Birthday celebrations don't have to wait all day to happen

Birthday Coffeecake Starts Morning

Next time there's a birthday at your house, start the celebration early with a festive breakfast. A morning meal of special treats sets the tone of the day and gets the occasion off on a happy note.

Besides being good-tasting and attractive, the breakfast fare also should be packed with nutrition to see the birthday person through his or her very own day.

County Morning Birthday Coffeecake rises to the occasion. It's appealing and nutritious, made with all-natural ingredients including Kellogg's Country Morning cereal. Following the easy muffin method, the cake is quickly prepared in only 10 minutes and baked for about an hour. Bake it the night before, drizzle with Vanilla Glaze and serve the next morning. The sweet spice flavor and chewy texture make this wonderful cake a tasty and healthful way to start the day.

If the guest of honor can't decide between eggs or cereal, serve both. Crisp-Topped Baked Eggs are impressive, easy and interesting with a contrast of textures and tastes. Eggs are broken into individual custard cups, seasoned and covered with crunchy oven-toasted rice cereal.

COUNTRY MORNING BIRTHDAY COFFEECAKE

4 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
2 cups Kellog's Country Morning Creal
1-½ cups packed light brown sugar
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
3 eggs
2 cups buttermilk
½ cup regular margarine or butter, melted

In large bowl mix flour, all-natural cereal, brown sugar, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg. Beat together eggs, buttermilk and melted margarine. Add all at once to flour mixture; stir just until dry ingredients are moistened. Turn into greased and floured 10-inch tube pan. Bake in 350 degrees F. oven 1 hour to 1 hour and 10 minutes, or until cake tester inserted in cake comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes, remove from pan and cool completely. Spread Vanilla Glaze over top and let drizzle down sides of coffeecake.

YIELD: 1 10-inch coffeecake

VANILLA GLAZE

1 cup unsifted confectioners' sugar
2 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon regular margarine or butter, softened

In medium bowl mix all ingredients until smooth

Green Beans Always Versatile Vegetable

Green beans have been a desirable vegetable for very many years. Traced to pre-Incan days in South America, they were transported to Europe by Spanish explorers. Green or "snap" beans soon flourished across Europe. From Europe, settlers introduced the beans to the United States.

Today, green beans are served once a week or more by almost three-fourths of all homemakers in the U.S. Popular with both sexes and all age groups, green beans as a versatile favorite ranks second only to canned corn in all canned vegetables sold.

GREEN BEAN TOMATO SPECIAL

1 can (16 oz.) stewed tomatoes
1 can (16 oz.) cut green beans, drained
2 Tbsp. mayonnaise
1 tsp. Worchestershire sauce
½ tsp. salt
Dash Cayenne pepper
Dash pepper
½ cup crushed potato chips or
1 cup seasoned croutons

Combine tomatoes, beans, mayonnaise, Worchestershire sauce, salt, cayenne pepper and black pepper in a 2-quart casserole dish. Sprinkle crushed potato chips on top; bake uncovered at 350 degrees F., 30 minutes. 4 to 6 servings.

SPICY GREEN BEAN BAKE

½ lb. sliced bacon
1¼ cups chopped onion
¾ cup chopped green pepper
1 small clove garlic, minced
2 cans (16 oz.) French style green beans
1 can (10½ oz.) condensed tomato soup
1 cup sliced pitted ripe olives
¼ cup sherry
1 tsp. chili powder
½ tsp. salt
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Cook bacon until crisp; drain and set aside. Pour off most of fat from skillet; add onion, green pepper and garlic. Saute 2 minutes. Combine sauted mixture, green beans, half the bacon, soup, olives, sherry, chili powder and salt in a 2-quart casserole. Sprinkle cheese on top and bake uncovered at 350 degrees F., 30 minutes. Garnish with remaining bacon and serve. 10 to 12 servings.

Green beans — everybody's favorite

Glamorous Dessert For Cholesterol-Concious

BANANA CREAM PIE

1 cup unsifted flour
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup (1 stick) 100 pct. corn oil margarine
3 tablespoons ice water
2-3rds cup sugar
1-3rd cup cornstarch
2 cups skim milk
½ cup cholesterol-free egg substitute
1 tablespoon 100 pct. corn oil margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup diced bananas
¾ cup apricot preserves
1 banana, sliced

Combine flour and ½ teaspoon salt in a bowl. Cut in ½ cup margarine with pastry blender or two knives until mixture resembles coarse meal. Stir in ice water; mix well.

On floured board, roll out dough to fit a 9-inch pie plate. Transfer to plate and trim off edges leaving ½-inch overhanging. Fold edges under and flute. Bake at 425 degrees F. 10 to 12 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from oven and cool on wire rack.

Combine sugar, cornstarch and remaining ¼ teaspoon salt in a heavy saucepan. Gradually blend in skim milk and egg substitute. Add 1 tablespoon margarine. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until thick and mixture begins to boil. Remove from heat; beat until smooth. Stir in vanilla extract and diced banana. Pour into prepared pie shell. Chill at least one hour.

Just before serving, heat and strain apricot preserves. Arrange sliced banana on pie, then top with strained preserves. Makes 8 servings.

Cheshire Suit Could Set Trend: Williams

A lawsuit over courthouse office space, filed Wednesday against the Seminole County Commission by State Atty. Douglas Cheshire, could have statewide implications, county officials said today.

"From the magnitude of the documents, he's been working on it for weeks," Commission Chairman Dick Williams predicted.

"It wasn't a surprise," Williams said. "The issue is how much space and where."

The lawsuit, filed Wednesday for Cheshire by Asst. State Atty. Jerrold Bross, seeks both temporary and permanent injunctions against county commissioners restraining them "from interfering with the state attorney's rights in and to courthouse space."

Williams said Cheshire "obviously" had prepared the suit before the state attorney appeared before the county commission on Tuesday.

The chairman said the suit could determine state attorney's rights across Florida, in addition to Seminole.

Cheshire is seeking twice the office space in the courthouse his prosecutors occupy. The commission agrees the space should be provided, but disagree on whether the space must be "in" the courthouse.

No hearing date has been set for the civil action which has been assigned to Circuit Judge Dominick Salfi.

Cheshire is also seeking a court order immediately declaring his right to have courthouse space for "a proper and efficient facility" with a minimum of 4,279 square feet of floor space—in accordance with standards set by the state

Firemen Aid Mom In 'Surprise Arrival'

By JEAN PATTESON
Herald Staff Writer

At 9:18 this morning Firemen Carl Helms and Pete Tucker got the call. A baby was being born: location, 127 Academy Ave., Sanford.

Frantically, the men spun their fire inspection truck out of the driveway of the Westside Recreation Center where they were about to conduct an inspection.

At 9:20 they arrived at the address.

At 9:21 a baby boy was delivered to Melissa Johnson, 19.

"That young 'un wasn't going to wait on nothing," grinned Fireman Tucker, back in the Sanford Fire Dept. headquarters.

"It was great," he added. "I didn't know how I'd feel if I was ever called to deliver a baby, but when you realize you've helped bring a human being into the world. . .well, it's great."

Fireman Helms said he felt a whole lot better once it was all over. "Although when we got there, it was too late to think about it or feel nervous, things were happening so fast.

"She did all the work," he added. "We were just standing by to take the baby as it arrived."

Helms explained that the Fire Department's rescue unit, complete with obstetrics kit for use in just such an emergency, arrived exactly one minute after the baby was born. The firemen were then able to clamp the umbilical cord. They had already made sure that the

Regional Sewer Panel Shopping For County Land

By MARK WEINBERG
Herald Staff Writer

The Regional Interim Sewer Plant Committee has taken the first step toward acquiring land for a regional sewage treatment system.

The group, composed of representatives of Lake Mary, Sanford and Seminole County governments, voted Wednesday to determine the availability of land on a purchase or lease basis for a spray irrigation system.

The committee also continued its consideration of the powers and responsibilities of an elected governing board which will design and operate a regional system.

When the interim committee completes its plan for the permanent body, it will draft proposed legislation for Seminole's state legislators. A permanent group must be created by state law.

Paul Porter of Clark, Dietz and Associates, the consulting engineering firm working with the committee, suggested the committee "talk to some real estate people . . . and see what the prices are and the availability of the land."

The committee voted to inform local realtors and landowners of the committee's interest in land for spray irrigation through newspaper advertising and notices to all realtors within the regional planning district.

Landowners and realtors were invited to contact Porter at his Sanford office by calling 322-6841.

In a spray irrigation system, waste water is piped to a treatment facility where about 95 per cent of the pollutants are removed. The remaining water (called "effluent") is thinly sprayed over land planted with a crop such as hay, which is harvested and sold.

The land under spray irrigation according to consulting engineer Dr. Jess C. Dietz, "retains a productive use . . . It is always reconvertible to any normal use after spraying. Schools, housing or anything else could be built on the land."

At least 2,000 acres would be needed for the spray irrigation system.

Committee member W.E. Knowles, Sanford's city manager, criticized other members for spending too much time on details of the methods to be used by Porter to determine the availability of land.

"If we're going to sit up here day after day and get involved in details, we're wasting time," he said.

The permanent board will have the responsibility of constructing, owning, operating, controlling and maintaining a regional treatment facility, the committee decided Wednesday. This will include development of the treatment plant and major transmission lines to the plant.

When the committee has finished designating the governing board's powers and responsibilities, a team of lawyers representing the county, Sanford and Lake Mary will put the proposal into detailed legal language.

The interim committee voted Wednesday that the governing board would be empowered to:

— Employ staff, including an executive director.

— Enter land, water or premises served by the system for inspection purposes.

— Set and collect fees, rates and charges, including special one-time charges if needed. There must be a minimum of three months between the governing board's adoption of a rate change and the change's effective date, the committee decided.

BRUSHING UP WITH THE 'TOOTH FAIRY'

"You can't fool Mother Nature," as we all know — and it's not too cool either to fool around with the "Tooth Fairy," as pupils from Mrs. Mary Jane Barbour's kindergarten class at Pinecrest Elementary School, Sanford, learned Wednesday. Preparing for National Children's Dental Health Week beginning Monday, the "Tooth Fairy" (Mrs. Gail Stewart) warned a rapt, captive audience on how to and not to brush teeth — demonstrating the former. Her audience (from left, standing) Joyce Dykes and Lee Bullock; (seated) Michael Perry and Danielle Strickland. Next week's event will be highlighted with selection of winners in the smile and poster contests Wednesday at 7 p.m. at Altamonte Mall. Seminole winners then will compete for the Central Florida title at Howard High School, Orlando, Feb. 12 at 11 a.m. The Tooth Fairy Wednesday also visited Idyllwilde Elementary School.

NATION
IN BRIEF

Winter Woes Spreading Despite New Gas Supplies

NEW YORK (AP) — New supplies of natural gas are already flowing east, but the effects of the bitter winter of 1977 are spreading even faster. Layoffs, for example, have begun reaching into New England — an area spared until now because it uses little natural gas. In Ohio and western New York State, two of the hardest-hit areas, calm weather and slightly rising temperatures on Wednesday gave something of a respite to cleanup crews and river pilots trying to deliver fuel. But a new snowstorm, moving through the West, promised more trouble as it headed for the Great Lakes.

Carter Talk Brings Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is moving ahead on Carter administration proposals to create jobs and cut taxes after hearing the President appeal for sacrifices by the people and promise that the government will join in giving up comforts once taken for granted. Carter's low-key address mixed promises of action on the nation's most pressing problems with calls for sacrifice as the only path to long-range solutions.

Weather Interrupts Mail

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neither rain nor snow nor anything else is supposed to keep the mail from getting through. But that's been a tall order this frigid winter. The Postal Service has been called upon to deliver mail through arctic temperatures, howling winds and blizzards this winter. Mail could not be delivered Saturday, Monday, and Tuesday in Buffalo, Watertown and Rochester, N.Y., and surrounding areas.

Couple Offer Shelter

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — Somewhere in the East or Midwest, thoroughly chilled and perhaps snowed in, there must be a husband and wife who wouldn't mind spending a few months in sunny California — rent free. Frances and Harold Stark know just the place. "We'd like to open our home to a couple who'd like to get out of the cold," Mrs. Stark, 62, said Wednesday. "It's so cold in the East and there are people out of work and having trouble making ends meet. Maybe it would be cheaper for someone there to come out here and get warm." The Starks live in a two-bedroom, two-bathroom mobile home here with their 13-year-old cat Rusty. They say there's plenty of room for two refugees from the deep freeze.

Stolen Property Found; 11-Year-Old A Suspect

By BOB LLOYD
Herald Staff Writer

Sanford police have charged an 11-year-old boy with armed burglary and two 14-year-old boys with possession of stolen property and recovered stolen firearms and items valued at $4,000.

Detective John Foster said the recovered items, including rifles, shotguns, pistols, tools, coins, clothing, a CB radio, fishing equipment and stereo gear, were taken in burglaries over a seven-month period from homes in the southeast section of the city.

He said other charges are pending further investigation. The three juveniles were turned over to authorities at the Sanford Juvenile Detention Center, police said.

Foster, Lt. Ralph Russell and patrolman Lewis Coombs made the arrests Wednesday night after a neighbor reported seeing two boys firing pistols.

The cache of burglary loot was found in the residences of two of the juveniles, Foster said.

Officers said the youthful burglary suspects apparently hit homes both in daylight and at night entering by windows. Investigators said at least 10 burglaries were cleared by the arrests.

Foster said some of the loot recovered came from a burglary reported Wednesday at the 804 Escambia Dr. residence of Richard Scott Burns.

Coombs reported four rifles, two handguns, a quantity of ammunition, stereo equipment and other items, total value $899, were reported missing from the house after the burglary.

Officers said most of the items were recovered when the juvenile suspects were arrested.

Sanford police today were investigating a Wednesday night burglary at Gibson Beer Garden, 1603 W. 13th St., in which three cases of beer, three cases of wine and money from vending machines was stolen after someone forced open a restroom window.

Sheriff's deputies reported an unidentified man armed with a snub-nosed pistol robbed the Pizza Inn, 209 U.S. 17-92, Fern Park, Wednesday night and escaped on foot with an undetermined amount of cash.

Deputies today were also investigating four auto burglaries in parking areas at Springwood Village Apartments, SR-434 and I-4 west of Longwood. Officers reported CB radios were stolen in all four break-ins.

Michael Terry, of 1515 Croton Dr., Altamonte Springs, reported power tools valued at $464 were stolen from a parked van, deputy Ron Gilbert reported today.

Deputy R.D. Strobridge reported a tire and wheel, movie projector and cutlery set, total value $235, were reported missing after burglars pried open a door to enter the residence of David Ohlwiler, SR-426 near Goldenrod in southeast Seminole.

Seminole Memorial Hospital officials reported a 17-year-old Sanford man was treated for minor injuries and released Wednesday after a farm tractor fell on him.

Sheriff's deputies said Kenneth Dozier, 17, of P.O. Box 3476, Sanford, was attempting to jack up a tractor at Hartz Farm, Lake Avenue, Sanford, when the tractor fell on him.

Pushers Selling Deadly Powder

Seminole Sheriff John Polk today issued a warning that a whitish, granular substance resembling heroin or cocaine can cause instant death or mental impairment.

Polk said there have been no reports of the chemical, identified as "Lance" — a lethal form of powdered tear gas in talcum form — showing up in central Florida but that citizens should be alerted to the substance.

Authorities have reported the substance, if tasted, causes instant death and if smelled causes irreparable brain damage, Polk said. He said the substance has turned up so far in Texas, Colorado, Oregon and Washington state.

"Lance" always comes in airtight packages of plastic, foil or bags, Polk said, and apparently is being sold in some areas of the U.S. to drug users as cocaine or heroin.

He said the substance could also be used to kill or impair law enforcement officers who normally smell or taste suspected illegal drugs.

The sheriff said any package of substance suspected of being "Lance" should not be opened but submitted to the sheriff's department for laboratory testing.

HELP! STOP CRIME!

Restaurateur Killing Brings Life Sentence

A 40-year-old Atlanta man has been sentenced to life imprisonment after admitting he planned for a week to gun down an uncle whom he hadn't seen in 15 years.

Harold Walsh, 73-year-old former owner of the Maison et Jardin restaurant at Altamonte Springs was shot in the back and head as he pruned citrus trees Dec. 9 in a grove near his home.

Tilden Charles Walsh Jr., 40, of Atlanta, pleaded guilty to first-degree murder in the slaying Wednesday afternoon and told Circuit Court Judge Kenneth Leffler that he'd formed the intent to kill his uncle five or six days before in Atlanta.

Tilden Walsh said he purchased a pistol in Atlanta and came to Florida to kill his uncle.

Police said the elder Walsh apparently didn't recognize his nephew when the gunman approached him in the grove.

Walsh didn't reveal a motive for the slaying in court but police have said there was a longstanding feud over some land.

Walsh told the court he drove to Altamonte Springs from Atlanta, checked into a motel and then went to his uncle's home off Wymore Road.

"I found him working in the grove with three other men," Tilden Walsh said. "I drew him aside from the other men so they wouldn't be hurt," Walsh said, "and I shot him three or four times."

Defense attorney Franklin Kelley told the court that Walsh fled the murder scene and went back to the motel where he telephoned police that he'd just shot a man. Officers took Walsh into custody at the motel a short time later.

Tilden Walsh told the court that he'd had emotional problems over the last 22 months and had been treated by doctors and was taking prescribed "mood elevator" pills at the time of the slaying.

Judge Leffler, in a brief hearing before accepting the guilty plea to murder, ruled that Walsh was legally sane when the crime was committed and knew right from wrong. He said the ruling was based on reports from two court-appointed psychiatrists who examined the defendant.

As part of the plea negotiations in the case, State Atty. Douglas Cheshire agreed not to ask for the death penalty.

Cheshire told the court that there were no aggravating circumstances, as defined in state law, upon which he could ask for the death penalty.

Cheshire said Walsh's criminal record showed an arrest in 1963 at Pensacola for false registration at a motel and a 1963 Orlando forgery conviction in which Walsh was sentenced to a year in jail.

Cheshire said law enforcement officers "put together the most classic homicide case this courtroom will ever hear" in the Walsh case. He said investigators worked in both Georgia and Florida and "provided an excellent case file" for the prosecutor.

After being told by Judge Leffler that he must serve a mandatory 25 years in prison on the life sentence before becoming eligible for parole consideration, Walsh asked that he be confined in some state facility where he can continue to receive psychiatric therapy.

"It was a terrible crime that I committed," Walsh told the court, "and I'm truly sorry."

Baby Arrives

infant's breathing passages were cleared and it was breathing normally.

Moments later, Herndon ambulance attendants arrived and cut the umbilical cord. They then rushed the mother and her baby off to Seminole Memorial hospital.

A hospital spokesman said at 11 o'clock that the doctors were still with the pair, but mother and son appeared to be doing fine.

Helms, who has been with the Sanford Fire Department four years, and Tucker just six months, both said this was their first delivery. "We were lucky — it was quick, easy and no complications," breathed a relieved Helms.

Fire Chief George M. Harriett explained that his firemen are taught how to deliver babies during their Emergency Medical Technican (EMT) training program, and that they are certified by the State to assist during such emergencies.

"It's one of our jobs — to preserve life," said Harriett, adding that the two firemen had done a commendable job. "It was a performance we can all be proud of."

The chief said that firemen often wonder if all the courses they attend are really worth it. "But today their training paid off," he concluded.

"Citizens are depending more and more on the fire service for life preservation, be it a heart attack, an automobile accident or a delivery like this morning. Firemen have to be flexible, and I think these two men proved this morning that they are able to react to any kind of problem."

Park Opening Set For Friday

Dedication and ribbon-cutting ceremonies opening Coastline Park — Sanford's newest — will take place 10 a.m., Friday rain or shine.

The seven-acre park is located at West Ninth Street and Poplar Avenue, the site of the old Sanford train depot.

Even if it rains, "it would be an inconvenience to wait another day," said city Parks and Recreation Director Jim Jernigan, "because (Seaboard Coastline) officials will be traveling a long way for the ceremony."

Railroad officials last year donated the site to the city for a park.

City commissioners, the Seminole High School band and a Marine color guard will be at the ceremony, along with local and regional Seaboard Coastline Railroad officials.

"This new park is a great example of cooperation between community and industrial leaders," Jernigan said.

The new park will have tennis and basketball courts and picnic facilities (tables, benches and grills), all of which will be lighted at night. — Mark Weinberg

Storm Hits New Mexico

By The Associated Press

A winter storm, centered over western Texas, began to weaken overnight after dumping up to eight inches of snow over the mountains of New Mexico. But snow still was falling this morning across portions of east and north New Mexico as well as across the Texas panhandle and northwest Oklahoma.

A winter storm warning was extended into today across eastern New Mexico, and travel advisories were up for north Texas and northwest Oklahoma, where one to three inches of snow was predicted.

The upper air disturbance that set off the storm in the Rockies also spread scattered snow and thundershowers across much of eastern Texas and Louisiana.

Snow was falling today from north Missouri to the Great Lakes. Travel advisories covered northeastern Missouri, north and central Illinois, northern Indiana, and Michigan. Gale warnings covered Lake Superior and Lake Huron.

Dense fog covered portions of eastern Kansas and western Missouri, as well as parts of the Pacific coast. Elsewhere, clear or partly cloudy skies prevailed.

Disaster Officials Begin Processing Jobless Claims

HOMESTEAD (AP) — In the wake of the worst freeze in state history, disaster officials here and in 34 other Florida counties set up shop today to begin processing the first of an expected 50,000 claims for unemployment benefits.

To handle the crush of out-of-work migrants seeking the $64-a-week checks, officials set up emergency offices in seven Florida cities.

In addition, they said migrants who believe they are eligible could file claims at the nearest state unemployment compensation office.

Killers Denied Wedding Wish

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — Condemned killers Sonia Jacobs and Jessie Tafero won't get their wish to make their toddler legitimate with a Death Row wedding.

In expressing their desire last week, the murderers said they wanted to get married just for the sake of the 21-month-old girl. Wednesday, prisons director Louie Wainwright rejected the plea.

Wainwright said the illegitimacy could be taken care of through adoption by another couple after the executions are carried out. He also said the wedding would "serve no useful purpose."

Fire Damages Jax Hotel

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — A second alarm fire damaged the 10-story Hilton Motel in downtown Jacksonville early today. Fire officials said no injuries were reported but several guests were evacuated from their rooms.

Firemen said the fire has been extinguished but there was still smoke in the building.

The cause of the fire was not known. Firemen said it was believed to have started on the third floor. During the blaze firemen extended ladders to the third floor to evacuate guests.

Guilty Verdict Causes Robber To Collapse

Robert Charles McGill, 31, of Orlando, was in county jail today pending sentencing March 31 after being found guilty Wednesday by a circuit court jury of kidnaping, robbery and aggravated assault upon a policeman.

McGill collapsed and had to be bodily carried to jail from the courtroom, sheriff's deputies reported, after the verdict was announced at the end of the two-day trial before Circuit Judge Robert B. McGregor.

McGill was convicted on circumstantial evidence of being the stocking masked man, armed with a sawed-off shotgun, who kidnaped plastering contractor Kelsie Whisenhunt from the Lake Monroe Inn parking lot the night of Nov. 24, forced him to drive to a nearby rail yard and robbed him of his pickup truck, $40 and an electric fishing reel.

That same night a man driving McGill's small yellow auto fired a shotgun blast at Sanford policeman Mitch Tindel when he stopped the auto at Pecan Ave. and Seventh St. The man escaped into a wooded area and a police search failed to turn up a suspect or the weapon.

Whisenhunt's electric fishing reel, with McGill's fingerprints on it, was found in the abandoned auto.

After the kidnap-robbery McGill reported to authorities that his car had been stolen while he was at a Jai Alai fronton at Fern Park.

No charges have been made in the kidnap-robbery of Lake Monroe Postmaster Robert Mann at the same parking lot a half-hour after Whisenhunt was abducted.

Mann had spotted the yellow car unlocked and unoccupied in the parking area and was locking it when he was abducted by a shotgun wielding masked man and taken to the same rail yard and robbed. — Bob Lloyd

Utility Bureau Rap?

By ED PRICKETT
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County's utility department is expected to be rapped today during this year's quarterly budget review.

Other than utilities, county government is in sound financial shape, Pat Gilsson said this morning.

Gilsson is chief of the Office of Management Analysis and Evaluation (OMAE). OMAE prepares the quarterly reviews, which are designed to monitor county government operations.

Gilsson said this year's report is basically the same as last year's. Last year's quarterly financial review zeroed in on utilities as a "problem area" in county government.

As a result of the 1976 analysis, the county commission raised rates for about 2,000 customers in South Seminole who are served by Seminole's two utilities — Consumer and Indian Hills.

Some homes were hit with increases of up to 127 per cent. But the average monthly bill increased from $8.30 to $13.20.

When the rate hikes were approved, citizens voiced their disapproval. But the commission said rate hikes were needed to erase a $138,000 deficit in the utility department.

However, Gilsson indicated today that the increased rates have not been in effect long enough to efficiently erase the red ink in the utility department.

By the second quarter, Gilsson said, county officials will begin to feel the impact of the higher rates charged customers of the two utilities.

Once called the department of environmental services, utility operations last year were revamped and former Utility Director Bill Dale, lost his job.

Now, utility operations fall under the county's public works department.

Commission Chairman Dick Williams said he hasn't seen Gilsson's analysis. However, the chairman said he looks forward to an OMAE briefing at 3 p.m. today at the courthouse in Sanford.

Strippers Shiver

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Baby, it's cold inside! Nobody knows that better than the strippers at the Troc Theater, who are taking it all off these nights in 59-degree temperatures.

"Somebody ought to go out there in a set of thermal underwear with a drop seat and strip out of them," suggested Lee Ann, one of the entertainers at the 110-year-old burlesque house. "Maybe we could dance to 'Frosty the Snowman.'"

Troc manager Bob Stephens said that to save on natural gas, he has set the thermostat as low as he dares. A newsman's thermometer read 59 at the end of the runway where the girls peel chillingly bare.

Carlton Stricken

The Rev. Bascom W. Carlton, 58, executive director of Methodist Children's Home, Enterprise for 24 years is in Seminole Memorial Hospital after suffering a heart attack Saturday. He is listed in "fairly good" condition.

SHOVELING OFF TO 'MINI-MALL'

Don Jackson (left), Seminole County Port Authority (SCOPA) chairman and Clifton Construction's John Crabtree shovel the first load of dirt in construction of a "mini-industrial mall on SCOPA property near Orange Boulevard and I-4. The completed building will eventually house 200,000 square feet of industrial space. The first section of 10,000 square feet will be ready for occupancy March 15 by Sanford Medical Supply Company. Also present at Wednesday's ceremony were SCOPA Administrator Jim Ryan; SCOPA board members Rod Cable, Jim Rowe and Wendell Agee; and Jim Daniel, executive director of Seminole County Industrial Development Authority.

Democracy At Work Here

In the Spring Hammock section of Seminole County, residents are balking at a plan to build a car dealership on one acre.

In the City of Sanford, residents are balking at a plan to build a city landfill at SR-46A and Oregon Avenue.

Loud and sincere voices are being heard on all sides of both controversies. And so, too, now are the voices of the democratic processes.

Questions still are outstanding on the merits and demerits of both plans and the verdicts are still out. Up to now there have been whispers, accusations and perceptions of secret haste and-or secrecy by both governmental bodies in their handling of the proposals.

Both commissions now, however, have taken positive steps to erase these reactions by opening their doors to public airings of the matters.

In the Spring Hammock controversy, two groups — the Sierra Club, an environmentalist group, and the Seminole League of Women Voters — are leading the opposition to the car lot proposal. They are circulating petitions which they plan to present to the County Commission. Their principal contention: the car lot would destroy one of the rapidly diminishing green-belt areas in the county.

In Sanford, the battle against the proposed landfill is being led by a group called the 46-A Environmental Protection Association. Its principal contention: the commission acted in haste and secrecy in deciding on the landfill site.

The city commission presumably acknowledged the credibility of such a contention when it decided on a technical switch in the zoning procedure that would allow for public hearings on the issue.

The County Commission also now has opened the door to public hearings on the Spring Hammock controversy by scheduling a work session to hear complaints from opponents of the car dealership plan.

Neither commission technically had to go that extra mile, take that extra step, to satisfy all parties concerned.

But they both did. This should eliminate and avoid any further perceptions of less-than-candid dealing by the public officials elected to deal with the public's business on both the county and city levels.

By letting the people speak and be heard, the commissioners are demonstrating that democracy is, indeed, at work in Seminole County.

As noted, the verdicts are still out. The upcoming public hearings should cast enough new light on the pros and cons of the proposals to better enable the decision-makers to exercise their powers more fully and fairly.

That Outside Track

One of the remarks of Sen. Vance Hartke in an interview in the closing days of Hartke's expiring term of office was that Indiana would be left "far out" when federal goodies are passed around in the administration of President Carter.

He was referring to the consequences of his own defeat and the fact that Indiana voted for the reelection of President Ford.

Sour grapes? Maybe. Empty threat? Not at all. The fact of life is that just such political factors as the way a state or a district or a city voted in some recent election — or might vote in the next election — are regularly weighed in making up the lists for all sorts of federal projects, programs, job appointments.

Blackmail? Yes, of course. One reason free-spending liberals have consistently held on to strong majorities in Congress during a period when opinion polls show a growing conservative majority in the public mind is that so many voters are either intimidated or enticed by the carrot-and-stick tactic.

We hope the majority of Hoosier voters won't be either intimidated or enticed if Hartke's prediction proves accurate.

The awesome power that goes with control over distribution of hundreds of billions of federal taxpayers' dollars is one of the evils of the juggernaut growth of federal spending and the federal establishment.

If Indiana is punished in the coming years for the way its citizens voted last November, that is reason to fight harder than ever to stop the federal juggernaut, to halt the seemingly relentless growth and start pushing the government back toward manageable size.

"We'd like to go to an OPEC country and see how the other half lives!"

Around The Clock

By AUDIE MURPHY

President Carter has conducted his first "fireside chat," although he refused to call it that.

What a strange experience it was for one in the under-thirty bracket. I remember hearing about President Roosevelt's fireside chats, but I could never understand why the "old-timers" talked about them with such warmth and enthusiasm.

Now I know. There is something inspiring about a Chief Executive who takes off the trappings of his office long enough to sit down and talk to the people.

The content of his speech aside, it was reassuring to watch a president try to explain his goals and ambitions. And while wearing a sweater, yet.

You see, the man in the Oval Office has loomed as an ogre for those of us who came of age in the 1960s. The first inklings we had of a president came in the form of John Kennedy, who was promptly snuffed out. Then Lyndon Johnson appeared as sort of a Minister of War. By then our prejudices were being locked in. And when Richard Nixon took over, we thought it was all over.

Carter's first informal address has done more to reverse that feeling than all the campaign rhetoric of the past 10 years. He came across. That bumbling, un-smooth, un-professional delivery was just what the doctor ordered.

When Carter was finished, my wife put it all in a nutshell, as usual. She said, "Those network guys need to have to explain what the President said. Now they don't have anything to explain."

What a profound observation. Carter had said what he wanted to say, and there was nothing left to "analyze."

Not that they didn't try. I happened to be watching NBC, and John Chancellor had the ball. He was forced to seize upon the fact that Carter had worn a sweater during the address. A couple of other reporters added their observations, which came across as equally innocuous.

On the subject of the electronic media, one relevation in the Carter address came as a blockbuster — at least it seemed that way to a newsman.

He said he would conduct radio "phone in" shows from the Oval Office. Radio? From the Oval Office? With people asking questions?

I could imagine the not-quite-cold body of Richard Nixon rolling over and over in the surf of San Clemente. (Sorry, Tricky Dick, we still haven't forgiven you.)

Seriously, if Carter goes through with his "radio talk show" plan, it will come as a shot in the arm to radio journalism, which apparently has been relegated to the back seat of the bus, as far as national politics is concerned.

But that's all right. Let television and radio do their thing.

If you can't absorb all that data at once, never fear. Your friendly afternoon newspaper is here to bring you all the facts.

And we don't even bug you with commercials.

Scientists Contradict Themselves

WASHINGTON — It is now learned that most of the advice the nation's scientists have been giving the White House and Congress these past two years on solving the energy crunch has been so wildly contradictory and impractical it has been either impossible for anyone to come up with a workable program.

This in considerable measure is the reason we are today even more dangerously dependent on oil from the petroleum monopoly than at the time of the worldwide boycott — and why, energywise, we are living on borrowed time.

For one, scientists could not agree on priorities. And thus it now appears that we may be throwing most of our research money into the wrong channels, and strangling areas of the greatest promise.

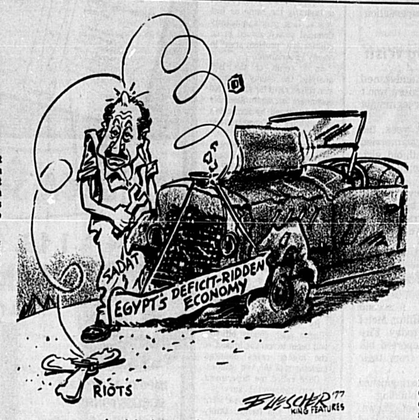
As one example, technical men working on pure theory saw in coal a relatively quick substitute for oil in a variety of operations. The U.S. has coal in abundance. Coal liquefaction and shale oil were the talk of scientific conferences. Never mind that coal producers said that practical production problems and high costs would make shale and liquefaction at competitive rates a long time in coming.

The scientists too, in their enthusiasm for coal, have only recently begun to consider just how great may be the environmental problems associated with a major increase in coal output — and the costs involved in ameliorating damage to the environment in large-scale strip mining.

Today also, the scientists are beginning to find unexpected problems associated with all other major roads to greater energy self-sufficiency — whether it be nuclear fission or fusion, breeder, geothermal, solar. All, including solar power, may create unwanted changes in the environment, the scientists now say.

It now appears we may well run seriously short of energy worldwide before we solve the social-environmental and commercial problems necessary to expand alternate sources, such as coal, and to develop new sources, such as breeder reactors and solar energy, on a scale sufficiently large to meet our energy needs.

In the long run, the problems undoubtedly can be solved, though at considerably higher cost than energy today. But the social, environmental, political and engineering adjustments, and the consequent delays, will mean that sometime in the interim period — that is, in the next 30 to 40 years — there may be a most serious energy shortage worldwide.



Just trying to do a little adjusting

JOHN CUNNIFF

Cold 'Freezing' Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The continued flow of arctic air southward over the industrial heartland of the nation is also paralyzing the analytical powers of many economic forecasters.

Never before have some of them faced quite the challenge they now see before them, a challenge for which there are really no guides in the textbooks and few or no criteria to borrow from earlier studies.

Most other destructive rampages of nature have been brief in duration, such as windstorms and earthquakes. Or they have been geographically limited, such as floods, droughts and frosts, or limited to certain crops or industries.

The frigid weather has not been restricted by geography, time or industrial category. It covers two-thirds of the country. It has persisted for four months. It has slowed, shut or otherwise affected every industry that uses any form of energy, natural, human, mechanical.

The total bill, measured in lost production, unemployment, higher fuel bills, destruction of crops and machinery, slowed transportation, impaired health, lowered productivity and educational disruption cannot be calculated.

It is obviously in the many billions of dollars, but confirmation of the rough estimates probably must await reports on the Gross National Product, or the total of all goods and services produced in a given period.

Meanwhile, economists who could easily gauge the impact of crop loss resulting from drought or blight are perplexed about how and where to begin measuring the economic impact of the big freeze.

Nevertheless, they are pressed to make their estimates for banks, brokers, manufacturers and others.

Up to now, the major business economists have continued to stick with their earlier forecasts of a steady but unspectacular improvement through much of the year. And some even suggest we are in for a more prolonged period of improvement.

The index of leading economic indicators rose in December for the third straight month, but of even greater significance, it rose by 1.6 per cent, the largest gain in well over a year.

Nuclear Ban May Prove Harmful

WASHINGTON — President Carter's desire to proceed "quickly and aggressively" with a Comprehensive Test Ban treaty (CTB) — "adequately" monitored — to "instantly and completely" eliminate the testing of all nuclear devices, is one of those ideas that sounds great in the abstract.

But there are very serious problems with such a proposal. These are spelled out by Don Brennan, director of National Security Studies at the Hudson Institute, in an article in the current issue of the quarterly, International Security, published by Harvard University.

Problem No. 1: In the view of many senior nuclear weapons scientists, one of the most important costs of a CTB would relate to the problem of maintaining the reliability and effectiveness of American atomic weapons already deployed.

Suppose, for example, that some very important line of the U.S. nuclear deterrent, say our Poseidon warheads, depended critically on a certain component, and during a routine inspection it was discovered that these components were rusting. Brennan writes:

"If such a case arose at a time when no test ban was in effect, it would be easy to deal with it. The nuclear weapon laboratories could simply produce a new weapon design, based on a newly designed component, and test it to make sure that it worked properly. If it did not, they could modify the design and try again until it did.

"If the case arose when a CTB was in effect, the problem would be much more serious. The weapon laboratories might produce a new design that would not rust, but, in the absence of testing, we might not have confidence that the weapon would work."

Brennan quotes Michael May, a nuclear weapons expert at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, as observing: "It is my judgment, based on a number of years designing and supervising the design of nuclear weapons, including part of a previous test ban period, that nobody knows how far we can safely go in making necessary changes without nuclear tests, and that no system of checks and reviews can assure that we will not go too far."

Of particular interest, since he is now President Carter's Secy. of Defense, Brennan quotes Harold Brown, formerly the director of the Livermore Lab, as saying that without the periodic testing of our nuclear weapons "the probability of malfunction may become appreciable."

Problem No. 2: Inspection and verification. Incantations about a CTB "adequately verified," says Brennan, are a "fraudulent umbrella" phase since historically no criteria have been given, or are likely to be given. "Indeed, no such criteria are possible," Brennan writes," that would not either result in essentially defining a CTB as unacceptable, on the one hand, or in allowing a CTB in which abstention by the Soviets (among others) from all tests of potential significance cannot be verified, on the other. The cutting edge of this dilemma is not blunted by the (correct) observation that any judgment between such alternatives must be political, rather than technical, in nature."

During the campaign, candidate Carter said that a CTB verified by national technical means (satellites), would be "acceptable" since this capability, over the past 20 years, has "advanced to the point where we no longer have to rely on on-site inspection to distinguish between earthquakes and even small weapons tests . . ."

But this is simply not true. In his article, Brennan lists a whole series of evasions, in which the Russians could engage without being detected. These include steps that could hide nuclear blasts up to 100 kilotons (an explosion nearly 10 times that of the Hiroshima bomb) and much lower-yield blasts which could "revolutionize warfare."

Indeed, the point about Soviet untrustworthiness hardly need be made. The Russians cheated like crazy on the most recent SALT agreement. And they have violated the so-called Threshold Test Ban, signed last August, which was to stop all underground nuclear tests above 150 kilotons.

A few months after this agreement, it was widely reported that the Soviets had conducted four tests, two of which — and probably all — were in violation of this 150 kilotons limit.

Problem No. 3: Finally, there is the matter of peaceful nuclear explosives (PNEs). The Soviets seem to have a noticeable interest in using PNEs for such things as the excavation of harbors and canals, improving the production of underground oil or gas, etc. In the past, the Russians have insisted that any CTB not outlaw PNEs.

Energy Prices Out Of Control

WASHINGTON— President Jimmy Carter has just about given up hope of keeping energy prices under control.

Sources in the eye of the controversy tell us that the president will concentrate first on providing the nation with enough energy to keep its homes warm and its factories operating. Then he will worry about how to finance it.

The cost could be terrifying. Here are the president's own grim expectations, according to sources familiar with his thinking:

—Carter will try to keep a hold on the regulatory levers. But he believes it will be necessary to let up on the levers to produce the necessary natural gas and fuel oil.

—The president recognizes unhappily that his proposed $31.2 billion economic stimulus will merely finance an upsurge in oil and gas prices. The $50 tax rebates he has promised all Americans will go to pay higher fuel bills.

—Realistically, he expects the upward push to defy his efforts to hold down oil and gas prices. The icy weather has also shriveled winter crops, killed off livestock, forced factory layoffs, closed schools and caused extensive damage. This could throw his economic program into a tailspin before he can get it launched.

—The president is aware that turning down the White House thermostats to 55 degrees may be a small gesture. But he will exert his moral leadership to persuade Americans to conserve energy. Before the energy crisis is over, the citizenry may have to put up with some privations.

The energy controversy, meanwhile, continues to rage in the backrooms of Washington. Treasury experts have warned Carter in confidential briefing papers that the nation's dependence on imported oil "will rise to about 50 per cent by 1985." The natural gas shortage will also continue for the next two winters, although new wells may increase the supply in the 1980s.

"The free market should be permitted to act upon the price, supply and demand, both of crude oil and new natural gas," the briefing papers urge. The higher prices, contend the documents, "would tend to increase exploration and development, bring on additional supply and reduce demand."

But a confidential report prepared for Rep. John Moss (D-Calif.) argues that higher energy prices would not lead to increased oil and gas production.

Although oil prices have quadrupled since 1973, the report points out, domestic oil production has declined. Natural gas prices have jumped a startling 760 per cent in the last 11 years, yet the industry still says it needs higher prices to encourage exploration.

There are no controls on the price of natural gas in Texas, the study notes, yet Texas producers are warning of an imminent gas shortage. "No amount of money will bring what doesn't exist out of the ground," an investigator told us.

The treasury papers warn that price controls on oil and gas discourage the development of alternative fuels. As long as oil and gas are comparatively cheap, there is no incentive to find new energy sources. "Because the lead time for these alternate fuels is so long," add the documents, "severe shortage could result."

But a powerful congressional bloc, led by Moss, contends that big energy price increases will merely squeeze consumers and torpedo the nation's economic recovery. The only beneficiaries, these congressmen believe, will be the oil and gas companies.

EGYPTIAN CRISIS: a confidential report on Egypt's economic crisis warns tersely that the Egyptian government "is simply unwilling to take any of the measures that are needed to even begin to put its economic house in reasonable order."

The nations that are trying to bail out President Anwar Sadat, therefore, "are reluctant to pour new money into Egypt in the absence of the necessary reforms."

The United States now funnels an annual $1 billion into Egypt to bolster Sadat's government. Yet more and more of the money is going "to finance consumption instead investment," the report charges. For example, the Egyptian government spends $1 billion a year to keep food prices down.

When Sadat cautiously tried to reduce this billion-dollar subsidy, riots erupted in the streets. What worries U.S. policymakers is that Egypt's economic deterioration might precipitate Sadat's downfall. They regard him as an able leader whose moderate policies have kept the Arab world from taking a sharp left turn.

ELIZABETH RAY'S RETURN: On Inauguration Day, Elizabeth Ray quietly appeared on Capitol Hill for the first time since her sizzling confessions led to the downfall of Rep. Wayne Hays (D-Ohio).

Hired by Hays as a clerk, she swore that her duties had more to do with love than ledgers. Hays was an unpopular tyrant who controlled many House payrolls, such as the House police, restaurant workers, elevator operators and even the barbers and beauticians.

The blonde sexpot was greeted by these House functionaries as if she were their great liberator. With the unpredictable Hays gone, the tension has left the halls of the House, and she is given much of the credit.

Footnote: Elizabeth Ray, now a student at American University in drama, was touched by the hugs, handshakes and soft hurrahs. "I was glad to be treated so warmly," she told us.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Young Says Africa Talks Will Be 'Long And Tedious'

LONDON (AP) — Andrew Young, President Carter's black envoy to black Africa, says after meeting with British diplomats that negotiations to get rid of white rule in Rhodesia will be "long and tedious." Young, the new 44-year-old American ambassador to the United Nations, met Wednesday with Ivor Richard, the British chairman of the suspended Geneva talks on Rhodesia's future, and Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland. He said his hopes for a quick settlement had "waned."

Loan Shark Clients Happy?

MONTREAL (AP) — Alleged loan shark Solly Levine has told the Quebec police commission inquiry into organized crime that the people who borrowed money from him were happy to do so.

Crime inquiry officials allege the loan shark ran a highly-profitable-illegal loan operation with Montreal meat magnate William Obront.

Levine described his clinents as "out-and-out risks, who couldn't get money from anywhere else and were happy to get it from me."

Economic Shakeup Predicted

TORONTO (AP) — Even if Quebec doesn't separate from Canada, the economic terms of Confederation will have to be renegotiated, according to economic consultant Arthur Donner.

Donner said in an economic review for Research Securities, that his study shows there is considerable leeway under confederation for the capital in Ottawa to shift its economic power to the provinces.

Parent Center?

In the wake of the well-received Parent Education Program sponsored recently by 11 of Seminole County's elementary schools, parents are clamoring for the establishing of a Parent Resource Center.

According to Dottie Poole, PTA president, parents are interested in forming a resource center in conjunction with Seminole Community College. She said the college is enthusiastic about the idea.

She added that Valencia Community College is cooperating successfully with Junior Sorosis and Orange County parents in a Parent Resource Center.

A meeting to discuss the formation of a local resource center will be held tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the board room, Administration Building, at SCC. All interested parents are invited to attend.—Jean Patteson

Seminole County School Board Vice Chairman Pat Telson told board members Wednesday night she saw garbage cans collecting water from leaking roofs and wallpaper peeled off to let water run off it as she toured Lake Howell High School earlier in the day.

"As I walked through the school I saw the cans collecting water all over the place," said Mrs. Telson. "It appears the roofs are failing and it's a new school."

Mrs. Telson said that Richard Evans, the school's principal, was with her as she examined the accoustical tile and carpet that was being ruined by the wetness.

"I knew about the situation before but never saw it," she said. Noting that the problem existed since November and that other schools in the county — such as Lake Brantley High School and Teague Middle School — were suffering from leaking roofs. Mrs. Telson asked Superintendent William P. Layer about correcting the problem.

Layer said a full report was forthcoming after the roofing engineer's assessment.

Describing classroom desks pushed aside to let garbage cans collect water from the roof, Mrs. Telson wondered "what will happen to the students and school while we (the board) await a report on the reason for the leaks."

Mrs. Telson went to the high school on an unannounced visit following complaints by student Kenneth Hendrix, a junior, at last week's school board meeting.

Hendrix had told the board that the food served was cold by the time the last students in serving lines got it, and that sometimes the cafeteria ran out of meat dishes. He also noted the lack of seating capacity in the cafeteria.

Mrs. Telson said she purposely was the last one to get in the serving line of the last (third) lunch period to test the complaint for herself. She described her turkey pot pie as being "warm," her green beans as being "cool," but that her milk was "cold." In the past, other students also had complained of warm milk.

She added that "students eating on the floor was not too sanitary" and that there were "inadequate garbage facilities" in the cafeteria.

Mrs. Telson also mentioned that Lake Howell High had more than 200 chairs and more than 200 combination desk-chairs which are broken. She said the company which made the chairs said it would replace them.

Superintendent Layer told the board he had sent a letter to the Seminole Education Association (SEA), inviting it to meet with the board's management team Feb. 10 and every Thursday thereafter for contract negotiations on the disputed issues and the special master's recommendations.

SEA President William Moore later said the SEA had reserved Feb. 10 for its annual Representative Assembly meeting, but was "willing to go back to the bargaining table even tomorrow.

"I was disappointed that there's no executive session yet," said Moore. "We would expect their team to come to the table with new proposals for a compromise. If they have proposals, where they can act in good faith, we could wrap it up real quick, in a couple hours."

Board Chairman Davie E. Sims was optimistic. "My personal feeling is we can go back to the table to negotiate and arrive at a settlement before too long. We can settle with give and take on both sides."

Cheshire's Space Suit

Department of General Services.

The state attorney's Sanford office in the courthouse and in the nearby Masonic Temple building now has a total of 2,535 square feet of floor space, according to the suit.

Cheshire contends that state law requires the county commission to furnish him adequate office space. He says the present facilities assigned his office is so crowded it "destroys privacy required for trial and pre-trial interrogation of witnesses, police officers and complainants."

Cheshire also alleges that he has inadequate storage space for files and records required by state law and the lack of space is a health hazard to his staff and constitutes a fire hazard.

Cheshire claims the county commissioners ignored demands by he and former state atty. Abbott Herring for more space in the courthouse and that commissioners have publicly stated their intent to oust the state attorney's office from the courthouse.

TAXES

Education Expenses

You are a trust officer in a bank and your employer asks you to obtain a law degree at your own expense. You can deduct the expenses incurred in pursuit of that degree on your Federal income tax return, right? Wrong.

There's a fine line drawn between what can and what cannot be deducted as educational expenses at tax time. Here's what the law says:

— The educational expense must meet the express requirements of your employer, or requirement of law or regulations for keeping your salary, status, or employment.

— The educational expense must maintain or improve skills required in performing the duties of your present employment or business.

Based on those guidelines, it would appear that the trust officer given as an example would qualify for a deduction. But here's the catch: The expense cannot be for education which is necessary to meet minimum standards for your job or which will qualify you for a new trade or business. While the law degree may be required by your employer and would improve your skills as a trust officer, it would also qualify you for a new profession and would not be deductible.

A change in duties within the same general occupation would not be considered a new trade or business. So, if you are promoted or change positions at the office and take a course or two to familiarize yourself with an area of the same business which you now need to know about, the course expenses would be a legitimate educational deduction.

What kinds of educational expenses can you deduct? Tuition, books, supplies, lab fees, and even certain travel and transportation costs.

Let's look at a few examples of allowable educational deductions. An auto mechanic takes a course to learn about anti-pollution devices on the new model cars. The course would improve his job skills as a mechanic without qualifying him for a new profession and would be deductible. You have your own accounting business. To improve your familiarization with taxes you take some courses in tax accounting. Since you have already met the minimum educational requirements in your profession and the courses would improve your skill as an accountant, you could deduct them.

Even educational travel can be a deductible expense, subject to the same restrictions as other educational expenses. For example, a Spanish language instructor on sabbatical leave from a teaching position could travel through Spain or Mexico to improve his or her knowledge of the Spanish language. If the itinerary and major part of the activities would directly maintain or improve required Spanish language skills, the trip would be deductible. Obviously, the expenses involved in taking a spouse along are not deductible. A mathematics or science teacher could not, of course, deduct the expenses of a trip to Spain or Mexico!

And, speaking of travel, where educational expenses are deductible, don't forget to take into account local transportation costs, such as mileage to and from a college or other institution you are attending. These expenses are deductible in addition to tuition, books, lab fees, and the like. If you commute to classes regularly during the year, seemingly incidental transportation costs can add up to a sizable deduction at year's end.

To get all the details on what you can deduct in the way of educational expenses, contact the nearest IRS office and ask for the free Publication 508. "Tax Information on Educational Expenses." It's written in plain language and will help you get the most out of your educational deductions.

Deductible Interest

If you are among the countless millions of Americans who are paying off a home mortgage or other form of installment obligation, you should have an interest in interest. The interest you pay during the year is fully deductible on your Federal income tax return.

Today, installment buying has become a way of life for many of us. Hard pressed for enough cash to buy the things we need or simply would like to have, installment payments and "charging it" have largely replaced cash on the barrelhead. It can be a convenient way of getting something now instead of later. Convenience yes, but at a price. And interest is the price you pay for the privilege of using someone else's money.

Home mortgage interest is usually the largest single tax deduction for the average taxpayer. But not to be overlooked are the other common interest expenses, such as automobile and personal loans, credit cards, and other extensions of credit. Combined, they can add up to a very respectable tax deduction.

Mortgage companies, credit card firms, and other lenders usually provide you with an annual statement showing the interest you paid during the year. They don't always do so automatically, however, so if you're ready to file your return, ask for a statement if you haven't received one. Don't wait until the last minute to make your request because lenders are likely to be flooded with similar requests from other tax-minded customers.

Check your statements carefully and deduct only the amount expressed as an annual percentage rate or other financial charge. There could be other charges included in the statement that are not deductible, such as service charges, loan fees or credit investigation fees.

For example, you purchase a new bedroom suite and open a credit account with the furniture company to finance the purchase. The store gives you on-the-spot credit after a quick check with the local credit bureau and charges your account $10 for the service. You are billed directly for the pre-arranged installment payments and your account is charged 1½ per cent on the unpaid balance each month. Your first month's bill also reflects the $10 fee for checking your credit rating. The finance charges are fully deductible, but you must remember to subtract the credit investigation fee from the amount you deduct on your tax return.

For those of you who just purchased a home, here's a point on "points." The term "points" sometimes used to describe the charges paid by a borrower to a lender as loan origination fees, maximum loan charges, or premium charges. If payment of points is solely for the use of money, it is interest and is deductible. Points paid by the seller, however, are considered selling expenses and are not deductible as interest.

Like any other tax advantage, there are some basic rules of thumb applicable to interest deductions:

— The interest must result from an actual debtor-creditor relationship;

— The interest must be based on a valid obligation to pay a fixed or determinable sum of money.

— The debt must be one for which you are legally liable.

If a father gives his daughter $1,000 for a trip to Europe, hoping to be repaid sometime in the future, no true debtor-creditor relationship exists and the daughter could not deduct any interest she might choose to pay her father. Similarly, you can't claim a deduction for payments you make on behalf of someone else if you are not legally liable to do so. So, if you help your son with his car payments while he is struggling along in college, you cannot deduct the interest you pay in his behalf.

To claim interest paid you must use Form 1040 and itemize your deductions. But before you sit down to figure the amount of your deduction why not get all the facts? Contact your nearest IRS office and ask for a copy of Publication 545, "Income Tax Deduction of Interest Expense." It's available free of charge and is full of items of interest on interest.

Medical Deductions

It's no secret that medical expenses have skyrocketed in recent years. Americans everywhere claim they can't afford to get sick, and they aren't kidding.

Now more than ever, it makes good sense to get the most out of the medical and dental deductions on your Federal income tax return.

Here's a quick guide as to what is deductible:

— Medical and dental expenses to the extent they exceed 3 per cent of your adjusted gross income.

— One-half (up to $150) of the premiums you pay for medical insurance without regard to the 3 per cent limitation.

— Drugs and medicine to the extent they exceed 1 per cent of your adjusted gross income; subject to the 3 per cent limitation.

For example, let's suppose your adjusted gross income is $14,000 and you had $600 in unreimbursed medical and dental bills, paid $300 in medical insurance premiums, and spent $75 for prescription drugs. You would be entitled to a $480 medical deduction. Here's how to arrive at that figure: Take one-half of your medical insurance premiums (up to $150). That give you $150 to deduct. Next, take your $600 in medical and dental bills and the other $150 you paid for medical insurance and subtract $420 (3 per cent of your adjusted gross income). That gives you an additional $330 to deduct. The prescriptions would not be deductible since they amount to less than 1 per cent of your income.

Even with that example, the figuring may still sound confusing. But don't panic. The medical and dental expenses portion of Schedule A of Form 1040, "Itemized Deductions,' takes each item in turn, showing you step-by-step how to figure the correct medical tax deduction.

What are deductible medical expenses? The IRS allows just about every medical expense you could possibly have. Such things as doctors' fees, ambulances, medicines and drugs, hospital services, artificial appliances, special equipment, and transportation costs, are all deductible. It is not necessary that medicine and drugs be prescribed by a physician, so long as they are legally obtained and generally recognized as medicine and drugs.

There are, of course, certain expenses which cannot be claimed, such as health club dues, diaper service, vitamins for general health, illegal operations, etc.

But rather than list all the do's and don't of medical deductions, a mention of some of the commonly overlooked deductions might be more helpful. Every year, taxpayers fail to claim medical deductions which can trim dollars from their tax bill.

Take whiskey for example. If your doctor prescribes that you take two ounces of whiskey twice a day for relief of angina pain or some other ailment, the cost of the prescribed amount of whiskey is a deductible medical expense. The cost of special diets, however, such as one prescribed for an ulcer condition, is not a medical deduction because the special diet simply replaces food you would normally eat.

Transportation to and from the place where medical service is rendered is also deductible at a rate of 7 cents per mile or the actual amounts involved. Parking fees and tolls may be added to mileage expenses. Over the period of a year, all the little trips to doctors' offices and hospitals could add up to a significant additional medical deduction.

A case in point. Suppose you are required to have your blood pressure monitored weekly by your doctor. His office is 20 miles, round trip, from your home and you must pay 50 cents to park each time you visit. You would be able to deduct $1.80 per week (7 cents x 20 miles equals $1.40 plus 50 cents parking). That would round off to an additional $90 medical deduction at the end of the year.

Older Americans

Age has its privileges and that certainly holds true at tax time when there are a number of special tax benefits available for older Americans.

For example, all taxpayers age 65 and older benefit from liberalized gross income requirements for filing a tax return.

While single taxpayers under 65 must file a return if their gross income is at least $2450, single taxpayers 65 or over don't have to file if their gross income is less than $3200. Married couples filing jointly must file when their gross income is $4350 if only one spouse is 65, or $5100 if both meet the age requirement. The figure for married persons under age 65 who file jointly is $3000.

Everyone at age 65 is also entitled to an extra $750 exemption due to age. For tax purposes, the Internal Revenue Service considers you 65 on the day before your 65th birthday. So, if you were born on January 1, you won't miss the extra exemption by a day.

On the sale of a home you have owned and used as your principal residence for a period of 5 years within the 8-year period ending on the date of sale, there are some special tax advantages that you'll want to know about. If the price you receive after paying the sales commission and certain allowable fixing-up expenses is $20,000 or less, the entire gain from the sale may be excluded from gross income. If the selling price is more than $20,000, the tax break is pro-rated.

Let's say you're 66 and during the year you sold your residence for $22,000. Your purchase price, taking into account certain improvements and adjustments over the years, was $16,000. You paid the real estate agent a commission of $1700 and also paid $400 for painting and miscellaneous fixing-up work performed within 90 days before the contract to sell was made. The amount you realized was $20,300 ($22,000 sales price minus $1700 sales commission) and therefore you had a gain of $20,300 minus your $16,000 basis, or $4300. Your adjusted sales price, however, is only $19,900 ($20,300 realized less $400 fixing-up expense). Since the adjusted sales price in this example is not more than $20,000, at age 65 you could exclude the entire gain of $4300. (Starting in tax year 1977, the limit on the adjusted sales price received for a house will be raised from $20,000 to $35,000.)

Charity Reduces Tax Bill

Charity begins at home according to the old saying. And it's certainly true at tax time since charitable contributions are a legitimate income tax deduction if donated to a qualified organization and if you itemize deductions.

An organization can tell you if it meets the qualification requirements and, of course, you can always check with your nearest IRS office if in doubt.

Contributions must be made before the close of the tax year. No exceptions. A mere promissory note for a contribution does not qualify as a deduction until the promised payments are actually made. The pledges give the organization a necessary basis for estimating its income for the year, but contributors can deduct only that portion of the pledge actually paid during the tax year.

In general, a contribution deduction cannot exceed 50 per cent of your adjusted gross income. Contributions to certain private nonoperating foundations, veterans' organizations, fraternal societies, and non profit cemetery companies are limited to 20 per cent.

Groups Nix Marsh Proposal

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — State officials have laid out four ways to restore the important Kissimmee River Valley marshes which filter South Florida's water supply, but environmental groups already have rejected one.

Charles Lee, an Audubon Society official from Maitland, turned thumbs down on the so-called impounded wetlands proposal to artifically create 20,000 acres of marshes through controlled flooding.

"We feel very strongly that the impounded wetlands alternative is not a restoration alternative," Lee told a Kissimmee River council when the options were unveiled Wednesday.

He said that the impounded wetlands proposal side-stepped an order from lawmakers last year to restore the Central Florida river to its 80-mile meandering course from Lake Kissimmee to Lake Okeechobee, a prime source of South Florida's drinking water.

The other three proposals include filling in varying lengths of the 50-mile canal and furnishing the river to its natural bed, or plugging the canal and forcing the river into its natural course.

Lawmakers ordered some kind of restoration after studies showed that Lake Okeechobee is gradually losing its oxygen supply because the marshes were removed when the canal was built from 1962 to 1971.

The marshes filtered out nutrients that are now feeding aquatic life forms which in turn are exhausting the oxygen, a process called eutrophication.

Jack Maloy, director of the South Florida Wtaer Management District and one of the restoration officials, pointed out that plugging or filling the canal would create floods over an area larger than the original flood plain.

Environmental officials said they didn't know yet how extensive that flooding would be or if it would cause permanent damage to nearby pastureland.

Preliminary cost estimates ranged from $2 million to $55 million, but that doesn't include any possible land purchases. Costs for buying dirt to fill the canal could go up to $19 million.

The council must come up with a recommendation for lawmakers by March 15 and set public hearings for Feb. 24 and 25 in Lake Wales and Okeechobee.

However, officials ignored Lee's request for at least one hearing in South Florida — the region whose water supply worries led to the restoration effort in the first place.

Ol' Man Of Boxing Griffith A Winner At 39

NEW YORK (AP) — He stood there in the center of the ring, and the grin on his face beamed his feelings as the Madison Square Garden crowd cheers poured over him.

There could not have been a better birthday present for Emile Griffith, who was 39 today, the day after opening his 20th season as a pro fighter with a victory in a 10-round middleweight fight.

"It made him feel terrific," said Towie Albert, who got Griffith into the fight game and still is with the former fivetime world welterweight and middleweight champion.

The opponent was 25-year-old Christy Elliott, the decison was as close as it could be, but this time the boos most certainly would have come if Griffith had lost what was his 28th Garden appearance and his first fight in the United States since Nov. 22, 1974.

It was not always that way. As a champion and challenger, Griffith often was booed as a winner in his hometown.

"That was beautiful," said Griffith. "Maybe I oughta stay away more often. That way, when I come back, they'll love me more. I'm very glad to be back home. I like traveling, but not that much."

The decision was a majority one — one judge voting for Griffith, one calling it a draw and referee Arthur Mercante scoring it even but awarding the fight to Griffith on his strong finish, which can be done under New York rules.

"I could have knocked him out," said Griffith, who relied on a left hand, which he applied like an artist's brush, and the ringmanship he has picked up from fighting the best welterweight and middleweights in the world over the last 16 years.

One of the few right hands Griffith threw was to the body in the eighth round, and it hurt Elliott, an Irishman living in Clifton, N.J., who faded in the last three rounds as Emile come on in what he said "seemed like a good workout in the gym."

The victory was the 86th against 21 losses and two draws for Griffith and it was made sweeter by the affectionate ovation offered by the crowd of 10,-530 that paid $103,457.

New Twists In TV Bouts

NEW YORK (AP) — Hank Schwartz, who has had a taste of the fight game on the "big money" level of Muhammad Ali, and Don Elbaum, a promoter who on three occasions has fought on his own cards because boxers failed to show, are bringing back Friday night fights with a familiar sound and some twists.

The familiar sound when a series of 25 Friday night fights, to be called the World Television Championships, begin in Philadelphia March 11 will be Don Dunphy, who has broadcast thousands of fights.

The twists will be the disclosure of the scoring after each round to the television audience and to the live crowds where commissions allow, fights in a super heavyweight division and an extra round if a fight is a draw. The latter idea also could run into trouble in some areas.

"It's Don's idea," Schwarts said. "Don brought me a concept and I shaped it into what I feel is a good television concept. It's up to Don to make it a good boxing concept."

Elbaum will serve as matchmaker while Schwartz, a key man in the closed-circuit telecasts of several Ali fights, will promote as president of World Television Champions, Inc.

"The major hook we have with boxing is to develop new talent who can test their mettle against veterans," said Shcwartz.

The 25-week series, which will be a tournament in five weight divisions, will originate from various cities and will be televised in at least 31 cities at the start, including New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and Boston. Schwartz said the shows will begin at 10:30 p.m. and will be showed live by some stations and on a delayed basis by others.

A total of 40 fighters will start the tournament and, Schwartz said, "so long as they win, they will be locked into the tournament. If they win titles, we have promotional rights to World Television defenses."

The championships would have options to promote bouts outside the series for its champions but would not stand in the way of them fighting for world titles. At the end of the series, title fights will be held throughout the year and next year a new 25-week series will be held to develop challengers, he added.

Paola Youth Signups Set

Registration for youngsters 8-12 interested in playing in a baseball league will be held Saturday at Wilson Elementary in Paola from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Youngsters from the Paola, Lake Monroe and Lake Mary areas are urged to participate. Applicants should bring birth certificates Saturday.

SEMINOLES GET THE WORD

"Keep plugging" is the message Seminole High basketball coach Joe Mills, center, delivers to his team during a recent time out. Seminole has suffered its share of heartbreaks this season — eight of its 13 losses coming by less than a five-point margin. The Seminoles have chalked up seven victories to date. Mills' charges gun for win No. 8 Friday night at home against a tough Orlando Oak Ridge squad.

Grimsley's Sports World

Borg's Heart Mariana's

NEW YORK (AP) — At the tender age of 20, Bjorn Borg is a walking, talking, racquet swinging conglomerate.

His racquet arm belongs to Bancroft. His feet belong to Tretorn, his head to a Swedish brewery called Tuborg and his right shoulder to a Scandinavian air line, SAS.

He gets paid handsomely for appearing on the court in the familiar striped attire of Fila and for driving sports cars made by Saab. He is immortalized in stone by a subsidized sculptor and in a syndicated comic strip. He takes it off the top from a tennis shop in Monte Carlo.

But his heart belongs to Mariana.

"You would have to say Bjorn is one of the wealthiest 20-year-olds in the world," said Bud Stanner, corporate vice-president for Mark McCormack's International Management Corp., in Cleveland, a sprawling firm which is helping Bjorn get rich quick.

"I wouldn't want to say what he is worth — a millionaire and more."

It was Stanner who orchestrated Borg's latest financial coup — a three-year, $1.5-million contract to play this summer for the Cleveland Nets in World Team Tennis.

One of the provisions is that Borg gets to bring along his pretty fiancee, Mariana Simonescu, 20, of Romania, a promising young tennis player in her own right.

Mariana was part of the package. Borg insisted on that. TV tycoon Joe Zingale, owner of the Nets, meekly acquiesced. The important thing: Keep Bjorn happy.

The golden-haired Swede is typical of the manner in which top professional athletes are packaged and sold. They are figuratively cut up and parceled out like choice pieces of beef.

Borg is a quiet, introverted young man who, like another famous Swede, Greta Garbo, probably would much prefer to be alone — with Mariana. Yet he was picked up in North Little Rock, Ark., early Wednesday morning, after playing a match the night before, and flown by chartered jet to face a battery of news and camera men at noon at fashionable 21 Club in New York. Then he was jetted to Cleveland for another press conference at 4 p.m. and from there to Pittsburgh for yet another at 7:30, flying back to Arkansas before midnight.

It's one of the burdens to be borne by a modern sports superstar, part of the blood he must shed for his fame and fortune.

It's been a hectic, fast-paced life for Borg, timid by nature, mature beyond his years, adverse to partying and hijinks. On every trip he's taken, cordons of Swedish newsmen have engulfed him. His every move is flashed to papers and radio stations back home. He became a national hero and at the same time a target for criticism.

Finally, in despair, he moved to Monte Carlo.

"Was it because you had a conflict with the Swedish Federation?" Borg was asked.

"No, I have many friends on the federation," he replied. "It was because of the journalists."

Massey, Skinner Lead At Sarasota

SARASOTA, (AP) — Debbie Massey of Bethlehem, Penn., and Debbie Skinner of Chula Vista, Calif., were co-leaders with 150 going into today's third round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association qualifying tournament.

Miss Massey shot a two-under par 70 Wednesday in the second day of the 72-hole event at the 6,300-yard Bent Tree Country Club. Miss Skinner shot a 72.

The two were among 48 players needing playing cards on the LPGA tour. LPGA officials said only players averaging 78 or better per 18 holes in the four-day event will be issued cards.

A stroke behind at 151 were Janet Coles of Aptos, Calif., shooting 71, Christie Pastore of Aberdeen, N.C., 74; Donna Horton White of Belle Glades, Fla., 71 and Eva Chang of Taiwan, 76.

At 153 were Shinaco Yoshimochi of Tokyo with a second round 76 and Suzanne Lynn of River Vale N.J., 77.

Alexandra Reinhardt of Albuquerque, N.M., shot a second round 73 to tie at 154 with Signa Quandt of St. Petersburg, Fla., who shot a 75.

At 155 were Suzanne Parker of Harpendenherts, England, 76; and Marga Stubblefield of Kailua, Hawaii, 76.

Connie Chillemi of Orlando, Fla., stood at 156 with a second round 77. Mary Cushing of Carmel, Calif., shot a 76 for a 157 total. Victoria Ferguon of El Cajon, Calif., shot a 79 for a second round 158.

Olympics' Theme: $$

NEW YORK (AP) — The song has ended but the melody lingers on. NBC is the winner. ABC is the loser. CBS is the dropout. And Satra is still a mystery.

When NBC signed a contract with the Soviets Tuesday for United States television rights to the 1980 Moscow Olympics, the network climaxed an uphill struggle that began nearly two years ago. And that may be just the beginning. We are still 3½ years away from the lighting of the Olympic torch and a lot can happen in that time.

A lot has already happened. Basically, NBC rallied from third place in the Olympic sweepstakes to take the whole thing — a development which surprised most observers. Almost everyone agrees that CBS, in particular, and ABC were most likely to succeed as late as last December. NBC was a dark horse. Satra was a mystery.

But everything changed at a meeting in Moscow in mid-December. CBS went to Russia confident of returning with a signed contract. But the Russians became embrolled in three-pronged internal bickering among the Soviet Olympic Committee, the television ministry and political forces, and CBS lost its advantage.

Stunned, the CBS brass decided to join the other two networks in a pool arrangement. CBS had resisted the idea earlier because officials believed they could get the Games on their own.

The networks submitted a plan for pool coverage to the Justice Department, but almost immediately CBS began to have second thoughts. The plan called for the entire Olympics to be made available to all three networks with each one deciding how much of it to telecast. That could have resulted in two weeks of nothing but Olympics on all three networks. And ABC, with its past Olympic track record, could have drawn the majority of the viewers.

CBS decided, all things considered, the risks involved weren't worth the potential rewards. So the network dropped out of the whole project. "There is a feeling here of intense short-term disappointment," said a source, "but immense long-term relief."

No Poll Watchers, Deacons Now 17-2

By The Associated Press

Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy is thankful that his team does not take basketball polls too seriously.

"We haven't talked about them (polls) all year," said Tacy Wednesday night after his fifth-ranked Deacons defeated Duke 89-80 in an Atlantic Coach Conference basketball game.

"We notice the polls, though," he added. "And I think we're looking better than the sixth-place (ACC) finish predicted for us at the beginning of the season."

Indeed, they are. The Deacons now are 17-2 over-all and lead the tough ACC with a 6-1 record.

Forward Rod Griffin sparked Wake Forest to its lastest victory with 28 points.

In other games involving rated teams, Pittsburgh upset No. 12 Cincinnati 65-64 on a 22-foot jump shot by junior Larry Harris at the final buzzer; Arkansas, No. 14, routed Southern Methodist 81-58 in a Southwest Conference game, and 20th-rated Detroit beat Eastern Michigan 87-82.

"The bench told me to take the shot, even if I was doubleteamed," said Harris, whose winning basket gave Pitt's leading scorer 31 points in the game.

"We've got to start to believe in ourselves," added Harris after the 4-14 Panthers upended Cincinnati, now 15-3.

SMU left Marvin Delph open for outside shots and he scored a career-high 30 points in the Razorbacks' 10th straight victory.

Ron Brewer added 21 points for the 18-1 Razorbacks.

John Long scored 32 points and Terry Tyler 25 for 17-1 Detroit, which has won 16 straight games.

In other Wednesday night action, John Gerdy scored 28 points as Davidson nipped the Citadel 62-60 in a Southern Conference game; freshman Jo Jo Hunter scored a career-high 20 points, leading Maryland over Virginia 82-67 in the ACC; freshman Darryl Gladden hit two free throws with three seconds left, giving La Salle a 71-70 upset over Villanova in the second half of a doubleheader at the Palestra in Philadelphia after St. Joseph's, Pa. downed American 77-70.

Nine consecutive points by Glenn Williams and a 28-point performance by George Johnson sparked St. John's over Georgetown 82-66, while Fordham snapped its 10-game losing streak with a 68-53 victory over CCNY.

Miami of Ohio snapped Northern Illinois' five-game winning streak and took over first place in the Mid-American Conference with a 99-91 triumph as Archie Aldridge scored 28 points for the winners. Central Michigan outscored Toledo 88-81 in another MAC game.

Other results involving major schools included: Middle Tennessee State over Marshall 94-87; Kansas edging Oklahoma State 60-56 and Oklahoma taking over first place in the Big Eight Conference with a 66-63 victory over Missouri; Memphis State, 18-3, over Western Kentucky 97-75, and South Carolina routing Richmond 95-63.

Baseball Sets Early Signups

The Sanford Recreation Department is now registering boys for the summer youth baseball program at the recreation office in the Sanford Civic Center.

Boys should register early and get their names on the tryout roster. Bring birth certificates when registering. Boys who attend tryouts will be drafted first. Boys who played last year and are assigned to a team do not have to tryout again.

Tryouts start the week of March 21.

Softball Loop Meets Feb. 15

The Sanford Recreation Department will sponsor a men's softball slow pitch league this summer. Any group wishing to enter a team in the Sanford League should contact the recreation department as soon as possible.

An organizational meeting will be held Feb. 15 at the recreation office in the Sanford Civic Center at 7 a.m. to establish rules and by-laws.

Turnbull Returns As Star

By The Associated Press

Defenseman Ian Turnbull of the Toronto Maple Leafs played in the National Hockey League's All-Star game last week. He got his chance to compete for the first time because teammate Darryl Sittler, who had been chosen to play, could not appear because of an injury.

Turnbull played during a couple of early shifts, then spent the rest of the game on the bench — ignored by Prince of Wales Conference Coach Scotty Bowman.

"I don't care what he thinks of me for not playing him," Bowman said, "and I don't think the fans do, either."

Wednesday night, Turnbull proved Bowman quite wrong. He scored a record five goals in a 9-1 rout of the Detroit Red Wings, accomplishing a feat no defenseman had achieved in the history of the NHL.

In other NHL games, the Chicago Black Hawks beat the Atlanta Flames 4-2, the Los Angeles Kings crowned the Washington Capitals 7-2, and the Pittsburgh Penguins downed the Minnesota North Stars 5-2.

No defenseman had even scored four since Hap Day, also of the Maple Leafs, did it against the old Pittsburgh Pirates on Nov. 19, 1929.

And it hardly seemed likely that the 25-year-old Turnbull would tally even once, since it had been 30 games since he last scored a goal.

"It was a long drought," Turnbull said thoughtfully, "although I had just as many chances in the last 30 games and nothing happened."

Plenty of things happened Wednesday night, although not until the second period. The Maple Leafs' fans, all 16,422 of them, were booing the team's performance in a sluggish first period. Then, at 1:55 of the second period, Turnbull took a pass from Lanny McDonald and rifled in a 20-foot shot.

"When they go in, you smile," Turnbull said. "When they don't, you try again."

Turnbull kept tryiig, and kept scoring. Pat Boutette scored, Don Ashby scored, Tiger Williams scored. But Turnbull's night was just beginning.

At 10:26 of the second period, he beat goalie Ed Giacomin on a breakaway while the teams played with three skaters on each side because of penalties.

Denver (33-15) Stays Sizzling

Thompson Inside, Nuggets Roll

By The Associated Press

Coach Larry Brown was not afraid to change a formula which had given his Denver Nuggets the best record in the National Basketball Association this season.

The Nuggets, Midwest Division leaders, took a 32-15 record into Wednesday night's battle against the Washington Bullets, pacesetters in the Central Division. That record had been compiled with David Thompson playing at guard most of the time.

But Thompson was at forward against the Bullets. The position was hardly a new one for the 6-foot-4½ Thompson, who earned All-American honors at that spot for North Carolina State.

"I think he (Thompson) was more comfortable playing forward," said Brown after Thompson scored 37 points, helping Denver shatter Washington's eight-game winning streak with a 115-105 victory.

"He looked more relaxed," said Brown. "I loved our guard play. I think Jimmy Price and Ted McClain took a lot of pressure off David."

Price, who had not been starting, took over Thompson's slot in the backcourt and came through with 14 points, 10 rebounds and 11 assists. McClain contributed 17 points, seven rebounds and six assists.

In other NBA action, the Philadelphia 76ers built their Atlantic Division lead to 7½ games over the idle New York Knicks by defeating Detroit 138-116, while the New York Nets topped the slumping Boston Celtics 99-89. The Phoenix Suns outscored Milwaukee 130-113, Kansas City downed Portland 119-107 and Seattle routed New Orleans 120-95. The Houston game at Buffalo was postponed due to bad weather.

76ers 138, Pistons 116

Julius Erving and Steve Mix each scored 25 points and Lloyd Free had 24 as the 76ers recorded their 12 victory in 16 games. The 76ers, who are weak at center due to injuries to Harvey Catchings and Caldwell Jones, used 19-year-old Darryl Dawkins at center against veteran Bob Lanier, who led Detroit with 23 points.

Nets 99, Celtics 89

Bubbles Hawkins came off the bench and scored 21 points in the final period as the Nets won for only the second time in 18 games. Boston dropped its sixth game in seven outings.

Kings 119, Trail Blazers 107

Ron Boone scored 28 points, sparking the Kings against Portland, which played without injured center Bill Walton, who is suffering from an inflamed Achilles tendon and may be out of the lineup until next week.

TAG Rehearses 'Life With Father'

By GENE HACKETT
Herald Correspondent

Intensive rehearsals for "Life With Father" are being held by the Deltona Theatre Arts Guild for their Feb. 12 and 13 performances at the Community Center. The play is being directed by Mrs. Edna Boyette.

Tickets may be reserved by calling 574-1079, 574-2673 or 789-2586.

Hugh Lynch (top right) plays Clarence Day, who vehemently informs his wife, played by Joan Loutsenhizer, that he refuses to go through with being baptized.

Club Notes

'Sensational Walk' Program Presented

The Mellonville Avenue home of Mrs. T. J. Taylor was the site of the Norman DeVere Howard Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy's January meeting. Mrs. L. D. Hastings and Mrs. E. A. Sewell were co-hostesses, and Mrs. Burch Cornelius, president, presided.

Introduced by Mrs. Troy Ray Sr., Mrs. John B. Wimbish spoke on "The Most Sensational Walk in American History," which took place two years after The War Between the States. She related the true story of a former sergeant, Gil Bates, of the First Wisconsin Heavy Artillery who made a bet he could walk the same route through the South General Sherman used in rough farmer's clothes, carry an unfurled flag, live exclusively of Southern hospitality, and come to no harm.

He won his bet. He actually could give no clear idea of his purpose which was nothing less than to prove the brotherhood of man, and in spite of a bloody civil war and its aftermath of grief and devastation, Americans were still all in one family.

The Pledge to the American Flag and Salute to the Confederate Flag were led by the chaplain, Mrs. Taylor. Following committee reports, the president announced the U.D.C. was invited to participate in plans for Sanford Centennial-Founders Day, Feb. 8, as well as the U.D.C. district meeting to be held in Leesburg Feb. 9. Delegates will be announced later.

Festive refreshments were enjoyed by the following: Mrs. Burch Cornelius, Mrs. Fred Harris, Mrs. Hastings, Mrs. W. B. Kirby, Mrs. H. B. McCall, Mrs. Ray, Mrs. F. E. Rounsillat, Mrs. Sewell, Mrs. Charles Steenwerth, Mrs. M. B. Strickland, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. J. H. Truluck, Mrs. A. B. Wallace, Mrs. W. B. Wallace, Mrs. Glenn J. Wimbish, Mrs. John B. Wimbish, and guests, Mrs. Brian Schanel. Mrs. Harold I. Jones and Dr. Sara Irrgang.

Skating Party

A skating party will be hosted Sunday at Skate City, Longwood by the Theta Epsilon Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, to raise money for their Valentine King contestant, Sgt. Beau Taylor. Proceeds will go to the Seminole Youth Ranch.

There will be two sessions at the family-style party: from 1-3:30 and 4-6 p.m.

Admission donation is 75 cents; skate rental is 50 cents.

Seminole Audubon

The Seminole County Chapter, Florida Audubon Society will make a field trip Feb. 16. Details can be obtained by calling Miss Eva Hunt, chapter president.

The next regular monthly meeting of the society will be held Feb. 24 at 2 p.m. in the Florida Power and Light building, North Myrtle Avenue, Sanford.

DAV Dance

Seminole Chapter 30, DAV will sponsor a Valentine Dey Dance beginning at 9 p.m. Feb. 11, at the Chapter Hall, U.S. 17-92 just south of the Sanford city limits. The evening will feature music by The Lamplighters and a smorgasbord table. A Valentine Queen will be chosen. B.Y.O.B.; the DAV will furnish ice and set-ups.

Tickets may be purchased in advance at the DAV for $5.00 per couple; or admission may be paid at the door.

Has To Beg Kids To Visit Grandma

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I have a dear mother who lives about an hour's drive away. She's blind, but very cheerful and mentally alert. I phone her every day. She lives with a housekeeper and loves to have company.

When she had her sight, she couldn't do enough for my children. She sewed for them, bought them gifts and always made sure there were goodies in her house. Now the children are teenagers, and I have to beg them to visit their grandmother because it is so "boring" there, there's nothing to do there, etc.

My husband and I visit her as often as possible. We realize that our kids are involved with friends and activities, so we don't expect them to accompany us on every visit, but is it too much to expect them to visit her once a month?

They read your column daily, Abby. I can bet my bottom dollar that you'll agree with me, but if the kids hear it from Dear Abby, maybe they'll realize that Mom and Dad are right.

ASKING

DEAR ASKING: Your children are old enough to realize that's it's a mark of maturity to do things (without whining) that aren't particularly fascinating but are well worth the effort because of the pleasure it gives others. Visiting grandparents falls into that category.

A suggestion for youngsters who resist visiting elderly relatives because it's "boring": Interview the old folks. Ask questions about relatives who preceded you, how things were back in the "olden days." You'll learn some interesting facts, and you'll find that those visits will be rewarding to you and the old folks.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 17-year-old girl and my problem is I'm flat. My mother thinks that if a girl is flat, she shouldn't wear a padded bra because it like false advertising. I have a part-time job, so I bought myself a few padded bras, and when my mother saw them, she went berserk! She took the bras back to the store, said they were the "wrong kind" and got my money back.

Abby, being flat-chested really bothers me. When I can afford it and I'm on my own, the first thing I'm going to do is get silicone implants.

In the meantime, I'd sure appreciate if you would back me up and say that some girls wear padded bras so they'll look better in clothes and not as "false advertising." Thanks.

PLENTY OF NOTHING

DEAR PLENTY: I'm on your side. I'm also behind you concerning what you don't have in front of you. Loisa luck.

DEAR ABBY: I am a directory assistance operator in Pittsburgh, and until I started working for Bell Telephone I didn't know there were so many rude, inconsiderate and thoughtless people in the world.

In the first place, wouldn't you think a person who wants to have a telephone number would have seen enough to have a pencil in his hand when he calls? No way. They call us FIRST, and then ask us to wait until they find a pencil.

Also when we ask them how to spell a name, they will say, "If I knew how to spell it, I'd find it myself!"

When we do find a number, do they say, "Thank you"? No, they just slam down the receiver!

One more thing, Abby. Will you please ask adults NOT to ask their very young children to call for them? One thing that drives a telephone operator up a wall is a kid who cannot be heard or understood.

Even if this doesn't make your column, it did me a lot of good just to be able to get this off my chest.

PITTSBURGH OPERATOR

DEAR OPERATOR: Glad to oblige. It's time someone gave a little recognition to that vast faceless army of unthanked heroes and heroines.

Mother's Book Makes Adopted Kids Feel Loved

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP)— When young Josh Silman started asking questions about his adoption his mother started looking for books that dealt sensitively with the difficult subject.

She couldn't find anything "a child could understand and love and go back to over and over the way I remember going back to a book as a child," says Roberta Silman.

So Mrs. Silman, a writer whose short stories appear regularly in national magazines, decided to write her own book, "Somebody Else's Child."

"I know adopted children feel isolated somehow and I wanted to write a book they could read when they were lonely or confused," explained the petite, dark-haired mother of Miriam, 15, and Ruth, 9, in addition to 10-year-old Josh.

"He knew he didn't come the same way the girls came and whenever we got involved in the subject of how babies are born we got sidetracked onto adoption," Mrs. Silman said in an interview.

Josh was about 6 or 7 when he began asking why his natural mother had given him away, recalls his mother, who admits that "it's a rough question but it's a central question."

"I explained 'she couldn't keep you for a variety of reasons' and he accepted that," says Mrs. Silman, adding that Josh is a "very, very happy child" and feels comfortable about his adoption and his privileged status as the middle child, with two sisters who fuss over him.

He loves her book about an adopted boy and is pleased with the attention it has gotten, she says. In the story 10-year-old Peter is hurt when the school bus driver says that although he and his wife were not able to have children they had not wanted to bring up "somebody else's child."

Peter helps search during a snowstorm for two dogs the bus driver has had since they were pups. As Peter realizes the love the man has for the dogs he begins to understand the bond between his adoptive parents and himself.

"I treat Josh exactly as I do the other children," Mrs. Silman says. "I think bringing up children takes an enormous amount of stamina, strength and guts and it's risky whether kids are born to parents or adopted.

"For me adoption is mysterious but it's as miraculous as birth. You're given a baby and the whole challenge of raising the child is right there before you."

Mrs. Silman and her husband, Robert, a structural engineer, adopted their son after miscarriages and the death of a baby born to them.

"Miriam was going to be 5 and rather than keep trying and worrying it seemed a good alternative to adopt," she explains.

Mrs. Silman believes that in many cases sealed adoption papers are a protection for people who need to be protected and that searching for natural parents might "open a hornets' nest." But she would not be hurt if her son wanted to search and would help him if he felt the need.

"I feel for the original parents," she says. "It must take a tremendous act of courage. To bear a child and not keep it is a trauma and the sealing meant it was closed forever. But now it's not closed forever. But if the need is so great, the child should be allowed to do it."

As for Josh — "He is ours. We are his real parents. We brought him up, saw him grow intellectually, watched over him, cared for him, taught him skills that will be his all his life, provided a psychological cushion to lean on of loving and caring.

"Josh has no serious problems. He's a kid who smiles when he sleeps."

("Somebody Else's Child" is published by Frederick Warne and Co.)

GARDEN OF THE MONTH

The newest circle of the Garden Club of Sanford, the Little Bit Of Sunshine Circle, has selected the garden of Mark McTeer, 1403 E. Valencia Ct., Sanford as the Garden of the Month. The neat appearance of the yard, and interesting use of stone and statuary won McTeer this honor.

SCC Schedules 'Sweet Charity'

By CAROL SMITH
Herald Correspondent

Drama students at Seminole Community College will start off the new year with the play "Sweet Charity."

The musical comedy, written by Neil Simon, is about a kind and gullible dance hall girl, Charity Hope Valentine, who is unsuccessful in her quest for love and marriage.

Roger Jarand, drama instructor and director of the play, said it will be the first musical presented in the history of the college. The reason, he explained, is that they had neither the facilities nor the equipment to do a musical prior to the opening of the new Fine Arts Building.

'Hey Big Spender,' 'If They Could See Me Now,' and 'Rhythm of Life' are three of the popular songs to be performed.

Jarand said the cast of 38 actors includes a 13-year-old middle school student, a 52-year-old man, and a teacher from Lakeview Middle School.

Playing the part of Charity is sophomore Sandy Drexler and the lead male role of Oscar Lindquist will be performed by 23-year-old Mark Royal. Both students are drama majors at the college.

The Seminole Players will present "Sweet Charity" in the theater of SCC's new Fine Arts Building Feb. 18, 19, 25, 26 and 27, at 7:30 p.m.

Beauty Tips

Plastic fantastic
If metal hair clips rust and depress you, try some made of plastic. They won't rust and you'll feel better!

Fully Suitable
To accompany the fullness of skirts, hair styles for spring will be big and curly.

Handbag hint
Handbags this spring are newest when the fabric is covered with plastic.

Real warmth
If winter is too much for your hands, think about wearing a pair of lamb's wool lined gloves. The wool is warmer than synthetic material.

Makeup mastery
When applying foundation, always use downward, outward strokes so the makeup doesn't get into the pores, each of which has a protective hair in it.

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Friday, February 4, 1977

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You are generally lucky today in love, friendship or getting along with people, but money matters aren't included in this good fortune.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're sitting on top of the world in most endeavors today, but the flaw is you don't capitalize on your good fortune. You take too much for granted.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Joint ventures bring out the best in your ingenuity today, but avoid boasting about your prowess. Let others sing your praises.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In financial dealings today, let the other party set the price. If you call the shots, you could realize less than he would have offered.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The greatest rewards for you today come from what you do for others. Put your interests last.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Those who care about you are doing quite a bit in your behalf today. You may not recognize this now, but you'll appreciate it later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's essential to observe the line of demarcation between social and business situations. Like water and oil, they won't mix well today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You can readily accomplish what you put your mind to today, provided you don't rely too heavily on others. Allies will be little more than dead weight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Heed your own best judgment in matters having to do with your work or career today. Seeking diverse opinions will only mess up your schedule.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're much sharper in business than usual today, as long as you adhere to your normally prudent instincts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you're negotiating an agreement today be fair, but don't be foolish. If you make a concession, make sure the other party concedes equally.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You have the ear of your superiors today and you can easily advance your own cause. Don't belabor your point, however, or you might lose out.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Feb. 4, 1977
Overall conditions look extremely promising for you this coming year. However, your gains will not come about in an expected fashion.

Large Spleen Causes Worry

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB— Recently my rectal specialist sent me to have a barium enema. He discovered an enlarged spleen. When I asked him what would have to be done he said I would have to see my family doctor. I did and he said to forget it. Occasionally I have a left sideache. Could the enlarged spleen be the cause? Please give me some information on it as I never heard of it before.

DEAR READER— In many ways the spleen is a large lymph gland located just where the colon makes a right angle turn on the left side. It is just under the ribs on the left side.

It gets enlarged in response to innumerable disorders and sometimes for no apparent reason at all. It enlarges so often in so many diseases that I recall in medical school the students had a rule, if the professor asked how often the spleen was enlarged in a given disorder the answer was always 15 per cent of the time.

The spleen can be enlarged in response to any of the infectious diseases and it may also be enlarged in less common serious illness such as some leukemias. I would think that your spleen must not be very large if your family doctor is not concerned about it and that its enlargement is of no real medical importance in your case.

The spleen destroys old red blood cells and when it becomes overactive it can destroy too many red and white blood cells, causing an anemia. To give you more information on the anemia group I am sending you The Health Letter, number 4-3, Understanding Anemias. Others who want this information can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB— I just had my right Fallopian tube removed due to a tubal pregnancy. I am wondering why this happened? My husband and I want to start a family and this happened the first time out. What is the outlook for my being able to have a normal pregnancy? What are the chances of this happening a second time? Will I still have a period every month or only every other month and will I still have the potential for getting pregnant each month?

DEAR READER— I am sorry to tell you that women who have had an ectopic pregnancy are more likely to have a second one and do have a more difficult time having a normal pregnancy. But many women do succeed, so don't give up hope.

Yes, you will menstruate as before. Menstruation is a result of the cyclical increase and decrease in hormones formed by the ovaries. To clarify the point, the woman who has had both tubes tied for sterilization procedures continues to have normal menstural periods as long as her ovaries are working.

I do not know what your doctor had to do to manage your ectopic pregnancy. Even if he had to take out one ovary the other one would be adequate, if it is normal, to produce the necessary amounts of female hormones and would release an ovum for pregnancy each time it is stimulated. So, you can't assume that you would only have half as many ova released — one every other month.

How many high-card points do you need for your hand to qualify as a positive response to an opening two bid?

A lot depends on just what the high-card points are and if you have any convenient way to make your positive response. Thus, we would consider today's North hand as well worth a two-heart response. His suit is a five-carder headed by two of the three top honors.

Move his queen of hearts over to the club suit and we would bid two notrump with that same seven points. Our general rule would be that some six-pointers qualify and that you should not make a negative response with as many as nine high-card points.

Now for today's hand. North wanted to know why his partner had to jump to the slam; South wanted to know why North responded two hearts with just seven high-card points.

Naturally enough, if the slam had made everything would have been smiles, but that does not change the fact that six clubs was the right contract. It would make about 55 per cent of the time. Today was one of the unfortunate losing 45 per cent.

Ask the Jacobys

A Nevada reader asks us what we respond to partner's two-spade opening bid with ♠ Q x ♥ Q J x ♦ Q 10 x x ♣ Q x x x.

We bid three notrump, but with some trepidation. On the other hand, with 9 high-card points including all four queens, we just can't bid a mere two notrump.

Hearing Loss is not a Sign of Old Age

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Send for this non-operating model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this non-working model will show you how tiny hearing help can be, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 5816, Beltone Electronics, 1201 W. Victoria St., Chicago, Ill. 60646.

Prinze: 'Remained Child In A Very Adult World'

The following is the last of two articles on the life of Freddie Prinze, star of TV's "Chico and the Man," who killed himself last week and left fans and friends puzzling over the reasons. It focuses on his life as a celebrity.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Freddie Prinze seemed to ride to his instant stardom with an effortless maturity that belied his age. But when the TV cameras went off he was a tormented kid from a poor neighborhood in Manhattan who still thought squirt guns were funny.

"Unfortunately he remained a child in a very adult world," Prinze's personal manager, Ron DeBlasio, said this week. The occasion was a eulogy for the 22-year-old star of NBC's "Chico and the Man" who ended his career with a suicide bullet last Friday.

Until his suicide, The Freddie Prinze Story looked like the stuff the American Dream is made of — rags to riches by dint of hard work and talent. Expensive, fast cars; Cardin suits; a home in California for his parents; money. An instant celebrity whose trademark "Lookin' G-o-o-d" seemed to apply to him personally.

But it didn't always.

"He was in turmoil, he was suffering such pain," said his friend, entertainer Tony Orlando, at Prinze's funeral. "And yet his audience never knew."

Certainly some of the pain stemmed from his new life. But no clear-cut evidence points to his skyrocket success as a direct cause of death. And there were other troubles people point to — troubles with his marriage, with a heavy drug habit, with business arrangements. All these problems were very real to Prinze, but friends and associates say the star's personality and outlook on life were probably the underlying reasons for his suicide.

When Freddie Prinze, part Puerto Rican, part Hungarian, was growing up in his poor, ethnically-mixed neighborhood in New York, he was known as a cutup, a likeable, "goofing around type" who did imitations of President Nixon, dropped wet tissues from the rooftops and played at being a disc jockey.

But this boyhood fascination for making people laugh became his way of life — the way he earned his living and the way he often handled personal relationships. The Washington Heights cutup never stopped cutting up.

Alan Bursky, once a roomate of Prinze's in Hollywood, remembers how the childhood love for pranks sometimes took odd and nasty turns.

"He always slept out in the living room," said Bursky. "One day I told him to make his bed. When I got home that night, Freddie had all the bedsheets strewn out around the apartment."

Bursky recalls an endless string of Prinze-inspired pranks: "He threw pie in people's faces. He used to nail people's doors shut. He would go into a nightclub as a customer with a water gun and start firing it at people and break up himself with laughter."

There was another legacy of his childhood in Washington heights: moodiness. Friends, neighbors and teachers in New York remember that Freddie the cutup would sometimes grow quiet, that he would go into a quiet depression of sorts.

That happened in Hollywood, too.

Paul Wasserman, Prinze's publicist, said the star "had fits of elation and fits of depression that one usually associates with creative performers, but with him it was a little bit more."

His moods were unpredictable.

"Basically Freddie was very emotional," says Bursky. "If the toilet had backed up on him one too many times, he might have done this (killed himself). But I've seen autograph seekers literally pull the food out of Freddie's mouth, and it didn't bother him."

Said Gene Schwam, a spokesman for the show's producer, Jimmie Komack: "Because he was able to handle the job and had accomplished so much, people just wouldn't believe him whenever he said: 'I can't go on.'"

But his emotional problems spilled over into occasional and oblique references to suicide. Those were even harder to believe, but after Prinze's death associates started remembering.

A few weeks before his suicide, Bursky recalls, Prinze sat busily at his typewriter, writing his autobiography. "He said it would end 'with a big bang.'"

"He said, even in the very beginning (of the Chico series) that he expected not to get past the age of 30," said his costar, actor Jack Albertson.

Though the entertainer's personality makeup counted heavily in his suicide, friends say the problems of sudden stardom plus a bad marriage, drug use and legal troubles didn't help either.

Prinze's success was almost literally overnight. A chance appearance on a Jack Paar show after Paar caught the comic's act in New York led quickly to a shot on the "Tonight Show." Next he got a test for the Chico role; the show was an instant success.

Prinze met Kathy Cochrane, a 20-year-old twice divorced travel agent, in March 1975 and married her the following October. Last November, Prinze moved out of the couple's home.

One of Prinze's main concerns, friends say, was that his wife might take his beloved 10-month old son away from the Los Angeles area.

'If Freddie Had Lived, So Would I'

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — Just three hours after comedian Freddie Prinze was buried, a young girl was found dying. A suicide note near her said, "If Freddie had lived, so would I."

Lynn Ann Barillier, 13, idolized Prinze, 22, star of the television show "Chico and the Man." His suicide apparently had a devastating effect on her.

As Prinze had done, Lynn Ann put a gun to her temple and fired once. She died 28 hours later on Tuesday in Verdugo Hills Hospital.

A police spokesman detailed the death of the junior high school girl Wednesday and released her note.

Scouting's 67th Anniversary

Seminole County Boy Scouts marched in the Parade of the Americas last October at Walt Disney World as a part of the Walt Disney World's Bicentennial observance. The Seminole County Scouts participated in three parades that evening, the last parade at midnight. Twenty-five leaders,committeemen, adults and Scouters marched with 750 Scouts. (Photo used with permission of David S. Davies, District Scout Executive, Central Florida Council, Boy Scouts of America)

Boy Scout Promise

On my honor I will do my best:
To do my duty to God and my country and to obey the Scout law;
To help other people at all times;
To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight.

BOY SCOUT MOTTO
Be Prepared

There are 47 Boy Scout units in Seminole County made up of Boy Scout Troops and Cub Packs. The 3,145 Scouts in the 47 units participate in all of the hiking, camping, study and activity programs as outlined by the Central Florida Council and the National Boy Scout Council. Adults in the Scouting programs total 711 as leaders, committeemen, advisors and Scouters. It is to all of these Scouts, their leaders, committeemen and advisors and their friends in Scouting that the Evening Herald and Herald Advertiser and these advertisers sponsor this page with pride.

Hammock Car Lot Foes Petition County

By ED PRICKETT
Herald Staff Writer

Spring Hammock spokesmen appeared at the courthouse today with petitions signed by 1,000 Seminole Countians asking the county commission to reverse a Dec. 14 decision to allow a car lot on one acre of environmentally sensitive hammock property.

Chief spokesman for environmentalists, Alex Dickison, said because the Spring Hammock area is "so unique" to the county it should be preserved. Dickison explained the hammock is a natural filtering system for water that runs into Lake Jessup, provides recreation and is aesthetically pleasing to residents.

Dickison and League of Women Voters spokesperson Judy Knudsen said the hammock is a natural green belt area in the middle of Seminole County. The one-acre track slated for use as a Baird-Ray Datsun dealership fronts U.S. 17-92 about 1,000 feet north of General Hutchison Parkway.

In addition to the petitions, protestors today presented the commission with names of 15 civic groups that have signed up to protest commercialization of the 330-acre Spring Hammock area.

On Dec. 14, the county commission overrode the professional planning staff and rezoned the acre from agricultural to commercial. Commissioner Bob French recommended the zoning change. His position was supported by Commissioner John Kimbrough and Harry Kwiatkowski and opposed by Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff and Commission Chairman Dick Williams.

"It's drainage, it's recreation, it's beauty," Mrs. Knudsen told commissioners today. Basically, the groups today asked that nothing be done in the hammock until the professional staff finishes the county's comprehensive plans. The plan's deadline is October. But the owner of the dealership says construction will get underway by the middle of March.

"Do we want another (SR) 436 between Sanford and Altamonte Springs?" Mrs. Knudsen asked. She said the rezoning to allow the car lot "violates the spirit of the comprehensive plan."

Today's session was a work session, and no official action was permissible. Williams said he agreed with "most of the things" presented today.

However, the chairman said he hasn't been assured the public wants to spend money to preserve any one particular area — such as the hammock.

He pointed out it's not always easy to determine what is the "most sensitive land" in a given county.

Kimbrough said it was difficult for him to see how the conservationists could zero in on the fringe areas of the hammock — like the acre slated for a car lot — and ignore the heart of the hammock where the natural filtering of water takes place.

But Mrs. Knudsen pointed out the first thing the groups hope to see done is stop development along U.S. 17-92. Secondly, the groups would like to see Seminole purchase all 330 acres.

To reverse the Dec. 14 decision would require one commissioner raise the issue at a regularly-scheduled meeting. Then, at least three commissioners would have to vote in favor of rezoning the acreage.

The Sierra Club and its league held two weekend rallies to gather signatures for the petitions. In addition, Dickison presented the commission with save-the-hammock bumper stickers.

Sanford Property Owners 'Bullish' On Facelift Plans

By MARK WEINBERG
Herald Staff Writer

Downtown Sanford property owners have responded "very positively" to the idea of restoring their buildings to a Victorian motif, according to Winter Park design consultant Chris Raleigh.

The designer is working with Downtown Development Corp. (DDC) in the planned restoration of downtown.

At the Jan. 27 presentation of DDC's master plan, Raleigh offered to prepare preliminary design sketches and cost estimates for facelifting buildings at a cost of $175, with DDC paying half.

Raleigh was in Sanford Thursday to discuss the renovation of the Welaka Building with Fred Williams, the building's owner. The Welaka Building has the same type of brick and basic design as the privately-restored Pico Building, Raleigh said.

"As of two days ago," said Raleigh, "six property owners have contacted DDC about restoring their buildings."

In sketches presented at the January DDC meeting, Raleigh demonstrated how removing stucco to emphasize the original brick and restoring elements such as canvas or tin awnings, second story porches and shutters could recreate the Victorian image "at a surprisingly small cost, less than $5,000."

His designs emphasize "cleaning up the lines of the older buildings" and "recycling (Victorian) period elements."

Raleigh has conducted extensive historical research into downtown Sanford's buildings. "The Florida Department of Archives and History told me that Sanford has the most perfectly intact downtown area in the state," the designer said.

In other Florida cities, successive waves of "progress" have entirely destroyed the original facades of downtown buildings, but this is not the case here. According to Raleigh the original look "can be brought out rather easily."

And facade restoration is also good business, Raleigh said. If a property owner renovates his building and creates office space on the second floor, the increased rents from new tenants would "more than pay for the renovation cost within a fairly short period of time."

Raleigh said, "The small amount of people I've talked to have very positive attitudes toward renovation. The momentum is already starting."

Downtown property owners interested in using Raleigh's services may call the DDC office (322-9146) or Raleigh's Winter Park office (628-4321).

Foes' Report Raps 46-A Landfill Plan

An Orlando engineer hired by the citizen group opposing the City of Sanford's proposal for a sanitary landfill has prepared a technical report critical of the city's plan.

The 46-A Environmental Protection Association will present the engineer's report to Alex Senkovich, district manager of the state Department of Environmental Regulation (DER).

City Manager W.E. Knowles has applied to Senkovich's office for a permit to construct and operate a landfill on an 85.45-acre site at SR-46A and Oregon Ave.

The action came as the Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday night voted unanimously to kill a proposed zoning ordinance change which would have permitted government facilities in residentially zoned land as conditional uses, such as the proposed landfill.

"We've secured an engineering report which is adverse (to the landfill) and would indicate the landfill should not be placed in that area. We're confident the landfill will be rejected by DER," said the association's lawyer Bud Kirk of the Orlando firm of Pitts, Eubanks, Ross and Rumberger.

Kirk made the comment Thursday. He declined to give the engineer's name because, "I haven't had a chance to study and fully evaluate the report."

The lawyer said the 46-A association was "concerned with the nearness of shallow water to the landfill site.

"We also want to know where the leachate water (that which has flowed from ground level through the landfill to the water table below) is going to flow. It might go in the direction of the city's water wells," located at the golf course.

Kirk said he was hopeful DER would kill the landfill proposal, based on the engineering report and "inadequacies" in the city's proposal.

Thursday night's action by the planning and zoning commission followed a vote last Friday by the Sanford City Commission not to approve the proposal. That body must approve all zoning ordinance changes.

In other actions, the planning and zoning commission:

— Approved for three years veterinarian Herbert Banks' proposal for a modular office building to house an animal hospital on Lake Mary Boulevard.

— Tentatively approved a conditional use permitting LeRoy Robb to proceed with plans for a convenience store and gasoline pumps on the west side of SR 17-92, north of Shenandoah Village.

The EAr was roaming again this week — and will tell all in The Sunday Herald.

Move To Get SR 46 Overpass Gains Support Of Sen. Vogt

State Sen. John Vogt (D-Cocoa) Thursday pledged his support to secure federal funding of an overpass above the Seaboard Coastline Railroad tracks west of Sanford at SR-46.

Vogt promised the Sanford Chamber of Commerce Roads and Bridges Committee he would contact officials of the state Department of Transportation's 5th district in DeLand and discuss with other local legislators plans for a presentation to DOT Director Tom Webb in Tallahassee in support of the overpass.

The Senator arrived late at the meeting because, "I was stopped by the Autotrain," he told the committee.

Committee Chairman Douglas Stenstrom told Vogt, "I don't believe there's a situation like this in the entire country," referring to traffic problems at the railroad crossing because: —The tracks are the southern terminus of the Autotrain; —The tracks are part of Seaboard Coastline's main switching yard between Jacksonville and Tampa; and —Railroad traffic delays ambulances from reaching Seminole Memorial Hospital in Sanford. "Some could die in an ambulance while the trains are crossing," Stenstrom said.

Sen. Vogt said he "would be glad to" speak for the proposal on the state level and would contact other members of the area's state legislative delegation.

He also said he would request that state DOT 5th district Engineer Bill Benedict prepare a center-line survey and cost estimate for an overpass.

Committee members are seeking funding for the overpass under the federal urban railroad relocation demonstration program in which the federal Department of Transportation (DOT) pays the entire cost of improving unsafe railroad crossings.

Each project under the program must be designated by an act of Congress.

"There seems to be a good reception at the national level" from Florida's U.S. senators and congressmen and from federal DOT officials in Atlanta, Stenstrom said. The Seminole county commissioners and Sanford city commissioners also support the project, he said.

But the project needs the support of the state DOT, Chairman Stenstrom said, before the federal legislators could support the proposal in Congress.

Several committee members pointed out that the federal demonstration program requires no state highway matching funds, as are needed under other federal road-building programs.

Chamber of Commerce President Tom Hunt told Sen. Vogt that Amtrak has plans to increase train traffic over the tracks and that the situation is likely to worsen without an overpass.
