One boy's tragic death was gift of life for another

By SUSAN WENNER
 Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — The year 1992 began as a seemingly normal year for the Medlock family. Later, that year it became what some parents might see as a nightmare.
 In the eyes of this faithful household their experience was simply a way to be a testimony for God, Michael Sr. told his son after the shocking news in mid-December that Michael Jr., 15, had cirrhosis of the liver.
 It all began when Adrienne, Michael Jr.'s mother, noticed that he was coming home from school very sluggish and napping for long periods of time after returning from school. At this age, everyone knows it's hard to keep them home much less asleep. His mother also noted that his stomach seemed to protrude much more than normal. "Sammy Davis came to my heart because of his bloated stomach and people thought he was looking good because he had put on some weight," she said. "I knew that my son shouldn't be going around with yellow eyes and yellow fingers." She actively pursued counsel with their doctors until they finally agreed to run some x-rays, tests and blood work. The doctor found some nodules in his stomach and an enzyme in his blood, bilirubin, was elevated much more than normal. They were convinced there was a problem with his liver. Michael Jr. had broken his jaw about four years before this time. He had lost a lot of blood therefore requiring a blood transfusion. Specialists were sure that the blood must have been tainted with the hepatitis virus.

County fair

Seminole's first: Something for everyone, organizers say

By VICKI DeSORMIER
 Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County may be one of the few counties in the country that doesn't have its own county fair.
 Until now.
 On Feb. 24, the first fair will open at Seminole Greyhound Park near Casselberry.
 Gregory and Patty Bean started two years ago to plan for a fair that includes a midway and showcases Seminole County's highlights.
 Gregory Bean has been a manager at both the Martin County Fair and the South Florida Fair. He also organized rodeos for a dozen years.
 Bean admitted that when he was approached by the state Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services to start up the fair his first reaction was "What's wrong with that county that it doesn't already have a fair?"

 He said, however, that the more he looks around the county, it looks "better and better and better."
 County fairs, he said, are supposed to showcase local advancements in technology, in education, in agriculture and in horticulture.
 "Seminole County has some pretty exciting advancements," he said. "Especially in education. A lot of people don't know that a few miles from the site of the fair (at Lyman High School) where students are learning landscape architecture and animation. And at Seminole High there is that health academy that is an amazing program."
 Bean said the 157-acre site is almost completely paved and includes modern, indoor plumbing facilities. There is a lighted, com-

SANFORD — The parents of a Lakeview Middle School student have sued the Seminole County School Board and a teacher for damages over a May classroom incident during which they claim their son was injured.

An attorney for Pete and Jane Meadows and their son, Chyle Andrew Meadows filed suit against the school board and Albert Lewis.
 The plaintiffs allege on May 4, their son was in a 7th grade geography class taught by Lewis. The plaintiffs claim Lewis lifted and flipped over a desk where Meadows

During the course of the months that followed the initial diagnosis, many conversations transpired in the home.
 Adrienne said, "I remember one day he asked why people cry when other people die? He told me you will miss them but you will die sometime too. He spoke that death is like a peanut shell, your flesh, but the meat is your soul. He also spoke of life being like a flower. You plant a seed, but the seed must die in order to have a bud. No one knows when it dies but in turn you have a bloom and hearts are healed because a beautiful flower appears."

 Michael Jr. went on about his life and daily attended school. He was being monitored monthly by his doctor and every couple of months by Shands Hospital in Gainesville. By March of 1993 he was put on the transplant list at Shands. Still continuing his class schedule he gradually began to weaken and on Oct. 14, 1993, the serious symptoms the doctors had warned the Medlocks about had begun. "He began bleeding in his mouth and his eyes were very jaundiced," she

Cuban exile groups plan election

TAMPA — Cuban exiles, many who have not cast a vote since Fidel Castro took control of their homeland more than 35 years ago, are planning a symbolic election to unite the community.

"This is wonderful," said Angela Gonzalez, who fled Cuba in 1968. "This is very important for me. I will be able to vote for the first time since I left my country and for someone that I choose to represent me."

Remember Maceo Gomez, an educator and co-organizer, said Monday at a meeting of the Cuban Civic Club that the elections will serve to unite the exile community.

"For us to be able to accomplish something like this makes me very happy," Maceo Gomez said. "When the time comes to return to Cuba, we can't be divided."

The Feb. 26 elections will produce five officials — three representatives who will each serve two-year terms, and two alternates. Those officials will represent the Tampa Bay area's Cuban exile community at local and national gatherings.

Ten representatives — all Cuban exiles — make up an electoral commission organizing the elections. More than a dozen Cuban groups are involved in the effort.

Public access program cancelled

TAMPA — The producer of a public access cable program has been suspended and the program temporarily cancelled after a few seconds of graphic sexual intercourse was televised.

Jones Intercable of Tampa on Monday suspended Troy Mustal for a year for "violating rules and procedures of public access programming on the show, 'Really Live on Tape.'"

The weekly series features nude women, exotic dangers and clips from some adult films. Officials with Jones Intercable decided the programming went too far on Thursday, when the episode showed a sexual intercourse.

"We want to make it clear that we're taking this action because it's a violation of our procedures and not because we're making a judgment about whether the program was obscene," said Bill Schrieker, director of public access programming for Jones.

The state attorney's office will be notified of the program, but Schrieker said "it will be up to them whether they decide to pursue it."

During the "Live on Tape" program, Mustal, who is responsible for the show's content, and co-host Jeremy Owens told viewers the sex scene was shown by mistake. Neither could be reached for comment Monday.

Investigators rule arson in restaurant fire

TIERRA VERDE — Investigators said a fire which caused $800,000 damage at a popular seafood restaurant here was the work of an arsonist.

Billy's Tierra Verde Seafood Co. was engulfed in flames early Monday morning. A sheriff's deputy patrolling the area discovered smoke and alerted firefighters.

No arrests had been made by late Monday. A joint assessment by the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office, the state fire marshal and the St. Petersburg Fire Department estimated damages at $800,000, said Lt. Tom Young of the St. Petersburg Fire Department.

"There's no way someone could start with what's there and build up," Young said. "We saw the structure as being a total loss."

About 350 to 400 people patronized the restaurant on weekdays and about 500 on weekends, said general manager Billy Modre. It was "really a going place," he said.

The property is owned by Transcontinental Financial, he said.

Lotto winner saved ticket for Christmas

TALLAHASSEE — Johnnie Mosley knew she had won more than $15 million in the lottery, but she waited almost four months to tell anyone.

On Christmas morning after all the other presents were opened, the Melbourne woman gave her husband a school folder and told him, "This is the best I can do."

The folder contained a copy of the winning Florida Lotto ticket worth $15.7 million and local newspaper clippings detailing the four-month search for the mysterious winner.

"I didn't put it under the tree," Mrs. Mosley told lottery officials Monday as she and her family presented their winning ticket. "I kept it hidden and then I walked up and handed it to him and said 'This is the best I can do this year. I love you.'"

Mrs. Mosley, 43, a salon manager and hair stylist, had quietly left the ticket in a safety deposit box at her bank and continued on as normal.

The Mosleys will receive $789,000 annually for 20 years. "My dad thought it was a joke at first," said the Mosleys' 15-year-old son, Mike. "But when my mom told him it wasn't, that she had the real ticket in a safe deposit box, everyone started jumping up and down. Then my dad started crying. We all started crying. Then we were all dancing around."

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Commissioner Jamerson sworn in

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — As Florida's new education commissioner, Doug Jamerson promised to continue pushing the education reforms he has championed as a state legislator for the past 11 years.

As a lawmaker, Jamerson pushed the reforms known as education accountability that transfer the power over local schools from the Legislature to teachers, parents and administrators.

At his swearing in Monday, Jamerson said he plans to redefine the role of the state Department of Education to give further responsibilities to those directly involved in local school districts.

"We cannot win the race to the future shackled to some of our current education programs," he said. "We cannot win that race held back by horse and buggy programs."

But Jamerson also gave his support to employees at the education department, an agency frequently criticized by lawmakers as a bloated government bureaucracy that has hampered local school districts.

"The real truth is, however, that no group of workers are as dedicated, committed and caring," he said. "And time after time again, they've had to react to law after law and the rules and regulations required by those laws, implementing one law shortly before another has passed, which has weighed the system down and which has caused great disarrayment."

About 350 lawmakers, lobbyists, educators and students watched as U.S. Circuit Judge Joseph Hatchett of St. Petersburg gave the oath of office to Jamerson, who becomes the second black Cabinet member in this century and the third in Florida history.

Gov. Lawton Chiles appointed Jamerson, 46, to complete the unexpired term of Betty Castor, who was named president of the University of South Florida in Tampa.

Jamerson already has announced his plans to seek election to the $94,040-a-year post in 1994.

The swearing-in ceremony was held at Cobb Middle School, the oldest middle school in Tallahassee at 41. It was symbolic of the governor's proposal to keep middle schools open into the evenings to give students an alternative environment to the streets.

"It's fitting we should be where the power should start," Chiles said. "It doesn't start in big buildings in Tallahassee. It starts in the schools."

Jamerson, a teacher for 17 years, served as the assistant to the director of St. Petersburg Junior College's criminal justice institute. He was first elected to the Florida House in 1982 from St. Petersburg. Like Chiles and Castor, Jamerson is a Democrat.

Jamerson follows black Cabinet members Jesse McCrary, who was named secretary of state in 1978, and Jonathan Gibbs, who became secretary of state in 1968.

Drop-out program puts teens with disabled children

By Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — Potential high-school dropouts are being teamed with disabled children to raise their self-esteem and keep them in class.

"This really jars them and unsettles them," project coordinator Bruce Delaney says of the potential dropouts. "It provokes them to think about the quality of their lives. They begin to realize that other children's problems may be greater than their own."

Ten "at-risk" high school students from P.K. Yonge Laboratory School at the University of Florida are spending Monday mornings at Alachua County's Sidney Lanier Center, feeding, teaching and playing with moderately and severely disabled children.

Surveys of the nine students who participated in the program last year and analysis of their weekly journals indicate they felt better about school and about themselves.

The survey showed 88 percent of the students felt they were average and 11 percent felt they were above average before participating in the program. After completing the program, 55 percent felt they were average and 44 percent felt they were above average.

Seven of the students' grade point averages improved, and the number of failing grades fell by 50 percent.

Wea Corbett, assistant director of P.K. Yonge, said helping the disabled children complete routine activities, such as eating and getting dressed, gives the students a sense of self-worth and accomplishment.

"This program has a powerful emotional impact on the people involved," Corbett said. "The students not only get to help their community, but they have an opportunity to see how they influence those they are helping."

Group reorganizes for busy time in court for 1994

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — The ACLU is reorganizing and reinforcing for a busy 1994, defending Floridians who claim their civil rights have been violated by government agencies.

The American Civil Liberties Union also wants the public to more clearly understand its mission.

"We are perceived as a liberal organization," said Chairman Alan Lunin of the Central Florida ACLU chapter.

"We are only liberal in the sense we believe civil rights and civil liberties are absolute and you don't tread of them. Part of our biggest challenge is to try to explain to people... we are evenhanded."

In the Orlando area, the 555-member chapter is strengthening its clout by organizing volunteer lawyers into a legal panel that will plan case strategy and pool resources.

The time for civil liberties battles is ripe, Lunin said, because the Florida Supreme Court recently has grown more "friendly" to civil rights claims. He admits, however, the public may feel differently.

The group has strong critics.

"The ACLU has an agenda," said John Dowless, state field director for the Christian Coalition of Florida. "In the opinion of most, it's not for civil liberties."

"It's a very liberal agenda in opposition to those who espouse the Christian faith. The ACLU is anything but mainstream," added Dowless.

The religious community is growing more active in court to counter the ACLU, he said.

A 1988 Mazda was reportedly stolen Thursday in the 400 block of Sunlake Circle in Sun Lake Apartments. The vehicle was later reported found in Orange County.

A semi tractor-trailer was reportedly burglarized Thursday, parked in the 2000 block of Alexander Avenue. Deputies said exhaust pipes valued at $850 were taken, with $150 damage done to the cab.

A 357 revolver valued at $175 was discovered stolen between Oct. 31 and Dec. 20, from a residence in the 3000 block of Main Street.

Two mountain bikes valued at $800 were reportedly stolen Sunday from the porch of a residence in the 500 block of Silvergate Loop, near Lake Mary.

Incidents reported to Sanford police

A 1993 Dodge pickup truck was reported stolen Sunday from Carriage Cove Way. Police said the burglar apparently removed a VCR and stereo from the residence as well.

A blue and gray 1985 Chrysler Fifth Avenue was reported stolen Saturday from the 900 block of W. 11th Street.

$1,500 in property was reportedly stolen Sunday from a 1988 Ford parked on Rachel Avenue in Regatta Shores Apartments.

$740 in items were reported missing Sunday from a carport in the 2400 block of Chase Avenue.

A church truck, (used to wheel coffins) was reportedly stolen on Dec. 29 from Brissan Funeral Home, 905 Laurel Avenue.

Speakers valued at $100 and $5 in candy canes were reported stolen Saturday from a residence in the 700 block of Roscliff Circle.

A residential burglary was reported Saturday in the 100 block of Country Club Circle. No immediate list of any items taken was available.

Three pellets were reportedly shot into a mobile home Saturday on Carriage Cove Way.

A business burglary was reported Saturday in the 1500 block of S. French Avenue. Police said an alarm was set off, which possibly frightened the burglar.

$600 annual fee for gun dealers?

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration wants to charge gun dealers $600 a year for a firearms license to discourage all but legitimate businesses from obtaining the permits, congressional and administration sources say.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen was scheduled to unveil the proposal today as part of a broader legislative package to place firearms dealers under tighter regulatory control, said the officials, who spoke Monday on condition of anonymity.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms estimates that increasing the fee to $600 would prompt 80 percent of the nation's 244,000 dealers to drop their licenses, an administration official said. ATF now employs 240 inspectors who process licenses and visit dealers to ensure compliance with federal laws.

A vast majority of dealers are people who sell guns from their homes on an infrequent basis and who obtained the license to enable them to purchase weapons at deep discounts from wholesalers. Licensed dealers are also free of legal restrictions imposed by state gun laws and can order weapons to be shipped to them across state lines.

For 25 years, the licensing fee was $30 for three years. The fee was raised recently to $200 for a new three-year license and $90 for the three-year renewal of a valid license.

The increase was contained in the recently enacted Brady gun control act that imposes a five-day waiting period and background checks on handgun purchases.

Bentsen also will support pending legislation to lift a provision in current law that prohibits ATF from inspecting a dealer more than once a year.

Bentsen said in an interview last month that the Treasury Department was studying a proposal to sharply raise the gun dealers' licensing fee.

"It makes no sense at all ... to have a very minimum payment where you have people even operating out of their kitchens," Bentsen told The Associated Press.

National Rifle Association lobbyist Joe Phillips said the proposed fee was "entirely unjustified" and about five times the actual cost of issuing the permit.

"What Secretary Bentsen is doing is just another example of attempting to recover the cost of criminal investigations by jacking up the price the law-abiding firearms dealers have to pay," Phillips said.

"Most federal firearms dealers are not criminals; most are law-abiding dealers," Phillips said.

Law enforcement officials say, however, that dealers who operate informally are believed to be the source of many weapons bought by criminals.

The secretary also is planning to propose an increase in the number of ATF officials who process applications to enable closer scrutiny of the 3,000 people who seek a dealer's license each month, the administration official said.

He also will announce plans to upgrade ATF's computerized record-keeping system for collecting and storing firearms data, the official said.

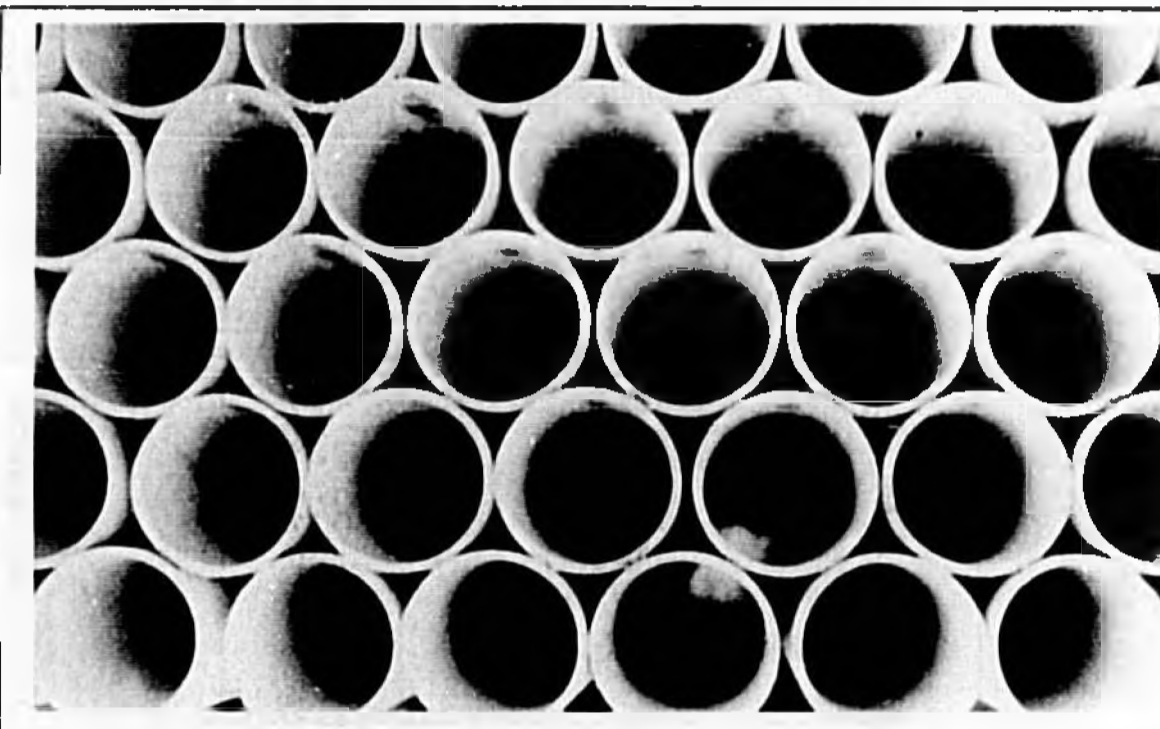

Another legislative proposal Bentsen will announce would require dealers to provide ATF upon request with information when agents are trying to trace weapons involved in crimes.

Current law does not include such a requirement, though most legitimate gun dealers cooperate with ATF, officials say.

Bentsen also will propose legislation requiring firearms dealers to comply with state and local laws.

ATF currently does not have the power to revoke or withhold a license if it determines that a dealer is flouting local ordinances, such as zoning laws that prohibit the operation of a business in a residential neighborhood or a gun dealership near a school. It can only report such violations to local authorities.

The administration proposal would strengthen a similar provision passed by the Senate as part of broader anti-crime legislation that is pending in Congress, the administration official said.

Video game makers close to labeling system

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Video game makers say they're moving quickly to mollify parents alarmed by the sight of Junior zapping bloodsucking vampires and homicidal martial arts warriors off the TV screen.

Manufacturers' representatives, under growing pressure from Congress to voluntarily start a rating system, are meeting in Las Vegas to begin work on a labeling system.

The Jan. 8 meeting, which is to be held under the auspices of the Software Publishers Association, follows a threat by lawmakers to pass legislation that would impose such a system on the industry.

During recent testimony to the Senate, the software association promised the industry that it would take action on its own.

"We welcome this weekend's meeting," said Richard Brudvik-Lindner of Sega of America, one of the leading makers of home video entertainment. "We can fashion a system that enables consumers to make informed decisions in a growing, competitive marketplace."

He said Sega has put ratings, assigned by a panel of educators and child psychologists, on new titles since August.

"We hope it serves as a model for an industry-wide rating system that gives parents the guidance they want or need about the age appropriateness and content of home video games," said Brudvik-Lindner.

Two games distributed by Sega and others have been singled out for attack by lawmakers for depictions of particularly gruesome violence.

In one of them, "Mortal Kombat," martial arts warriors kill their victims by ripping out their hearts, spinal columns and heads.

In another, "Night Trap," scantily clad sorority sisters are shown in live-action video as they're being stalked by bloodsucking villains. The creator of that game, Tom Zito of Digital Pictures Inc., said it has been misinterpreted by lawmakers who don't understand that it is a parody on low-budget horror movies of the 1950s.

Its villains are a vampire and his high-tech henchmen who have entered an old winery that has been converted to a hotel. There, they try to capture hotel guests and drain their blood.

The player's job is to trap the black-suited ghouls by activating trap doors as they stalk their victims.

"Frankly, I don't want anyone under the age of 17 to buy it," Zito wrote in a Washington Post op-ed column defending his game from lawmakers' criticism.

He said he has sold 100,000 copies of the game in the United States without a single letter of complaint. "Almost all warranty cards returned were from individuals between the ages of 18 and 25," he said.

"The senators seem to think video games are just for kids and that we at Digital Pictures want to contribute to the corruption of minors," he said. "But the Atari Generation has grown up."

Sens. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., and Herb Kohl, D-Wis., introduced legislation that would give the industry a year to come up with its own system before a federal one would go into effect. Hearings have been held but no votes have taken place.

It's thrust, however, is similar to the attack in both the House and Senate on TV violence. Nine bills are pending that would restrict dramatized murder and mayhem on television.

Cheers to those who didn't drink and drive

It looks like they've finally gotten the message.

It's obvious those who drink and then get behind the wheel of a car pose a danger to themselves. They are also a detriment to innocents who might cross their path. They have finally learned. It would seem, that it's not worth it.

Law enforcement officials reported that only five people were arrested for driving under the influence this New Year's Eve.

No one was killed in auto accidents in the county while one year slipped into the next.

Both of these are good signs.

The new state law that lowered the limit for legal intoxication probably convinced many who may have previously thought they'd be "sober enough" to drive that they'd better party at home or appoint a designated driver.

We are not opposed to going out and bringing in the New Year with a toast.

However, those who endanger the lives of others in the name of a good time should be kept off the road.

No celebration is worth the horrors that drinking and driving can bring.

Legislators and law enforcement officials worked hard to be sure the streets were safer for those who chose to party away from home. We applaud their efforts.

We are also pleased that so many party-goers chose to celebrate sensibly and safely to make this a happy new year for all.

Glitch in Gator victory

I'm delighted the Florida Gators won the Southeastern Conference title. But once again there's a glitch on the Gator victory. Who can deny Auburn University may not only have the best football team in the conference but also in the nation.

Yet the Tigers — and that included young first year Coach Terry Bowden and his assistants plus his players — cannot reap any benefits despite going undefeated after playing a tough schedule. This is because of penalties imposed by the NCAA for something these people were not involved in.

It's a shame, too. Here's why: I contend the NCAA in this and many other cases in the past penalize the wrong folks. The present coaches and players did no wrong. Yet these people were not allowed to have their games televised live, win or lose, and playing no bowl games. Yet, none of them broke any NCAA rules. It was the people before them that violated NCAA regulations.

I recall back in the early 1960s the coach of high school "A" in Miami talked a young black athlete who lived with his parents in an area served by high school "B" to move across town and live with an uncle so he could attend high school "A." Officials at high school "B" reported it to the Florida High School Activities Association. The FHSAA ruled the youngster ineligible to play for any school his junior and senior years. Consequently, he was not awarded a scholarship, did not go to college, and was not drafted by any pro team. It very well could have cost the boy a small fortune.

What penalty did the coach of high school "A" receive? Not even a slap on the wrist. How about the principal of school "A"? Absolutely nothing. The youngster said he did not realize he broke any rules since the coach and principal of high school "A" permitted it.

Now the NCAA has "struck" the Tigers. But it's obvious the wrong people were blamed, not the original offenders. Former Auburn coach Pat Dye, the university's athletic director and the "boosters" involved should have been banned from college football for life. But none were ever disciplined.

Without the sanctions levied by the NCAA the Tigers probably would have been the SEC champs, had their games televised and been selected for the Sugar Bowl.

I'm not a violent man. But I'd like to take my walking cane and bop every member of the NCAA board right on the shins that ordered the sanctions. Was the NCAA decision fair? Positively not!

Bill Clinton gets his report card

Bill Clinton promised a great many things on his way to the White House: That he would get the sluggish U.S. economy growing again. That he would create new jobs. That he would cut taxes for the middle class. That he would get a handle on runaway health care costs. That he would end welfare as we know it.

Of course, no one expected the self-styled New Democrat to achieve all of these great labors in a fell swoop. But as the first year of the Clinton presidency draws to a close, it seems appropriate to grade his performance so far in the Oval Office.

Budget. The first major test for Clinton was the federal budget. It provided a ripe opportunity for the president to prove to the 57 percent of Americans who did not vote for him that he was not cut from the same fabric as tax-and-spend Democrats who previously have sat in the White House.

So what did Clinton do? He pushed through the largest tax increase in American history, some $275 billion over the next five years. Not even the middle class was spared.

The pretext for the Clinton tax hike was the mounting federal deficit. He claimed that the new levies imposed on American families and businesses would be matched dollar-for-dollar by federal spending cuts.

But the fact is that government spending actually will increase by more than $300 billion over the next five years. As to the illusory cuts, 75 percent are not even slated to take effect until 1997 and 1998 after Clinton stands for re-election.

Finally, for all the talk about deficit reduction, Clinton will add $1 trillion to the national debt over the next five years. Grade: F.

Health Care. The president deserves credit for making health care reform a national priority. But his prescription for curing what ails the nation's health care system will make things worse, not better.

The premise of the Clinton health reform is that the major shortcoming of the system is that a certain segment of the population lacks insurance. Thus, the president's foremost goal is universal coverage.

But the reality is that 86 percent of Americans have health insurance. And 80 percent of the insured are satisfied with the quality of care they receive.

It hardly seems rational to overturn a health care system that the vast majority of folks are happy with to accommodate the minority who lack insurance (but who, it should be mentioned, do receive medical care). That's hardly the kind of health reform most Americans had in mind. Grade: D.

Crime. The president had little to say about law and order until midway through the year when he announced his anti-crime plan. He deserves kudos for proposing habeas corpus reform, which would curtail abuses in death penalty appeals. And his proposals for funding more cops on the street, boot camps for youth offenders and treatment programs for drug offenders might marginally reduce the crime rate.

It seems appropriate to grade his performance so far in the Oval Office.

ROBERT WAGMAN

Cloudy with political squabbles

WASHINGTON — In Washington, crystal balls are notoriously cloudy. But according to all the experts all of the following should be among the year's biggest stories:

Health Care Reform — There will be a health care reform bill passed in 1994, but it will not be the bill that has been introduced by President Clinton. It is likely that just before it adjourns in early October, Congress will approve a major health care reform bill. Most believe it will not contain the central feature of the Clinton plan — guaranteed universal coverage. There is a growing consensus that universal coverage is just too expensive at the present time. What the bill will likely feature is universal access to private insurance for those not covered by employers, price controls through increased competition brought about by managed care, and less deductibility of premiums by employers. In other words, a plan much like that introduced by moderate Democrat Jim Cooper of Tennessee.

The Economy — Most in Washington believe that the moderate recovery we are now experiencing will continue through 1994, but that the economy will not pick up much steam. Growth during the first half of 1993 was a low 2 percent, and a better 4 percent in the last six months. Few believe this pace of growth will continue; the consensus is that it will fall back to about 3 percent in 1994. One problem is that the deficit reduction package approved in August will start taking money out of the economy in 1994. The goal of deficit reduction and growth may be impossible to achieve in the next five years.

Detroit Will Emerge Triumphant — 1994 will be a very big year for U.S. automakers. The past two years have shown a resurgence of cars made by the "big three" automakers, and the trend toward buying American should accelerate over the next year. New models from Chrysler and Ford are selling well, and GM will introduce a host of new models by year's end. For the first time since the mid-1980s, General Motors' North American operations may show a profit.

Richards Vs. Bush — The most entertaining political contest of 1994 will be the Texas re-election match-up between incumbent Democratic Gov. Ann Richards and baseball owner George W. Bush, the ex-president's oldest son. Texas is the most Republican of large states. The Bushes are Texas' first Republican family. But Richards is hugely popular. Bush will try to tag her as soft on crime and behind soaring local taxes. She will point to economic recovery and low state taxes. A real donnybrook is expected.

Welfare Reform — When Congress returns it will begin work on a major welfare reform bill that will prove welfare reform is as hard to achieve as health care reform. At the center of the argument will be the so-called "two years and out" requirement, mandating that welfare recipients can only stay on the rolls for two years without finding work. Many will argue this is too restrictive, especially in an economy not creating many new jobs at the lower end of the scale.

Trade Woes — GATT has passed, but the United States is on a collision course with Japan and several other Asian and Pacific Rim nations as new rounds of talks begin, aimed at opening foreign markets to U.S. goods. The Japanese refuse to consider specific industry-by-industry "targets" to guarantee open markets, and the Chinese are refusing to lower agricultural tariffs or stop illegal apparel exports to the United States. The United States also has deepening trade problems with South Korea and several other Asian nations. These problems will only grow in 1994.

The Balkans War Will Spread — The United Nations and the European Community are no nearer ending the wars in Croatia and Bosnia than they were a year ago. If anything, the situation has worsened. Many experts here predict that, in 1994, the conflict will escalate to neighboring states like Macedonia and Albania. Some even believe that the Balkans will replace the Middle East as the world's hot spot.

The 1996 GOP Presidential Race — This year will see the start of real jockeying for the GOP presidential nomination in 1996. Right now Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole has emerged as the front-runner based on his anti-Clinton Hill leadership. But most polls show he has the support of fewer than 20 percent of Republicans. So the contest is wide open. Many Republicans seem to be waiting to see what former Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Colin Powell does. He has not even said if he is a Republican, but the polls indicate he would be the Republican standard-bearer if he came out on the GOP side.

In Washington, crystal balls are notoriously cloudy.

SARAH OVERSTREET

One by one, kids' lives can be saved

This past year I was appointed local United Way representative for my company and spent several weeks evaluating agencies that receive United Way funds. Once we'd made budget recommendations for each agency for the upcoming year, we began to plan for a new campaign to raise money to fund our recommendations.

I don't know if United Way brass realized we were tired and wondering if all this hard work really pays off, but the speaker they chose for the campaign kickoff breakfast couldn't have done better to remind us what we're doing this for. His name is David Cook, a three-piece-suited bear of a man who directs southwest Missouri's Girl Scouts program. In a gentle manner that didn't prepare us for the impact of his words, he reminded us of why we were there.

We were tired and wondering if all this hard work really pays off.

Cook told us he had been speaking in another city when the mother of a young Girl Scout came up and asked him if he would come to her home to visit her daughter. It was an unusual request, he said, but since he had some extra time he agreed.

When he reached the home the mother led him to the girl's bedroom, which was completely dark.

"When she turned on the light I understood why it had been dark," Cook told us. "There lying on the bed in a Girl Scout uniform, with her badges on her chest, was a little girl. She was blind, and she had such severe physical deformities that my first instinct was to step back. But I went up to the bed and she told me she had just wanted to meet me so she could tell me what Girl Scouting had meant to her life."

"She went on to tell me that at school, the kids tormented her because of her physical condition and because of a learning disability. She said she had seen no reason for her to have been born until she and her Girl Scout troop got into the Girl Scout units on self-esteem. She said it was then that she began to discover that there was worth and value to her life, and she started to feel good about herself and to be glad that she had been born."

When Cook finished speaking there was absolute silence in the hall. It is seldom we receive such graphic evidence that the decisions we make in a boardroom — such as the Girl Scouts national organization did when it discovered that many American girls suffer from low self-esteem and developed a series of programs to combat it — actually reach their intended target.

I have thought about that little girl often this year. On the news we've seen the funerals of dead children, and we've heard kids talk about the guns they've seen carried by fellow classmates and the killings they've seen in their neighborhoods. A recent Metropolitan Life Insurance Company poll revealed that 22 percent of all boys in American schools say they have carried a gun or knife to school at some time, and 11 percent of teachers and 23 percent of students say they have been the victims of violence in or near their schools.

The reasons so many of our children are in trouble would require a sociologist to explain, but that doesn't really matter because by the time we figure it out they'll be lost. What matters is that so many of them can be saved, and by such a simple remedy: one adult to care about one child, to become involved in his or her life, to love and support the child, to model how life can be lived productively and happily.

To the millions of us with gifts to give in one of the many helping agencies that serve these children, I know you're just waiting for someone to nudge you.

she could do to change the outcome so she wanted what she thought could be his last day to be enjoyable. We talked at ceramics and had such a good time, she said.

"I remember he wanted to go for a taco after class. Normally I would think, oh that's too much salt and rule it out. That night I decided if he is going to die what's a little salt? I've tried to build a good foundation for our children. The topic of death has always been discussed openly, because as Christians we shouldn't fear it. My prayer everyday is to help others and Lord let me not be a liability, but an asset."

The Medlocks expressed frequently that God God was in control the whole time.

A call was received by Michael Sr. at about 7:30 p.m. the same evening as the upsetting news was delivered from the doctor.

He was frantically trying to reach Adrienne and their son. Shands had called and they were instructed to rush to the hospital because a liver was waiting that was a suitable match for him.

Michael Jr. recalled, "The night they called us I felt a little shaky, but when I originally heard the diagnosis I wasn't scared. I did do a lot of praying. I asked God and said I hope everything will go all right and flow smoothly. Whatever happens I didn't want to doubt that I was going to live."

Michael Jr. attributes his positive attitude to his parents. He felt his parents as well as God gave him the strength to deal with everything and be open.

He vividly remembers a girl named Felicia who also had a liver transplant when he was in the hospital at Shands.

"She recovered real fast like me and got out of ICU quickly.

We wore masks after the surgery so we wouldn't catch germs. Neither of us knew who gave us our livers but we were both thankful."

Adrienne was told that the donor of the liver was a 13-year-old boy who had been in a terrible accident.

"His mother did the most loving thing that she could do and turned a tragedy into saving four lives from her son's death," she said. "Each of his kidneys went to two separate children, his heart to one and his liver to my son."

Michael Jr. said, "I wish I could say to kids who go through these things, keep the faith. Don't give up, turn to God. Don't feel bad, just talk a lot to him (God). I also talked a lot to my mom and dad."

Michael Jr. has now decided, "I want to go to medical school. I like what they do like flying the helicopter and the doctor's part. You get to help people who really need help."

Adrienne also expressed very strongly her desire to educate the public and make them more aware of the tremendous need for more organ donors. "You can sign up at the driver's license bureau or let family know before you die," she said. "Some families get TV time to plead for organs for their children, but if everyone took this seriously there would be no need for that."

She also pointed out that nine out of every 10 people on the organ transplant list die while waiting for a donor.

"It's just a way to help others even when you're gone and it's just the loving thing to do," she said.

A 13-year-old boy lives on through the life of Michael Jr. and others whom he saved the tragic night of his death. Yet, the Medlock family can never express enough gratitude to his mother and the decision that gave a second chance when Michael Jr.'s life was literally hanging by a thread.

"What a better way to reach others for God than by saving a life," Adrienne said.

Longwood

received unanimous approval on first reading from the city commissioners Monday night after some discussion.

A second reading and public hearing on the measure is set for January 17. Although an emergency ordinance was approved in December designed to prevent any new adult businesses from opening in the city, Mayor Paul Lovestrand explained additional time is needed to allow the city attorney to draft a permanent ordinance.

"These kinds of ordinances are sometimes 50 or 60 pages long," Lovestrand said. He noted acting city attorney Richard Taylor needs the extra time to fully research the matter, then draft the ordinance.

Three businesses are operating in Longwood offering full body scrubs by attractive female staffs, charging $30 for half hour to 45-minute sessions.

An attorney for one of the body scrub business owners told the commission his client, "runs a clean shop."

David Wasserman, who handles First Amendment cases in a number of states said, although it was easy to imagine (unlawful) things are occurring in the private salon rooms, they were not. "If he is breaking the law in some way," Wasserman said, "he should be arrested."

Police Chief Greg Manning said there is no evidence at this time that any of the operations are doing anything illegal.

"We are watching all of them because of the high suspicion of illegal activity," Manning said.

The mayor said he has received calls from city residents urging the adult businesses not be allowed in Longwood, because they are seen as fronts for prostitution.

Wasserman pointed to a Monday newspaper article about the changing image of massage therapy and a story in the current issue of GQ (Gentleman's Quarterly) about body scrubs performed in spas. The GQ index subhead on the spa story is, "See Me, Feel Me, Touch Me, Heal Me."

Lovestrand commented not one of the female staff members at the three Longwood body scrub businesses is a licensed massage therapist.

Commissioners Steve Miller and Iris Benson both noted the city must move cautiously on the ordinance to protect business owners' constitutional rights. Miller said he does not favor adult entertainment in the city but thinks the ordinance is in violation of the business owners' rights.

"I still believe there should be a moratorium," Benson commented. "I don't see how a personal service or adult salon enhances the quality of life in Longwood."

"If there is a police report with their opinion that illegal activity is going on (in the salons)," Miller said, "I sure would like to read it."

During a work session before the regular meeting, the commissioners discussed improvements on Rangeline Road. The county has set aside $400,000 from the one-cent sales tax approved in 1991 for work on Rangeline Road. The commissioners outlined a number of plans, including stop signs at subdivision entrances along the mile long route, to discourage non-residential local traffic and improve safety for school children.

As a long term goal, the city commissioners believe the county wants to widen Rangeline Road, a move the commission opposes. The road is used extensively as a route for Lake Mary residents to get to State Road 434. A city traffic count shows 14,417 cars used Rangeline Road in a day while only 3,960 cars used Church Street.

The commissioners ranked engineering firms for the project in the following order: Professional Engineering Consultants; Transportation Consulting Group; Gee and Jensen and Lochrane Engineering. The city will negotiate a contract for the project, beginning with PEC. Lochrane Engineering has been used as consulting engineers by the city for about six years, but the commissioners said they thought it was time for a change. Although the commissioners attempted to give priority to a Seminole County or Longwood based firm, all of the firms are located outside the county.

In other business, Mayor Lovestrand urged the commission to use the utmost caution when considering an interlocal agreement on uniform sign regulations being proposed countywide. He noted a number of instances where Longwood has not benefited from such agreements.

"The larger, more powerful governmental bodies usually gain an unfair advantage in these contracts and will hold the small cities to the contracts," he said. Representatives of CALNO are scheduled to discuss an interlocal agreement on the countywide sign proposals this week.

The mayor said the city's Land Planning Agency should be consulted before any agreement is made with CALNO.

"While a countywide sign ordinance may be desirable in the end," Lovestrand said, "My concern is that any interlocal agreement be beneficial to the people of the City of Longwood and not to other governmental units at the expense of Longwood."

DEATHS

JOYCE "JOY" BLANCHARD

Joyce "Joy" Blanchard, 62, Highland Drive, Fern Park, died Sunday, Jan. 2, 1994, at her residence. Born June 14, 1931, in Richmond, Va., she moved to Central Florida in 1973. Mrs. Blanchard was a retired registered hospital nurse and Episcopalian. She was director of Sumter County's "Project Help," member and former president of Business Women's Association of American/Richmond. Roger Kennedy Construction already has its construction-office trailer on the property, and work is underway clearing land and putting in water and sewer lines.

The property is located within the Sanford city limits, just east of the CSX railroad overpass, on the north side of S.R. 46.

New ads take frank approach to AIDS prevention

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A couple gropes between the sheets on a disheveled bed. Suddenly a dresser drawer springs open and to James Bond-type music, out pops a foil-wrapped condom.

It skitters across the floor, past a startled cat and discreetly dives into action on the bed.

"It would be nice if latex condoms were automatic. But since they're not, using them should be," an announcer intones.

With that playful 30-second spot, the Clinton administration today launched a new, hipper advertising campaign to encourage young Americans to protect themselves against AIDS.

Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala said that for a change, all four broadcast television networks and many cable TV outlets and radio stations have agreed to run the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's new ads.

"I salute them for their vision," Shalala said in prepared remarks to community groups involved in AIDS education.

"What we have lacked until now is the political will because we have been too timid to talk openly about the prevention tools at our disposal," Shalala said.

"We've gone beyond the sock," said Kristine Gebbie, the national AIDS policy coordinator, referring to a much ridiculed earlier government ad that suggested condom use by having a young man slowly pull a sock over his foot.

The ads are franker than the government's previous spots, but far from explicit or graphic.

A second new ad shows a couple embracing passionately, kicking off shoes, pulling off an earring and unbuttoning a shirt. But when the woman asks, "Did you bring it?" her partner admits, "I forgot it."

"Then forget it," snaps the woman, turning on the lights.

Another ad suggests abstinence in a non-preachy way.

It comes in male and female versions, with an intense young person expressing to an unseen companion the desire "to spend my life with you" and to "never put you in danger. There is a time for us to be lovers. We will wait until that time comes."

Still another spot features a streetwise AIDS educator in a car advising young people to use condoms or, in a separate pitch, to "put off sex until you know more."

New radio spots feature celebrity condom endorsements from rock star Anthony Kiedis of the Red Hot Chili Peppers; Jason Alexander, who is George on NBC-TV's "Seinfeld" show; and Martin Lawrence from Fox Television's "Martin" sitcom.

"They do not show exactly how to put a condom on in full and living color on the air," Gebbie said in an interview. "They are not cutting edge. ... But explicit mention of condom use is a big step forward from the general 'AIDS is a disease you can prevent' theme of past campaigns."

Daniel T. Broas, executive director of the AIDS Action Council, called it "a tremendous step forward."

Broas said he favors even franker ads, "but this is probably pushing the edge of the envelope as far as the government could go on television."

CDC director Dr. David Satcher said abstinence is "the surest way to avoid the spread of the AIDS virus."

But most young adults are sexually active, he said, citing surveys that indicate 72 percent of high school students have had sex by the time they graduate, and one in five have had three or four sex partners.

And condoms can save lives, said Satcher, pointing to a European study of 123 couples in which one partner was infected with HIV. None of those who used condoms consistently gave the virus to the uninfected partner.

The ads, created by the Ogilvy and Mather ad agency, cost $400,000 to produce and promote.

The ads include the number of a toll-free hotline — 1-800-342-AIDS — for people to call for a free brochure on correct condom use and other information about AIDS.

Were You Wishin' For A New Transmission?

Now that Christmas present has become Christmas past and all your goodies are neatly tucked away, it's time to do two things. First, you need to sit down and write you New Year's Resolutions. Second, you have to take down the Christmas tree. Maybe you are one of those people who already vow to take better care of their cars in the coming year. With that out of the way, you move on to the task of dismantling your tree. As you move it away from the wall you notice that there are still three presents neatly wrapped and waiting for you to open. Santa knew that you would need a little help keeping your resolution so he bundled up some of the features that Select Auto Crafts can offer you.

You tear the red and green striped paper away from the first box and peek inside. You can barely believe what you've seen. It is all of the services that Select Auto Crafts offers. Since 1988, they have been caring for cars bumper to bumper with complete auto service.

The box is overflowing with repairs for your transmission, carburetor, electronic fuel injection and computer control analysis. Shining brighter than Rudolph's nose are the house specialties which include transmissions and electronic engine controls. Whether you're a hard core racer or a daily driver, Select Auto Crafts has the knowledge and experience to care for your car's automatic transmission. They can even do restorations.

After emptying that first box you can't wait to see what is in the other two. You grab the nearest one and rip off the bows and paper. You pull off the top and are amazed to see all of Select Auto Crafts experience bundled tightly in the box. Dave Flowera, owner of Select Auto Crafts has over 22 years of experience in the transmission repair industry which has given him the ability to engineer and produce some products for national distribution.

Dave explains that he has been building transmissions for competition, 4 wheel drives and RVs since 1974 and over the years he was able to use this knowledge to apply it to other areas for standard use. Dave understands cars from the driver's seat as well as a mechanic since he has competitively driven race cars since 1976 in super series cars.

If you would like to see some of Dave's work in action, then here is a great opportunity. Dave did transmission and fabrication work on Doug Richmond's 4 wheel drive truck, pictured above, "Nasty Intentions". At the Crane Cams Quick 8 shoot-out held in Atlanta, Select Auto Crafts had 3 of the top 7 cars and the over all winner being Paul Kelly - one of the cars Select does competition transmission work on. At the local level - Select Auto Crafts covered 3 of the top 6 champions in the Super Pro Division and 4 of the top 9 in the Pro Division at Orlando Speed World.

At any given time, they have 300-500 transmissions on hand! They have transmissions and other products as far away as Kansas, New York, Texas, North Carolina, Canada, and Germany. They are able to use the information drawn from these people and the motorsports committee to produce the best products that anyone in the USA can produce in Select Auto Crafts own research and development program. Select Auto Crafts products are used by the best local competitors including Steve Combs, Doug Richmond, and Jeff Anderson.

Select Auto Crafts packs a lot of service, experience, and product knowledge into one place. Select Auto Crafts is located at 701 A Cornwall Rd. in Sanford or call 323-4266 for more information. Let select Auto Crafts use their science, not magic to fix your car.

Marquette Smith leaves FSU for Central Florida

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald Sports Writer

CASSELBERRY — When the heart says it is time to come home, it is time to come home.

Even with a championship ring in hand and the prospect of being a starter next year, Marquette Smith has decided to leave national champion Florida State.

One of the nation's most heavily recruited players out of high school three years ago, the reserve tailback will transfer to the University of Central Florida near his Casselberry hometown, officials said Monday. By moving down a division in NCAA ranks, he will be immediately eligible to play.

"It is strictly for family reasons," said Smith from his Casselberry home Monday night. "I left Tallahassee on good terms. Coach (Bobby) Bowden felt very good about it and was very impressed with my reasons for leaving. I had been working on leaving all season, the situation got to where I wanted to be with my family and I just wasn't going to wait any longer."

Smith was scheduled to graduate this spring in just three years, so grades were not a problem.

"It's great for him to be home," said David Smith, Marquette's father. "Everything is very positive. It's a good move for him, he's very excited about being at UCF. He left FSU in excellent academic standing and got good recommendations from Coach Bowden and his academic advisors at the school. He's really happy and excited about his decision."

"Coach (Gene) McDowell (UCF head football coach) seemed extremely excited and happy to have Marquette coming to UCF. Maybe he (Marquette) can win another National Championship here."

Things have been a whirlwind for Marquette since the Seminoles won the national title in the Orange Bowl Saturday night.

"I've already signed my scholarship and everything," said Marquette. "I move into my dorm tomorrow and I start school at UCF next Monday. Things are moving a lot faster than I thought they would. I'm happy to be there, it's an up and coming program. Coach McDowell does a good job and there's a lot of talent there. I think it's going to be a lot of fun."

The Knights will be not make the move up to the Division I level from Division I-AA until after he graduates, but Smith will still be seen by NFL scouts.

"My senior year we will play a Division I schedule," said Marquette. "But the program won't move up officially until the next year. We are scheduled to play Florida State during my senior year."

The 5-foot-7, 195-pound tailback rushed for 402 yards in parts of two seasons for the Seminoles. He opted to sit out the 1992 season as a redshirt to work on his grades after playing in eight games as a true freshman in 1991.

As a freshman, he rushed for 106 yards on 22 carries, an average of 4.6 yards per carry, caught a 34-yard touchdown pass against Tennessee State and returned four kickoffs for a 20 yard average.

His best games as a freshman came against Western Michigan University and Tulane.

In the WMU game he gained 51 yards on 11 carries, including an 11-yard touchdown scamper, and ran the ball five times for 37 yards against Tulane.

This season he gained 297 yards on 62 carries and scored four touchdowns as the No. 2 tailback before suffering a knee injury Oct. 30 against Wake Forest in the eighth game of the season.

Smith's best game as a Seminole came in August at the Kickoff Classic, where he rushed for 87 yards on 11 carries and scored one touchdown.

Smith rushed for 6,733 yards on 700 carries (an average of 8.4 yards per carry) and scored 88 touchdowns during a legendary prep career at Lake Howell High School. He also returned six kickoffs for touchdowns.

As a senior, he tallied 220 rushes for 2,409 yards and 31 touchdowns and was named the Gatorade National Player of the Year, the nation's most valuable offensive player by USA Today, first team All-American by Parade, Max Eminger and Super Prep.

He was also rated the top running back in the nation by Super Prep, made the Orlando Sentinel's Dixie Dozen squad as one of the South's top players and was a four-time all-state selection.

His departure leaves Florida State with just two experienced tailbacks for next season, Warrick Dunn, the sensational freshman who accumulated 868 all-purpose yards and scored 10 touchdowns this season, and senior Tiger McMillon from St. Cloud, who missed all of the 1993 campaign with a knee injury.

Marquette Smith (above, in his high school days at Lake Howell) has decided to transfer closer to home, leaving national champion Florida State for the University of Central Florida.

Bethune-Cookman gives reins to McClairen

Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH — Bethune-Cookman's new football coach is anything but new to the school or its athletic program.

Assistant athletic director Jack "Cy" McClairen was named to the position Monday. He had previously served long stints as coach of the basketball and football teams.

The 62-year-old Panama City native also is an alumnus of Bethune-Cookman College. Next season McClairen will begin his second tenure as head football coach after compiling a 61-37-3 record in football from 1961-73.

"I'm fired up and ready to go," McClairen said. "I can't promise you we'll be another Florida State, but we will produce viable citizens who will earn college degrees in 4-5 years."

"(Grabbling State coach) Eddie Robinson is still going strong," McClairen said. "I feel I can go another 10 years."

He replaces Sylvester Collins, who was fired Saturday, said President Oswald P. Bronson.

Collins was suspended following his arrest for alleged sexual battery Nov. 6. A grand jury chose not to prosecute, but he was never reinstated. The school had no comment on Collins.

McClairen, a star tight end for the Wildcats in the 1950s, retired from basketball last March after 31 seasons, saying players had changed.

"Now I realize that it's the parents who are changing," McClairen said at a Monday news conference. "Youth want someone to lead them and be a father away from home. I guess I have the qualifications...I'm a father."

Other candidates for the post included Tyrone

McGriff, who acted as interim coach the final two games, defensive coordinator Luther Palmer, women's basketball coach and former defensive coordinator Algin Wyatt and former offensive coordinator Reggie Beverly, now the Wildcat softball coach.

Collins, whose record was 4-16, was the first coach without any previous connection to the Daytona Beach college. The Wildcats were 1-10 in 1993, including two forfeits.

"In consideration of the present situation, we felt the best decision was to go in-house," said Dr. Jne Frank, the chairman of the search committee. "We felt we had some of the finest coaches in America currently on the staff... Coach McClairen can't walk on water, but he knows where all the rocks are."

Competitors ready cars for Speedweeks at VCS

Special to the Herald

BARBERVILLE — Joe Shear took a few races to get his Fred Nielsen Racing Late Model up to snuff on Volusia County Speedway's half-mile asphalt oval during Speedweeks '93 Winter Nationals last February, but by the end of the nine-night gala, the Lake Villa, Illinois, driver had the rest of the pack chasing his tailpipes.

Shear ran second behind Steve Holzhausen of Greenfield, Wisconsin, in the 30-lap Speedweeks opening night race, ran fourth in the first race of Sunday night, then picked up his first of five trips to victory lane in Sunday's second 30-lapper.

Shear ended up winning five of the last six events, including the last three races. And he wasn't off by much of sweeping the final six races, finishing second to ASA (American Speed Association) star Mike Eddy of Midland, Michigan, in the first of two races Wednesday.

But even while Shear took the lion's share of the Late Model prize money from Speedweeks at VCS, it wasn't as much a runaway as the statistics might show, as the eight-race series turned into more or less a five-man battle.

Eddy, who clipped Shear's wings for that one Wednesday night win, already has targeted Shear and the rest of the division for the 1994 season startup in Florida, ready to do business on the banked short track 15-miles west of Daytona Beach on Highway 40.

"I don't plan on chasing Shear around the track in 1994," Eddy said in a telephone interview in December.

Known as the "Dale Earnhardt" of the Midwest, Eddy is having a new car built and expects it to be finished and ready for testing by early January.

Last year Eddy finished fourth on opening night, moved up to third in the first race on Sunday, then finished second behind Shear in the late race on Sunday and in Monday's race before taking the checkered flag on Wednesday.

Eddy stayed in the top five for all eight races, finishing third, fourth and fifth in the other three races.

Besides the opening night win by Holzhausen and Eddy's Wednesday night victory, the only other Late Model race won by someone other than Shear was in Sunday's first event, when Steve Carlson of West Salem, Wisconsin, crossed the start/finish line ahead of Junior Neidecken, Eddy, Shear and Scott Hansen, the 1993 ASA champion.

And basically that's the way Speedweeks '93 went for the Late Models, as Shear, Eddy, Carlson, Holzhausen and Hansen filled out the majority of the top five spots in all eight races.

The only times that cycle was broken was when Neidecken finished second, Tony Raines, another ASA competitor, took a fifth in Sunday's late race, Rick Beebe took a fifth in Tuesday's race and Busch Grand National runner Tim Steele slipped in for a third place finish on Thursday.

Tony Ponder of DeLand, VCS track champion and NASCAR Winston Series Sunbelt Region Champion for 1993 in the Late Model Stocks, will be moving up to the Late Models for 1994 and could be one of the drivers in the wings trying to break into the stronghold of the top five spots by the Midwest runners.

During Speedweeks '93, Ponder ran two cars, competing in both the Late Models and Late Model Stocks, while finishing up as the local favorite in the Winston Invitational Showdown, a $50,000 purse race for NASCAR Late Model Stocks.

Ponder broke into the top 10 finishers in the Late Models three times in the six races he ran.

Dolphins stunned from 1993 finish

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

DAVIE — A complete collapse came to a crashing end, and it will take the stunned Miami Dolphins some time to recover.

That's OK. They have six months.

On Monday, the Dolphins were still reeling from a five-game losing streak that ended their season shy of a playoff berth. The final blow was a 33-27 overtime loss at New England.

"It's tough to take, because you're flying high and — boom — you crash," receiver Irving Fryar said. "We didn't even have time to say a prayer."

At Thanksgiving, coach Don Shula's team was 9-2, best in the NFL. Miami never won again.

"Somebody wrote a song, 'Help Me Make It Through the Night,'" Shula said. "I think it pertains now."

For the sixth time in eight years, the Dolphins failed to earn a postseason berth.

"Win one game — that's all we had to do," quarterback Scott Mitchell said. "Win one of five games. How hard can that be?"

Mitchell paused.

"We proved it's pretty hard."

Following the offseason acquisition of five high-priced veterans — Fryar, receiver Mark Ingram, fullback Keith Byars, tackle Ron Heller and nose tackle Mike Golic — Miami lost two more games than a year ago. High hopes lasted well into a season filled with memorable achievements, which made the finish that much more galling.

When Dan Marino suffered a season-ending injury, Mitchell became a first-time starter and AFC offensive player of the month in October. Then Mitchell hurt his shoulder, and Doug Pederson finished the game that allowed Shula to break George Halas' NFL record for career coaching victories.

Ten days later, on an icy field in Dallas, 39-year-old quarterback Steve Delberg rallied Miami to a last-second Thanksgiving Day victory. That game was perhaps the most memorable of the NFL season.

Optimists honor 2 from Crooms

APOPKA — At its December meeting, the Optimist Club of Semoran held a Youth Appreciation Dinner meeting and honored two from Crooms School of Choice.

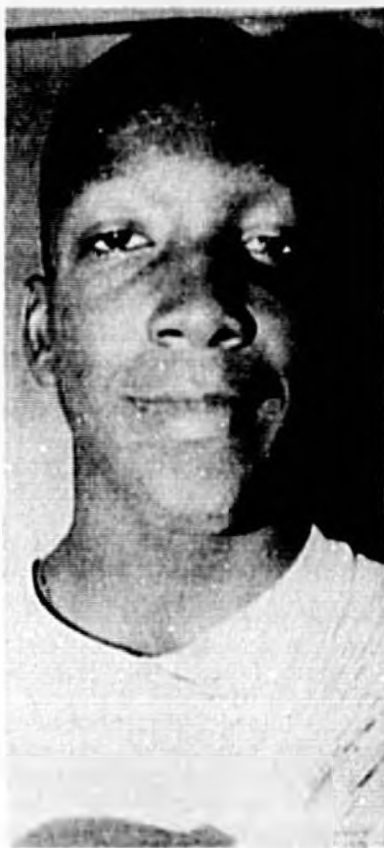

Godfrey Knight, 14, an eighth grade student at Crooms, was chosen as December's Student of the Month. English is Knight's favorite subject. He has been an award winner in two essay contests at the school. He is interested in sports, particularly basketball and his favorite team is the Orlando Magic.

Knight's future plans include attending either University of Kentucky or North Carolina to major in electronics and some day have a store of his own.

Teacher Larry Morgan, bandmaster at Crooms, graduated from Florida State University in 1964. He taught junior and senior high school band in Titusville for 17 years and band and general music at Jackson Heights before coming to Seminole County and Crooms. He was voted Bandmaster of the Year by the students. This is his 29th year working with the students and last year he was in "Who's Who in Teachers of America."

Crooms School of Choice, a public school located in Sanford emphasizes the skill necessary to reverse the dropout trend in today's school system.

Dad's open house is for family only

DEAR ABBY: I am a middle-aged, divorced professional man, leading a busy, active life. A year and a half ago, my eldest daughter, "Mary," 33, separated from her husband, so I invited Mary and her two lively grade-school children to move into my home. Mary is attending college and has little outside income.

I gave Mary the master bedroom and her kids the other bedroom on that floor, and I moved into the basement recreation room. The situation is rather chaotic, but I love them all. Here's the problem:

About four months ago, Mary started going steady with "John," a businessman she's known for two years. Last month John started sleeping with her a couple nights a week. Although I (and the kids) like John, I am not overjoyed with his sleeping here with Mary, since he will probably want to spend more and more time here, and I am concerned about the possible adverse effect it might have on the children.

Mary thinks her obvious warm relationship with John will have a good influence on the children. Is my concern warranted? Or am I just being old-fashioned?

GRANDPA

DEAR GRANDPA: Your concern is indeed warranted and in my opinion, you are not being "old-fashioned" — you are being realistic. If your grandchildren see their mother's boyfriend sleeping with their mother, they will think it's OK. But it's not OK for unmarried people to openly share a bedroom in the presence of children.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Hurt in Euclid, Ohio," who was having difficulty getting her round-robin letter from friend to friend. I learned early on that the best way to get a response is to send a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

My husband left his boots at my sister's home when we visited them in another town. I wrote to her several times, asking her to please send my husband's boots back. No boots.

Finally, I sent her an empty adoption. What about the fathers of these children? Have they any rights?

I am the father of a baby boy born out of wedlock. I would have given my right arm to have raised that child, but I had no say in the matter; he was given to strangers who adopted him.

I went to court over this — and lost. We hear so much about "women's rights"; what about men's rights? The system stinks.

DISGUSTED IN TEXAS

DEAR DISGUSTED: The "atinking" system has been deodorized. Some fathers have sued for custody of their children — and won. There are now organizations that promote a child's right to have both a mother and a father. The one with which I am the most familiar is the Children's Rights Council, 220 Eye St. N.E., Suite 230, Washington, D.C. 20002-4362.

box with our address and the proper postage on it, and my husband got his boots back with no further delay.

SUE WALKUP JUDD, SEARCY, ARK.

DEAR SUE: A wise move on your part. I also learned long ago that a self-addressed, stamped envelope immeasurably increases one's chances for a prompt reply to a letter.

DEAR ABBY: We are always reading about unwed mothers who give up their children for

Hollywood making more than ever, but attendance stagnant

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES — Movie theaters took in more money in 1993 than ever before, but attendance has remained unchanged for about 30 years. Filmmakers and studio executives blame higher ticket prices for keeping people at home.

"The population has almost doubled, but attendance remains flat," Tom Pollock, chairman of the MCA Motion Picture Group, said Monday. "I continue to believe moviegoing is too expensive."

Industry analysts predict 1993 ticket sales in North American theaters will break the 1989 record of $5.03 billion. The final tally from the Motion Picture Association of America won't be announced until March.

An estimated 1.02 billion tickets were sold in 1993, up 6 percent from 1992 but still below the 1.06 billion sold in 1990. Annual attendance still hovers around the 1 billion tickets sold annually in the early 1960s.

The average national ticket price has climbed from $2.70 in 1980 to about $5.10 in 1993, the MPA said. And many first-run theaters charge $7.50. In comparison, many home videos cost as little as $1.

Some moviegoers at Universal City Cinemas, the nation's most heavily attended theater complex, complained Monday that they were being gouged.

"I'll tell you, $7.50 is just too much money to see a movie," said Bruce Buchanan, who tries to see two or three matinees a month. "I can rent two laser discs for $1 — it's two-for-one day on Monday you know. And I don't have to pay $4.50 for a bucket of popcorn."

"If the prices go any higher, then I'm not coming back," said Robert Zepeda, who bought a ticket for "Ghost in the Machine."

MCA's Universal Studios asked theaters last year to offer half-price admissions every Tuesday, but the plan fizzled after a few weeks. Since studios get about half of every ticket sale and theater owners face higher operating costs, the incentive to keep prices high proved too powerful.

William Kartozian, president of the National Association of Theater Owners, said moviegoing is still one of the best out-of-home entertainment deals. Many theaters offer discount matinees or reduced admissions for second-run films, he noted.

"I think it's a terrific value, especially if you compare it to a rock concert, a professional stage play or an athletic event," Kartozian said.

Top 10 movies in 1993

The top 10 grossing movies of 1993, according to Exhibitor Relations Co.:

1. "Jurassic Park," Universal, $339.5 million.
2. "The Fugitive," Warner Bros., $179.3 million.
3. "The Firm," Paramount, $158.3 million.
4. "Sleepless in Seattle," TriStar, $126.6 million.
5. "Mrs. Doubtfire," 20th Century Fox, $122.5 million.

6. "Indecent Proposal," Paramount, $105.5 million.
7. "In the Line of Fire," Columbia, $102.2 million.
8. "Cliffhanger," TriStar, $84 million.
9. "Free Willy," Warner Bros., $77.7 million.
10. "Groundhog Day," Columbia, $70.8 million.

The lack of growth in theater attendance isn't hurting Hollywood's bottom line. According to The Hollywood Reporter, entertainment and media stocks advanced almost 50 percent on average in 1993, compared with gains of 13.7 percent in the Dow Jones average and 7.1 percent by Standard & Poor's 500 stock index.

Universal's "Jurassic Park" made more than $339.5 million in its initial release — the most earned by any film, although higher ticket prices were partly responsible.

Some moviegoers said they would keep coming at just about any price.

"I would be more selective, but if it's something that I think has good acting and directing and a storyline of importance, then I would go," said Mark Schmidt, who was buying a ticket for "In the Name of the Father."

Mark Green said, "I like the big screen and the better sound and the environment of the movie and getting out of the house."

Second storm in a week socks East Coast with 2 feet of snow

By LISA McANANY
Associated Press Writer

The second winter storm in a week swirled up the East Coast today in a "commuter special" expected to unload as much as 2 feet of snow.

Schools closed, salt and snow shovels vanished from store shelves and extra road crews were called in as winter storm warnings were posted from the Carolinas to Maine, and from the Atlantic Coast to the mountains of Tennessee.

"We sold as much salt this year as we have the past three years," said Tripper Thomas, manager of a rock salt supplier in Bluefield, W.Va. "We haven't got any, and we've had about 50 calls for salt today."

By daybreak, 5 inches of wet, heavy snow had fallen in Boston, and the suburbs had up to 8 inches. Up to 2 feet was expected across the state by evening. North Carolina's northern mountains had at least 5 inches early today, and New York's Hudson Valley and Catskills regions received about 3 inches. Snow also fell before daybreak in Buffalo, N.Y., Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Portland, Maine. Farther west, Iowa, Indiana, Missouri, Kentucky and Nebraska got snow.

The intense storm formed when cold air pushed down from Canada, colliding with a front near the Gulf of Mexico. By midday Monday, that storm, centered over Alabama, and another system over the Atlantic east of Charleston, S.C., were strengthening and drawing moisture from the ocean and the Gulf of Mexico.

The two systems were expected to merge overnight and roll up the East Coast. Southern New England was expected to get the brunt.

"A commuter special," said National Weather Service meteorologist Rick Wailing.

Last week, a cold spell that took hold on Christmas dropped temperatures below zero in several states, causing pipes to burst and cars to break down. Heavy snowfall crippled much of the Midwest and the East. At least 11 deaths were blamed on the weather.

Schools were closed today in parts of Massachusetts, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and Rhode Island.

A hardware and lumber store in Morgantown, W.Va., was sold out of snowblowers Monday, and assistant manager Steve Harvey said manufacturers were sold out, too. The store also was sold out of salt and snow shovels.

Norman Burger, who manages a hardware store outside Pittsburgh in Penn Hills, Pa., said, "If it will move snow or melt it, they're buying it."

In Stamford, Conn., video store manager Chip Stahl said there was a run on X-rated movies among people expecting to get trapped at home.

Bread and milk went quickly at grocery stores.

In Florida, gale warnings were posted today in coastal areas, and snow flurries were possible across northern Florida.

Along the eastern slopes of the Rockies, chinook winds blew down a house under construction Monday in Fort Collins, Colo., and gusted to 105 mph south of Idaho Springs, Colo.

Bronchial cysts should be removed

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you tell me anything about bronchial cysts? Are they inclined to be cancerous?

DEAR READER: Bronchial cysts are the remnants of embryological structures called bronchial grooves, which -- for unknown reasons -- may persist after birth.

These cysts commonly appear in early adulthood, most frequently in the upper one-third of the neck. Unlike malignancies that are hard, bronchial cysts are soft, squishy, non-tender and usually enlarge. Because they can become infected and, at the very least, are unsightly, bronchial cysts should be surgically removed. They are not malignant, nor will they turn cancerous.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've recently been diagnosed with Huntington's disease and would like to know more about the condition.

DEAR READER: This inherited disease causes progressive random movements of the limbs (chorea) and intellectual deterioration. Patients initially exhibit anti-social behavior and psychiatric disturbances, such as profound apathy or irritability. Within months or years, severe mental changes develop, in conjunction with facial grimacing, difficulty walking, trouble speaking, and other disorders of movement.

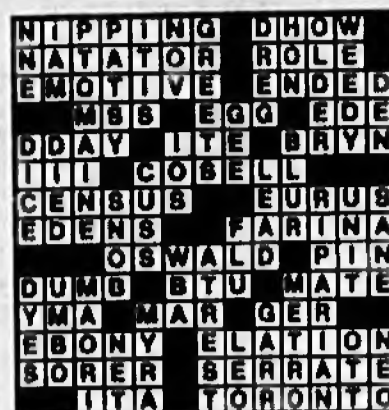

The diagnosis is made on CT scan, special X-rays of the brain.

There is no treatment. Genetic counseling is vital, because half the offspring of an affected parent are at risk and the disease may not become evident until after the childbearing years. Chromosome analysis will indicate if an adult is carrying the defective gene. Because of the profound emotional and ethical issues surrounding such testing, most authorities recommend that individuals at risk (those

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

It is curiously difficult to edit your own work. Stupidities sneak through unspotted. But when a good editor reads someone else's copy, errors are as conspicuous as a bikini-clad woman in Alaska. Take today's deal, for example. South's opening bid showed long clubs and 12-16 high-card points. West's three-club cuebid revealed a major two-suiter, but it is usually reserved for a stronger hand. South's five clubs was an each-way bet. It might make, or it might be a good sacrifice. After West led a spade, declarer seemed to have no problems. He could discard his diamond loser on dummy's spade ace. And with the heart ace marked in the West hand, there appeared to be only two losers: one heart and one club. However, South was worried, especially after the double, that East held all three trumps. So, the reporter explained, South wanted to play a trump from dummy toward his hand.

After winning with the spade king, South led a heart. West went in with the ace and switched to his singleton diamond. Declarer won in hand, led a heart to dummy's king and played a club to his jack. Disaster! West won with the king and led a heart. East overruled the dummy to defeat the contract.

What was overlooked? At trick two, South should lead the club jack from his hand. If East has all the trumps, declarer can get into the dummy and pick up East's remaining honor before any risk of a heart overruff. If trumps are 2-1, South simply draws the last trump when he regains the lead.

Jan. 5, 1994

Conditions which have an effect upon your work or career may undergo substantial improvements in the year ahead. This will give you a chance to elevate your targets and rise to greater heights.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Through the kind auspices of a concerned friend an opportunity of a limited nature might be presented to you today. Don't discount its value because of its size.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you're persistent enough today you should be able to awaken support in others regarding some plans about which you're enthusiastic but over which they've been only lukewarm so far.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do not procrastinate today about taking care of matters that could strengthen your material security or add to your resources. Time and tides are temporarily trending in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Something in which you're presently involved could get out of control if it doesn't have a definite course or direction. Others can't supply these requisites, but you can.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An unproductive situation with which you've been contending can be adjusted in a manner that could offer improvements. Stop behaving as if you're helpless. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your loyalty to friends is one of your noblest attributes. Today a pal of yours who might need your support may get to see this virtue in action.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Focus on your ambitious urges today, because substantial returns can be gleaned from arrangements where you're prepared to work for what you earn.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not deliberately seek testy entanglements today, but don't let them intimidate you either. Intuitively you'll know how to sort out knotty situations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In order to be more effective today you might find it necessary to delegate authority. Instinctively you'll know who are the right surrogates for each situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Dealings you have with friends should work out quite well today. The exception being situations where costs are to be shared or money is exchanged in some manner.
