Bootleg Advertising

Speaking before the convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, W. P. Bezell of the New York World declared recently that "in no sense of the word was there any sporting reason for the Sharkey-Stribling bout and that it could not have been "put over" if the newspapers had not "come to the rescue". Mr. Bezell continued to relate how a special train was run from New York to Miami for correspondents covering the fight and that the promoters paid for the newspapermen's board bills and entertainment. And finally the editor criticized the press for accepting the hospitality of the promoters in return for advertising space in the form of news stories, thereby, as it were, deceiving the public.

We are in thorough accord with the New York editor in the opinion that the value of a news story should be based upon its own merits rather than upon the magnitude of the entertainment or the copiousness of the favors showered upon the writers. We believe that the promoters of prize-fights should spend their money legitimately for advertising space instead of an indirect bribe to gain publicity. Not only does the policy of aiding in the promotion of business adventures, regardless of worthiness, destroy reader confidence, but it also destroys any chance a newspaper has of selling advertising space. It goes without saying that as long as one can obtain free publicity in return for a few plums, he will not spend money to buy advertising.

The big problem confronting newspapers is determining a line where advertising begins and news value ends. We believe that a reasonable policy is to evaluate news stories more closely, especially those on commercialized sports and other money making enterprises, in order that the reading matter does not become a catalogue for the benefit of business and the subscriber is not deprived of pertinent information. We consider it a newspaper's duty not to allow bias, obtained through favors or subtle pleasantries, to influence the selection of its news.

An Unwise Measure

A bill providing for the purchase of a winter residence for the president of the United States at a cost not to exceed $250,000 has been introduced in the Florida legislature. The measure also provides an annual appropriation of $25,000 for maintenance of the property. The purpose of the proposal is commendable but we seriously doubt the wisdom of the author, and predict early defeat for the bill.

Passage of the measure might easily precipitate a state-wide controversy over the location of the home, while political influences could result in its erection in West Florida instead of Miami Beach or Palm Beach, the logical places. We doubt seriously whether President Hoover would approve of the proposal, especially in view of his rejection of Mr. Coolidge's suggestion that a summer retreat be located in the mountains of West Virginia. We feel, too, that this is most inopportune time to saddle this additional tax burden upon the people, what with a general clamor on all sides for rigid economy in government. We are satisfied that the President would concur in this view.

There are innumerable wealthy winter visitors, who would be delighted to turn over their palatial estates on the East Coast for the use of the Chief Executive for a few weeks each year. Mr. Penney did that this year, and others would be glad enough to follow his example in order that Florida might continue to play host each winter to the nation's first citizen.

BONDS FOR ROADS

MIAMI HERALD

Florida is tremendously interested in the roads of Georgia and is deeply concerned in the present proposal to issue state bonds in Georgia for the construction of highways. Practically all automobiles coming into Florida pass through Georgia and the better the Georgia roads the better the Florida visitors will be in when they reach their destination.

The Macon Telegraph has been making a valiant fight for the bond proposition and has presented many valid arguments in favor of issuing bonds to improve the roads of Georgia which, the Telegraph says, with a few exceptions are "disgraceful". The state's financial condition is a serious argument against bonds for road purposes and cited many other states as having built fine systems of hard-surfaced highways without issuing bonds.

Florida is one of the states mentioned by The Journal as having built roads without issuing bonds. In reply to this The Telegraph says: "Florida paved her roads because she knew she could not attract visitors without doing it. She had the money, fortunately, because of the coast developments, but her counties are also heavily bonded and Florida has spent a great deal of bond money on road building."

THE BLUE LAW QUESTION

BRADENTON HERALD

The blue law has found its way into the Legislative hopper at Tallahassee to be followed immediately afterwards by a bill that would levy a ten per cent admission tax on theaters and other places of amusement. Representative Trammell, Brvard, is responsible for both of these measures, neither of which will find a great deal of favor in the State. We are under the impression that Florida's existing blue laws would take care of the situation that the gentleman from Brvard hopes to remedy if the public would stand for their enforcement. If this is true why then clutter up the Legislature with meaningless bills that are aimed at nothing other than getting the name of their author in public print.

A big majority of Florida's citizens are observing the sabbath according to their consciences which is about the safest plan we know of. Recently Bradenton voted on the question of Sunday movies. The issue was denied. Yet there was a blue law existing at the time that prohibits Sunday operation

JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II

John Temple Graves II, a prominent figure in the community, is shown in a portrait. He is wearing a suit and tie, and has a serious expression. The text next to the portrait identifies him as John Temple Graves II.

In few words Jackson's message is a Niagara. The swift, untamed torrents of his speech, drawn all opposition. The eternal currents of his speech were a whirlwind of argument. The people of Jacksonville, such as him, weary of his rage, in time of trouble his words soothe them; in time of plenty his words express them. He is a "water" whose art has survived the bootleggers in Florida and has flourished in a city where nothing was ever the vogue. His political successes in the Gate City are a comment on the hypocrisy of the political sound.

Where, oh where, is the state when the state budget for 1929 is announced for expenditures of $420,000,000 those of 1927-28 by $420,000,000?

President David Smith of the state chamber of commerce is amazed at newspaper reports of his intention to run for governor in 1928. He does not deny that he is greatly amazed at them.

It was to be expected that President Hoover, whose mental processes are always busy, would employ in support of the public tariff policy the most legitimate and convincing argument in favor of such policy, namely, the protection of American industry.

"No discrimination against any foreign industry is involved in equalizing the difference in cost of production at home and abroad and thus taking from the producers the advantage they enjoy by producing lower wages to labor," he declares. "In a far sense we have lowered the price of goods to our own people by where in the advantage to American labor? It, because of our tariffs, the American laborer's dollar cannot buy any more than the foreign laborer's cents, the labor argument in favor of such tariff goes glimmering."

Of course it does not work out each day, but the purchasing power of the American laborer's wage is undoubtedly higher than that of the laborer in many foreign countries, today. But this result is not nearly so much from the fact as from the fact of prosperity of America. And the maintenance of this prosperity, as Mr. Hoover himself has often pointed out, will depend directly upon the development and exploitation of foreign markets for surplus American production. A high American tariff can do much to limit the development of such foreign markets by provoking retaliatory tariffs abroad that will close many doors to American trade.

SONNET
Christ must have whined in his younger days
Sung to his favored folk, and talked to them
Through hours when unborn dreams were the a haze
Across the hills beyond Jerusalem.
And, later, when the dreams were edged with flame
That crackled in the Temple,
Christ must still
Have loved returning roads that brought the same
Old song things to steady his young will.
For every dreamer challenging the dawn
With urgent faith to make an end of night
Must find again, when night seems never gone,
New faith in patience, and a farther light
So Christ would touch remembered tools, and see,
Days going steeply toward Calvary.

THE PRESIDENT'S FARM BOARD

What President Hoover recommended yesterday in his farm relief message to congress was the organization of a governmental agency to do for agriculture what the federal reserve has done for the nation's financial structure and what the interstate commerce commission has done in solving the troubles of the railroads. In principle it is a sound proposal. In practice it will be far more difficult to administer than the reserve system or the transportation act. The machinery of finance is delicate and the rate schedules of the railroads are complicated but both lead themselves to federal regulation more readily than the individualistic affairs of farmers. President Hoover makes it plain that he recognizes the difficulties but his message has a tone of hopefulness. It is quite evident that in his mind is conviction that the end sought can be attained.

What he would do is have congress create a federal board, empowered with broad powers to investigate and cause of agricultural distress and apply suitable remedies. These remedies he outlines: only in the most general terms grouping them under "reorganization of the marketing system on sounder and more stable and more economic lines." To escape the pitfalls, and the administrative impossibility, of direct dealings between the farmers and the government he proposes that the federal board shall act only upon request from co-operative organizations and deal with them as representing the growers. This policy affords the advantage of shifting responsibility for compulsory requirements from the government to the co-operatives.

Mr. Hoover bans the equalization fee which previous congresses had approved in passing the McNary-Haugen bill. In doing so, he apparently closes the door to the farm relief plan which the president has been considering. This plan provides for a system of debentures, not materially different in principle from the equalization fee. The president's recommendations generally are thought to follow closely to bill drafted by the house committee on agriculture, which was before him when his message was completed. Details of this plan have not been made public but its known features correspond to the main plan suggested by Mr. Hoover. The fund generally recommended to get the board up in business is $200,000,000.

What the reaction of the farm belt will be to the president's communication remains to be seen. In specific recommendations the message falls short of the expectation of the western leaders but the rank and file will undoubtedly be content to approve the speech on its generalities and await legislation by congress to make the administration's program effective.

Florida Fight Which Dempsey May Encourage

NEW YORK, Apr. 18 (INS)—The Dempsey fight, the scene of a heavyweight bout, is the promoter of Tampa, popular promoter of Tampa and personal friend of Jack Dempsey.

Downing's opinion, the next Florida fight should be staged on Miami on the east coast but Tampa, on the west coast. His opinion is that the tourists who would be attracted to the next winner would flock to a new spot—Miami—a place that enjoys such attractions as can be found in the vicinity of Tampa Bay.

"I know one thing—Tampa will not be the scene of this kind of a fight," Downing said.

Downing and Dempsey had their heads together in Miami Beach at the time of the Sharkey-Stripling fight on the subject of a big fight between the two future stars. In fact, Dempsey paid a visit to Tampa and was very favorably impressed. Of course, Dempsey was then connected with the Madison Square Garden Corporation, and now he has switched his interest to the Dempsey-Cole Fugazy combination which is like to prove as strong as the Gaalen ever was. He would seem, Downing has one thing in the hole, and that is his friend Jack Dempsey.

Dempsey and Downing were friends long before Jack won his heavyweight championship of the world at Toledo. Jim Downing was a first class heavyweight fighter in the days when Dempsey and Jack Gaalen were coming to the front. Jim did most of his fighting in the Rocky Mountain Region and the Pacific Coast where Dempsey was in his attraction during his days. It is not surprising that Dempsey has been fast friends ever since.

Downing in recent years has been staging some splendid bouts at Benjamin Field, Tampa, and he has stepped up his interest in things athletic to a high point on the Florida coast. He is easily the outstanding fight promoter in Florida. He knows the fight game and what is more important he has the confidence of the public and the business interest of Tampa.

It has been his attraction during a heavyweight battle of importance on his own in Tampa in the Mar Futu. He told me he was sure he could arrange to have Paulino Uscudun put on a scrap there and he said there was no question but that the Spaniard would draw a big gate from the Florida West Coast alone, especially in view of the big Cuban and Latin population of the Ybor City section of Tampa.

Tampa, according to Downing, is one of the most picturesque spots in Florida, with many advantages that would appeal to the tourists in the event a major heavyweight fight should be staged there next winter, or any other winter for that matter. Those who have visited Tampa will no doubt agree with him, for there is plenty of sporting atmosphere to the place.

There is for instance, colorful Ybor City whose Spanish restaurants are unequalled in any other city of the United States. Jim took the trouble of phoning us around so that we might obtain the evidence first hand. The Spanish restaurants there are famous for their "Arroz con pollo," or chicken, and yellow rice.

Intriguing Names

Visitors are invariably intrigued by such formidable looking words on the menus as Bacalao, Salsita,

Verde, Lengua Catalina, Biste Catalina, the "pasaditas" and the "biste" or ordinary steaks. They are delighted to discover that in ordering a "biste," they have drawn a steak rich in seasoning and as tender and tasty as can be.

Rubin's restaurant, Rosala's restaurant, Garcia's restaurant, and La Plaza are four of the important downtown eating establishments that feature appetizing dishes. One of the most popular resorts in the city, both for the Latin population and the tourists, is the old Las Nevadas—the Novelty—operated in the Ybor City section by the "Mississ" Dehling, Farnome and his portly partner, Celestino Landria.

Visitors are also attracted to the Las Nevadas in Havana to the piano with its peppy Spanish tunes. Not far away is another popular place—Manuel Avares Grand Orient, L&B the other restaurant. The Grand Orient is equipped with a large dining room and many private dining rooms where visitors can retire for strict privacy.

Broad-Minded Town

Tampa seems to be a "broad-minded" town. It is not sports of "wide open" by any means but at the same time it does not seem to be ruled by an iron hand.

Downing in extolling the virtues of Tampa in attracting visitors for a big winter fight, pointed to the city's close proximity to other attractive cities such as St. Petersburg, Clearwater, Bradenton, Sarasota, Wintery Haven—all within a short motor ride. He also points to the excellent fishing and boating in Tampa Bay, and the other attractions of the vicinity.

It will be interesting to see whether Downing will be able to draw the pugilistic spotlight from Miami to Tampa next winter. It is a matter of time, Jim Downing will go a long way.

Rhyme Of Nursery Inspired Picture At Milane Theater

"Saturday's Children," the Maxwell Anderson comedy-drama which won the Pulitzer prize as the best play of 1927, coming to the screen at the Milane Theatre today with Corinne Griffith in the stellar role of Bobby Halvey, a working girl, gets its title from the old nursery rhyme:

Monday's child is fair of face
Tuesday's child is full of grace
Wednesday's child is full of woe
Thursday's child is far to go
Friday's child is loving and giving
Saturday's child must work for his living.

Miss Griffith will be seen as a private secretary to the President of a big business firm who falls in love with a clerk in the same concern. Her employer is played by Albert Conti and the clerk is enacted by Grant Withers.

The picture deals with the disconcerting honesty of girls and boys of today's younger generation in their unique attitude toward love. It is an intimate, realistic story and Gregory La Cava, who directed, has retained the pathos blended with comedy, the great artistic touches, and originality of viewpoint which stamp Maxwell Anderson's play as one of the outstanding achievements of modern drama.

CARIS COUNT ON ALEXANDER FOR YEAR'S SUCCESS

Old Pete Has Revealed Fine Brand Of Ball During This Spring

NEW YORK, Apr. 18 (INS)—Eighteen years ago this Spring the Phillie Phanatic, whipped twice by the Athletics, was fighting a losing battle for whatever glory and prestige there is in winning the city championship. The eye of Manager Charley Dooin fell upon a tall rookie from Syracuse as he hopefully scanned his battered pitching corps for a hurler who could stop the Mackmen.

"If you want to stay with this club," said Dooin to the rookie, "go in there and beat those boys."

For this season the bushy headed American League pitcher, pulled him out of the box to save him for games that would mean something in the pennant race.

Nineteenth Season

This year that pitcher is still in his nineteenth year in the big show. Grover Cleveland Alexander himself probably has lost track of the years—he just keeps hitting long. But the St. Louis Cardinals are banking upon him just as heavily as did the Phillies in 1911, when Alex turned in twenty-eight victories as against thirteen defeats in his first year in the league.

Old Pete probably won't win eight straight games this season; he did eighteen years ago. The world's champion New York Yankees, however, will sough for the act that the old boy still knows as stuff. They pounded him in the world series last Fall only to see him return to Tampa next winter. It is a matter of time, Jim Downing will go a long way.

JAUNTY SPORTS FROCK

This sports frock has the distinctive charm that comes from careful designing and simplicity of line. The present vogue for points is attractively expressed by the manner in which the upper-fronts of the blouse are crossed and rolled to form ruffles, and the lower front attached in pointed outline. Even the pockets add a jaunty note by being inserted diagonally below the narrow belt. Pleats in the front of the two-piece skirt are stitched down part way; the skirt is attached to a long waisted bodice blouse. This frock is smart and serviceable for street wear in tweed or flannel with plain weaves.
