For Tuesday, July 3, 1979

YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 3, 1979
Things important to you personally, as well as to one you deal with, will take a turn for the better this coming year. Old problems will disappear of their own volition.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Look for the bluebird of happiness to be perching in areas you least expect today. You'll know where he is when you hear his cheerful chirp. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter, Mail #1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 488, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You usually know the right things to say to people and today will be no exception. The only difference is that you'll have more of them to charm than usual.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Person you hold in high esteem will be caring about you and wanting to fulfill your needs today. If you need a favor, ask.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Spreading sunshine and cheery thoughts makes you a popular guy or gal today. People need a smile almost more than they need food.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone who does things in a quiet manner is on your side today. This person knows how to make you happy in his or her own gentle fashion.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your greatest asset today is your ability to make everyone you deal with feel very important. Your juggling ways gain value.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The key to your success today is to find enjoyment in your duties. Once you feel that what you are doing serves a useful purpose, the sky is the limit.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Because you're unlikely to take yourself or others too seriously today, you should experience many pleasant encounters. The light touch works wonders.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone extremely fond of you will be secretly trying to effect a change today that's greatly to your advantage. This person has helped you before.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll have a great time no matter who you are with today. Your quick wit and delightful charm will have everybody gathering around you.
Taurus (April 20-May 19) These extra pennies you need to do or have something special will be there today. You've done your job well. It's reflected in your pocketbook.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Happiness always comes from sharing your time with those who love you. This is why today will be such a pleasant one for you.

Hypoglycemia: How Is It Diagnosed?
Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB—I would appreciate some information about hypoglycemia. Does the physician find it by a blood test? Is the diet the only treatment? Are there actual symptoms? Does one stagger or shake? Just what does the word "glycemia" mean? I can't find it in my dictionary.

DEAR READER—The term "glycemia" refers to the blood. That's rather interesting because anemia literally means without blood, which, of course, isn't true. The "gly" refers to glucose. Therefore, the term means glucose in the blood. Hypoglycemia means low glucose in the blood and hyperglycemia means too much glucose in the blood.

Yes, the doctor determines that a person has hypoglycemia, commonly referred to as low blood sugar, by measuring the amount of glucose in the blood.

It takes more than that to make the proper diagnosis, though. Many perfectly healthy, active young individuals have blood sugars intermittently below 40. If there are no symptoms associated with the findings in the blood, no diagnosis should be made. The correct basis for a diagnosis of hypoglycemia is to demonstrate the low level of glucose in the blood at the same time symptoms are produced. I'm sending you The Health Letter, number 3-3, Hypoglycemia: Low Blood Sugar, to give you more details. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Many of the symptoms ascribed to hypoglycemia can be caused by other things. That's because an excess amount of adrenaline will cause a person to have shakiness, anxiety symptoms or nervousness and even a fast heartbeat. A low blood glucose level will cause your adrenal gland to release adrenaline, but so will anxiety or sudden fright or a number of problems. That's why stress and anxiety so often get confused with hypoglycemia.

A person who's having adrenaline symptoms because of anxiety should not be diagnosed as having low blood sugar. His needs to have his anxieties studied and be given help for that.

As The Health Letter that I'm sending you will explain, there are several kinds of hypoglycemia. In general, there's the "gly" hypoglycemia which follows eating. The blood sugar tends to go up with eating and then with a rebound reaction, it goes too low and produces symptoms. The other kind of hypoglycemia is sometimes called primary hypoglycemia and is associated with low blood glucose levels before eating. Some of these rare cases are associated with a tumor of the pancreas. So the first hurdle is making a correct diagnosis of hypoglycemia. The second hurdle is finding out what caused the hypoglycemia if it's present. Obviously, the treatment for reactive hypoglycemia related to eating is quite different than the treatment of primary hypoglycemia associated with a tumor of the pancreas.

What is an indigent? That's the question facing county officials as they proceed with the preparation of next year's operating budget.

The answer could cost taxpayers several hundreds of thousands of dollars in medical fees.

It is also a question that, when answered, could determine whether Seminole Memorial Hospital (SMH) remains county-owned or is converted to a private facility.

It is the key to the whole hospital issue," said Seminole County Commissioner Dick Williams. "We have arrived at a definition of what is a truly needy person."

Neither the hospital, which administers care to the county's poor, nor the county, which pays for the care, has arrived at a formula for use in deciding who is eligible to receive medical services as an indigent.

As a result, a discrepancy between what hospital officials say they need and what the commissioners are willing to provide could exist in the coming year.

During the current year, according to figures assembled by SMH Administrator Charles Bentley, the hospital will absorb about $28,000 in indigent care costs that will not be paid by the county. Bentley said the hospital received about $37,000 in tax receipts this year, of which $340,000 was used to pay for indigent care. But actual costs to the hospital will be close to $625,000, he said.

But the $625,000 figure is based on hospital estimates with no set criteria for determining eligibility. Bentley said the policy of SMH is to negotiate with patients and try to determine through financial information given by them, if they can pay. There are no income levels based on family size to determine a person's ability to pay, he said. Such levels are used by other county agencies such as the welfare department in establishing eligibility for

That's a mighty big firecracker Kim Glavich of Winter Springs is holding, fortunately it isn't loaded. Activities will range from a parade to contests to balloon rides to spectacular fireworks displays. A complete list of area activities appears on page 3A.

Diesel Cut Threatens City Garbage Pickup

In addition to cutting back on its usage of diesel fuel, Knowles said, the city is trying to buy small amounts of fuel on the commercial market. He said he was confident the city would locate enough diesel fuel to make it through the month. But if it did not, he said, some services such as garbage collection would have to be curtailed towards the end of July.

According to Lex Hester, energy director for Florida, the only alternative to Sanford may have been the state's "set-aside" reserve. Knowles said Monday afternoon that 60 percent of all fuel coming into Florida and places it in a special reserve. He said Sanford may apply for the use of some of that reserve, but he did not think they had done so yet.

"There may be a problem with diesel fuel supplies to municipalities in July," he said. "We're looking into it to see what we can do."

Knowles said the city planned to apply for use of the state's "set-aside" reserves "around the middle of the month."

Knowles met Monday afternoon with city government department heads to come up with ways to meet the crisis. Knowles said they decided at the meeting not to restart work on Cornwall Road or on the State Road 46-A water line extension project.

In addition, he said, the city has parked many of its diesel-burning vehicles, among them five dump trucks, two road graders and two road sweepers.

Knowles said the move would "definitely cause a slowdown in the scheduling of some city services." He explained that, for example, it would take the city a little longer to get around to sweeping some streets or inspecting some buildings.

"We are going to have to arrange things so we can get more than one task accomplished on a trip," he said.

The July diesel fuel problem in this area seems unique to Sanford. Spokesmen for Altamonte Springs, Oviedo, Longwood and Lake Mary, for instance, say they have received no word of cutbacks in the amount of diesel fuel they will be supplied in July.

Witness Identifies Bundy

MIAMI (UPI)—The state's star witness today picked Theodore Bundy from a crowd of 50 people standing in the courtroom and said he was the man who shot the victim in the Chi Omega house the night two Florida State University coeds were killed.

"I think I recognize him now better than I ever have before," said Nita June Neary in a clear, firm voice.

"I've had to go over this again and again and again in court," she said. "I'm not positive," said Miss Neary, an art education major who transferred from F.S.U. to Indiana's Ball State University immediately after the murders.

Defense attorneys have asked that Miss Neary's testimony be barred from the trial as unreliable.

"The very way she returned from the front door as she returned from a late night of drinking and dancing at a fraternity beer party on Jan. 15, 1978, her brief encounter with the intruder.

She said she caught a three-second glimpse of a club-ferrying man slipping on the front door as she returned from a late night of drinking and dancing at a fraternity beer party on Jan. 15, 1978.

Rep. Kelly In Sanford Blames U.S. Government For Energy Woes

By SHARON CARRASCO
Herald Staff Writer

The federal government, not the free enterprise system, is to blame for the energy crunch plaguing this country and it's up to the electorate to do something about it, says Congressman Richard Kelly.

Kelly, a Florida Republican who stands well over six feet tall, spoke before the Sanford Chamber of Commerce this morning at a "personality breakfast" held in his honor.

"With Congress not in session and giving him a chance to visit his constituency, Kelly said, he had designated today as "Sanford Town Day." His itinerary included a luncheon with doctors at Seminole Memorial Hospital and a town meeting at the Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Ave.

"The leadership has got to come from this room," Kelly said. "If you don't want the nation to collapse from lack of production, then you tell those people who are going to elect someone else if they don't get their act together."

Wearing a dark blue suit with a "Sanford is Super" button pinned to his lapel, Kelly blamed President Carter and other politicians for creating an atmosphere of "an orgy of consumption" and not putting more emphasis on production.

"Because of government interference in our lives, we have come to the point where we are consuming too much and that's where the emphasis lies instead of on productivity," Kelly said.

One of the ways the federal government has down-played production and enhanced consumption is by expanding the food stamp program from $30 million to $7 billion, Kelly said.

"The government reduced the benefits of the elderly and sick and sent that money to the non-worker," Kelly said. "As a result, that action further sapped the vitality and incentive of the working world."

The American public should not look to President Carter and other politicians "with high political ideals" to solve the energy crisis, Kelly stressed.

The solution lies in the consumer who must reduce their "tremendous appetite" for energy "in order to provide the massive amount of capital needed to build oil refineries."

"You and I as individuals are going to have to do something," Kelly said. "The government will not save us."

"If we can accept the reality of that, start going to work saving and being frugal, we got it made."

Kelly told chamber members not to point their fingers at the

Families In Transition

Helping Single Parents Get New Start

Some people view divorce as the end of an emotional lifetime. Others see it as the beginning of a new era. Ask Chuck Mowry, executive director of Denver's Warren Village, the only community in the U.S. devoted entirely to single parents, and he'll tell you that becoming a solo parent "creates the opportunity to build a better life."

individual who can handle the adjustment to single parenting on her or his own, without help from others.
His advice: "Find someone to talk to... that's the single most important thing. Find your friends fast; seek professional counsel and if at all possible, join a self-help group."

Interest in starting versions of Warren Village across the country has been high, but unproductive to date. Mowry discovered the major stumbling block for most groups seeking to found one-parent family communities has been the lack of funding which could be met through federal housing legislation which recognizes the needs for single parent family housing.

Seminole Buys Punch Card Voting Machines

By GEOFFREY POUNDS Herald Staff Writer

Rubber bumpers won't bother Seminole county voters in the next election.

At least that's the assurance voters have from a representative of Diamond International Corp. of Charlotte, N.C., who was successful Tuesday in persuading the county commissioners to purchase 456 new punch card voting machines.

The machines are expected to be delivered by December and will be operational for municipal elections then, Commissioner Dick Williams said. The machines will replace the conventional mechanical voting machines.

The old machines created difficulties last September when many of the 176 units malfunctioned during primary elections. An unsuccessful candidate in the election filed suit challenging the election, and legal action still is in courts.

According to reports from a registered locksmith and representatives of the manufacturer of the machines used then, Shoup Voting Machine Co., the malfunctions resulted from the melting of rubber bumpers in the locks of the machines.

The decision to buy the machines from Diamond International came on a vote of 2-1, with Commissioners Bill Kirchhoff and Sandra Glenn voting in opposition.

Glenn said she favored accepting the majority report of a citizens advisory committee, which recommended the purchasing of the machines from a competing firm, the CES Voting Machine Company of Berkeley, Calif. Kirchhoff said he also favored the CES machines, stating he believed they were easier to use.

However, those voting in the majority noted that the Diamond International machines could be purchased for $148,883 as opposed to the bid of $164,860 submitted by CES.

In addition, the trade allowance for the old mechanical machines is $80,000 from Diamond International as opposed to the $45,000 offered by CES.

Trade-in, however, will be delayed on the advice of county administrator Roger Neiswander. Neiswander said the county can attempt to sell the present machines before Edward O'Day, representing Diamond International, said such a contract would be agreeable.

The move to a modern punch card voting system was recommended by the 16-member citizens advisory committee following a 30-day study completed in May. The committee said the punch card system would reduce long term storage costs and would be easier to operate by voters.

'The July Fourth Massacre': 5 Outlaws Found Murdered

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Five members of the Outlaws motorcycle gang were found shot and stabbed to death early today at their north Charlotte clubhouse, city police said.

"You've heard of the St. Valentine's Day Massacre? Well, this is the July 4th Massacre," one investigator for city police said.

Authorities said a club member found the bodies of the as-yet unidentified four men and one woman at about 5:30 a.m.

Authorities said shell casings were found in the clubhouse, some apparently coming from a handgun and the others from an automatic rifle.

The small, green-shingled clubhouse is located in an isolated, wooded area near I-85.

Authorities said the body of one member was found sitting on the front porch of the house with a shotgun in his lap. Police said they suspected he had been standing watch for the others, but fell asleep.

City police said they believe the incident occurred between 12:30 a.m. and 5:30 a.m. today, because one of the gang members killed was seen just after midnight at an area restaurant.

The North Carolina branch of the Outlaws motorcycle gang has been in existence for more than a decade and has been frequenting the Charlotte-Gastonia area this year.

It was not the first time the Outlaws were touched by violence. During the past few years gang members have been shot to death in North Carolina in a skirmish with a rival gang and in a shootout with police during a drug raid.

In Lexington in 1976, authorities found homemade bombs attached to the charred remains of an old Outlaws clubhouse that had burned down two weeks before.

The motorcycle chapter had branches across much of the country during the 1970s. In Louisville, Ky., for example, more than 300 club members from seven states attended the 1971 funeral of a member known as "Cat Daddy."

And in Huntersville in 1975, Stone's train stopped in Sanford, where it was met by business and Chamber of Commerce representatives.

During the brief stop, Stone said he had been well received on the trip and felt it had been successful so far in drumming up support for the amendment he is trying to push through Congress.

Stone said he wants to place a one-year moratorium on the cancellation of any of Amtrak's routes. According to him, the Amtrak budget being considered by Congress will eliminate three of the four trains now running from New York to Florida. It will also eliminate, he said, the train which runs from Chicago to Florida.

Stone said the budget which will cancel these trains is based on ridership figures which the gas shortage has made obsolete.

"These trains are full," he said. "There isn't a seat left on them. How can we eliminate a mass transit system with the energy situation as it now stands?"

According to figures supplied by the National Association of Railroad Passengers (NARP), ridership on all Amtrak trains for May 1979 is up 19.6 percent over the same month last year. NARP also says the number of people denied seats because of sold-out trains jumped 1,061 percent comparing May 1979 to May 1978.

Stone said people have begun seeing the railroad as a viable alternative to the automobile.

"I'm surprised how many families are on this train," he said. "I was expecting mostly elderly people but it's mostly families. People are using this train."

Stone said the government made $510 million in subsidy payments to Amtrak in 1978. The bill recommended by the Senate Commerce Committee would budget Amtrak at almost $581 million, he said. But, he added, it would drastically cut down the number of passenger miles the system would cover.

Stone's amendment to the bill is co-sponsored by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

The Church-Stone amendment would stop any cancellation of Amtrak routes for a period of one year. The purpose of the year-long moratorium, he said, is so the system can be studied now that the cost of gas seems to be increasing the number of people taking the train.

The moratorium called for in the amendment would increase the government's 1980 subsidy payment about $718 million, Stone said. That would be an increase of $137 million.

Stone said the $81 million that increase "would be for labor payments for work that wouldn't be done if the trains were cancelled."

Stone said that money will have to be paid regardless of whether the trains are eliminated. He said the work had already been contracted for and the $81 million will have to be paid each year for the next six years anyway.

Stone said his amendment would, therefore, only increase the government's subsidy by $55 million. That amount, he said, would be "more than made up for" by the increased revenue supplied by the recent increase in riders and the money the government would save in welfare payments to Amtrak workers who would lose their jobs if the trains were cancelled.

As Stone told reporters about his amendment, a middle-aged man with a very big smile came sauntering down the aisle.

"Excuse me, Senator," he said. "But don't forget to tell them that, on a train, you don't have to worry about DWI (driving while intoxicated)."

Stone laughed.

"Now that's the voice of the people," he said.

Stone Riding Wave Of Support For Amtrak

By BRAD PURDUM Herald Staff Writer

Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., rode the Amtrak "Champion" from Tampa to Jacksonville Tuesday to "save the Florida train routes and all the jobs that go with them."

Hermit's Happy At Home In The Mississippi Swamp

LUCEDALE, Miss. (NEA) — John Wesley Gibson used to be a member in good standing of the middle class. He owned a service station, was skilled in the operation of heavy equipment, and lived with a fine wife in a comfortable home. At one point, he says, he also had $100,000 in a savings account.

But then his wife became gravely ill. Gibson sold the service station and spent everything he had to get her through three brain operations and long months of hospitalization. But it was in vain. When she died in 1964 Gibson was alone, bankrupt, getting on in years, and looking for peace of mind.

He found the latter in a most unusual way. He moved his belongings to a shack deep inside a Mississippi delta swamp and became a hermit.

Now 59, after 15 years of it, Wes Gibson says his hermitage on the side of the Pascagoula River is not just his home — it's a refuge from the woes of the world.

The place doesn't look like a refuge. Indeed, it looks like a mess. Gibson's land crawls with lizards, the air is thick with swarming bugs, and his shelter is a dirt-floor hut. Nothing drives in the humidity, the area is ripe with garbage, and occasionally an alligator will stick its nose in his door.

Alligators? Yuh. But that's not the worst of it. The mosquitoes on Gibson's place are far more vicious. And the flies can bite huge chunks out of flesh. Then there are the snakes, to be sure; Gibson was struck by a cotton mouth once "and before I got help I swelled up all the way to my belly."

It's a wonder Gibson didn't swell up further from the snakebite. Help is not easy to find in the swamp. The hermit does not have a telephone, and his nearest neighbor is a mile through the bayous. The only way he can quickly reach civilization is to take his flatboat to a downriver landing.

And that, naturally, is just the way he likes it. Periodically he is visited by his brother, a local farmer, or his son from St. Louis, but otherwise he prefers solitude with the bullfrogs. "I go to town to get supplies," he says, "and I get them and get out. I got no use for all that traffic."

There are some who suppose Gibson has no use for people, either. Quite naturally, given his isolation, his legend is colored by rumors of the old man will eat them if they venture on his property — and if he's not hungry he'll feed them to his voracious dogs.

He's said the hermit is a shaman, too. The word is he lives with the spirit of a swamp witch, and they can assume the bodies of beasts. On Saturday nights, of course, the pair of them draw circles in the light of moonbeams, and drink a solution of bat wings that enables them to live forever.

Matter of fact Gibson does look as if he's lived a bit. His teeth are rotting, his skin resembles the back of a beetle, and his face is camouflaged with a beard stained yellow from tobacco. He wears a baseball cap, but no socks. "I swear," says neighbor Louis Howell, "he scares me to death."

For it all, however, Gibson is in reality a quiet and gentle man. His dogs are too old to be mean, his taste runs more to fish than children, and if he keeps a swamp witch in sin he's not talking. His one evil is
