Murder suspect steals plane

BOSTON — A light airplane flown by a man suspected of killing his estranged wife buzzed the city for more than two hours Tuesday night before landing at Logan International Airport and the man surrendered.

Alfred Hunter, 42, a postal worker who police believe lived in Ipswich, landed the plane at a commercial gate at Logan and was arrested without incident at 1:16 a.m. Wednesday, a little more than two hours after stealing the single engine Cessna.

Police could not immediately confirm reports that Hunter, who has a valid pilot's license, sprayed city neighborhoods with gunfire from the air. State Police Trooper Mark Lynch said one witness in the city's Kenmore Square area turned in two shell casings he said were fired from a low flying plane.

Picasso sells for $47.8 million

NEW YORK — A 1901 self-portrait by Pablo Picasso depicting the artist at his easel staring boldly out from a sea of intense blue sold Tuesday for more than $47.8 million, a record for the artist and the second highest price ever for a work of art sold at auction.

Simply titled "Yo Picasso," the Spanish for "I Picasso," the oil painting was one of a series of Impressionist and Modern works sold at Sotheby's at an auction in which a record also was set for a work by Paul Gauguin, auction house spokeswoman Laura Stewart said.

Gauguin's "Mata Mita" (In Olden Times), depicting a pastoral scene in Tahiti, went for $24.2 million.

UNC's Reid turning pro

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — North Carolina junior J.R. Reid made himself available Tuesday for next month's NBA draft.

"I think it's best for me right now," Reid said at a press conference on the North Carolina campus. "I've done everything I've expected and more. I've had a good time for three years. Now, I'm doing what's best for J.R. Reid."

Reid, 6-foot-9 and 260 pounds, is the second touted college underclassmen to announce he'll turn pro, Indiana sophomore Jay Edwards earlier said he's leaving school for the NBA. Underclassmen have until midnight Saturday to inform the NBA if they want to be included in the June 27 draft.

Sheriff's proposal for broad arrest powers startles some

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A majority of Seminole County Commissioners expressed support Tuesday for Sheriff John Polk's proposed anti-drug loitering ordinance that other commissioners said raised grave questions about violating constitutional rights.

Polk said the ordinance was needed to help combat drug dealing in such areas as North Street near Altamonte Springs and Midway near Sanford. If approved, the ordinance would allow law enforcement officers to arrest suspected drug dealers who appeared to be loitering in public places.

Commissioner Fred Streetman said, "This scares me."

Referring to language in the proposed ordinance, he said, "Furtive manner," about to engage in," this is police-state wording. This is the kind of stuff that's been used in the past by law enforcement officers that weren't credible people," Commissioner Chairman Sandra Glenn supported his concern.

However, commissioners Jennifer Kelley, Pat Warren and Bob Sturm said it would give officers an important tool in fighting drug crimes.

"I have a great concern about drugs," Warren said. "Somebody needs to be brave enough to step forward and do something about them."

Commissioners will consider adopting the ordinance at a hearing set for July 23. It would become law countywide if passed, unless cities choose to pass differing ordinances.

County attorneys said the proposed ordinance is similar to a municipal ordinance in Melbourne. That ordinance has not been tested in courts, attorneys said.

A similar Jacksonville ordinance, which regulates loitering for prostitution purposes, has been found unconstitutional in circuit court, but in

County wants to take open container law a step further

SANFORD — A public hearing will be held later this month or early next month to consider a countywide open container ordinance that would prohibit consumption of alcoholic beverages in outdoor public places.

The ordinance won't affect outdoor "splash" bars licensed to sell alcohol outside, nor would it affect alcohol consumption in residence yards, Sheriff John Polk said Tuesday.

The ordinance would expand the current county prohibition against alcohol consumption in motorized vehicles, including boats.

Morton wins big in Longwood

By SANDRA BOUCHAMINE

LONGWOOD — Jeffrey R. Morton won the Longwood District 3 city commission seat by a landslide.

Morton, 41, emerged victorious with an overwhelming 408 votes or 80.5 percent of the total, swallowing his opponent, Perry E. Faulkner, a former city commissioner who also lost a commission bid in the November general election, received 43 votes.

About nine percent of the 5,209 eligible voters turned out for the special election to fill the seat left vacant in February when the commission ousted then-recently elected commissioner Carol Odum for alleged city charter violations.

Morton, who owns a construction firm, said he felt "real good" about winning the election.

"I hope I can live up to the expectations all these people have," Morton said.

Sheriff denied sales tax hike for jail expansion

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Seminole County Commissioners told Sheriff John Polk yesterday he would have to wait another year before they would consider raising the sales tax one cent to pay for expanding the jail and other law enforcement projects.

The vote was 3-2.

The commissioners considered two proposals for imposing one-cent tax increases: Polk's penny sales tax for law enforcement, and a penny gas tax for beautification of roads in the county, and delayed action on both.

"Having two taxes on the same ballot could be self-defeating," said Commissioner Bob Sturm.

Commissioner Fred Streetman said, "It appears to me that it's not necessarily the wisest idea to have two tax votes on the same referendum or even the same year."

However, Polk said, "If both of them are needed, then I think the public could understand."

Woman charged with abandoning baby

TAMPA - An unemployed 42-year-old woman has been jailed on charges of deserting a child and child abuse in the abandonment of a newborn baby April 27.

Judith Claire Pemberton was held without bond Tuesday in Hillsborough County Jail.

Pemberton, who is divorced and has a grown daughter, is accused of being the mother of a 7-pound, 4-ounce baby boy found in a box placed alongside a trash bin near her apartment complex.

The baby, nicknamed "Jack in the Box" by nurses at Tampa General Hospital, was wrapped in a white towel and its umbilical cord was tied off with blue thread.

Doctors said the 19-inch baby was only 2 or 3 hours old when found. The infant now is in the custody of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Sheriff's Capt. Gary Terry said Pemberton worked in a medical clinic at one time and knew enough to tie off the umbilical cord to prevent the infant from bleeding to death. He said that when deputies searched her apartment they found the VCR that had come in the box the baby was found in.

EPA will 'fertilize' Alaska beach

PENSACOLA BEACH, Fla. - Government scientists are going to Alaska to fertilize the beaches of Prince William Sound with nutrients in an attempt to enhance the ecosystem's natural ability to break down and devour spilled oil.

The procedure is called bioremediation. By fertilizing the beaches with extra nitrogen, phosphorus and sulphur, the scientists hope to feed the microbes that naturally break down and consume the oil, speeding up their work.

"The present exercise is to test the feasibility of this treatment," Dr. Peter Chapman said Tuesday. "Certain beaches will be treated and others will not. And if there's a sign that this exercise will function then obviously this can be scaled up to treat many more beaches."

Dr. Ray Wilhour, acting director of the Environmental Protection Agency Research Laboratory lab at Pensacola Beach, said lab scientists would be in Alaska next week and hope to begin the experiment by the end of May.

Firefighters battle remains of fire

EVERGLADES NATIONAL PARK, Fla. - Firefighters in Everglades National Park worked Tuesday to extinguish the smoldering remains of a 450-acre brush fire that threatened a popular tourist spot in the park, an official said.

"It takes a long time to get it to the point when we can say it is safe," said Pat Tolle, a spokeswoman for the National Park Service. "We are not at that point."

Tolle said the fire, which subsided overnight Monday, covered 450 acres of the Shark Valley section of the park, near a paved pathway and ranger station popular with tourists.

The area will remain closed to the public until the fire is out, she said.

"The blaze hasn't changed much since last night," Tolle said. "They mapped it so we feel confident about the size."

The park's main entrance southwest of Homestead and another entrance at Everglades City were not affected by the fire, and remained open.

The Shark Valley area was used Tuesday as a staging area for the 15 firefighters and two dozen other park employees recruited to battle the blaze, Tolle said.

Since Shark Valley is a designated wilderness area, firefighters must either walk in or be carried by helicopter.

"It's a very labor intensive," she said, noting that one fire crew was replaced with a fresh crew from Georgia Tuesday afternoon.

Dow battled depression for 20 years

VENICE, Fla. - Actor Tony Dow, who portrayed Wally Cleaver on the "Leave it to Beaver" sitcom, credits a supportive family and a balanced diet with helping him overcome the depression he has battled for 20 years.

Dow, 44, was in Venice Monday as spokesman for the National Institute of Mental Health's DART program, for "Depression Awareness, Recognition and Treatment."

He played Wally Cleaver from 1953 to 1957 in the original TV sitcom, and now portrays an adult Wally in a revised version, "The New Leave It To Beaver," filmed in Orlando.

Unlike the Cleaver family, who solved all their problems in 30 minutes, Dow battled varying levels of depression for two decades. He suffered his first of two major bouts with the debilitating illness eight years after the original Beaver show ended.

"One morning I just didn't get out of bed," Dow said. He spent two weeks in the mental health center at a Los Angeles community hospital, where he realized his condition was common and treatable, he said.

"A lot of people have the same situation, but don't get help," Dow said. "It was a new experience to see other people in the same boat."

Report cites DOT problems

Secretary Henderson squelched talk about budget problems, report says

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE - Transportation Secretary Kaye Henderson suppressed information about the agency's financial problems last year for fear bad publicity would defeat a major road bond issue, it was reported Tuesday.

The St. Petersburg Times, citing an internal report obtained under the Florida Public Records Law, said officials in the Department of Transportation knew late last year the agency was on the verge of a major budget crunch.

But Henderson feared if the information were made public, the voters might kill a $500 million bonding program for advanced right of way purchases, presented as Amendment 4 on the November ballot.

"We had instructions from our secretary that (the) referendum was the thing we're working on, and we didn't want to get much publicity, particularly anything that would affect or harm the referendum," former DOT Comptroller Tom Kelso testified during an internal investigation this year.

"I had a very large concern and was doing everything I could to make sure that nothing became public," Kelso testified.

Henderson denied giving such instructions, but said, "There was an understanding, not instruction, that we shouldn't talk about things we don't know the full scope and dimension of."

Kelso was demoted shortly after he testified and now serves as acting deputy comptroller.

Henderson ordered the internal investigation after state auditors criticized sloppy management practices that forced his agency to shelve $700 million in construction projects.

Now the agency wants to use some of the bond proceeds to build some of those roads. The plan is meeting resistance in the legislature, where lawmakers feel it would break faith with voters who approved Amendment 4 to save money by buying land for roads years in advance at today's cheaper prices.

James Ely, DOT's inspector general, interviewed more than a dozen employees in January and took 224 pages of testimony. Among his findings:

• Some DOT workers knew for months the budget crunch was coming and wondered why nothing was being done about it.

• Some workers intentionally did not document sensitive discussions or decisions.

• Workers preparing DOT's construction plans were inexperienced, overworked and burned out.

• The department sometimes used questionable accounting practices to balance its budget.

House panel passes open government bill

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE - The House Ethics and Elections committee Tuesday passed legislation providing increased public access to government activities, promising to banish forever the "beer and pizza" mentality of backroom politics.

The bill (CS-HB 1082) is intended to increase public access, particularly access of reporters, to private meetings between legislators, lobbyists, the governor and other state officials. Those meetings often decide what public policies will be adopted.

The legislation was prompted by the infamous "beer and pizza" incident in the spring of 1987. Lawmakers who had been stalemated for weeks over whether to enact a services tax reached a late-night meeting at the townhouse of a Tallahassee lobbyist, where they shared pizza and beer.

The incident drew heavy fire from critics angry that the agreement had been made outside of public scrutiny.

"There should be no reason for us as members to try to hide behind the veil of secrecy when it comes to the open and clear debate of law-making," bill co-sponsor Rep. Fred Lippman, D-Hollywood, told the committee. "The beer and pizza days ... are over, as far as the House of Representatives is concerned."

The bill would require that, with a very few exceptions, all legislative meetings will be open to the public. It would require the House and Senate to enact rules opening meetings between any legislator and any registered lobbyist.

It would guarantee public access to meetings between the governor and Cabinet members or the governor and his agency heads, and to all meetings between those officials and any registered lobbyist.

Dean: Housing shortage to be state's major crisis

United Press International

GAINESVILLE - The lack of affordable housing will surpass the water shortage and social problems to become the state's major crisis of the 1990s, the dean of the University of Florida College of Architecture predicted Tuesday.

"The lack of affordable housing hasn't been called a crisis because everyone thought it was a lower-class problem we could sweep under the rug. But now it has become a middle-class problem," Anthony Catanese said.

"In my opinion, I think this is going to be the major problem the state faces," he said.

Catanese said money is diverted away from housing in order to fund solutions to other problems such as water shortages, inadequate waste disposal facilities, overcrowded highways and other shortfalls in governmental services.

Catanese said studies, including one by the National Association of Realtors, show Florida is reaching a point where "less than 50 percent of families can qualify for an average-priced home in their counties."

He said in some of the state's higher-priced markets such as Hillsborough, Orange and Palm Beach counties, the figure dips to as low as 30 percent.

"The only solution for these families is to continue renting," Catanese said. "When you get to the point where the average person cannot afford to buy a house, you've lost one of the tenets of the American dream."

Catanese said the housing crisis will give new meaning to "the close knit family," and predicted more elderly people will move in with adult children, more married children will live with their parents and more single adults will delay moving out of their parents' homes.

"When a young, college-educated couple who are both working full-time cannot afford to buy a house, that's serious," Catanese said. "Affordable housing shortages hurt the poor the most; that's a given. But they're not the only ones affected anymore."

In addition to the rising costs of materials, land and labor, Catanese said the increasing impact fees imposed by local governments to pay for road maintenance, parks and other community services, are making it more difficult for middle-class people to buy homes.

"I see impact fees as a Band-Aid approach, a temporary solution to Florida's inadequate fiscal basis for infrastructure," Catanese said.

He said if Florida is to beat the housing crisis, government must make affordable housing a major priority.

He said the government should offer incentive programs and grants to developers and builders to encourage them to provide moderately priced, quality homes. He also recommended that the complicated construction permit system be overhauled to make it speedier and more efficient.

The College of Architecture now works on affordable housing research in partnership with the city of Gainesville and private interests. Last year the college asked the Legislature to create a Center for Affordable Housing at Florida to research and develop ways to keep construction costs down, while providing affordable housing.

The Legislature created the center with $300,000 funding but the governor vetoed the allocation.

"So we have a legislative mandate to create this center, but no dollars to buy the first pencil and notebook," he said.

The university has asked the Legislature to reallocate the funding for the center this session.

POLICE BRIEFS

Woman accused of hitting officer

SANFORD — A policeman who tried to calm a dispute between a couple at 411 Palmetto Ave., Sanford, was hit in the chest, allegedly by the woman.

That brought charges of battery on a policeman, resisting with arrest violence and disorderly intoxication against Rose Mary Jackson, 39, of 618 E. Eight St., Sanford. Jackson was arrested at 2:32 a.m. today. Bond is $3,000.

Wife says man choked her

WINTER PARK — A rural Winter Park woman told Seminole County sheriff's deputies her husband choked her and threatened to kill her. She also said he smashed the windshield of a friend's car and set her $63 afire.

Joseph H. Guait, 27, of 2702 Red Lion Square, was charged with battery-spouse abuse at home at 7:31 p.m. Monday. Bond is $500.

Deputy finds cocaine in car

CASSELBERRY — A Seminole County sheriff's deputy who stopped a car because he couldn't clearly see the car's license tag, charged the driver with possession of cocaine after contraband was found in a search of the car.

Christopher T. Lasalter, 18, of Deltona, was arrested at 11:25 p.m. Monday on State Road 436, Casselberry. He is also charged with driving with a suspended license.

CCIB arrests three on cocaine charges

WINTER PARK — Three men, who were allegedly involved in the sale of one-half ounce of cocaine for $550 to undercover City County Investigative Bureau agents, were arrested at 9:24 p.m. Tuesday.

Charged with possession and sale and delivery of cocaine is Kevin Patrick Lowery, 23, of 185 Slumber Court Casselberry. Charged with sale and delivery of cocaine are Stephen John Tucker, 18, of 7145 Citrus Ave., Winter Park; and Kelly James Lendzian, 18, of 7180 Citrus Ave., Winter Park.

Agents report meeting the three men and striking the deal at 7180 Citrus Ave., at about 8:15 p.m. Agents said they gave Lowry money for the cocaine, and he and Tucker left to pick up the order. When they returned, agents said, the arrests were made. Bond is $5,000 each.

Free genealogy workshop offered

SANFORD — The St. Lucia Festival Committee wants Sanford to find its roots at a free genealogy workshop tonight.

The first of two workshops will be 7 p.m. tonight at the north branch of Seminole County Library, 150 N. Palmetto Ave.

Anyone interested may trace their family tree by using the federal census and other available resources in the workshop.

The committee hopes to attract local residents with Swedish origins as a part of the St. Lucia celebration of Sanford's Swedish heritage. Families of settlers are asked to call the library for family history packets.

Cyndi Kuecht, reference librarian at the Sanford branch, will be directing the workshops.

For more information, call Kuecht at 330-0438.

Outgoing UCF president addresses graduates

1,700 degrees were awarded at the University of Central Florida yesterday. Speakers included outgoing president of UCF, Dr. Trevor Colbourn (above).

By VICKI BOGEMAN
 Herald staff writer

ORLANDO — Standing before the 304 graduates of the college of arts and sciences at the University of Central Florida, Dr. Trevor Colbourn said this country needs to redefine their sense of values and be willing to take risks.

"To too many, value means wealth," said Colbourn, outgoing president of the school. "We need to redefine that. We can't continue to survive with the incredibly rich and the incredibly poor."

Colbourn said education must play an increased role in making this country a better place.

"It costs $24,000 to keep a prisoner in jail for a year," Colbourn said. "You could go to Harvard for that. You could pay for a year at UCF five times."

Echoing a sentiment expressed recently by the Seminole County School Board on their recent legislative lobbying trip, Colbourn asked, "Do we need more prisons or would we be better served with more social welfare and education?"

Colbourn accused the present generation of being "like Scarlett O'Hara," always putting off unpleasant thoughts until tomorrow.

The future, Colbourn said, was with the graduates who sat before him. And they must be willing to take risks. "We say we believe in competition," he said. "But do we? We spend more time asking why we can't than we do seeing how we can."

Colbourn told his audience that he is arguing for risk-taking with good timing. "Little can be accomplished without risk," he said. "But timing is everything."

During other ceremonies during the day, another 1,400 students were awarded degrees in education, engineering, business administration, health and liberal studies.

Fire, police impact fees approved by city

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
 Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The city's first police and fire protection impact fees got a nod of approval from the city commission this week.

The commission unanimously passed on first reading Monday ordinances establishing the first impact fees for police and fire protection in Sanford. Second reading of the ordinance is scheduled for May 22.

Impact fees are charged to developers in order to pay for the demand for services created by new construction.

The fire protection fee will be $53.91 per residential dwelling unit — a house or apartment — and three cents per square foot of non-residential development. The police protection fee will be $25.67 per dwelling unit and eight cents per square foot of non-residential development.

The police protection fees are expected to raise about $30,272 annually, or $514,028 through 2005. Projections for fire protection fee revenue are $28,280 annually, or $488,775 through 2005.

Projections for revenue are based on the growth forecast showing 4.3 million square feet of non-residential development and 6,432 dwelling units constructed in the city before 2005.

The bulk of police fee revenue — or $20,484 annually — will come from non-residential development, which accounts for 79 percent of police calls. But most revenue from the fire fee — or $20,398 — will come from residential development, which accounts for 59 percent of fire and emergency medical calls.

The fee schedules were recommended to the commission last month by a citizen advisory board. The board is now discussing an increase in existing impact fees for recreation. Consultants for the city have recommended increasing the recreation fee from $150 to between $400 and $600.

The advisory board will meet with the recreation task force at a city commission work session Monday to discuss the city's goals for funding recreational facilities and programming.

Two in critical condition after three car accident

By SUSAN LOSSEN

OVIEDO — A Florida Highway Patrol investigation continues today to determine the cause of a three-car crash one mile west of Oviedo on State Road 434 at about 4:10 p.m. Tuesday.

Thelma Tolocetti, of DeBary, and her husband, driver Francis Tolocetti, were critically injured, a Florida Highway Patrol spokesman said today. Two other passengers in the car, Ruth and Edna Witworth, were also injured. Ruth Witworth was in stable condition and Edna Witworth's injuries were minor, the spokesman said.

Dennis Harrel, of Orlando, who was driving west on State Road 434 when he lost control of his car and crossed into the eastbound lane, suffered minor injuries. The driver of the third car, William Lewis, of Winter Springs, was not injured, according to the FHP.

The FHP spokesman said Harrel's car crossed into the on-coming lane and the left front of his car hit the left front of the Tolocetti's car. Lewis' car was sideswiped by both of the other cars.

Injured persons were transported to four different area hospitals, the spokesman said. The investigation continues and charges are pending.

Now, the real test

One of Latin America's last traditional dictatorships ended Feb. 3, when Alfredo Stroessner, Paraguay's military dictator for 34 years, was overthrown in a bloody military coup. Recently, Paraguay marked its new political status with that celebration of democracy — an election.

There were few surprises in the results. As expected, Gen. Andres Rodriguez, the man who overthrew Stroessner, swept to victory by a huge margin over seven opposition candidates for president. Most Paraguayans apparently considered the presidency the popular general's due for having ended the dictatorship.

And just as predictably, candidates of the dominant Colorado Party won a majority of congressional seats, assuring Rodriguez of a cooperative legislature for his proclaimed program of economic and political reform.

The question now is whether this exercise in relative democracy presages what most Paraguayans seem to want. The permanent establishment of civil and political freedoms and an end to the grim succession of dictators who have ruled Paraguay for most of its history.

It is relative democracy because the election was not without instances of ballot fraud, although opposition charges of wholesale fraud seem unfounded. Rodriguez, still basking in Paraguay's post-Stroessner glow, would almost certainly have scored a landslide victory without stealing a single vote.

It is also true that Paraguay's political opposition would have had little chance in any event. Suppressed for 34 years during the Stroessner dictatorship, the disorganized opposition could hardly compete effectively against an incumbent president and the pervasive Colorado Party machine in a campaign of barely 90 days.

What matters now is for President Rodriguez to make permanent the civil and political freedoms he granted by decree after overthrowing Stroessner. An early indication of Rodriguez' intentions will be his respect for that novelty in Paraguay, freedom of the press.

It Rodriguez is serious about democracy, he might also be serious about reforming Paraguay's over-regulated, statist economy. If so, the political benefits of self government could be matched for Paraguay's 4.3 million people by the rising living standards that a privatized, market-oriented economy could produce.

Washington can, and should, help Paraguay by using the modest aid and trade incentives at its command to nudge President Rodriguez in the right direction. That could help give Paraguay its best chance to move irreversibly from dictatorship to democracy.

Can Mikhail Gorbachev succeed?

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney would do well to study Hilaire Belloc's famous little poem "Discovery" before he plunges much deeper into the thickets of the Pentagon. It begins as follows: Life is a long discovery, isn't it? / You only get your wisdom but by bit, / If you have luck you find in early youth / How dangerous it is to tell the Truth.

In 10 years in the House of Representatives, Dick Cheney earned enormous respect, both from other members in both parties and from the media, by being a man who spoke openly and honestly, but always thoughtfully and without passion. It was the most natural thing in the world for him to take that style with him when he went to the Pentagon a few weeks ago.

When asked, therefore, by a TV reporter whether in his opinion Mikhail Gorbachev will succeed or fail in his efforts to reform the Soviet economy, Cheney responded by telling the truth as he perceived it. "I would guess that he would ultimately fail, that is to say, that he will not be able to reform the Soviet economy."

And then, mindful of his responsibility as secretary of defense, he added an indirect warning against America letting down its guard. "And then when that happens, he's likely to be replaced by somebody who will be far more hostile than he's been in terms of his attitude towards the West."

The next day, without referring directly to Cheney, President Bush inserted the following soothing words into a speech to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce: "You know, I made it clear to Mr. Gorbachev... when we met, that we wanted to see perestroika succeed."

The media were quick to interpret Bush's remark as an effort to soften the impact of Cheney's statement, and they are undoubtedly right. But it should be noted that Mr. Bush didn't go so far as to disagree squarely with his defense secretary. Cheney had "guessed" that Gorbachev would "ultimately fail." Bush merely said that he "wanted to see perestroika succeed." Cheney predicts it won't.

It cannot be reform, it can only be replaced.

Bush simply hopes it will.

Viewed strictly as a prophet, Cheney is almost certainly right, and Bush undoubtedly knows it. Gorbachev's reforms won't work because the Soviet system is beyond repair. Communism is based upon a fatally flawed notion of the nature of man, and of the consequent proper structure and function of human society. It cannot be reformed; it can only be replaced.

But Gorbachev and his allies can hardly be expected to accept this prognosis, any more than Nicholas II could have been expected to admit that the House of Romanov was bound to fall. It is their fate, as it was his, to try to cure the incurable, and in the process, if possible, to make its demise bearable. Eventually a saner and healthier society will replace the Soviet state in toto.

What is the role of outsiders while this is going on? It would almost surely be counterproductive for Western governments to predict that Gorbachev's reforms will necessarily fail. That might bring on exactly the kind of reaction in Moscow that Cheney warned against.

Instead, Western leaders should encourage Gorbachev's reforms, wish them good luck, and call for the kind of free society in Russia that would, by implication, not merely reform communism but replace it.

NRA slips in battle against gun control

WASHINGTON — The National Rifle Association is up against the ropes. The old arguments for gun owners' rights just don't stand up in the face of urban guerrilla warfare.

And, like any fighter in a fix, the NRA is starting to swing below the belt. That panic mentality led the NRA to mail out urgent appeals to its members last month, with a pitch for money. Those mailings are now under investigation by U.S. Postal Service inspectors.

The NRA's current nightmare is a bill sponsored by Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., to require registration of some semi-automatic firearms — the kind of guns that snipers might use to wipe out a schoolyard full of children or that drug peddlers might use to close a deal.

The NRA matter whipped the gun-toting membership into a frenzy. "You may be one of the 20 million NRA members and semi-auto firearms owners who will be forced to be fingerprinted, investigated by the FBI, pay a $200 tax and then beg your local law enforcement official to allow you to continue possessing a firearm that you currently own."

The NRA stretched the truth to the snapping point.

Our associate Jim Lynch obtained a copy of Stark's complaint to postal inspectors who are now trying to decide if the NRA broke the law by soliciting money through the mail with a false representation. Rep. Peter Smith, R-Vt., is considering filing a similar complaint about the letter. An NRA affiliate called for Smith's resignation after the freshman congressman co-sponsored the Stark bill.

The NRA letter asks for donations of up to $150 to "match the millions of dollars of free media" that Congress will get in the debate surrounding the bill.

Stark's bill sets stiff new rules for future purchases of certain semi-automatic weapons, but, contrary to what the NRA says, those rules would not apply across the board to existing gun owners. Under the bill, anyone who already owns certain semi-automatic firearms would have to register them with the Treasury Department, but there would be no tax and no FBI investigation.

Stark wants the future buyers of military-style semi-automatic guns to have to undergo the same scrutiny already in the law for buyers of fully automatic machine guns. That means anyone who bought a gun after the law went into effect would have to register it, submit to a background check by local police and pay a $200 tax. For all its frothing at the mouth, the NRA missed the distinction between existing owners and future buyers under the law.

The Stark bill applies only to 11 weapons that police think are the tools of the trade for violent criminals and drug pushers — versions of the AK-47, Uzi, MAC-10, Ruger Mini-14, Barrett AR-70 and a 12-round shotgun affectionately known as the "Street Sweeper."

We tried for four days to get an interview with any NRA official who could answer Stark's charges. The NRA said it couldn't find the people who were "briefed" on the subject.

The feverish NRA letter did its job well. Members of Congress were deluged with telegrams opposing Stark's bill and another bill by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. The NRA members didn't even have to write the letters themselves. For a $5.95 phone call to a 800 number, they could authorize the NRA to write the letters using their names.

The NRA letter whipped the gun-toting membership into a frenzy.

A smart move for Jackson

WASHINGTON — As President Bush picked up a set of mostly mediocre evaluation grades on his first 100 days in office, news came of a development which strongly implies he may have to lift the level of his game. The disclosure that Jesse L. Jackson is seriously thinking of taking a sabbatical from Democratic presidential politics and, instead, running for mayor in the District of Columbia next year means that Bush could face an unexpected tough political challenge in 1992.

A prominent Republican politician called the development "a godsend" for the Democrats, a chance for them to change the script from the divisive internal battles that have hobbled their nominees in every year since 1976.

It is far from a done deal. Jackson has made it absolutely clear he will not run against embattled and scandal-scared D.C. mayor Marion Barry (D), an old ally. Barry, in Jackson's words, "deserves dignity and options," and there are people trying to arrange a graceful exit for the much-investigated mayor. Even if Barry does decide against seeking a fourth term, Jackson still would have to convince himself to forgo his globe-trotting, issue-hopping ways and settle into the discipline of his first-ever elective office.

But as one senior Democratic official said, "It's a deal where everyone wins — Jesse wins, the city wins and the party wins." There's little exaggeration in that estimate.

For Jackson, the potential benefits begin with the fact that this is one race he could win. He's swept the District presidential primary twice, is well-known here and leads by a wide margin in all public and private mayoral polls — including those where Barry's name remains an option.

If elected, he would finally have a chance to answer those critics who have told him, "You give great speeches, Reverend, but you have no experience in government." The mayoralty would test his administrative abilities in a $4-billion-a-year, 48,000-employee government, and would give him an opportunity to apply his ideas on combating drugs, improving housing and expanding economic opportunity.

Yet, because of its location at the center of national government and international news, Washington, D.C., would offer Jackson an unrivaled platform for his views. In conversations with advisers, he has envisaged the home he plans to modernize here as a regular stop for visiting world leaders.

Jackson could fail in office, of course. But he has limitless energy and likely could attract talented people from around the nation to join his administration. His ability to reach and motivate young people, particularly, might be a unique resource in the city's fight against crime and drugs.

For the Democratic Party, the shift of role for Jackson from active presidential contender to influential local leader would offer a fresh opportunity to reconstruct on the national level the biracial coalition that is the key to its victories in most states.

Clearly, Jackson would continue to be a force in the party. As Bruce Lightner, his 1988 North Carolina manager, said, the two-time candidate "one way or another, will be in it," backing and advising someone in 1992 while gaining credentials in the mayoralty for another and possibly more credible bid for a place on the national ticket in 1996 or 2000.

But in Jackson's absence, other candidates will have room and incentive to start campaigning for black votes from the beginning of the primary season. That could encourage candidates from the party's liberal wing, but equally it could be a boon to white Southern contenders.

The Dixie and Border State Democratic governors and senators have gained office in large part through their ability to woo and win black votes. If Jackson is on the sideline, they could seek to repeat the formula Jimmy Carter used in 1976, when he enlisted crucial black support from the start. Carter's early and durable biracial coalition was the key to the last Democratic victory for the White House.

A Jackson sabbatical would also permit the emergence of other blacks. Although few complained publicly, prominent black Democrats have noted the irony that Jackson's repeated national campaigns have had the effect of roadblocking their ambitions. Half-a-dozen mayors, including Los Angeles' Tom Bradley and Atlanta's Andrew Young, and several members of Congress, most notably House Democratic Caucus chairman William H. Gray III (D-Pa.), would be freed to consider national politics if Jackson stepped aside temporarily.

None of them is as dynamic a figure as Jackson. But none is as likely to provoke the kind of controversy that makes it difficult for the Democrats to get their act together for the general election.

Washington D.C. would offer Jackson an unrivaled platform for his views.

Stocks open mixed

United Press International

NEW YORK — Prices opened mixed Wednesday in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average was up 5.13 to 2,376.46 after dropping 5.14 Tuesday, which marked the eighth straight session in which the blue-chip index posted a loss.

Declines edged advances, however, 363/357 among the 1,176 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Early turnover amounted to about 9,050,000 shares.

Weakness in the bond arena and investors' concerns about an upcoming report on inflation kept the stock market from breaking out of its recent slump Tuesday, as prices closed lower in moderate trading.

The market opened higher as investors took advantage of its recent weakness to do some bargain hunting.

However, Larry Wachtel, market analyst at Prudential Bache Securities Inc., said the rally was only a "knee-jerk" reaction to the weakness since stock prices pulled back into a tight trading range by late morning.

Dollar down, gold up

United Press International

The dollar was slightly lower Wednesday in light trading on most major foreign currency markets. Gold was mostly higher.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell against the Japanese yen in moderate trading, closing at 134.44 yen, off 0.56 from 135.00 yen on Tuesday.

Anticipation of dollar selling by institutional investors and trading houses, who bid less than was expected in Tuesday's U.S. treasury bond auction, pushed the dollar lower, dealers said.

In Singapore, the dollar ended slightly higher at 1.9535 Singapore dollars, up from 1.953, while in Hong Kong, the dollar ended at 7.7845 Hong Kong dollars, up from 7.7815.

day in Frankfurt at 1.9075 West German marks, down from 1.917 marks on Tuesday.

The dollar began the day in Zurich at 1.6945 Swiss francs, down from 1.7045. In Paris, the dollar opened at 6.4405 French francs, down from 6.462.

The dollar opened in Brussels at 40.10 Belgian francs, down from 40.265, and began the day in Milan at 1,389.50 Italian lire, down from 1,395.00 lire.

In London, the British pound began the day at $1.6655 compared with $1.661 on Tuesday.

In early New York trading, the dollar was lower against key foreign currencies in thin trading.

Market watchers in New York said many traders were awaiting Friday's report on the nation's producer price index for April.

Chicago wants Sears

United Press International

CHICAGO — The State of Illinois and the City of Chicago are working on an incentive package aimed at keeping Sears, Roebuck and Co. from moving 8,000 corporate jobs out of the state.

Gov. James R. Thompson held a news conference Tuesday the incentive package has been under development for weeks by the state Department of Community Affairs and the city Economic Development Commission.

Sears announced late last year it planned to sell the Sears Tower, the tallest building in the world, but had not decided whether to rent space from the new owners or move its corporate operations elsewhere.

Sears spokesman Gordon Jones refused to comment on Thompson's remarks.

"That's a matter of policy," Jones said, adding no decision on a timetable had yet been made.

Jones said some 8,000 Sears corporate employees work at the Sears Tower.

with Perez, said, "Service is the rent you pay for the space you occupy on this earth. Luis Perez really paid his rent."

Shirley Schulke, chairperson of the committee that established the award, said it will be given each year to an individual who demonstrates concern for the welfare of the community.

Luis Perez died at age 60 in February 1988. He had been a Sanford resident for 25 years.

Perez graduated from Havana University Medical School in 1955, one year before he came to the United States. He practiced at Florida State Hospital in Chattahoochee from 1960 until 1963, when he opened up private practice in Sanford.

He served as chief of staff at Seminole Memorial Hospital, president of Seminole County Medical Association, Central Florida Regional Hospital trustee and chairman of Sanford Migrant Clinic. In 1966 he founded the Seminole County Drug Action Committee.

Perez, who became a U.S. citizen in 1961, was noted for speaking against communism and for his anti-drug abuse work.

In 1971, Perez received the A.H. Robins Award for outstanding community service by a Florida physician, and the International Human Relations Award from the Dale Carnegie Alumni Association. In 1973 he received the George Washington Medal of Honor from the Freedom Foundation at Valley Forge.

David Cumbie, a Winter Park sculptor, created the bust of Perez.

Higher courts, said county attorney Bob McMillan.

Li Don Eslinger, director of the City County Investigative Bureau, said the ordinance would allow officers to arrest someone known to have a previous criminal past because they are acting in a suspicious manner. He said the current state loitering and prowling law does not allow officers to arrest someone and search them to see if they are in possession of illegal drugs.

Eslinger said officers are now able to search someone only if they suspect they have a weapon based in a judge or some other reasonable evidence. With the proposed county ordinance, officers would be able to arrest the person when they think there is evidence that person is selling or buying drugs and search them for those drugs.

"With this, there is a subtle shift between suspicion and probable cause," said Steve Plotnick, chief trial attorney for the Seminole County State Attorney's Office.

"I thought laws were based on innocent until proven guilty," said commission chairman Sandra Glenn.

"If the person appears to be selling drugs, then that becomes the crime," said Plotnick.

Assistant county attorney Louie Groot said the ordinance would require the officer to ask the person why he was in the area and if the person doesn't provide a reasonable answer, the person can be arrested. Groot said the ordinance also requires the officer to prove, in court, his justification for arresting the person.

"The law enforcement officer will really be on trial," Groot said. "He'll have to justify his actions to the judge."

Under the proposed ordinance, an officer may arrest someone who is loitering if the officer suspects the person is dealing drugs and if the officer:

- knows the person has a conviction record for drug-related crimes, seems intoxicated with drugs, has needle tracks or some other physical evidence of taking drugs or possesses drug paraphernalia;

• knows the person is under a court order not to be in a specific high-crime area;

• sees the person act in a manner as to raise "reasonable suspicion" that the person is about to engage in or is then engaged in unlawful drug-related activity;

• knows the person is a gang member;

• sees the person transferring small objects or packages in a furtive fashion or a covert manner;

• sees the person run or try to hide when he sees the officer;

• sees the person in a known area or place known for drug activity; and

• sees a vehicle registered to a known drug-law violator.

Plotnick said the ordinance would allow officers to arrest people in parking lots where drug activity is known to occur.

Container

not drink alcohol are sidewalks, roads and public and private parking lots. The law would be in effect countywide unless cities choose to adopt differing ordinances.

The ordinance was sought primarily by a Midway minister's group seeking to prevent large groups of people gathering outside convenience stores and bars drinking. The ministers said the groups tend to engage in drug-related crimes and present a poor influence to children.

Plotnick said the ordinance, which could become law in cities, too is strongly supported throughout the county.

"I can pack this conference room and the commission chambers downstairs with people supporting this," Polk told commissioners Tuesday morning.

Commissioners have tentatively set a July 25 hearing date to consider adoption of the ordinance.

Commissioners will also consider modifying their year-old adult entertainment ordinance to clean up several glitches on July 25.

Steve Plotnick, chief trial attorney for the Seminole County State Attorney's Office, said judges have dismissed all cases against women arrested for "straddle dancing" in clubs because the customer was not arrested.

A woman is maddie dancing when she crouches in the lap of a customer while dancing on their chair.

The changes include a requirement for an adult entertainer to get the county adult entertainment license within 30 days of their hiring in unincorporated Seminole County. Also, if an application is found to contain false information, the entertainer's license will be revoked.

Election

Faulkner slipped away silently after looking at the results. This morning he said:

"I wasn't really shocked. I wasn't that disappointed. A good politician has the right people to assist with his campaign. Morton did an excellent job with his campaign. He'll be a good commissioner. He's a professional with a professional background. I will do anything to support him and I will give him all available time and information. I wish him a lot of luck. I think they just wanted to see a new face in there. There's nothing wrong with that. I predict this November election there are going to be three new commissioners." Morton attributed his overwhelming victory to hard work. "I walked for about three hours a day for two weeks to distribute pamphlets," he said. He also said he is someone with no "past connections," something the voters wanted.

His wife, Jacquelyn, said the entire family was involved in her husband's campaign; her two sons helped pass out literature. "I even got my tennis team (to vote)," she said.

Although it was a clear win for Morton, there were at least 26 unaccounted votes. There was a total of 486 ballots cast, 477 at the precinct and nine absentee ballots.

One Odom supporter last night suggested those were write-in votes for Odom. Carolyn Emiling said she knew of about 75 to 100 write-in votes for Odom, including her own, which may have accounted for the discrepancy.

Seminole County Supervisor of Elections Sandra S. Guard said, "There were no qualified candidates for write-ins." She said the unaccounted-for votes were probably either undervotes or overvotes, meaning the ballot was punched for both candidates or for none.

Guard said sealed ballots "have to remain sealed" and that it was up to the city clerk whether those should be opened.

Odom, who was sitting in her car in front of the county services building last night, said she didn't think the election was "valid" and she was pleased with the support she received with the write-in votes.

"I should still be commissioner," Odom said.

"I was very happy with the support I found I was getting with the write ins. There were between 75 and 100. People told me they knew of others."

Odom supporter Emiling said, "There were many of us who boycotted the election."

Odom has sued the city, city attorney and three commissioners, including Mayor Hank Hardy, for allegedly violating her civil rights.

Morton said last night if the courts decide to reinstate Odom as commissioner he will "step down."

He said his first chore is to tear down his political signs throughout the city. Then he wants to "pick up the pieces and move forward."

"It's time to get everything together and get to work."

Morton will be sworn in at the next commission meeting on May 15.

Sheriff

Sandra Glenn voted to delay consideration of that tax until next year.

Commissioners Jennifer Kelley and Pat Warren voted against the delay.

The commissioners said they would further discuss the penny gas tax at their June 23 meeting.

Polk proposed a Nov. 7 referendum this year to consider a one-year, one-penny sales tax to raise nearly $22.5 million for the sheriff's department and seven city police departments for law enforcement purposes.

Seminole County would gain $14.2 million of the sales tax revenue, which Polk wants to build a new administration building and expand the 800-bed jail to 1,100 beds, including a 100-bed work-release dormitory.

Although no commissioner voiced opposition Tuesday to the tax, Streetman and Glenn said the county should wait to see if the state legislature removes the requirement that local governments hold referendums on some local option taxes. If so, commissioners could approve the one-year sales tax without voter approval.

Polk argued that even if the sales tax was approved in November by voters, the money wouldn't begin to be collected until February and construction wouldn't begin for a year. He said the jail will need the $5.6 million expansion in 1992 or 1993 to meet the needs of increased numbers of arrests and possible longer jail terms for misdemeanor offenders.

Polk said a year's delay would not create an overcrowded jail, although the construction costs might climb five to seven percent.

The 800-bed county jail had 520 inmates Tuesday morning, Polk said.

Seminole Circuit Judge O.H. Eaton Jr. said the state may increase the minimum sentence time required to send criminals to state prisons from 12 to 18 months, meaning more inmates will remain longer in the county jail. He said counties are going to have to address their crime problems at home rather than sending them to overcrowded state prisons.

"We're going to have to change our philosophy on how we deal with crime," Eaton told commissioners. "We're going to have to solve our problems locally."

Polk also said the 43,000-square-foot administration building at Sanford Airport is now too small for sheriff's employees. He said a 60,000-square-foot building is needed now and within three years, an 80,000-square-foot building will be needed.

GAO finds gap in Bush defense plan

WASHINGTON — The General Accounting Office has found a gap in President Bush's five-year defense plan, according to a report released Wednesday.

The GAO's investigation, which Congress was expected to release as new findings public Wednesday when the Panama Avenue Services committee met to study whether budget cuts could be used to fund the military's new programs, says that the president's plan "contains serious gaps in funding for the new programs."

About $40 billion of the funding gap results from what the GAO considers inadequately low estimates of the military's needs. The Bush administration has "not done its homework," the Pentagon has asserted in a letter to the GAO dated Jan. 1991.

Most of the remaining $50 billion comes from the Pentagon's Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps budgets, says $4 billion more than Bush's original budget, according to the newspaper's report.

Releasing the defense budget July 1991, the President's budget request, Bush cut approximately $20 billion from the fiscal 1992 budget through 1994.

Exxon sends Soviet skimmer home

SEWARD, Alaska — The American oil giant Exxon has sent a Soviet skimmer to the United States, the largest vessel of its kind, after the U.S. government ordered it to stop skimming oil from the Bering Sea. The skimmer was sent home by a U.S. Coast Guard cutter.

Exxon said Tuesday the vessel was seized by the cutter after it was found skimming oil from the Bering Sea.

The vessel, the Vaydalyubsky, was ordered to stop skimming oil from the Bering Sea and ordered to return to the U.S. coast by a U.S. Coast Guard cutter. Exxon was skimming oil from the Bering Sea.

The Exxon, which paid the Soviet government for the skimming services, said the skimmer was sent home.

It is not going to be skimming oil from the Bering Sea, Exxon representatives Amos Plater said. Most of the oil was sent to the Soviet coast guard. The case is still being investigated by the 42-foot ship cutter.

Soviets appear before Congress

WASHINGTON — Soviet leaders will appear before a Senate subcommittee to discuss a new way to counter the "Star Wars" missile defense concept, but the cost is alarming.

Without disclosing Tuesday what will be said, Sen. Voinovich described it as an "assessing" mission. The Strategic Defense Initiative, or Star Wars, is a program designed to overwhelm and destroy missiles by using satellites.

But he said, "Nobody among those who are concerned with our national security, our budget deficit, is happy with the current SDI program because although it's less costly than an SDI program, the whole idea is a new step in the direction and would require very substantial resources."

U.S. says nuclear bomb poses no danger

WASHINGTON — The United States said there is no danger from a one-megaton nuclear bomb that fell off an aircraft carrier in 1966 and which still lies on the bottom of the sea 300 miles from a Japanese island.

It was 200 miles from Okinawa. It was 80 miles from the nearest point of land. It was way out to sea in international waters, and the weapon went down in 10,000 feet of water, said Defense Department spokesman Dan Howard.

There was no danger to anyone other than the unfortunate pilot of the aircraft in this incident, he said Tuesday. There was not then, there is not now.

From United Press International reports

U.S., Alaska senators target oil industry

United Press International

The petroleum industry, already under fire in the wake of the worst oil spill in American history, was the target of action in the U.S. and Alaska senators where steps were taken to deal with or prevent future spills and increase taxes on the industry.

In Washington, Tuesday senators from two big oil producing states introduced legislation. Under one bill offered by Alaska Republicans Ted Stevens and Frank Murkowski, the Coast Guard would be allowed to assume immediate control of cleanup work at major oil spills in Prince William Sound, where an Exxon supertanker ran aground March 24, spilling 10.9 million gallons of oil.

Tankers leaving the environmentally sensitive area also would be required to position cleanup equipment and personnel in advance. Tankers also would be required to carry enough containment boom material to put a 200-yard wide circle around the ship.

Graham favors force in Panama

From staff and wire reports

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sen. Bob Graham (D-Fla.) and others urged President Bush Tuesday to use military force if necessary to oust Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega.

The White House and Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega are locked in an international battle whose high stakes include Bush's reputation, Panama's presidency and the military's strength in the region.

The bill has the biggest foreign policy test yet Bush weighed: possible military, diplomatic and economic options Wednesday to force

Noriega from power if the Panamanian general refuses to step aside.

The president also previously awarded word from Panama on the official results of Sunday's national election, which the United States charges was rigged by Noriega on behalf of his favored presidential candidate.

In what has become a war of nerves, an administration official said. "At some appropriate time, we'll announce our steps, depending on the election results, what Noriega does, and what the international reaction is."

U.S. election observers Tuesday urged Bush to move quickly and work with Congress to ensure bipartisan support for any military or economic move. They also recommended the United States recognize opposition candidate Guillermo Endara as the legitimate winner of the presidential election.

Sen. Graham, a member of the U.S. observer team, urged Bush to prepare plans to remove Noriega and his cadre of support by force if necessary.

But former President Jimmy Carter, who led the international observers in Panama, met with Bush Tuesday and afterwards spoke against two possible options, declaring void a treaty that calls on the United States to turn over the Panama Canal to the Panamanians on Dec. 31, 1999, and military action.

Baker begins talks with Soviet leaders

United Press International

WASHINGTON — James Baker, U.S. secretary of state, began talks Tuesday with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, who stressed in a recent interview with Time magazine that the international community expects renewed progress in the talks to end a two-year war of attrition.

Along with his two meetings with Shevardnadze, Baker also will meet Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and members of the new Soviet parliament during his two-day visit.

The Soviets are seeking to renew the discussions on the negotiations between the two superpowers that were held in the Kremlin during Gorbachev's final years in the White House when the treaty to destroy all nuclear and other weapons was signed.

The talks will be held in Washington, D.C. Baker will be accompanied by U.S. Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney and U.S. Ambassador to the Soviet Union, Robert McCallum.

Parties support Guatemalan government

GUATEMALA CITY — All but one of Guatemala's political parties voiced support for President Vinicio Cerzo after loyalist troops snuffed out an abortive coup attempt by mutinous retired and active military officers.

The only party not to join in a statement condemning Friday's abortive coup was the right-wing National Liberation Movement. There was no immediate explanation for the rightists' decision.

"We extend our ample support to the political institutionalism of the country and to the system of law that must prevail in all democratic nations and to the electoral system as the only way of legitimate change of power," the statement said.

There were no reports of casualties from the early morning coup attempt, and Cerzo appeared before reporters by afternoon to declare the situation was under control. All but two of the mutineers were captured.

PLO bids to join U.N. organizations

GENEVA — The head of the World Health Organization is pleading with member states to avoid a vote on granting Palestinian membership that might "jeopardize the survival" of the U.N. agency by triggering a cutoff of U.S. funds.

Hiroshi Nakajima's appeal Tuesday came as the Palestine Liberation Organization stepped up a campaign for U.N. recognition. PLO chief Yasser Arafat, in a letter delivered Tuesday, also requested full Palestinian membership in the Paris-based U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

The PLO only has observer status with UNESCO — a U.N. agency of which the United States is not a member.

WHO director general Nakajima, speaking of the self-proclaimed "state of Palestine," said, "We recognize a people's right to have a country and a home of their own and to have access to social justice, which is also a fundamental human right."

But he indicated WHO's global campaigns against deadly child illnesses, tropical diseases and AIDS could be endangered if the agency granted Palestinian membership and provoked a U.S. cutoff of funds.

Israel celebrates independence

JERUSALEM — Israelis remembered their fallen soldiers and celebrated Independence Day while the Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories entered its 18th month Wednesday with the death of another Arab protester.

Palestinians from the West Bank were forbidden to enter Israel and a curfew was imposed in the entire Gaza Strip, measures that have become standard security procedures during Israeli holidays. Most large cities in the West Bank were under curfew.

Beirut gunmen free prisoners

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Gunmen stormed a prison in Syrian-patrolled Moslem west Beirut before dawn today and freed at least 180 murderers, drug dealers and other inmates, police said.

One police officer was killed in one of the most daring attacks in the chaos-plagued country carried out by more than 20 armed pro-Moslem gunmen believed to be from the mainly Druze Progressive Socialist Party, police said.

"The gunmen freed at least 180 prisoners, including killers and big drug and hashish merchants," police spokesman Tarek Abdullahi told United Press International.

Police captured more than 100 of the fugitives after searching the densely populated Al Zait neighborhood near the prison. Syrian troops manning a roadblock some 50 yards from the prison made no attempt to try and foil the attack, police said.

The gunmen attacked shortly before dawn and forced prison guards to drop their guns at point-blank range, tied the hands of several policemen in charge of security at the prison and forced others at gunpoint to open the cell's iron doors.

They managed to free big shots with affiliations with the Progressive Socialist Party and pro-Syrian Druze chieftain Walid Jumblatt," said Abdullahi at police headquarters in west Beirut.

He said a police officer was shot and killed as he attempted to confront the attackers, who were armed with Soviet-made Kalashnikov assault rifles.

Egypt accused of torture

United Press International

LONDON — Egypt has detained and tortured hundreds of Moslem fundamentalists and other political opponents in the past month under emergency legislation, Amnesty International said today.

At least 1,500 Moslem activists and other alleged government opponents have been arrested from all parts of Egypt since clashes in Fayoum southwest of Cairo on April 7, Amnesty said in a report.

isolation continuously since 1967, except for a 15-month break before the assassination of former President Anwar Sadat in October 1981.

The laws empower the government "to arrest and detain suspected persons or those who endanger public order or security" and to hold detainees for 30 days before they are allowed to receive visitors.

The international human rights monitoring organization said the total number of arrests in the recent period may be as high as 3,000, compared with a similar number of people detained over the past two years. Amnesty said Egypt has been governed under emergency leg-

Sihanouk now wants Khmer Rouge

United Press International

SIEU R Thailand — Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk, in an apparent policy reversal, said he will not return as head of state unless the communist Khmer Rouge is included in a planned coalition government.

Speaking Tuesday to about 10,000 Cambodian refugees in a camp on the Thai-Cambodian border, 210 miles east of Bangkok, Sihanouk listed four new demands that current Prime Minister Hun Sen must meet before the monarch accepts his offer to return to Phnom Penh as head of state.

One condition, the guaranteed participation of the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge in a proposed coalition government, appears to be a contradiction of Sihanouk's stance last week in Jakarta, Indonesia, where he met with Hun Sen.

Sihanouk said in Jakarta that he and Hun Sen would merge armies to combat an anticipated Khmer Rouge attempt to retake power. In another apparent turnaround, the prince insisted Tuesday on Khmer Rouge membership in a new Cambodian armed forces.

After ruling Cambodia for 30 years, Sihanouk was deposed by the Khmer Rouge in 1975.

IN BRIEF

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Viola finally gets first win

It took eight starts, but last year's American League Cy Young Award winner finally won one Tuesday night.

Frank Viola, 24-7 last season for Minnesota, scattered seven hits over 8 1/3 innings to lead the Twins to a 6-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox at Fenway Park.

"It's a big load off my mind to get the first one," said Viola, who improved to 15 with two no-decisions. "But having gone through it before, I knew how to deal with it." Viola turned slow starts into good seasons in 1983 and 1986.

Coaches and players saw that Viola was not focused this season, a problem that could relate to a contract dispute. He signed a three-year deal on April 19.

Elsewhere in the American League, New York dumped Texas 5-3, California defeated Detroit 5-1, Seattle slipped by Toronto 4-3, Chicago blasted Milwaukee 10-1, and Kansas City downed Cleveland 3-1. Oakland at Baltimore was rained out.

NBA PLAYOFFS

Warriors, Bulls notch victories

The Golden State Warriors used a balanced team performance Tuesday night to erase the bad memories of their last game while the Chicago Bulls continued their winning ways, riding the emotions of their last outing and receiving another typical game by Michael Jordan.

Golden State, demoralized Sunday in Game 1 of its best-of-seven series against the Phoenix Suns, turned the tables Tuesday with a 127-122 victory over Phoenix, evening its series at one game apiece.

Chicago, which won Game 5 of its opening-round series against the Cleveland Cavaliers Sunday when Jordan hit a shot at the buzzer, stunned the New York Knicks in overtime with a 120-109 victory, taking Game 1 of their Eastern Conference semifinal series.

NHL PLAYOFFS

Flyers stave off elimination

MONTREAL — The Philadelphia Flyers avoided playoff elimination Tuesday night with what the Montreal Canadiens must consider a veritable barrage — two goals in more than 65 minutes.

Montreal, which had allowed one goal in three previous games, lost 2-1 on Dave Poulin's goal 5:02 into overtime of what Canadiens Coach Pat Burns called a "wide-open" game.

Poulin scored on a rebound off Patrick Roy's goalie pad and Flyers netminder Ron Hextall claimed his first victory of the series, sending the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semifinal series back to Philadelphia with Montreal still leading 3-2.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Braves on the upswing again

For the Atlanta Braves, it's been a season of feast or famine.

Atlanta, the National League's hottest team, posted its sixth-straight victory after pounding the Philadelphia Phillies 7-2 Tuesday night.

However, prior to their winning streak, the Braves had lost eight straight and occupied last place in the NL West.

Atlanta's turnaround is in large part due to the pitching staff, sparked by the emergence of starter John Smoltz as an effective and cohesive force in the Braves' rotation.

Smoltz, who at 21 is the youngest pitcher in the National League, tossed his second consecutive complete game as he shut down the Phillies on five hits, striking out six and walking one.

Elsewhere in the National League, it was: San Francisco 4, Chicago 2; New York 3, Cincinnati 1; St. Louis 4, San Diego 3; and Montreal 4, Houston 2. Los Angeles at Pittsburgh was postponed by rain.

Altamonte Springs hosts state softball tournaments

By TONY BOBOMMER
Herald sports editor

Over the past several years, the Florida High School Activities Association has been working toward consolidating the championship events they sponsor in different athletic events.

For example, Winter Park's Showalter Field has been the site for the state track meets for all four classes for several years. The Lakeland Civic Center has been the home of the boys basketball tournaments and, most recently, the girls basketball tournaments.

Also, the state championship events in golf, tennis, cross country and swimming have found more or less permanent homes in different cities.

This year, the trend continues with baseball and softball. Boardwalk and Baseball will host this year's baseball state semifinals and finals in all four classes. Meanwhile, representatives from all four classes in girls' slow-pitch softball will converge on Merrill Park in Altamonte Springs.

"We bid for this back in September," said Coach Karen Nolen of Lake Mary High School, which is co-hosting the tournaments with Lake Brantley High School. "We're proponents of girls softball and we want to bring it up to the level that it deserves."

"One way we thought that would happen was to bring it all to one site. Those kids and teams can be right in the spotlight. And everybody deserves a few minutes in the spotlights. We're doing a few things to make it special for the girls. It's going to have a real tournament atmosphere." The semifinals in all four classes will be played on Thursday, starting with the Class 1A semifinals at 1 p.m. Baker is scheduled to meet Miami Westminster in one semifinal with Hilliard meeting Bradenton Christian in the other. Then, at 3:30 p.m., the Class 3A semifinals will be played as Neeville takes on Eau Gallie and North Murton meets Fort Lauderdale-Cardinal Newman.

Over the long haul

Distance runs are the forte of Lady Pats

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

Lake Brantley will enter this week's Class 4A state meet at Showalter Field in Winter Park with three girls, all of whom are going with the goal of improving.

All three are among the state's best in their events and all three can score very highly for the Lady Patriots. Seniors Chelsea Trotter, who will run the 800, and Heather Camino, mile and two mile, along with sophomore Joyce Tullis, mile and two mile, make up Brantley's state qualifiers.

The three athletes have also led Seminole County in their respective events all season and are anxious to show the rest of the state the level of competition in the Central Florida area. All three, also, have been ranked on the state honor roll at one point during the season.

"We're hoping all three place and place highly," Lake Brantley's Charlie Harris said. "We really just want to improve on our places last year."

All three runners have been consistent all year and all three have been improving steadily in their events since they began running there.

Trotter, who has had a tremendous career with the Lady Patriots, first ran the 800 four weeks ago in the Seminole Athletic Conference meet where she ran a fine time of 2:25. She dropped to 2:30 last week in the regionals and will be looking to go under 2:20 in the state meet.

"She has only run the 800 three times and to be where she's at is real good," Harris said. "She's improved with every race and we want her to go under 2:20 in the state meet and we're hoping she can be at the front of the race."

Trotter was a sprinter who ran just the 220 and 440 during her career until the Brantley coaching in both. Tullis has turned in strong performance day in and day out for the Lady Patriots and will look to close her season in fine fashion.

"Joyce would just like to place in both events," Harris said. "She's looking for a good race in the two mile, she's been running strong miles all season and I think she can put together a strong double."

Harris has been happy with all three athletes as well as the rest of the Lake Brantley team this season. Harris will hope the three state participants can score enough points to place them in the top five.

"It has been a real good season for us," Harris said. "We had quite a few new coaches and they stepped in nicely. Brian Shaffer did an excellent job, he's the calm quiet time and I'm up tempo so it's nice to have a contrast in styles."

"Everyone got along this season and we're hoping to have a good time in the state meet," Harris added. "If all three place it will be the icing on the cake for us."

Knights, Kiwanis both post wins in Junior League play

By DEAN SMITH
Herald correspondent

SANFORD — The Knights of Columbus defeated Rotary 7-3 in a classic pitchers' duel and the Moose pounded out 13 hits en route to a 15-7 victory over Kiwanis in a Sanford Junior Major Baseball League doubleheader Monday night at Chase Park.

D. Beamon was the pitching star for the Knights as he threw a two-hitter and struck out nine while walking only five. For Rotary, Jones also threw a two-hitter while striking out six, but he was the wilder of the two as he walked 10 batters on the evening.

The Knights scored two runs in each of the first, third, and fourth innings and added a single run in the second as the Rotary scored single runs in the third, fourth, and fifth innings.

D. Larry had a double and R. June had a single for the two KC hits, while T. Taylor scored two runs, and E. Roberts, T. Davis, June, D. Davis, and Larry scored once each.

For the Rotary, Rawlings had a triple and Smith had a double. Henderson, Smith, and Rawlings See Junior, Page 2B

Williams' home run leads Rinker to win

By DEAN SMITH

SANFORD — Alberto Williams slammed a two-out two-run home run in the bottom of the fourth to cap an eight-run inning as Rinker Material posted a come-from-behind 15-14 victory over First Federal Savings and Loan in National Division action of the Sanford Little Major Baseball League Tuesday night at Roy Holler Field.

The win broke a two-game losing streak for the Rinker team.

Earlier Tuesday night, Sun-n-land Corporation scored a forfeit win when the Sanford Police Benevolence Association failed to have enough players appear for the game.

First Federal jumped out to a 12-0 lead in the top of the second inning, scoring 10 runs in the second inning on only three hits. Fred Brown had a double and Bart Dixon and Rod Brown both hit singles.

But Rinker came back with seven runs in the bottom of the second inning to get back into the game. The only two hits of the inning were Willie Williams' triple and Tony Guanciale's single.

First Federal added a run in both the third and fourth innings and appeared to have the game in hand when they held Rinker without a run in the third, leading 14-7 going into the bottom of the fourth.

But Rinker refused to quit and exploded for five extra base hits — three home runs and two triples — in the home half of the fourth.

After Alberto Williams started the inning with a single but was caught trying to stretch it into a double, Greg Stafford tripped and Victor Peterson and Willie Williams had back-to-back inside-the-park home runs to cut the score to 14-10.

Guanciale, Jeff Merthie, and Alexee Reddick then drew walks to load the bases for Troy Brown, who slapped another triple to clear the bases and make the score 14-13. The next batter struck out for the second out of the inning before Alberto Williams stepped to the plate and hit a 1-1 pitch far beyond the fence in left-center to end the contest.

Peterson and Willie Williams each had a triple and a home run to lead the offensive show for See Home Run, Page 2B

UNC's J.R. Reid opts to enter NBA draft

United Press International

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — North Carolina junior J.R. Reid made himself available Tuesday for next month's NBA draft.

"I think it's best for me right now," Reid said at a press conference on the North Carolina campus. "I've done everything I've expected and more. I've had a good time for three years. Now, I'm doing what's best for J.R. Reid."

Reid, 6-foot-9 and 260 pounds, is the second touted college underclassmen to announce he'll turn pro. Indiana sophomore Jay Edwards earlier said he's leaving school for the NBA. Underclassmen have until midnight Saturday to inform the NBA if they want to be included in the June 27 draft.

Reid's physical maturity and inside scoring ability make him a likely lottery pick.

"I think he'll definitely go in the top 11," North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said. "That includes the expansion (Orlando and Minneapolis) teams. He's got size, quickness, good hands and he can cover anybody out on the court."

Reid is the fourth player under Smith to turn pro after the junior season. Robert McAdoo in 1972, James Worthy in 1982 and Michael Jordan in 1984 were others. Smith often said he would encourage any of his players who could be a top three pick. Reid may not be, but Smith said NBA expansion and salary hikes have changed his criteria.

"If he's in the top 11, he can get $3 million over 4 years," Smith said. "On that information, I'm sure people can understand. If anybody can't take that and be financially secure, then they are spending too much money."

A year ago, Reid may have been considered the top pick, but his stock slipped a bit over the past season. In exhibitions last August between the U.S. Olympic team and NBA players, Reid's strength and scoring weren't as effective as they had been against college competition. This past college season, he was plagued by injury, inconsistency and difficulty in adjusting to a shuttle-substitution system employed by Smith.

Reid missed the Tar Heels' first 9 games because of a broken foot, then was in and out of the lineup the remainder of the regular season. Still, he led North Carolina's scoring with 15.9 points a game, averaged 6.3 rebounds and shot 61.4 percent from the floor.

"The injury set me back, and the playing style was a difficult transition for me, but I was happy with the season," Reid said. "Now, I'm anxious to show what I can do in the NBA. The way I play — the physical style — I think I can have a pretty good pro career."

In postseason play, Reid had his best moments. He was voted the outstanding player in leading the Tar Heels to their first Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament title in 7 years. He later scored a season-high 26 points in a 92-87 loss to Michigan in the NCAA round of 16. That performance came after Reid sat out a second-round game against UCLA because of a curfew violation.

Reid had his best statistics as a sophomore. He was UPI All-America second team and led the Tar Heels with averages of 18 points and 8.9 rebounds. As a freshman, Reid averaged 14.7 points and 7.4 rebounds. His career averages were 16.2 points and 7.6 rebounds. His shooting percentage (60.1) ranks 3rd in school history behind Brad Daugherty and Bobby Jones.

WILKENS, JONES, GATES ENTER BASKETBALL HALL

United Press International

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — K.C. Jones, Lenny Wilkens and William "Pop" Gates, three basketball greats who made the transition from player to coach, Tuesday entered the Basketball Hall of Fame.

"It's been a fantastic climb to this position," said Jones, a former player and coach of the Boston Celtics. "Yes, this is the icing on the cake."

Jones, a defensive specialist, won two NCAA championships and 60 straight games at the University of San Francisco, a gold medal at the 1950 Olympics and eight NBA titles with Boston. He coached the Celtics to two championships in four seasons. He retired as coach after the 1987-88 season.

At a news conference before the induction ceremonies, Jones saved his greatest praise for Red Auerbach, the Celtics president and former coach.

"The man is genius," Jones said.

Wilkens, coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers, whose season ended Sunday at the hands of Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls, played for four teams during his 15 NBA seasons, including eight years with the St. Louis Hawks and four with the Seattle SuperSonics.

The nine-time All-Star averaged 16.5 points a game and ranks third in assists, behind Oscar Robertson and Magic Johnson, who passed Wilkens this season.

"I never once, as a player, gave a thought to getting into the Hall of Fame," Wilkens said. "It's just a lot bigger than I ever thought. It's overwhelming."

Wilkens, who also served as a player-coach for four years before retiring as a player in 1975, coached the SuperSonics to the NBA title in 1978-79.

Gates, who played professionally for 18 seasons, bringing his career to an end in 1978.

New Indy rule angers drivers

United Press International

INDIANAPOLIS — Drivers practicing for the Indianapolis 500 said Tuesday they will protest tougher enforcement of a regulation track officials say will make for safer driving.

Tom Binford, chief steward of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, said racers will be penalized for driving below the inner line of the 2 1/2-mile oval. Drivers commonly use the area to maintain top speeds in turns.

"We are not doing it to slow them down," Binford said. "We're doing it to maintain a safety lane. It's to be used in an emergency and not for racing."

"There will be a penalty assessed for any car with the right-side wheels under the line unless forced there to avoid an accident. If the infraction occurs during qualifying, the lap would not be counted and it would be an incomplete attempt."

The rule was the main topic of conversation in the Gasoline Alley garage area Tuesday as rain washed out practice. It was the first time in eight years an entire practice day had been rained out.

"When I first heard about it, I had no idea they would try to enforce that," driver Artie Luyendyk said. "Personally, I thought somebody was joking."

Luyendyk, the 1985 Indy Rookie of the Year and a four-time Indy starter, said drivers will protest unless the rule is changed.

"I don't think the drivers will stand for this," Luyendyk said. "We have to meet face to face and sit down with Binford until we get it solved. Mario (Andretti) would be the guy because he's our drivers' representative. But I've talked to a few guys and from what I've heard, nobody likes it."

Said Andretti: "Race track is race track. I don't even want to hear talk about that."

Drivers have 50 feet of track in straightaways and 60 feet in curves with a 15-foot safety lane below the white line in the corners. Luyendyk said drivers often go completely below the line because it is the safest path or because they have handling problems.

Luyendyk was confident an agreement could be reached but said he would obey the rule rather than risk a time or lap penalty.

"I don't want to see that, though, because it's a bad rule," Luyendyk said. "It would take away one line of the passing zone. Nobody's going to give you extra room. It's going to screw up my rhythm."

Leach issued summons upon return

United Press International

NEW YORK — Texas Rangers outfielder Rick Leach, who returned to the club Tuesday following a one-day disappearance, was issued a summons by police for criminal possession of a controlled substance.

Upon returning to his New York hotel room Tuesday afternoon, Leach was issued the summons, a misdemeanor, after police — searching Leach's room for clues as to his whereabouts — found a packet containing less than an ounce of marijuana in the outfielder's personal belongings, a police spokesman said.

Rangers General Manager Tom Greve said he received a phone call from Leach at about 2:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday and had "been with him since about 3 o'clock. I spent time making sure he was OK."

Leach was reported missing shortly before the Rangers' game Monday night against the New York Yankees. He originally was slated to start as the designated hitter, and was replaced by Jeff Stone in the lineup.

The club notified police Monday night about the disappearance, but did not hear from Leach until Tuesday.

Neither Greve nor Leach would discuss the nature of the disappearance. Leach, who went AWOL for a day in 1987 while with the Toronto Blue Jays to solve marital problems, said this disappearance was unrelated and he had not spoken to his wife until earlier Tuesday.

"I'm going to term this as a personal problem for now," Leach said. "I've talked to the team and I've talked to the players in the clubhouse. At this point, nothing's going to sound good. By what happened, I don't feel good about it. But I'm man enough to face up to whatever happens to me."

Greve said the club would not make any further comment until reviewing the incident. He would not say whether the matter was police-related or whether he had to get Leach out of jail.

Dawson to undergo surgery

CHICAGO — Chicago Cubs slugger Andre Dawson will undergo arthroscopic surgery to repair cartilage damage in his right knee and be sidelined at least four weeks, it was announced Tuesday.

Club physician Michael Schaefer examined Dawson on Monday and found cartilage damage on the inside of the right knee and possible damage to the outside. The surgery will take place Thursday morning.

Dawson, last week's National League Player of the Week, had fluid drained from his right knee on April 18. He previously had arthroscopic surgery in October 1982 on the same knee.

The Cubs Tuesday placed their star right fielder on the 21-day disabled list, retroactive to May 7.

"What can we do except play?" said Cubs manager Don Zimmer. "It's not the end of the world."

Friday, with the Class 1A at game at 1 p.m., the Class 2A contest at 3:30 p.m., the Class 3A final at 6 p.m. and the Class 4A match-up at 8:30 p.m.

All the games will be played at Merrill Park, which is located behind Lochman's Plaza off Jamestown Boulevard. As determined by the FHSAA, each day will be divided into four sessions. Admission, which is also set by the FHSAA, is $4 per person for each session of games.

"We're real thankful that they (Lake Brantley) are in it. Hopefully, they'll bring in the crowd," said Nolen. "The FHSAA's direction is to see if we can do this thing all the championships for a given sport to one site for all the sports. We hope to keep softball here."

There are many reasons that the state softball tournaments could take up permanent residence at Merrill Park. For one, Merrill Park is one of the best softball facilities in the state and, secondly, Altamonte Springs' central location in the state should bring entire other fans to make the trip.

"We think the park is the best that we've seen," said Nolen. "One of the reasons I think this is such a strong area is that it's close enough that people can come from the East Coast to see it. And we should draw some people from Volusia and Orange counties. Besides, having that much softball at one site attracts more people."

"We couldn't have done it without the help of the city of Altamonte Springs. They've been incredible."

Marc Hultin, who is the Center Supervisor at Merrill Park within Altamonte Springs' Department of Leisure Services, appreciates the compliment but is quick to share the glory.

"The city of Altamonte Springs worked with Lake Brantley High School to renovate the girls' softball field at the high school," explained Hultin. "That was prior to Brantley's 1987 softball season, when they made it to championship game (losing 2-1 to Tampa-Galther)."

"Since then, the city has used it for some league play. We've worked out cooperative agreement and from that original agreement, we've grown pretty close."

And from that original working relationship sprang the joint effort to bring the state softball tournaments to one site.

"With the help of (Lake Mary High School principal) Don Reynolds and the support of the administrations of both high schools, we put in a bid last September to bring all classes together for the first time," said Hultin. "We're really excited about it. This is a chance for Altamonte Springs to put its best foot forward and we feel it's something that the girls deserve."

"Everybody's worked really close. Both the booster clubs at Lake Brantley and Lake Mary have been a tremendous help. It's been a real community effort. It shows what people can do when they put their minds to it. We've got a lot of support from local businesses and we've put together a nice program. We've also gotten some guidance from the FHSAA as to what they expect in a tournament."

It all comes together tomorrow starting at 1 p.m.

Baby owls to star in Mother's Day event

MAITLAND — Fluffy, baby owls will be on display for their once-a-year appearance at the Florida Audubon Society's Madalyn Baldwin Center for Birds of Prey on Saturday, May 13, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The "Baby Owl Shower," the center's annual Mother's Day weekend event, will feature young ones of great horned owls, screech owls, common barn owls and burrowing owls. Admission is free, but the center is in need of such items as paper towels, 30-gallon garage bags, Pine Sol-type disinfectant, towels, newspaper, baby blankets, heating pads, fresh leaves and pine needles, water bowls, green stamps, cash contributions, sky kennels and assorted tools. Visitors will be able to see and photograph the owlets at close range. The baby owls have been received as orphans from around Central Florida. After hunting and flight training, owls received by the center are banded and returned to the wild in suitable habitat areas. Also on exhibit at the center will be a wildlife display by local artist Richard Adams, whose works feature many of the permanently injured birds that reside at Florida Audubon headquarters. The Center for Birds of Prey also houses injured and orphaned hawks, eagles, falcons and vultures. The center is located at 1101 Audubon Way, off Lake Sybela Drive, Maitland. For information, call 647-2615.

Her snacks draw neighborhood kids

By TERRI AMM
Herald correspondent

SANFORD — Our Cook of the Week is a woman with an avid interest in life and a heart as big as the table she fills with home-cooked food.

A conversation with Nancy Johnson of Sanford runs the gamut of topics. She speaks with enthusiasm about her family, science fiction writing, cooking the kids in the neighborhood, computers and the space program. She is interested in quality, be it in the presentation of the food she makes or the guidance she gives to young people.

Johnson and her husband, Julian, are native Floridians—she from the Kissimmee area, he from Jacksonville. They attended the same high school and became sweethearts there. After Julian got out of the service, they married and settled in Fort Pierce.

In 1969, the couple moved to Sanford, attracted by better job opportunities for Julian, who is a civil engineer, and the azaleas and oak trees they found when they visited the area.

The Johnsons have two sons, Marshall and Paul, a daughter, Terry, and six grandchildren.

Johnson learned to cook from her mother, cutting her cooking teeth on rice, pudding and sugar cookies. "The way Grandmother did them," she said.

Sunday dinner was the big event of the week as far as cooking was concerned, and Johnson always wanted to help. The meal was held after church and sometimes the preacher came home to eat with them. At other times, the guests were relatives. Johnson's family and friends would gather around the table, hungry, and wait for her father to say grace.

God would say the prayer and he'd never stop praying—it took forever," Johnson said. His amen was the signal for everyone to sit down and dig in, she said.

Johnson enjoys most kinds of cooking. She likes to bake cakes and fruit pies and makes lots of vegetables and fruit salads when the weather is hot. Being health conscious, she tries to choose foods high in vitamins and minerals.

"I would rather eat the right vegetables with vitamins than take all those pills," she said.

Her evening meals are usually well-rounded, with a meat, a basic carbohydrate such as rice or potatoes, and one or two vegetables. For dessert she likes to serve cake, ice cream or Jell-O with fruit and dairy whip, a treat her grandchildren, especially enjoy.

Johnson has been writing science fiction short stories since 1980 and has had two published in a Scottish magazine called Sci Press. Writing is pleasure and an escape for her.

"You can forget anything you're worried about—leave it all," she said.

She said she can travel to other planets in her stories and create anything she wants to create. She records the stories on a TRS 80 computer she calls "Spock." Johnson also corresponds with other writers in

FOOD & NUTRITION

England, Scotland and across the United States, they swap ideas on techniques that have succeeded for them.

Johnson has maintained an avid interest in the space program since man first walked on the moon. She has recorded most of the launches on VCR tape and has a collection of books about space travel and living in space.

Another subject close to Johnson's heart is young people. She has held open house for neighborhood kids for many years. Kids got in the habit of coming over after school to watch tapes she would rent—clean tapes with as little cursing as possible—as she put it, such as "Star Trek," "Back to the Future" and "Return of the Jedi." Sometimes, they would bake cakes and cookies, and she would always feed them if they seemed hungry.

Periodically, one of the kids would beat the crowd in order to talk about a problem with Johnson. She mainly listened, she said, but also offered support and advice, encouraging them to "think future" and prepare themselves with a good education. She prompted three who had quit school to get their General Equivalency Diplomas (GEDs) at Seminole Community College, and took two of them to and from their classes. Johnson said the kids don't come over as much since they've gotten older, but still drop by sometimes for a snack or cool drink.

Johnson rarely cooks from recipes anymore, preferring to experiment and improvise as she goes along. She likes Lipton Onion Soup Mix for its flavors and will substitute a little of the mix for real onions in the dish. The appearance of her food is important to her; she thinks it tastes better if it looks good. When slicing, she says smaller is better because small slices or chunks absorb more seasonings and look more presentable.

Her table setting is full of visual appeal. Elegant black china, several flowers, bud in a vase, and chair serving hampers that let the color of the food show through. In many aspects, it seems Johnson is willing to make the extra effort that carries things a little beyond the ordinary.

Her outlook on life is, "Don't worry. Depend on the philosophy that everything will straighten itself out in the end and do the best you can with your time in this world."

Some of Johnson's favorite recipes follow.

WET COCONUT TORTE

4 cups sweetened, flaked coconut

2 cups sour cream
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 yellow cake mix

Mix coconut, sour cream and sugar. Refrigerate for 24 hours. Prepare yellow cake according to directions, making two layers. Let cool. Cut each layer in half, making four thin cake layers. Frost each layer with coconut-sour cream mixture. Top with a heavy. Makes one torte.

Her birth control pills caused pancreatitis

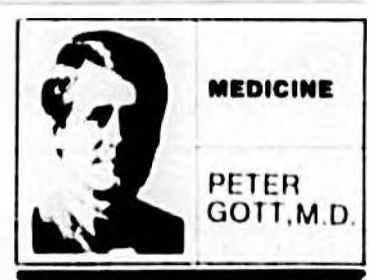

DEAR DR. GOTT: When I was in my 20s I suffered from pancreatitis to the degree that I considered suicide. One day, by chance, I read the insert on my birth control medication and found that a minuscule portion of the pill-taking population could suffer from pancreatitis as a side effect. Once I stopped the pills, all symptoms disappeared. I have to watch my diet. I can't help but wonder why my doctor never read the insert.

DEAR READER: As you discovered, inflammation of the pancreas is a rare but devastating complication of birth control pills in some women. It causes severe abdominal pain. I suspect that your doctor was aware of this unusual consequence but simply failed to warn you of it. This was probably due to carelessness, not ignorance.

I am not sure why you have to watch your diet to prevent pancreatitis. In susceptible women, once the birth control pills are stopped, the symptoms of inflammation disappear. You are fortunate to have been alert enough to read the package insert.

In this case, a brace may help relieve your pain. You also might be aided by estrogen therapy, calcium/thyroid supplements and therapy with calcium, a drug that drives calcium into weakened bones.

Because you are having problems with your bones, I believe that you should be examined by

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Everyone at the table knew that East's reopening one no-trump showed only 11-14 high-card points. Therefore it was not completely safe for West to bid over two hearts. I would say to West "Live a little, even dangerously. Bid two spades." That contract would have succeeded, but East-West found a smaller success when declarer Willy Nilly mangled the play in two hearts.

Willy won the spade ace, cashed the spade king and led the club 10. West played small. East won the ace, returned a club to West's king and got a club ruff. Then he played a diamond to West and ruffed another club. Declarer ruffed the next diamond, but he had lost five tricks and had one more to lose to East's heart king. One would think Willy would do better by playing A-Q of hearts right away, but the defense still gets the same six tricks.

The winning play for declarer is to first disrupt communications between the defenders by playing a diamond. East can still get one club ruff, but he will have no entry to partner's hand for the needed second ruff. South can then play A-Q of hearts and make eight tricks.

The more important lesson here is the action by West. Even though his partner's reopening no-trump did not promise spade support, West should risk a two-spade bid, gambling that his side can make a part-score. His singleton heart suggests that South may succeed in two hearts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you're somewhat undisciplined and free and easy going today, your behavior will be acceptable to your friends, but this is not likely to be true of co-workers. Try to gain their approval.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you feel inclined to take financial risks today, it's best you gamble on your own hunches and not those of someone else. Yours could be much more accurate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't rely on people today who have let you down previously, because they are apt to repeat past performances. On the other hand, you can trust those who have proven they keep their word.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be very careful today that you do not overdo it if you are trying to promote something of significance. The first deal you put together is likely to be your best one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone you like may come to you today with an interesting business proposal. Even though it sounds good, it might be wise at this time to avoid commercial arrangements with friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't attempt to peddle your own wares today, because it looks like others can do a more effective job for you than you can do for yourself. Get out of your own way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Adjustments may be called for today in an arrangement you have with a close associate. Don't even attempt to hold out for a one-sided deal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In any work you're required to perform at this time, focus more on the rewards you'll derive rather than on the effort and inconvenience. It will make the row you hoe easier.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There is a possibility you may be overmatched in a competitive, fun activity today. If your competitor does you in, lose with smiles and grace, instead of alibis.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Something in which you are presently involved may look like it only has a dark side, but don't be deceived by this perception. A silver lining is about to make an appearance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You could be very lucky today in situations that have social overtones, but you might not be as fortunate in matters that are of a materialistic nature.

SEMINOLE SCENES

When on assignment, Herald photographers shoot a variety of pictures, each with a different composition, pose or angle. Not all of them are published.

From time to time, the Herald intends to assemble some of those "outtakes" for a second look from a different perspective, at news and feature events.

Here is another collection of recent scenes from around Seminole County.

Aerobicizing

Karen Stripling, a teaching assistant in the physical education department at Douglas Stenstrom Elementary School in Oviedo, leads the 850 members of the student body, faculty and staff in a low impact aerobic work out. The 15 minute exercise session was part of a nation-wide program wherein 200,000 participants at 1,000 schools worked out simultaneously.

Out for a stroll

Blanche of Longwood with their respective offspring. The two represented Sun Bank during the event.

Slide show

Rachel Wagner gives a slide show presentation during a recent event at the Sanford Civic Center. Wagner was in town to design the Park on Park playground and had just spent the day with some school children, getting their ideas for the project. Here she is showing some of those ideas to parents and other interested parties during a projection display of sketches and slides.

Protestors stage takeover of Massachusetts building

United Press International

AMHERST, Mass. — Students protesting military-funded research on campus seized another building at the University of Massachusetts Tuesday night, the fourth such takeover in a month.

The 75 to 100 students were holed up in Memorial Hall, the same two-story brick building which demonstrators seized in the second takeover two weeks ago.

The protesters also demanded school administrators halt suspension proceedings against 10 students arrested in last week's occupation of a school research facility.

The latest takeover came during a faculty forum on the issue of Pentagon-funded research at UMass and just hours after 10 students staged a temporary sit-in at the office of Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey.

Meanwhile, six student hunger strikers camped out outside the school administration building went without food for a second day to press for an end to the protesters' suspensions.

Duffey accused the demonstrators of "intellectual terrorism."

"It's intellectual terrorism when the group sustains occupying space with demands," Duffey said. "This is beyond a peaceful protest."

Kenton Tharp, a preschool teacher in Amherst and one of the 10 at the sit-in at Duffey's office, said community members are beginning to rally on the side of students who are opposed to military-funded research at UMass.

TWO LETTERS CAN SAVE YOUR CHILD'S LIFE

When confronted with drugs, the two most important letters in the alphabet for your children to know are "NO." Children learn the alphabet at an early age, but they are also exposed to drugs early in life. Statistics indicate that 17% of today's youth use alcohol or drugs on a daily basis. Teach your children to KNOW their alphabet when it comes to drugs.

EVEN IT UP

GIVE YOUR CHANGE TO FEED THE HUNGRY.

The statistics about hunger in America are shocking. More and more children and elderly people don't have enough to eat. But you can help make a change for the better. WINN-DIXIE and The Salvation Army have put together a simple, effective program called "Even It Up." When you buy groceries, just ask your cashier to even up your grocery total to the next dollar. The funds collected will go to The Salvation Army to provide fresh food items for needy families.
