Lobby Committee To Conduct Investigation As Soon As It Ends Snails Probe

WASHINGTON, Mar. 27.—(AP)—An investigation of wet and dry organizations is planned by the Senate lobby committee.

Chairman Caraway of the committee said today that the inquiry probably would begin as soon as the investigation into persons and organizations interested in Muscle Shoals was completed.

The Muscle Shoals investigation is expected to be finished next Tuesday with testimony by W. B. Bell, president of the American Chemical Company, which now has an offer pending in Congress to lease the government power and nitrate plant.

Caraway said the first witness in the exhibition inquiry probably would be Representative Tomlinson, Republican, Massachusetts, who has acted to be heard by the lobby committee.

After that, the chairman said, representatives of some wet and dry organizations probably would be heard.

Tinkerham, a wet, has urged the committee to inquire into the activities of the Federal council of churches and the Methodist board of temperance, prohibition and public morals. He asked that he be given an opportunity to appear before the committee to support his realization that the prohibitionists should be investigated.

Heavy Rainfall Has Hurt Celery Crop, Says Local Grower

During the past three days, the heavy rainfall damaged the celery of this section to such an extent that approximately 1000 cars have been lost, according to H. Brown, Sanford celery grower, who yesterday afternoon told a representative of The Herald that the loss of the celery is the most damage ever done by rain in a survey of the celery fields throughout the country.

Mr. Brown further explained that the greater part of the damage caused by the rains is not visible at present. He said that the rain had washed a considerable amount of the fertilizer from the ground on which the celery is growing, and that the majority of the farmers are not financially able to buy more. This lack of fertilizer, he explained, will within a short time, cause many plants to die, and therefore decrease the amount of celery which ordinary consumers could be shipped.

The Sanford farmer also called attention to a report on the injury to the celery in Florida and California which was found Tuesday in the local Federal State marketing service by a daily report. In this particular article it was mentioned that "A production of 510,000 crates is forecast for the summer crop in California as compared with 601,000 crates produced in 1935. Comparing the prospects production with the previously reported forecast for the earlier California and Florida crops, a production of nine percent less than last year is indicated."

Whereabouts Of 16 U. S. Missionaries In China Uncertain

CANTON, Mar. 27.—(AP)—The exact whereabouts of 16 American Catholic missionaries, detained for three weeks at Kiangsi, Kiangsi province, by bandits and communists, was uncertain today.

Belief was expressed that the 16 missionaries, Kiangsi, fearing the city would fall before the bandits, who have been raiding, killing and looting throughout the southern part of the province for months.

The belief was based upon a telegram sent by the Rev. Father Young, a missionary stationed at Kiangsi, saying that the missionaries and bandits had entered Nanchang, about 50 miles away. Father Young, at Nanchang, said it was dangerous to leave the city, although he did not give his official opinion.

Centrally to this frontier, by an unidentified Chinese agent, which stated the missionaries had been dispersed near Kiangsi, this reflecting the situation. More will be communicated as it develops.

At Nanchang, Kiangsi, a daily-issued telegraphic communication and the actual condition of the missionaries, 10 men and seven women, was not learned.

Charges Of Cattle Rustling Preferred

SARASOTA, Mar. 27.—(AP)—Cattle rustling charges have been preferred against four Sarasota county men as a result of complaints by cattlemen and an investigation by Sheriff W. A. Keene. The charges are against the following: Byron Stafford, W. A. Noel, Ira Lee Godwin, and Lester Godwin, ages ranging from 35 to 45 years. Residents of the Fruitville district.

A freshly slaughtered heifer was found by the sheriff, bearing a brand mark of a prominent cattle man whose losses from thefts are said to have been heavy during the recent months. This is the second charge of cattle rustling here in the last month, two other men awaiting trial on a similar charge.

STUART, Fla., Mar. 27.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. George Tunney, who have been spending the past week at Olympia Beach Inn at Hobe Sound, Fla., figured in an automobile crash last night when a south car coasted into their spot on the highway 12 miles south of here. The Tunneys had spent the evening in Stuart and were on their way back to the hotel when the accident happened. Nobody was hurt but the car, which is of Tunney's, was seriously damaged.

SNOW HAS ENDED BUT SLUSH HANGS ON IN MID WEST

CHICAGO, Mar. 27.—(AP)—The snow had ended today, but slush and drifts lingered on. The snow stopped last night suddenly and an unexpected rain started Tuesday morning leaving Chicago and its suburbs shrouded in the heavy, continuous fall in the city's history—194 inches.

Although the city was on a high level with the necessity of fighting snow now, it had a snowmelt with what it already had. Traffic is still delayed and in some cases paralyzed, schools were still dismissed and streets still clogged with slush.

Along the telephone and utility lines, where the slush is piled high and held back by automobiles, it is the most serious of all. The slush had turned into a dark, thick, ankle-deep at some intersections.

Streets are lined, however, by the transportation systems, which are still running but with a heavy load of slush on the main roads but so far from normal and have not even attempted to run on any of the main lines. Twenty thousand and 200 pieces of equipment worked all night to pump it out.

Inspection Work Is Stopped By Order Of "Fly" Officials

ORLANDO, Fla., Mar. 27.—(AP)—Inspection work in Florida has been ordered discontinued except where necessary in permit centers and movement of citrus fruit and vegetable until the end of the present shipping season, ending April 15.

According to a dispatch received here from Washington, the order is effective last night, and is because of the need for reducing expenditures in areas that there might be sufficient funds, and also for inspection of crops to be shipped later, the season ends.

Several hundred field inspectors have been released and a corresponding reduction made in the number of field fly headquarters here. A reduction also has been made in the field office. District inspectors, however, are to be retained for a time to supervise packing house certification and shipping permits.

Great permit work and handling work is to be continued in effect until the end of the shipping season without further inspection in Florida. For the collection in foreign countries by Secretary of Animal Industry, who early in January ordered a suspension of similar certification activities, until a line in work.

Trade Luncheon Told Friday, Not Thursday

The Sanford Chamber of Commerce will hold its second weekly luncheon at the Adlon Grill today at 12 o'clock, instead of Friday as was indicated in headline in yesterday's Herald.

At tomorrow's luncheon, the members will discuss ways and means of cooperating with the Plant Board in deterring the city of fruit drops and other subjects which might constitute business places for Dixie. A positive representative of the Plant Board will address the members at the luncheon.

While yesterday's story concerning the trade lunch luncheon, which had been held on Thursday, is corrected today.

GROWERS URGED TO KEEP GROVES FREE OF DEBRIS

Unpicked Fruit Must Be Removed To Get Quarantine Lifted

WINTER HAVEN, Mar. 26.—Florida citrus growers will have a thought uppermost in mind during the next two weeks which probably will overshadow all other activities. This is the clearing of the groves and having a clean tree of all unpicked fruit by April 15.

The Clearing House this week issued a reminder urging all growers in the state to remove every fruit from their trees. The statement issued by the Clearing House emphasizes the point that regardless of how the industry may feel toward the quarantine regulations, the fact remains that the government will not modify its regulations until satisfied in its own mind that it is safe to do so. Hence, it behooves every grower of fruit to do all in his power to bring the situation to the point where the government can "pick up the pieces" and lift the quarantine.

The clearing of the groves is a task that all growers should take up as soon as possible. It is a task that is not only a matter of public health, but also a matter of the grower's own pocketbook. Unpicked fruit is a liability that can be removed from the grove.

Difficult as this work may be, there is no getting around the fact that if our groves have no fruit in them the can say we are doing everything in our power to discourage and eradicate the pest. If there is a crop, the fly can lay its eggs, and the crop will be ruined.

In view of the government regulations it is up to all of us to forget our personal feeling and opinion in the matter and to do our utmost to see to it that the government cannot say next fall that the quarantine handicaps citrus there are any other factors.

After all, it is our property that we are protecting. Along this same line it should be pointed out that every grower adjacent to the grove property of a merchant or other should be self-interested in that his adjacent neighbor has his own property damaged by the presence of a pest.

When the government grants us the first two weeks in April as additional time, in order to help us in the removal of the fruit, it would have been the best thing that could have been done. It is a plan that was given the government by the growers of the most prominent citrus in the state that we would cooperate with them to the fullest extent in the matter of clean-up. Unquestionably, the granting of this additional time has meant several hundred thousand dollars to us.

With April 15 only two weeks off, it is highly probable that the growers who have not yet had their fruit removed from their trees should not have immediately on this work. The fact remains that the regulations exist and modifications are not.

Mrs. Carrie Catt Is Main Speaker At Celebration

Conditions and fruit upon which the woman industry has called for a continued campaign to win the spirit of hatred which the state legislature and international conferences.

Admitted that "performance" of the state has not exceeded the line, color for color the effects of the 1920's the revolution in the wisdom of the state, progress has been definitely justified.

Miss Katherine Ludington, of Lyons, Colo., another speaker, touched most strongly on the "old and new" theme. "We have, rather conspicuously, not fulfilled some of the promises," she said, "the voters have not disrupted the home, the church or undermined the pillars of the state. On the other hand, our voters have not undertaken political duties; yet, our government, we brought about a change."

AMERICANIZING OF HAWAII IS NOW ALMOST FINISHED

Once Oriental Influx Into Pacific Islands Is No Longer Feared

HONOLULU, March 26.—Hawaii, melting pot of the Pacific, has produced probably the most unique example of race assimilation yet recorded in human civilization. Once, students of affairs would not see in the former insular island a threat to the security of the Islands under the American flag. Today all such worries have vanished.

Hawaii today is an American as Maine, New York or Illinois. The American flag flies over myriad "hood" houses dotting the Islands and even in more unfrequented spots the occasional tourist as he drives by is hailed in strict American Navy fashion by groups of "the boys and girls" who line the roadside.

The Americanization of the Islands in Hawaii is not confined to the second generation; American standards of living have been adopted by those who are immigrants. Though some still cling to their former modes of dress, the interiors of their homes are counterparts of those found in suburbs of Seattle.

Nationally advertised food products are on their shelves and in their refrigerators, and although some advertising still the memories of their home land endeavor to give their native culture an air of being American, which sounds on their lips, is proving to be potent force. Observers freely predict that shortly the effort will be directed at the Oriental section of the Islands and the public will become a thing of the past.

The first thing the Asiatic looks to in Hawaii today is to get away from Asiatic surroundings. With the first blurb of progress he moves his family, possibly the family money, him from the Oriental section into a new subdivision and shortly radiates, upon the roof and a more intensive period of Americanization begins.

Some of the biggest merchants in Hawaii today are former laborers who came to work in the sugar fields. They have mastered rapidly the commercial world by adopting the best tactics of American business. Their stores and equipment are identical with those in use on the mainland. Of the number, many have achieved great wealth. Their example comes to a new incentive for the younger generation who are now being inculcated with the American as the most desirable.

A shopkeeper of Hawaii's Americanization is the rapid disappearance of foreign languages. Formerly they exist in a great number. One by one they have disappeared until only a few remain. They are rapidly being ground and present indications are that the next five years will see their complete disappearance. Even those which exist in any entry section in English and Chinese, have made the English part of the paper the front section, which makes it all extent and appearance an average American edition up and down.

Sociologists say that the Americanization process has extended to where American numerical family standards are being adopted. The family of ten or twelve children will soon be a rarity according to observers.

RED CROSS PLANS DRIVE FOR MORE SAFETY IN STATE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 26.—In recognition of Florida's early Spring, which opens the swimming season by a wide margin over other states, the American Red Cross has planned a special six-day school at Daytona Beach opening on Monday, April 7.

The purpose is to train men and women to serve as instructors in Red Cross methods at the pool and beach with which Florida is so richly provided. Members of police and fire departments, leaders of Boy and Girl Scouts, camp and athletic directors, playground directors and Red Cross workers will attend from all parts of Florida and from adjacent territory.

Boat and surf rescue work will be a feature of the Daytona school, and the use of its well equipped beach. The Pepp swimming pool is at the disposal of the students.

Courses include first aid to the injured, water rescue methods, resuscitation, surf rescues, handling of boat, advanced water rescues, first aid, water rescues and patients, and the organization of Red Cross first aid and life saving chapters.

The training will be under the general direction of Commodore W. E. Longfellow of the Red Cross national headquarters staff, an international authority. He is assisted by Benjamin S. Eaton and Harry A. Kenning of the national staff, and Richard A. Mox of the Daytona Beach life saving staff. Dr. George M. Green, a local physician, will be in attendance. Applications for the course are received by the registrar, A. M. Boland, Sea Executive, Box 521, Daytona Beach.

Rollins And Florida Exchange Teachers

WINTER PARK, Fla., Mar. 26.—(AP)—Ward Walker, a professor of literature and journalism at Rollins College has gone to the University of Florida on an exchange basis with Dr. James M. Farr, vice president of the university and head of the English department. The exchange will be for the first month of the Spring term.

It is understood that the primary cause of the exchange is to allow Dr. Farr an opportunity to study the Rollins Conference Plan of Study which was inaugurated by President Holt four years ago. The conference plan substitutes for two-hour conference periods for the conventional lecture and recitation and attempts to break down the traditional barrier between instructor and student necessitated with large formal classes.

The European Tour

We had heard a lot about say Paris, but it left us a little sour; There wasn't a first-class sight to see.

Berlin is nothing to talk about but we had some time to spare, And it wasn't a long way off our route.

We was sick of the so-called sunny Spain inside of a day or two; The weather was mostly wind and rain.

At a second-rate summer resort; The place is a regular bust, I'll say.

Rome is something like Hollywood, And it might be a real live town if they'd hustle around the way they should.

It takes a lot of face sometimes to take things at their face value.

The Commissioners are certainly whacking expenses to the bone. A receiver could do no more.

The only way you can get decent liquor nowadays is to get rich, and if you drink this cooling stuff you will.

The reason our presidents are good fishermen is because they have to catch a lot of fish before they can be elected.

While Sanford observed only slightly Wednesday morning, Chicago, Detroit, and other northern points saw themselves out of eight inches of snow.

There are a lot of slick ones in Sanford these days. Beware! Been down in the lower part of the rats during the winter and just sitting back northward now.

New story yesterday tells that a divorce has been granted to Mrs. Maria Remarque which indicates that "All has not been quiet on the Western Front" in spite of that author's novel.

The announcement that the national flower show will again be held this year will be welcomed by all those who are interested in horticulture and gardens.

The Germans who proved during the war that they knew how to build them, The Bremen which broke the world's record for an Atlantic crossing a short time ago, has already been surpassed in speed by her sister ship the Europa which has just completed a voyage in four days and seven hours.

The Germans are putting their skill and brains to putting tests than they were twelve years ago.

Gratitude

A French cynic once said that gratitude is the expectation of favors not yet received. We do not believe that this blanket definition covers all gratitude, for surely, there are some people who can feel a genuine thankfulness to their benefactors, but we must admit that we believe sincere gratitude to be a quality not often found. All too often gratefulness for favors received is tinged with the hope of more not yet granted.

Real gratitude is a very rare virtue because so much intelligence is required to practice it, intelligence to discriminate between the motives which prompt the benefactor. Often a politician, or someone else with an ax to grind, dispenses aid cold-bloodedly to serve his own ends, with no desire to help anyone but himself, the "I'll do this for you, if you'll do that for me" philosophy. An act of generosity which is performed for the purpose of gaining an end is nothing more nor less than a "trade deal".

But the really generous act, the favor granted with no thought of return, deserves sincere gratitude. One must have not only intelligence but imagination and memory to feel grateful. It seems so easy for those who have prospered to forget their benefactors in time of need. It is necessary that a man be able to recreate the past in his mind's eye, to remember when he was befriended at a critical period in his life, to recall and keep alive that inner glow of thankfulness that he felt at that time, and carry this warmth of feeling over into his new prosperity.

History and literature are filled with examples of ingratitude, and strangely enough, some of the most tragic examples are found in the relationship of members of the same family. Napoleon who made so many "trade deals" in favor of, who exchanged kingdoms with the same nonchalance that a horse dealer trades horses, was generous and uncalculating in his attitude toward his brothers and sisters. He gave them crowns where most brothers give trinkets, and they betrayed him. In that bitter cup "The Little Corporal" drank at Elba, it seems to us that the worst drop must have been the realization that his own family was one of the chief reasons of his downfall.

It is a curious quirk of human nature that a feeling of resentment seems often to taint the attitude of a person toward a man to whom he is obligated by just kindness. The partial explanation of this perversion might be vanity. Men like to feel that they have attained whatever success they may have reached alone and unaided. It embarrasses them to be reminded of how much they owe to the generosity of some other person. They do not like to remember the time when they were unsuccessful and needed help. We have even heard it said that the surest way to lose a friend is to lend him money.

It seems to us that of all virtues, gratitude is one of the most gracious. The man who practices it will gain a deal of inner satisfaction as well as helping his benefactor to keep his faith in human nature.

The Governor's Letter

We are not particularly surprised that no clouds of dust are seen trailing Doyle Carlton as he vigorously applies himself to the highways leaving the state, following the receipt of an anonymous communication advising him to get out because of his stand regarding Al Capone. Governor Carlton probably knows as well as anyone that a person who hasn't the nerve to sign his name to any kind of an order, certainly hasn't the nerve to enforce the order.

This particular letter telling the Governor that "You will make a good target" was not written by Al Capone or any of his gang, not if we are any judge of human nature. If the stories of Al and his escapades bear any semblance of truth whatever, the Chicago gangster and his cohorts are not the type to take refuge behind the impenetrable maze of an obscure handwriting unidentified by name and address. Capone might stand Governor Carlton against a stone wall and riddle him with bullets, but we doubt if he would write him a letter about it in advance and forget to sign his name.

No, the Governor's anonymous letter was probably written by some Miami ill-wit, some misguided and mental misshapen ignoramus who has profited by Alphonso's calculating generosity and who believes that the glitter of petty ill-gotten gold is preferable to the moral integrity of the state, someone who thinks in glowing terms of the many big things he is going to do but who hasn't the nerve to publicly endorse his own projects, someone who could write Governor Carlton that he would make a good target but who hasn't the nerve to aim steadily at a paper bull's eye.

Such inevitably is the strength and character of the anonymous letter written. Sometimes we get similar letters vigorously endorsing or condemning some matter of public policy, but usually with the capitulating post script, "You may publish this, but don't use my name." What good is it if there is no one to back it up? It is like going to the innermost recesses of a deserted wood and swearing bitterly at your worst enemy. To what avail? A dog barking at the moon could be no more ridiculous.

The Governor is not disturbed over this anonymous letter writer. He is too busy thinking on how to rid this state of a bigger but bad man, one who shouts quick but who hasn't time to make anonymous threats.

IN CONNECTION WITH "The Vagabond King", it is interesting to recall that history actually recounts the life and deeds of Francois Villon whose real name was Francois de Montecobier. He took the name Villon from his foster father, Maitre Guillaume de Villon, for whom he had an intense devotion. Francois, while one of the greatest lyric poets of France, and recipient of bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees at the Convent of Saint Benoit-le-Betourne, was really pretty much of a roustabout, just as he is pictured in "The Vagabond King". He was only twenty-four when he had killed his first man, a priest, and for this he was pardoned as apparently the act was in self defense. Afterward he took part in many robberies, many killings, was condemned to death, pardoned, banished from the country, the principal in many intrigues, the wooer of many lovely ladies, the breaker of many loving hearts. He is remembered as much for his sincerity, his humility, his devotion to his duty, his gratitude to those who helped him, his sympathy for those who suffered, and his colorful picturesque life, entirely in keeping with the times when law breakers were no worse than law makers, as for his poetry which is among the best of the French.

THE FARMER'S ADVICE

I have talked to you so much about spending your last penny cheerfully, that it gives me great pleasure to quote from a recent magazine article by Bruce Barton, who has his mother to say to her eldest son: "It is wonderful how the Lord always looks after me. Yesterday I got away $20 and today it comes back to me in an entirely unexpected wedding fee. The more I give away, the more comes in."

The World's Window

By Pierre Van Paasow

Paul Merand's book, "New York," continues its sensational sale in Paris and although the author declares that it is not destined to be read by Americans, the enthusiasm of the author for his subject is of the kind to communicate itself to the spirit of his readers, Americans or not. He has discovered a new aesthetic, of blue steel and geometric neckle, Sino-luxury from all over the world finds a haven of welcome in New York. M. Merand is of the opinion that thought and science will follow suit and leave Europe. On this point the French critics are bound to give him an awful battle. In spite of his precautions, M. Merand tries his reader out by a desire to make him see all night clubs, banks and cemeteries. Of course, it's the subject matter of the book that brings this with it. The reader begins to feel the tiredness of New York. "If you see a very fresh and rosy face in that city," he says, "it is a face painted up and decorated by the embalmer." What would otherwise be a dry guide book becomes alive with remarks of that sort. Here and there one finds also a batch of those nervously written pages which give one a taste of the great city's fever. It is the most complete book that exists of New York at present, not excepting the works of Theodore Dreiser, and John dea Paasow, which treat only of certain phases of New York life. Merand's is a treatise on human geography. Everything passes in review; business, prohibition, the lower east side, Broadway, Wall Street, Blug Song. He retraces even the history of New York, but only to show his readers that everything in that city has its face toward the future, and constitutes a living image of what the cities of tomorrow will be like.

New Yorkers and Parliament know it yet, but farmers and those living outside the great stone and cement human hive are telling one another like some precious secret that spring is on the way. We discovered four violets in the meadow the other day and carried them triumphantly home, where they repose in a small liquor glass, as no vase could be found small enough to lodge them. Other violets are on the way. Timidly they come looking above the bare ground, and surprise with the sweetness of the atmosphere, decide to stay. The unusually soft winter has deceived Nature a little this year. In spite of the March tempests and high winds the buds are swelling on the trees. Another few weeks of warmth and sunshine and we will see the first roses and lilacs. The first manifestations of spring, discreet and hesitant though they may be, contain a promise; promise of a renovation of the land now still gray and somber. It is a promise also that somewhere we are not forgotten. If the falling leaves in autumn are like letters containing a message from Death, the first pale-green sprouts of spring that appear in the meadows are that spring is on the way being back home of life. For mysterious forces are stirring beneath the brown soil. And the warmth that lies on the landscape has something of that brooding heat of a hen on her eggs, the same generative heat that is mentioned in the first chapter of Genesis, where it is said that the Spirit of God hovered above the water in the days of creation.

From a book of sonnets compiled by a Russian exylet, Vladimir Paster, we extract the following letter which the author received from Maxim Gorki, thirty-five years ago Gorki, who was still a vagabond then, had met another vagabond by the name of Eydor Chaliapin. "I have heard Chaliapin," he writes, "He is a big monster gifted with a diabolical power, with which he is capable of dominating the crowd. He is very intelligent by nature, but for the moment, it seems to me his point of view is that of a child, although for a singer it is intellectual to be well equipped. What! Alphonso he will make! He converts me into an ass. He sang fifteen pieces the other night. There was a thunderous applause. You know I detect the opera and understand nothing of music. Even Chaliapin cannot change that, but I will go and hear him sing, even if I have to wait an entire evening, that prayer: 'Lord, have mercy upon us!' I assure you," Gorki goes on, "he sings that prayer in such a manner that the Lord, if He exist, will surely hear them, and then He will do one of two things: He will have mercy upon us, or He will reduce the world into ash. It all depends on what Chaliapin wants to put into those words."

A bathing party composed of Bernice and Eva Hells, Henry Petroff and Le, Porwancki had the unique experience of catching a baby octopus, or squid, on Loo-Olas beach. Nobody knows what the baby was doing so far from home or why he had wandered so far from mother, but there he was on the shore, miles from the ocean depths, which form his home—Fort Lauderdale News.

"THROW HIM A LINE, MR. PRESIDENT"

TELLING THE WORLD BY NEIL O'HARA

THE OLD SWINDLE MIRET Russell Owen, a newspaper reporter, has been covering the Byrd Antarctic expedition for nearly two years. If Mr. Owen is half the reporter we think he is, he will turn in an expense account to his newspaper something like this: RUSSELL OWEN EXPENSE ACCOUNT (South Pole story.)

Table listing expenses for the Antarctic expedition, including items like 'Tip to Pullman porter', '1,177 meals', 'Tips to waitresses', '1 Anglo-Eskimo dictionary', '7 extra blankets', '1 map of Bay of Whales', 'Interpreter to talk to Eskimos', 'Valet (getting for pants pressed)', '1 bribe to Little America traffic cop', '6 packages rate-y razor blades (new model)', 'Tasi, Little America to South Pole', 'Supper for taxi driver', 'Copies of New Zealand papers to keep abreast of', 'Steen-heated garters', '1 pair snowshoes for summer wear', 'Extra ribbons for typewriter', '5 reams non-freezing note-paper', '2 gals. alcohol (to keep typewriter from freezing)', '1 silver flask (for typewriter alcohol)', 'Racoon coat for So. Big kernels in small shells

IN ADDITION to the advertisements of the big department stores, of the grocery and hardware stores, of the millinery, clothing and shoe stores, there is another kind of advertising that is being read more and more by readers of this newspaper. That kind of advertising is the Classified Columns.

A man or woman wants a job. They read the "Help Wanted" column and probably insert an advertisement of their own under "Positions Wanted." Employer and job seeker soon get together to the benefit of both. A man may want an automobile—possibly he cannot afford a new car, so he looks in the "Used Car" column and finds just the car at the price he can afford to pay. Some one has lost a pocketbook, valuable papers or even a pet dog. The "Lost and Found" columns soon bring lost and found together.

The Classified Columns are so arranged that any one can readily find what he seeks quickly—business news, machinery and tools, household goods, horses, dogs, cats, canaries, etc. They enable you to locate what you are looking for in short order. So in reading advertising do not overlook the classified columns—the individual advertisements do not take up much room, but like the meaty nut they may contain a big kernel in a small shell—just for you.

Read the advertisements for your own good... classified columns as well as display advertisements fee of $3.00 before it can be shipped here. The proposed tariff rate is thought to be the highest of the two. The Senate however proposes to fix the rate at 50 per cent ad valorem, or twice the present rate.

In either case, whether the House's rate or the Senate's is placed as a final settlement on the bill, growers and shippers are confident that the demand for Seaside County products will increase.

It has been explained by a local grower and dealer of celery that while California and the West Indies probably do not ship as much celery as the section at the same time as the present season's product are often favored by a shipload of celery which happens to arrive in New York at the same time as the arrival of the Florida product, and therefore floods the market for the time.

The new tariff bill will also affect many other Florida-grown vegetables. Among them are the following, which are tabulated with the present rates and the amount which is proposed by the House and by the Senate:
