality a trifle. It made him realize that he "was not as young as he used to be." He fell asleep, to awaken and find his son seated in a chair opposite to him.

"Hell! Been asleep, have I?" exclaimed the old man. "On hand and waiting for the annual, eh, son?"

"Not this time, father. You've overslept," and Morton pointed to the kitchen clock. "It's ten minutes after twelve, I'm of age, and we'll just shake hands and call it square."

"Cheated out of my regular pleasure, eh?" stormed the old man, in a pretended rage. "Well, I won't be mean. Here's your present," and he extended a clinking bag. "Forty-two dollars, and when you get ready to settle down come to me for more."

"Why, father," admitted young Brill a little confusedly. "I'm ready right now Myra Walcott has been waiting for me for over a year, and you won't object?"

"Seeing as you are your own master, I don't see how I can interfere," answered the father.

"And, father—"

"Well?"

"A young man was here tonight—I met him and he told me about it. You had a bout in the garden."

"Eh! Who is he?" challenged the father, sharply.

"Clyde Worthington, as fine a young fellow as you need to know. He's coming here, again, tomorrow."

"Yes, to teach me that double elbow clutch of his!" cried old Brill, eagerly.

"Yes, and to ask you for sister's hand in marriage."

Adam Brill stormed, and fumed, but Clyde Worthington made so fine an impression when he called the next day that there was a double wedding in the old Brill homestead.

Woman's Long Service.

The only woman lighthousekeeper in England Mrs. Joyson, kept her last watch, the other night at Hale, on the banks of the Mersey. She is known as "the heroine of the Mersey." For twenty years she has lived in the lighthouse, and for four years, since the death of her husband, she has been the official keeper. My life has not been an unhappy one here," said Mrs. Joyson, "and it is a wrench to go. I am giving up the appointment for the sake of my children, who wish to live at Stockton. The commissioner has tried several times to persuade me to stay. He told me only the other day, 'You are leaving with honor. When my husband died in the lighthouse, I took up the duty on three months' trial, and have continued till now. I have done duty for three and a half hours before and after high tide, and have to keep the light burning at night time, and the fog bell ringing if necessary. On several occasions I have rung the bell for the whole seven hours. Once we had nearly a fortnight of fog, but I got through it all right.'"

Interrupted Funeral.

A funeral at Hampstead (Middlesex) cemetery was delayed by an extraordinary incident, a few days ago. Just as the procession was entering the gates, a bulldog leaped at one of the horses drawing the hearse, and seizing it by the leg, brought it heavily to the ground. The dog then shifted its grip, biting the horse in several places about the front of the body, and finally fastened its teeth in its muzzle. The horse's struggles were witnessed by many, but for some time the confusion was such that all efforts to get at the bulldog were unavailing. A young woman to whom the latter belonged eventually managed to grasp the collar, but it was only after the animal had been stunned with a heavy piece of wood that its jaws could be pried apart and the horse released.—London Mail.

Joy of Hospitality.

"A motor car is a source of great pleasure, isn't it?" "Yes," replied Mr. Chiggins. "But it has certain disadvantages. You don't want to ride by yourself, and when you take out a party of friends they have arguments among themselves about how fast you shall travel and where you shall go. There is only one thing they agree about, and that is, if the machine breaks down, it's a good job on me."

BIG HAUL OF TIGERS

Informers Turn up Large Bunch of Liquor Dispensers and Negroes

Acting Mayor Miller had a regular matinee on Tuesday in the police court when seven blind tigers faced him on the charge of selling booze without a license. They were Dr. Jerry, Wilson, Kirby, Swatsy, Lizzie Lewis, Love, Mamie Dehart and Frank Blair. Two white men who had been in the habit of purchasing blind tiger booze at different intervals decided to turn informer for the customary price and succeeded in buying the stuff without any trouble. Afterward the officers were put wise to the tigers and making a raid found plenty of liquor and brought it to the court as evidence. There was enough liquor to start a small saloon and every man and woman pleaded not guilty, but the men who bought the stuff were there with the testimony, and it seemed strong enough to Mayor Miller to warrant him giving each one a package of $50 or ninety days. Some of them pleaded for more time to hire lawyers and fight the cases, but they will probably pay the fine and start selling again as usual. It seems that the negro can't help selling booze any more than he can help taking other people's property and the majority of the negroes who sell liquor are in favor of a dry town so they can carry on their illicit trade. When a haul like Tuesday is made of old offenders it shows that the trade is flourishing despite the vigilance of the officers, and the only way they can convict is to get some one to buy the booze and prove it on the offenders.

If the law allowed the mayor to assess a fine of one year on the city gang, with another year on the county gang, it would at least keep the blind tigers from doing business that long and serve to break up this habit.

When a man's wife is a good looker and a good cook he usually survives the shlek even if his political party is defeated.

RESTRAINT OF TRADE

Interesting Decision By Iowa Court Tried To Elud A Grower

The Herald reproduces an editorial from a recent Times-Union which makes very interesting reading. As folks familiar with the management of that paper know, the best legal talent obtainable, does considerable of the editorial writing.

These are all kinds of organizations formed in Florida, from those organized to consign the entire body of commission merchants to hades, which they can be roasted good and brown, to the grand wild cat schemes of placing the "dear grower" in actual touch with the fork of the "Dear Consumer." The editorial should be read carefully by all members of associations where fines are imposed for flying the coop. Many growers seem to feel that agreements are like the girl "engagements," made to be broken at pleasure. The editorial follows:

The Iowa state supreme court has decided unlawful under the law of that state any attempt of a farmers' or fruit growers' association to impose a penalty on members who sell their produce outside of the organization. It is held to be a provision in restraint of competition, and the Iowa law is modeled on the Sherman act forbidding such restraint in interstate commerce. Even though the offending member is willing to pay the penalty and may have signed an agreement not to sell outside the organization, yet the attempt to collect the penalty is held to be illegal; in fact, the existence of such a provision makes the society illegal, under that law.

It seems so obvious that this provision was in violation of the law of Iowa that one can only wonder that the defendant association should have incurred the expense of appealing the case when the lower court decided against it.

The suggestion that fruit-shipping associations adopt rules not to ship any produce of members except in packages purchased through the organization does not meet the case at all, if it is proposed to penalize a member for infraction of such rules, for shipping in any other packages. The offense would be the same.

A mere agreement in advance of the members to refuse to sell to any competitor of the association would not be a violation of the law of Iowa, as we understand the decision, but the imposition of a penalty for disregarding such an agreement makes the society an illegal one. It is repugnant also to the common law as tending to establish a monopoly.

An association, therefore, either organized to buy and sell, or to sell merely, any product of its members, or including such transactions among its activities, makes itself illegal by adopting by-laws penalizing members for selling outside the organization in states having such a law as that of Iowa. It must rely upon the honor of its members to observe an agreement not to sell outside of the association. A man who yields to temptation to obtain a present benefit by selling to an independent buyer does himself and the association an injury. If he thus aids those who would prefer to see the association destroyed, he is doing his part toward such destruction, and, in the course of a few seasons, may loose considerably more money than he has gained by such treachery. But the organization itself invites treachery when it prefers to rely upon the fear of punishment rather than solely upon the honor of its members.

Oh, Squashi

"Now, between you and me, darling," he began as he sat with his arm enfolding her waist. "George," she interrupted. "I was that you would be a little more precise in your words. How can there be anything between you and me? There isn't room." And immediately she disproved her own statement by snuggling up still closer.

Not Really His Fault

Willie, aged five, was one day sent away from the dinner table for misbehaving. He went into the kitchen, and the maid said: "Willie, I'd be ashamed to be sent away from the table, as big a boy as you are." "Well, that's what a fellow gets for being born in a preacher's family," rejoined the little fellow.

Not Big Enough to Go 'Round

"One hundred ways to cook an egg," read Mrs. Newlywed from a new cook book. "Oh, dear! I can only cook this egg once!"—Judge.

Fault Finding

If we had no faults, we should not take so much pleasure in noticing the faults of other people.—La Rochefoucauld.

Ungallant Chinese Proverb

"A woman's heart," says the Chinese proverb, "is like the moon. It changes continually, but it always has a man in it."

To Be Sure

A professional person with any self-respect should avoid competing in things which only show up his or her ignorance.

Gave Away Formula

About forty years ago there was advertised on London billboards a drink called Robur, said to be good for every ailment and, incidentally, the long sought after elixir of life. One was invited to send for free samples, and its marvelous properties were the subject of everybody's conversation. Robur might have been sold to this day had not some one, without the fear of a libel action before his eyes, divulged its secret formula—cold tea enlivened by rum. From that moment it fell as rapidly as it had risen, for people could make their own Robur if they wanted it.

Pessimism of Mr. Mutshaw

"It is a great pity," a trifle grimly remarked Stanley Livingston Mutshaw, who had several unappreciated Frankenstein on his hands, a boil on his neck and a grand grouch on his soul, "that some children are so sadly afflicted with bashfulness; and it is a still greater pity that others ain't. Also, I have observed that a brother-in-law never dies, and seldom resigns. And I believe we are going to get this season a darn sight more rain than we need!"

Record for Laziness

The laziest man is reported in Arkansas; where he conducts a shoe store in a little town. A woman entered his shop one day and said she wanted to buy a pair of shoes. The lazy man, who was sitting on a box at one end of his establishment, looked at her, yawned wearily, and then said: "I can't wait on you today. Come in some time when I'm standin' up."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Three High Mountains

Mount Mitchell is the most lofty mountain in the eastern part of the United States. It is located in Yancey county, N. C., and according to the United States Geological Survey is 6,711 feet above sea level. There are two other mountains in the Appalachian system above 6,000 feet—Mount Guyot in Tennessee, 6,636 feet, and Mount Washington in New Hampshire, 6,293 feet.

Raw Meat Popular in Italy

Travelers report that in Italy the devouring of raw meat in restaurants is now so common as to be— to women, at any rate—a public annoyance. The waiter brings the slab of beef steak and exhibits it to the eyes of the man about to lunch, who watches the process of cutting and of sprinkling with a little oil and vinegar. Over the dish is then poured a raw egg.

Largest Paper Plant East Of California

Now Located At Sanford Making Fruit Wraps

Crown Columbia Paper Co., Has Three Perfecting Presses Busy Printing Fruit Wrappers

The establishment of a large warehouse and printing plant, specially adapted for printing fruit and vegetable wrappers, by the Crown Columbia Paper Co. of California, at Sanford will prove a great benefit and advantage to the packers of this state.

Heretofore the shippers in this state have been compelled to place their orders many months in advance of such time as they really knew what their paper requirements would be, which generally necessitated carrying an over supply of wrappers, often the wrong sizes for their fruit.

The paper is shipped across the continent in large Jumbo rolls. These rolls are of various widths, to accommodate the different size wrappers cut therefrom. They now have in stock about 12 hundred tons of this roll paper.

These machines have different compartments for ink, making it possible to print different brands in different colors at the same time.

The stereotype department is a very interesting branch of the business. For every brand or design that is to be printed, a steel or zinc plate is obtained from the engravers.

This is a very unique and interesting industry, and it would well repay any one interested in the fruit industry to stop in at Sanford and look over the plant. Mr. George D. Bishop, manager for the company's branch in Florida, would be glad to show visitors through the establishment.

Overall Parties Popular Hon. Harry H. Hawes of St. Louis, a nephew of Mrs. Fletcher Frier of this city, and a young man who received much of his education here at the old Hogsett Academy, is well known to many of our people, is one of the instigators in a "good roads" movement that is being copied by many of the wealthier St. Louisians.

prominent men who have country homes will have the same kind of house parties, and it is expected that the friendly rivalry will bring forth an excellent display of road making, and prove that the average city business man can wield a pick axe and shovel successfully, and set an example to his brothers of the rural communities.

Claude's Pleasantry

I see by the Congressional Record of August 8th that Mr. L'Engle on that day introduced a bill to give two condemned brass or bronze cannon to the city of Sanford, Fla. Don't get excited about this and start to train the chorus of beautiful village maidens—garbed in spotless white, with read and blue sashes, with golden locks all fussed up, with pink, pinksies, forget-me-nots and sweet immortelles—to sing tra-la, from the stand erected on the shady side of the public square, as the carriages containing the mayor, city council, the chairman of the school board, the president of the chamber of commerce, the resident regent of the national federation of women's clubs, the executive committee of the league for civic reform, the senior officer of the Sons of Confederate Veterans and delegations from the trades unions lead the procession of prominent citizens (also in carriages) with many bosoms swelling with pride, all out hidden by badges, with the chief of the fire department as a rear guard that proudly parades in honor of the great statesman sitting alongside of the chairman of the reception committee in the open barouche harnessed to six or eight milk white horses with wavy manes and tails, and drawn up in stately isolation right in front of the reviewing stand.

No, this is just a piece of regular office work done by my secretary in my absence and is introduced here to show how easy it is to INTRODUCE bills in congress, so that the free and unfettered electors or voters, if you prefer the word, may slip the savvy sign to the next congressman who brings in the news papers or checkers about some bill he introduced for the good of his constituents.

Giving Out the Coin

Washington, D. C., Aug. 25.—The Treasury Department today began making deposits of the additional $50,000,000 government funds that are available to be placed with banks in the agricultural states to aid in the crop movement. The first deposits were made in the reserve cities in the southern states, among which, it is officially stated were Baltimore, Md., Richmond, Va., Atlanta, Ga., and Memphis, Tenn., the three latter each receiving $750,000.

The apportionment of the funds has been completed, according to information at the department. It was stated unofficially that with the largest deposits would be made with the national banks at Chicago, this being the most important reserve city in the agricultural states. The largest deposits are to be made in St. Louis, with Baltimore second, and New Orleans third.

No official announcement of the amount sent to these cities has been made, but unofficially it has been learned that Baltimore will receive between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000, and that Chicago and St. Louis will divide in the neighborhood of $15,000,000.

New Orleans, it was learned unofficially, will receive about $1,000,000.

Caught the Negro

Sheriff Hand received Saturday to watch for a negro named Sonny Dicks, said to be coming this way and wanted in Putnam county for some crime. Sheriff Hand who is always on the job had no trouble in finding the negro and he is now in the jail awaiting the sheriff of Putnam.

Frank Mitter spent Sunday with home folks. Frank is not feeling very shipper having a bad case of ingrown fingers and he has but small chance to run as the fingers are on the job every moment.

Newspaper Advertising Brings Real Results

Senator Donegan Recites The Example Of Kissimmee

Says That County Sending Free Copies Of Home Papers Will Get Best Results In Advertising

Newspapers are the best means of advertising any city. This has been demonstrated by the Orange county commissioners and the Kissimmee Board of Trade who for many years have sent from 1,000 to 2,000 copies of the Kissimmee and St. Cloud papers to the addresses of prospective settlers. Senator A. E. Donegan was in the city for a few hours last Saturday and in the course of conversation with several citizens of Sanford made the remark that what the new county and Sanford needed at present was advertising and that no better plan could be followed than sending out copies of the Sanford Herald.

If the Seminole county commissioners ever take up the matter of advertising or wish to join hands with the city council of Sanford on this subject they end do no better than consult with Senator Donegan or Editor Triplett, secretary of the Kissimmee board of trade, both of these gentlemen being an authority on the best means of advertising a community and both of them have tried every other kind of advertising and have facts and figures to prove their claims. It is certain that the community that does not advertise will be a community of dead ones who cannot expect new citizens and will never get any. Our people have had opportunity enough of witnessing the value of good advertising and the slump that follows a policy of curtailment of all advertising.

Florida Tobacco Booming

There has been no more notable industrial revival in Florida recently than that of the tobacco industry up in Gadsden county. It boomed mightily six or seven years ago and flourishing tobacco farms sprung up all over that region. Quincy was quivering with the impetus of the movement. Her hotels crowded with buyers and speculators, and eight miles away the brand new little city of Havana sprang into existence on the basis of tobacco. No part of Florida was more prosperous, but the bottom dropped out with disastrous suddenness, prices went far below the point of profit and gloom settled upon one of the fairest parts of Florida. But the mysterious lost factor in the prosperity of that section has been found, and Quincy is again throbbing with life, her tobacco barns bursting with the garnered staple, buyers and speculators are again thronging to the scene and the old flush times apparently restored in full force. South Florida leads of course, and probably always will, but the great tobacco region lying west of the Suwannee seems to be striving for second place.

Killed White Man

Bartow, Fla., Aug. 26. (Special) In a shooting affray at Lake Alfred, formerly known as Chubb and Fargo, Sunday morning, Turner Canup, a white man, was shot to death by Charles Morgan, a negro.

The trouble is said to have started over the death of a dog belonging to Canup, who went to the negro's quarters, accusing Morgan of having killed his dog. Words followed, and Canup drew a pistol and shot twice at the negro, missing both times.

Going within his shanty, the negro procured and weapon and shot the white man, the bullet taking effect in Canup's abdomen, causing death within a few minutes. After killing the white man the negro took to the woods, concealing himself in a bayhead.

Death of F. J. Ruffly

Frank J. Ruffly died at his home on Palmetto Avenue last Saturday after a lingering illness of several months. Deceased was born at Cambridge, Mass., in 1837 and spent the years of early boyhood in New England states, afterward going west and settling in Illinois. When the Civil war broke out he joined the 54th Illinois Volunteer Infantry and served three years and seven months. At the close of the war he enlisted in the regular army and served several years on the western plains in the Indian wars.

Mr. Ruffly afterward moved to Palatka where he resided for several years coming to Sanford about eight years ago.

He was in the employ of Mr. J. E. Pace for many years, giving up his position some months ago on account of failing health.

He leaves a wife and daughter, Gladys, to mourn his loss and one sister, Mrs. Nellie Johnson of Boston, Mass. The funeral services were held in the Episcopal church Sunday afternoon, Rev. Arthur Peck officiating. The G. A. R. held services at the cemetery. Mr. Ruffly was prominent in G. A. R. Circles in the state being past commander of Post No. 12 of Palatka and junior vice commander of the Department, State of Florida.

Stricken With Appendicitis

Braxton Perkins was stricken suddenly with appendicitis yesterday morning and the attack was so severe that the physicians thought it best to rush him to the hospital at Orlando at once and he was taken there about ten o'clock. The operation was performed yesterday and the patient seems to be recovering nicely. His many friends here will be glad to learn that he is out of danger and will be all right in a few weeks.

Hudson for the Senate

Washington, Aug. 27. From information which is being brought to Washington it is believed that the progressive element in the Democratic party in Florida will unite on Senator F. M. Hudson of Miami, the candidate to oppose Senator Duncan U. Fletcher in the senatorial primaries next year. The endorsement in the race of Mr. Hudson, who has added to the solicitations of his friends and is soon to make a formal announcement of his candidacy, will eliminate Representative Claude L'Engle of Jacksonville as a candidate against Senator Fletcher.

Mr. Hudson, had about given up the idea of making the fight, it is said, due to his continued poor health. Should he recover full vigor in time he would probably enter the race, but as conditions now are, it is regarded as probable that he will get behind the candidacy of Hudson.

Mr. Hudson is a member of the upper branch of the state legislature, and for a time was president of it. He has been identified with progressive legislation in Florida and is said to be a lawyer of exceptional ability.

More About Brick Making

General Industrial Agent J. A. Pride of the Seaboard Air Line Railway has written to the Times-Union of Jacksonville a letter urging the investigation of the qualities of clays of Florida for making brick for road construction in the state. He says:

The clays for brick making for building purposes are very largely of ample supply, and there is a very large demand for that kind of material, and in the construction of the large office buildings much clay product known as "fire proofing" is used. Good stiff clay, properly burned makes this fire proofing, and investigations will show that large quantities of this particular material is being brought in from other states and might be manufactured in Florida. The same is true of the drain tile, for which the demand is largely increased by the activity in the work of draining the soils. An authority states that the per capita value of clay products for the whole country in 1911 was $1.75, which lead are Ohio with $6.55, New Jersey with $7.16, while the value of Florida's clay products was only $0.29 per capita. Alabama's clay products reached $0.91 per capita and Georgia's $1.01 per capita. The road building in Florida for which large sums have been appropriated and in which there is very much interest, requires hard, vitrified brick, and the other states have material which will vitrify under heat. It is possible that Florida's clays do not contain this vitrifying material. Some time ago considerable space was given to an experiment on one of the large western roads in protecting a dirt fill against water, and the plan used was to plate the fill with the dumping of the melting pots from an iron furnace. The fertilizer manufacturers in Florida have large quantities of pyrites cinders, which is almost a waste product, and it is possible that sufficient iron pyrite could be extracted from these pyrites to vitrify Florida's clays. The subject is well worthy of careful investigation."—Manufacturers' Record.

St. Cloud Is Greatly Interested In Connecting Link

The prospects for bringing about the connecting link between the St. Johns and Kissimmee rivers have gone beyond the dream stage and according to Mr. I. S. Hall there is little doubt that action will be the result of the committee's hard work. Everybody is interested and they all want the canal because of the excessive freight rates, if for no other reason. The people of Sanford would like very much to see the canal go through as it will mean better river conditions at the "Celery City." They will assist in every way possible in bringing about an association to unite all the cities into an effective association. Mr. T. K. Bates, president of the board of trade, expressed himself heartily in favor of holding a meeting and have as many delegates as possible from the various cities to bring about better water way conditions for the central part of the state. There is little doubt that the people of Sanford are very much interested and are willing to do all in their power to get the proposed waterway, Jacksonville is at the head of navigation and as they have an active board of trade that will be of great benefit to the project if they will endorse it. A special committee has been appointed to investigate what effect the proposed canal would have on lowering the St. Johns river (18 inches, tide water) at Jacksonville. The city of Jacksonville is a seaport and it is essential that they maintain a good harbor. Of course they look for the water coming in from the St. Johns river and for that reason are interested in all the tributaries emptying into it. The cause of this fear was brought about when G. W. Hopkins started dredging a canal from Lake Washington near the source of the St. Johns river into the Atlantic Ocean. Jacksonville put up a howl that it would lower the water of the river. The Hopkins canal was never completed. Mr. I. S. Hall went to Jacksonville heavily loaded with statistics to prove to the city of the north that water won't run up hill and that the St. Johns river will be greatly benefited by the canal. Other Matters Of Interest In The Land Of Flowers, Red Bugs and Gnats

By a vote of more than two to one, the bonds for new school facilities for West Palm Beach were carried. The bond issue was for $35,000, and will provide for new buildings for the primary grades. Just as soon as the bonds can be issued and disposed of work on the new building will be commenced.

Live Oak Has Been Entertaining

Live Oak has been entertaining agriculturists from all parts of Suwannee county and the occasion has been most pleasant and interesting. The meeting of the farmers' was to attend a farmers' institute and the program, planned to continue over two days, was full of importance to all present.

Reports From Fort Myers Indicate

Reports from Fort Myers indicate that there will be a fine potato crop in that section, probably the largest yet known.

Mrs. Jessie Williams, wife of J. P. Williams of Atlanta, Ga., is said to have been the only woman in the south, perhaps in the world, who absolutely owned in her own right a 200-mile interstate railroad with its trains, stations, shops, terminals, docks and steamboat line.

In addition to this, she is one of the largest land owners in the United States, controlling a quarter of a million acres of farming and timber land in Georgia and Florida.

The Gainesville Sun, telling of the application made for a charter for a new banking house in that city, says that "the Phifer State bank will have a cash capital of $50,000 and will conduct a general banking business."

The directors are among the best known business and professional men of that section and the new financial institution will have a handsome and commodious home in the Phifer building on Main and Union streets.

The Miami Metropolis says that soon the policemen in that city will not be allowed to enter a saloon while on duty unless in discharge of his office, and they will not be allowed to play cards on or off duty in the police station, and they will be compelled to wear uniforms. Jacksonville has already forbidden her policemen to enter saloons unless in discharge of duty.

Sherman C. Hillyer, a prominent attorney of Washington, D. C., a native and former resident of Fernandina, who arrived there Sunday on a visit to his brother, Mr. F. C. Hillyer, was drowned Sunday afternoon at Amelia Beach while attempting to rescue a young lady of that city who had gone beyond her depth.

Great plans are being made for the celebration of Labor day in and around St. Augustine and a particularly merry time is promised at South Beach, where there will be all kinds of sports. Among the big features promised is a balloon ascension. A big parade and some speech making will mark the day in the city.

David Speer of Geneva was in the city yesterday calling on his many Sanford friends. Mr. Speer says that Geneva is going some and many new people are coming in every week.

The Florida State College

The purpose of the state in founding the Florida State College for Women was to make possible at low cost educational advantages which should at once be of the highest excellence and should meet the needs of every class of women in the state of Florida. This purpose is being admirably carried out. All students do their work under specialists who have gotten their training in the leading colleges and universities of this country and Europe. The young woman who wishes to take a regular college course, and to receive the diploma of the college, is offered work in English, Foreign Languages both ancient and modern, and the various sciences. Young women desiring to devote themselves to the Fine Arts, such as Music, Art and Expression, are offered advantages in these fields obtainable nowhere else in the state, and at very few places in the entire south. Those who wish to study the Domestic Sciences and Arts can obtain at this college facilities unsurpassed anywhere, except in the large universities. Young women who wish to prepare to teach in the public schools, have at their command the services of specialists in the fields of High School, Grade, Primary and Kindergarten work. But these departments are by no means exclusive of each other. Judicious combinations of work in the several departments are possible, and are continually being made under the advice and direction of the faculty.

The library and laboratory equipment of the college necessary for carrying on all the lines of work named, is large and thoroughly modern and up to date.

The moral and religious tone of the college is high. The social life is attractive. All classes of students work together cheerfully and happily. The expenses are as low as is consistent with the excellent advantages given. Every young woman in Florida who is thinking of going to school for any line of study should give thoughtful consideration to the claims of the Florida State College for Women.

Laws on Squirrels

Some think that they can kill squirrels and not violate the law. A part of section 10 of chapter 6534 of the Laws of Florida reads as follows: "Any person who shall pursue, injure, capture, kill or destroy any fox squirrel, black squirrel or gray squirrel, except on and from November 20th in each year to the following February 20th, when they may be killed; or who shall pursue, injure, capture or destroy any squirrel at any time in any public or private park, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $20 nor more than $25."

Other sections prohibit the hunting of other game birds. Notice that the beginning of the open or hunting season has been changed. It begins on November 20th and ends on February 20th. The game warden will certainly pick up those who persistently violate this game law.

Caught Young Thief
