Coastal Zone Management Plan

'Fragile Area Must Be Guarded'

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - With the changes that we have witnessed to the coastal areas of Florida in even the last 20 years, I am sufficiently concerned with what we may see in the next 30 to favor the concept of coastal tone management.

The scientists, economists, sociologists, environmentalists, and even the developers. have all revealed the true and the Florida coastal zone. For reasons as intangible as the soothing effect of walking along a deserted section of beach to the very tangible fact that millions of dollars in state revenues are being generated yearly from tourists and residents flocking to Florida's coasts, this both fragile and complex area of the state must be adequately protected both presently and in

The Florida Legislature, in recent times, has been exceptionally cognizant of the need for sound legislation in this area. As early as 1970 we created a Coastal Coordinating Council. This was prior to passage of the Federal Coastal Zone Management Act of

The Council's functions were transferred to the Department of Natural Resources in a major reorganization of environmental agencies in 1975. DNR undertook initial coastal zone planning under the federal act and compiled significant data along with broad local government support. In 1977, the program was transferred to the Department of Environmental Regulation

Legislature designed to achieve approval at the federal level, but that program has met with widespread criticism, particularly from special interest groups who characterize it as one more layer of bureaucracy. However, I would take the position that the long-term stakes of sound coastal zone concept to receive fairer treatment than it

I have heard the argument that, because of Florida's truly landmark environmental legislation already on the books, no specific legislation addressing the coastal zone is needed. However, some of the same voices criticize our environmental requirements as being uncoordinated and duplicative.

One of the principal features of Coastal Zone Management places one agency in an oversight role for rules, regulations, and federal consistency review for projects in the coastal zone, and should, thus, begin to focus attention on duplication and lack of coordi-The likelihood of millions of dollars in

Under CZM, the proponents through local government plans, all lead me tell us, all these overlapping requirements to hope that the Legislature will walk that would be consolidated into one big happy final mile in passing meaningful legislation.

protection, pollution control, ecological balancing and the other "buzz words" of today, the people of Florida are about to lose control of the best thing we have going for us - our beaches, harbors, inland waterways, residential canals, and all the recreational areas and facilities associated with these

Now, the proponents of CZM will tell you that no new laws, rules or requirements will be enacted by this program. Just remember, these are the same people who brought us federally-mandated, court-ordered busing, Medicaid-paid abortions on demand, a bankrupt Social Security system, etc., etc. Nothing ever ends up the way it started out

If the people of Florida want to continue to own and control their public beaches, parks, inland waters, lakes, etc., they don't need CZM. Florida's coastal lands should belong to the people of Florida, not the bureaucrats in

As did the Postal Service, Amtrak toppled into the gap between theory and practice.

Rail passenger service has not experienced a dramatic rebirth under government sponsorship. Air travel is much faster. Bus travel is cheaper. As government moves away from strict regulation of air fares, super discounts offered by the airlines add to Amtrak's woes.

An advertised airline fare from San Diego, Calif., to Chicago, was $198. The Amtrak rate, by coach, was quoted at $260.

The lack of patronage on routes targeted for termination contributes to a subsidy need expected to reach $1 billion by 1984. Adams' scaled-down system would still require $800 million in tax

Carter: More Inept Reform?

WASHINGTON — The White House proposal for sweeping reorganization of the federal civil service system unfortunately has emerged as the most recent example of President Carter's uncanny knack for inept presentation of wellintentioned reforms.

Recent decades have seen the emergence of a national consensus calling for a thorough overhaul of the federal bureaucracy, but Carter is the first president with the commitment to stake his prestige on attainment of that goal. In pursuing that course, he has not been afraid to challenge several powerful special interest groups, notably the countless civil servants who fear any deviation from the status quo and the veterans' organizations determined to maintain an outmoded system that gives their members an unwarranted advantage in securing

But on the very day that he proclaimed "civil service reform will be the centerpiece of government reorganization during my term of office," the president severely damaged his credibility on the issue by peddling deceptive

Arctic Supply Route Is Sparking A Major Dispute

FIVE MILE CAMP. Alaska - For thousands of years the Alaskan Arctic was accessible only by foot. Then came boats. And later planes. Now, quite suddenly, a road fit for auto traffic runs from the Yukon River to the Beaufort Sea, and people here are bitterly divided as to whether it's progress or not.

The road was built as a supply route for the construction of the trans-Alaskan oil pipeline. Rent-A-Player Not Working

NEW YORK (UPI) - You can't beat the system. Nobody is better proof of that today than Bill Veeck. He was going to try to beat the system, let all the other owners shell out millions while he employed his far more frugal Rent-A-Player policy and for awhile it worked.

His Chicago White Sox surprised everyone by making a bid for the AL West title before finishing third last year. Veeck was even named Major League Executive of the Year. But look at him now. There he sits in last place, offering clear illustration that you're never going to get too far by bringing quarters to a highstakes game.

Remember the Simon and Garfunkel song, "Mrs. Robinson," which asked where have you gone, Joe DiMaggio? Maybe somebody ought to write another one now asking where have all the White Sox gone. In case you haven't bothered checking lately, here's where you'll find them:

Rich Gossage and Bucky Dent are with the Yankees now Bobby Bonds and Richie Zisk with the Rangers; Oscar Gamble is playing for the Padres, Terry Forster for the Dogers and Ken All have left the White Sox the past two years and in most every case money was the prime factor.

Latest to go was Bonds. Veeck got him from the Angels this winter to take up some of the slack caused by the departure of Zisk and Gamble. But Bonds lasted only 38 days with the White Sox because he wanted a five-year contract and Veeck wouldn't Veeck tried to sign Bonds but couldn't. It was generally assumed Bonds would finish out the season with the White Sox and then move elsewhere as a free agent at the end of the year, but rather than lose him for nothing, Veeck decided to trade him before the June 15 deadline and get some players in return. He got Claudell Washington, Rusty Torres and someone who'll come

The worst thing about all this is rent through July," said Bonds. He should read the Basic Agreement between the owners and the players, and if he does, he'll find out he has nothing to worry about. That rent money has to be paid back to him by the Bonds is reporting to his fifth club in four years, and if he's wondering why, he can check the Basic Agreement again because that's a big part of the reason. Under terms of the Agreement, ballplayers can have their freedom by playing out their contracts and that being the case, the owners are protecting themselves as best they can the same way Veeck did.

To me, a ballplayer who keeps moving around loses some of his identification. From what most fans tell me, he loses it with them also, and I can't see where that does baseball much good. Part of the game's general appeal is closely tied in with fan identification of players, and it becomes a lot easier to relate to a Stan Musial, a Mel Ott, an Al Kaline or a Brooks Robinson, each of whom put in more than 20 years with the same team, than it does with say, a Bobby Bonds.

Even with the free-agency option available to them now, there are some players who would much rather stay put. Reliever John Hiller of the Tigers is one. Hiller becomes a 10-year man next month and the Tigers will have to get his permission before they can trade him but he's perfectly content to remain in Detroit. "I don't want to play anywhere else," he says. "I have no intention of playing out my contract. I want to finish my career right here where I am."

Years ago, it was altogether different. A player had no say over which club he could be traded to and a pitcher like Dick Littlefield wound up with 10 different clubs.

Littlefield works for General Motors now as a checker in one of their auto body plants in Michigan and he remembers how it felt to keep bouncing around the way he did. "Every time I was traded I felt badly because I figured I wasn't doing the job," he says. "It was tough on the family, too. When I was with Pittsburgh, I had just finished finding a house and putting my family in it when I was traded to St. Louis two days

Littlefield lost his rent four times that way. In those days, you didn't get it back.

Jogging: No Passing Fancy With 25 Million Doing It

Kenneth Cooper, the "father of aerobic excercise." admits he initially thought jogging would be a fad, much like hula hoope and swallowing goldfish. "In 1968 there were only about 100,000 joggers in America. As of last October there were 25 million. I thought jogging would be a passing

said Wednesday at the annua

Well, Since You Asked...

Q. Could you tell me who the NCAA team gymnastics champions were from 1971 to the present time? Books etc., that I have do not tell. - Frank Nick, Council Bluffs, Going backwards from the present, the NCAA team gymnastics champs have been: 1978; Oklahoma; 1977. Oklahoma and Indiana State (tie); 1976, Penn State; 1975, California; 1974, Iowa State; 1973, Iowa State; 1972, Southern Illinois; 1971, Iowa State. Incidentally, for all who are interested in the best in college sports, the NCAA in Shawnee Mission, Kan., publishes a "Book of Cham-

Q. By ming Jimmy "The Greek" Sayder, isn't CBS glorifying the role of the so-called "bookie"? - T. D., Lompoc, Calif.

Precisely. My feeling is that the networks shouldn't foster or cater to gambling. The Greek, in his role as a commentator, has no onther function than to dispense information to the bettors. And (here I'm petting a little catty) I don't thank he dispenses much service in that

Q. Can you give me the origin and original meaning "cager," a term used in basketball? It is very important as it will be on an exam I am soon to take. I have exhausted my resources and could think of no one other than you to belp me. - Bill Husfelt, Panama City, Fla. In the early days of basketball, expecially pro basketball, there was no out-of-bounds. The playing area was surrounded by a netting, forming a cage. Some bright sports writer, therefore, started calling the guys within it "cagers" - the term is also used to describe swishing the ball through the hoop, i.e., caging a basket.

Q. Now that Gary Player has won three consecutive tournaments, I would like to know the rest of the three-ina-row winners in golf. Bobby Locke, also of South Africa, was the only other foreign player to do it. Jacke Burke won four, the only one to do it, I think. Or did Sammy Snead or Byron Nelson also win four? - John Bogdonoff, Santa Cruz, Calif.

Byron Nelson in 1945 and Jackie Burke in 1952 were the only winners of four consecutive PGA titles. Actually, elson won 11 straight in the summer and spring of '45, but he missed some events - his longest string that year was five straight. The other three-time winners, with their years, were Nelson ('44), Snead ('45), Ben Hogan ('46), Locke ('47), Jim Ferrier ('51), Billy Casper ('60), Arnie Palmer ('80 and '82), Johnny Miller ('74), and Hubert Green ('76). Of course, add Player now. Q. What do you think about John Dutton and Raymond Chester of the Baltimore Colts trying to be traded? How can a team trade away and all-pro lineman like Dutton? Why would they want to be traded from a contending team like the Colts? - David Leffew, Rockwood, Tenn.

Money. That's the answer, at least in the case of Dutton. He was late reporting a year ago because the Colts would not renegotiate his contract. Chester is unhappy because he doesn't feel the Colts adequately utilize his receiving talents as a tight end. When players are unhappy and are going to play out their options, teams often unload them while the market is still good. Don't be surprised to see hester land in San Francisco.

Q. Now that he's got 3,000 hits in his career, does Pete Rose have a chance to beat Ty Cobb's all-time record for hits? What was Cobb's record? - H.N., Cincinnati, Ohio. Cobb's total of 4,191 seems out of reach for the scrappy Red's third baseman, who was 37 in April, unless he could play productively as long as Cobb did (the Georgia Peach didn't hang 'em up until he was 42). And then he'd have to keep knocking out 200 hits a year, a pretty tough pace in this modern era of night baseball and frenetic air travel.

It should be noted that Pete has already tied Cobb's major league record of bashing 200 or more hits in nine different

By BOB PHILSON

Cancer Tourney Underway

The annual Cancer Tournament is in full swing and some mighty fine tennis is being played at the Bayhead Racquet Club this weekend.

Top-seeded in the men's division is the nationally ranked team of Roger Pharr and Norm Willner. Giving them plenty of competition for the winner's trophy will be the top SCC team of Colin Davis and Robert Hale, Seminole Coach Larry Castle and Doug Maliczowski, and a host of local teams led by Ahmet Ardaman and Scot Reagan, Lee Holt and son Rick, and Bill Brumley and George Duryea.

The women's division has Sandy Long and Alabama varsity player Laurie McNulty as the team to beat. Challenging them for the title is Cindy Harkins and Marilyn Walton, Bettye Reagan and Rhoda Lake, and Connie Bennett and Jane Fluet. There is no admission charge to anyone wishing to come out and watch and all proceeds and concessions go to the Cancer Seciety. Don't let anyone tell you that changing playing surfaces doesn't affect your game. This past weekend at the Bartow Spring Invitational, Lee Holt of Sanford and Bayhead and this writer managed to win the 35-Doubles Championship over Pharr and Orlo Day. The change from composition to hard surface took its toll as this writer's feet can attest.

TENNIS TIP. Speaking of court surfaces, many players have an opportunity to play on both hard and composition surfaces, and have a difficult time adjusting. The surface does affect stroking technique and timing. On a hard surface, a player must expect faster pace, lower bounces and quicker footwork. For a somewhat faster game, earlier racket preparation is necessary. If one plays on the same surface all the time, one can get into a "timing rut" where a player prepares for his shots in the same manner ever

If this player experiences a transition to a composition surface he must expect a slower, higher bounce and an overall decrease i the pace of the game. The player must thus adjust the "preparatory" phase of his game and compensate the stroke for the expected slower bounce. The soft court player can also get away with more casual footwork since sliding can be integrated into one's approach to the ball. On the hard surface, however, the player must move into position and establish firm footwork and balance earlier.

For Farm-City Festivities

An informal barbecue dinner Thursday will kick off Farm-City festivities planned by the Agribusiness Committee of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce. Ernest Cowen, executive director of the Agribusiness Institute of Florida Inc., will be guest speaker. Place: Sanford Civic Center. Time: 7 p.m. Information: 322-2212.

As part of the Farm-City celebration, special displays, promotions and contests are planned for First Street and in Sanford Plaza on Friday, Farm-City Day. The Junior Womans' Club of Sanford will operate a country store and market basket with donations from local merchants. Profits will go to the annual Christmas parade and July 4 fireworks show.

Urban horticulturists from the Seminole County Agri-Center will have booths downtown and in Sanford Plaza to help those who want to have soil tested or who need homegardening tips.

Chamber: Thank-You B-B-Q

Three-hundred industrial leaders are being invited to a chicken barbecue hosted by the Industrial Action Committee of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce at 6:30 p.m. June 2 at Lake Golden Park. Purpose: thanks from the chamber to the industries for making Sanford their home. The chamber also is sending telegrams to area legislators urging passage of bills that provide tax incentives to prospective industries.

Meadowood Open

The 56-unit Meadowood Apartment development at 980 Montgomery Road in Altamonte Springs is now open, according to a spokesman for Cardinal Industries, Sanfordbased producer of factory-built apartment and motel units and developers of the project.

DEAR HELOISE:

I bought a yard of green burley and cut cutting the bottom of both strips into a point. With red thread and a decorative machine-stitch, I hemmed the two long sides and the pointed end, and then folded the top edge over and stitched it leaving room for a small rod.

Through the opening, I put a wooden dowel that is used to hang a towel calender and presto — I had two lovely Christmas card beamers.

The banners hang from the wall as easily as a calendar, Photographs can be displayed on them with straight pins, and needle and thread can be used to string the cards.

Valentines, birthday cards, Easter cards, Mother's and Father's Day cards and anything that I want to enjoy.

It is especially nice to see the photos of faraway friends every day — it makes them almost close enough for a visit.

Runaways Head For Pals' Homes

Thousands of runaways are reported each year around the U.S. Seminole County reports one a day. In the second of a series, The Herald today explains where these youths go and what they do.

The Seminole County Federation of Women Clubs (SCFWC) has a five-acre headache it wants to get rid of ... for somewhere between $55,800 park just east of the Wekiva River on State Road 46 about 10 miles west of Sanford. The sale of the park was one of the issues before 19 women meeting this morning at the Women's Club of Sanford and representing the 10 clubs for ming the SCFWC. The park was donated to the Lovick Cameron of Sanford. The original intent was that SCFWC members and their families use the facility exclusively. But it has been used less and less for that purpose, according to SCFWC members and that, coupled with vandalism and trespassing problems at the site, is prompting the group to sell the park. The estimated value of the facility was put at between $55,800 and $67,000 by one of the women's federation members. Federation members said the thought at present is to sell the park and turn over the proceeds
