Tour goal: Show realtors Sanford shines

By VICKI Desonmier Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD - Sanford schools have long had the reputation as being inferior to others in the district. Members of the Greater Sanlord Chamber of Commerce's education committee want to dispel that notion.

Last summer, the group organized their first group of realtors to take a look at the schools and at some of the students who attend classes at those schools.

A bus load of realtors from as far away as Maitland and Winter Park rode through town, stopping at Seminole High School, at Lakeview Middle School and at Goldsboro Elementary, seeing that the local schools have much to offer.

SANFORD - Is it the function of an education to prepare young people for more education or is it to prepare them for the workplace?

The needs of modern industry seem to dictate the latter and the Seminole County schools have made it their business to make the transition from school to work an easier one.

State education officials are pleased with the work being done in this district and are coming to

Today they are shouting 'school reform,' and this is due in part to the efforts of leaders such as Commissioner Brogan and the people involved locally and nationally in restructuring education to make it more relevant for students.

Brogan wants to take the opportunity at the summit to discuss some of the School to Work programs, such as Seminole High's Academy of Health Careers and the Academy of Tourism and Travel at Oviedo High School. He will also discuss with Hogle and Hagerty some of the strategies the district uses for involving as many students as possible in the School to Work programs.

who graduate from the program are prepared to work in the medical field. If they wish, they are also prepared to continue their studies at the post-secondary level.

The Academy of Tourism and Travel provides the students with the training they will need to go to work in central Florida's thriving tourism industry. From travel agent training to studies in the hotel-motel industry, the academy prepares the students for work directly after graduation. They are also prepared to study the industry further in college courses if they so choose.

According to Hogle, the School to Work program gives students the important technical and academic skills they need to be successful in today's workforce. Students recieve technical training through specialized programs in high school, combined with a high level of academic education.

Anti-alien drive collects 50,000 names

TALLAHASSEE - The organizers of a petition drive to cut off most services to illegal aliens say they've collected enough signatures to trigger a court review of their measure.

The Orlando group pushing the proposed constitutional amendment for the November ballot is known as Save Our State. It has collected 50,000 petitions, according to executive director Doug Guetzloe.

When citizen initiatives have collected 10 percent of the 429,428 signatures needed to make the ballot, the state Supreme Court reviews them for clarity and scope.

The signatures collected by Save Our State, however, have not been certified by elections supervisors. Guetzioe said his group expected 90 percent of their signatures would be valid.

The Save Our State measure would strip welfare, education and health benefits from the families of illegal immigrants. It's modeled after Proposition 187 passed in California in 1994 and since held up by court challenges.

Chiles seeks expansion of group homes for elderly

By JACKIE HALLIFAX Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE -Margaret Wells, 91, doesn't let her cane slow her down much. The former school teacher makes her own bed, does her own laundry and runs the bridge club in the residential center where she has lived for five years.

Mrs. Wells said Wednesday it would be very hard for her to move into a nursing home if she couldn't afford Taylor Manor. She said she would be reluctant to lose her independence and privacy.

"I guess I could take it if I had to, but right now I don't feel like I could," she said.

Gov. Lawton Chiles wants to help more elderly people afford such assisted living facilities by spending Medicaid dollars that would otherwise go to nursing homes or other kinds of care.

The idea is to divert 2,300 people from nursing homes to community-based alternatives, Elderly Affairs Secretary Bentley Lipscomb said Wednesday.

Those alternatives range from services like delivered meals, home health aides and group homes known as adult family care homes. There also would be more emphasis on centers such as Taylor Manor in Jacksonville, where Mrs. Wells lives.

Mrs. Wells needs little assistance in her daily activities. A housekeeper cleans her private room and bathroom once a week. Her meals are prepared for her.

The key to Chiles' proposal is Medicaid, the joint federal-state program that pays for the health care of people on welfare and the nursing home bills of most elderly people.

Iwo-thirds of the nursing home bill in Florida is paid by Medicaid. This year, the state's Medicald nursing home bill is $1.35 billion, more than double five years ago.

But Medicald usually doesn't pay for people to live in places like Taylor Manor.

Crackdown on teen tobacco sa

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - The government to giving states seven months to figure out how to catch stores that sell cigarettes to teen-agers, beginning a national crackdown on illegal tobacco sales.

Congress in 1992 passed a law forbidding any store from selling tobacco to anyone under 18. The so-called Synar amendment. named for the late Oklahoma Rep. Mike Synar, requires states to enforce the sales ban.

But the Department of Health and Human Services never told states how to do the job - and studies have estimated that teen-agers buy hundreds of millions of packs of cigarettes a

On Friday, HHS will publish regulations in the Federal Reglater spelling out how states must catch stores that break the law and punish them until they comply with enforcing the ban.

Enforcing the ban will help stop illegal tobacco sales and discourage thousands of young people from striking the first match of a lifelong, life-threatening addiction." President Clinton wrote Synar's family in informing them of the new rules.

Synar died of brain cancer Jan. 9.

The Tobacco Institute did not immediately respond to the regulations, but the industry has several programs under way that it contends fight teen smoking by educating store cierks not to sell them tobacco.

Under the new regulations, states must:

-By Sept. 1, provide the government a list of all stores that sell tobacco and develop an HHS-approved plan to do surprise inspections to catch illegal sales to minors. Failure can mean losing 20 percent of the grants.

-in fiscal year 1997, do enough surprise inspections to report scientifically how well states comply with the Synar amendment. Also, they must develop a government-approved time frame to meet the law's sales goal. Each state can decide on its own how to deal with stores that break the law, and each will have a different deadline for final compliance, to reflect that some states already enforce the law better than others. Failure to comply will mean losing 30 percent of an-Il-substance-abuse grants.

-By fiscal 1996, the states must be on track to meet their compliance deadlines or risk losing 40 percent of federal health funding.

Minnesota Attorney General Hubert Humphrey III said the regulations will help states crack down on illegal sellers. But he distributed among them.

"I think the current system is indefenable,") he said on CNN's 'Larry King Live' program.

Publisher Steve Forbes has moved up in GOP presidential polls with heavy advertising for his flat-tax plan, which calls for a 17 percent rate, no deduction for mortgage interest and no individual taxes on interest or capital gains.

Some of Forbes' GOP presidential rivals call his plan a "nutty idea" and a windfall for the rich. But faced with Forbes' jump in the polls, GOP frontrunner Sen. Bob Dole cautiously embraced the Kemp proposal, saying he welcomed a "fairer, flatter, simpler approach."

Dole, the Senate majority leader, seemed worried that Democrats would seize on the plan to argue Republicans are abandoning the middle class - a key awing group of voters.

"The middle class always seems to end up with the heaviest load, and they're tired." Dole said.

"The real problem is that average, hard-working families pay too much to subsidize the smorgasbord of loopholes and gimmicks that grow in our tax code each year," he said.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin said President Clinton supports efforts to simplify the tax system, but the Republican commission's plan "offers no solution to how a flat tax proposai can avoid either raising income taxes on working families or exploding the deficit."

In response, Kemp said, "The president, bless his heart, is defending the status quo."

The Kemp commission shied away from endorsing a specific plan being pushed by any GOP presidential candidate. Instead, it laid out a dozen principles that should be followed in changing the tax code.

The panel, appointed by Dole and House Speaker Nev Gingrich, R-Ga., also side-stepped the issue of whether to climinate politically popular deductions.

Dole said he would pass the commission's recommendations on to the Senate Finance Committee, or perhaps to a task force, to begin hearings on the issue. He did not say whether the plan should be a plank in the Republican platform.

Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, who unveiled his own tax plan this week, took a swipe at Dole for failing to embrace a specific Sen. Dick Lugar, R-Ind., another presidential hopeful. said the Kemp panel fell short. Lugar wants to abolish the income tax entirely and replace it with a national retail sales tax.

He said the taxes will be at the center of the 1996 presidential debate, but an overhaul "will only occur if you have a Republican president and two Republican Houses. The Democrats don't want this."

IRS sets up web site to answer filers' questions

By DAVE SKIDSOF Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - It may not be the most fun site on the internet, but the Internal Revenue Service's new home page could prove to be one of the most heavily used between now and the April 15 income-tax filing deadline.

The agency announced Wednesday that its home page - accessible to 40 million Americans through the World Wide Web - has been up and running since Jan. 8.

During its first day in operation, 220,000 computer users visited it. More than a million accessed it in the first week even before the debut was officially announced.

Not in my back yard

It's a difficult situation, one which often brings disputes pitting neighbors against neighbors and government officials against the people they serve.

The problem is land development, and as in many cases, there are two sides to the story.

SIDE 1 - A person purchases or inherits a certain parcel of land. It may not be used for construction of a residence or go into the farming or the citrus industry. The property owner sees it as an income potential.

After all, a person is king of the property he or she owns. If a person wishes to sell it or develop it, it should be his right in our free society.

The first step is to determine how that land can be used in order to obtain the most profit. Then, in most cases, money, often a great deal of it, has to be spent in order to begin stages of development, planning, and design. Statistics will need to be obtained to determine the selling potential of the land in the expected use.

Or, another situation: a person purchases or inherits a house. It may be needed for a residence, but eventually, because the owner wants to obtain a new residence, or through other financial situations, the house is vacated, and subsequently offered for sale. A potential owner appears and a profit appears to be forthcoming.

SIDE 2 - People purchase homes or property in certain locations with the exthat H will continue to be surrounded by undeveloped land. Before a purchase is arranged, buyers may examine the Comprehensive Plan to determine adjacent land use. If it appears as though serenity can be assured, the purchase and building goes ahead.

Lo and behold, suddenly, someone wants to change the Comprehensive Plan on the adjacent property in order to develop it. "You can't do this." the neighbor might say, "I bought my property with the belief that nothing around it would be developed and now I'll be faced with heavy traffic and noise." And of course, there is always the suspicion that adjacent property will be developed at a lesser level than one's own, thus bringing the property values lower than they have been. After all, they have property and they are citizens. Their rights should be respected.

Or, in the second hypothetical situation; a person buys a vacant house with the hopes of moving in, only to find that the previous owner was allowed certain exemptions because of a grandfathering clause. Before occupancy can be accomplished, there are now codes, restrictions, and variances which have to be obtained or adhered to. This process may not only be costly, but time consuming and frustrating.

Thus we find, time after time, requests being made for changes to the Comprehensive Plans which result in a dispute between property owners or prospective developers, and owners of adjacent property.

This is not a particular situation. It has been happening time and time again in our cities and county, and will undoubtedly continue for many years to come.

It is a perplexing situation and one which is never easily solved to the agreement of all parties concerned. We should have sympathy for the people on our various committees and commissions who will be faced with making these choices. Regardless of what is decided, someone will probably be angry.

This is a case of NIMBY, an acrynom for "Not In My Back Yard." Developing a home or property with which to make a profit is great for the people doing it but not for those who

With the progress of today's society, who knows, perhaps people who have fought other developments, will some day want to improve their own financial status. Then from whence will come the opposition?

BEN WATTENBERG

A most implausible novel

A young author is pitching his political novel to a major publisher. "Here's the story," he says. "There is this wife of the president. She's smart, she knows everything, and lets you know it. Back when her husband was governor, she was one of America's top 100 lawyers, she did a terrific job on education and she made a bundle in commodities. One of her clients was a very shady, ethically challenged bank, but she says she didn't know it."

"So what?" says the publisher. "Why should I publish it?"

"Then she comes to Washington," the author says. "She tries to get cronies some business in the White House by firing oldtimers. She says she never did it. Then a close friend from the old law firm, working at the White House, commits suicide. Some papers disappear. She says she had nothing to do with it. Then the Congress starts investigating some old land deals. She says she did nothing wrong. The Congress holds hearings, covered by big-time television. They do a whole hour about it on Brinkley."

"The Congress?" asks the publisher. "Television? Why?"

"That's the way they do things. They know people watch it. There was once a Republican president who said 'I am not a crook,' and the Democratic Congress tried to prove that he was. And get this: She worked on the Congress team, nailing the Republican president. The Democrats said that the president did very bad things, mostly that he covered up and lied. The Republicans said it was all politics.

"So what else is new?" says the publisher.

"So the Congress set up new regulations about money, lobbying and ethics, and set up inspectors and independent counsels, and investigative sections for public integrity. That made it easier to expose evil. So there was more evil exposed, even tiny evils. The press loved it. They were the only good guys left, exposing evil. It sold papers and got good ratings. But then, later on, wouldn't you guess. there was a Democratic president and a Republican Congress, and this time the Republican Congress investigates. The Republicans say the first lady did very bad things, mostly that she covered up and lied."

"But it's still not such a great story." says

'But it's also about the president and what he did and about policy," says the author.

'What did he do?'' asks the publisher. "He's got a history, too. They say he dodged the draft and ran around with lots of babes. Then a young woman says that while he was governor, he got her in a hotel room and made, uh, like, inappropriate moves. This president is also very smart and lets you know it. He says it's a lie. His enemies say he's a big liar and she's a congenital liar."

"It sounds weird to me," says the publisher. "Hey, it's fiction. There's also a really tragic part," says the author.

"A whole hour on Brinkley? It's already a tragedy." says the publisher.

"The best friends are a tragedy. They came to Washington to help the president and the wife. One of them commits suicide, another, the associate attorney general, goes to jail, another is fired because he used the first helicopter to go shoot a round of golf. Other best friends are accused of per-Jury. The lawyers come. Soon legal fees bankrupt the first couple. The wife goes on a book tour to tell people how to raise children. She knows best. He knows best. They know best.'

"Shakespearean, huh? But we don't publish Shakespeare." says the publisher.

"But there's more," says the author. The Republicans think they can win an election on it because it proves that Democrats are sanctimonious, hypocritical, liberal twits. The president needs protectors so he situggles up to the liberals. The liberals don't want him to sign a budget to open the government."

"The government is closed?" asks the publisher. "That sounds crazy."

'There's a reason. The Democrats say the Republicans want to starve old people and put them out on the street." "Do they?"

"Nobody knows. But that's what the president says. And it's a very important election. For America and the world. It's about whether Ame ica can change course."

"It better. So how does it end?" asks the publisher.

"That's the point," says the author. "It never ends. Everybody is investigating everybody. It never ends."

"That's ridiculous," says the publisher. "Novels always end. I'm not going to publish it. I don't publish novels with sad endings."

Baby boomers want their afterlife

January 2056 - Once upon a time, a dead person was just that: dead. The certificate was drawn, the obituary published. the ceremony held. Friends and family would gather to honor the deceased and to comfort the survivors. And afterward, though loved ones would hold the departed in their hearts for decades to come, attention pretty much shifted back to the living.

But that was before the baby boomers died. Now the generation that brought us rock 'n' roll, peace and love, and the "Contract With America" has forever changed the way the nation looks at death. "Being dead, fan't what it used to be," says Connie Sumer. formerly of Fort Lec. N.J. "It used to be so creepy, so dated and cobweb-y. My generation has changed all that." Sumer speaks to us from the great hereafter via Madam Opportunista, one of a growing number of professional mediums - the hottest career of the decade, according to a recent Standard & Poor's analysis.

"People miss the baby boomers," explains S&P analyst Ina Kidd Nough. "They want the boomers to tell them what sneakers to wear and what TV shows to watch."

Nough says that the retail business suffered a terrible slump shortly after the boomers died. "We had racks of merchandise languishing in stores because no one knew what was cool," she says. "Should we be wearing ripped jeans and sandals, or cardigans and Hush Puppies? None of us had a

A Washington policy maker, who asked not to be identified, agrees. "Washington these days is like Russia after the Cold War. The boomers had been dictating national priorities for so long - you know, student loans when they were students, tax breaks when they were making money -- that we've realized we don't know how to make decisions anymore.'

Fortunately, the opinion-makers need not be left in the dark, thanks to the rapid advances in after-death communications technology.

Once the domain of carnival vendors and late-night advertorials, communication with the dead is now a $5 trillion industry, and mediums -- or post-life facilitators, as they prefer to be called -- like Opportunista are getting the respect and financial rewards that had long been denied them. At Harvard University alone, more than one-quarter of the freshman class expressed an interest in Post-life chic has also hit the social scene. Seances, once confined to little girls' slumber parties, are now all the rage in New York and Los Angeles. Tiffany Trump, Alexa Brinkley. Joel and Satchel Allen are just a few of the celebs who can be heard saying. "Light as a feather, stiff as a board." The Ouija board. the classic spirit-contacting game, is also enjoying a revival. "We're expecting a brisk Christmas season," says a Parker Brothers source. And Disney's Boomer World has parkgoers lined up to the gates, waiting for a turn on the new Virtual Afterlife ride.

Indeed, with so much great publicity it seems the boomers have mastered the ultimate public-relations challenge: putting a positive spin on death.

"When you're dead, things are more focused," explains Seth Absorbid, the former psychologist and best-selling author.

AUSTIN, Texas - It is former Rep. Barbara Jordan's powerful voice that people remember best: Words rolled like gentle thunder from her lips.

When Barbara spoke with that deep, booming voice, it was as though she was speaking from tablets of stone." former Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said. "She had a presence as few people do."

That voice was stilled Wednesday. Ms. Jordan died at age

One of the first two blacks elected to Congress from the South since Reconstruction, Ms. Jordan was remembered for transcending partisan politics by setting tough ethical standards and devoting her life to the pursuit of justice.

Whether passionately defending the Constitution during the Watergate hearings or exhorting fellow Democrats at the 1976 and 1992 national conventions, here was a voice born to be heard - formal, eloquent, deep and powerful, befitting the daughter of a Baptist minister.

"Barbara's words flowed with heartfelt conviction and her actions rang of indefatigable determination as she challenged us as a nation to confront our weaknesses and live peacefully together as equals," President Clinton said.

With her election to the state Senate in 1966, she became the first black member since 1883 elected to the Texas Legislature. In 1972, she became the first black woman elected to Congress from the South.

Ms. Jordan died of pneumonia thought to be a complication of leukemia, said George Christian, a friend of Ms. Jordan and former press secretary to President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Ms. Jordan had been ill for years with multiple sclerosis. and used a wheelchair and walker.

Former Gov. Ann Richards, to whom Ms. Jordan served as ethics adviser, said she was brokenhearted by her death.

"America has lost a patriot, a trailblazer, a hero," said Richards, also a Democrat.

Ms. Jordan "in a sense was the conscience of the nation." Richards said. "She could always be counted on to rise above whatever was the political fray of the moment and say what was the right thing to do."

Republican Gov. George W. Bush said Ms. Jordan's great legacy was proving that "you can get in the arena, you can defend the cause you think is important ... but you can do so in a way that holds the public it is total." confidence, in a way that is unquestionably honest and aboveboard."

vice presidential candidate, Ms. Jordan left politics after three terms in the U.S. House, choosing in 1979 to teach at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas.

After leaving Washington, she shunned the limelight and devoted her energy to her students, who fondly called her "B.J."

Former U.S. Rep. Peter Rodino. former chairman of the Judiciary Committee, recalled his first meeting with Ms. Jordan after her election to Congress. "She came in to see me. I'll never forget, opened her mouth, spoke a few words, and I remember thinking, 'This is a woman I certainly want on this committee."

It was during the committee's 1974 hearings on whether to impeach President Nixon that Ms. Jordan won a national reputation.

"The gentle lady from Texas," as former Rodino called her. stirred television audiences across the country when she declared: "My faith in the Constitution is whole, it is complete.

One person in the audience said it sounded "as if the gates of heaven had opened."

At the time of her death, Ms. Jordan was chairwoman of the "awesome" presence from his independent U.S. Commission on immigration Reform.

comes in singles

DEAR ABBY: I sent my wedding invitations several weeks ago. This is the policy I followed: If a guest was married, engaged or living with someone, Linvited the couple. If the guest was single but had dated someone for a long time. I invited both. About one-quarter of my guest list was made up of single, unattached adults who received invitations for themselves alone. I connulted several stiquette books, and not one said I was required to provide "and guest" invitations for singles. (Some authors clearly stated that it's presumptuous for a single guest to expect to bring a date.)

I've been planning this wedding for over a year, and my friends seemed enthusiastic about attending. Yesterday, however, I received "regrets" from three women who had previously accepted. "Alice" had only recently started seeing someone. "Betty" had just ended a relationship, and "Carla" is married. but a close friend of both Alice and Betty, I can only surmise that Alice was offended because she couldn't bring a date, and decided not to come — no Betty and Carla declined

If they had a problem with the invitations, they should have spoken to me. I feel they have ended their relationships with me. Am I overreacting?

HURT IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR HURT: I don't think so. Evidently Betty and Carla feel closer to Alice than they do to you. Be happy that you didn't invest more time and energy in cultivating these three insensitive women. A friend you can't count on is no friend at all. Celebrate without them.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you recommended Toastmasters International for adults who are shy and afraid to speak in public. Have you never heard of International Training in Communication? We were founded as a women-only club 51 years ago under the name of International Toastmistresses Clubs. At that time. Toastmasters was for men only. Both clubs were later forced to become co-ed. When that happened, the women flocked to join the men, although both clubs offered the same benefits. Sensing that men would not care to be called "mistresses," in 1985, we changed our name to International Training in Communication. retaining the initials ITC.

I have been a member of ITC for more than 25 years. It has worked wonders for me because I can now stand up and speak when necessary without shaking knees. We learn far more than speechmaking. We gain overall self-improvement skills. The benefits are too numerous to recite.

To locate an ITC club in your area, call the Chamber of Commerce. Our clubs are located in every free country in the world! Please mention us, along with Tonstmasters. Thank you.

DEAR MARIECE: A toast to you for alerting readers to International Training in Communication.

to perfumes. We seem to be an expanding circle, because I know nine other people with the same affliction.

I avoid crowds, do my shopping in the early morning hours, and try to sit away from others at funerals and weddings. One exposure leaves my nose congested and my lungs filled with fluid. I cough for days.

Why do people insist on drenching themselves in perfume? I was laught that restraint is important: A tiny drop on the wrist or neck is sufficient. No one is supposed to bathe in the stuff.

I recently attended a funeral, sitting well to the back and off to theside with my nonscented friends. Halfway through the service, the door opened and a wave of perfume wafted across the church. I was ill the remainder of the day.

Some advertisers place perfume samples in magazines, scenting the entire mail system. If this were my kingdom, perfume offenders would be relegated to isolated sections in public, and perfume bottles would require a warning label: "This product may be hazardous to the health of others."

Those who use perfume should have an honest friend check them out. The user's ability to judge the amount that should be used may be dulled from sensory overload. DORIS VOSS, TACOMA, WASH.

DEAR DORIS: Thank you for reminding my readers that an allergy is nothing to sneeze at.

LONGWOOD - Lake Mary coach Willie Richardson wants his team to earn the No. 1 seed in next month's Class 6A. District 4 boys basketball tournament. The Rams took a step toward that goal Wednesday night with a 68-54 win over Lyman.

"Our focus is on the number one seed in the district tournament," Richardson said. "There are several other goals that are within our reach, and this win over Lyman was a total team effort."

Jason Junker scored 19 points Wednesday to lead the Rams to victory. Lake Mary took an early 7-2, and later pushed the advantage to 21-10 on a three point field goal by Chip Richardson. Lyman managed to cut the deficit to 24-16 by the end of the first quarter.

Lake Mary extended the lead to 29-18 early in the second quarter on a three point play by Paul Beik, but Deyon Williams' lapup with 2:25 left before halftime pulled Lyman within 31-26. Despite Williams' 18 points, the Greyhounds trailed 37-28 at intermission.

Williams, who transferred to Lyman for an undisclosed reason after playing the first half of the season at Lake Brantley, scored 26 points to lead the Greyhounds. Lyman coach Norman Ready said the addition of Williams helps compensate for the loss of

From Staff Reports

MERRITT ISLAND - The Seminole High School girls' soccer team went in the road and picked up a huge 3-1 Class 5A-District 6 victory over Merritt Island Wednesday night.

The Lady Noles took a 2-0 lead at halftime on a pair of goals by freshman C.C. Guillan, who now has 23 goals on the season. The first goal was unassisted, while Laura Williams set up the second goal on a beautiful pass to Guillan on the 18.

The Mustangs came up with their only goal early in the second half, but the Seminole defense led by Andrea Russo, Tracy Hetrick, Joann Pilch and Brooke Wagner stood their ground. Sabreena Sapp added the Tribe's third goal off a well played ball from Mandee Ross.

The Junior varsity game, also went to Seminole by the score of 2-0.

This past weekend the Tribe finished 2-1 in the Gainesville Bucholz Tour-

Seminole lost the opener in a shootout to Bucholz, then came back to defeat Gainesville 4.2 with Guillan and Wagner scoring two goals each and Williams and Russo (who was named to the all-tournament team) had assists.

In their final game, the Tribe dropped a 4-1 decision to No. 2 Class 5A ranked Panama City Bay. Guillan scored the spinal stenosis, diagnosed about 10 years ago, which was verified by a second opinion. I suffer from fatigue in the lower legs after most exercise. Have there been any surgical or medical advances that might offer me some relief?

promise the contract of the co

DEAR READER: Spinal stenosis means that an area of firm tissue such as a slipped disc or a calcium deposit - is pressing on your spinal canal and irritating the nerves that exit from the spinal cord. Rather than causing fatigue, this condition more often leads to pain, numbness and weakness of the legs.

The affliction is diagnosed by an MRI test or by special X-rays.

Some forms of spinal atenosis resolve without treatment. Others may respond to physical therapy. Still others, notably calcium "spurs," require surgical relief.

You should ask your orthopedist or neurosurgeon about appropriate therapy for your condition. For example, special exercises and rehabilitation techniques might solve your problem. without the need for surgery.

Also, because of your painless fatigue, the doctors might wish to check your circulation (with ultrasound or X-rays), to make sure that a deficient blood supply (resulting from arteriosclerotic blockages) is not causing your problem.

To answer your specific question. there have been no new treatments in the past 10 years for spinal stenosis. Rather, the traditional therapy has been refined and improved.

DEAR DR. GOTT: For years my husband cut salt out of his diet. After two strokes in the last five years that caused memory loss and loss of balance, he went to the doctor, who told him his sodium level was low. He's begun using salt again and has improved a lot. His balance is much better and he is more active. Are there many people who have cut out salt but have not had their sodium intake checked?

DEAR READER: I'll bet that the majority of people on low-salt diets (because of hypertension or heart disorders) rarely have their blood-sodium levels checked. In most cases, this is acceptable because Americans consume too much salt, as a rule. Also, balanced diets (without added salt) provide more than enough sodium for normal metabolism.

In your husband's case, which is extremely unusual. I'm not sure which came first: the stroke or the low sodium. Brain damage (from stroke or trauma) can lead to low sodium. Conversely, a sodium deficiency might have set the stage for a stroke. At any rate, I'm glad he is recovering successfully. Thank you for writ-such as stroke or hypertension. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Stroke."

DEAR DR. GOTT: I started using a new toothpaste that contains baking soda and peroxide. How safe is this practice?

DEAR READER: Toothpaste contains many ingredients, primarily abrasives and flavoring. Flouride is added to some. The newest modification is baking soda and hydrogen peroxide, both of which are supposed to contribute to cleaner, whiter teeth.

When used appropriately, all commercially available toothpastes are free of health hazards. By this I mean that it's not smart to eat or swallow toothpaste, so this practice should be discouraged, especially in children.

The cliche play

Is it a clicke to say that the world is full of cliches? Maybe - but what is the meaning of "mind your p's and g's" and how does it apply to today's deal?

North and South had a bidding misunderstanding, but they still reached a reasonable contract. Because a twoheart rebid would have been natural and forcing, North's three hearts was a splinter bid. It showed good support for clubs with at most one heart. With wasted values in hearts, South now tried to get into three no-trump with his three-spade cue-bid. But North took this as a cue-bid showing interest in a club slam. (Finding the right game should take precedence over a slam hunt.) With only one ace and so much in spades. North settled for five Declarer won the first trick with dummy's spade king, played a heart to his are and finessed the club jack, losing to East's singleton ace. What should happen from here?

The critical moment has arrived. Only one card from East's hand defeats the contract: the spade queen. Declarer is locked in the dummy, unable to get back to hand to pick up West's club queen. When he tries a low diamond. East rushes in with the ace and plays another spade, West overruffing South to defeat the con-

Note that a low spade from East at trick four lan't good enough. South wins the trick with his 10, finesses West out of the club queen and concedes a trick to the diamond ace.

Now you know what the expression "mind your p's and q's" means. It stands for "mind your promotions and queens"!
