SANFORD — The mobile home of Debra and James Jenkins Jr., at 91 Exeter Court, in Carriage Cove, was totally destroyed by fire last night. Two firemen were injured.

Children at risk

Florida not listed as a distressed area

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Florida may rank at or near the top on various lists, including levels of crime. It is not, however, listed as having the worst neighborhoods in which to raise children.

The "Kids Count Data Book," an annual study paid for by the Annie E. Casey Foundation, has just been released. It is based on a study of neighborhoods across the nation.

Locally, Seminole County Sheriff Don Eslinger says this area doesn't have major metropolitan neighborhood problems, but should look more closely into families in which children are raised.

"We can't look at individual neighborhoods," he commented. "Neighborhoods consist of individual families, and it's the family which determines the way a child will grow up. We have to stress family values more or we are going to see a continuing problem here."

"We can't look at individual neighborhoods. Neighborhoods consist of individual families, and it's the family which determines the way a child will grow up. We have to stress family values more or we are going to see a continuing problem here."

-Sheriff Don Eslinger

The Casey Foundation reports nearly half the 3.9 million children living in the nation's worst neighborhoods reside in six states.

About half the children living in severely distressed neighborhoods were in California,

Illinois, Michigan, New York, Ohio and Texas, according to the report.

Debbie Harris, area director with HRS, said individual neighborhoods are not given close examination in the Seminole County area. "We don't look at specific neighborhoods for our work," she commented. "We have to look at the overall picture."

Harris said she had not seen any recent studies on children based on neighborhood conditions.

The Casey study used five indicators to determine whether a neighborhood was in crisis. One of them was to find a high school drop out rate. If it was above 23 percent, the area near the school was considered a dangerous area in which to raise children.

Local school officials in Seminole County estimate the drop out rate locally is well below that critical range.

Attorney: She's a self-starter with superior skills

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Marie Post, secretary for Harry G. Reid, III, Sanford attorney, has been selected as the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Secretary of the Year for 1994.

The announcement was scheduled to be made during a noon luncheon today at the chamber office, with Post introduced to members and guests at a chamber gathering.

Attorney Reid personally nominated his secretary. In his letter submitted to the chamber earlier this month he wrote, "Marie has worked with me for over eight years. She began with the Shinholser firm as a clerk typist and courthouse runner. It did not take long for me to notice that her abilities placed her well beyond that position and that she had the potential to go much further."

Reid continued, "I quickly asked her to fill the position as my secretary. I have never regretted having made this decision. She has proven to possess superior secretarial skills, is a self-starter needing no supervision, is honest, dependable, and has the highest ethics."

Reid said when he opened his own office last year, Post went with him, and assisted in resolving the myriad of problems involved in the move and transition to his sole practice.

"She has sacrificed her home life and worked long hours without complaint," he wrote. "She has worked many days when she should have been home on sick leave, in order to prepare and assist with cases and closings which were critical to clients and my practice."

Armed robbery suspect held on nine charges

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — One of the men charged with the March 29 armed robbery of Check Cashing Easy was charged Wednesday with the March 10 holdup of the Highway Oil gasoline station and was arrested by Sanford police Wednesday night.

Jessie Dudley Lewis, 20, 102 Anderson Ave., Sanford, was held on nine charges, including attempted murder. Police are still seeking to identify the second suspect in the holdup where three shots were fired.

Lewis has been held since March 29 when he and two others were arrested near the 211 French Avenue check cashing business. Nearly $9,000 was taken during the hold-up. All but $500 was recovered.

Sanford police say Lewis and another man entered the gas station at 2425 S. French Ave. shortly before 10 p.m. They pointed guns at assistant manager Clarence Van Cleve and employee Ernie Offenberg and demanded all of the money they had and in the safe. The victims reported the two men pointed handguns directly at them and threatened to kill them.

During the robbery, the victims reported the mask worn by a suspect later identified as Lewis slipped down to his chin, allowing Van Cleve to see his face. During the confusion, Van Cleve pushed the gun away, but Lewis fired, striking the safe but not the victims. The two suspects fled from the station, one firing another shot at the victims, but missing.

Police Cmdr. Dennis Whitmire said the pair took an as-yet undetermined amount of cash.

Outside, customer Billy Nelson drove into the station and seeing what was happening, attempted to chase the fleeing suspects in his vehicle. One of the suspects fired a

Furlong 'humbled' by ballot signatures

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioner Larry Furlong said he was humbled by the effort of up to 125 volunteers who helped him raise the necessary signatures needed to get his name on the ballots this year.

County elections supervisor Sandra Goard said she approved 2,009 names of the 2,102 submitted. Furlong needed 1,575 registered Democrats to avoid paying the $3,450 qualifying fee in July.

"I was really humbled by this effort," said Furlong.

"When I was thinking about doing this, I had people advise against it, saying it could hurt me if I didn't make it. But by the end, I just got to the point where I stopped asking people to help. It was the smartest accident I ever made."

Furlong is seeking a second four-year term on the Seminole County commission. No other Democrats have announced a bid for the District 4 seat, but two Republicans have begun campaigns. Former Casselberry mayor Andrea Dennison will face Altamonte Springs businessman Winfield Adams Sept. 8.

Furlong said he hoped each precinct-walker would

Husband held for assisting in suicide

ORANGE PARK — A former Orange Park man was being held on a little-used charge of assisting self-murder following the suicide of his wife in 1991.

Steven Gamble was being held in the Clay County Jail in Green Cove Springs on $75,000 bond Thursday for handling his wife the gun she used to commit suicide, said Sgt. Dan Smith, a spokesman for the Clay County Sheriff's Office.

The second-degree felony is punishable with a maximum of 15 years in prison.

Gamble was arrested this week in Rossville, Ga., where he had moved shortly after Judith Gamble, 27, shot herself in the mouth on Oct. 20, 1991. The mother of two children died two days later.

Although the medical examiner's report listed her death as a suicide, the case was reopened recently after police discovered new information.

"We are still looking at it as a suicide," Smith said, declining to elaborate on what police learned recently.

State Attorney Harry Shorstein said he was not familiar with the assisting self-murder statute being used, though he said it is rarely invoked.

Police said the Gambles were arguing at the time of the shooting.

Jamaican stowaways sought

TAMPA — Federal agents searched for six Jamaican stowaways who were discovered aboard a freighter and managed to escape from a guarded ship's lockup.

Crew members had found eight stowaways on the freighter Repulse Bay and locked them in a room on the ship. Even with security guards, leg irons and handcuffs, they managed to jump off the ship in the Port of Tampa early Thursday.

"They were locked in a room that had tools in it," said U.S. Border Patrol Maj. Larry Arthurs. "They pried some of the leg irons apart with a screwdriver and used pieces of hacksaw blades to cut chains and the handcuffs."

He added that the stowaways even used the tools to pry open a porthole on the ship to make their escape.

Two of the stowaways were captured later Thursday, one of them still with a sawed-off handcuff on his wrist. A search was on for the other six.

Pilot killed in crash

JACKSONVILLE — The pilot of an FA-18 jet, killed in a crash after takeoff from the aircraft carrier USS Saratoga in the Adriatic Sea, was assigned to a Jacksonville-based squadron.

Lt. Scott C. Bubeck, 30, from Belmont, Iowa, was assigned to VFA 83, based at Cecil Field Naval Air Station, Navy spokesman Bert Byers said.

The jet plunged into the sea Thursday shortly after it was launched by the Saratoga. The pilot's remains were recovered.

The aircraft was flying as part of the NATO mission Deny Flight to monitor and enforce a U.N. ban on military flights over Bosnia.

There will be an investigation of the crash, Byers said.

Three held in primate-smuggling case

MIAMI — Three defendants in a primate-smuggling case pleaded guilty in a case in which a federal agent wore a gorilla suit to break the case.

Pleaded guilty Thursday were Jose Luis Alcerreca, a 46-year-old wildlife dealer, Maria Eugenia Villada, a 31-year-old employee for the finance department of the interior state of Mexico, and 42-year-old Margarita Barrera who worked in the zoo department there.

All three pleaded guilty to a single misdemeanor count of attempting to export an endangered species. The defendants were arrested in January 1993 after trying to buy primates in Miami for the zoo department in Mexico.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Guy Lewis will recommend at the time of sentencing that they be sentenced on "the lower end of the guidelines."

Volusia deputies testify

DELAND — Volusia County deputies were given a drug courier profile in 1989 and a caricature of a drug runner posted at the department depicted a black man with exaggerated features, a deputy says.

Deputy Richard Forrest made his comments during depositions being taken by the NAACP in a civil action lawsuit against the county and the sheriff's office.

Forrest's statements Wednesday basically supported testimony by two other officers who have spoken out against the tactics of a drug squad created by Sheriff Bob Vogel. The squad seized drugs and more than $8 million from motorists stopped along Interstate 95 around Daytona Beach since 1989.

Vogel told reporters he had "no knowledge about any caricature. It's not a practice supported by this administration." He said his officers had never used a drug runners' profile to stop vehicles.

Consumer confidence drops

By Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — The reported gain in consumer optimism nationwide did not extend to Florida, a University of Florida economist said.

The Florida Consumer Confidence Index dipped to 89 in April, down from 90 in March and 94 in January.

The decline in the index suggests that the economy will continue to grow, but at a more sustainable pace than during the final months of last year, said Dave Denslow, a research economist with UF's Bureau of Economic and Business Research.

"Barring surprises, history will record 1994 as a year when activity rose without generating inflationary pressures," Denslow said. "The recent escalation of interest rates will slow the economy without stopping it." Denslow said the drop from March to April is insignificant.

"More puzzling is the four-point decline since January, especially since it contrasts with rising optimism nationally," he said. "Over the same period, a widely reported measure of confidence by the Conference Board rose by 15 percent."

Part of the gap between the Conference Board's national index and the Florida index can be explained by comparing survey questions.

The surge in the board's index was heavily influenced by respondents saying that more jobs are available. The UF index does not use questions about employment conditions.

Changes in employment tend to lag other changes, rising or falling only after changes in output. Denslow said, adding the jump in the national index is merely a reflection of an increase in production in the second half of last year.

Businesses interviewed for the UF survey were slightly more guarded in their outlook in April than in March. Only 49 percent said they expect sales to rise, down from 54 percent in March, while 37 percent said they expect sales to remain at the same level, up from 33 percent in March.

Hiring plans were little changed from March, with 33 percent of the businesses expecting to hire more people over the coming year and only 6 percent planning to cut payrolls.

Years of dedicated service

Lella Ross, a Hamilton Elementary kindergarten teacher, is retiring after 14 years of private and 20 years of public school teaching. Ross recently stopped off at Ft. Mellon Park with her class, on the way back from a field trip to the zoo, for lunch and playtime before returning to the school to hit the books.

Supreme Court upholds public campaign financing

By ADAM YEHOMAS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A state law that allows candidates for governor and Cabinet to spend tax dollars on their campaigns is not unconstitutional, the Florida Supreme Court has ruled.

The justices Thursday unanimously rejected a state Republican Party bid to overturn the 8-year-old public campaign financing law.

Gov. Lawton Chiles, who is seeking re-election, and advocates for election reform applauded the ruling as a major victory.

"By upholding the public campaign financing law, the Supreme Court today reaffirmed that the people — not the special interests — should own the political process," Chiles said in a statement.

The decision left Republican leaders fuming. They said it will put any Republican challenger at a serious financial disadvantage against Chiles in the general election this fall.

"It is a Lawton Chiles re-election act," said state GOP

Chairman Tom Slade. "It is an absolute sham."

Slade said the law would benefit Chiles, because he does not face as much competition in the primary as Republicans and consequently would have more money left for the general election.

"It is nothing more than an incumbent protection plan," Slade said.

But some Republican gubernatorial candidates such as Tallahassee lawyer Ken Connor said he would accept the public financing.

Miami businessman Jeb Bush, who leads all GOP candidates in fundraising with about $3 million, remained opposed to the idea.

"I think it's wrong to take government money to run a campaign," Bush said. "The people who take it will be held accountable for their actions."

Secretary of State Jim Smith was reconsidering his decision last year not to accept public financing, said campaign manager David Rancourt.

Women's attorneys oppose claims by insurance plans

By CATHERINE WILSON
AP Business Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE — Insurance companies refuse to pay for breast implants removals and so should not be allowed to claim a share of a record settlement between recipients and breast implant manufacturers, the plaintiffs' attorneys say.

"This settlement was not put together for the benefit of the insurance industry," attorney Stanley Chesley said Thursday. "We will oppose any intervention by the health care companies."

Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Alabama and Minnesota and a group of health plans have filed motions to intervene in the case to avoid missing a chance at the funds.

Chesley denounced the companies for "claiming quick-quick, we want our money back."

He called the companies' request preposterous because not only have they not paid for removal of the implants but also have refused medical benefits for related illnesses.

The $4.25 billion settlement — the biggest ever in a product-liability case — is intended to cover the pain and suffering of women with silicone implants, not their medical expenses, he said.

Attorneys for the insurers said they wanted to protect the companies' rights as the class-action case covering as many as 1 million women moves toward resolution.

Attorneys for manufacturers said the issue was premature, and U.S. District Judge Sam Pointer, visiting from Birmingham, Ala., agreed, delaying a decision.

He said he took the request seriously but added, "I assume what they want is money."

Pointer gave preliminary approval to the settlement this month, and women with implants face a June 17 deadline if they want to pursue individual lawsuits.

Police chiefs brainstorm to stop violence

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

ST. PETERSBURG — Big-city police chiefs stressed community policing techniques as they brainstormed on how best to fight the inner-city epidemic of black-on-black crime.

"You have to talk to people about how they are going to be policed," said Perry Anderson, police commissioner in Cambridge, Mass. "Until we do that, we are not going to be successful."

Plenty of ideas emerged Thursday in the National Conference on Preventing Crime in the Black Community, though participants admitted there are no easy fixes.

Blacks, who make up about 12 percent of the U.S. population, were the victims in 50 of every 100 homicides committed nationwide in 1992, federal statistics show.

Black males face a five times greater risk of dying violently than whites. Homicide was the leading cause of death for black men ages 15 through 34.

"Absolutely everyone has gotten fed up with it," said Joseph Wright, director of the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives. "We're not going to allow a few folks to terrorize neighborhoods anymore."

Los Angeles Police Chief Willie Williams, who assumed office after the riots in 1992, touted his system of community police advisory boards where citizens help set crime-fighting priorities for officers.

"We have to have a way for our customers to interact with their police department — we can't wait until there's a crisis," said Williams.

The boards are "formed from men and women of all walks of life who live in the community — anybody who has an interest in the policing of their area," he said.

"We have current and former gang members on some of these boards. We have a lot of young people in their 20s and 30s, maybe who don't wear a suit and tie ... but if you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem."

In the nation's capital, where 70 percent of violent crimes occur around public housing projects, police chief Fred Thomas said he has started a program based on a Japanese concept in which officers and their families live in the projects they patrol.

Another Washington program takes control of children who are expelled from school. Instead of going home and out on the streets, troubled youngsters are taken to a center where police, social workers and tutors try to help turn the youngsters' lives around before it's too late.

In Atlanta, Fulton County Sheriff Jacquelyn Barrett is starting a program to teach conflict-resolution and self-management skills to the more than 2,000 inmates in jails. "If we don't do something about rehabilitation, they're going to come back," she said. "Doing the time alone is not the answer."

The chiefs stressed that such measures were only part of the solution. Social issues affecting the black community such as unemployment, drug abuse, and illiteracy must also be addressed, they said.

Homeless wait for services

By Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE — Broward County took a giant step forward last year in helping the homeless: A task force created plans for a host of services that would be available for the less fortunate.

Four centers across the county were to be built to take some of the 5,000 estimated homeless off Broward's streets. Food, health and long-term care were to be offered.

But bickering between city and county governments, and growing community opposition to the promised plans have kept any such services from being delivered.

Meanwhile, the homeless are waiting.

"The frustration has quadrupled," said Cammy Gibson, a member of the executive board of the Broward Coalition for the Homeless, an advocacy group. "The level of anger is becoming such that it's almost impossible to deal with."

The homeless have been living in a downtown tent city which was erected to house who had congregated in Holiday Park. Last year, as conditions there continued to worsen, advocates began pressuring the county to come up with solutions.

The county created the Homeless Task Force, which was comprised of government, business, community and homeless representatives. The group drafted a plan that was modeled after successful programs for short- and long-term help. It won the support of social service agencies and gave the homeless hope.

"At this point, we are very comfortable with the plan," Gibson said. "Unfortunately, the city and county have gotten caught up in a game of scapegoat."

Gibson said the Task Force proposed six sites for the first of the four centers, and all were refused by the city.

Police say rape suspect held on unrelated charge

VERO BEACH — A drifter arrested on charges of buying beer for three under-age boys is a suspect in the abduction and rape of a 7-year-old girl, police say.

Bobby Ray Cornett, 45, provided the boys the beer at a park shortly before the girl was raped there, said Police Chief James Gabbard. Cornett is charged with child abuse and delivery of alcohol to a minor.

"He is certainly a suspect," Gabbard said at a news conference late Thursday. "He was in the area where the crime occurred. ... We have not eliminated anyone as a suspect as a result of his arrest."

Gabbard also spoke about the arrest to 75 residents who jammed a city meeting room for a crime watch session.

"(Cornett) is the person a number of you said was the guy who has been hanging around the park."

The girl was taken Saturday night from her bedroom to a water pump at Charles Park, and molested and left there, police said.

The girl made her way back home, climbed through her bedroom window and fell asleep, police Lt. Ray Barker said.

In the morning, the victim was in pain and told her mother "a man took her away," he said.

At the Thursday night session, residents quizzed police about how a child could be plucked from her bed without anyone noticing.

"What brought this individual to her house?" asked Max Coleman, who lives a few blocks from the park.

"He knew she was there," Gabbard answered.

Do you really want a job?

During Sanford City Commission discussion Monday night about job availabilities at the Seminole Towne Center Mall, Mayor Bettye Smith made an interesting observation.

In reference to city efforts to keep people informed of job opportunities, the mayor commented, "Unfortunately, we can't force local people to get involved."

Sadly, it's true. Many people have become so dependent on welfare handouts or even crime, that they have forgotten how to honestly earn a living. Possibly instilled through their parents' actions, they find it easier to hold out their hands for a free ride, rather than use those hands for labor.

The city plans to use a glass-enclosed area near the elevator in the bottom floor of city hall, for an information center.

The city is working to ensure local people have as much opportunity as possible to find employment. The City Commission however, is not going to go out and forcefully drag someone to a job interview.

For those who have complained about the lack of job opportunities in the Sanford area, there is now a challenge. Will it be accepted or will the complaints continue because a person is not willing to do an honest day's work?

The individual in need of a job must answer that question.

LETTER

Humane Society president responds

This letter is written in response to a number of recent letters to the editor (complaints) regarding the "living" conditions at the Humane Society. Yes — I agree that the conditions at the society shelter are less than ideal. I will not debate that issue. However, I would suggest that there are only two avenues — courses that the members of the Humane Society can follow relative to this issue.

The first proposal — euthanasia or no euthanasia. The Humane Society should refuse to accept any more animals until the new dog kennel-runs are constructed.

The first solution (which may be the position of some of your recent "letter to the editor" writers) is the most simplistic. Under this scenario, the society should simply "turn away" the majority of animals that are brought to the shelter. This would ease the overcrowding and make the shelter more presentable to the human eye. The drawback to this proposal is that for the most part, these unwanted animals will be "redirected" to the government animal shelter and unfortunately will be destroyed. One of the realities of a burgeoning animal population is that animals which are "dropped off" at government animal shelters have relatively short life expectancies. Population control dictates that an animal's life is gauged by time limits and space. By law, animal control as the agency of the government, cannot refuse to accept an animal, the net result being that old "arrivals" must make way for new "arrivals." There is no question that our government shelters are quality institutions that have been unable to devise a solution to this problem, other than the one that has been mandated and thrust upon them — euthanasia. As a volunteer-citizen group, the Humane Society of Seminole County, has opted for a different route. This leads me to the second alternative-proposal.

The second proposal — is there a reasonable alternative to euthanasia?

The second alternative is for the shelter to accept (and care for) as many animals as can be reasonably accommodated, while awaiting adoption. Certainly, this second route poses difficulties, since at the present time the shelter has no fixed or permanent dog kennels. Under these circumstances many of the dogs are kept in small cages pending daily exercise — walks etc. A positive return from this process is that a strong percentage of our animals are adopted — generally in a short period of time. Simply stated, if you had a choice would you rather cage an animal under the current "conditions" with the hope that it will be adopted, or would you rather "redirect" it and ease the overcrowding problem by having it euthanized. As president of the Humane Society, it is my responsibility to adhere to the bylaws established by the society's membership which mandate a "low kill" policy. I do not mean to debase or "cast stones" at those individuals who support proposal one. There is no question that they both have merit. The distinction is not one of morality, but one of philosophy. It would be far better for all of us to come to terms with this distinction and focus our energies toward "rebuilding" the shelter, rather than criticizing "conditions" which under the circumstances are the best that can be expected. I am open to any reasonable suggestion as to the care of the animals, pending county approval, issuance of permits, and construction of the new shelter.

Mississippi deserves a fresh look

JACKSON, MISS. — Southern dialect has a neologism that is exquisitely logical. If "you" is singular, how can "you" also be plural?

Not to worry. Southerners pluralize "you" with "y'all," and everybody in the room gets in the act. They also have an affinity for stretching a one-syllable word into two. "Here" becomes "he-yah."

Prepositions become a feast. When a Southern mother discovered her son hiding under the table after he had eaten a whole pie, she belted: "You better come on up and out from in and under there."

Down here, as a speaker for a conference on the European perspective of World War II, I must have met the wrong people, went to the wrong restaurants and lunched with the wrong groups. How else can you explain the lovely profusion of warmhearted hospitality?

Growing up in Connecticut, I not only despised Mississippi, but the whole South. (And that region wasn't exactly ecstatic about me, either.) The antebellum words from a popular song drove me up the wall — "When your mammy falls upon her knees, it's sleepy time down South."

But in the intervening years, both of us changed. We even matured. The South is riding an economic and political roll. Mississippi is smack dab in the middle, laboring to shed its image as the South's prototypical bad "good ol' boy" image.

Byron de la Beckwith's conviction for the assassination of Medgar Evers is a nice start.

But one conviction does not signal the millennium's arrival. A new era begins with the changes in names. Yesterday segregationists like Bilbo and Rankin became synonymous with racial animus. Today the Magnolia State's first black member of Congress, Mike Espy, is Clinton's secretary of agriculture. His name is synonymous with racial animity.

I had been invited to speak here through the intercession of a very dear friend, Professor M. Dennis Jackson, a white Mississippian who is my official biographer.

In my speech about army air corps' racial segregation during World War II, I extolled a system that at least had one benefit. It kept me from going overseas. "We can make a joyful noise unto the Lord for saving my life." I told the mostly white Bible-loving audience, I always knew we'd end up on the same side one day.

Still, change doesn't come as swiftly as the heart may desire. The legacy of the past and the shibboleths of our prejudices transform all of us into victims. Mississippi especially has been held hostage as the pit of America's racism. Nina Simone even recorded a song with a two-word title. Mississippi is the first word, an epithet, the second word.

But eventually, the past recedes into the cobwebs of time. Today Mississippi's racial progress is plagued by statistical lastness — the lowest median family income and the lowest ACT scores. It does much better, however, in per capita expenditures for education — 18th.

But in the intervening years, both of us changed. We even matured. The South is riding an economic and political roll.

The world looks just right

The stunning purple of spring's first herald, the crocus, has long since faded here in Washington. With each successive flower, we've grown more used to a world filled with color — daffodils in full, yellow bloom, candy-colored tulips, the million green leaves outside our office windows.

It feels just right. Last year, the flowers made no sense. On April 8, I'd left a largely barren landscape to drive to the suburban Philadelphia hospital bed of my grandmother, who'd had a stroke. Two weeks later, when I returned after her funeral, the world had changed. Spring's riotous palette felt disconcerting, insulting. Just stepping outside felt like a slap.

How could nature throw a party without me? Without her?

Last year's grayness descended again last week. A woman had bought my grandmother's house, which I part-owned with my mother; my presence was required in Media, Pa. I had to decide which mementos to keep, and to sign papers at the settlement, which was originally scheduled for the anniversary of Mom-Mommy's death. We moved back the settlement date a week; changing my feelings about saying goodbye to the house on Olive Street wasn't as simple.

I wonder at how quickly we are supposed to get over such things. In the past year, President and Mrs. Clinton have had parents die — perhaps the most devastating human loss other than that of a child. Nobody ever mentions it, considers it. I think about the Nixon family and how the now-caring public will soon move on, too busy to really remember.

I remember. I remember my brother screaming, "Hey, Donna, we're here," snatching me from sleep in the back seat of the family Dodge, announcing the end of the overnight interstate trip from our Gary, Ind., home to Media.

I remember stumbling from the car, seeing just-delivered milk bottles glistening damply on Mom-Mommy's porch. I remember seeing her emerge from the kitchen — flushed, stylish, always glamorous — grabbing us up, calling us old-fashioned things no one else ever did: "Angel," "Precious," "Darling." I remember bouncing at the table as she fried scrapple and eggs for us to eat; bending over double as I changes clothes in "my" room because Mom-Mommy's lace curtains afforded no privacy.

The house smelled like summer and Clara perfume and breezes redolent with roses.

Stepped in grayness last week. I decided that if the room at the real estate office smells like anything, it is coffee, new carpet and the scent of moving things along.

The deed before me begins with the words

"This indenture" in Old English script. It details the transfer of ownership of my summertime heaven to the woman across the table, a pleasant-faced nurse named Helen, with graying shoulder-length hair and an improbable ring in her nose. I decide the ring is cool.

"Together with all and singular the buildings and improvements," the document reads, "to have and to hold said lot or piece of ground..."

A few strokes of the pen and it is over. "You are," Helen's real estate agent announces, "a homeowner!!" Clearly overwhelmed, Helen grins.

Then she smiles at me. "If it's all right with you," Helen says, "I would like a picture of your grandmother, your family, to put up in the house. ...As part of its history."

With a few hours to spare before returning to Washington — and before Helen's relatives arrive for a champagne housewarming — I return to Olive Street. Circling the house's perimeter, I absorb detail after detail.

The stately, burgundy-and-white-striped metal awnings. The sheer drop from the porch that my brothers, and later my sons, loved diving from. The apple tree draped over a cement-filled well.

Rounding the corner, I see Helen, who's pumping my uncle for local color. The house, Uncle Pop is saying, was designed by a local black architect — whose daughter, he adds, happened to be "the first girl I ever had a crush on." Helen tells him that she's heard that this largely black neighborhood was once part of the Underground Railroad. "Isn't that wonderful?" asks Helen, who's white.

It is — and so is she. Hours later, my mother calls to tell me about the housewarming: Helen's relatives spilling onto the porch, friends exclaiming over the house, kids fighting for turns at climbing the apple tree. Sighs Mom. "It was as if they'd been here all along."

Headed home in my rented van on Interstate 95, I am surprised to find myself singing: showtunes; old Motown; "In the Garden," one of Mom-Mommy's favorite hymns.

Lott's own bones begin to rattle

WASHINGTON — Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., the GOP gumshoe who searches for skeletons in the closets of Democratic appointees, has one rattling in his own closet.

Lott confirmed to us that his ties to Isadore Hyde, a political friend who was convicted last year of defrauding the federal government, has been investigated "by NASA officials, by the FBI and by others." Lott claims he was cleared, but some government investigators maintain that the investigation didn't go as far as it should have.

In 1984, Hyde's company was awarded a NASA contract to provide security services at the Stennis Space Center in Mississippi. NASA investigators eventually uncovered that Hyde and his wife, Celestine, billed NASA for 24 unallowable expenses from 1985 to 1986 — amounting to over $186,000 that the Hydys diverted for personal use.

NASA's probe led to a grand jury investigation. In April 1993, Isadore Hyde and his wife were sentenced to prison for conspiracy to defraud the federal government.

NASA investigator John Batson, who headed the Hyde investigation, has come forward to tell us that NASA Inspector General Bill Colvin blocked his investigation once Batson began looking at Lott's ties to Hyde. The General Accounting Office is currently conducting a special investigation of Colvin, based on allegations that he has shut down sensitive investigations. Colvin refused to comment.

Batson had been pursuing leads furnished by former Hyde employees — including allegations that Hyde used NASA resources to do political favors for Lott. One former Hyde employee told Batson that Lott's campaign headquarters in Moss Point, Miss., was provided free by Hyde.

Several other former Hyde employees told Batson that on one occasion, three Hyde employees parked cars and provided security for one of Lott's campaign functions. The incident allegedly happened during a normal work day, which would mean that Hyde employees were being paid with taxpayer funds from the NASA contract to do political work for Lott. "That's absolute news to me," Lott told us. "I know nothing about Hyde providing people to park cars, and nothing about security people."

Hyde may have felt that he was in Lott's debt. Hyde received the NASA contract after then-Congressman Lott and his staff made persistent inquiries on his behalf. Less than two weeks before Hyde officially won the contract, Hyde put Lott's mother, who was 71 at the time, on the company's payroll. An April 1990 five-page memo that the IRS submitted to the U.S. Attorney's office detailing information obtained during a grand jury investigation of Hyde, explains how Iona Lott got the job.

Hyde created a job of public relations/personnel director for Mrs. Lott in 1984, even though she had no experience in these areas. Mrs. Lott did not resign from her state job with the Southern Mississippi Planning and Development District until Aug. 31, 1984, which meant that she was on two payrolls for several months.

"Lott's services to HSSI (Hyde's company) were minimum and meaningless as the HSSI personnel files she kept were duplicated and also kept" by several other employees, according to the memo. Mrs. Lott was paid as a full-time employee for her first two years, even though she only worked 20 hours per week, and she received perks other employees did not enjoy — including use of a company car.

Some government investigators maintain that the investigation didn't go as far as it should have.

Troubled Social Security pays $32 million in bonuses

WASHINGTON — The Social Security Administration paid out $32 million in employee bonuses last year and gave the largest single award — $9,256 — to an executive who had been on the job for less than three months.

Two-thirds of the agency's 65,000 employees got the cash bonuses in 1993, according to Social Security spokesman Phil Gambino.

Records obtained under the Freedom of Information Act show that the biggest award went to Lawrence Thompson, who was named the agency's second-ranking executive by Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala on July 19.

His bonus, recommended by Social Security Commissioner Shirley Chater and approved by Shalala, was for the fiscal year that ended 73 days later, on Sept. 30, Gambino said.

Thompson's annual salary is $120,594. Social Security is not unique among federal agencies in awarding employee bonuses.

But the agency's decision to spend $32 million is striking because Social Security lobbied Congress last year for additional money to process a growing backlog of disability claims.

Congress gave the agency an extra $200 million and Rep. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., questions whether Social Security would have been able to finance its bonuses without that money.

Bunning, the senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Social Security subcommittee, called the bonuses outrageous and criticized the agency for giving Thompson such a large sum after such a short time on the job.

"To get $9,256 for 2 1/2 months of service in the Social Security Administration, that is an outrage that we all ought to be made aware of," Bunning said.

Rep. Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania, the senior Republican on a separate Ways and Means subcommittee that oversees part of Social Security, said an agency that admits to serious problems in its disability programs should not be rewarding "the people in the system."

"The money we gave them to clean it up shouldn't be going to bonuses," he said.

The awards come at a time of growing problems for the agency.

A record number of people are applying for disability benefits, severely straining the agency's ability to quickly evaluate their cases. Applicants have waited a year or more to learn if they will receive disability payments.

Callers have often complained that they cannot get through on the agency's toll-free hot line or that telephones ring unanswered.

Federal investigators have uncovered abuse and fraud by immigrants, drug addicts and alcoholics who receive Social Security disability payments. And the agency has virtually abandoned all reviews of disability recipients to determine whether they have recovered and should be removed from the rolls.

Thompson served as the agency's acting commissioner from the date of his appointment until Chater took over in October.

Gambino argued that Thompson's bonus covers both his work at Social Security and his last nine months at the General Accounting Office, where he served as assistant comptroller general for human resource programs.

The money to pay for the bonus, however, came out of Social Security's budget. And Thompson, had he stayed at GAO, would have not have received a bonus because the congressional watchdog agency didn't have the money for any awards.

Gambino said the bonus rewards Thompson for his "outstanding, high-performance work at GAO and his excellent" tenure as acting commissioner of Social Security.

According to Gambino, the agency awarded bonuses to 2,891 high-level managers totaling $3.1 million dollars, or an average of $1,080 per person.

Include a poverty rate above 28 percent; more than 40 percent households headed by females; more than 47 percent of males "unattached to the labor force"; and more than 17 percent of families on welfare. A neighborhood with four of the five indicators was rated "severely distressed."

The report says every state except Idaho has such neighborhoods. It states, "Although many of these troubled neighborhoods are in neglected inner-city areas, there are significant numbers of such communities in rural America, especially in the South."

"Because the choices children make are often circumscribed by peers and neighbors, the neighborhoods that children live in often exert a powerful influence on their life chances," said the study released Sunday.

"Decisions about staying in school, studying hard, becoming a parent, joining a gang or becoming involved in drugs are all influenced by the neighborhood environment."

"We can no longer be surprised by the terrible outcomes experienced by young people who grow up in environments where drugs, violence, welfare and teen pregnancy are far more prevalent than safe schools, high school diplomas and good jobs," said Douglas W. Nelson, the foundation's executive director. "These neighborhoods offer no real choices; we need to change that."

Nelson suggested overhauling human service programs and locating them in the communities they serve.

Among the report's other findings:

—One-quarter of all children under age 6 live in poverty — and more than half of those in a family headed by a female.

—One out of every four black children lives in a severely distressed neighborhood, compared with one of every 10

Latino children and one out of every 63 white children.

—Births to single teens were up in all but three states — Maryland, New Jersey and New York.

—The teen violent death rate rose 13 percent between 1985 and 1991. While deaths of 15- to 19-year-olds caused by accidents decreased by 15 percent, deaths due to homicide doubled.

—The juvenile violent crime arrest rate for youths age 10 to 17 increased 50 percent between 1985 and 1991. In 1985, it was 305 per 100,000 youths; in 1991, it rose to 457 per 100,000.

The Annie E. Casey Foundation was established in 1948 by Jim Casey, one of the founders of United Parcel Service, and his siblings, and named for their mother. The organization says it is the nation's largest philanthropy devoted exclusively to disadvantaged children.

generate 15 to 20 names, but found several produced more than a hundred.

And the effort was bolstered by Republican support he said. Furlong said his two top name getters, Bob and Maryanne Campbell, are both Republicans. The couple collected 150 names for the effort. Republican Frank Shelton, long-time Markham Woods Road residential activist, generated more than 100 names, said Furlong.

Furlong's 1990 toppling of GOP commission veteran Sandra Gaord was aided by Republican efforts and votes.

Before starting the petition drive earlier this year, Furlong said he gave door-to-door knocking a try. The folks on his street readily recognized him and signed, he said. The next block over, a lot of folks weren't home, but those that were home responded with a "Oh yeah, you," he said.

By the third street, "It was 'Who are you again? Are you in now?'" he said. "It was a real eye-opening experience."

Furlong added he did have about a 90 percent or better recognition among people in his neighborhood.

Daughters seize the day in the workplace

By DAVID FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

Appropriately enough, it was a 9-year-old girl who may have best captured what the Take Our Daughters to Work campaign was all about.

"In the olden days, the boys were raised to do all the work, and the girls were raised to be housewives," Bally Blair said. "Now the parents and grown-ups, they want the girls to do what we want to do."

Bally, who spent Thursday at her father's New York City law firm, was part of a spirited gale of girls that blew into the American workplace for Take Our Daughters to Work day.

The second annual event proved even more popular than the first, involving thousands more employees than last year's debut, despite objections to its girls-only focus.

Sponsored by the Ms. Foundation, a women's advocacy group, the day was designed to boost girls' self-esteem and expose them to male-dominated careers they might not otherwise consider.

"These girls are so different when they know we're focusing on their dreams, when they're not competing (with boys) for attention," said Marie Wilson, Ms. Foundation president.

From the White House, where they ate sandwiches on the South Lawn, to a suburban Denver firehouse, where they wrestled with fire hoses, girls got a peek at the world of work open to them.

Bally and 20 other girls at the law firm of Debevoise & Plimpton took part in a seminar called "Thinking Like a Lawyer." On the Delaware River near Philadelphia, a half-dozen daughters rode aboard a Coast Guard patrol boat. At the Cleveland headquarters of BP America Inc., girls mixed chemicals to make slime.

"It's goopy and it's fun," said 10-year-old Stephanie Wynne, rolling the slippery gel between the palms of her hands. "I'm just having fun today, trying lots of things."

It was more than fun, said BP engineer Nanette Smith. It was a way to encourage girls to pursue scientific careers, in which men far outnumber women.

"I basically want to show them that science is involved in their everyday surroundings, and that science can be interesting and fun," Smith said.

A few employers, including Chrysler Corp. and the city of Bellevue, Wash., refused to participate, saying the program wasn't fair to boys.

"We believe it would be fairer to sponsor events that would welcome all children to explore career options," Chrysler spokeswoman Karen Stewart said.

Other employers did just that, inviting boys and girls.

"There's been a lot of interest expressed by sons, and they've asked to be included," said Jennifer Wold at ABB Environmental Services in Portland, Maine. "We have tried to broaden our approach."

Organizers said they would keep the emphasis on girls.

"When boys and girls are together, in the classroom or on field trips, boys get more attention," said Nell Merlino at the Ms. Foundation. "Until we figure out how to balance that, we do need to periodically separate girls and boys for experiences like this."

Studies have shown that from ages 9 to 15, girls' self-esteem drops in comparison to boys', and their sense of competence in math and science erodes. Psychologists blame a society that emphasizes a woman's appearance and quiet demeanor rather than ability.

Prudential says whistle blower had been right

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Prudential Insurance Co. admits a former executive fired for whistleblowing was correct all along, The New York Times reported in Friday's editions.

Prudential offered to reinstate Mark Jorgenson to his position as a portfolio manager and demanded the resignation of two current executives, including the chief executive of the division where Jorgenson worked, the Times reported.

Prudential admitted Jorgenson was correct when he accused the insurer of inflating the values of certain properties in real estate funds, the Times said, citing a memorandum issued to the company's employees.

The exaggerated fund performances made them more attractive to new investors, who ended up paying more than they would have, the Times reported.

Jorgenson told the newspaper he would not accept the company's offer because he planned to move to California.

The company also settled, for an undisclosed amount, a lawsuit filed by Jorgenson after he was dismissed.

There was no answer at Prudential's Newark, N.J., headquarters Thursday night. A message left for Jorgenson's attorney was not immediately returned. It was not immediately known where Jorgenson could be reached for comment.

In the memo, Robert C. Winters, chairman and chief executive officer of Prudential, extolled the "courage and conviction" of Jorgenson, who for months had been portrayed as bitter because of a company reorganization.

Winters urged other employees to follow the lead of Jorgenson, who "took a risk and stood up for what he believed in."

"I exhort all of you to follow Mark's example if you come across any conduct unworthy of our values," he said in the memo.

Jorgenson reported his allegations of improprieties to two senior executives last summer and they began an investigation. After it was finished, Jorgenson was transferred and he filed a lawsuit, claiming he had been retaliated against.

Crack lab found at day care

By Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — Police found a crack lab in the basement of a day care center.

Deb Westbury, a 40-year-old woman who runs the center and pleaded guilty to cocaine possession in 1988, was not arrested, but state officials suspended her day care license.

Between $2,000 and $3,000 worth of cocaine was confiscated in the raid Tuesday, along with plastic bags and scales.

Police raided the day care center and a nearby apartment after receiving tips in recent days about drug activity.

Three people were arrested in the apartment raid, and all were expected to be charged with drug-related offenses.

One of those arrested, Stacey Miller, 21, rented a basement room in the house where the day care center is situated. Most of the drug-related materials were found in that room, police said.

Westbury was placed on a year's probation for the cocaine offense. In 1990, she received a state license to care for up to eight children in her home.

Applicants are required to fill out background forms, but the information is not routinely checked, said Patty Hammes, director of registration and licensing for the state Department of Health and Social Services.

Wisconsin law calls for teachers' criminal checks

By MICHAEL C. BUNLOW
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE — Wisconsin's more than 80,000 teachers will have to undergo background checks under a new law to keep child molesters out of classrooms.

"We have so many outstanding teachers in Wisconsin. They don't need their reputations tarnished by a few bad apples," Gov. Tommy G. Thompson said Thursday after signing the bill.

The bill was drafted after a 1993 Associated Press investigation found that the state had repeatedly licensed a teacher who had been convicted of molestation in California. The teacher, Charles Gaynor Anderson, later was convicted of molestating a Wisconsin boy and sentenced to 20 years in prison.

The only objection many teachers had to the law was that the investigations will be paid for by raising the cost of a five-year teaching permit from $75 to $100.

"Some people who become teachers now have a past. We don't do enough to make sure these people are well enough to be around children," said fifth-grade teacher Edelmira Wigen.

"But it's not fair to make teachers pay for it," she said. "I think the state should pay. We don't earn enough money, and this is a high-stress job."

Background checks on in-state applicants will be made by the state Justice Department. Those from out of state will be screened by the FBI.

The bill sailed through the Legislature with only one dissenting vote. Assemblywoman Shirley Krug said she was concerned the bill would lead to background checks in other professions.

Wisconsin joins seven states and the District of Columbia in requiring background checks for teachers. The states are Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida, Nevada and South Carolina.

ORLANDO — Byron Scott ruined the Orlando Magic's debut in the NBA playoffs Thursday night, hitting a 3-point shot with two seconds left to give Indiana an 89-88 victory in the opener of their best-of-5 series.

Scott scored on the Pacers' fourth shot in one trip downtown after Shaquille O'Neal's rebound tip put Orlando ahead 88-86 with 25 seconds to go. Rik Smits missed a 12-foot jumper, there was a missed tip inside and Reggie Miller misfired on a 3-pointer before Scott made his game-winning basket.

The Magic, who led by as many as 17 points, watched Nick Anderson's desperation 3-pointer sail over the rim as time expired.

Seminole girls, boys rule district again

By TONY DESORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — Employing a "Let's get the job done" attitude, the Seminole High School track teams dominated the 4A-District 6 meet Thursday at the Buddy Lawson track in Thomas E. Whigham Stadium.

The Seminole girls claimed their 17th consecutive district title by outscoring second-place St. Cloud 119-79 while the boys won their 11th straight district crown, outdistancing St. Cloud 149½-109.

In the process, the Seminoles loaded up for next Thursday's 4A-Region II meet at Clearwater High School. To qualify for the regional meet, an athlete had to finish in the top four of his or her event.

"Everything's going according to plan," said Nate Perkins, coach of the Seminole girls. "Tonight, we just worked on getting everybody through."

Shawana Montgomery and Katina Perry led the Tribe girls by winning two individual district championships apiece. Montgomery finished first in the long jump (17 feet, 3 inches) and the 100-meter dash (12.3 seconds) while Perry won the discus (111-11) and shot put (38-5) competitions.

Also winning district titles for the Tribe were Belinda Morgan (triple jump, 37-6), Tennell Hersey (300-meter intermediate hurdles, 46.5), Mildred Davis (800-meter run, 2:34.5), and Mindee Hampton (200-meter dash, 25.1). Morgan added a second-place finish in the long jump (16-2¼).

Montgomery, Morgan, Hampton, and Hersey also combined to win both the 4 x 100-meter (48.4) and 4 x 400-meter (3:59.6) relays.

Wymelka Davis qualified for the regional event in the triple jump (third, 30-11), 100-meter dash (second, 12.9), and 200-meter dash (second, 27.1). Danielle MacPherson qualified in both the triple jump (second, 33-4) and long jump (third, 15-2¼).

Scoring for the Seminoles but not qualifying for regionals were Emily Jarrell (fifth, 800-meter run) and M. Foster (sixth, shot put). Wymelka Davis also had a fifth-place finish in the long jump.

The Seminole boys will be sending a squad of 15 individuals and both relays to the regional meet.

"We qualified 15 of the 20 who competed tonight," said Seminole boys' coach Ken Brauman. "Overall, I think we performed pretty well."

Andre Scott and Bernard Sparrow did what the 'Noles expect them to do, Scott winning the triple jump (52-4½) and long jump (23-7) while Sparrow swept the discus (155-½) and shot put (61-3¼).

Seminole's other district champions were Julian Wimberly (110-meter high hurdles, 15.3), Cory Wilson (100-meter dash, 10.8), Aswad Duval (400-meter dash, 51.8), and Ansel Davis (200-meter dash, 22.4).

Scott, Wilson, Derrek Swain, and Charlie Farmer won the 4 x 100-meter relay in 41.7 while Davis, Duval, Bryant Moore, and Swain posted a winning time of 3:26.8 in the 4 x 400-meter relay.

Seminole dominated four events by sweeping at least the top three spots. In the 200-meter dash, the Tribe claimed all four region berths, Davis finishing just in front of Farmer (22.4), Wilson (22.5), and Moore (22.6).

In the triple jump, Donnell Williams (44-8½) and Robert Ruffin (44-5½) took second and third behind Scott. The top three spots in the shot put were filled by Sparrow, Terrance Moran (48-½), and Kiki Hill (46-10). Wilson, Farmer (10.9), and Davis (11.2) finished first through third in the 100-meter dash.

Multiple qualifiers for Seminole were Williams (second in the high jump, 5-10), Ruffin (fourth in the long jump, 21-1), Hill (third in the discus, 125-1), Swain (second in the 400-meter dash, 53.0), and Wimberly

Seminoles top Creek

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — It may have been ugly, but Seminole's 8-7 come-from-behind win over the Spruce Creek Hawks Thursday afternoon should have been enough for the Tribe to clinch the No. 1 seed in next week's 4A-District 6 baseball tournament.

"We had to win at least one of our last three games this week to get the No. 1 seed," said Seminole coach Mike Powers. "This should do it." After digging themselves 6-0 hole, the Seminoles came up with six runs in the bottom of the fifth to tie the score. Spruce Creek immediately regained the lead with a run in the top of the sixth but the Tribe rallied for two runs in the bottom of the seventh to pull out the victory.

Deon Daniels, who was named the Class 4A Player of the Year in District 9 earlier this week, led of the seventh with a single and stole second. Mike Meadows then singled Daniels to third and took second himself on the throw to the plate.

An out later, Corey Gochee hit a high hopper that a Spruce Creek infielder lost in the sun, allowing Daniels to score the tying run and sending Meadows to third. Gochee then stole second.

With the infield in, Tom Holland hit a ground ball. Spruce Creek was able to come up with the ball, but Meadows beat the throw to the plate and scored the game-winning run.

Gochee led Seminole's 11-hit attack by going 3-for-4 with a double and four RBI. Daniels was 2-for-4 with two runs scored and an RBI. Jamie King hit two singles and scored a run.

Seminole (16-12) will close out its regular season with a 7:30 p.m. game tonight at Oviedo.

'Hounds, Hawks advance to finals

By DEAN SMITH

LAKE MARY — Lake Mary opened the door just a crack and Lyman jumped through with both feet.

With two out and no one on base in the bottom of the first inning of the Lyman-Lake Mary semifinal in the 5A-District 4 softball tournament at the Lake Mary Sports Complex, the Greyhounds' Carolyn Crager reached on a throwing error.

Seven batters and five hits later, Lyman had a 5-0 lead and for intents and purposes, the game was over as the Greyhounds cruised to a 10-0, five-inning victory.

In the other half of the bracket, the upset bug continued to bite as the No. 7-seed Spruce Creek scored six runs in the top of the seventh inning to oust sixth-seeded Lake Howell, 10-6, and advance to the finals opposite Lyman.

The championship contest will be held tonight at 7 p.m. at the Lake Mary Sports Complex on Rantoul Lane.

"The girls played the game of their lives tonight," said Lyman head coach Christy Tibbitts. "The girls crushed the ball tonight. We scored in every inning but one. You can't do much better."

Pitcher Michelle Bishop was outstanding for the top-seeded Greyhounds as she ran her record to 19-1 on the season. The senior gave up just two hits, one of the infield variety, walked no one and got 11 ground ball outs.

Sprinklers douse Pinehurst play

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Oh my goodness, we got ourselves a natural disaster.

During the third game of the evening on the opening night of the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Thursday Night Spring Slowpitch Softball League at Pinehurst Park, it started to rain, and there was not a cloud in the sky.

With The Utter Guys leading Mobilite by the score of 1-0 after one inning of play, the sprinkler system suddenly came on and forced the game to be suspended until a later date.

In the other games, Beer:30

Budmen	313 33 - 14 17
Beer:30	401 101 0 - 7 14

scored four runs in the first inning and Briar Corporation was limited to one single as Beer:30 posted a 7-0 shutout; and the Budmen scored in every inning in topping Ryder, 14-2.

Contributing to the Beer:30 offense were Spencer Buggett (triple, single, three RBI), Tim Allison (double, single, run), Chuck Cornetto (two singles, two runs, RBI), Dave Coss (two singles, run, two RBI), Jerry Camus (two singles, run), Mike Miller and Rodney Curry (one single and one run each), Todd Pagel and Jim Reid (one single each) and Bob Garner (RBI).

 Bishop's biggest supporter was Cruger, who collected a triple, double, three runs, and two RBI. On defense, she had one put out and five assists from her position at shortstop.
 Also contributing for Lyman (20-1) were Jodie Beland (2-for-3, run), Bishop (double, two runs), Jamie Beland (1-for-2, run, two RBI), Jonnie Beland (1-for-2, run, RBI), Karen Kalkac (1-for-2, run), Stacey Ritter (single, RBI) and Wendt Aey (run).
 Joya Capo and Diane Duher were both one-for-two for Lake Mary (11-14).
SPRUCE CREEK RALLIES
 Spruce Creek (18-12) took advantage of a tiring Roseann Fry to rally for its second upset of the tournament.
 Fry (6-4) allowed four runs, only one of which was earned, in the top of the first inning, but then settled down to shut out the Hawks over the next five innings.
 But the freshman, who pitched six innings in a victory over Deland on Wednesday, started to tire in the fifth inning and ran out of gas in the seventh, walking three consecutive batters without throwing a strike and forcing head coach Glen Arterburn to make a pitching change.
 Christy Goding singled to cut the lead to 6-5 and, after a pop up, Jamie Clarke singled in two runs to put Spruce Creek ahead. Leah Nelson then put the game

Sweet onion, Florida-style

Move over, Vidalia, for St. Augustine Sweet

Make way Vidalia, Florida's sugary "St. Augustine Sweet" has arrived, and these onions have got Georgia on their mind. I know this column is usually on consumerism but this onion has just hit the marketplace and I wanted you to know about it! You might not be aware that marketing new food items, especially fruits or vegetables is as demanding and market-intensive as marketing a new car!

They were expected to reach southeastern markets by Saturday, April 16. The sweet onions developed at the University of Florida are long in the making and kissed by the Florida sunshine, says Dale Hensel of UF's IFAS, who's worked for 30 years to perfect the flavorful harvest now poised to give Georgia's Vidalia onions a high-profile run for their money.

"The Vidalia is a good onion, there's no two ways about it, but the 'St. Augustine Sweet' tastes just as good, or better," said Hensel, who's helped form a North Florida growers cooperative that hopes to ship 400 tons of onions in the next two weeks and grab a share of the sweet onion market long dominated by the Vidalia.

The St. Augustine Onion Growers Exchange won't take on Vidalia head-to-head, said exchange manager Reggie Brown of the Florida Fruit and Vegetable Association.

CONSUMER FOCUS

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

Florida's earlier planting cycle allows these onions to reach market two to three weeks before the Vidalia, a key advantage in both introducing the onions and in gaining market share.

This will be a relatively small venture trying to establish an identity with consumers, and they are very aware of the fact they've got to produce a quality sweet onion and maintain that quality which will position us in the marketplace for a long time.

The exchange has a one-time, exclusive agreement with Publix Supermarkets to sell the onions, which features a logo of a Spanish conquistador thrusting out a large "St. Augustine Sweet" in his right hand. They'll be available in stores in Florida, Georgia and South Carolina for the next two weeks, Brown said.

This year Publix can handle all onions produced, but next year they'll hopefully have the brand name established to the point where people will be requesting them in stores everywhere.

Putnam County grower and exchange president, Greg Bernard, who grew up in Vidalia Onion country, said both states have a good, sweet onion to offer. The difference is Georgia growers have done an excellent job marketing Vidalia onions.

"I've been growing these onions small-time for years, and I still have family up there in Vidalia, Ga., who I've been sending them to, and they say these onions are comparable to, if not better than the Vidalias," Bernard said.

Grower Frank Johns Jr. of Hastings, exchange vice president, said the sky's the limit for "St. Augustine Sweet," given Florida has loads of sunshine and soil types beneficial to growing sweet onions.

Florida sunshine certainly makes our oranges sweeter, so we're banking that it's going to make our onions sweeter. Next time you're in the store you might want to try this new onion. Supporting our own Florida agriculture will help keep the money where it belongs!

Garden of the Month

The home and grounds of Matthew and Rena McDonald, 305 Larkwood Drive, Idylwild, have been selected by the Garden Club of Sanford for the April Garden of the Month Award. A flower bed runs from the house to an orange tree in the front with beds of azaleas accenting the front. An oak tree and a palm tree add to the attractive landscape. The McDonald garden was chosen by Mary Childers of Mimosa Circle of the Sanford garden Club.

Con man outsmarted by 'smart lady'

DEAR ABBY: I saved a column you wrote dated Feb. 10, 1990. Although it's more than four years old, it should be repeated every few years.

I can vouch for its importance because I was one of those people who got stung. I'm signing my real name, but please don't print it. Sign me...

A SUCKER IN OKLAHOMA
DEAR SUCKER: I agree. That column is well worth repeating. And here it is!

DEAR ABBY: The following incident just happened, and it occurred to me you could publicize it to warn others:

One recent afternoon, a man phoned and asked if I was "Mrs. O." living at (my address). I verified the facts. Then he said he handles my account at the bank and asked me if I would be so kind as to get my Visa and Mastercard so he could check the numbers and expiration dates, as the bank is issuing new cards and he wanted the information to be correct.

ADVICE

I laughed and told him he must be out of his mind to think I would give that kind of information over the telephone. Then

I hung up.

I called the police department and reported the incident, and I was transferred to the bunco squad, who happily took all the information and said I was a "smart lady" because, since the caller already had my name, address and telephone number, all he needed were my credit card numbers to make purchases by phone.

Abby, please let people know that if they ever get a telephone call (supposedly from a bank employee) asking to "verify" their credit card numbers, they should get the person's name and call the bank to verify it.

JUNE G. IN DEL MAR, CALIF.
DEAR JUNE G.: You are, indeed, a "smart lady" — and thanks for a valuable tip! You deserve a lot of credit.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning your article on escalators my son once got his sneaker caught in the broken steps of a poorly maintained escalator, and was caught there while the escalator slowly chewed up his sneaker and threatened to injure his foot.

Luckily, he was not injured, and we learned at that time that all escalators have an emergency shut-off button located at the top and bottom. They are mostly colored red and are located below the handrail close to the floor. I think it would be a good idea to notify your readers of this safety item.

CHARLIE LOMBARDI,

DEAR CHARLIE: Thanks for the tip.

Smart teens not too wise in areas

DEAR MARY: Teen-agers today are sick of hearing all the scare tactics about drugs, sex and AIDS. I think it's really about adults trying to control us and make us live like they did 50 years ago. Well, it isn't going to happen. We're smarter than any group of people our age has ever been and we have more opportunities. Why don't adults just get it through their heads that we're going to make our own decisions about what we do with drugs and sex, so stop trying to make us think we'll self-destruct if we have a beer now and then. Also, I've never known anyone with AIDS and I'll bet this whole business is blown way out of proportion by conservative adults who think all teen-agers are sex-crazed druggies. I'll be checking to see if you have the nerve to print this.

SMART KID
DEAR KID: We do agree on some things; kids today are smarter than ever before and certainly do have more opportunities than any other generation in history. That's both the good news and the bad news.

DRUG COUNSELOR

MARY BALK

While having a couple beers will not automatically make you self-destruct, your clouded judgment following those beers could well prove fatal.

You may already know all of this but let's review some of the AIDS-related dangers you face every day. You cannot tell if someone has the HIV virus by looking at them. A blood test is the only way to be sure.

Indeed, you might very well know several people infected with HIV right now. More than 20 percent of the people who have AIDS are in their 20s. Since it takes up to 10 years for symptoms to appear, it's obvious that many got infected in their teens.

Also, the number of reported AIDS cases among teen-agers increased 96 percent between 1988 and 1990. Finally, remember that AIDS is fatal. Therefore, since as you say teens today are smarter than ever before, it seems obvious that using or doing anything that causes you to forget what's important and distract you from reality must definitely be avoided.

LET US REPLENISH THE SEED OF FAITH THROUGH... Regular Church Attendance

The "WHAT IFs?"

"What if I accept this position and find I can't handle the responsibility?"
 "What if I marry and choose the wrong partner?"
 "What if I fly to Paris and my plane crashes over the Atlantic Ocean?"

What if I gave you a solution to the "what ifs"? As long as we continue to function, we must make decisions daily. Many decisions carry little risk. Others may change the course of our lives.

However, decisions need not be stressful or frosted with negativity. God is our Source of positive power. In Matthew 21:22, we are promised... "whatever you ask in prayer, you will receive, if you have faith." Though our prayer may or may not be answered as we expect...our prayer is always heard and answered as God wills it.

Visit God this Sabbath. Talk with Him and trust Him with your daily concerns. Let go of your "what ifs". Why not?

Brian McIntosh, left, James Walker and Kerl Keith sent out an alert to motorists of a car wash at Taco Bell to benefit the Sanford Church of God Youth Group recently. ## Jones in concert for Friend Day service

LAKE MARY — Local jazz artist, Jacqueline Jones will appear in concert at Crossings Community Church, 390 Longwood-Lake Mary Rd., this Sunday, May 1, during the 10 a.m. service.

The community is invited to share in the celebration of Friend Day at Crossings. There will be clowns, games and fun for the kids.

Jones is a well-known artist in the Central Florida area. By the age of 19, Jones already had 15 years to her credit as a professional gospel singer. Today her performances are a spirited blend of jazz, rhythm and blues and contemporary top 40.

Between performances in Atlantic City, Washington and New Orleans, she draws audiences in her home town of Orlando. Throughout the year, she generously contributes her time and talent to local benefits, including the American Cancer Society, United Negro College Fund and AIDS fund raisers.

What gives in today's churches?

Are churches now finding that charity begins at home?

Church people today are not contributing as much as they used to for their less fortunate neighbors. This is leading to fears that we are tired of giving, no matter how good the cause.

The biblical "Love thy neighbor as thyself" has been replaced as a guide for living (and giving) by the worldly "Look out first for No. 1."

It may not always appear that church people are selfish. Total dollar giving to U.S. churches is up. But proportional giving is down -- from an average of 3.1 percent of family income in 1968 to 2.6 percent today.

More disturbing to some, however, is how the money is being spent.

The bulk of it stays in the local parish to provide services for the parishioners who contributed the money. In effect, church people are spending more of the money they give on themselves.

"Young churchgoers particularly," says one religious official, "are more likely to choose a church based on what benefit they can expect from it -- such as family oriented programs or even a good handball court."

RELIGION

George Plagenz

Therefore, less of the money being dropped into collection plates on Sunday is going to programs outside the walls of the local church.

Church spending on charitable benevolences -- "everything from soup kitchens to missionary work -- is shrinking compared with spending on ministers' salaries, building drives and programs for members," says a nonprofit research organization.

One current report focuses on giving patterns in the Presbyterian Church in the United States and the Reformed Church in America. It was done by Roger Nemeth and Donald Lukena, sociology professors at Hope College in Holland, Mich. They conclude: "A consumer mentality towards church membership is now common" in both denominations.

The two researchers say it goes back to the post-war era when "thousands of families with young children flooded the religious marketplace, searching for a church by using the same strategies employed while looking for other consumer goods and services. It created a heightened demand for specialized services and professionally staffed programs."

These sort of things cost money and that left the local parish church with even less to contribute to denominational headquarters for charitable programs and benevolence. Today $4 out of every $5 given by Presbyterians to their church stay in the local parish.

Something that has added to the cost of running the local church is the loss of volunteer workers. Many Americans find themselves just too busy to contribute their time as freely as did previous generations.

The primary victims of this self-centered turn taken by local churches are the poor, the needy and the homeless.

Drinking can lead to impotence

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband says that drinking a six-pack or more of beer a day is not the reason for his impotence. He feels it's because he's 62. I don't know how to handle the problem.

Also, your family physician may wish to examine your husband, test his liver and address the alcohol issue. To give you more information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports "Impotence"

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

and "Help It: Mental/Substance Abuse."

DEAR READER: While it's true that impotence is associated with age (because of less efficient circulation and other factors), alcohol can certainly aggravate the situation.

Heavy drinkers of any age often experience sexual difficulties, in part because alcohol affects the liver, the organ that neutralizes the small amount of the female hormone estrogen that every male produces. When this estrogen is not altered by the liver, the hormone circulates in the bloodstream and can affect potency. It can also lead to enlarged breasts, a common component of cirrhosis that results from alcohol abuse.

Although your husband may be partially correct, the amount of alcohol he consumes daily could clearly be adding to his problem. A six-pack a day habit is considered by many drinkers to be a "normal" amount; however, from a medical standpoint, it is clearly excessive. As a general rule, the liver cannot handle more than four ounces of spirits a day, or the equivalent in beer (two or three cans) and wine (two or three glasses).

You're probably going to fall in your efforts to make your husband moderate his beer intake. He'll view your pleading merely as "fussing" or harassment. So, I suggest that you focus on yourself. Ask your doctor to help you or attend an Al-Anon meeting in your community. Al-Anon is a support group for people whose loved ones are alcoholic, as I suspect your husband is (because he is unwilling to modify his behavior in the face of a probable physical effect from the alcohol).

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
P.G. Wodehouse wrote, "Judges, as a class, display, in the matter of arranging alimony, that reckless generosity which is found only in men who are giving away someone else's cash."

when East got in with the spade ace, another club lead promoted West's spade queen as the setting trick.

club on the diamond ace and loses only one more trump trick.

Well, on today's deal, you be the judge. South was the husband, North his wife — and, yes, they are still married.

"How unlucky can I be?" asked South. "Why should East have five clubs and only one spade?"
