How To Cook Meat
We would be the last person in the world to attempt to tell any woman how to cook, but all men show that much discrimination. There is, for example, Dr. R. S. Glasscock, meat expert of the Florida experiment station, who tells manufacturers to get the most out of roasting emus. For better or for worse we pass along his suggestions to the consuming public.
"If cooked properly, meat usually does not shrink as much as it would otherwise and is also more appetizing and palatable," he said.
Cooking changes color of meat from dark red to dark or pale grey, reduces its size and weight, and breaks down connective tissue. Evaporation of water, coagulation of albumin, and contraction of muscle fibers cause these changes.
Dr. Glasscock explains that weight and size shrinkage of a piece of meat depends on the cooking, size of the piece, and length of time it is cooked. He cited a recent experiment in which two ribs roasts of the same weight were cooked, one at high heat and the other at moderate temperature. Both were cooked to the same "doneness," but the roast cooked by high heat lost 14 percent more weight than the other.
He offered these suggestions to homemakers:
Cook tender cuts, such as loin, steaks and ribs and loin roasts, by dry roasting, broiling, or pan-broiling, and cook less tender cuts, such as chuck, round and flank, by moist heat—braising, simmering, or stewing. The less tender cuts are just as nutritious and appetizing as the more expensive ones if cooked properly.
Cook meat according to cut and fatness. To roast a tender cut, use shallow rack-bottom pan and start meat cooking with fat side up so it will baste itself. Salt it just before putting in oven or while cooking. Do not add water or cover pan.
Cook less tender cuts by long and slow heat in covered pan and add water when necessary, or grind the meat and cook it as tender cut.
To make the most of food value and flavor, cook meat until it is tender, but no longer.
Moderate heat cooks meat evenly, makes it tender, and keeps weight loss to a minimum.
Beef is rare when cooked between 130 and 150 degrees Fahrenheit, medium when cooked between 150 and 170 degrees, and well done when cooked at 180 degrees.
Cook all pork well done.

Advertising During The War
Many people do not understand or appreciate the value of newspaper advertising during the war, and its service to the public in war times. They don't make those civilian goods more plentiful, wonder why that firm keeps on advertising, is a comment you hear occasionally.
Advertising is performing four primary functions during these war years. Briefly they are:
1. To make the most of food value and flavor, cook meat until it is tender, but no longer.
2. To tell civilians how to make the longest and best use out of goods which cannot be replaced during the war.
3. To preserve the name and goodwill of those companies which are so deeply immersed in war production that their trademarked products might well be forgotten before they are available again.
4. To foster and assist in promoting civilian wartime objectives such as salvage drives, war production drives, stamp and bond sales and similar programs.
United States business are realizing that advertising is an essential part of our communication system. We dare not destroy or cripple that communication system in wartime, and we have no reticence about it.
Many business houses remember the fate of some concerns that stopped advertising during the last war, and they are continuing their time—Tusculum Star-Advertiser.

Birdlovers Cast Microbes Flee As Anxious Eyes At Go Into Action

Words and Sentences
A newspaper columnist tells of getting this letter in his mailbox:
"I wonder if you will overlook my presumption and forgive me impudently to such an extent as to inform me, to procure some sort of manual, not too advanced or technical, wherefrom I could obtain some knowledge of language, not from a grammatical point of view, but more concerned with the differences between acceptable and unacceptable usage."
The writer, though seeking help to improve his style, probably thought he was using highly good English. But the columnist, after studying the letter a little, decided that he meant: "Please tell me of a handbook on English usage," and needed it.
It is strange how many people seem to think good English is long words and long sentences. Perhaps it should be required practice in schools and colleges to have students read once a week, the biblical account of the creation of the world.

Absentee Workers Are Big Problem To War Industry

By WENDELL LUND
Director, Labor Production Division, War Production Board

Absenteeism in war industry is not the simple problem of one pay day's work. It is a complex problem which swells war industry's payroll by $100,000,000 a month. For example, Mary Smith was a department supervisor in an airplane factory in Los Angeles. Found of her work, eager to do her share in the war effort, she kept rolling on schedule.

But troubles piled up at home. Her husband was away at a lather in another factory. Her sister managed to keep an eye on her three youngsters, but she herself didn't get much chance to be with them. Stores in her neighborhood closed at 6 p. m. She didn't get home until 7. It was pretty tough to shop. And the school she was behind. She hadn't had a chance to get housework done. Dirty laundry was piling up. The school set came down with a cold. She stayed home two days to catch up.

John Brown worked on the ship yards at Newport News. "bathed" in a noisy, crowded rooming house. Exhausted from the strain of a job new to him, he couldn't get enough rest off shift. His only acquaintances were nearby workers in the plant. His family, wife and two children, were in Charleston, W. Va. They couldn't find a place in Newport. Spring came, with it hot weather. Brown's day off was the Sun day. This particular one, he hopped a train for Charleston to spend the day with his family. Getting a rest at home was so good that he stayed three days. He figured it was worth losing two days' pay but a cost of $100.00. Two days of missed work.

Those are just two examples of the causes of one of the biggest American war production problems today—a problem that can be solved only one way through community cooperation in the "boom-town" which have mushroomed since the war.

That very mushrooming, a government survey recently showed in the real cause behind the mounting tide of absenteeism. It's a problem involving housing short-ages; lack of time for needed shopping; inadequate transportation; lack of a married woman trying to do her job and run her home, too.

The War Production Board and War Manpower Commission are seeking cooperation of civic and public agencies on health, housing and transportation. They are looking for ways to solve these problems in the community and are solving "in-plant" problems through more than 2,000 plant labor-management committees.

Efforts are made to approach each problem in a positive way. One firm put German money in the pay envelopes of absentees with the explanation that this was "Hitler's" payment for the day you were absent. That method stopped because there was no way of telling whether a death or serious illness might not have struck responsibly the absentee. If such were the case, it only made the worker angry.

Another firm achieved considerable success in hitting unnecessary absence by holding drawings on unspecified days with prizes going to the winners. If they were on the regular facilities for workers and smooth transportation bottlenecks.

Typical Housewife Chosen By OPA To Help Ration Plans

By MARGARET KRNOODLE
WASHINGTON, Mar. 30. (AP)—"OPA," typical housewife, Mrs. Philip L. Crowley, of Huron, South Dakota, runs a tractor, rides a horse and reads public library books almost by the bushel. She thinks she's typical because she spent 20 years raising three children, never had a maid (only an occasional servant when the children were babies) and graduated into community service as her children grew up. When she came to Washington a few days ago, she had cut her housekeeping to three hours a day and was way out front in fixing up the farm situation in South Dakota, particularly in her home county, DeWitt.

The western rancher's daughter never met Public Administrator Prentiss Brown until a national woman's organization recommended her as the housewife to represent American women in OPA policy making and interpreting.

In her white cotton dress, blue and white checkered blouse, tweed skirt and her No. 17 coupon shoes ("as much like boots as possible"), she looks like a grown-up all-American outdoor girl. Her eyes are blue, and her brown hair rolls back from her face.

When she appeared at Mrs. Brown's press conference, she wore a chic, two-year-old hat which she bought because the winds of South Dakota couldn't blow it off. She has such glowing natural color in her cheeks that she needs little makeup. Her wedding ring is plain gold. She wears no other jewelry and no nail polish.

Mrs. Crowley says her paternal grandparents got to South Dakota by ox team and her mother and grandparents by flat-bottom boat from Tennessee. She rode a horse with a western saddle and a one-half mile to school, and though nothing of riding 25 to 30 miles horseback in a divided skirt before she came east for the job. She insists nothing on a horse would kill her and save eastern horses seem stiff-legged.

Mr. Crowley is manager of a clinic and hospital in their home town. Their second son, John, is a junior in high school, he with Dick, who enlisted in the U. S. Army, is at Fort Knox, Ky., and their daughter, Mary Jane, 12, is in private school at Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

"I'm not a technical person," she insists, "but I've analyzed the problems involved in her new job from her 20 years of 'buying food, preparing it myself, serving it and cleaning up afterward.'"

Perverved Justice Is Caricatured In Wood Carving

SOUTH BEND, Ind. Mar. 30. On a visit to Palacio de Bellas Artes in Mexico City, Mexico, the Rev. John A. O'Brien, Ph.D., LL.D., of South Bend's University of St. Joseph, is carving in wood by Carlos Huarez Roche, of Jalapa in the Mexican state of Vera Cruz.

While Father O'Brien was studying the figure, called "A Concept of Justice," Mr. Roche, who is a lawyer, approached and explained how he came to represent the noble virtue by an ugly plotting female.

He said that in his work as a lawyer he had seen cases where bribery, corruption, power and privilege wrote the verdict instead of the facts and the principles of law. He determined to represent a caricature of justice by a figure crooked in every line of her body with the long, covetous fingers of one hand stretching out for all that could be reached and with the left hand clutching close to her side the secret bribe. As a result of this determination the sculptor produced the terrible looking figure-

Government Uses Farm Workers To Produce War Food

By ROBERT GRIGER
AP Features Writer
FORT LUTON, Colo. Mar. 30. Thirty mule-driving cotton-tobacco farmers have agreed to grow their postage-stamp size, water-drenched Arkansas acres to grow war food in sun-dried Colorado. It's the first contingent of 60,000 American families that the war will uproot this year in a campaign to solve the farm manpower problem of raising foods desperately needed at home and an world wide battlefront.

The U. S. government is sponsoring the mass migrations. The 60,000 families will be scattered throughout the country where farm help is needed and where they may produce war foods with maximum efficiency. They will come from regions where there is drought, a labor surplus or other "unfavorable" conditions.

They are year-round farm hands and will be placed in more or less permanent jobs, bringing their families with them. Some are migratory workers, as the government has another plan for the migrators.

For the Arkansians it was an overnight reversal of living conditions and habits. With a mile or two they grew corn, cotton, tobacco or hay in Arkansas. Most of their farms were from 30 to 60 acres. Some never had been higher than 1,000 feet above sea level in their lives.

At Fort Lupton they are a mile high. Two-mile high peaks of the peaks of the Rockies, snow-capped, form a backdrop for the farm fields. They're going to work on Colorado ranches spread over as much as 1,000 acres. They will handle cattle, help grow sugar beets or vegetables and they'll be driving tractors, not mules.

"There's no reason why we won't make good Colorado farm hands," said Silas M. May, father of 10 children who has farmed in Arkansas 20 years.

"Many of my friends said it was foolish for me to try this new life at my age. But I say farming is farming, no matter where you are."

Another of the farmers, Garner Jenkins, neighbor of May in Independence county, Arkansas, said:

"Maybe we won't be entirely happy. But we can farm! That's the important thing."

Cost of the migrations is borne by the government. As soon as the farmers reach the new regions, they go to school for two weeks. In Colorado the Arkansians had to learn how to irrigate, talk practice seldum necessary in their home state.

Farmers who need ranch hands may visit camps in which the migrating workers are housed. The farmer and his prospective hired hand deal directly with each other, not through the government, in making their working agreement.

Farmer E. B. Davis of Fort Lupton needed a hand and he visited the farm school where the Arkansians were in training.

Nazi Manhunters Comb Mountains For Norwegian Patriots

Rjukan Siege Is On As Wave Of Sabotage Flourishes Also In Denmark

(By Associated Press)
In Norway, 3,000 Nazi-led manhunters combed the mountains for patriot saboteurs and the partial siege of Rjukan was reported.
A growing wave of sabotage against the German occupation forces has produced a "critical" situation in Denmark and it is believed that the sabotage may reach a high point in a few days, informed Danish sources here last night.
It has been learned that the Germans are threatening to introduce brutal measures, heretofore absent in Denmark, namely death penalties, roundups of hostages and the levying of communal fines unless patriot outbursts cease.
Reports reaching Stockholm say that Maj. Gen. Hermann von Hanneken, commander of the Nazi occupation army, threatened such reprisals at a meeting in the Nydøder Hills schoolhouse in Copenhagen, on February 27. The fact that the Germans waited this long to act, it was explained, indicates that they first wanted to build up a propaganda case such as the recent warnings in the Danish press against sabotage.
Reliable Danish sources in London reported Tuesday that sabotage in Denmark has spread to such an extent that the Nazis are threatening to eliminate Danish control of the civil administration. This first step in "unknown causes" was said to have occurred in the past three months. In addition, the Danish artillery barracks recently were destroyed in part by fire.

New Wholesale Price Ceiling Put On Veal

WASHINGTON, March 31. (AP)—The Office of Administration prescribed Tuesday new packer-wholesale maximum for veal, preparatory to setting up a new system of retail prices.
Within a week or two, the agency expects to issue uniform retail prices on beef, veal, lamb and mutton, similar to the standard prices on pork effective Thursday. Under this pricing system, maximum prices on meat will be the same in all stores of the same type in the same area, instead of each store's having a different legal maximum as at present.
Preparatory to the system, however, OPA has been trying to standardize packer and wholesale prices. Price regulations have been issued previously on packer-wholesale sale of pork, beef, lamb and mutton.
The new veal ceiling will go into effect Saturday and generally is similar to the beef regulations. The same 10 cents and other general methods of control in the beef regulation are used. Also, the maximum prices for the Chicago market are the same on veal as they are on beef.

Few Quakers Object To Military Service

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 31. (AP)—Two members of the peace-loving Society of Friends (Quakers) are opposing the armed forces for every one that serves a civilian public service camp on a conscientious objector, a committee reported to the Arch Street Friends at an annual meeting.
The committee reported that the Quakers in the United States are in a measure of the national vitality of our movement, the report said. The committee was headed by Lawrence Shashuan.

Solon Says Bureau Hide Draft Dodgers

WASHINGTON, Mar. 31. (AP)—Accusing Federal Department of "hiding draft dodgers," Sen. Charles McNary (R-Ore.) today urged the American Legion and other patriotic organizations to "bring their attention to a government which is hiding draft dodgers."
McNary said that the American Legion, which has a membership of 2,000,000, is one of the largest organizations in the country. He said that the American Legion should be able to find out who the draft dodgers are and report them to the government.

Celery Man Says Product's Price Is Fairly Good

Despite reports of lower prices being offered by buyers for celery, M.L. Cullum, sales manager for a produce company, stated today that he saw no ground for pessimism regarding this item. He pointed out that according to his figures, celery was still bringing a fair price, $2.75 to $3.25 a crate, and that the movement was still dropping.

County Crops Bring About $2.75 To $3.25 Per Crate

During the week ending March 20, Mr. Cullum said, 167 crates of celery were shipped from the state, dropping to a shipment of 398 crates by the end of the next week. He predicted that around 375 crates would be shipped this week, or between 50 and 60 crates a day. California shipments, he stated, have dropped to but four or five crates a day.
While considerably off grade in quality, this condition of celery is general in all sections, he added, and buyers find good quality celery very scarce.

Top Prices On Used Cars And Buses Set

WASHINGTON, March 31. (AP)—The OPA decreed maximum prices for used trucks, ambulances, buses and other used commercial motor vehicles, in some cases only a fraction of the current market quotations. The new regulations, effective Apr. 28, set a top legal price as a percentage of the original price.
Depending on the age and part of the vehicle, the price will be reconditioned, the percentage will range from 20 to 47 of the original price. This action was taken, the OPA said, to halt the speculation which has boomed prices.

Men May Decide To Be Farmers Or Fight

WASHINGTON, Mar. 31. (AP)—President Roosevelt yesterday announced a semi-compulsory program to channel all possible manpower into essential industries, with special emphasis placed immediately on the needs of agriculture, particularly dairy farms.
Reviewing at his press conference a memorandum showing that already has been done, he disclosed that steps have been taken to encourage men in years old and over in and out of the army, conscription objection and men 18 to 45 rejected for military service for physical disability to seek jobs on dairy farms or in essential industries.
His disclosure came shortly after he had said that Chester O. Davis, new food administrator, has been granted unprecedented authority to seek jobs for men in the food industry. Davis said that the new program would be a part of the government's war effort.

Federal Factory Turns Out First Synthetic Rubber

BATON ROUGE, La., Mar. 31. (AP)—A new plant today turned out the government's first synthetic rubber in a factory to be used in aircraft construction. Private industry has had some plants in operation.
Building contractors with a minimum of steel and other metal materials are to be supplied with mixtures of liquid and gas, which turned out synthetic rubber needed by the army and navy in fighting the Axis.
Dubbed by government experts as the "fastest construction job in the world," the plant was completed in 100 days after the war began. The plant is located in the industrial district of Baton Rouge, La., and is one of the largest synthetic rubber plants in the world.
The plant is owned and operated by the Federal Synthetic Rubber Corporation, a government-owned corporation. The plant is expected to produce 10,000 tons of synthetic rubber annually.

The bill, which would authorize the construction of a 1,000-mile canal, was introduced by Rep. Charles McNary (R-Ore.). The committee's report stated that the canal would cost $1 billion and would take 10 years to complete. The committee also stated that the canal would be a major waterway for the United States and would provide a shortcut for the movement of goods and passengers between the Mississippi and the Gulf of Mexico.
