

IN STATE MEET ARE ELIMINATED

Bows To Gibbons, Favor Tampa Player

SEAWATER COUNTRY CLEARWATER, Mar. 27.—125 golfers who teed off Wednesday in the annual Florida state amateur championship had dwindled to a mere eight yesterday, Tampa being quoted as ready to annex the title.

One of the 12 Tampans who were in the championship flight by the wayside yesterday. But three remaining contenders—Gibbons, Neil Sweet and Jack Taylor, Jr.—won today in the quarter-finals comparative ease.

The defending champion from Miami, Billy Duck, the medalist from Bradenton, Toomer, of Jacksonville, and Al Turner, of Clearwater.

Gibbons, shooting smooth, near perfect, dropped Gavin Moore, of Petersburg, 4 and 3, in the opening match, and in the afternoon he defeated G. W. Spencer, of Orlando. He was out in all the way in both matches.

Sweet, Tampa's city champion, carried to the 18th green to meet Ross Carson, of St. Petersburg, in the first round. But he teared out steady (sure golf), the kind that has kept him in the headlines in Tampa in recent years. He won easily from Jim Green, of Rocky Point, Tampa, and 3, in the afternoon.

Taylor, the 18-year-old youngster from Palma Ceia, won both matches by wide margins. He defeated Brook Glenn, of Miami, in the morning, eliminated the old Clyde Perry, his clubmate, 1 and 1, in the afternoon. Taylor's quarter-final pit Wezy Toomer, Redmond against Duckwall against Gibbons, Turner against Taylor. Toomer has been installed as a slight favorite over West, and Sweet is seen the edge over Redmond. But Gibbons-Duckwall and Turner-Toomer matches loom as top-ups. You have been playing expensively, a stroke or two above par.

Duckwall won the medal Wednesday with a 75, one stroke over West, and he equalled this in defeating Melle Reynolds of Jacksonville, one up, Wednesday afternoon. He had no trouble in defeating Harold Clark, of Lakeland, 5 and 4, in the morning.

Toomer scored a 76 in the quarter-finals Wednesday, and he won his match yesterday by scoring 74 over West, 18 holes. He won 75 in the afternoon.

Green and Taylor tied for second place in the qualifying with 78, and both scored 79 this afternoon. Turner, Taylor's opponent, needed an 82 to qualify, but he brought home a 74 yesterday morning in eliminating West. Polenta, of Rocky Point, Tampa, and 1. He defeated Schuyler of Orlando, 5 and 4, in the afternoon.

Probably the biggest surprise of the tournament was the defeat of Orlando's Toomer's Cuban champion, in the second round. Toomer was decided on the 18th when Ortega's 20-foot putt was stopped on the very edge of the hole. The cup as a large gallery of onlookers, ready to break in. Ortega has been made a favorite over Redmond and regarded as one of the dark horses of the tournament.

Palmer and Held to Die for Slaying been out the jurors sent to the court for the (third time) in the murder, and pronounced a 10-2 verdict they reported they would reach a verdict in half an hour.

Judge Robles had charged them that as accessories in a murder with the principal, or the man who actually fired the fatal shot, and was subject to the same punishment. He charged that state law does not require proof of premeditated design in murder resulting from robbery, or attempted robbery.

"If you believe from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt," he said, "that the defendant Victor Palmer attempted to rob Johnson and killed him in that attempt, and if you believe, beyond a reasonable doubt, that Norman Held was there aiding and abetting in that crime, it will be your duty to find them guilty of murder in the first degree."

While the jury was out, minutes passed endlessly, but as time went by Palmer and Held grew hopeful.

Both chatted and smiled with friends in an adjoining witness room, Palmer straddling a chair, enjoying the conversation. Held figured with a cross word puzzle—a three-letter word meaning to chat in the middle, a six-letter word meaning an aromatic herb.

Held worked studiously and came out for a ham sandwich which he ate with relish. He and Palmer arose slowly and returned to the court, when they were told the jury was ready.

Judge Robles warned the audience against a demonstration. Any outbreak would mean contempt of court, he said. There was none.

More than 100 persons heard the verdict, and the audience was sprinkled liberally with women.

Party Moves to Stave Off Raskob Plans

This program was formulated. Some of the leaders expressed fear that unless they organize their forces Raskob, through control of the party organization, could force adoption of his program.

One of those affiliated with the movement said he believed the Raskob platform was the program of former Governor Smith of New York and that his approval was designed to force his nomination.

Governor Smith addressed the national committee and said he was not sure he agreed with all of Raskob's speech but defended the committee chairman's pulling the program.

Raskob's recommendations included the adoption of a platform committing the party to modification of the Eighteenth Amendment in order to allow (state) control of liquor and a plank advocating liberalization of the law governing corporation merger.

Daniel Mills, taxi driver, took the stand at the opening of the afternoon session and told of seeing a man, hatless and apparently excited, run in front of his cab parked near the tunnel end and dash up the street with an officer in pursuit. A woman had followed him up the steps, Mills said, shouting "stop that man."

"Did you ever see that man again?"

The Fruit And Vegetable Tariff

Of particular interest to the farmers of this section should be the efforts being made by American speculators in foreign countries to obtain a hearing before the Tariff Commission for the purpose of securing a reduction in tariff on fruits and vegetables.

A letter recently received in this office from Lorenzo Wilson, executive chairman of the Florida Agricultural Association, declares that unless the Association is successful in its fight, the tariff will be reduced, and every farmer in the state will be ruined, while bankers and other business and professional men will suffer accordingly.

Should Florida's foreign competitors be successful in lowering the tariff, the Association insists, Florida will be unable to market its fruits and vegetables at any price which will compete with the growers of Mexico, Cuba, and Bermuda.

The effect would be the immediate abandonment of large areas of fruit and truck lands in this state and the ruination of one of the greatest industries a state ever had.

Florida cannot compete with these foreign competitors on a basis of equality, mainly because of the extreme inequalities in labor costs.

It is further interesting, in this connection, to observe the schedule of county revenue derived from green vegetables for the season of 1929-30. Our own county of Seminole stands out in amazing contrast to all the others with nearly five million dollars to its credit and with its nearest competitor trailing considerably under two million.

The exact figures place Seminole county at $4,703,050, and Dade county, ranking second, at $1,888,850. Only five other counties are in the million dollar class.

Obviously what affects Florida agriculturally, affects Seminole, greater than any other county.

It was extremely unfortunate that Florida, in order to obtain a fair tariff on fruits and vegetables, was the means of passing the most obnoxious tariff bill in the history of the country, a bill which, in our opinion, was as much responsible as anything else for the general economic depression through which this country has passed during the last sixteen months.

In favor of the principal of tariff at all. But this is no longer a matter of theory; it is an actuality. We have protective tariff in this country, apparently as a permanent fixture.

If manufactured products are to be thus protected from foreign competition, fruits and vegetables should likewise be protected.

Wise Jury

Although capital punishment has been tried in Michigan for many years and has been found ineffectual in curbing crime, to the extent that it has finally been abandoned, we have not lost our faith in the principle of confinement as the best solution for outlawry, or our belief that the brutality of capital punishment serves little purpose in elevating civilization to a higher plane.

Nevertheless we find it in our heart to express our highest praise for the Tampa jury which has sent the slayers of Joe Johnson to the chair.

In an age which sees a Supreme Court freeing criminals on almost any technicality brought before it, and a Pardon Board yielding readily to the pressure of the flimsiest petitions, it is futile to talk of life imprisonment as an effectual but civilizing punishment for serious criminal acts. Almost any man, we believe, would, in the contemplation of some vicious wrong, be deterred to a greater extent by the prospect of life term in prison, from which there was no escape, than by the fear of the electric chair.

But the penalty of life imprisonment, in this state, is problematical; in fact, it is a joke. No doubt the Tampa jury was thinking of that when it considered the case of Palmer and Heidt.

Here was a case which smacks of gangster abandon and complete indifference toward human life, yet lacking strangely in the usual attributes of such killings. No man was put on the spot. There had been no scuffling, or double-crossing. No one had talked too much. In fact, no one had talked at all. Mr. Johnson was one of Tampa's most respected citizens, absolutely unknown to the man who killed him. It was simply a case of banditry, an insane lust for gold, and a pistol in the hands of a drink-crazed reprobate.

By his own testimony Palmer had for months lain around filthily speaking in a drunken stupor sopping up anything and everything that was served him, until, when a hold-up was suggested he fell in with the plan without thinking, and, when the crucial time arrived, he shot without the slightest regard for the life of his victim.

It might have happened to you! It might have happened to your neighbor, or anyone else. Tampa citizens were indignant and insisted upon vigorous investigation of all clues by the authorities until two of the criminals were caught, and upon vigorous prosecution, until, within little more than two months after the crime, they have been convicted. This speaks well for justice. All concerned deserve the highest commendation.

But if the jury had shown mercy on the insane soul of the degenerate Palmer, and life imprisonment had been the verdict, would public indignation have been sufficiently durable to have kept him incarcerated for life? In five or ten years, the crime would have been forgotten. Friends of Palmer would have prepared a position, and another man would have been turned loose upon the public, bearing remorse and penitent prayers to show some other unsuspecting citizen.

CANDID

Other signs of the season... The day was bright and clear... When the invalids were about, Barrett (Browning), wrote the verse about her little dog, who was always associated with his son, the meter dropped and three quatrains of a century came a brown pup, bred in Westchester county, New York, which had the ring of stage immortals in the characterization of her 'Topsy' behind the footlights of Broadway way. Out there she showed her appreciation when Katherine Cornell, who plays Miss Barrett in 'The Barretts of Wimpole Street', one of the most important dramatic offerings of the New York season, insisted upon giving the role of 'Topsy' to her...

So convincing is his interpretation of the part that he might even be expected to carry out the most dire and infamous act in his career or the original 'Topsy', who his Robert Browning severity when he made his first visit to the Wimpole Street. But, alas, if there lurks in the cocker spaniel's heart a deep desire to 'smile and smile and be a villain', he is denied the opportunity for the playwright very tactfully never allows Browning and the dog to be on the stage at the same time. Thus he achieves the double-barreled objective of preserving both the literary verities and the sanity of the actor.

Although the Broadway production of 'The Admirable Crichton' is being produced by George C. Tyler with Walter Hampden and Fay Bainter in the leading roles. Peculiarly satisfying to those who enjoy observance of theatrical tradition is the selection of William Postaker for director. Mr. Postaker staged the original American production of 'Crichton' under the Charles Frohman banner.

Magrel like most of the pictures... and you can read shows if you care to—the boxing matches are not as well produced as they would like to be because they're not up to snuff. Or maybe it's that they charge more than prospective clients want to part with. Either or both reasons for a reported falling off in the preceding attendance figures are credible.

Burke Declines To Talk Much As To H's Activities

When officers asked Burke about his Chicago activities he replied: "On, yes, I've been there frequently. I bought an automobile last week. It's a nice town."

When a group of photographers the gunman said: "You fellows are a nice bunch, but I don't see how you can see me. You are looking for me."

Yank said he expressed a desire to see Burke as to his activities when Frankie Yale, Chicago gang leader, was shot on Sunday, July 1, 1935.

In confirming previous identification of the prisoner as Burke, Detective Ed Tyrrell of Chicago made the discovery that the gunman's nose has changed shape recently.

Tyrrell accused Burke of having become the patient of a beauty doctor. The prisoner smiled.

Tyrrell produced pictures to show that the gunman once had a long, pointed nose, whereas it now is of the Roman type.

expert maneuvering she brought the plane down in a field near the airport.

The plane overturned in landing on the rough ground. Except for a severe headache caused by her oxygen tank becoming disconnected in the wild descent, Miss Smith was uninjured.

"I got to 25,000 feet in just about 30 minutes," she said. "The plane was climbing like nothing I'd ever flown before. I was right over New York City when I noticed the motor was turning up about 21,000 revolutions per minute."

"We were going along like a house on fire, when boom—it was all over. I didn't know what was the matter as the motor had stopped dead. I thought first of the gas. I tried the gas cock, and found I still had gas. I had my safety belt off and as I leaned back I must have slipped a screw in the oxygen tank. The next thing I knew my head felt like it was all swelled up."

"I looked at the altimeter and found I had dropped 10,000 feet. I looked out and saw the town near Rockville Centre. I tried to make Mitchell field, but I couldn't. I was getting closer and closer to the ground when I saw a field beneath me."

"I was cutting all this time with the left wing and that's what pulled me back towards the field. I had to cut when I broke and then started pulling. I saw a tree and a big hole right in front of me, so I had to cut in the bushes for all they were worth. I landed the plane over."

Mrs. Long Hurt In Auto Accident At Intersection

FIVE CHILDREN PERISH IN COLD WAVE IN WEST

Damage to transportation and communications facilities was heavy in the area which felt the greatest fury of a storm weather observers called the worst in years.

Destruction of fruit seemed inevitable in parts of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Missouri, and Arkansas. Less damage to fruit was reported in the more northerly states where budding was less advanced.

Livestock appeared to be hard hit, but stockmen said the good condition of cattle on the ranges was a hopeful factor.

The storm spread out in fingers from the Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota country. One pointed southwesterly across the Oklahoma-Texas panhandle and reached the Gulf. Another lay across Missouri and was advancing into Kentucky and Tennessee. A third had reached as northeasterly carrying snow to the Chinese. A fourth was sweeping across Minnesota, into northern Michigan and Indiana.

The night, but the morning was said to have complete recovery. The Chrysler sedan was driven by Mrs. J. J. Cates, West Side, who was driving north on Elm Avenue.

Mrs. Long was thrown through the door of the Ford after being thrown out by flying glass, and struck her forehead about 10 feet away, landing on her head and back. From the wound in the crown of her head, the blood flowed in her eyes, and she was unable to see.
