

CITY COUNCIL MEETS CURTAILS EXPENSES DURING WAR TIMES

Will Economize Wherever They Can Cut Expense

July 1, 1918.

City council of the city of Sanford, Florida, met in regular session on the above date at 7:30 p. m. Present, C. H. Dingee, president and Councilmen R. A. Newman, G. F. Smith, F. L. Miller, Jno. Adams, W. A. Leffler. Absent, Roy Symes. Minutes of last meeting read and adopted.

Mr. Musson came before the council and asked that he be allowed to redeem Tax Certificates for the years 1912 and 1914 at face of certificates. On motion R. A. Newman, seconded by G. F. Smith and carried, same was allowed.

Communication from Mr. Goodrich in regards to conveyance of real estate to the Ox Fibre Brush Co. was read and ordered filed.

On motion R. A. Newman, seconded by F. L. Miller and carried, the monthly payments to the Woman's Club is hereby discontinued.

Communication from F. W. Mahoney in regards to bulkhead matters was read and on motion F. L. Miller, seconded by Jno. Adams and carried same was laid on the table.

W. C. Hill came before the council and asked that he be allowed to pay taxes on Lot 6 of Keely's subdivision, and there being no such description on the tax books of the city on account of no plat of such subdivision being recorded in flat book of the city, on motion F. L. Miller, seconded by R. A. Newman and carried, the city engineer was instructed to get the proper description of said lot that W. C. Hill may pay the taxes on same.

It being brought to the attention of the city council, that C. H. Atkins was in destitute circumstances and needed immediate relief, on motion W. A. Leffler, seconded by G. F. Smith and carried, Councilman Miller was appointed to investigate said case with power to act.

Councilman R. A. Newman offered the following resolution and moved its adoption. Same unanimously adopted:

To Whom it may Concern: Whereas Fred T. Williams has made application for a commission in the Engineers of the Officers Reserve Corps, United States Army, and whereas the said Fred T. Williams has been city engineer of the city of Sanford, Florida, for the past seven years and has proven capable and satisfactory to the city council. Therefore, be it resolved that the common council of the city of Sanford, Florida, having found the said Fred T. Williams competent and reliable as a civil engineer, and as a man, we heartily commend him for any position for which he may make application.

Adopted by the common council of the city of Sanford, Florida, in regular session this July 1, 1918.

NO CHAPTER MEETING

Red Cross Chapter Will Take Summer Vacation

At the June meeting of Seminole County Chapter, the question of discontinuing the meetings for the summer arose and was referred to the executive committee for decision. At the July meeting of the executive committee a motion was carried to eliminate the Chapter monthly meeting until October, therefore there will be no Chapter meeting until the annual business meeting in October at which time the matter will be permanently decided.

As a matter of fact there should be only one Chapter meeting unless business arises necessitating a called meeting but the local Chapter decided, when first organized to hold monthly meetings, believing it would create and maintain interest in the Red Cross work, however the attendance has been so small, including practically the same members whose duties as officers and chairs require their attendance at executive and Chapter meeting alike that it is believed to be a wise decision to discontinue Chapter meetings until further notice.

June and July Red Cross Dues

June and July dues in Seminole County Chapter are still hanging fire. The secretary would appreciate the payment of same. The members whose dues were payable in April and May will be dropped from the roll if not paid within ten days. No further notices will be sent these delinquents.

Mrs. R. A. Terheun, Secy., Seminole Co. Chapter, A. R. C. D. C. Marlowe, Chairman.

WAR TIME NEWSPAPER DIFFERENT

Publishers Problems Difficult To Solve Now

Editor Wayne Thomas of Plant City, President of the State Press Association Friday made an address at the South Florida Press Association at Wauchilla which is worthy of consideration for the excellent suggestions offered as to conducting newspapers during war times. Mr. Thomas said:

"Your committee on program might have just as appropriately put the subject 'Running a War in Newspaper Time,' or a 'Time Running a News paper in a War.'"

"Newspapers all over the country have been 'mined and torpedoes and shelled and gassed. A wise and beneficent congress has rewarded the press with a complicated and harassing zone postage law and the postmaster general seems to have been an accessory before the fact in this action.

"We face increased demands upon our time and space with ever rising costs, shortage of labor, higher paper, high or postage, curtailed revenue, and small opportunity to increase the price on the only two things we have for sale—circulation and advertising.

All these things being true it does very little good for us to complain and is very unbecoming of us Prophets of Optimism to sound the pessimistic note.

"There is a war on, and the whole and sole business of this nation is war. Let us do our full part as manfully and uncomplainingly as the soldiers we are sending to the trenches. Our toes may be trodden upon and our fingers pinched by the rulings of government departments which have little or no appreciation of the newspaper business but this should not affect our loyalty or our zeal for the common cause of the country.

If we cannot have sugar in our coffee, let us take our coffee straight as long as we can get the coffee.

Our own policy will be to conserve every resource and eliminate every unnecessary expense we can, but we must maintain our papers as high a standard as possible.

"I regret to note that some of the small papers of the states have resorted to filling space with dead letters and stalemate. This is criticism against the ethics of the profession. Such papers would better reduce to a single page if necessary, or suspend publication.

"All of us realize that there are too many publications in the country and these times of adversity will have some good results in eliminating a few of them. Any of us can easily name a score of papers in Florida which serve no economic purpose and which the state would be better off without. When these pass away there should be no more room for those who survive.

"Most towns with two newspapers would be better off with one, those with three should have one or two. Fortunately for the man who goes, the shipyards are running full time at high wages, and the cotton and castor bean fields are yearning for his presence. In any of these occupations he may have the advantage over the man he leaves in undisputed possession of the journalistic field."

Hindenburg Is Dead

Amsterdam, July 15.—Field Marshal Von Hindenburg is dead, according to the newspaper Les Mouvables. His death is said to have occurred after a stormy interview with the German emperor at great headquarters at Spa concerning the German offensive toward Paris; he died from congestion of the brain. The interview is said to have occurred May 16th, followed by an apoplectic stroke, which ultimately resulted in his death.

Word comes from Harry B. Lewis, Jr., that he has enlisted in the aviation corps of the navy and is located at Camp Boone, Chicago at the Great Lakes Training School.

GOOD STOCK BRINGS PRICE BEEF CATTLE

Where Tick Rages Price Cannot Be Raised

This county is under tick fever quarantine and the cattle owners get only the quarantine price, no matter where they sell their stock.

The quarantine will be lifted as soon as we eradicate the cattle fever ticks, and then our stock will also increase in weight as well as in price per hundred pounds.

The following facts presented by Congressman Lever, chairman of the Agricultural Appropriation Committee, are conclusive proof that the cattle ticks are a serious handicap on the cattle industry:

"The average weight of cattle from tick-infested areas of Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi, compiled from receipts and sales on the St. Louis stockyards from January 1, 1917, to October 1, 1917, including steers, cows and calves was 407 pounds. These cattle sold at an average price of $7.02 per hundred pounds, or $28.57 per head. During the same period, tick free cattle sold for an average price of about $9.13 per hundred pounds. At this price and at the same weight the former cattle would have been worth $37.16 per head, making a difference of $8.59, or on the total number of beef cattle in the south, this would have amounted to $102,581,780, not taking into consideration the 19 per cent increase in weight of tick free cattle over the ticky cattle. With this increase in weight the ticky cattle would have weighed 486 pounds per head, selling for $44.37 per head, and showing a difference of $15.80 per head."

AMONG THE SCOUTS

Boy Scouts of America, Troop No. 1 Sanford

The regular meeting was called to order by Patrol Leader McAlexander at 7:50 and afterwards Scout Master took charge. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Roll was called and dues were collected.

Treasurer's report showed that we have $28.15 to our credit in one of the public banks. (This shows a Scout majority.)

Some other business was discussed. A committee of P. L. McAlexander, Scouts Bradbury and Moore were to see that the Scribe's and Treasurer's books were up to date. After meeting we ran the mile relay race formerly planned. The Beaver Patrol came in first and the Eagle Patrol second.

J. W. Musson, Scribe.

Entente Captures Kem

London, July 15.—American and British troops have occupied the whole of the Murman coast, in northern Russia says a dispatch from Moscow to the Central News Agency by way of Amsterdam.

After capturing Kem, a railroad station on the White Sea coast, the dispatch adds, the American and British forces advanced toward Torok, the Russian Bolshevik authorities having withdrawn to Nirok.

The commanders of the entente allied forces have issued an appeal to the population on the Murman coast requesting help against Germany and Finland. It is declared that the Murman coast is Russian territory under the protection of the entente powers.

Let Leon Do It

"Let Leon Do It" begins an ad in today's paper, that shows that "Leon" of the Carnes Hotel is wide awake and on the job. There is always a need for an efficient transfer service, one dependable and reasonable in price and a transfer that could be reached by phone day night and one that, after you reached them, could be depended upon. Leon has seen this opportunity and characteristic of him has taken advantage of the situation and with a brand new, modern auto transfer is on the job and is bidding for your business. It goes without saying that Leon will be successful. He deserves it and is game enough to hustle for it.

GERMANS START AGAIN IN A BIG OFFENSIVE ALONG FIFTY MILE FRONT

THE LABOR PROBLEM Has Been Solved by the United States Government

Washington, D. C., July 15.—Florida farmers and the various industries that have suffered through the enticing away of labor and by the inefficiency with which various war works have been bid against each other for labor may take some comfort from the following statement authorized by the U. S. department of labor:

Only manufacturers engaged on war contracts and employing over 100 workers will be required to obtain their unskilled labor through the United States employment service of the department of labor by the ruling which goes into effect August 1. So much uncertainty as to the scope of the new labor recruiting policy has been shown in inquiries received by the department of labor from employers not engaged in war work that the department today announced the exceptionment today announced the exceptions under which private recruiting of labor may still be carried on.

Non-war industries are affected only indirectly. But they are on and all affected indirectly from the fact that the war industries of the nation are now of paramount importance, demanding sacrifice and cooperation from all employers not engaged in war work in order that they may function with maximum efficiency.

"Non-war industries, therefore, must not have superior inducements, prevent the transfer of workers urgently needed for war production, or in any way attempt to compete with the government for labor.

"The following five classes of labor need not at the present time be recruited through the United States employment service, although of course, the machinery of the employment service is available to all employers needing these classes:

"1.—Labor which is not directly or indirectly solicited.

"2.—Labor for railroads (except insofar as the director general of railroads has already or may in the future require that shall be exclusively through the United States employment service).

"3.—Farm labor to be recruited in accordance with existing arrangements with the department of agriculture.

"4.—Labor for non-war work.

"Labor for establishments the maximum force of which (including the additional number recruited) does not exceed 100 employes."

Workers Needed at Headquarters

Mrs. David Speer, director of Woman's Work, American Red Cross, makes an urgent call upon the members of Seminole County Chapter to assist in making bandage bed socks at once. Our allotment is one case for July, must be finished by AUGUST 1ST and that means about one thousand socks. Mrs. Speer is willing that the work may be carried home. A prompt response to this appeal will be appreciated.

SOLDIER BOYS LEAVE

Word comes from Dr. Tolar who is in Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia that he had a most favorable operation and is now rapidly recovering. His friends here will be glad to hear this good news and to know that he and Mrs. Tolar will soon be home again.

Americans In Thick of Fighting Hold Firm

The Germans today at daylight launched a violent attack against the American positions west of Chateau Thierry, especially near Vaux.

The attack came after a most violent bombardment of high explosives and gas shells throughout the night. The American troops sought shelter wherever it was available. When the enemy infantry appeared, the Americans swarmed out and met the attackers with a rain of machine gun bullets.

The Americans wore their gas masks as they fought the attacking Germans.

An enemy bombardment of towns in the rear of the line began shortly after 6 o'clock a. m.

The latest reports say the Americans are holding their own in the fighting, maintaining their positions.

At this hour it had not been determined how the battle in the vicinity of Vaux was progressing. The whole line in both directions from that town was dense with smoke and gas fumes. The roar of the cannonade was punctuated in the few intermissions with a terrific din of machine gun and rifle fire, which seemed to be of the hottest character in Vaux itself.

In this locality it was not known whether the Germans in this attack had begun another offensive, but the intensity of the fighting indicated to those near the scene that the operation was a renewal of the general attack that had been expected.

Official reports relative to the grand offensive begun this morning against the allied positions shows that it is the most ambitious stroke since March 21 when the Germans launched their assault against the British lines from the vicinity of Arras La Fere. The front in the March 21 offensive was reported to be about 55 miles in length. The one over which the Germans are attacking today is approximately 50 miles from Chateau Thierry on the west to Massiges, in the Champagne on the east.

The Germans followed their most recent tactics of beginning an offensive. There was a brief artillery preparation of greatest violence and then came the advance of assault troops.

There seems however to have been a new feature in this attack. Great naval guns have been brought up behind the enemy lines and town far behind the actual battle area were taken under bombardment. The violence of this cannonade is evidenced by the fact that the city of Meaux, 25 miles west of Chateau Thierry was under fire of great projectiles during the night.

The apparent purpose of the Germans attacking along the line from Chateau Thierry east along the Marne along the Rolling Hills to Rheims and thence eastward to Massiges was similar to that in the great attack along the Aisne late in May. They evidently hoped to find the allies less well prepared in this sector than elsewhere. In spite of the repulse of the Germans before Rheims early in June it may be that the allied line eastward from Chateau Thierry had been more thinly held than that from Chateau Thierry north to the Aisne and thence through the Picardy sector to Ypres.

German assaulting troops thus might expect to encounter less violent resistance in the sectors east of Chateau Thierry and the Germans possibly hoped for gains which even would compel an allied retirement from the Verdun and St. Mihiel sectors.

The north bank of the Marne is held by the Germans for a distance of some 20 miles east from Chateau Thierry. A successful attack in the Rheims area might force the allies back on the Marne still farther east and give the Germans command of the communications system by which the French and American troops at Verdun and St. Mihiel are again.

LOVE'S WITCHERY

By LEE VERONE ALLAN.

"You have done me a great favor," said Dudley North, shaking hands with a companion in a passenger coach.

"Don't speak of it. I'm only glad that the people at Hillside won't be disappointed. Remember, though, you are Robert Wade."

"I've got my lesson by heart," laughed the other.

Almslessly drifting, leaving it to chance where he would land, Dudley North had entered into a casual conversation with his seat mate on the train. The latter had told him that he was bound for Weston, but he had intended going to Hillside up to that morning.

"You see," he explained, "some people at Hillside sent to an agency in the city for a chauffeur. I agreed to take the position. Only this morning, though, an old employer sent for me. Sorry to disappoint the agency and the Worthingtons. They expect me on this train."

"See here," interposed North, "I want work. Wonder if I couldn't fit in?" And an hour later, fully posted, he arrived at the station of the little town of Hillside. In the distance a lake showed, surrounded by fine residences. An automobile stood at the edge of the platform. From it a young man with a satchel hastened to catch the train and directed the quick query to the one passenger alighted.

"You—the new chauffeur?" and North bowed assentingly.

"All right, there's the car. My sisters are over at the store." Then he was gone, and crossing the street the sweetest little specimen of girlish loveliness came tripping up to the machine.

"Oh, the new chauffeur?" she spoke. "My sister Hortense will be here in a minute or two. You don't know the ways around her, of course?"

"It will not take me long to learn," submitted North.

"No, and I'll help you," chattered on Miss Gladys Worthington. "I'll call out 'right' or 'left,' just before we reach a turn."

"I shall certainly be obliged," said North, and the warm sense of emotion the very human Gladys had fathomed, became congealed as her queenly sister appeared and with chilling hauteur spoke the mandatory word: "Home."

There was a winding road, then two junction thoroughfares. "Right," directed a silvery voice; another turn, and "Left."

"Gladys, you annoy me," spoke the haughty Miss Hortense.

"You'd be worse annoyed if Mr. Wade—that is your name I believe—took you out of my way."

"Our chauffeur can be instructed by the butler," planned Miss Hortense frigidly.

After that North was always glad when Gladys was the sole passenger in the car.

"Mr. Wade," she said one day, when he had halted the machine at the side of a lonely country road while some little children, guests of Gladys, were gathering flowers, "would you feel bored if I read you some jingles I have been trying to whip into shape for a club paper a group of us have started?"

"I should be greatly pleased," avowed North, and the pure, clear sentiments enunciated by the rhymes showed the true innocence and ingenuousness of this unspooled daughter of the rich. North forgot himself in suggesting corrections, in perfecting the rhymes of the little poem.

"Why, Mr. Wade," she exclaimed, "you must have read and studied a great deal to know all that!" and he discerned an awakening suspicion in her mind that he was not what he purported to be. The barrier of their widely separated social status was completely broken down when, one day, a reckless driver collided with their car, and, but for Wade seizing Gladys and leaping with her to safety at the risk of his own life, hers would have been sacrificed.

All this led to a natural result—Dudley North had met his fate and could not resist telling Gladys that he loved her. He told her also that he could not remain near her in a false position. Of his past he divulged nothing. He would go away and make something better of himself than an unambitious chauffeur. Then Gladys wept softly, but told him that she would follow him to the ends of the world at his word.

North had advised Mr. Worthington that he would give up his position on a certain day. The one preceding Miss Hortense ordered him to drive to the depot for a guest. North gave a great start as the guest in question arrived on the train. The latter stood spellbound, staring at him from the platform. He was an old man, stern, overbearing in his presentment, but something kindly stirred him at the sight of North—the son whom he had sent adrift after a senseless quarrel.

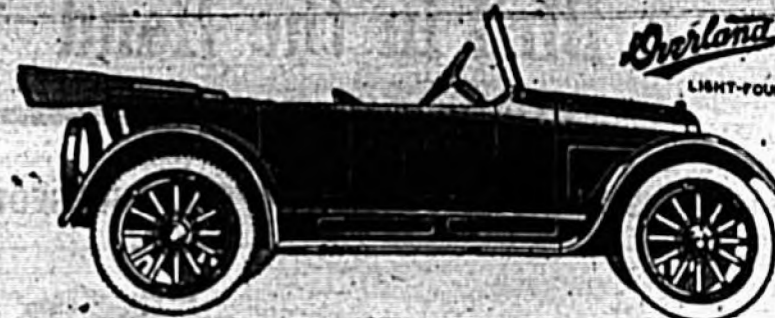

"So!" he said, but with a slight catch in his voice, "menial labor, is it?"

"Is that dishonorable?" calmly questioned Dudley. "The machine is ready for you, sir."

"Sir?" repeated Mr. Gerald North, a tinge of bitterness in his tone. "Come, come, my boy, let us understand one another."

The breach was healed when they reached the Worthington home. Miss Hortense was wide-eyed when she learned the real identity of her despised chauffeur, and little Gladys—blessed little Gladys—she and Dudley went all over a new wooing to hide the one that had already linked their hearts in union.

CHICKENS NEED GREEN FEED

Plan as Suggested by Specialists of United States Department of Agriculture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Try a dual-purpose chicken pen; that is, divide the yard into two parts and grow a green crop on one side while the hens range in the other. As soon as the growing stuff is two or three inches high, the hens can be turned upon it and the other yard then spaded and sown. The following plan of cropping, suggested by specialists of the United States department of agriculture, will enable poultry raisers in a large part of the country to have given feed for their chickens throughout the year. The plan suggested is adapted to moderate climatic conditions. The crop grown should be the one best suited to the particular locality. For the extreme North or South the dates should be modified. Thickly sown crops furnish succulent feed and summer shade.

April 1 to July 1	Feeding (yard 2)
Growing (yard 1)	Winter rye
Oats	Winter vetch
Chard or lettuce	Crimson clover
Clover and vetch	(New Jersey and South)

Why "Behemoth" Survives.

The books of the New Testament were originally in Greek; those of the Old Testament, of course, in Hebrew. When the first "authorized version" of the Bible was framed, early in the seventeenth century, the scholars who undertook the work of translation were puzzled to identify some of the scriptural beasts. The crocodile was unknown in Europe at that period, and, not having even heard of the hippopotamus, they let the Hebrew word "behemoth" stand.

Cattle Increasing in Cuba.

Natural milk is gold in almost all parts of Cuba, but condensed milk is in very general use, and is consumed in relatively large quantities. According to the census of 1907 there were at that time 2,570,402 cattle in the republic which number, it is estimated, has now risen to above 3,000,000.

News From Our Boys
The Orlando Sentinel has received the following letter from Julian H. Harris:

Camp Wheeler, Ga., July 9, 1918.

I have been doing duty away from Co. C most of the time lately and so haven't had an opportunity to give you the news at regular intervals. Will have to make up some of the neglected opportunities now. The greatest thing we have had to happen to us was the sending of most of the old boys of the company across. We have received cards from several of them stating that they had arrived safely. The following boys from Orange county are now over there: Cook Perry Canada; Privates (first class) Neal Baker, Henry Byrd, Braxton Beasley, Cy Cox, Joe McKnight, Walter A. Peterson, John F. Reilly, Roberts Saults, Thomas Sheehy, Edwin C. Shreve, Howard L. Tyner; Privates Edgar J. Briley, Ben B. Brown, Raymond Boyd, George A. Case, Martin L. Crane, Frank Cox, Jephtha E. Besides these boys the following members of the old original company that left Orlando September 16, 1917, but who are from other counties are also across: Mechanic Freeman Hames; Privates (first class) Joe D. Chittenden (Sanford); Privates David H. Ayers, Frank A. Campbell (Sanford), Arthur L. Dickens (Sanford), George A. Dudley (Lakeland), Arthur A. and Joey Lewis (Altamonte Springs), Eddie L. Mott (Sanford), Oscar W. Speer (Sanford), Reuben M. Wells (Tavares), and Walter G. Young (Pennsylvania). Going with these were a number of men who some time ago were sent to the company from the 4,000 sent there from Camp Jackson. None of them were from central Florida.

A number of promotions were recently made. Corporals Tindall, Butler, Niblack, Bryan and Davis and Cook Austin are now sergeants. Privates Gregory, Whilden, You, Ralph O. Williams, Van Bennett, Millard O. McMillan, Cyrus Lee and Herbert N. Kearney are now corporals.

June's Ship Record
Washington, D. C., July 15.—A world's record in shipbuilding was shattered in American shipyards in June by the production of a total tonnage of 280,000.

This is at the rate of 3,364,800 tons a year, but it is likely that 1918 will exceed even that high tonnage, for the last six months of the year will produce many more ships than the first half.

The total tonnage completed and launched July 4 has not yet been announced but the figures for June are now available. They show that the total tonnage completed in the first six months of the year was 1,084,600.

This includes the months when shipbuilding was hampered by bad weather and wore transportation.

For the first five months ending May 31, 118 steel ships aggregating 804,270 tons were completed, as told in a recent N. E. A. dispatch.

Add to this figure the June production of 262,900 tons of steel ships, and 17,500 tons of wooden ships, the figures for the first half of the year are obtained. The July figures July figures should exceed 400,000 tons, and the total will climb steadily.

Hugh White Promoted
Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga., July 15.—Announcement was made here today at headquarters of the promotion to chief of the fire department of Hugh L. White of Sanford. Along with the appointment to chief Mr. White was made a quartermaster sergeant. Sergeant White is one of the most popular members of the fire department and his many friends there are glad of his promotion.

LUXEMBURG HAS HELPED

Little Country Has Suffered in the World War

Paris, France, July 15.—The sufferings in Serbia, Belgium and other small nations afflicted by the war have been told and retold, but little has been said about the brave little neutral nation which bore the first brunt of the German invasion—Luxemburg.

The tiny grand duchy sandwiched between France, Belgium and Germany which defied the invader in August, 1914, and was trampled under foot has suffered stoically. The Huns have starved its population, behaving as scandalously as they did in Belgium, and there has been no relief commissioned as in the case of Belgium.

The airplanes of the French have bombed the towns of Luxemburg occupied by the Germans, and killed the civilian population when railways and steel works aimed at were missed.

But Luxemburg trusts that the nations in arms against Germany will exact reparation and restoration, and that her terrible hardships will not have been in vain.

Many of her sons, although of German racial origin, have joined the ranks of the allies. They were the first volunteers to join the French Foreign Legion in 1914.

Out of a total population of 260,000 Luxemburg has given 3,000 volunteers to the French army, while hundreds more enlisted in the Belgian, American and even Canadian and Italian armies.

These volunteers were mainly residing abroad; their numbers would be vastly larger if the Germans would permit the population to leave the country.

The Luxemburg volunteers regiment has won the highest distinction of any in the French army; each soldier has been mentioned six times in the army orders, and wears the highest decorations of the Legion of Honor. One French general Monhoven is a native of Luxemburg.

When the war ends Luxemburg will receive full credit for its valorous part in it.

Watermelon, Where Art Thou?

Mr. Editor: What has become of the old fashioned watermelons? We used to get them readily in entirely lawful manner, and you are not too young to remember them. They were cheap, and when cut were red from circumference to circumference. There was scarcely rind enough to hold the juicy richness together. The red was a rich red. The meat was sweet and tender and crisp. My old colored man when he saw one come in would raise his eyes, fold his hands and say, "Yo' surely am come from hebbent!"

Mr. Editor, what tender and sweet recollections center about the old-fashioned melon. What a meal could be made from one. It was meat and drink. When company came we would cut a melon enough said. And the price? A dime would buy a good one, two bits would get a three-foot long "rattlesnake" that satisfied every earthly want as long as it lasted.

But now? We have fallen on evil times. No one knows now how to "punk" a melon. Three or four men gather about a wagon, or at the stand, and each one "punks" and each one shakes his head. He is afraid to give an opinion. At last you buy one. It costs sixty cents, a day's wages and overtime. You know that it is a gamble. You take it home and your wife rejoices? Watermelon? That is enough for dinner. You cut it as your family stand around expectant. You cut and cut. Mr. Editor, the rind is four inches thick from each side, and the melon is eight inches through. Your wife looks at you and begins to look in the refrigerator to see what is left from the last meal. The children cry. The world is a gloomy world.

Mr. Editor, can we not have a committee to judge watermelons appointed by the council? Or a proclamation from the mayor, or a superintendent of watermelon culture? This condition of things is hurting the country. Real estate men cannot speak inspiringly of a country where the melons have turned white and "punking" is a lost art. Please do something about this.

Disappointed Citizen.

Castor Pomace for Farmers

Senator Fletcher has been advised by the War Department that the castor pomace, residue from the making of castor oil, which is to be manufactured in a government owned plant in Florida will be distributed to the farmers through channels which the Fertilizing Bureau of the Agricultural Department will outline to this section.

It is understood that this Fertilizing Bureau is now working out details to distribute the fertilizer where it will do the most good to the farmers of the south.

Close watch will be kept by this section to see that fertilizing companies are not allowed to profiteer in making sales of this commodity to the farmers.

Letter From Virgil Smith

On Active Service with the American Expeditionary Forces June 20, 1918.

Dear Mother: At last I am on a good solid foundation, safe and sound. Believe me I am certainly relieved. I guess I could write a book.

A sight I never dreamed of seeing. We are now in a rest camp. Don't expect to stay here long, before we go to a training camp of some kind. The country here is beautiful. High and rocky.

Marching from the transport to camp the little children ran along beside us, hollering in French language, give one cl. The girls and old women are all working. We saw very few men, and they were old men. The situation here is very bad with the natives.

They cheered us along the route, the little tots saying "Hello!" those that could. I could talk to them a little. Never thought that I would to use my French. Ha! ha!

I can't realize that I am over here, although I am.

They don't fail to charge you well for things here. Oranges 2 for 25 cents. Everything is high.

I am taking the best care of my health possible, both mentally and physically, so smile all the time.

I often wonder how little sis is getting along, and by the way, what will you name her

I must close and "beat it." Will write more later. Love and kisses. Your devoted son, Virgil.

We will remember that Virgil Lee Smith enlisted in Chausseurs Co. No. 1, Q. M. C., at Camp Johnston, March 8th. The above is his first letter to his mother after reaching France.

Dressing for Dinner

The custom of dressing for dinner was handed down to us from the Romans, who put on a loose robe of light texture, and generally white, before going to the most important meal of the day. Instances occur where it was kept in readiness for guests who came from a distance and had had no opportunity of dressing before arrival.

HONEY CROP CAN BE LARGELY INCREASED

Development of Beekeeping Industry Is Most Desirable.

Prevent Great Wastes That Come From Infectious Diseases and Failure to Provide Proper Room for Surplus Honey.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is possible for the American beekeeping industry to be developed so that the honey crop will be ten times what it is at present.

The path for this development lies through the education of beekeepers to prevent great wastes that come largely from poor winter housing, two infectious diseases of bees, a failure to control swarming, and failure to provide proper room for surplus honey.

"The beekeeping industry," say specialists of the department, "may be the means of conserving a national resource now largely wasted, changing it into nature's own sweet. The raw material is free on every hand; the investment for equipment is small in comparison with other branches of agriculture; the profits are fully commensurate with the study and labor involved. It would seem profitable to stop such a waste of so desirable a supply of sugar. This waste can be prevented only by the education of beekeepers."

Well-Kept Apiary—Have One on Your Farm and Produce Good Substitute for Sugar.

The present honey crop of the United States barely exceeds 250,000,000 pounds. That the country produces even this much is unknown to most people, it is stated, for while honey was the chief form of sugar used in ancient times, the ease of getting cane or beet sugar has placed honey in the background. Now that our sugar supply is reduced by reason of supplying the allies with part of the sugar they need, the demand for honey has increased not only domestically but also for export.

SHERM'S DOTS

THE DOTS SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.
By Clifford Leon Sherman.

Dear Folks:—Nobody went to sleep the night we sighted the submarines, and I don't blame them. Everybody who could stayed on deck to see the fun, but nothing more happened. It was a mighty long night, however, and a little squall broke just before daylight, drenching most of us. When day broke, we were a rather bedraggled lot, but we would never have forgiven ourselves if something had happened and we had not been there to see it. However, our spirits rose quickly when we sighted someone coming out of the galley with the SAMMY.

CAPTIVE BALLOON

By EDNA PRICE WALLER.

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Love will find a way, Josiah."

"Not in this case, unless I am the plot and guide. I have brought up my dead cousin's daughter, Winnie, since she was ten. I've seen to her education. She's a smart girl, though sometimes willful. I want to see her start in life right."

Josiah Leggett's neighbor smiled secretly. He knew, as did all the town, the old schemer handled a small income that came to Winnie, and undoubtedly benefited by the same. Furthermore, Winnie was an apt little housekeeper.

"I have tried to bring Winnie and the clerk in my brother's store, Lem Dyzart, together, because he is a saving, respectable young fellow. Winnie has had a notion about Rodney Blake. I've nipped his young affections in the bud."

"Blake is a pretty fine young man, all the same," observed the neighbor, and the speaker went his way mentally comparing young Blake with the carrot-headed, undersized Lem Dyzart. Meantime, Winnie was going through a vivid ordeal. Her guardian watched her as a cat does a mouse. He had refused to allow Blake to call at the house, and Dyzart was a frequent visitor. She despised the latter as much as she admired the manly object of her choice. They met, but under difficulties.

"It's got to end!" Rodney declared forcibly. "You are old enough to know your own mind and act upon it. Let us make a bold dash and end this wretched persecution."

"Oh, Rodney! You don't mean to elope?" gasped Winnie.

"Why not? They are driving us to that as the only outcome, aren't they?"

"We are watched so closely. See, Rodney, there is Mr. Leggett, now. He will see us," but Rodney slipped past a hedge with the hurried parting words:

"Be sure to see me tomorrow. I have a plan I want to tell you about."

The plan was the outcome of a suggestion made by an old boyhood friend of Rodney, one Bob West. They had not met for five years until the day previous, when Rodney had come across West on the street. They had a pleasant chat, and West divulged the fact that he was advance agent of a circus which was to pitch its tent at the edge of the town Saturday. Rodney told him what he had on his mind; Winnie, always, Winnie, and West showed a sympathetic interest.

"Why, say," he remarked with friendly ardor, "I can help you out in a big way—the balloon."

"I don't quite understand," said Rodney vaguely.

"We have one. It goes up a thousand feet every afternoon. We advertise to give fifty dollars to any couple who will make the ascent with a clergyman and consent to be married way up in the clouds."

Rodney left his ingenious friend, filled with suppressed excitement. He managed to get a lengthy note to Winnie. He was around the circus before the Saturday afternoon performance.

Winnie had induced her guardian to allow her to attend the entertainment. The latter, however, insisted that he accompany her.

"Here's your ticket," he said; "reserved seat near the band stand. I've invited Lem, and as soon as he arrives we'll come in and make a regular family group—hey, hey!"

And then he strolled about, and Winnie disappeared past the ticket taker, but as soon as her guardian was out of sight, darted out again, and two minutes later entered the tent before which the giant balloon was swaying. Inside was Rodney, and she fluttered to his side and was introduced to West, and the man in charge of the balloon.

"Don't get scared, little one," spoke the latter, a good-natured, fatherly looking man. "Everything is arranged to a T. Now, then, Mr. Blake, just tog up in that false beard and wig. And you, young lady, cover your pretty face with this flowing bridal veil. When I speak the word come out quickly, and hustle into the balloon basket before anybody recognizes you."

Josiah Leggett spent half an hour looking for Dyzart. He came across him, with several hundred others, starting aloft at the balloon, which was descending from its aerial ascent.

"I say, why wasn't you on time?" censured Josiah. "Here Winnie has been inside the tent half an hour. Come on in, or they'll fill up our seats."

"Just a minute," spoke Dyzart, continuing to gaze aloft. "This is lots of fun. Let's have a glimpse of the happy couple when they alight."

The wedding party was being borne gracefully to the ground. There was the man engineering the balloon. The bridegroom had removed his false beard and wig and was smiling into the face of the bride, her enveloping veil now drawn aside. The clergyman, all smiles, held his hands over their heads, delivering his blessing.

"Now hear the crowd guy them," began Dyzart, and then he clutched the arm of his companion and nearly fell over—"Thunder!"

"Winnie!" gasped Josiah, and it was his turn to collapse.

And then, instead of gazing, as the crowd recognized Winnie, whom half the town adored, and Rodney, their prime favorite, they realized the situation fully, and amid enthusiastic cheers the happy twain stepped to terra firma, man and wife.

BY MISADVENTURE

By GERTRUDE L. TUNELIUS.

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"A plain nobody," modest Rufus Dow designated himself, but Ada Pearce considered him the best of men and was not far amiss, and her father, who was Dow's employer, had reason to thank this loyal, industrious young fellow for keeping his small and struggling business afloat through all kinds of vicissitudes.

Mr. Pearce had been too ill for a year to do much more than assume the direction of affairs. He owned a barge, clumsy, old, and safe for close coast service only. He lived a few leagues down the Australian coast from Melbourne, and for twenty years had followed the conveying of merchandise from port to port, especially bulk stuff, cutting steamer rates. The barge had a sail and a derrick and was scarcely seaworthy, and could be operated by one man.

"I've got a cargo—ice," reported Pearce one day. "The consignors will load and all care taken off your hands at the other end. Pick out a spell of clear weather for the go, Rufus, for I hardly think the craft will stand many more voyages."

Rufus started on his voyage a week later. Above the hold, crated, were two hundred ice cream freezers and several barrels of coarse rock salt, for the cargo was designated for a firm engaged in the manufacture of ice cream.

"I think, myself, the old tub is at its last gasp," Rufus told Ada. "If fate downs her on this trip, maybe it will be a good thing, for we make so little. I would like to strike out into some new field. It's this wretched pinching and scraping to get a dollar ahead that is putting off our marriage."

"But it doesn't wear out our love, dear," reminded Ada sweetly.

Everything augured an easy, pleasant voyage. The old barge behaved admirably for two days. The third night, however, fifty miles from any port, Rufus found himself in the grasp of a fierce storm. With dismay he let the unwieldy craft drift, the plaything of the waves, for there was nothing else to do. With daybreak there came a dense fog and a stern northeaster that drove the barge ahead like an arrow shot from a bow. The straining craft groaned and shivered. No land was in sight, the great broad sail had been ripped to tatters and the rudder had burst its lashings. Rufus had lost account of bearings, the fog did not lift and that night the wind increased. In the utter darkness, just before daybreak, with a crash the barge struck rocks, the prow was battered into kindling-wood, the bulky mass turned over on its side and Rufus clung to the upper rail, awaiting daybreak.

"It's a coral reef and an island beyond," he calculated, as morning showed him a coastline fringed with trees. He had made up a package of food and, strapping half a dozen of the freezer palls together, utilized them as a float to get ashore.

Rufus sat down and rested when he reached the beach. The tropical dirt told him that he must have voyaged many hundred miles. He was blocking out a blind course along the coast when a blaring trumpet blast, followed by the clash of cymbals, caused him to observe a procession at a short distance. Borne in a palanquin shouldered by half a dozen dusky fellows, all hands nearly nude, was a great, portly savage, decorated with metal ornaments.

The inference was palpable. Rufus had landed on some isolated island inhabited by savages—this was their august monarch on a journey. They might be cannibals, and at this thought Rufus started to hide, but he was observed and put on a bold front, awaiting the approach of the procession. Following it were some cattle yoked together. The procession halted and the king, alighting, studied Rufus with curiosity. Then he inquisitively pointed to the ice-cream palls.

A bright thought struck Rufus. Through gestures he imparted to the dusky monarch that he would swim to the barge and return with something that would explain the situation. The king nodded and Rufus struck out for the wreck. He returned, floating a great cake of ice ahead of him, and tied to his shoulders the cannister that held the king's supply of sugar.

One hour later Rufus was at a stage of wild jubilation. He had made of the king a real friend and the latter not only rewarded him richly but indicated that he should be conveyed to the mainland.

"Yes, I'm here and the barge and its cargo demolished or devoured," reported Rufus to Ada, and her father one month later, and he told of the wreck.

"And then," he recited, "I treated them. They had cows, and therefore milk. I had sugar and ice. I made them a freezer full of ice cream. The effect was magical. They had never tasted the dainty before and were entranced. They halted right there, unloading ice and freezers from the barge. They sent to their camp and a whole army flocked to the spot. There was such an ice cream festival as was never heard of before. They kept

ENEMIES TO CONTROL MOTHS

Most Effective Foes Are Calosoma Beetle and Minute Four-Winged Wasplike Parasite.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Everything possible to introduce and encourage parasites and natural enemies of the gypsy moth and brown-tail moth is now being done by the bureau of entomology of the United States department of agriculture. In co-operation with the state of Massachusetts.

Several natural enemies, secured from Europe and Japan since 1905 have become firmly established in this country and are assisting in bringing about the control of these species. The most effective enemies of the gypsy moth and brown-tail moth are the Calosoma beetle, a tachina fly, and a minute four-winged parasite. Two tiny parasites of the eggs of the gypsy moth also have been colonized and are valuable additions to the natural enemies of this insect. The records at the gypsy-moth laboratory at Melrose Highlands, Mass., indicate that all of the species of insect parasites mentioned have been gradually increasing in the field and that the results of their work are very noticeable in certain restricted areas.

Rich Source of Protein. Skim milk is a richer source of protein than whole-milk.

Ostriches Swift of Foot.

The competitive sports between individuals of the ostrich family are most interesting. With their powerful legs they are able to race as no other bird can. They are the race horses of the feathered kingdom. At an early age the young ostrich is taught to run races—a practice which prepares him for what he needs later in life in the way of self-protection through rapid pedestrianism. Many a race in run and honors won by young ostriches of the plains.

Young man killed in France gave his home as Orlando and it took the government several weeks to find out where Orlando was and finally the government officials said it was the town where Food Administrator Beacham lived.

The people of Nassau county are calling a wet and dry election to kick the saloons out of Fernandina. The saloon men are now indeed between the prohibitionists and the deep blue sea.

The Hindenburg line seems to be broken again this time by the death of Hindenburg himself. He died after a violent quarrel with the kaiser. Too bad the kaiser could not have died at the same time and made a good job of it.

Complying with the latest sugar ration order, a restaurant keeper in Palestine, Texas, has hung the following sign in his cafe: "Use only one lump of sugar in your coffee. Stir like hell. We don't mind the noise."

Another proclamation comes out of the Tallahassee factory regarding another holiday, this time celebrating the fall of the Bastille July 14. Celebrating the fall of the Bastille is all right but what we want to hurry along is the celebration of the fall of Berlin.

There is no better hydro-aeroplane location in all Florida than Sanford right here on our bulkhead and if the government experts can ever be brought to this city to view our situation there is no doubt about getting a factory here of some kind at least a training school for the flyers. Sanford can also have a landing place on the bulkhead and bring the flyers here from Arcadia and Miami to see our city.

After all this economy stuff of the government is all right. We pay more postage on the long haul as we should do and the newspapers can cut the free stuff and of course the government experts will now conceive some way in which to pay the newspapers for all that free stuff they have been running for the government. Either pay for it or stop that gas factory at Washington from sending it through the mails for the newspapers will not use any more of it at the present price of bacon.

"THE SAME PROMINENCE"
A frequent request made of newspapers is that "my article be given the same prominence" as some statement that has previously appeared in the paper. No editor can promise that, no matter how good his intentions may be. If news is scarce on the day that a signed story on some local matter reaches the office, the contribution may be the newscast thing that can be found for the paper that day. If so, it will be "played up big" on the first page. Had there been considerable big news breaking on that day, the letter most assuredly would have been hidden away on the inside. News is featured according to its RELATIVE value as compared to the other news of the same day.

The assassination of the mayor of Squedunk would be big news on a day when war dispatches were light and local items scarce. But if the mayor of Squedunk is so unlucky as to be shot of the day the Germans begin a new drive, the President addresses congress, former Mayor Mitchell of New York falls from an airplane, the local city commissioners create a curb market and the $125,000 dredge Florida sinks and drowns three people, then the assassination of the mayor of Squedunk is apt to be boiled down to one paragraph and put under an 8-point head on the want-ad page. And if Mrs. Soandso of the Golden Rod Sewing Club sent a letter to the paper for publication on that eventful day, the chances are it wouldn't see daylight till the next issue.

Your reply to Mr. Smith's communication may be equally as important and newsworthy as Mr. Smith's statement a week before, but if Mr. Smith's letter came on a slack day and yours at a time when the question was what to leave out and the problem of the editors was to get in all the "must go" copy, then it is a most unreasonable request to ask that your literary effort be given "the same prominence" as the original article which you seek to correct.

It is not because the editor does not want to play up your answer or give prominence to the correction, but because things happen on one day and fail to happen on another. Newspapers do not make the news they merely record it when it occurs. They are always in search of real news, but never is a newspaper hard put for "just any old thing to fill up with."—St. Augustine Record.

Tampa sent a delegation of twenty five representatives to Washington to get some of the shipbuilding plants and other good things for the Cigar City and according to their report in the Tampa Times they found Frank Huffaker well and hearty and the delegation can now return with the feeling that they have accomplished their purpose.

CO-OPERATION THE NEW WAY TO SUCCESS

The Florida Citrus Exchange is simply a name, the organization itself is the grower. It is not a body of men at Tampa; it is you and your neighbors and the hundreds and hundreds of other growers throughout Florida who have combined for the purpose of making fruit; who have pooled their issues to the end that for a small amount per box agents could be placed in all the various markets to receive the fruit and from whom up to the minutest market information could be obtained. No one man could afford this information and no other marketing agency in Florida is large enough to afford it to a like extent. If you are an Exchange member you are still a free man; free to have your fruit picked when you want to, free to say, through the association manager where it shall go to and you have a more intelligent conception of where it should go because of the marketing information your manager receives daily through the shipping season. Of course freedom has its limits, otherwise we should have the freedom of the bolshevik, which is certainly undesirable. If you, as association members affiliated with the Exchange, appoint managers you should support them loyally until they have proven unworthy and then you should discharge them and get others.

When you have found managers that are satisfactory let them handle your fruit; that is what they are paid for. Watch them but do not hamper them or try to boss them as an individual; your board of directors is elected for that purpose. So, though you have the power of election and the power of recall, when the majority are with you, let the men you have selected have free rein and when you get the right men you will have the right results for the principle is perfect. In short you are running your own business and selling your own fruit but you are doing it through business managers whom you yourselves have appointed and this is the only business like way it could be done; anything else would be chaos. The other way is to let some one, over whom you have no authority, sell your fruit for his gain and pocket and not yours. Or sell to the man who is certainly looking for a profit or he would not be in the business. That possible profit should be yours and it will be yours if you join forces with other growers now belonging to that premier organization, the Florida Citrus Exchange.—Florida Grower.

CURB MARKET A BENEFIT

Considerable help will be given to the people of this city in their efforts to adjust themselves to war conditions through the establishment of the curb market. Advantages to the community will be manifold. In the first place the consumers will buy farm products at much lower price than they have been accustomed to, and they are entitled to a big reduction from the fact that they are eliminating the cost delivery system, going to market and carrying the goods home themselves. The middleman has also been eliminated and the producers have the advantage of doing business at a minimum of expense. They have no rent to pay, no license tax, no deliveries to make, no bad accounts to carry. The people must have a substantial saving on their purchases on the several counts mentioned.

In various ways the community will benefit from the market. Farming will be stimulated and this means the development of wild lands adjacent to the city, and this will be a permanent asset. Fruit growing will be encouraged and shortly we will not be dependent upon other states for peaches, pears and other fruits. Poultry raising and dairy products will receive more attention than in the past, as the home market will consume a large quantity of poultry, butter, cream, etc. If there is a surplus there it can be shipped to the profit of the growers, South Jacksonville being a close and desirable market.

The farmers who bring their produce to the local market will buy their supplies from our merchants and practically every one will receive some benefit from the curb market.

The first day of the market may have been a disappointment to some people but they need not feel discouraged, for in every town and city the first day's response was light. Those who come out Saturday morning will find the market a little more inviting than it was Thursday morning. Now that the producers know the people will buy their products they will bring them in. In the course of a few days the market will become a recognized part of the city's business and the market basket will be very much in evidence.—St. Augustine Record.

SEEK ROAD TO PARIS

Big Offensive Means That They Desire Capital

Washington, D. C., July 16.—The Germans have selected the road to Paris for the renewal of their drive, officers here believe today, judging from early reports of the violent movement which began at dawn. Whether the effort is designed actually to be pressed against the French capital, or to pave the way for a later assault north of Amiens on the road to the channel points will be a later development.

The line is held by the first and second American divisions around Chateau Thierry. American troops in the Jaugonne sector of the Marne, east of Chateau Thierry also are involved.

Employment of heavy artillery to batter town and communication lines far beyond the defensive line, indicates that the delayed grand offensive has been opened. The object of the bombardment is to harass the movement of supplies and reinforcements to the danger points and the careful preparation of the enemy may mean that he is ready to keep up the assault for days or weeks in the effort to drive through.

Just where the main force of the attack will fall is not clear. The apex of the German advance on the Aisne front is at Chateau Thierry, where the American first corps now hold the left flank of the new battle line. Presumably the main objective of the assault is some place to the east of that point, which lies on the direct road to Paris.

It is regarded as possible that the purpose of the attack is to widen still further the Aisne salient by the reduction of Rheims, and the forcing back of the whole southern extremity of the 1918 battle area. A previous attack on Rheims was halted in its tracks by French and Italian troops and that place now is the center of a greatly increased assault. At some quarters this was taken to mean that reduction of the Rheims salient is regarded as vital to the success of the German enterprise as a whole.

Extensive employment of naval guns for long range bombardment of the allies' lines probably explains the delay in the German drive, as it takes considerable time to bring up these guns.

COLLECT DEAD ACCOUNTS

Red Cross Will Go After Money in Fort Pierce

To a man riding astride a geohydroplane looking down through the fussy end of a submarine would appear that the deadbeats in and around Fort Pierce are going to get something worse than shell shock or mustard gas in the event they do not come across at an early time and square their shell worn accounts. The News has it from a perfectly reliable source that the merchants of Fort Pierce will on September 1st next turn over to the Red Cross all unpaid store accounts with instructions to "hold all you collect." It is said that there are no less than $5,000 of dead beat accounts on the books of our merchants and being unable to collect them after repeated efforts they now propose to turn them over to the Red Cross, and of this is done there is going to be a mighty rattling of dry bones.

The plan is to give to the Red Cross a list of every man and woman who has failed to pay up, with the suggestion that it send forth a strong committee and all who fail to pay make satisfactory arrangements for paying in the future will have their names published and the accounts sold at public auction.

The merchants propose to meet next week, each submitting a list of the "account dodgers," and the several lists will be compiled and turned over to the Red Cross. Every dollar collected is to go to the treasury of the Red Cross. These accounts will not be given to the Red Cross, however, until September 1st, thus giving every person who is indebted to our merchants an opportunity to square up and escape the publicity which is sure to raise somebody's little Irish.

The merchants have figured it out that the "dead beat" accounts are not worth so much as a grain of sand to them and are certain that the Red Cross will collect or make somebody leave the country, for when the women get on the trail of these "slow molasses" artists something is going to happen in bunches.—Ft. supplied with food and munitions. In this district is the city of Chalons which is reported to be an important supply center. It is approximately 18 miles back of the line where mighty armies are locked in a death struggle today.

Americans are engaged in the battle at Chateau Thierry and eastward along the Marne for some distance. Their positions extend northwest of Chateau Thierry to the village of Torcy, on the Clignon river, and eastward along the Marne to Jaugonne, where they have been engaged in local fighting recently. General Liggett has about 220,000 men, the first army corps in this sector. So far as known, no American troops are in the neighborhood of the Rheims which seems to be the centre of this tremendous storm launched by the enemy at dawn today. There have been Italian forces on the line to the southwest of the present attack.

Passed Into Rest

Mrs. T. A. Moody, wife of the lighthouse keeper died last night at 10 o'clock, having been taken seriously ill yesterday morning with congestion of the bowels. Dr. J. E. Douglass was called at once, and spent the day at the bedside of the sufferer, but he felt that the case was hopeless from the first. Dr. Douglass left in the early evening and sent Dr. Belcher out to remain through the night, but Mrs. Moody passed away before the latter got there. She was 46 years of age, and left beside her husband, two daughters, Mrs. F. A. Bissett and Mrs. W. I. Williams of Sanford, and several grandchildren.

L. D. Vinson had charge of the arrangements and he has taken the body to Mrs. Moody's home for burial.—Tarpon Springs Leader.

Splendid progress has been made since constructive work commenced and as material is coming in as needed there is reason to hope that the rate of speed will be maintained.

The Stuart Public Service Company, a branch of the Southern Utilities Company has well lighted the town and is now turning on the water. Stuart feels quite satisfied and secure for they have 10,000 feet of mains and an abundant flow of pure water containing not a trace of sulphur or iron. They have three 6-inch wells driven down to hard rock through three strata of water, but cased down to the 60-foot level, where drilling stopped, and the flow promises unlimited supply. To test the capacity of 1,000-gallon a minute pump was connected up to each well in turn and the flow was tested and no appreciable diminution of supply or sign of exhaustion was evidenced.

NOTICE

Believing that FIRE INSURANCE RATES charged by old line stock companies are too high, I have secured the agency of the FLORIDA MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY of Tampa, Florida. This company saved its policy holders 20 per cent last year and hopes to do better in the future. The company is organized under the state law and selects its risks carefully, and the profits go back to the policy holders, instead of being paid in dividends to stockholders.

Being a mutual company, the policy holders are pledged to pay the premium the second time in case the company needs more money than the original premium in order to pay losses. This adds to the security of the policy holders and is necessary because there is no capital stock. However, the chances that such an assessment will be made is very remote.

If interested, before your policy expires, bring it to my office at Room 8 in the Court House, and make application for its renewal in the Mutual Company. M. F. Robinson, Agent. 91-4tc

NOTICE—PAY YOUR CITY TAXES

This is to notify all persons who have not paid their city taxes for the year 1918, and those prior thereto that these taxes must now be paid.

This is a matter which you should look after; and don't wait for a second notice from me, for it will be a costly one.

At the last meeting of the county commissioners of Sumter county, they voted $15,000 for good roads, and this makes $15,000 more available from the state automobile tax. The roads begin at Sumterville, extend down the Washington line towards the bridge now complete. This route will be followed so that there will be at least one good road right through the heart of Sumter county, and then branches from the neighboring towns could be built cheaply and quickly.

It is estimated that approximately 2,000 acres of corn is being grown in the Moore Haven section this year. Also the acreage planted to peanuts is very large, as well as velvet and Soy beans. Altogether Moore Haven seems to have adopted the live-at-home kind of agriculture.

PROPER PEAR TREE PRUNING

As in Case of Apple Low Head is Most Desirable—Retain Three or Four Branches.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Since pears are grown both as standards and dwarfs in commercial orchards, a consideration of the pruning of both classes is necessary. A low-headed pear tree is quite as desirable as a low-headed apple tree. In forming the head of the pear, however, more branches may be left than in the case of the apple. While three is given as the ideal number for the apple, as many as four or five may be retained by a well-grown pear tree. These should be distributed about the body so as to give practically an equal space between them, and, if possible, they should stand at different heights upon the main stem. The number of branches to be left upon any particular tree must, however, be determined by the condition of the root.

BE A FOOD PRODUCER

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Are you going to raise food for your family this year?
Are you going to buy what someone else has raised?
Are you going to the trouble of handling a garden—it will undoubtedly mean some additional work?
Some say: "Let the other fellow have the garden. I'll spend my time making money to buy what he raises."
That's not the problem—the nation needs more food to win the war.
You can help by having a garden filled with vegetables to be substituted on the home table for food that can be shipped to feed your boy, or some other boy, who is fighting in the trenches.

HIS NEW JOB

By VINCENT G. PERRY.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Promotion! Assistant manager of that large departmental store! It almost seemed too good to be true to Robert Campbell, and for 15 minutes after he had received notification of his advancement he could do nothing but sit and wonder at his good luck. Wouldn't Carrie be proud and glad. He hurried to the telephone booth and stopped as he heard Carrie's voice.

"I care for you only. Meet me tonight. I love you, dearie, and I want you for my own," she was saying over the wire.

Bob put his hand to his head. He could hardly believe his ears until she repeated the same words, and then as she caught sight of him, said: "That is all, thank you," as curtly as she could and hung up the receiver. But Bob was not deceived. He had heard enough.

"Did you want to see me, Bobbie," she said in the same old way.

"No thank you," he gulped. "You had better finish your telephone conversation."

"I had finished," she answered, without showing any embarrassment.

"I don't think you had." He turned about and left her. Carrie looked after him in wonder. She made her way back to the desk that she had occupied for the first time that day.

"Have you heard about Mr. Campbell's promotion, Miss Alderson?" the girl who had charge of Carrie's old counter, asked. "He is to be assistant manager. Promotions seem to have gone the rounds."

"That is splendid for him," Carrie exclaimed in delight. "I am so glad, for he has worked hard for promotion."

When she was left alone Carrie began to make excuses for Bob's coldness. He was filling his role as assistant manager.

When noon hour arrived no Bob appeared. Carrie waited for nearly half an hour with her coat and hat on before the realization that he was not coming came to her. So Bob had left his promotion come between them—she had to acknowledge it to herself. She was not good enough for an assistant manager's wife. It was hard to credit Bob with such an ungrateful spirit, for he had always been so kind and considerate. The little home they had planned to build, with the garden and rose hedge had been almost real but apparently Bob had forgotten. An assistant manager would be able to afford more than a little home and could figure in society. The manager was past middle age and in time Bob would probably step into his place. Then he could marry an heiress—the president's pretty daughter or someone else equally impressive. Bob was handsome, ambitious and progressive. He would be a big man some day and their little love affair could really mean nothing to him. That she was pretty, ambitious and progressive as well did not enter Carrie's mind. Whatever she had done was to increase her savings in order to help Bob when the time came for the little home. As Carrie realized that all her dreams were shattered she burst into tears.

By the time the lunch hour was over she had dried her eyes and was busily working at her desk when the assistant manager made his appearance. Bob started as he caught sight of the new head of the department.

"I beg your pardon. I did not know that you had been promoted to this desk," he said in a reserved tone.

Carrie did not look up.

"Will you please prepare a report, giving details of the girls in your department, as to length of service and salaries they are now receiving. I would also like monthly reports on the sales made by each saleswoman, in future, Miss Alderson."

The "Miss Alderson" was too much for Carrie.

"I will make the first report, Mr. Campbell," she said icily, "but you must speak to my successor about the monthly report for I am to give my notice tomorrow night."

"You are to be married, I presume, Miss Alderson." Bob felt his heart sinking.

"How dare you insult me," Carrie flashed. "Is it not enough to slight me as you have, because you have been promoted and consider yourself above your old friends, without taunting me. No; I am not going to be married because I have been silly enough to waste my affections upon a man that was not worthy of them. I am leaving because I refuse to work under an assistant manager who is not a gentleman."

Bob's cheeks were scarlet. "How could you expect me to act differently," he said, "when I heard you confessing your love for another man over the telephone this morning?"

"How dare you—" Carrie began, but stopped with a gasp of understanding. "Oh, Bob, how silly of you!" she cried, as she rummaged through her desk for her order book. "Here it is; I was giving an order for some popular songs for the music counter. That is what you heard!"

"I was an idiot," he laughed. "I have been unhappy all morning over it, too. It spoiled all the pleasure of my promotion. The minute I was notified of it I thought of you and the joy the news would bring to you. We can build the little home any time now, dear, and we can have a rose hedge the first year."

BERRY SHRUB

By FRANCES LINSKY.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was a typical summer hotel veranda. At least so thought a perspiring and very much disgusted young man who looked up at it from the bottom of the somewhat steep and very dusty hill.

"An Adamless Eden, I'll warrant," he muttered.

Brown as a young Indian from weeks of outdoor camp life, and covered with dust and perspiration, certainly no one would have recognized in this very bedraggled young man Max Harding, whose aristocratic mother was a guest at the hotel on the hill.

Scowling fiercely, he dragged his heavy suitcase up the path, only to be met at the veranda steps by a pompous-looking individual who effectually barred his further progress.

"Can't come up the front way, fellow," said the pompous one.

"What the dev—," and then as the full significance of the servant's remark struck him, Max Harding burst into a laugh.

"Maybe I can sneak in through the kitchen and get washed up before I greet the mater," he thought. "If she ever catches me looking like this—Hello, whew—ew—ew," and he whistled softly, for a remarkably pretty girl sat directly in front of the kitchen door, shelling peas—thus once more blocking his progress.

"Have you a moment to spare," he asked, removing his hat, and speaking in his most engaging manner.

"I am sorry, but I haven't," said the young woman, very promptly, scarcely glancing up from her work.

"Oh, ho," thought he, "not much enthusiasm here. May I show you some of my wares?" with an expressive glance in the direction of the suitcase.

"You may not," said the young woman, just as promptly as before.

"Well, do you mind if I sit down on the lawn a minute?" he hazarded for his third venture.

"No, not one," again responded the "fair lady of the peas," taking him in with one all-appraising glance.

So Max sat down on the little plot of grass in front of the house, and leaned his head back against the building, and closed his eyes.

"Poor fellow," thought the girl, her sympathy aroused at last, "he must be pretty tired. I'm afraid I was rather sharp with him. Well, he looks dark enough for one of those Syrian or Armenian peddlers, but he certainly doesn't talk like one. I'll just run in and get him a glass of raspberry shrub. It'll cool him off before he goes."

She was back in a moment with a glass of delicious looking liquid, and, tapping the young man on the shoulder, she offered it to him.

"Here, drink this," she said. "I'm sorry I couldn't stop to look at your wares. Have you made many sales today?"

"No, not one," answered Max, quite truthfully, and he swallowed the refreshing drink with genuine appreciation. Then, with many thanks, he beat a hasty retreat around to the front of the house once more.

This time his mother was seated on the veranda, and she greeted him effusively, but he managed to make her understand that a bath and some clean linen were the two most essential things in his life at that particular moment, and so he escaped to his room.

He descended about an hour later, looking very different in his white flannels, and his mother's pride shone in her eyes as she greeted him.

"And, Max," she said, "there's the loveliest girl here. I want you to meet her. Her name is Anna Cabot."

"Now, mother," he remonstrated.

"But, Max, dear, this one is different! But wait—she's promised to sit at our table tonight, and you'll see for yourself."

"Well, no sign of your divinity yet, mother," said Max, some minutes later, when they had started their dinner; perhaps—hopefully—"she's changed her mind."

"No, here she comes," said Mrs. Harding, and straight to their table came the lady of his afternoon's adventure.

Lifting her eyes to acknowledge the introduction, the color flooded into the girl's face, and her eyes asked innumerable questions as she recognized him.

"Do you know that Katie the cook left this afternoon?" asked the girl of Mrs. Harding some moments later, when she was herself again.

"Good gracious," gasped that lady. "Who took her place?"

"I did," said the girl, quietly, measuring glances with the young man opposite her.

"Why, my dear, aren't you clever!" exclaimed his mother, looking at her son with an "I-told-you-so" expression. Just then the waitress entered the dining room with liquid refreshments clinking in a silver picher.
