Saturday was super

SANFORD — More than 100 Seminole County kids were expected to join 300 others from throughout Central Florida on the final "SuperSaturday" yesterday.

Saturday's free day included a visit with Orlando Magic players and the Dannon Magic Girl Dancers. The school-aged children from Seminole County's Boys and Girls Clubs were also scheduled to meet Stuff, the Magic mascot.

Prior SuperSaturday trips this summer, which include free meals and drinks provided by Burger King and Coca Cola, included trips to Sea World and EPCOT Center. The trips were co-sponsored by Walt Disney World and LYNX, formerly Tri-County Transit. LYNX drivers donate their days off to drive the kids to and from the events.

Rocket tumbles out of control

CAPE CANAVERAL — An Atlas rocket headed into space with a cable television satellite tumbled out of control Saturday, a few minutes after liftoff. Launch officials declared the mission a failure.

It wasn't immediately clear whether the Air Force issued self-destruct commands to the unmanned rocket.

The 14-story rocket rose from its seaside pad at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station at 6:40 p.m., right on time. It was the third launch attempt in as many days; stormy weather thwarted the first two attempts.

Everything appeared to go well as the rocket pierced a clear sky and arced over the Atlantic Ocean. But less than five minutes after liftoff, a launch commentator said the rocket's upper-stage engines had not ignited.

It was the second launch failure in 14 years for rocket maker General Dynamics Corp. An Atlas rocket carrying a Japanese broadcasting satellite had to be blown up shortly after liftoff in April 1991.

The Galaxy satellite aboard the Atlas was intended to replace a less powerful Galaxy sent up by Hughes Communications Inc. in 1983. Hughes expected the switch to occur in early 1994.

The cost of the entire mission — satellite, rocket and insurance — exceeded $150 million, said Jerry Farrell, senior vice president of the Los Angeles-based Hughes Communications.

Rocket screams into space

CAPE SAN BLAS, Fla. — The first rocket launched by a state space agency from U.S. territory successfully completed a suborbital weather mission Saturday.

The 10-foot Microstar rocket, originally developed as a Navy anti-aircraft missile, screamed into the blue sky from this sandpit in the Florida Panhandle at 10 a.m. Liftoff was delayed 30 minutes until gray clouds blew out of the area.

The rocket arched over the Gulf of Mexico to an altitude of more than 300,000 feet before dropping back to Earth.

"I'm not the type that jumps up and down, but inside I certainly was," said Ed O'Connor, executive director of the Spaceport Florida Authority, headquartered in Cocoa Beach.

Storm's course uncertain but hurricane supplies dwindle

By LASY BROWN
Herald People Editor

Area residents stocked up on emergency supplies Saturday in preparation for the first hurricane of the season, on a course that could pummel the coast anywhere between Central Florida and the Florida Keys.

"We probably made everybody in South Florida a little nervous by saying the storm has turned toward the west," said meteorologist Jack Beven at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

"It would not take much of a change of course to bring it into Central Florida or to bring it in near the Florida Keys."

Ace Hardware stores in Sanford and Lake Mary have completely sold out of kerosene, large batteries, Coleman lantern fuel, wicks and lamp oil.

The Sanford store is out of flashlights and has been pumping an unusually large amount of propane for home tanks.

"Have we ever been busy. The store is a shambles. We're out of everything," Garden Shop Manager Rose Bennett said Saturday. Bennett said employees had pumped 160 containers full of propane Saturday before 6 p.m.

"On a normal Saturday we would have filled 15 or 20," she said.

Although the Lake Mary Ace has a few flashlights left, clerk Joe Cormier said the store will not begin selling propane until next month.

"And we're out of all flammable materials. They wiped us out early," he said.

Jimi Brooks: 1953-1992

Advocate for kids, 39, dies

By LASY BROWN
Herald People Editor

SANFORD — He'll be remembered for much more than his dimpled, easy grin and his civic deeds.

Sanford businessman Jimi Brooks, 39, died quietly in his sleep Friday night, leaving behind a legacy of enthusiasm for life and the self-worth he instilled in the hundreds of children and adults whose lives he touched.

Brooks, owner with his wife, Meta, of First Impressions Early Childhood Development Center, was an activist for children's causes. First Impressions is one of only a few private centers that offer an early intervention program for children, including babies born of crack cocaine-addicted mothers. Brooks' program was honored for excellence three years in a row with the Gold Seal Award from Community Coordinated Child Care of Central Florida.

Brooks in 1991 was also the recipient of the Small Business Award from the Greater Seminole Chamber of Commerce, of which he was a member.

Brooks volunteered for numerous civic and government organizations and was a proponent of a better quality of life for residents of Goldsboro. He served on the Planning and Zoning Commission for the City of Sanford. He and Meta collected over 600 signatures protesting drainage problems in Goldsboro, prompting the city to study the matter last year.

The Brookses moved to Sanford from Boston in 1989. Brooks earned a bachelor's degree in political science and a master's degree in public administration. He and Meta took advanced courses in pre-school education at Harvard University and Cambridge College.

The Brookses founded their education-oriented pre-school based on their shared philosophy that "children are our future and they must be encouraged to have self-worth and to ask many questions about the world around them," Brooks said in an interview last year.

Friends Saturday remembered Brooks fondly.

"Jimi had an enthusiasm for people and doing things that was very contagious. If you were around him any length of time, you picked up on his enthusiasm," Dave Farr, executive director of the Greater See Brooks, Page 5A

Almost everyone back to school

By VICKI BOGGS

SANFORD — Teachers in Seminole County have been back at school for a week already, but on Monday it is the students who will be heading back to class.

Though three district elementary schools are in class year round, the majority of the 50,000 students here have had nearly three months of vacation and the return to the rigors of the classroom may be difficult.

"That's why we have orientation and have them pick up their schedules a few days ahead of time," said Verna Jackson, public relations director at Seminole High School.

Jackson, who has taught English at the high school level for many years and who served for a year as an assistant principal at Seminole, has seen her share of students drag themselves back into the classroom on the first day of school.

Proponents of year round education argue that the modified school calendar, eliminates the malaise surrounding the return to school. Students in a year round school attend classes throughout the year for 18 weeks before a three week vacation.

"There isn't an extended three months off like with the traditional calendar," Dr. Bob O'Dell, coordinator of year round education for the school district, said. "There is more continuous learning taking place."

O'Dell said that, often, the students who dread the first day of school after summer vacation do so because they have gotten out of the habit of learning. He said they fear what they have forgotten since the year before more than they fear what they are faced with during the LAKE MARY — The parent and school bus entrances at Lake Mary Elementary School have been changed. The move is coincides with the start of the new school term on Monday.

The school is located on the southwest corner of Country Club Road and Lake Mary Boulevard.

Acting Lake Mary Police Chief Greg Bellone announced the change during the City Commission meeting Thursday evening. "We have relocated the entrances," he said, "with the main purpose of improving the safety of both the school buses and the parents who coming school year. Jackson said that for the most part, however, students look forward to coming back to school.

"They have the chance to renew old friendships and meet new kids," she said. "The first day of school is a lot of fun for the kids."

The school administrators and teachers are happy about it too.

"We get to make new friends and see our old friends too," Jackson said.

Rag/Times: upbeat and sassy

SANFORD — His pen name evokes a salty seaman sentineling his beautiful but troubled course.

That's pretty much how the Ancient Mariner, editor and publisher of the Sanford Rag/Times, sees himself.

"I think Sanford is one of the most beautiful spots I've ever been to. But I decided I saw things happening in the area that needed change and this is one way I thought I could make an impact," Mike Stubblefield, aka Ancient Mariner, said.

Stubblefield, looks every bit a sailor with his clipped gray beard and his canvas sailor's hat so well-worn the brass grommets have oxidized to aqua from the salt water. A resident of Sanford's historic district, he began the monthly alternative voice newsletter in June. Its purpose, he said, is "to editorialize, be opinionated, cause outrage and provoke response."

In the August issue, he proposes a bicycle patrol for Sanford police. He cites a variety of people who have impacted the area in a positive way. In the "Apartment House Alert" he profiles 12 multi-family residences near downtown. Stubblefield said he chose property that "has been trouble for those living next door or across the street." Next month, he'll single out more.

"Someone," he said, "has already sent copies of the Rag/Times to each of the slumlords."

He said he doesn't care if people push their teeth in anger over the Rag/Times.

"My attitude is 'C'mon, you've got somethin' to say, say something. I See Rag, Page 5A

Catching up on loose ends

Good morning y'all. Let's dig into my pile of notes this morning. First of all, I overlooked telling you about a unique achievement by the late State Senator Lloyd F. Boyle a couple Sundays ago. The senator had a claim to fame as a football player. During his college days he played football a couple years at Milton College. And, he captained the Terns' eleven. He then transferred to Stetson University. He played football for the Hatters and one season captained the Stetson eleven. I'll bet nobody ever did that except for Boyle. When he finished at Stetson's Law School he hung out his shingle in Sanford June 3, 1924. Don't know about you but I still miss seeing Boyle when I'm downtown.

Had a call the other day from Mrs. Cheryl Jessup. She said she had read several of my columns in which I mentioned Randa Biding. She wanted to know how it got its name. I told her there was also a Randa Mail in downtown Sanford. But folks, I don't have the slightest idea how the siding or the mail got the name Randa. Do you know? If you do give me a ring. I'd like to find out myself.

Almost everybody's back to school, now Summer ends for state's pupils

From Staff and Wire Reports

TALLAHASSEE — When Florida's schools open their doors to roughly 2 million students over the next few weeks, they'll be running on less money but greater autonomy.

After years of talk, new policies are finally taking effect. Education Commissioner Betty Castor says. "Schools are now empowered."

The main engine driving the change is something called accountability. It refers to a 1991 law that transfers authority over school operations from the Legislature and state Department of Education in Tallahassee to schools, teachers, parents and communities across the state.

Under the law, councils at each school must come up with "school improvement plans" this year.

"This fall, there literally will be thousands and thousands and thousands of people sitting down together to talk about improving their schools," said Pat O'Connell, Castor's top legislative aide.

In Seminole County, schools have, in recent years, been making a strong move to more school-based management.

School administrators, with the assistance of Local School Advisory Committees (LSACs) have been charged with developing plans for the schools which will allow them to be more accountable for test results and the drop out and graduation figures of that particular facility.

The LSACs are composed of parents and

"This fall, there literally will be thousands and thousands and thousands of people sitting down together to talk about improving their schools."

-Pat O'Connell, state aide business people from the school community.

Two years ago the state of Florida offered financial rewards to high schools across the state which met certain accountability goals. Seminole was the only district in the state that received money for all of its high schools.

Seminole County schools have placed a great deal of emphasis on parent participation in school improvement.

Accountability means fundamental shifts in power, but it's still not a quick fix, Castor warned.

"To get improvement you still need some basic things," she said. "You need caring professionals who can build confidence in parents."

Other innovations gaining in popularity across Florida include doing away with the traditional summer vacation and using schools as central locations for everything from family health care to social services. A few pilot projects also are experimenting with different kinds of assessment to supplement familiar multiple-choice tests.

The system is transforming itself as an estimated 68,000 new students will push enrollment at Florida's 2,257 schools to an estimated 2 million this year.

The state's education budget is $6.3 billion, the largest single slice of Florida's $30 billion budget. That means schools, on average, have $3,094.56 per student. But the enrollment growth is out-pacing the budget. Schools, on average, got $82 less than lawmakers appropriated for them last year.

"It's hit us pretty hard, but we knew it was coming," said Pete Payton, Escambia County superintendent. "We are in better shape than we thought we'd be six months ago."

Escambia has balanced its budget in the last couple of years through administrative cuts, but schools this year are having to absorb cuts as well, slicing travel expenses and field trips for students. Nearly 30 teachers have been laid off, but may be rehired if enrollment exceeds expectations.

Duval County schools have $455 million, some $2 million less than last year. About 130 teachers are expected to be without a job when classes resume, even though administrators are expecting 2,900 more students.

"A teacher cannot give feedback that is personal and zeroes in when she is grading 150 papers a week," said Carlotta Ray, a supervisor of language arts and reading for

Full-service schools let teachers teach

MILTON — He was a disruptive child. He wouldn't pay attention in class or stay in his seat. At home, he seldom smiled and played by himself under his bed.

The youngster, under medication to prevent seizures, ignored simple instructions. Washing for dinner, brushing his teeth and doing homework were a chore. His parents blamed themselves.

After two years of this, his third-grade teacher referred "Tommy," not his real name, to an inter-agency child team that is part of what Santa Rosa County school officials call Project Vision.

It is their name for the full-service school program at Holley-Navarre Elementary and Middle schools about 20 miles south of this Florida Panhandle city.

Such programs offer one-stop shopping for educational, health, social and welfare services from a variety of agencies at a single site, usually a school.

In Seminole County, the school district recently received a grant to help pay for the implementation of full service school facilities in three schools.

At Seminole High School and Midway Elementary School in Sanford and at Geneva Elementary School in Geneva the district is making plans to provide services to the students and their families who live in the surrounding neighborhoods.

A medical clinic, staffed by Seminole County personnel has been proposed for Midway Elementary.

Proposals have been discussed to bring doctors, dentists, welfare administration representatives to the schools for those who can not travel to facilities in town due to a lack of transportation.

The three year grant received from the state will pay for the construction of the clinic, start up costs and for

Bus route questions answered

Those big yellow buses parked in area shopping centers were more than a reminder that for most students, school starts Monday.

Manned by employees from the Seminole County School District Transportation Department, the buses are weekend sites at which parents and students can ask questions about bus schedules.

"Everybody so far has had their questions answered except one lady. And I chased her down when I knew the answer," Anita Williamson, route manager stationed at the Lake Mary K mart said.

About 40 people asked questions at the Lake Mary station from 9 a.m. to 12 noon Saturday.

Supervisor Jerry Yontz said most people named the school they wanted to know about and asked where the bus stopped near their address.

"We just look it up. We tell em' the a.m. time the bus stops and the p.m. time on their route. We write it on a piece of paper for them," Yontz explained.

If a parent is still concerned, volunteers will answer more questions.

"I went through the whole route with one lady who was worried her kid wouldn't get off at the right stop. We went over each stop the bus would make. That way she'll know how to run the bus down to find her kid," Williamson said.

fielded over 200 questions by mid-afternoon.

"It's going smooth. Some parents were a little upset about losing courtesy busing, but everybody has been real nice," Williams said.

"We've been real busy and it's hot," Box summarized.

Williams said it is a pleasure to meet so many of the parents.

"And we've been answering a lot of questions we won't have to answer Monday," she said.

Box said there is one question she has been asked more frequently than any other.

"They want to know why the bus stop isn't right in front of their house. Everybody wants to be picked up at their door," she said.

The transportation department volunteers will man the same locations today from noon until 3 p.m.

Several schools will have new principals when classes begin

By VICKI BOHNER
Herald Staff Writer

Principals played musical chairs at several Seminole County schools this summer.

In a move that brought some controversy, a group of principals who had been on the job for longer than a decade in the same location were moved to new schools.

The moves were preceded by the retirement of Norma Ragdale at Stenstrom Elementary School in Oviedo and Jewell Morgan at Woodlands Elementary School in Longwood.

Parents protested that principals who have been at a school for many years and are familiar with its needs and its families should not be moved. District officials argued that because they had been in the same place for so long, they were in danger of becoming stagnant in their jobs.

Parents also complained that the principals were told of the transfers the day after school was dismissed for the summer and they were not given the opportunity to bid the students, families and staffs farewell.

In the end, the moves were made and principals are settling into their new facilities and getting to know the parents.

"I think it is all working out well after all," said Dr. Marion Dalley, assistant superintendent for instruction for the school district.

The following changes were made in the top jobs at area schools:

● At Hamilton Elementary School, 1501 E. 8th St., Sanford, David Scott is the new principal. Scott was previously at Longwood Elementary. Carem Gager, who had been the principal at Hamilton is now at Longwood, 840 Orange Blvd., Longwood.

● At Lakeview Middle School, 21 Lakeview Dr., Sanford, Jim Shupe is the new principal. Shupe had been an assistant principal at Greenwood Lakes Middle School in Lake Mary. Rick Mosaman, who had been the principal at Lakeview is now principal at South Seminole Middle School in Casselberry.

● At Wilson Elementary, 985 Orange Blvd., Sanford, Barbara Nixon is the new principal. Nixon had been an assistant principal at Winter Springs Elementary School. Terry Rabun, who had been the principal at Wilson is now at Lawton Elementary in Oviedo.

● At Woodlands Elementary, 1420 E.E. Williams Rd., Longwood, Laura Sanborn is now the principal. Sanborn was previously an assistant principal at Winter Springs Elementary in Winter Springs. Jewell Morgan, who had been the principal at Woodlands has retired.

drive their children to the school."

The parents' driveway, which has been off of Country Club Road, will now be on 4th Street, off Lake Mary Boulevard. The Country Club Road entrance has been designated for school buses only.

Signs changing the approaches were erected last week, and parents attending the open house during this past week were informed of the change.

"We have adequate parking for the buses in the eastern entrance area," Belfiore said, "and it will allow the children easy access into the school."

"The parents entrance will have a problem," Belfiore said. "At least until the construction is finished along Lake Mary Boulevard. But until then, we will have an officer from the police traffic division on hand at the intersection on 4th Street, to help guide traffic."

The 4th Street access is sufficiently wide to all for turns onto both east and west bound lanes for exiting cars, while also having sufficient space for cars from both sides of the boulevard to gain entry.

"We don't have much choice," Belfiore said, "now that the County has done away with courtesy busing in Lake Mary, we'll have many more parents driving their children to school." He added, "This may cause some temporary inconvenience until the Boulevard work is done, but we will do whatever is necessary to protect the safety of the children."

POLICE BRIEFS

Armed robbery charged

Jimmy Jerome Washington, 27, 109 Sterling Court, Sanford, was arrested and charged with armed robbery, aggravated battery and theft by Sanford police Wednesday.

Arrest reports state Washington struck Reginald Steel, a deaf mute, in the chest on Aug. 4, knocking the man to the ground. A witness reported Washington told Steel he had a gun and would use it if the Steel didn't give him money. According to police, Washington then removed the victim's pants which contained $30 in cash.

Traffic stop leads to charges

Edmond E. Bickel, 28, 1706-B Ridgewood Lane, Sanford, was charged with driving with a suspended license Wednesday following a traffic stop by a Longwood policeman.

Men caught with suspended licenses

Terrence Darnell Thomas, 20, 78 Lake Monroe Terrace, Sanford, was charged with driving with a suspended license by a Sanford policeman following a traffic stop Wednesday. The policeman also charged Thomas with resisting arrest after he didn't stop immediately, reports state.

Geoffrey Kenneth Swift, 26, 815 Park Ave., Apt. D, Sanford, was charged with driving with a suspended license by a Sanford policeman following a traffic stop Wednesday.

Man charged with burglary

Frank Jones, Jr., 45, 2230 Dolarway, Sanford, was charged with burglary when he was arrested by Seminole County Sheriff's officers on Thursday.

Deputies said they saw Jones, with whom they were familiar, carrying a cooler at Jitway and S.R. 48. When he saw them, they said, he put the cooler down and walked away.

Deputies said that while he first said he had found the cooler and the items inside, he then said he took the items from "that old house." He showed them a house at 2451 First Street, deputies said. The unoccupied house had been broken into, deputies said.

Deputies said the cooler contained two men's shirts, a wall clock, a man's watch, a pair of boots, a metal punch, a metal socket, a screwdriver, a container of lye, a flashlight, a thermos, a teapot, a pair of scissors, a switch and a socket driver.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held without bond.

Retail theft charged

Harry J. Tomes, 42, 121 Sand Point Ct., Sanford was charged with retail theft when he was arrested by Seminole County sheriff's deputies on Thursday.

Deputies said he entered the Winn Dixie in Fern Park and placed a package of cigarettes in his pocket. He tried to leave, deputies said, without paying for the cigarettes.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $100 bond.

Domestic violence charged

Michael Christopher King, 29, 284 Short St. Lake Mary, was charged with domestic violence when he was arrested by Lake Mary Police on Thursday.

Police said they were told by Christina McGowan that he punched and kicked her in the face during an argument. King and McGowan live together.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. Bond had not yet been set.

DUI charged

Karen Jane Lowe, 29, 280 Church Ave. Longwood, was charged with DUI when she was arrested by Seminole County sheriff's officers on Friday.

Deputies said that she was having trouble maintaining her lane and was driving erratically when they stopped her. She failed several roadside sobriety tests, they said.

She was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

Warrant arrests

Dilworth Dixon, 27, 67 Castle Brewer Ct. Sanford was charged in connection with warrants for throwing a deadly missile and failure to appear in court on aggravated battery charges. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held without bond.

Lewin Hayman Campbell, 46, 2839 Grove Dr., Sanford was charged in connection with a warrant for obtaining property with a worthless check. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $1,000 bond.

Sanford museum open house today

SANFORD — An open house is being held this afternoon at the Henry Shelton Sanford Memorial Library and Museum. It will be the second last such function at the present facility before a half million dollar expansion project gets underway.

Museum Curator Alicia Clarke said, "This Social is a fund raising event sponsored by the Sanford Historical Society, which raises funds for the Museum." She added, "They are a 'friends' organization, who supply us with funds to pay for a variety of needs such as their recent donation to replace an expensive picture frame."

"The last event before actual expansion work begins," Clarke said, "is scheduled for Sept. 26th, and will be a picnic in the park surrounding the museum area."

"The Society is holding the picnic in conjunction with the 115th anniversary of the establishment of the City of Sanford, which occurred on Sept. 29, 1877," she said. "That will be the last time the Museum will be open for a public event, because we expect construction to start early in October."

Contractor bids for the expansion project were opened earlier this week. "We received bids from 10 construction firms," Clarke said, "but it will be several weeks before one is selected, then it will have to go before the City Commission for approval, probably at the Sept. 14th meeting."

"It will be up to the contractor selected to determine exact starting dates or completion dates for the expansion, but we would expect it to get underway in early October, and be completed by Spring of 1993."

The Social this afternoon will feature ice cream, fun and games, and an opportunity to have a family portrait made in front of the present Museum. Clarke said, "ice cream will be offered for $2, with portraits taken for $5, and other items priced accordingly, but it's all to raise money for the Society which will help the museum."

Finalizing plans for the expansion has been a lengthy project. In 1989, the City received the first pledge for financing the work in the amount of $25,000 from the Historical Society. In February, 1990, the City Commission committed $100,000 from its reserve funds. Fourteen months later, the Tourist Development Council gave a grant of $150,000, and designs on Phase I of the structure began to be considered.

During 1991, a large boost in financing the project came in the form of a donation of an additional $240,000 from the Sydney O. Chase family, which allowed some of the plans originally projected for the future in Phase II, to be added to the initial project.

Also last year, a dispute arose over the exterior design of the building, and the original architect was issued a stop order with a new design architect hired to complete the work. The exterior designs have since been approved.

The Ice Cream Social is open to the general public free of charge, and will be held between 1 and 3 p.m. today. The museum will also be open for tours. The Henry Shelton Sanford Memorial Library and Museum is located at 520 E. First Street.

Emergency gambling rules

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A special session on gambling is not needed as long as the Florida pari-mutuel industry remains regulated by emergency rules developed by a state agency, Gov. Lawton Chiles said.

Legislators, wearied by months of strife over the budget and redistricting and now running for re-election, opposed another $40,000-a-day session to re-enact gambling regulations that expired July 1.

"Reluctantly, I agree that a special session on pari-mutuel wagering prior to the November organizational session would probably not be productive," Chiles said in a letter Friday to legislative leaders.

The Department of Business Regulation on Monday will enact emergency rules for 90 days to continue proper oversight of horse and dog racing and jai-alai games until the newly elected Legislature reports in November.

"These emergency rules should enable the state to continue protecting the public interest, until the Legislature can enact more permanent provisions," Chiles said.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Seminole County Supervisor of Elections has announced that the automatic ballot tabulating equipment to be in service for the First Primary Election and Oviedo General Election to be held on September 1, 1992, will be tested in Room 2153 of the Seminole County Services Building at 3:30 P.M. on August 28, 1992.

The County Services Building is located at 1101 E. First Street, Sanford. This test is open to the press and the public.

Mandatory voluntarism?

The recent decision by Maryland's state board of education to require all high school students to perform at least 75 hours of community service in order to graduate is likely to revive the debate about imposing some form of mandatory national service on all young Americans.

Although a number of schools around the country require work in community-service projects, Maryland is the first state to impose such a rule on all high school students. The decision, which is vehemently opposed by many educational organizations as well as some parents and students, is almost certain to be challenged on constitutional grounds.

Can the state require this kind of service as a condition for a high school diploma? To what extent does the rule impose excessive burdens on students, some of them single parents, who hold after-school jobs, or who have heavy family obligations?

Those are legitimate questions. The notion of mandatory "volunteer" service is itself a contradiction in terms. And yet at a time when the nation's social services — particularly schools, health clinics, recreation programs and other children's programs — are critically overburdened, requiring young people to perform some public service is hardly unreasonable.

The question is how and when. Does it make sense to impose such a requirement at the high school level, when the potential "volunteers" are often too young and inexperienced to do anything but the most menial work, when many can't get around on their own and when there are all sorts of unresolved liability questions?

Wouldn't this kind of requirement be more reasonably imposed on all young people, either in the military or in civilian programs, after they complete high school, as is the case in France? Even in such a system, the program would have to make allowances for those who are supporting families or who have other major obligations. More important, is there a way to require universal service, outside of wartime, without violating constitutional rights?

And yet is there any doubt that after a generation in which looking-out-for-No.-1 was celebrated as high virtue, the nation has to make serious efforts to restore some sense of community responsibility? Many young people already volunteer, working with children or with the elderly or the sick, but they still represent a small minority of their generation, working against the prevailing ethic, not with it.

When the nation and the states invest tens of thousands of dollars each in the university education of the young, and when young professionals earn twice as much as the taxpayers who helped put them through college and law school or medical school, society is entitled to ask something back in public service. At this point, it's not getting nearly enough.

That ethic has to be changed, perhaps, in part through legislation, in part through the tone set by the country's leaders. The details will not be easy, but the sooner serious debate begins, the faster the climate will change.

"My position on family values? My great question! Let me talk to my staff here and I'll get back to you on that."

International exchange student

A good self-concept and an 'I can do' attitude are probably the most helpful tools a family can supply a child with for traveling the journey of life.

The self-concept studies are legend and persons with positive thoughts about themselves are generally positive in believing that they can set goals for themselves and achieve these goals.

Attitudes are learned mental and emotional habits and adults have a responsibility for assisting youth to believe in themselves. There are families who have instilled positive approaches to life in their child or children and I would like you to meet one such family — Dennis and Brenda Ford, parents of Kianga Ford.

Last Thursday, Aug. 13, 1992, Kianga Ford boarded a plane for Dar es Salaam, Tanzania. She will spend a year matriculating at the University of Dar es Salaam along with five other American students, participants in the International Student Exchange Program (ISEP). Kianga will be studying African literature, film and theater.

Kianga is an only child. Her parents moved to Sanford when she was four years old. She attended Sterling Park and Idyllwild elementary schools and Lakeview Middle School. She is a graduate of Seminole High School having graduated three years ago. During her tenure at Seminole Kianga's activities included: the Beta Club Nu Alpha Theta, yearbook staff member,

SEMINOLE OPINION

LURLENE SWEETING

Anchor Club, Thespians, the High-Y, class officer and class representative. She was listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students. Statewide recognition came when the Florida statewide Consortium of Historically Black Institutions selected her as the outstanding black high school student.

Upon graduation from Seminole High School Kianga enrolled at George Washington University. This is her junior year. She is maintaining a 3.4 grade point average majoring in English literature with a minor in African studies and the theater.

Last fall she produced, directed and choreographed an African folktale entitled "Shango De Ima." She has continued her dancing and holds membership in Georgetown's Black Movement Dance Troupe. Kianga is an active member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

This summer Kianga interned with the Institute of Washington summer repertory program. Interns were instructed by teachers from the world renowned Dance Theater of Harlem.

Receiving part of her education in Africa is the fulfillment of a dream for Kianga and possibly a date with destiny. Kianga's name is African, derived from Yoruba which means sunbeam.

The International Student Exchange program provides the opportunity for achieving students to study abroad.

While Kianga is at the University of Dar es Salaam for a year, a student from that university will be at Georgetown. Kianga's parents will continue to pay her tuition at Georgetown.

Accolades to Kianga and to all of Seminole High School students, who have dreams of accomplishing the goals they have set. Opportunities and options are there for students willing to work diligently in pursuit of their goals.

American students of the 90s and the future will be competing internationally for jobs. Consequently, studying abroad will not only provide a rich background of experiences, but will facilitate the process. We are uniling world-wide on many fronts. The challenge to youth is to be capable of adjusting and partaking deeply from the cup of life amidst this changing scenario.

VISION OF MASS DESTRUCTION.

Worst-for-women award time

BOSTON — Each year at this time, I prepare for August 26, the anniversary of the passage of women's suffrage, by recognizing those who have done the most in the past 12 months to set back the progress of women. The Equal Rights Awards are always a subject of intense competition. So many contestants, so little time.

The so-called Year of the Woman presented special problems for our one-woman jury. It was a time of so many mixed messages. Anita Hill became a heroine but Clarence Thomas became a Justice. Running for the Senate became a favorite female sport, but the only woman running for president was in a Donna Karan ad. And she had her shirt unbuttoned to the waist.

Nevertheless, these awards were always meant as markers to show how far we have left to go. So, without further ado, the envelopes please.

The Patriarch of the Year Award goes to the real thing, Cecil Jacobson, a fertility doctor who meant it when he told one patient, "God doesn't give you babies — I do." He artificially inseminated at least 15 women patients with his own sperm. To Dr. Jacobson, convicted of fraud, we send the traditional cigar. The exploding kind.

The Battle of the Sexes Award, which we had hoped to retire in the post-Cold War era, goes to those Navy pilots who turned the Tailhook convention into a sexual harassment maneuver. To these officers and gentlemen we send a courier who will collect all their tapes of "Top Gun." We will replace them with "Theima and Louise."

Let us think all our military woes are in seas. The Raging Hormonal Imbalance Award goes to Gen. Merrill McPeak, the Air Force chief of staff who admitted at a congressional hearing that his opposition to women in combat might not be rational but said, "I take some solace in thinking that not all human problems yield to strict logic." As a prize, the general will become a research subject for a treatise on male menopause and the military.

The Mis-information Award for promulgating the anatomically incorrect news to the next generation is won this year by the makers of a Mommy-to-Be Doll. This doll, Judy, gives birth when a child opens the door on the curved tummy, lifts out the baby and replaces it with a flat stomach. We send these manufacturers one complete set of varicose veins and an assortment of stretch marks.

Speaking of mis-information, the Double Standard in Sex goes to Roy Black, Willie Smith's lawyer who joked to a New York State Bar Association meeting that Smith's testimony about his prowess in having sex with Patricia Bowman twice in 30 minutes "has certainly helped him with dates since then." We send Black a new joke writer and an all-expense paid semester in sex education.

The Minogyny in Medicine Award, always a cliffhanger of a prize, will not go to Dow Chemical, which has troubles enough with breast implants exploding all over their reputation, but to Dow's accomplices at The American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons. The association described small breasts as "deformities" and "really a disease," requiring a surgical cure. Have we got an implant for them.

The Dubious Equality Award has always gone to the woman who struggled the most to match the least attractive male quality. This year it goes to Bush's deputy campaign manager, Mary Malin, whose attack memos rival her late mentor, Lee Atwater. We offer her, as required reading, one copy of "A Different Voice."

The citation for Short-Circuiting Self-Esteem. This wings its way to the manufacturers of Tums, who placed an ad for their tablets in a medical journal to promote it as a calcium supplement. Over a portrait of an attractive, stylish woman of a certain age, they cutely bleat: "She's a Loser." What this age group is losing in bone mass, it is gaining in consciousness. We send Tums a balance sheet had enough for a Rolaid.

Needless to say, the first annual "They Just Don't Get It" Bumper Sticker went months ago to the Senate Judiciary Committee. But a special Knight in (Tarnished) Armor shield goes to the unregenerate committee member, Sen. Alan Simpson, who quipped on the occasion of his wife's birthday party, "I never thought I'd be sleeping with a 60-year-old woman." We send Mrs. Simpson a copy of "Lysistrata."

The Sexism in Song Prize, competed for in rap and rock, has to be awarded to Ice-T. If you think the Iceman's song about cop killing was bad news, you haven't read the lyrics about matricide in "Momma's Gotta Die Tonight" or impregnating the daughters of the KKK in "KKK Bitch." The proper prize is silence.

The MS-Guided Media Award, a plaque suitable for framing, goes this year to all the newspapers who ran the Mike Tyson Rape trial in the sports section. Yes, we know he's a boxer. But if Julia Child killed someone would we run it in the food section?

These awards were meant to show how far we have left to go.

Moscow becomes city of homeless

MOSCOW — There's a specter haunting Russia. Alexandra Muhina says it's homelessness.

A journalist in her late 20s, Muhina is one of the country's first advocates for the homeless. Just last year, there were no shelters for the homeless, because for the past 64 years the Communist government denied there was any homelessness in the "worker's paradise."

In a taxi ride to one of Russia's first shelters, Muhina told us about her work with an organization called HELP, launched by a formerly homeless artist.

"In the last five years... we've had a maximum of 100 stories in the news about homeless people," Muhina says. Now, almost overnight, almost 1 million homeless people have materialized in Russia — mostly because they are no longer in danger of facing two-year prison terms for street panhandling.

"The homeless situation in Russia is grim," she explains. "Children are fighting for food. Russians with advanced degrees are sweeping streets. Members of the military are living on the railways, some are returning from Eastern Europe and Afghanistan."

Some of the homeless were kept invisible because they got dumped into prisons and psychiatric hospitals. Some are former dissidents and political prisoners. Some are casualties of dislocation brought on by the reform agenda pursued by Boris Yeltsin after last August's failed three-day coup sped the collapse of the Soviet Union.

During our recent visit, there was a palpable fear that the ranks of the homeless will swell in coming months, posing a serious political challenge to the Yeltsin government, and raising the stakes for the Bush administration.

As a recent article in Pravda points out, Russia's worsening economic conditions and homelessness, coupled with its brutal winter, may make the coming months even bleaker: "Unless (winter) is stopped, (it) will bring out into the streets an army in no way similar to the one that took up positions in Moscow on Aug. 19 of last year. Following the (storm) will be all the robbed and hungry, unemployed and homeless. It will be no opera patach, but a real Russian revolt."

Muhina's job has been to help rescue some of the refugees of this fast unfolding economic revolution. She and other advocates quickly note that Russia's homeless shelter many Western stereotypes: They tend to be exceptionally well-educated and well-trained — although many battle alcoholism.

In all cases, the homeless have had to fend for themselves. There are no government services, shelters or rehabilitation programs — a luxury item in a society where a person's salary can sometimes only buy a pair of shoes or 5 kilograms of meat.

To underscore the dangers posed by a restive military accustomed to more comfortable posts in Eastern Europe, earlier this month an annual festival thrown in honor of paratroopers turned into a melee. Blue Berets "expropriated" fruits from street vendors and distributed them to the homeless. Official figures in Russia show that there are more than 200,000 homeless families of military officers, 10,000 in Moscow alone.

The superpower has vanished and the economy is still floundering. Prices in June were nearly 13 times higher than a year earlier, but wages were only seven times higher. During the first six months of this year, industrial production plummeted 14 percent.

Some are former dissidents and political prisoners.

I need your help on another matter. Had a call the other day from Mrs. Mary Stephan of Clearwater. She's trying to find out if anybody in Sanford knows anything about a publication called "Argus." It's supposed to have been published before the turn of the century possibly by Elbert Wells Peabody, great-grandfather of Mrs. Stephan. "Argus" may have been a magazine or a newspaper. Mrs. Stephan does know that her great-grandfather once worked for the Florida Times-Union in Jacksonville. She also knows that Peabody and his wife, Sallie Missouri Moore Peabody, once lived in Sanford and she believes at 117 West Tenth Street. She also knows that they must have been members of what is now Sanford's First United Methodist church at Fifth and Park. There is a stained glass window still in the church as a memorial to the Peabodys.

Mrs. Stephan also knows that when Peabody was with the Times-Union he might have been a political writer. He covered the campaign and election of Florida Governor W.S. Jennings in 1900.

Finally, Elbert and Sallie Peabody are buried in Sanford's Lakeview Cemetery. Elbert was born April 6, 1845 in Spring Hill, Ala. His wife, Sallie, was born Feb. 22, 1849 in Tuskegee, Ala. They were married Jan. 7, 1867. Elbert died in Sanford March 9, 1904. Sallie died Aug. 17, 1919 in Miami.

You old timers put on your thinking caps. If you can come up with any information about the Peabodys, let me know. Thanks.

Remember the "Way Back

When" photo The Herald recently ran in a Monday edition of the packed Seminole High auditorium for a "House of Magic" show back in 1948? I told you I could identify only John Louis Salebury and Joe Stewart. Had a call from Ada (Adams) O'Neil. She was a freshman that year and she identified Beebee (Blabee) Gibbs, Helen Brewer, Jane Davis, Greichen Kirchhoff, Margaret (Malloy) Beard, Helen Driggers, Jackie McDonald and Shirley (Peacock) Smith.

That freshman class became the Seminole High class of 1952.

We want to extend our congratulations to old timer Harold Herbat and his charming wife, Anna. These two good folks observed their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday. They were honored last night with a party at the Christian Congregational Church.

Harold and Anna have contributed information we have used in a number of these "Way Back When" columns. And, we thank them for it. We hope they have many more anniversaries.

And, here's a couple of paragraphs I'm delighted to write. A couple times before I've referred to a black druggist who once served us at Eckerd's Drugs when the store was in Sanford Plaza. His name is Carroll Stapler. Our last report indicated Stapler was ill. That report was true. The other day, however, I got a call from Stapler and he tells me he's well on the road to recovery.

Carroll's dad worked at the Atlantic Coast Line shops in Sanford. The family lived on the northwest corner of French Avenue and 22nd Street. There were three boys. In addition to Carroll, there were W.A. and Bernard. W.A. is now 68 and retired from the U.S. Army. Bernard died in 1988. Prior to that he was employed at what is now known as LaGuardia Airport in New York City.

I recall back in the 1920s when the Stapler boys were youngsters, my father had a grocery store on the northwest corner of French and 20th Street. The Staplers had a kerosene stove in their kitchen. Often Mrs. Stapler would send one of her youngsters to my dad's store to fill the glass kerosene container that one would turn upside down in a rack beside the stove.

One day one of the Stapler youngsters brought the container to Dad's store and asked for a gallon of gasoline. Dad filled the tank. The boy departed. While Dad was putting the charge in the Stapler's account book he suddenly realized the container he'd put that gasoline in was for Mrs. Stapler's kerosene stove. Dad might have set an Olympic record when he dropped his pencil and dashed to the Stapler home, getting there in time to prevent Mrs. Stapler from using that gasoline in her kerosene stove. That's an incident I'll never forget.

don't care if you agree or disagree with me. The point is to get people talkin' instead of sittin' there," he said. "I'll publish any letters I can. And yes, we'll get political. It's an election year.

He compiles and prints between 700 and 1,000 of the eight-page papers, dealing with "the observations and thoughts of those living and working primarily in the historic section of Sanford."

Stubblefield, who left a job as a rehabilitative psychologist for the Veterans' Administration in Dallas, moved to Sanford in 1984.

"I got tired of the rat race and said to myself, 'I don't need this.' I decided to move to a small town and change my lifestyle," he said. "I used to spend three hours in traffic. Now I don't mind spending six to eight minutes to get to work," he said.

At the urging of his neighbor in Dallas at the time and longtime friend, John Smith, who is Mayor Bettye Smith's son, Stubblefield chose Sanford, sight unseen.

"The first time I came into town I was on I-4 from Daytona. I thought Sanford was a real gem," he said.

And he still does, despite, he said, some minor flaws.

"I think the downtown has improved with the historic designation and with citizens' groups like the Historic Trust and the one recently formed to fight alumiords. But some things are worse. The drugs, hookers and transients," he said. "I think we need to get older residents to come out and get involved instead of hollin' up because they're afraid of the crime. We need to question the cops, their attitude and direction in solving our problems."

Since June 15, he has received 137 letters in response to the Rag/Times. Some donations have helped defray a part of the $75 per month cost to print and distribute. Stubblefield pays a couple of neighborhood boys to pass the paper out. Friends help him collate, fold and staple. Currently, he has the paper printed for him at Office Depot.

"My intent is not to become commercial, but I would like to expand, address city-wide issues like the expressway when finances permit it. My immediate goal is to expand into the Georgetown area because problems those residents face are very similar to the ones in the historic area," he said.

Rag/Times is available free in local businesses such as Soup to Nuts and The First Street Gallery. Copies go fast. On the street about a week, 700 copies of the August issue have already been distributed.

"It's gettin' around," Stubblefield, with traces of a Texas drawl, grinned and said. He tipped his canvas hat. "Write me."

Year-round schools gaining popularity

From Staff and Wire Reports

The concept of year-round school is not a particularly popular idea with schoolchildren, but it's gaining favor with their parents, teachers and school administrators.

Seminole County has three schools on the modified (year round) calendar. Goldsboro Elementary School in Sanford, Geneva Elementary School in Geneva and Lawton Elementary School in Oviedo have already started having classes year round. The district hopes to have all the district's elementary schools on the year round calendar by 1995.

Districts around the state are warming to the idea of a modified school calendar that replaces the traditional school year that has summers off with several multi-week sessions followed by shorter vacations called inter-seasons.

Many year-round calendars have 12-week sessions, followed by a three-week vacation. All three Seminole County schools use that calendar.

Youngsters aren't so terrified by the year-round concept when they learn that they will still be attending the same 180 days as students on a traditional calendar.

And some of the things that trouble parents, such as scheduling day-care, summer camps and family vacations have proved not to be the problem that many envisioned, school officials said.

"We've had very few complaints," said Dr. Bob O'Dell, coordinator of year round schools in Seminole County. "People seem to be adjusting rather well."

The Florida Department of Education and various school officials cite several advantages to a year-round schedule, including reduced overcrowding in classrooms; continuous learning for students; ability to offer enrichment and remedial activities during vacations and reduced need for new construction and staffing.

Education Commissioner Betty Castor said she thought year-round schools are going to mushroom.

"Nobody actually starts learning in September and stops in June," she said.

And research shows that children learn more when they are kept "on task," Castor said.

On top of all that, there's the benefit of saving money by using facilities year-round, she said. Educators also feel that with shorter breaks between sessions, students retain more information. In a traditional school calendar, teachers often spend several weeks at the start of each new year reviewing from the previous school year.

Thompson said. School officials also say that if a student is having a problem with a certain subject, help can be obtained after a session instead of waiting until summer school.

Proponents say year-round schools also lessen teacher and student burnout by providing more frequent vacations.

One of the criticisms about year-round schools is the possibility that students in the same family with youngsters in elementary schools, middle schools or junior highs, and high school could be on different tracks and have vacations at different times of the year.

In Duval County, families with students in both elementary school and junior high are guaranteed that their youngsters will be on the same track or school-year schedule.

The number of year-round schools is increasing across the state from 20 schools in nine districts last year to 49 schools in 11 districts this year, said John Winn, education policy director for the Florida Department of Education.

Schools going to a year-round schedule can apply for a portion of a $1.5 million appropriation for renovations, Winn said. The money can be used for such things as storage closets for teachers to air conditioning and ventilation.

"Any time the state puts money behind something, they are in favor of it," Winn said. Orange County leads the state with 16 year-round schools, followed by nine in Duval County and five in Osceola and Volusia counties.

New trends in testing

Seminole shifting emphasis to more writing

By VICKI BOGGS
Herald Staff Writer

While many districts around the state are experimenting with alternatives to true-false and multiple choice testing, Seminole County administrators have not issued a mandate regarding what schools here should do in that regard.

"We've been encouraging the teachers to use essays and short paragraph answers to get the students to write more wherever possible," said Verna Jackson an English teacher at Seminole High School. "There hasn't been any decision to eliminate the other testing methods."

An expanded emphasis on writing has been in place in district schools for several years, according to Dr. Marion Dailey, assistant superintendent for instruction. There has been an additional emphasis on getting students to think through an answer rather than arriving at it mechanically, Dailey added.

Charlotte Guyer, coordinator of language arts for the district, said the emphasis on careful reading of a question and construction of an answer, better prepares a student for "real life" situations.

"Students are getting training early with writing answers rather than doing multiple choice questions," Guyer said.

While testing methods are being left up to the individual schools at this point, Dave Winger, director of testing for the district, said he has seen a trend away from multiple choice testing. Winger is in charge of standardized testing for the school district.

"We used to test the students in grades K through 8," Winger said, "and now we only in grades 2, 4 and 7."

The move is on, he said, away from traditional standardized tests, and toward performance-based testing which assesses a child more in the manner that he is learning in the classroom.

"Reading comprehension would be tested by having student read a passage to the teacher and having the teacher ask questions about it," he said by way of example.

During the coming school year, parents at many of the district schools may be asked to help the school decide the kind of testing they believe is best for their youngsters.

"The schools have a lot of autonomy in this matter," Winger said.

Multiple choice tests on way out statewide

By NEE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO — The standard multiple-choice test used in public schools is: A) a good way of measuring learning, B) preparation for problem-solving, C) on the way out.

If you answered C), you are in tune with reform-minded officials, parents and educators trying to improve the ways that students learn.

Teachers and education officials in school districts around the country are developing better methods of measuring what kids really know and in what areas they are deficient. They reject the idea that multiple-choice and true-false tests can truly gauge student knowledge.

"Learning is not simply answering multiple choice questions. . . This fact-recall kind of thing does not prepare students for problem-solving when they leave school," says Tom Fisher, administrator of the Assessment, Testing and Evaluation Section of the state Department of Education.

There is a quiet revolution under way in testing.

And improving testing means broadening the curriculum, to a large extent, because students in the new programs are being asked to produce essays, reports, research projects, even evaluations of their own work. They are reading, writing about what they read and then tested on what they've learned.

The New Standards Project, a national movement which has pilot programs in Orange and Indian River counties, is working out new ways of testing a student's progress under the new classroom activities.

"Tests have been abused and misused," says Education Commissioner Betty Castor.

"What teachers want, and what's coming out of the New Standards Project, is we're trying to emphasize the use of evaluation as a way of spawning classroom improvement."

In academic talk, the new tests are "performance-based assessment."

Officials hope to expand the concept throughout the state within the next five years, at least in some grades.

The pilot program in the two Florida counties is tied into Florida's new concept of reform and accountability for public schools. This is designed to give schools more freedom from state control over their operations, so long as they can meet state performance standards.

Bob Bedford, school superintendent in Charlotte County, heads a state committee working on assessment in the New Standards Project.

"We want to blend curriculum instruction with demonstrations and projects, exhibits, speeches, essays, lab work — examples of actual student product," says Bedford.

Orange County's program began last spring in 10 fourth-grade classrooms — in math and reading and writing. Officials hope to expand it into some eighth- and 10th-grade classrooms this fall, said Lee Baldwin, the district's director of testing and program evaluation.

Four other Florida districts have expressed interest in the pilot program: Dade, Charlotte, Sarasota and Escambia. "But we don't want to go too fast and not do a good job of developing what we want," Baldwin says.

The concept poses challenges to all: students, teachers and parents.

Bedford and Baldwin said it will be particularly challenging for teachers because they do not learn performance-assessment methods in college.

"We need pretty massive in-service teaching of teachers," says Bedford. "It is much more complex for teachers to do. They have to design and grade materials, and this takes much more time and effort. Teachers are also making more value judgments."

In addition, teachers bear the primary burden for explaining the new teaching and testing methods to parents, who are expected to take a more active role than in the past.

A related method of getting a better grasp of a student's knowledge, capabilities and weaknesses is called the portfolio system.

This method measures a student's long-term progress (usually a year at a time) by keeping a record of everything he or she does or produces.

Jackie Mathews, a program specialist in elementary reading and language development for Orange County schools, is a national leader in the development of what she calls a literacy portfolio.

Storm

bottled water and canned food.

David Childs, manager of Winn Dixie, 1814 French Ave., said employees Saturday have sold eight to 10 times the bottled water ordinarily sold.

"I'd guess we will sell 1,000 cases (4,000 bottles) of water this weekend. We're selling more of everything," Childs said.

Ed Montague, assistant store manager at Publix in Lake Mary also estimated bottled water sales at 10 times the normal rate.

"We usually sell four or five cases on a Saturday. We've sold more of the normal hurricane supply stuff; canned meats, vegetables and batteries," he said.

Hurricane Andrew Saturday intensified to 100 mph winds.

A hurricane watch was issued Saturday afternoon for Florida's east coast from the Florida Keys, including the Dry Tortugas, northward through Titusville.

The first hurricane of the Atlantic season was on a new track to hit the Bahamas and the Florida coast near Miami late Monday or Tuesday and pass across the Florida Peninsula to exit on the Gulf at Marco Island. But forecasters say they could be off on the hurricane's center by 200 miles with the swirling storm 615 miles east of Miami. The hurricane could hit anywhere from Central Florida to the Florida Keys, forecasters said.

Andrew strengthened rapidly Saturday morning and is expected to grow still stronger into a Category 2 storm packing 95 mph winds and possibly a Category 3 storm with 111 mph winds, Beven said. The surge tide could hit 9-12 feet.

"It's a very, very serious situation we're looking at," said Thad Altman, chairman of the Brevard County Commission. "It's a worst-case scenario for us, so certainly it's a very serious threat."

He would have to issue an evacuation order for 180,000 coastal residents if Andrew gets near. The county, home to Cape Canaveral, has more beachfront than any other in the state with 72 miles.

B.T. Kennedy, Palm Beach County emergency management director, said he usually goes on Saturday but was sitting inside a planning center with 10-inch-thick poured concrete walls instead.

"Our message is there is a serious hurricane out there that very well could impact our area," he said. "We hope that they're getting ready for a hurricane. We'd want to be very careful."

Kennedy's territory, which hasn't been directly hit by a hurricane since the remnants of David came ashore in 1979, stretches from the estate-studded resort town of Palm Beach to the high rises of Palm Beach Shores.

Coastal residents raided hardware stores for emergency items and supermarkets for bottled water and canned goods as the hurricane strengthened.

"We're just about out of plywood, batteries, nails, stuff like that," said Teresa Marshall, a Home Depot employee in West Palm Beach. "It's been all day."

The state opened its round-the-clock emergency center Saturday in Tallahassee, and several counties on the south-east Florida coast did the same.

"I don't think the storm is going to be as much of a problem as the people," said Jim Judge, chief of emergency medical service in Indian River County.

The center was averaging 30 calls an hour, mostly from people asking for extra help in case of an evacuation. About two-thirds of the county, which has a population of more than 60,000, is 55 years and older.

The hurricane is badly timed for two U.S. space missions.

 the salaries of those who will administer the facilities.

In Santa Rosa County, Tommy was assessed and observed by the on-campus county Health Department nurse. As a result, he received medical and psychological tests, his medication was changed and his mother and father were enrolled in a parenting workshop. An on-site psychologist met with Tommy's teacher to work out a strategy for managing his behavior.

Teachers and doctors say his improvement has been remarkable.

"He no longer holds his head down and mumbles when spoken to," said his father, who didn't want to be identified, in a written statement. "He now peals with laughter and joyfully partakes of life and school."

The father and school officials cite Tommy's case as an example of what full-service schools can do.

The idea is to solve the variety of problems that interfere children's learning and let teachers concentrate on teaching instead of acting as counselors, social workers and nurses.

Children "are coming through the door with what we call very complex lifestyles," said Project Vision manager Carol S. Calfee. "They come from single-parent homes. We have an increased risk of teen-age pregnancy across the state. We have lots and lots of involvement with police departments."

There are emotional, mental health and physical problems.

Calfee said she believes the program, entering its third year this fall, has made a life and death difference.

It brought medical care to two seriously ill children, one suffering from a life-threatening disease, she said.

In one case the parents realized their child was ill but had not sought treatment because they lacked insurance. In the other the parent failed to recognize symptoms obvious to a teacher who referred the child for medical care.

Santa Rosa and Florida are national leaders in full-service schools but their programs are still in their infancy, IBM was so impressed with Santa Rosa's program that it donated computers and other equipment.

The Legislature last year for the first time appropriated $6.2 million for operating and $16 million for renovating and remodeling facilities to accommodate the outside agencies. For the new school year, the numbers are $5.6 million for operations and $12.6 million for facilities.

The money, however, is spread thin among about 70 schools in 33 counties, said Lynn Groves, director of inter-agency affairs for the state Education Department.

Some full-service schools offer more services than others, depending on local needs, resources and desires.

The major partner is the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. Typically, HRS will locate staffers who handle child abuse and neglect cases, welfare and delinquency matters on school campuses.

Other services commonly offered are before- and after-school child care and mental health counseling, Groves said.

system. Only 52 of the district's 100 elementary schools will have an art program this year, according to Nellie Lynch, Duval County's art supervisor. Twenty-eight elementary art teachers will lose their jobs and only 20 schools will have full-time arts positions. "It's very discouraging but legislators have become very hardhearted," said Mrs. Lynch. "We can talk about the value of art all we want and it's no use. They're resistant to it."

Money continues to be tight in Orange County also. The district is getting an extra $9.1 million in state money but it also expects almost 6,000 more students, an increase of about 5 percent.

"While we're grateful for the additional money, we should not lose sight of the fact that education continues to be in a budget crisis," School Board Chairman Dee Parsons told a recent budget workshop session.

"We're living within the resources we've been given, which is tough," said Diane Taylor, a community relations administrator. "We've had to cut programs, provide fewer services with fewer people despite more students and the opening of five new schools."

The bulk of Florida's 67 districts will start classes this week and next week, although students in Liberty County had the privilege of returning to school first in the state and students in Pasco County will be able to enjoy summer vacation until Sept. 8.

School's back in session and in the excitement of the new school year, many school-age children, especially the young ones, may forget to look both ways when crossing the street or exiting the school bus.

That leaves it up to you as a driver, to be extra careful around schoolyards, neighborhood play areas, and departing school buses.

So remember...when you see yellow, be sure to see red—as in red alert. Let's all slow down and give our children the chance they deserve.

SHS coach earns honor

By TONY DEBOESE
 Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — In the last 20 years, Seminole High School's Ken Brauman has coached six team state champions and countless individual state titleists. His athletes have ruled their conferences, districts and regions.

Now, after two decades of guiding young track and field athletes to statewide and, on many occasions, national prominence, Brauman will step into the spotlight. Last week, it was announced that Brauman has been selected for induction into the Florida Athletic Coaches Association Coaches Hall of Fame.

"I was notified last week," said Brauman. "The FACA had its annual meeting the first weekend in August in Jacksonville. They selected people who were going to be inducted at that time."

Also selected for induction were Daytona Beach-Seabreeze track coach Dick Edson; Orlando-Oak Ridge track coach John Hemmer; Fort Lauderdale-St. Thomas Aquinas football coach George Smith; and Quincy Shanks football

Henry "Press" Deboese has been having fun while umpiring for the past 16 years in the Sanford recreation baseball and softball leagues.

Ump tries to keep games fun for all

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — Many umpires choose to distance themselves from the players and coaches while doing a thankless job for fear of being called a "homer" or a cheater.

But not Henry "Press" Deboese. When he makes a call he's willing to explain his decision and listen to the other person's side of the story and he is slow to eject a player for becoming a little agitated, giving him a chance to cool off.

When doing youth baseball he is quick to help a young baseball player if he sees him standing too close to the plate or if he has committed a balk he will explain to the player what he did wrong.

For 16 years, Deboese has called balls and strikes in the Sanford recreation leagues, whether it be baseball or softball, men's or women's. And where ever he works, he takes that same positive attitude and desire to help others with him, making the game fun for all.

And after all that's the name of all sports, or it should be, to have fun and enjoyment.

Even though Press has been criticized at times by both parents and coaches, there is probably not a single person that would not want him working their big game.

"I've been accused of trying to coach and umpire at the same time," said Deboese. "I know most of the players. I used to coach. If I can be an influence for them, why not give it a shot?"

Deboese's coach and player in Sanford since 1962, enjoys the aid Deboese gives him and his team.

"Up until the age of 16 baseball is a learning stage," commented Raines. "It's good to have an umpire explain things to the kids, and to some adults. Coaches can't see everything. I think it helps the kids."

Duane LaFollette, who runs the Sanford Officials Association of which Deboese is employed, agrees with Raines.

"He (Deboese) knows how to deal with people," said LaFollette. "When you umpire, you're a role model, an instructor. You go to a new level. He can associate with kids as well as adults and make them feel relaxed. He can help them enjoy the game."

"People are there to have fun," said Deboese. "The game is for the players."

It should come as no surprise that Deboese can so easily umpire, often an ulcer-causing event for a lot of men. After all, he works with kids

SHS boosters hold rally for athletics and MDA

By LADY DENNIS
 Herald People Editor

SANFORD — School spirit filled the parking lot Saturday, mingling with the smell of barbecued chicken on the grill and the taste of cold orange-flavored popicles under a relentless summer sun.

Seminole High School Booster Club kicked off the school year with a booster membership drive coupled with a chicken dinner and some help for the Muscular Dystrophy Association. The event was held in the parking lot of the 7-Eleven at Airport Boulevard and 25th Street.

Dr. Roger Stewart, president of the club, hopes to count over 200 members in the ranks this year, 50 more than this past year. About 150 students blanketed the city soliciting members while volunteers at the site signed up others. The Booster Club raises funds throughout the year to aid all sports teams at the school.

"They usually run out of money two-thirds of the way through the year with budget cuts, and that's when we really step in," Stewart explained.

Stewart said coaches have requests for which the Booster Club helps pay. A student, for example, Tim Raines is a Sanford native and Seminole High School graduate now playing for the Chicago White Sox. His stats are for the 1992 season in the first column, personal-best season totals in the second column and current career totals (including 1992 games) in the third column.

Kansas City Royals shortstop David Howard robbed Raines of a game-winning single on a shot up the middle with two out in the bottom of the ninth as the Royals edged the White Sox 4-3 Friday night. Raines went 0-for-4, but did score a run in the loss.

Monster catch turns normal trip into memorable outing

Last weekend's fishing trip was like countless others. It was 4:30 a.m. and I was heading down the highway to Port Canaveral where I was to meet Bill Kale, my hunting buddy from North Carolina.

Bill was waiting for me when I pulled up to the ramp, so we launched the "Blue Runner" and proceeded to cast some frisky live mullet for bait. As usual, catching bait was a chore, but we finally caught enough to head offshore to Pelican flats.

The sea was calm and we made the 20-mile trip in about an hour. Bill steered the boat while I put out the downrigger and the two flat lines. I ran a flying fish teaser in front of one of the flatline baits.

Everything was looking good. The water was a deep blue and the mullet were swimming just fine. Shortly, out of the corner of my eye, I spotted a big fish closing in on the bait behind the flying fish. The fish crashed the bait from the side and began to strip hundreds of yards of line at an alarming rate. At first I thought that it might be a marlin — it was powerful and ran just below the surface.

Changing tactics, the huge fish ran towards the boat. I reeled furiously to take out the slack, and was very relieved to once again feel the surge of the mighty fish on the end of my line.

The fish was so big that I had difficulty bringing it to the surface. After about ten minutes, I made out the cobalt blue stripes of a wahoo in the clear water. I gasped as I pulled the fish to the surface — it had to be at least six feet long! The giant was gaffed and literally stuffed into my five foot fish box. What a way to start the day!

The remainder of the trip was filled with plenty of action, and Bill caught king mackerel until his arms ached. Trips such as this help to bond old friendships. Bill will remember this trip for a long time, and I look forward to deer hunting with him this fall on his lease in South Carolina.

SHUPE'S SCOOP

The ocean is a special place for me, and I find a serenity and a solitude amongst the cavorting dolphin and the iridescent flying fish. This peaceful surrounding helps me to sort out the complexities of life, for in nature everything is reduced to its simplest element.

FISHING FORECAST

Base fishing is at an all-time low. Summer heat has driven the fish into heavy cover or deep water. Bream and catfish are the only species hardy enough to remain active all day long. Bream are hitting crickets in the river, and catfish are biting dead shrimp and cut bait in the deep ponds and holes.

Sebastian Inlet is providing steady action with a mixed bag of fish. Tarpon, snook (season closed), flounder, jack crevalle, redfish, and ladyfish are moving in and out of the inlet on a regular basis. One-ounce jigs and live shrimp are the two top offerings.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports hot offshore action with dolphin, wahoo, cobia and king mackerel. Some good king mackerel and cobia are being caught in the busy line or just off the beach. Dolphin and wahoo are hitting in 80-150 feet of water. Guide Troy Perez is still hammering the redfish back in Mosquito Lagoon. Some nice trout are also striking topwater lures in this same area.

Ponce Inlet is calm, and the fishing has been likewise. Expect sheepshead and jack crevalle on a regular basis. A few redfish and flounder are also being caught. Live shrimp is the top bait.

Buccaneers still trying to recover from errors of the past

By FRED GODDALL
AP Sports Writer

It only seems like Tampa Bay selects first in the NFL draft every year. Still, you can't help but wonder why the Buccaneers' record doesn't improve with so many high picks.

The Bucs haven't had a winning season since 1982 and critics of the longest franchise in professional sports point to a history of poor decisions and draft blunders as the primary reasons.

The last three drafts have produced a good nucleus of talent for first-year coach Sam Wyche to build around, but the team is still paying for mistakes like the 1980 trade that brought backup quarterback Chris Chandler to Tampa Bay and wound up costing the club the second pick this year.

Chandler was released last fall with the Bucs stumbling toward a 3-13 finish — the 13th time in 16 seasons they have lost at least 10 games — and the Indianapolis Colts used the second pick to draft linebacker Quentin Coryatt.

"We're still living with that one," said Richard McKay, starting his first season as the Bucs' vice president for football administration.

"It's going to be hard to overcome because you're probably talking about two picks when you consider we could have traded down and gotten two players."

Instead, the Bucs selected 44th and took Courtney Hawkins, a highly regarded receiver from Michigan State, but not the pass rusher or cornerback the team needed.

"It's hard to get out of the shadow of what's happened here in the past," said McKay. "One way is to have some success. Winning will change the perception."

The Bucs' draft problems began when the team traded its first-round pick in 1983 was dealt to Chicago for the Bears' second round pick in 1982, which Tampa Bay used to select little-known defensive end Booker Reese.

Reese, of course, never lived up to expectations and the Bears used the first-rounder to pick Willie Gault the following year.

The next three drafts were just as bad.

The Bucs traded their 1984 first-round pick to Cincinnati for quarterback Jack Thompson, selected often-injured defensive end Ron Holmes with the eighth pick in 1985 and took Bo Jackson No. 1 in 1986, only to lose him to baseball and, later, the Los Angeles Raiders.

The team has just one player on the current roster who was drafted by Tampa Bay before 1987, when Ray Perkins took over as head coach and made quarterback Vinny Testaverde the first pick overall.

The 1987 draft also produced three other starters — Ricky Reynolds, Mark Carrier and Ron Hall — who are still with the team.

While Testaverde has not played up to expectations, the Bucs remain committed to giving him an opportunity to succeed.

"I believe in Vinny," said Wyche, Tampa Bay's third coach in as many years. "He's got all the tools ... I believe he is ready to blossom now."

Perkins was criticized for not hiring an experienced quarterback coach to work with

Testaverde and also took some heat for the slow development of first-round picks Broderick Thomas and Keith McCanta, who didn't play much as rockets. Although the jury is still out on the promising nucleus of young talent on the roster, Wyche is confident the team is headed in the right direction with players like Thomas, McCanta, Paul Gruber, Charles McRae, Lawrence Dawsey and Calvin Tiggie.

Brauman

coach Johnny Williams.

"Being selected for the Coaches' Hall of Fame is a combination of years of service and coaching," explained Brauman. "It's the highest award that a coach can receive in the association."

According to Brauman, a coach has to meet a number of criteria before he or she can even be considered for selection to the Hall of Fame.

"To begin with, you have to have coached in the state as a head coach for 20 or more years," he said. "And you have had to belong to the FACA for 20 or more years. They give points for each of these areas."

"There's also a part for championships won. You get so many points for winning the state championship, being the state runner-up and winning regional, district and conference championships."

Points are also awarded based on service to the FACA. A coach has to have taken an active role in the coaches association as well. Another way to accumulate points is to have articles published or be fortunate enough to garner national awards.

"You have to have 70 points to qualify to get into the Hall of Fame," said Brauman. "They don't induct you into the Hall of Fame just because they like you. The 70 points don't mean you automatically go into the Hall of Fame, but once you do get to 70 points, you'll eventually get into the Hall of Fame."

"Their aim is to induct five individuals a year. Sometimes they really have to push it to come up five qualified individuals in one year."

Brauman actually had the necessary number of points to be considered for induction a couple years ago, but didn't have 20 years of service as a head coach until this year.

"Unless you've been very, very active in FACA and have been fortunate enough to have had a lot of champions. It's difficult to accumulate those kind of points," Brauman said. "For example, 20 years as a head coach is worth two points. You get one point for serving as the state chairman for your sport. For state championships, get five points."

"It's not real easy to accumulate those points so early. It may take some coaches 30 or 35 years to accumulate that number of points. You just can't get in by having had good teams or just by being a member of the FACA. You have to be an active member and take part in promoting the association and your sport."

Brauman, who was an All-American in the triple jump for Iowa State in 1960, has just finished his ninth year at Seminole, which he led to state championships in boys track and field in 1966, 1968, 1980 and 1982.

The 11 years before that, he coached at Palatka High School, where he had state championship teams in 1980 and 1981. At Palatka, his team was district champions 10 of the 11 years. Brauman's Seminole teams have been district champs nine consecutive years, giving him 19 in 20 years.

Combined, Brauman's teams have won at least six regionals (each of the state championship years) and probably as many as a dozen in 20 years.

After getting his undergraduate and master's degree from Iowa State, Brauman, 48, came "straight to Florida and started coaching."

"I grew up in Iowa, but at the time (when he came to Florida), I was still competing," said Brauman. "I moved down to compete for the Florida Track Club. That was back in the days of Frank Shorter."

IN BRIEF

First Seminole wants new branch

LAKE MARY — First Seminole Bank has applied to the Division of Banking and the FDIC for its first branch, according to Dennis H. Courson, president/CEO.

The new office will be located at 7625 Sandlake Road at Dr. Phillips Blvd. in Orlando.

The Dr. Phillips office is expected to receive regulatory approval within 90 days, and the renovation of the building should be completed by Dec. 1, according to a press release.

The Board of Directors selected this site because of its outstanding demographics, which reflect a high income area coupled with high growth trends, he said.

First Seminole Bank will be the only independent bank represented in the immediate market area.

Ispass named society official

TALLAHASSEE — Alan B. Ispass, P.E., Longwood, has been named vice president of the Florida Engineering Society. He was installed at the Society's 76th Annual Meeting held at the Marco Island Marriott Resort & Golf Club, July 30 — Aug. 1.

Ispass, currently director of the Orange County Public Utilities Division, Orlando, will be responsible for the Society's professional Practices Division.

The Florida Engineering Society advances the public welfare and promotes the professional, educational, social and economic interests of the engineering profession. FES represents more than 4,100 professional engineers throughout the state. It is the member State Society of the National Society of Professional Engineers.

Cooley begins term as president

TALLAHASSEE — Kevin J. Cooley, P.E., Longwood, has begun his term as president of the Florida Engineering Society. He was installed at the Society's 76th Annual Meeting held at the Marco Island Marriott Resort & Golf Club, July 30 — Aug. 1.

Cooley is a senior vice president/director of technical operations for the consulting firm of Post Buckley Schuh & Jernigan, Inc., Winter Park. Cooley, in the past, was twice honored as the "Young Engineer of the Year" by the Central Florida Chapter of FES, as well as serving as president of the Chapter. He served three terms as an FES vice president with responsibilities in the area of legislative and government affairs.

As head of the Florida Engineering Society, he will help advance the public welfare and promote the professional, educational, social and economic interests of the engineering profession.

FES represents more than 4,100 professional engineers throughout the state. It is the member State Society of the National Society of Professional Engineers.

Beake named sales associate by Arvida

HEATHROW — Arvida Company recently named Beverly Beake, sales associate for the master-planned community of Heathrow.

Beake, former partner in Best-Key Properties, Inc., brings with her more than 23 years of real estate experience. In 1983 she opened Best-Key Properties, Inc., a real estate company and a restaurant — Cody's Steak & Oyster Reef, which she operated for five years. Other experience includes opening her own real estate firm in 1977, Wakiva Realty, Inc. in Altamonte Springs, which she sold to ERA in 1983.

Gramkow continues good standing

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Gramkow Funeral Home in Sanford is beginning its 25th year as a good-standing member of the International Order of the Golden Rule (IOGR), the international trade association recently announced.

IOGR is a not-for-profit organization formed in 1966 to help the public identify outstanding funeral firms. The association is comprised of more than 1,900 respected funeral homes spanning the United States, Canada and abroad. Members base professional service on the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you."

To be a member of the Golden Rule, Gramkow Funeral Home had to receive community recommendations, pass strict professional standards of service, and earn 100 percent approval by IOGR's Board of Directors.

"Gramkow Funeral Home is truly an outstanding firm," IOGR Executive Director Dale L. Rollings said. "We're proud to have them as a member, because they consistently show special regard for the public's trust."

Barnett move includes Centra Florida

JACKSONVILLE — Barnett Banks Inc. announced the appointment of Lloyd Jarboe as corporate and commercial director of special assets.

Jarboe, who holds a bachelor's degree in business administration from Sam Houston State College, will manage special assets commercial offices in Jacksonville, Tampa, Orlando and Fort Lauderdale in his new position, the bank said in a statement Monday.

Construction is underway in Sanford on the area's newest Food Lion store.

Walls up for Food Lion

By NICK PPRIFAUPT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Construction is underway for the new Food Lion store at the Kmart Plaza, in the 3100 block of U.S. 17-92. The work is being handled by Lathan Construction, of Winter Park.

Plans for the new Food Lion facility and expansion of the Kmart stores were originally presented to the City of Sanford in November of last year. The City Commission unanimously approved the plans, but delays were brought about over a requirement from the St. Johns River Water Management District regarding a retention pond to be built on the property.

At that time, Tom Harb, project engineer, explained that the retention pond would have to be built on what is now the parking area, and the construction could not be done if the parking was reduced.

Permission was eventually granted to allow the use of a water retention area behind the building, which allowed for land clearing and construction to get underway for the Food Lion.

The planned expansion of the Kmart store has been placed on hold. A spokesman at the main Kmart headquarters said, "We had a number of stores due to be expanded during 1992, but the economy prevented us from doing it as we had planned. He added, "We do expect to have major expansions underway to at least one third of our stores nationwide, which includes the Sanford Kmart store, during the first quarter of the new year."

The planned K mart expansion would enlarge the existing building toward the north, and result in almost doubling the size of the present retail space.

Lathan Project Manager Carl Davis was unavailable to discuss the progress of the Food Lion construction. Work was originally expected to be completed before the end of this year.

Winn-Dixie reports record sales, earnings

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Winn-Dixie Stores Inc. reported record sales and record earnings in the fiscal year, which ended June 24.

Net earnings increased 14.6 percent for fiscal 1992 to $195.9 million, compared with $170.9 million for fiscal year 1991. Earnings per share amounted to $2.53, compared with $2.20 for the previous year.

Sales for the fiscal year were $10.3 billion, compared with $10.1 billion for fiscal 1991, a 2.6 percent increase.

Fiscal 1992 was the 58th consecutive year of sales increase for the company which operates 1,189 stores and is the largest food retailer in the Sunbelt.

During the year, the company opened and acquired 35 new stores and closed 53.

Chamber to discuss power lines

LONGWOOD — The Longwood/Winter Springs Area Chamber of Commerce will hear of property rights during a meeting scheduled for noon, Monday.

"Stumpy" Harris, condemnation attorney and a partner in the Orlando law firm of Gray, Harris & Robinson, P.A., will be the guest speaker. He is slated to discuss property rights and eminent domain.

The focal point of his talk will relate to proposed Florida Power Corporation transmission line that would pass through Sanford, Lake Mary, Casselberry, Longwood and Winter Springs.

All interested business people and residents are invited to attend. Lunch tickets will be available at the door for $7.

The meeting is scheduled from noon until 1 p.m., Monday, Aug. 24, at Quality Inn - North, S.R. 434 at Interstate 4, in Longwood.

For reservations or additional information, call the Chamber office at 831-9991.

La Prensa newspaper observes anniversary

LONGWOOD — La Prensa, a Spanish language newspaper, is observing its eleventh anniversary today. Publisher Manuel Toro is also inaugurating his new offices.

LaPrensa started operations in 1981 in the downtown Orlando area, but recently moved to new facilities in Longwood. The paper serves Spanish language readers in six Central Florida Counties including Seminole.

In observance of the anniversary and new headquarters, La Prensa will hold an ecumenical service and ribbon cutting ceremony at 2 p.m. this afternoon, followed by the open house at the new facility until 6 p.m.

The public is cordially invited. La Prensa is located at 685 S.R. 427 in Longwood.

Caring for crack babies

Jimi and Meta Brooks at their daycare center last week.

Life's work has been better world for kids

By VICKI BOGGS
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Children whose mothers have abused drugs, especially crack cocaine, during pregnancy have some special problems that few day care centers are prepared to deal with.

First Impressions Day Care in Sanford is one of the few facilities in Seminole County that is prepared for their unique situations.

Although Jimi Brooks, co-owner of First Impressions, died Friday night, the foundation he and his wife, Meta, have built for cocaine addicted babies is expected to carry on, according to friends. His tenets are to be used to help at-risk babies cope in a world in which they must learn to live.

In earlier interviews, the couple discussed their special charges.

Meta said she believes HRS checks with childcare facilities within a short geographic distance of where an addicted baby is living.

"When they have a baby in my area, they call me and ask if I have a slot," she said.

While, according to Bobby Prettyman at Community Coordinated Child Care (4C), there are several facilities that take such children, few want the added responsibilities.

Meta and her husband Jimi treat their special babies in much the same way as their normal, healthy students.

"There is no pattern," Brooks said. "You just have to observe the child and see what is best for them. Some are born addicted to cocaine. They have varying degrees of problems and every situation is different."

Brooks said that the children may simply be exceptionally cranky, or they may be difficult to get along.

Many of them fail to thrive, according to Brooks. In addition to being physically small, they don't make normal interpersonal connections.

At First Impressions the youngsters are mainstreamed as much as possible. They are not put into special classes, but Brooks said there is an emphasis on giving the children lots of love and attention.

There are 35 children at First Impressions who were born addicted to drugs.

Brooks said that most of them come from dysfunctional families so it is especially important they receive plenty of love at the facility.

"A lot of them are in the custody of someone other than their parents," he explained. "Often their parents are still in jail."

SANFORD — The odds were against the baby.

"His mother tested positive for cocaine, the child was taken away," Ivan Williams said of the 13-month old boy of whom he and his wife Rosette have temporary custody as HRS foster parents.

"They've been his parents since he was four days old, when HRS placed the baby in their care. But it hasn't been easy.

"He doesn't sleep at night. He has been on a heart monitor and has had apnea seizures. His heart rate went down so low, we had to do CPR," Williams explained.

Rosette, an Air Force nurse currently on assignment in Texas, and Williams, studying for a master's degree in teaching the emotionally handicapped, hope to adopt the baby they have come to love.

"It's very challenging and very exciting to experience this," Williams said.

Williams shuttles the baby to his Sanford pediatrician, a neurologist, a Sanford chiropractor, a massage therapist and to the Easter Seals Early Intervention Program in DeLand. Nurses and social workers from HRS visit regularly.

"It's a learning experience every day. They don't really know because the first crop of coke babies is just hitting school," Williams said.

Mary Jane Carwell, director of Early Intervention for Easter Seals and an occupational therapist, said, although the program encompasses children from newborn to three years old with problems including spina bifida and cerebral palsy, more crack cocaine-addicted babies are being treated than ever before. The program, with centers in DeLand and Daytona, currently treats 113 children. No figures were available on the number who are crack cocaine dependent. Treatment for the children is similar, because many of the problems of crack cocaine babies are shared by babies afflicted with other syndromes.

"We don't do anything specifically different. The children receive a half hour of speech, occupational and physical therapy. Often times we've had coke babies reach their developmental level, but the long-term effects are not known yet. What is this child going to be like in fifth grade? We'll just have to wait and see," she said.

Sanford chiropractor Neil Weider is treating the baby at the parent's request.

"I've never treated a crack cocaine-addicted baby. I'm not treating the fact that he is one. I'm treating the subluxations. I let my fingers do the walking."

Foresters present check

Recently the Independent Order of Foresters presented a check to the child protection team of the Arnold Palmer Hospital located in Orlando. Presenting the check was Richard Boedicker and receiving the check was George Maynard of the foundation. Tom Baker, child protection team manager and Sherry Vaughn, CPT case coordinator, participated.

The Foresters were able to present the check due to their annual golf tournament held each year. The Foresters are a fraternal organization, with family oriented members, who do charitable work both locally and world wide. The tournament will be held this year at the Winter Springs Golf Club and anyone wishing to participate may call 331-7507 for more information. Date of the tournament is Sept. 27, and the format will be a 4-man scramble with entrance fee of only $47 per player.

Model heads for top in glamour world

By BEL FREEMAN
Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — Jennifer Hale, 17-year-old Longwood native, would ordinarily be preparing for her senior year of high school. She admits that she misses her friends, and the quiet life she led growing up in the Longwood community.

She won't be graduating with her senior class next June, but instead has left the familiar for the unknown. In Jennifer's case, the unknown has been Miami, Las Vegas, New York, Paris, Milan, Jamaica and Barbados, which she thinks is none too shabby.

In a real-life fairy tale which Jennifer says came as a surprise to her, she finds herself completing high school with a tutor while she models for such prestigious publications as Elle, Mademoiselle, Seventeen, Australian Vogue, and others. It is a world perceived as glamorous and glamorous, but Jennifer hastens to caution that the hours are long, the work is hard, and the culture shock intense.

"It's hard being away from home for long periods of time," she says.

She first entertained the idea of being a model as a result of a comment from a neighbor who happened to be a producer.

"You should be a model," he said. Her reaction: "That's cool."

Jennifer did attend modeling school but attributes her success more to the actual work experience than any specialized training. That, and sheer luck. "It was a fluke," she says.

She first tested at the age of 15 for the Wilhelmina International agency in New York, where she was spotted by Wilhelmina's executive director of recruitment, Ward Cottrell. Cottrell said he felt she had talent but was a bit young. When she returned the following year, however, the dye was cast.

It was a fluke.

-Jennifer Hale

Cottrell, now based in his home town of Winter Park, owns and operates "Modelscout, Inc.," a placement and recruiting agency for models. He finds models and puts them together with worldwide agencies such as Wilhelmina and Ford, he said. And he views Jennifer as his "top girl."

Well on her way to being a super model, Jennifer signed a one-year with three-year option contract last year with a New York modeling agency for $450,000, and she currently appears in national advertisements for Guess Jeans along with Tom Sherritt. There has been some discussion, she says, of making her the signature model for Guess Jeans.

According to Jennifer, her parents, who were skeptical at first, are very supportive now that she has proven her ability to handle herself in an adult world. She hopes to continue with modeling as her career for a minimum of 10 years, she says, and eventually wants to branch out into acting.

And is she the next Christie Brinkley?

"No," said Cottrell. "She's the next Jennifer Hale."

For more information contact Ward Cottrell at 440-1464.

The Sanford Community Workshop Choir will observe its first anniversary Saturday, August 29, with a praise service at New Bethel Baptist Church. The community is invited.

Community choir celebrates 1st anniversary

The Sanford Community Workshop Choir has been dedicated to the work of the Lord by ministering and sharing the word through song. The choir of Christian singers and musicians was begun by Mary Liggins Deboe and is directed by renowned gospel singer Vernon Jones.

The group of over 25 Christians represent the following churches throughout Sanford: New Mt. Calvary Missionary Baptist Church, Allen Chapel AME Church, Greater New Mt. Zion Baptist Church, St. John Metropolitan Baptist Church, Reddick Memorial, Shower Down of Blessings, New Bethel Baptist Church, St. James AME Church.

To observe their first anniversary, the Sanford Community Workshop Choir will celebrate beginning with a consecration praise service, Saturday, Aug. 29, 7 p.m., at New Bethel Baptist Church, East 10th St. and Hickory Ave.

The Rev. Victor Gooden of New Life Baptist Church, Daytona Beach will deliver the consecration message and music will be rendered by Choir No. 2 of New Mt. Calvary Baptist Church.

To continue the celebration of their first anniversary, the Workshop Choir will again gather for gospel praises on Sunday, Aug. 30, 5 p.m., at New Bethel Baptist Church. Special guest artists are the Gospel Truths of Orlando, Minister Marlow Smith and Jackie Brunson of Jacksonville, Luke Shumpert and One Accord with Vernon Jones and Vertella Kendrick at the piano and organ.

The community and all gospel lovers are invited to come and celebrate and give praises to the Master with this dedicated group of Christians.

Barnes advances training

Camilla Wilson Barnes has recently returned from attending a five-day advanced intensive training class which provides new modern training salon techniques. These techniques will enable Barnes to master the many specialties that her customers demand. Barnes studied at the Dudley Cosmetology University in Kernersville, N.C.

The latest styles and trends in the hair industry were learned and accomplished by the 15 students who were enrolled. Barnes says she was able to work with the different styles and products made by the Dudley Company. The class was designed to prepare the professional cosmetologist to perform as an impressive creative artist in the field of cosmetology.

Dudley Cosmetology University graduated Class No. 159 with only two students in the class of 1992 from Florida. Barnes was voted class president and was awarded the privilege of addressing the graduation class. Congratulations to Camilla Barnes for her accomplishment and for caring enough to give her customers the very best service.

Food program continues

SHARE - a self-help and resource exchange program, distributed food from the St. Luke Missionary Baptist Church, Cameron City area of Sanford. The free food program has no income limits. Anyone can purchase food packages for $13.50 after they volunteer at least two hours of community service which will benefit others.

Pastor Roosevelt Green of St. Luke said their first food distribution was held on Saturday, Aug. 15, at the church. The next sign-up date for persons wishing to use the service will be Sept. 6 at St. Luke Missionary Baptist Church, Kentucky Ave. and Jessup Ave., Sanford. For information call 323-2387.

WEDDING Smith, Wolfgang exchange vows in traditional ceremony

DAYTONA BEACH - Miss Erica Loren Smith and Mr. Mark Wallace Wolfgang were united in holy matrimony on Aug. 1, 1992, at the Garden Room, Perry's Ocean Edge Resort, Daytona Beach. Father of the bride, the Rev. Freddie Smith, performed the 1 p.m. traditional ceremony in the presence of many family members and friends. As the bride was presented to the groom, the Rev. Smith read a poem written by his wife, Vera, the bride's mother.

The bride is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Freddie Smith of Sanford. The bride is the maternal granddaughter of Mrs. Vera Scarborough, Waycross, Ga. and the late Mr. Henschel Scarborough. She is the paternal granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Smith of Sanford.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Suzanne Sheppard of Queensland, Australia and the late Mr. John L. Wolfgang Jr.

Wedding music was provided by Patti Osborn who sang "Holy Ground." Later in the ceremony, Erica sang "I Found the Love of a Lifetime" to her husband-to-be, Mark.

The bride wore a gown designed and made by her grandmother, Vera Scarborough and worn thirty years ago by the bride's mother, Vera Smith. The fitted bodice of imported Chantilly lace over bridal satin featured a scalloped neckline and long sleeves terminating in scallops at the wrist. The bouffant silk organza skirt was enhanced by lace appliques which were hand stitched by the bride's great-grandmother, Maudie Eunice, thirty years ago. One thousand seed pearls were added to the gown by the bride's mother. Four generations were involved in the beauty of the dress the bride chose to wear on her wedding day.

She carried a garden bouquet of white roses and pale pink sweetheart roses. Her veil of silk illusion was attached to a pearl and crystal tiara.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Wolfgang

Suzanne Smith, sister-in-law of the bride, was the matron of honor. She wore a tea-length, pink lace, off-the-shoulder dress. She carried a garden bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilies.

Amanda Lee Smith, niece of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore a pink lace dress with satin ribbon rosettes and carried a small basket of flowers. Matthew Wolfgang, brother of the groom, served as ring bearer.

Serving the groom as best man was his brother, Brad Wolfgang of DuBois, Pa. Serving as ushers were Scott Smith and Blake Smith, brothers of the bride.

The bride's family entertained with a reception following the ceremony in the Garden Reception Room. Serving as hostess and welcoming guests was Mrs. Sue Christensen, aunt of the bride. The wedding cake was designed and served by Mrs. Glynna Hood. She also made the groom's cake which was served by her sister, Miss Glynnda Alderman. Presiding over the punch bowl was Mrs. Jan LeRoy. Also assisting in serving were Mrs. Sue McIntosh and Mrs. Ann Settle.

After the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Wolfgang left on a wedding trip to Savannah, Ga. and then on to Virginia Beach, Va., where he is serving in the U.S. Navy.

Breakfast of champions

Students excel with variations of early meal

Now that Seminole County school students are ready to go back to class, remember that their bodies need the fuel to carry them through a successful year. Breakfast is still the most important meal of the day, especially for school-age children.

"Breakfast supplies one-fourth to one-half of the recommended daily allowance of vitamins and minerals. If you skip breakfast, it is hard to catch up during the day," said Janice Stull, Children's Nutrition Research Center nutritionist and research instructor at Baylor College of Medicine.

Mastering the three R's requires a lot of energy. Without breakfast, children are usually hungry by mid-morning. By that time, they are too cranky and too tired to concentrate on schoolwork.

Healthy breakfasts draw on several of the basic food groups. Parents can fortify their mini-schoolers by serving a dairy product, a protein, a bread or cereal, and a fruit.

However, it is okay to vary the menu and offer foods that do not fit the traditional breakfast mold. Here are some breakfast alternatives shared by some moms at Sanford Middle School that your child might like!

- Peanut butter and jelly sandwich
  - Yogurt and toast with jelly
  - Fresh fruit and cottage cheese
  - Cheese and crackers
  - Soup
  - Popcorn
  - Breakfast taco
  - Leftovers like macaroni and cheese
- Before parents rush to the store and overstock the pantry with breakfast " goodies," don't forget to read labels!

Kitchen activities

Percent of adults who say their kitchen is used for various activities besides cooking

CONSUMER FOCUS
BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

Parents may discover they are giving their children a product that has sugar, sodium, or fat as a main ingredient.

Instead of cereals with lots of sugar, try a variety of natural, whole-grain cereals.

Watch out when selecting breakfast meats also. A number of breakfast meats are marked lean or lite. They may have fewer calories, but 70 percent of those calories may come from fat. To add protein to the morning meal, try either Canadian bacon or ham that has been prepared in a non-stick skillet or microwave oven. Only 45 percent of the calories in Canadian bacon or ham come from fat.

Despite good intentions, parents may undermine efforts to start their child's day on a healthy note. Children's food choices and eating habits are influenced by the preferences of their parents, so watch what you eat also.

If Mom and Dad sip coffee and munch on doughnuts while running out the door heading for I-4 in the morning, what kind of message are they sending their child?

Parents should also include the child in menu planning, shopping, and meal preparation. The entire family needs to practice good nutrition.

NEW ARRIVAL

Melanie Kirsten Artis, Sherman and Joyce Artis, Lapeon, S.C., announce the birth of their daughter, Melanie Kirsten, on July 25, 5:01 a.m. at the Naval Hospital, Charleston, S.C. She weighed five pounds 11 1/2 ounces and was 17 inches long at birth. Maternal grandmother is Thelma Mike, Sanford. Paternal grandmother is Mary Ann Artis, Beaumont, Texas.

Weider said. Weider said he consulted with the baby's neurologist, reviewing x-rays. "One of the problems was his skull bones were solidifying prematurely. They had contemplated sawing the skull," Weider said. Weider said he strives for as much nerve supply to flow through the boy's body by manipulating the skull to keep it flexible. Williams said it is his belief that the variety of doctors the boy sees and the massage therapy he receives are helping. "He still wakes up screaming and he is very, very needy. He needs attention and he suffers extreme anxiety if you leave the room. But it's better. I can see it's better. And we love the little guy," Williams said. The Williams' four other children, three of whom are at home, have welcomed the baby into the family. "It's a family effort. If it hadn't been for the children, I don't know how we would do it. Ian, Renete and Saasha have really been helping. Saasha, my seven-year-old, is just like a little mother," Williams proudly said. For one little boy with a shaky start in life, the odds are finally shifting. EDITOR'S NOTE: Rules for protective custody stipulate that the baby in the following story not be named and not be photographed clearly enough to be identified.

Workaholic husband needs to work on own marriage

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are second-time-arounders. I have never seen such stability and tranquility in a marriage.

There is only one problem: I am bored stiff! When we dated, he took me out to dinner and to movies, and we had a great time, but now all he thinks of is work.

I carry his dinner to his office so he can work straight through. He eats in five minutes, thanks me, and goes back to work. When he comes home it's bedtime, and he is too tired for anything but sleep.

He works all weekend. We never go out for dinner or to a movie anymore. He says it's too expensive, which is ridiculous because we can certainly afford it.

His health is fine. (He had the company doctor examine him; that way he didn't have to pay the bill.)

I am young and pretty and full of life, but I am lonely. He says if I want to see a movie I should go without him, but it's no fun going alone.

I can just see myself 10 years from now getting a divorce. Can you help me?

FRUSTRATED
DEAR FRUSTRATED: Fill in that communication gap with some straight talk. He's using his "work" as an excuse to isolate himself. Insist on counseling. And if he ducks that, you go alone. Your frustration could lead to something worse than boredom.

DEAR ABBY: A neighbor of mine loves to sew, and she has made some lovely things. She made a beautiful dress and bonnet for my daughter's fourth birthday, so I took the child to a photography studio and had a picture taken of her in that outfit. Then I bought a frame for it and presented it to my neighbor to show my appreciation.

She seemed pleased and placed the picture on her piano. A few months later, I noticed that she had placed a picture of her dog in that frame, and my daughter's picture was nowhere to be seen. I finally told her that as long as she wasn't displaying my daughter's picture, I'd like to have it back. She said, "Certainly." Then she got my daughter's picture out of a drawer and handed it to me.

I said, "How about the frame?" She replied, "Oh, you can buy another one for 75 cents."

Abby, I was so hurt. That frame cost me $1.50. I didn't want to start an argument with her, so I just kept my mouth shut.

What would you have done?
HURT
DEAR HURT: I'd have kept my mouth shut.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FEBRUARY BRIDES": A good marriage isn't a matter of luck. It's the result of a conscious and constant effort. It's giving and forgiving, knowing when to talk and when to keep quiet. All marriages are beautiful. It's the living together afterward that's difficult.

DEAR ABBY: Mine is a very embarrassing problem. I am a 20-year-old college junior at a large university. For a while I dated what seemed to be a nice guy I'll call Bill. He attends the same "U," and is an art major. Bill took some harmless photographs of me on the beach in my two-piece bathing suit last summer. After that, I sort of broke off with Bill and started seeing another fellow.

I recently learned through friends that Bill is painting a nude portrait of me, using as a model the pictures he took of me in the bathing suit. Of course, he's using his imagination, but I don't like the idea. He's planning to use this "nude" portrait of me in an art exhibit. I do have a great body, but I don't want half the world seeing me naked, in addition to which I don't want people to think that I am the kind of girl who would pose for a picture like that. It could destroy my reputation. Is there anything I can do to stop him?

ADVICE

NO NUDE MODEL
DEAR NO NUDE: Since it's your "great body" Bill wants to immortalize on canvas, ask him to please use somebody else's face. If he refuses, ask him to please leave the suit on, or you will see a lawyer about bringing another kind of "suit" into the picture.

DEAR ABBY: Here is the situation: A man in his middle 80s and a woman in her early 80s have recently married. She was the town's most attractive widow for many years. The man's wife had been dead exactly seven months to the day he remarried.

I always thought that out of respect to the dear departed mate, it was customary to wait a full year before remarrying. I would appreciate your opinion.

KNOWS BOTE
DEAR KNOWS: How one treats his mate when he (or she) is living is the only meaningful way in which one can show "respect." And waiting one year (or 10) isn't going to make one bit of difference. Time is precious. And if two people feel they can find happiness together, who am I to count the days since their dear ones have departed? (And who are you?)

DEAR ABBY: I know a man who took his wife and recently widowed sister-in-law to a baseball game. No sooner had the three of them sat down in their reserved seats when in came a gentleman and his young

By Bernice Bode Cool YOUR BIRTHDAY Aug. 23, 1992

Your circle of friends and acquaintances will be substantially enhanced in the year ahead. Each new group of people you'll become involved with will serve as a contributor in some pleasant manner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Friendships will take on greater significance at this time, as pals begin to play more active roles in your affairs. Their input should be constructive. Virgo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Virgo's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your probabilities for achieving your objectives are quite good, owing to your ambitious efforts, as well as those of others working on your behalf. It's a dynamic alignment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your ideas could be of considerable benefit to friends at this time. Don't be reluctant to offer suggestions, even if they're unsolicited.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Over the coming weeks, you could do quite well where joint ventures are concerned. You provide the leadership, and let your counterpart equal your contribution in other ways.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Alliances you enter into now have excellent chances for both success and endurance. Don't do alone what can be done better with a competent ally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something you've been quietly developing should be brought out into the open at this time. You're at a point where you need the cooperation and support of others.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Individuals you're presently involved with socially could prove to be the best ones to help you advance your ambitious yearnings. Go to them first.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Tasks you've been putting off because you felt they were too arduous won't be nearly as threatening as you anticipated.

By Bernice Bode Cool YOUR BIRTHDAY Aug. 24, 1992

Several important old relationships might be revived and revitalized in the year ahead. These trustworthy friends will play constructive roles in your affairs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be tolerant and forgiving in your involvements with friends today. When you disregard their shortcomings, you make it possible for them to overlook yours.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A critical objective can be achieved today, but it might not be easy. Lady Luck will intervene, provided she sees you're doing the best you can.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You could be fortunate today in fulfilling your hopes and expectations, but not necessarily along the lines you initially envisioned. Unusual developments may cause you to scrap original plans.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Sometimes, we turn out to be the victor in a situation where we initially appear to be the vanquished. Keep this in mind if you take a beating in the early rounds.

WHAT AT ENDS

By Phillip Alder

There was an amusing story in the June issue of New Zealand Bridge. North opened one heart. South immediately asked for aces and then bid seven no-trump. As he tabled his dummy, North said: "I'm sorry, partner. I think I've underbid my hand."

Today's deal was also in the magazine. After East opened with a weak no-trump and South made a penalty double, West's redouble announced a weak one-suited hand. Doubling two hearts would work well, probably netting 500, but North-South didn't have the methods to accomplish this.

Against three no-trump, West led the heart queen. When declarer ducked, West might have found the fatal club-nine switch, but he continued with his low heart to dummy's king. Declarer finessed the diamond

If you attempt them today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An improvement is indicated at this time where your social life is concerned. Momentum should begin to pick up as of today. Have fun and enjoy yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Conditions that influence your financial well-being are taking a turn for the better at this time. This is because Lady Luck will be playing a more active hand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Everything can be negotiated, so, if you have a difficult agreement to hammer out today, be flexible. The other guy will be looking for compromises, too.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Do not get involved in company politics today where your work is concerned; it could turn out to be counterproductive. You may lose in the process.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you don't match your productivity to the clock today, you won't achieve what you set out to do. You may not have as much time as you think you do.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) What's good for you today might not be as equally rewarding for other family members. Don't fight to have your way if you want what has detrimental side effects.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Lady Luck has her eye on you today, but you might not feel the full impact of her contribution until later. Leave room for her to squeeze into the picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be careful and prudent in your financial affairs today; think before you act. Should you reverse this order, you might not be able to clean up your mistakes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you're negotiating a matter of importance today, don't be hasty about accepting what is offered first. You may not get an optimum deal, but you can improve your position.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Something you'll work very hard at today might not live up to your expectations. On the other hand, something you devote a small effort to may turn out to be quite rewarding.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're in a good cycle for promoting situations that can advance your personal interests. Be they esthetic or material. Try to operate in both areas.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could be rather fortunate financially at this time, without having to expend too much effort. However, this does not mean you should leave everything up to chance.

IN BRIEF

David appointed to hospital staff

BANFORD — HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital has announced the appointment of William J. David, M.D., to its medical staff. Dr. David is a cardiologist and has joined the practice of Lawrence Vallario, M.D., at Sanford Cardiology Associates.

David recently completed a three-year cardiology fellowship at Cabrini Medical Center at the New York Hospital, Cornell Medical Center. He is a member of the American College of Physicians, the American College of Cardiology and the American Medical Association.

William J. David, M.D.

He was raised in Central Florida and attended the University of Central Florida for his undergraduate degree. He completed his education with an internship and residency at LaGuardia Hospital, New York. He returned to the Sanford area to practice medicine and to be close to his parents in Deltona. He and his wife, Elaine, live in Longwood.

Gallery admission to benefit MDA

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — World renowned artist Markus Pierson, known for his series of coyote images that portray a romantic, carefree life, will be at the Metropolis Gallery, 355 E. Altamonte Dr., on Thursday from 6-10 p.m.

The gallery is hosting the reception and donating a percentage of all sales from Aug. 25 thru Sept. 25 to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

For information contact the gallery at 678-2004 or MDA at 677-8865.

Heartsaver CPR class offered

BANFORD — HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital, in cooperation with CPR for Citizens, is offering Heartsaver CPR classes. The next scheduled class is on Monday from 6-10 p.m. in the hospital's classroom.

The Heartsaver class teaches the participant one-person rescue and first aid for choking victims. In addition, the class provides information on prevention of heart disease and how to recognize and care for a heart attack victim. Participants who pass the course will receive Heartsaver CPR cards from the American Heart Association.

The cost of the class is $15 per person ($14 for seniors) and registration is requested.

For more information and to register for the class, call CPR for Citizens, 678-4CPR (678-4277).

Chocolate for children

Hershey Chocolate U.S.A., a national sponsor of the Children's Miracle Network (CMN) recently announced a refund offer that benefits Shands Hospital at the University of Florida.

The company will give the Children's Miracle Network affiliated hospitals five cents for each UPC bar code from any Hershey's candy bar weighing one ounce or larger, including standard, king, large, giant and fund raising size candy bars.

The refund offer is scheduled to run until Oct. 31. To participate, return your proofs-of-purchase (bar codes) from Hershey wrappers to Shands Hospital, Community Relations Department, P.O. Box 100386, Gainesville, FL 32610 by Oct. 25. There is no limit to the number of wrappers that can be returned.

Rehab support group sets meeting

BANFORD — The HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital Cardiopulmonary Rehabilitation Support Group will meet on Wednesday from 9-10 a.m. The group is free and open to the public and meets each month in the Cardiopulmonary Rehabilitation Center classroom, suite 211, of the Medical Arts Center behind the hospital.

This month, Leland Mitchell, AART, will speak on "Heart Catheterization and Coronary Angioplasty." Mitchell is a registered radiologic technologist in the Cardiac Catheterization lab. He will explain the procedure of a cardiac cath.

For more information, call the rehab center at 321-4500 ext. 5160.

Lyme disease treatment reviewed

From staff and wire reports

BOSTON — People who are bitten by infectious ticks in areas where Lyme disease is common should seek treatment even if they don't show any symptoms of the illness, a new study suggests.

But where Lyme disease is rare, such as in the state of Florida, patients should be treated only after developing symptoms because the likelihood of side effects from medicine outweighs the smaller risk of illness, researchers said.

The State of Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services first started soliciting case reports on Lyme disease patients in 1990. In February of this year, it was made a mandatory reportable disease under the Florida Administrative Code.

Since 1990, 102 cases of Lyme disease have been reported in Florida. Of these, only 39 have met the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) surveillance case definition. Nineteen of these 39 were clearly acquired out of state, while the remaining 30 may have been acquired in Florida, according to HRS.

The yearlong study, reported in the New England Journal of Medicine, was launched at the University of Pennsylvania in 1990, largely to dispel public alarm about the disease.

Lyme disease is not currently considered an endemic disease

in Florida, as the "Borrelia burgdorferi" bacterium, the causative agent, has never been cultured from a local tick or from a Florida resident, according to HRS.

Nevertheless, residents are advised to take precautions when in tick-infested areas and when removing ticks from themselves, their pets, and others. If tick-infested areas cannot be avoided, light-colored clothing covering the legs and arms is recommended, with pants tucked into socks and a tick repellent (such as DEET or permethrin) applied to pant legs and sleeves. After every 3-4 hours in an infested area, a total body search should be made for attached ticks.

Ticks should be removed promptly and carefully without crushing, using gentle steady traction with tweezers applied close to the skin. Hands should be protected by gloves, cloth, or tissue when removing ticks from man or animals. A small area of redness is common after a tick bite, but any expanding rash should be seen by a physician.

Physicians treating patients with an expanding rash, are urged to contact their HRS County Public Health Unit to arrange for culture by CDC.

Lyme disease causes fever, rashes and headaches and in later stages, arthritis and heart damage. It is common in parts of several Northeastern states, including Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York.

The disease can be treated effectively with two antibiotics, doxycycline and amoxicillin. Both drugs, however, sometimes produce side effects such as nausea and diarrhea.

Donations benefit Spina Bifida children

The Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children and Women recently received notice of two grants from Ronald McDonald Children's Charities of Central Florida.

The first grant of $31,820 will allow the hospital to purchase a neurosurgical color video system, which will enable pediatric neurosurgeons to perform delicate procedures of the skull, spine and nerves by giving a clear view of the area on a high definition color screen.

The second grant, in the amount of $26,000, will enable the hospital to purchase additional equipment for the hospital's new bladder stimulation program.

Through a series of electrical stimulation treatments of the bladder, patients with Spina Bifida, spinal cord injuries and other neuro-muscular conditions can potentially gain urinary continence.

One of only eight programs in the U.S., the program began in June 1991 and already 50 children have experienced significant success. Over 100 patients who could possibly benefit from this program are on a waiting list.

Founded in 1984 in memory of McDonald's founder, Ray A. Kroc, Ronald McDonald Children's Charities awards grants to organizations helping children live happier, healthier and more productive lives.

The hospital is a 255-bed not-for-profit hospital dedicated to the care of children and women. It has one of the largest Spina Bifida centers in the state of Florida.

Polio group to meet

Post-Polio Support Group of Central Florida meets the first Saturday of each month at 3 p.m. at the Center for Independent Living, 720 N. Denning Dr., Winter Park. For further details call 649-0790.

Hospital accredited by AABB

BANFORD — HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital has been granted renewal of accreditation by the American Association of Blood Banks (AABB), according to Roy C. Vinson, administrator.

Accreditation follows an on-site inspection by specially trained representatives of the association and establishes that the level of medical, technical and administrative performance within the facility meets or exceeds the standards set by the AABB. By successfully meeting those requirements, the hospital joins more than 2,000 similar facilities across the U.S. and abroad that have earned the accreditation.

"The AABB's inspection and accreditation procedures are voluntary," Vinson explained. "CFRH has sought AABB accreditation because this program assists facilities around the country in achieving excellence by promoting a level of professional and medical expertise that contributes to quality performance."

The minimum requirements for accreditation of blood banks and transfusion services are based primarily on the AABB's "Standards for Blood Banks and Transfusion Services."

Don't lose your job because of your hearing. If you have a particular problem because of a hearing loss, there may be a new product called assistive listening devices that can help you hear in these difficult situations.

*****
If you must talk on the telephone a great deal of the time, you should point this out to your dispenser before a new hearing aid is ordered. Special circuits are now available to make hearing aids and telephones more compatible.

*****
Question - What makes an ear? Answer - It's really quite simple. Sound will bounce off of any hard surface. If you call out toward a hard wall directly in front of you at a distance of thirty feet or more, you will hear your voice "bounce" back or echo.

Authorities pronounce blood supply safe

By PAUL ROSEN
AP Science Writer

BETHESDA, Md. — America's blood supply is not threatened by a possible new AIDS virus and is as safe as it has ever been, health officials said Tuesday.

"Currently there is insufficient evidence to change the operation of our blood programs," said Peter Tomasulo, the head of the American Red Cross, the nation's largest blood processing organization.

Red Cross officials and executives of other blood banking organizations met with experts from the Centers for Disease Control to discuss research that has uncovered patients who have low counts of immune cells — a characteristic of AIDS — but who are not infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, that causes AIDS.

CDC officials said the AIDS-like symptoms are based on a measure of T-4 lymphocytes.

Currently there is insufficient evidence to change the operation of our blood programs.

-Peter Tomasulo

They defined the syndrome, idiopathic CD-4 T-lymphocytopenia, or ICL, as occurring in people who have cell counts below 300, are negative for HIV infection, and have received no therapy that is normally associated with T-cell depletion.

Thomas Spira, a CDC medical officer, said the 30 cases of ICL that have been found in the United States are scattered among 15 states, involve individuals ages 18 to more than 70, and include people who have had a variety of illnesses, none of which are AIDS.

He said nine of these patients have been interviewed. Contacts with three of them have been tested, and all are HIV-negative.

The contacts would include sexual partners, parents or household members.

Dr. June Osborn, chairman of the National Commission on AIDS and organizer of Tuesday's meeting, said the studies thus far "have been very reassuring."

"The blood supply is very secure," said Osborn. "We don't have anything that would resemble an epidemic."

CDC said there has been no evidence of any virus associated with any of the ICL patients, but further studies are being conducted.

Tomasulo and officials of other blood bank organizations agreed to cooperate with CDC studies by taking blood samples from patients identified as having ICL. The blood bank officials also said they would check the medical histories of these people to determine if they have either donated blood in the past or received transfusions.

CDC and blood bank officials agreed to meet at a later time to work out specific details of these studies.

HERNIA REPAIR...
It's simpler now.

Hernia repair used to be considered major surgery, but no longer. Today, it can be as simple as a one-day "walk-in, walk-out" procedure. Prompt and cost effective.

For a new or recurrent hernia, we use a mesh technique that speeds recovery, lessens pain and reduces recurrences.

The Hernia Center of Central Florida is operated by Surgical Associates — an established team of skilled surgeons who have practiced in Central Florida since 1973 and have performed literally thousands of hernia operations.

Three convenient locations: Winter Park, Maitland and Oviedo. For an appointment, call us at (407) 647-3727.
