Amnesty program offered

TALLAHASSEE — People who have neglected or avoided paying state taxes can settle their accounts for three months without penalty, but after that the Department of Revenue will get tough.

Jim Zingale, acting executive director of the agency, said Tuesday the tax amnesty program would be in effect from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31, after which a series of get-tough enforcement provisions passed this year by the Legislature begin.

Any delinquent taxpayer not already under investigation, indictment or prosecution may come forward and pay the taxes plus interest with no fear of criminal or civil penalty during the three-month period, Zingale said.

People who are interested can visit one of 22 Taxpayer Service Centers or call 1-800-FL-AWARD. The Legislature appropriated $350,000 for a television, radio, newspaper and billboard advertising campaign.

Zingale said the state hopes to reap $1 billion from the amnesty campaign, while the new enforcement measures are intended to help collect some of the $1 billion in unpaid state taxes.

Seminole High may go countywide

By VICKI BOGGS
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Instead of attracting students from across the district to Seminole High School through an academic magnet program, the school board decided last night to lay the groundwork for expanding an existing vocational program and offering it countywide.

Specifically, the consensus of school board members during a non-binding work session was to assist the school in applying for a grant that would help it expand the health options courses already in place for students enrolled only at Seminole High.

The concept of a magnet school program at Seminole, which has been discussed at length for several months by the board, was put on hold at last night's board session in favor of applying for a state grant to become a lead program in the Academy of Applied Technology.

"It's another name for a magnet school, I guess," said Supt. Paul Hagerty. "but I think we've redirected the focus."

SANFORD — The administrators at Seminole High School have taken another step toward helping their students better prepare for the workplace while still in high school.

With the support of the school board, Seminole High School has chosen to place a renewed emphasis on their health technologies courses. They will apply for a state grant to help bolster the program and expand it.

Already, the program has received a Partners in Excellence grant from the state Department of Education and Central Florida Regional Hospital for $4,500.

City port company expands

Rex Meyer Yachts creates 60 new jobs

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Rex Meyer Yachts Inc. will begin a major expansion of its multi-faceted manufacturing operations at the Port of Sanford within the next month.

Up to 60 skilled and unskilled workers will be hired during the next 90 days, company president Mike Meyer said this morning. Hiring has already begun. Applications are being accepted at the Job Service of Florida office in Sanford.

Meyer said he has signed a three-year contract with Mares Yachts of Ft. Lauderdale to complete 50-foot luxury catamarans under the "Mares Luxury Cat" name. The twin-hulled boats are powered by twin 475-horsepower Detroit Diesel engines. Work has already begun on a prototype which Meyer plans to complete in time for the Ft. Lauderdale Boat Show next month.

Meyer said initially, Rex Meyer will assemble and outfit the motorcraft, but will eventually take over the complete manufacture of the boats. Meyer declined to discuss the financial aspects of the deal.

"I'd rather do things than talk about them," he said.

To accommodate the gear-up, Rex Meyer is expanding into about 55,000 square feet at the port, which will bring the company's leased space to of 120,000 square feet, said port director Dennis Dolgner. Renovations to the building will be completed by next week, said Dolgner.

The expansion is the latest chapter in the remarkable survival story of Rex Meyer Yachts Inc. The builders of the sleek, black "Midnight Lace" moved its manufacturing operations to the port from Davie, Fla. in 1990 with intentions of initially building 40-foot yachts. Within a year, Meyer expected to begin building a 68-foot product.

But within months, the federal luxury tax cut deeply into the yacht sales market and Meyer was forced to lay off about half of his 50-man crew. Looking for projects to survive, Rex Meyer turned to outfitting luxury coaches and is now working on the fourth vehicle.

Other contracts were made to produce a 34-foot fishing boat and individual contracts to build a 58-foot motor yacht and the massive 147-foot "Contico" for a St. Louis client. Meyer said the

Lake Mary run-offs mulled

By NICK PFEISPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary City Commission will again consider multiple ordinances calling for run-off elections. Three separate items are on the agenda for tomorrow night's regular commission meeting.

The purpose is to establish run-off election methods. It would involve cases where more than two candidates are seeking election for the same position, with voters not giving one of them over 50 percent.

When the matters were brought up on first reading at the Sept. 3 commission meeting, they drew a great deal of confusion among the commissioners as well as the general public.

Lake Mary residents will be voting on proposed changes to the City Charter this November. Although the run-off concept was recommended to be included in the changes by the Charter Review Committee, the City voted against the measure.

A citizens petition with 319 verified signatures, was then presented calling for the matter to be placed on the ballot.

City Attorney Ned Julian however, with direction from the City, prepared two separate ordinances regarding the run-off election, which, if adopted, would appear on the Nov. 3 General Election ballot in Lake Mary.

Julian had earlier explained, "One of these ordinances would call for the run-off elections to be added to the present City Charter, if the proposed charter changes are adopted. The other one would add the run-off election stipulation to the present charter, if the charter changes are not adopted by the voters in November."

In addition to the two ordinances, the citizens petition matter is also scheduled for discussion during tomorrow night's City Commission meeting.

What this amounts to is that if the citizens want the run-off election issue to come about, they should vote in favor of all of these issues.

—Commissioner Paul Tremel row night's City Commission meeting.

Julian had originally determined that the petition, if approved by the voters, would only have an effect on the present city charter, and would not be valid if the charter changes were approved by the voters. Two weeks ago, he had presented another proposal that would carry over the petition call for a run-off election following the Nov. 3 election.

The item however, has not been included on tomorrow night's agenda. Julian could not be reached for comment on why the additional matter is not scheduled.

As planned two weeks ago, Lake Mary voters would possibly be faced with four separate items on the ballot, each dealing with run-off elections.

The questions asked by several residents during the Sept. 3 meeting centered on which or how many of the four items would have to be approved by the voters in order to enact the run-off election proposal.

Commissioner Paul Tremel commented, "What this amounts to is that if the citizens want the run-off election issue to come about, they should vote in favor of all of these issues."

The proposed ordinances will be presented for second reading and public hearing during tomorrow night's meeting.

MADD chapter expiring

By VICKI BOGGS
Herald Staff Writer

When the Seminole County chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) consolidated with the Orange and Osceola county chapters two years ago to form MADD of Central Florida, it was thought that they had made a sound business decision, Joe Lyons said.

As the chapter faces probable closing at the end of October, they are beginning to think otherwise.

Lyons, executive director of MADD of Central Florida, said that though donations had been down at the local level in all three counties, they thought that the consolidation would bring in more money from state-wide sources.

"We will have to close unless we are able to raise $30,000 by mid-October," Lyons said. The money would be enough to run the chapter for three months.

Seminole weighs sports commission role

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County will consider next Tuesday whether to join Orange and Osceola counties and Orlando in creating a sports development commission at a two-year commitment of $50,000 per year.

Patterned after the job-attracting Economic Development Commission of Mid-Florida Inc., the Orlando Area Sports Commission Inc. would seek to attract regional, national and international sporting activities to the Orlando area.

Orange County commissioners agreed Tuesday to contribute $75,000 during each of the next two years for the organization and $18,750 during the third year. They'll decide next week how to pay for it. Orlando commissioners agreed Monday to contribute $50,000 for the next two years.

Osceola County commissioners have not taken up the item yet.

The idea for the commission was an outgrowth of last year's efforts to attract World Cup Soccer games to Orlando. Seminole County's share of that prize was a commitment from the U.S. Soccer Federation, organizers of the national World Cup team, to relocate their training facilities here.

"I think it will be a very beneficial expenditure for the county," said

County Manager Ron Rabun. "Next year, we'll have the amateur girls softball championships here that will generate $925,000 for us. There's significant money to be made from sporting events for the local economy."

Next week, commissioners will consider spending $50,000 a year for the next two years to establish the commission as a private, non-profit organization. After two years, See Sports, Page 5A

Chiles names 17 to tourism commission

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles named 17 members Tuesday to a new Florida Commission on Tourism created to further promote Florida as a vacation destination.

The commission is responsible for developing a five-year marketing plan for tourism by Dec. 1 and recommend a funding effort to pay for it.

"The yardstick to measure their success will be the ability to develop a sustainable self-funding source," Chiles said.

The commission members: Hayward J. Benson, Jr., 56, Fort Lauderdale; Solomon Cokes, 54, Fort Myers; Randy Garfield, 40, Orlando; John Hach, 36, Miami; Jack Halloran, 83, Jacksonville; Jack Healan, 46, Amelia Island; Russ Kimball, 48, Clearwater Beach; Ed Litrenta, 47, Orlando; and Dianna Morgan, 40, Orlando.

Domino's to continue phone system

TALLAHASSEE — Domino's Pizza Inc. can continue an experimental Jacksonville telephone number that routes customers' calls to the store nearest them, the state Public Service Commission said Tuesday.

The system lets customers anywhere in the area dial a single number, sends the call to the nearest Domino's store and gives the store the address for delivery. Domino's next proposes to start the service in the Orlando area.

For the present, the utility regulators refused to allow the caller's number to be transmitted to the store.

Domino's had said electronic files keyed to the numbers would let them greet repeat customers by name and keep track of their usual orders.

Red Tide found in Pinellas County

ST. PETERSBURG — A Red Tide bloom was spotted in the waters off Pinellas County, prompting state officials to close off the county's only active shellfishing area.

Water samples taken at Mullet Key on Tuesday revealed higher than normal levels of Red Tide, said Jamie Serino of the state Department of Natural Resources' Marine Research Institute. Samples taken Monday from the same area showed no signs of the organism.

Red Tide is a microscopic plantlike organism that can turn water a brownish-red color, kill fish and make shellfish dangerous to eat.

DNR officials closed Pinellas County's only active shellfishing area at sunset Tuesday. People were banned from taking shellfish from the Boca Ciega Bay harvesting region, which spans from Cabbage Key in Pinellas County to the mouth of Tampa Bay in Hillsborough County.

Hit-and-run victim hit by his own car

COCOA — A 25-year-old man found lying dead on the edge of a dirt road was a victim of a hit-and-run with his own car, police said.

Shawn M. Robinson of Cocoa, was found dead Friday morning bleeding from a wound to his head, police said.

It was not known who was driving Robinson's car, which was found abandoned one mile away. The driver's side windshield was shattered and blood stained. There were several small dents on the hood.

There were no suspects in Robinson's death, police said.

Taxpayers may face fiscal crisis

By GUY ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Taxpayers face a mounting fiscal crisis in the spiraling cost of insuring state employees, according to a government watchdog organization.

The self-insurance fund that covers workers' compensation, general liability, civil rights actions and state vehicles has doubled in cost over two years and will likely reach $119 million in fiscal year 1993-94, according to a study by the non-profit Florida TaxWatch organization.

The total liability of the program to taxpayers, including long-term cases that will take years to pay off, is $441.6 million, TaxWatch found.

"This is a brewing financial crisis," said TaxWatch President Dominic Calabro. "It is expected to grow rapidly."

The Casualty Insurance Trust Fund is paid for each year by a premium on Florida government agencies. The total premium has jumped 221 percent in the past seven years, from $37.1 million to the $119 million estimated in the next fiscal year.

This is a brewing financial crisis. It is expected to grow rapidly.

—TaxWatch President Dominic Calabro

The bottom line: the more tax money agencies have to cough up to pay insurance costs, the less they've got to do their jobs in already-tight financial times.

"This is tens of millions of dollars we could be spending on critical services," Calabro said.

One cause of the spiraling cost is the quadrupled expense of workers' compensation over the past five years, which has equally driven up premiums for private businesses.

Another cause is government's practice of writing off lost work days as administrative leave for the first seven days an employee is out. After seven days, the workers' compensation program kicks in, but TaxWatch found that agencies wrote off a surprising 560 years' of lost time at a cost of nearly $17 million in fiscal year 1991.

TaxWatch found there are things government can do to at least hold down the increases:

- Move the state's unit in charge of controlling losses from the Department of Insurance to the governor's office. Agencies under the governor account for 75 percent of casualty losses.

- Bolster the unit itself, which currently has just one full-time position, and require quarterly status reports to the governor and Cabinet.

- Hold agency heads accountable for casualty losses, rewarding with bonuses those who reach cost goals.

- Take another look at how to reduce the unfunded liabilities and whether it's smart to simply fund the program on an annual basis instead of looking at the long term.

In Oregon, an initiative to improve safety and better manage workers' compensation claims cut losses by $85 million over a two-year period compared to what had been previously forecast, TaxWatch reported.

Schools benefit

Sheriff's Department Comptroller Penny Fleming and Lt. Greg Barnett, CCIB, (from left) present a check for $4,800 on behalf of the department to the Seminole County Public Schools. Jim Dawson, coordinator for drug-free schools, accepts the check on behalf of the school board. The money was provided through the Law Enforcement Trust Fund from seizures of property and money that was confiscated from illegal drug use. The money will benefit the HIP program, Healthfully Involved Peers.

Florida poll Bush leads Clinton, but state still open

By Associated Press

MIAMI — President Bush currently holds the edge among Florida voters over Democrat Bill Clinton, but has failed to lock in the state's 25 electoral votes, according to Florida's first independent poll since the conventions.

Republicans' Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle top Democrats Clinton and Al Gore, 48 percent to 41 percent, with 11 percent undecided, according to the poll, commissioned, published and broadcast by various members of the Florida media.

The findings published Tuesday indicate that Bush cannot take a Florida victory, which the Republicans have gained in all previous presidential elections since 1980, for granted.

Bush dominates in the state's conservative northern counties, while Clinton is favored in the more populous Broward and Dade counties. Both candidates are running a close race, according to the poll, across the center of the state.

The Florida poll showed a much more generous view in the Sunshine State of Bush than much of the rest of the nation, as national polls indicate a Clinton edge ranging from five percent to 20 percent.

Bush is viewed favorably by 44 percent of those polled, and negatively by 32 percent, compared to Clinton's 47 percent disfavorable rating and 35 percent favorable vote.

Clinton, the poll also found, is more popular among women voters than Bush. The Arkansas governor is favored over the president by 45 percent to 43 percent.

But, among men, 53 percent favored Bush, with only 37 percent for Clinton.

Yet that equation could work in Clinton's favor come November, because there are more women voters, and women voters vote more heavily than their male counterparts.

The Florida Panhandle and northeastern Florida, both areas heavily conservative Democrat, show Bush with a nearly 2-1 advantage. The president held a similar edge along the southern Gulf coast, an area dominated by Republicans.

University study has linked cancer to passive smoke

By Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG — Non-smoking women who were exposed to their husbands' tobacco smoke for 40 years had double the lung cancer risk of those in smoke-free households, a new study found.

The study by the University of South Florida also discovered that the cancer risk doubled in just 22 years for those exposed to cigarette smoke while growing up.

The study, which links lung cancer and secondhand smoke, was to be published in today's Journal of National Cancer Institute, a government research journal.

The Tobacco Institute disagrees with the conclusions of the journal. Spokeswoman Brennan Dawson said Tuesday she hadn't seen the study, but that it will bring the total of studies that have found an increased risk of lung cancer from passive smoking to only five out of 33.

"The vast majority of studies in the scientific literature do not support claims that non-smokers are at risk from being exposed to someone else's smoke," she said.

The Tobacco Institute is financed by companies that manufacture and sell cigarettes.

The USF study involved 210 lifelong non-smoking women who had lung cancer and 301 comparable women who weren't sick. The lung cancer cases were drawn from hospital tumor registers and the Florida Cancer Data System from 28 Central Florida counties. The counties were not identified.

Ninety-three percent of the sick women and 94 percent of healthy women were white. There were few black participants, the study says, because only 5 percent of all cases identified by hospitals and the cancer registry were black. The authors do not say why men were excluded.

In a possible explanation for the mixed results of past studies, the authors said the degree of risk for passive smokers differs according to the type of lung cancer studied. This project looked at all types.

Enrollment up at SHS, remains low

SANFORD — Of the 184 new high school students in Seminole County schools, a good number of them enrolled in Seminole High School. However, with a 1,902 total enrollment at the Sanford school, it still remains about 100 students below the court-mandated 2,000 students.

The 1981 federal court order which was designed as a supplement to the 1970 desegregation order after Lake Mary High School was built in Lake Mary said Seminole must have "not substantially fewer than 2,000 students."

There has not been an unusual amount of growth in the high school rolls in the district this year, according to Jack Heisler, director of high schools for the district.

"It is about normal district-wide," Heisler said. "There was a lot of growth within the Seminole and Lyman attendance zones."

Lyman High School in Longwood has an additional 79 students enrolled in its classes this year. That was the largest growth of all Seminole County schools.

As of the 10th day of school, there were 2,392 students enrolled at Lyman.

Lake Mary High lost five students from last year, dropping from 2,439 to 2,434.

"That is basically unchanged," said Heisler who said that a five student shift in enrollment would probably be made up by students moving into the district over the course of the school year.

Heisler said there was no information available about what neighborhoods in the Seminole High attendance zone were the source of most of the growth at that school.

Lake Brantley High School in Altamonte Springs gained 21 students bringing their total enrollment to 2,625.

Oviedo High School in Oviedo lost three students to bring their enrollment to 2,034 students.

At Lake Howell High School in Winter Park, four more students are enrolled there than last year. They have 2,599 students.

The capacity at Seminole High School is 1,903 students. At Oviedo High the capacity is 2,300. At the other schools the capacity is 2,500.

City plans to install alarm system

By INGE SPENFALP
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Sanford City Hall was burglarized on Labor Day. The City Commission is now taking action to have an alarm system installed.

The break-in was discovered at approximately 11:30 that morning. Police reported finding a pay bar in the first floor lobby entrance area, and a toolbox containing a drill, hammers and wedges next to a safe on the second floor.

Police said the safe had not been entered, and nothing was missing. The only damage done was to gain entry into the doors.

"We are still investigating the case," said Police Chief Steve Harriett. "We are checking on some evidence, but we aren't ready to make an arrest at this time."

Zoo applies for approval of new building addition

By INGE SPENFALP

SANFORD — The Central Florida Zoo is planning on adding a modular classroom to its facilities. Site plans have been submitted for approval to Seminole County Commission.

"This will be a 35 by 58 foot modular building we intend to erect adjacent to the front admissions area," said Education Curator Tom Williams. "The building will be divided practically in half, with the largest portion to be used as a classroom, and the other half for a consolidation of our education department offices and a combination conference room/library."

He estimated the cost of the structure at approximately $50,000. "Most of the money," he said, "is from a $41,400 grant we received from the Central Florida Capital Funds Committee. The rest is from the zoological society."

Williams said present proposals call for the building to be decked in front and back, with

"The only area we have had an alarm at," said City Manager Bill Simmons, "was in the vault area." He added, "the alarm was armed, but nothing was done to set it off, yet we found the tool box right in front of it."

"There was hardly any money in the safe," he said. "Most of it is paperwork that needs to be safeguarded."

During Monday night's City Commission meeting, Simmons requested the City approve the spending of $4,000 to $4,500 for the purchase of an alarm system. "I plan to have the system installed by City employees," he said, "which will save us some money."

The initial request came from the Public Works Director Jerry Herman.

Herman had reported, "The only other expense would be for a separate phone line which would be about $125 for installation, and $35 per month for the line."

Herman asked that the request, "...be declared an emergency so the bid process can be waived." He added, "Quotes had already been obtained from three vendors to assure the most favorable pricing."

"An alarm would give security for any funds or equipment in the building, and more importantly, it would provide safety for the employees who work after hours and weekends."

Simmons said the alarm system would include all entrance doors in the City Hall. "A break-in could be very expensive if we didn't do something like this," he said, "especially if damage to some of our computer equipment had been done."

Herman said yesterday that installation work would begin on the new alarm system this week. "We'll get it done as soon as possible," he said.

Strike three

In resigning as commissioner of baseball, Fay Vincent did the right thing, and not for the first time. For three years, he took seriously the commissioner's responsibility to act in the "best interests of baseball." When he lost the support of the majority of owners, he decided baseball's best interests would not be served by a fight.

Whether baseball's best interests were served by the owners' crusade against Vincent is something else. As Vincent said in his resignation statement: "The commissioner has a higher duty and sometimes decisions have to be made that are not in the interest of some owners."

That statement was directed squarely at Chicago — the Windy City, America's middle metropolis — which was responsible for creating the commissioner's job in 1919, and today may be responsible for ending it. For the owners have made it clear they don't want another independent commissioner like Vincent.

After the Back Sox scandal, when the 1919 World Series was thrown, the owners brought in Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis to restore the nation's confidence in its national pastime. Landis banned Shoeless Joe Jackson and his teammates for life.

Since Landis's time, commissioners have tended to view the best interests of baseball as not always coinciding with the best interests of the owners. Certainly that was Vincent's view.

The anti-Vincent charge started in Chicago. Vincent angered the owners of both Chicago teams by arguing that revenues from the rich television markets like Chicago should be shared by smaller markets, as is done in pro football. That way, he argued, baseball could remain competitive in its smaller markets, like San Diego.

That is not a popular view in Chicago. If that wasn't enough to set Chicago against Vincent, two months ago the commissioner ordered a National League realignment that would have put the Cubs in the Western Division, disrupting the television viewing habits of WGN subscribers. The move, a good one that had widespread owner and fan support, was blocked by the Cubs, who went to court in Chicago and won a delay.

The owners mustered an 18-9 majority against him, including 10 votes from middle- and small-market clubs, showing he lacked sufficient support to continue in his job.

It would be a mistake to use the Vincent affair to change baseball's charter or diminish the commissioner's responsibility to act in its best interests. Baseball needs to maintain its integrity.

Boaters should help liveaboards

Among minorities, there are always even smaller minorities, facing a harder road, a higher hill. This is the case with boat owners, about 10 percent of the Florida population, and liveaboards, a barely measurable percentage of those who own boats.

When Hurricane Andrew laid waste to South Florida, boats were a favorite target. Among the thousands of boats destroyed and sunk were a few dozen belonging to people who lived aboard. Their boats were their most valued possession. In some cases their only possession. Some were fine yachts, valued in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, owned by world cruisers. Others were the carefully tended shelter of those who would otherwise be homeless. Now they are homeless.

Because most of those who lost their boats do not have a land address, they fail to qualify for any of the federal aid available to those who lost their homes.

Concerned Boaters: The National Water Rights Association has started a special fund to assist uninsured liveaboards who do not qualify for other assistance. That tiny minority needs your help. They are self-sufficient, survivors all, but they need a hand. Please help by sending a check to Concerned Boaters Hurricane Andrew Fund, 601 W. 1st Street, Stuart, FL 34994. We are a non-profit, all volunteer membership organization dedicated to telling people about their rights and responsibilities on the water, and defending those rights.

Straight shooters: economic tutors

The economy is the big political issue. But, shockingly, not all things candidates say about the economy are what Casey Stengel used to call "true facts."

Voters should try to sort it out. I recommend a remarkable, slender book about true economic facts: "An Illustrated Guide to the American Economy" by Herbert Stein and Murray Foss (AEI Press). It is credible and objective, yielding comfort in hard times.

The credibility comes from the experience and mission of the authors. Stein, 76, is a former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors. Foss, 74, was editor of the "Survey of Current Business." Jointly, they have worked the tangled vineyard of statistical economics for a hundred years.

They are now my colleagues at the American Enterprise Institute. I would describe them as eclectic liberal conservative economists, or perhaps the reverse. In the 1980s, Stein publicly hammered Reaganomics and supply-side economics with clarity, wit and gusto.

But that's not the idea in the current work. In clean prose, with charts that tell stories, Stein and Foss lay out "A Hundred Key Issues," (the subtitle of the book). They write: "We have tried not to make a book of Republican or Democratic, conservative or liberal, optimistic or pessimistic data. ... We have not looked for things that would surprise the reader, although ... some things did surprise us."

Me too. I had no idea how common deflation has been: From 1865 to 1940 price levels generally fluctuated downward. (Will it happen again?) I wouldn't have guessed that Alabama has a higher median income than West Germany. Nor that while most new jobs are created by small businesses, many of those jobs vanish when small firms go broke.

Nor had I realized how much serious economists do not know. The volume is studied with cautionary phrases: "It is not clear whether ... to some extent, ... economists do not have a good understanding of ..."

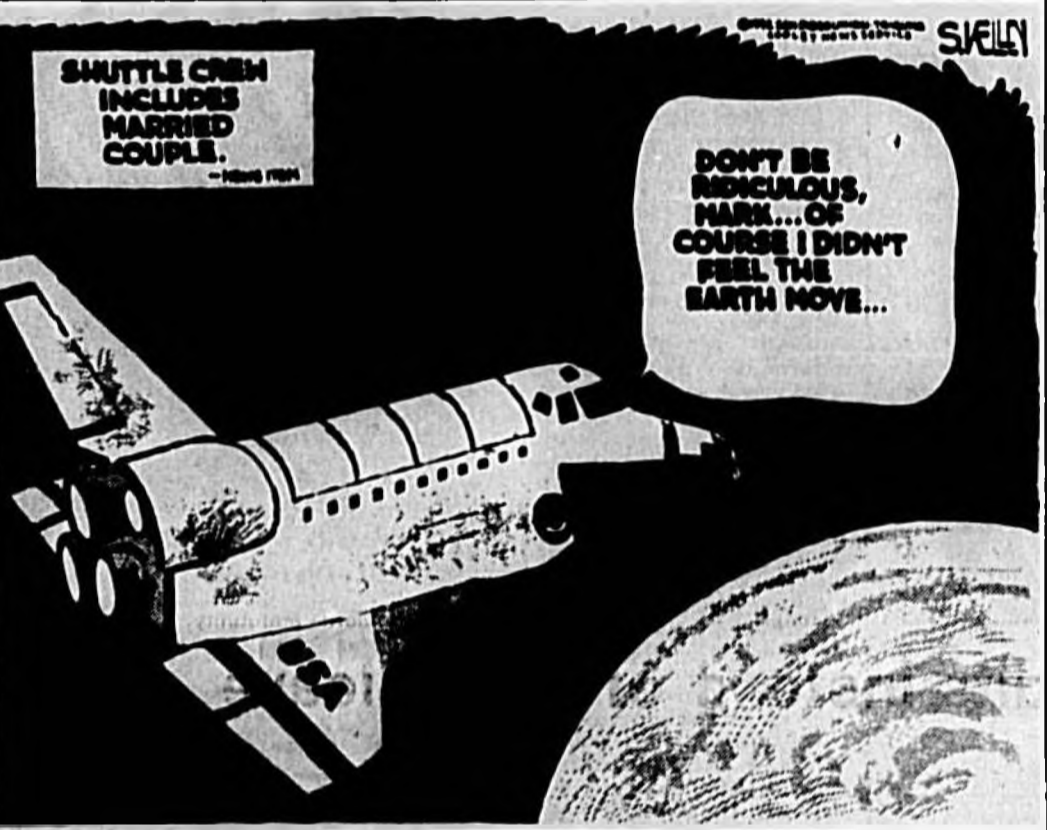

I had no idea how common deflation has been.

Of today's essential question they write: "... economists have been grappling with the problem of why productivity growth has slowed down but have been unable to come up with satisfactory answers." That noted, they offer related material: Productivity did increase mildly in the 1980s; the rate prior to 1948 was about the same as now; the 1948-73 years may be a poor benchmark because of high post-war demand.

Campaign issues are illuminated. Jobs in the growing "service" sector are not typically bad ones; they include doctors and lawyers. Median duration of unemployment has been less than seven weeks. More than half the unemployed left their last job voluntarily. "The underclass" involves 1 percent to 3 percent of the population. Poverty rates are higher than in Europe.

Stein and Foss are concerned, not alarmed, by the deficit: In the 1980s deficits neither aborted economic growth nor induced inflation. Nor do Stein-Foss buy the "debtor nation" complaint: "net foreign debt ... is only a statistical aggregate without any economic significance." They say the rise in family income has slowed, but data showing a decline in real wages "give an inaccurate picture."

Mother Teresa differs on visas

WASHINGTON — Mother Teresa is miffed at George Bush.

The frail 82-year-old Nobel Peace Prize winner many have called a living saint is clearly disappointed with the president. She apparently preferred doing business with Ronald Reagan.

The issue is the fee the United States is imposing on her religious workers coming into the country. Last April, the $50 per visa charge doubled to $100 per religious worker from India entering the United States. Some government officials predict it will go up even more.

To Mother Teresa, of course, it's a huge waste of money. It's a tax imposed on charitable workers who can put that money to much better use.

After all, Mother Teresa has only two changes of clothes, both of them blue-trimmed cotton saris worth $1 apiece. There are no washers or dryers, vacuum cleaners, televisions, record players, computers and other modern devices in her homes and hospitals in Calcutta for the destitute and dying — she believes the money that people donate can be better spent.

According to government officials who have had recent contact with Mother Teresa, it is weighing heavily on her mind, and she's asked for help in her conflict with the White House.

At least twice, she has visited the U.S. consulate in Calcutta and implored them to get the president to drop the fee. And that hasn't been her only moments of attempted redress, either.

One of her most recent visitors, someone she knew was a friend of the president, described for us how Mother Teresa expresses her frustration.

He visited her on the second floor of her headquarters, known as the "Motherhouse," in the middle of the squalor of Calcutta. She pulled a bench over for both of them to sit on. In her familiar sari, she sat down gently, clasped both hands and spoke to him with her shoulders hunched, her head bowed, only occasionally looking up at him.

And then she raised the subject for which she'd wanted the meeting:

"She brought it up very shortly. She asked gently, but forcefully, that when I went back to Washington, would I attempt to do something for her," the source told us. "To pass the word that this visa charge was an unfair burden on them. That what troubled her greatly was accepting money from people who were giving to help the poor and having to spend that money by giving it to the government for some bureaucratic reason."

Both this Bush friend and the consular officers in Calcutta gently tried to explain to her that there was nothing they could do. The Indian government was charging such fees to American religious workers, and the long-standing State Department rules of reciprocity required that the United States match their fees.

"Our position worldwide is that we want to abolish visa fees altogether," one State Department official explained to us. "Until that happens, our position is that we will implement reciprocity. So if somebody charges visa fees, we will match them."

So what about waiving the fees for Mother Teresa's workers? "Mother Teresa has been trying for quite some time to get us to abolish fees for her nuns," this State Department official said. "But our policy is worldwide. It applies to Indian nuns; it applies to Brazilian priests; it applies to Mexican monks; it applies to African ecclesiastical workers. Everybody worldwide."

Much in life remains undone

CASCO BAY, Maine — The summer people are almost all gone now. They left by the boatload, their watches strapped back on their wrists, school calendars lodged in their minds, work reappearing like worry lines under the cosmetic of a summer tan.

As if on cue, the light changed with the month. The soft summer haze lifted its comforting curtain. There is a September clarity now, a crisp, luminous, hard edge to the view from the porch. Even the atmosphere is demanding that we look ahead.

Sometime over Labor Day, the conversation on the roads shifted as well, away from languorous reports about the weather and the state of the bluefish, to one insistent line of inquiry. How much longer are you going to be here? When are you going home?

Around the island, fields that once held lupine are now filled with purple aster. Days that once stretched to 9 p.m. before they closed up, have had their hours cut back to 7 p.m. The maple trees have conspired in this foreboding, their hemlines already turned to fall-fashionable burgundy.

I entered summer late this year, arriving from the world of astroturf and asphalt. I came from Houston, from the Republican National Convention and more importantly from the work world where time is meted out in pews cycles and sound is a matter of bites. A world in which people talk in all seriousness about a political season as if candidates were strawberries — pick your own.

I spend most of my life in that humancape, a closed system of megabytes and faxes and cables, with a sense of urgency and immediacy as ominous as the word deadline. My habitat is manufactured. It's built of, by and for people. Nature arrives only as a pet or pest or disaster.

But here for a while, life has been stripped down to a T-shirt simplicity. The books, papers, briefcase that I brought, were stored in a corner of the house and a tiny cubbyhole of my mind, as I spent hours walking the roads, watching the goldfinch, days without purpose or planning.

Now I sit holding onto the final hours of summer the way a tidal pool captures water as the ocean recedes. I am headed home tomorrow to the place where datebooks and pantyhose are considered necessities of life.

My friends will ask, what did you do on your summer vacation? I will tell them that I read the paper a whole day late. I learned the names of half a dozen new wildflowers. I found a special place in the museum beds where there were almost no barnacles.

I will tell them I skipped stones with children and for a few moments no adult wondered what their Japanese counterparts were doing with their time or whether this would help on their SATs. I will tell them that sometimes what you do on your summer vacation is less important than what you undo.

I have come to believe that undoing is the real luxury in life. As adults, we need some internal permission to disengage from the world for even a few weeks. As children, after all, most of us are taught to stay in drive, perhaps even overdrive, or stall out. We have to relearn what should come naturally: to let go, to shift into neutral.

In rare and delicious moments of undoing, we toss away the list, the unrelenting and unquestioned priorities of the workaday world. In short captured moments, we step outside the very lives we so carefully construct, so laboriously maintain, and question everything from their pace to their purpose. But such times are hard to hold and such feelings don't always travel well.

One day last week, a girl walked down to the water with a jar of periwinkle shells. I watched her empty this collection back onto the beach. She was headed home and her mother said to leave the shells; they would be there for her next summer. But the girl seemed unsure. At the last minute, she reached down and chose a few to put in her pocket.

Tomorrow, I will do something like that. Much of what I have experienced these weeks must remain here, as attached to this place as the rocks. But I too will pocket a few memories for the long months ahead as simple reminders of how much in life remains to be undone.

In rare and delicious moments of undoing, we toss away the list.

In addition to focusing efforts on the Academy of Applied Technology grant to expand the health occupations courses which are already in place at the school, the board agreed with Hagerly's assessment that the board needs to "reexamine the total allocation procedures for the district so that basic equity."

He added that a long term commitment needs to be made to finance "top quality programs" at Seminole High.

The health occupations courses would draw students into the school who were interested in pursuing careers in nursing, physical or occupational therapy.

While the board showed a renewed commitment to the school it, again, reiterated its commitment to not realign the student attendance zones at any high school until the matter is taken up district-wide when it comes time to rezone to fill the high school which will open in Winter Springs in 1993.

Chairman Nancy Warren described the issue of finding a solution to Seminole High School's enrollment woes as "an issue in progress."

She added, "We will continue exploring ways of dealing with the issue."

While supporters of the school were silent at last night's work session, school board candidate Bob Goff, who has a daughter who attends Seminole High, asked the board to consider emergency funding for the school so that additional staff can be hired to help the school prepare the grant application for the Academy of Applied Technology.

Carlton Henley, principal of Lyman High School, agreed.

"They can't do that properly without enough administrators and teachers to help run the school while the grant is being written," he said.

Proponents of the redrawing of district boundaries, who did not speak at last night's work session, have argued in the past that rezoning is necessary in order to bring the school in compliance with the federal court order which calls for the school to have "not substantially less" than 2,000 students. Currently the enrollment is 1,902 students.

Few of the 50 or so people in attendance at last night's school board work session took the opportunity to get up and speak to the board, preferring instead to sit and listen.

According to Gretchen Schapker, principal of Seminole High, the $4,000 from the hospital will be used to allow students to be in the hospital workplace environment two days a week. It will also be used to purchase equipment like lap top computers for the students to use.

The $500 from the state will be used to provide scholarships for continued education for the students.

Schapker said she has been going after expansion of the health technologies program because she believes there is a need for health care professionals in the future job market.

"Based on what we know about jobs in the future," Schapker said, "there will be a great need for people trained in allied health services."

While the current programs offered at the school are limited to nursing, occupational therapy and physical therapy, and it is only those programs which are planned for expansion, Schapker can see a much broader-based program at the school in the future.

"There are a lot of opportunities to reach a great number of students with the technology courses that include academics," Schapker said.

She said that the allied health courses, she believes, will eventually include classes in medical transcription, hospital maintenance and sports medicine.

Schapker said that HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital Administrator Roy Vinson's

"efforts and interest in the community" is helping to get the program off the ground. Vinson was unavailable for comment this morning.

She added that interest on the part of the program, which started during the 1991-92 school year with fewer than 50 students, is growing. Enrollment is up to approximately 85 students.

One teacher, Nancy Julian, teaches all the classes. Schapker said that she hopes increasing interest and an expanding curriculum would bring at least one more teacher to the program.

"I think we will be able to provide students with the education and training they need to be prepared for work," Schapker said.

Bush asks tax credits instead of family leave

By CHRISTOPHER SCHWELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush, faced with the prospect of vetoing a family leave bill in the midst of his re-election campaign, today urged Congress to give small businesses tax credits instead to achieve the same end.

Bush, at a White House meeting with Republican congressional leaders, said he did not know exactly how much his alternative would cost.

Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., the House minority whip, said afterwards the proposal would have a $500 million price tag, and Bush would offset the costs by cutting doctors' and hospitals' lab fees and other administrative costs.

Bush, pressed to explain how he would pay for his proposal, said only, "There's some $60 billion that OMB (Office of Management and Budget) knows about where we can allocate to this."

A draft bill released by the White House indicated the government would provide credits of up to $20 per day for as many as 60 days of leave in any 12-month period, or a maximum of $1,200 per employee. It would cover firms with fewer than 500 workers.

Bush vetoed family leave legislation in June 1990. He did not send Congress an alternative bill then.

But he called the Democrats' pushing a bill forward now "very peculiar and highly political." He said their bill has "been timed for politics."

The House last week gave final approval by a new family leave bill that would require employers with more than 50 workers to allow them to take up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave annually to meet medical emergencies in their families.

The House vote, 241 to 161, was considerably less than a veto-proof two-thirds majority.

Democratic nominee Bill Clinton and his running mate, Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., strongly support the measure, and Democratic leaders have made no secret of their desire to force Bush to cast a controversial veto with less than seven weeks until Election Day.

Bush, who has opened the federal purse wide to farmers and hurricane victims in recent weeks, said, "I favor family and medical leave, always have. But the real question is how can we achieve that goal."

"Unfortunately, they and my opponent believe in a government-dictated mandate that increases costs and loses jobs," he charged.

"Our alternative is to provide a family-oriented solution in the form of a tax credit for small and medium-sized businesses," he said. "Our approach both encourages companies to adopt family leave policies and gives them the flexibility to target the specific needs of their employees."

White House officials refused to release other details of Bush's proposal immediately.

But pressed on how much it would cost and where the money would come from, Bush said, "We're going to be discussing that with the leaders. There's some $60 billion that OMB knows about where we can allocate to this. But that has to all be negotiated up, depending on the size of it."

Asked why he didn't propose the tax credits in 1990 when he vetoed the bill, Bush said, "We've been trying to work with the Congress to try to get something done. Now here's a clean approach that those who really want family leave should take a look at it."

"I would like to see immediate action on this. There's an awful lot of politics at play here," he said.

Bush was back in the White House today after three days on the campaign trail in the West. He heads back out Thursday to Enid, Okla., and Atlanta.

"That is the bare minimum," Lyons noted.

He was not optimistic that they would be able to reach their goal.

"With the hurricane relief efforts, most of the money that people have to donate is going to South Florida," he said. "And it should, but I don't see that we'll be able to raise what we need to stay open."

He said that a sluggish economy has taken its toll on fund raising efforts state-wide.

Much of the money raised across the state for MADD chapters in Florida used to come from South Florida, Lyons said. That source, he added, is for now, "gone."

Already, the Central Florida chapter has lost one employee.

Janice Edmonson, who coordinated the award-winning youth programs left in the face of an uncertain future at MADD.

"She did a lot of work with the schools in Seminole County," Lyons said. "The schools there have placed a lot of focus on educating students about driving under the influence."

Lyons said that the education programs might continue on a volunteer basis if the chapter offices close, but plans have not been made for that yet.

"We're just waiting to see," he said.

Shuttle crew gets extra day in space

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — NASA today added an extra day to Endeavour's flight, giving the space shuttle astronauts more time to do experiments and enjoy what one described as "an awesome place."

The crew spent the morning talking with Japanese children and tested a sack that sucks fluids into the legs in an attempt to counteract the dizzying effects of space flight.

Scientists involved in the joint U.S.-Japanese laboratory research mission, most of them Japanese, took part in the decision to extend the flight from seven to eight days so more experiments could be performed.

While NASA was still weighing whether to lengthen the flight, pilot Curtis Brown Jr. had said he'd love the idea. "You could probably break both my legs and I'd still stay up here," he said. "It's an awesome place."

"Everybody's smiling," said shuttle commander Robert "Hoot" Gibson, when told the news. Endeavour now is scheduled to land at Kennedy Space Center on Sunday.

Today, Mamoru Mohri, the first professional Japanese astronaut, spoke with several dozen school children gathered at a television studio in Tokyo and at Kurokawa Elementary School — Mohri's alma mater — in Yoichi, on the island of Hokkaido.

Astronauts Mark Lee, Mcc Jemison and Jan Davis also briefly joined in the half-hour conversation in Japanese with the students, age about 10-15 years old.

Some of the children sang for Mohri. The nuclear scientist, in turn, sailed a model airplane, twirled an apple on a string, balanced Brown on one finger and was spun in somersaults by Lee and Brown.

Earlier, Davis squeezed inside a waist-high negative pressure cocoon for a four-hour stay.

The device has been used on other shuttle missions. Scientists are testing it as a means of overcoming dehydration in orbit caused by the migration of body fluids to the head and chest in weightlessness.

When astronauts return to Earth, reduced blood flow to the brain can cause them to become woozy or even pass out.

The crew also eagerly awaited the results of a frog-fertilization experiment.

Scientists expected the eggs of the South African clawed frogs aboard Endeavour to hatch by this afternoon. The crew collected eggs from the frogs earlier in the flight and squiried them with sperm.

Until this shuttle mission, no creature other than an insect had been conceived in space.

Also aboard Endeavour are two carp with electrodes attached to their brains, 7,600 fruit flies and 30 fertilized chicken eggs.

On Tuesday and again today, the astronauts provided relief to 180 hornets after a scientist on the ground decided the insects' containers were too humid.

The astronauts attached the hose and fan of a flight suit to the hornet compartment and blew dry air through it. The humidity inside gradually dropped as the odor of hornets wafted through the cabin.

The experiment is aimed at comparing hornet nests built in weightlessness to those constructed on Earth. But there were no immediate signs of any nest-building.

"I'm not very happy," said Israeli entomologist Jacob Ishay, who is overseeing the experiment on Earth. But he noted that his control group of hornets on the ground didn't begin building combs until Monday.

"At least the hornets are alive," he said.

Hospital worker found slain in parking lot

By Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — University Medical Center officials beefed up security after a worker was found slain in her van in a hospital parking lot.

The body of Virginia Gilley, 47, of St. Johns County, was found early Tuesday in her van at the hospital. She had been stabbed at least once in the chest and beaten in the head during an apparent robbery. Her jewelry, including rings and a watch, were missing.

Her family said Mrs. Gilley's van, usually parked in a multi-deck lot at the hospital, had been driven away and returned to another lot.

A hospital security guard found Mrs. Gilley's body after her husband reported that she failed to return home from work.

Mrs. Gilley delivered mail and other items for the Jacksonville Faculty Practice Association, whose members include physicians affiliated with University Medical Center. She worked for the association for about six years.

Janet Fuller, Mrs. Gilley's sister-in-law, said the woman recently began carrying a gun because she was concerned about her safety.

Police said they have suspects and have made no arrests.

After the slaying, the hospital increased the security in its parking lots and offered to escort workers to cars in the parking areas.

Thirty antique dealers and collectors listened to plans for an antique mall, to be set up in a presently vacant downtown furniture store at 311 E. First Street in Sanford.

Two antique malls set to open in Sanford's historic district

By NICK PFERPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Antique malls are getting ready to spring up in Sanford. Two are already in the formulation stage.

One will be located in downtown Sanford, another is planned for 1301 Park Avenue. Both are scheduled to open Oct. 1.

Tuesday night, Sara Jacobson presided over a group of approximately 30 persons involved in antiques, announcing plans to open "The Antique Company", at 311 E. First Street in the downtown area. Jacobson owns the 6,000 square foot building, which was the home of Wilson Maiter Furniture and more recently Hunter Furniture.

"I already have three stores downtown," said Jacobson, "but I believe Sanford is heading in the direction of possibly becoming the commercial core antique hub of Central Florida."

"This will be one store, but will involve many persons who deal in antiques and col-

Building owner Sara Jacobson

lectables," she said. "That's why we are calling it a company."

Jacobson plans to open the operation on Oct. 1, with Judy Criss as manager. "Judy has many years experience in antique collecting, sales and merchandising," Jacobson said, "and we are happy to have someone of her caliber with us."

The "Park Avenue Antique Mall" is being set up in a historic home at 1301 Park Avenue. Sica Nacu has been arranging the operation, designed to have 12 separate merchants, each operating in a different room of the building.

"We have already signed up nine merchants," she said, "and we hope to have the others within the next few days."

Nacu said, "We hope to have different offerings in each room, such as antique glass, collectables, old musical instruments, art work, even Christmas gifts."

"This is similar to antique malls already in operation in Winter Park, Mt. Dora and Maitland," she said, "and the separation into individual antique classifications appears to be working well."

Although Nacu plans to open her business on Oct. 1, she is planning a grand opening event on Oct. 15.

City accepts hayfield irrigation

By NICK PFERPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The City calls it "hayfield development," but whether it will be a hayfield or not remains a question. Meanwhile, the City has approved a contract to have the irrigation system installed at Site 10.

The City Commission voted unanimously Monday night, to approve the low bid on the project received from H.C. Connell, Inc. of Leesburg. Connell's bid was for $1,393,383.

The land, which contains over 400 acres, is part of a 1,000 acre site owned by the City, and used for the discharging of reclaimed water. About 270 acres have already been allocated for citrus growing.

Bids on the project were closed on June 17. The awarding was delayed however, because of a number of bid irregularities contained in the application. Most of them involved a need for clarifications in certain wording, and were resolved with no difficulties.

Other delays were caused by the need to examine the bids, and receive approval for the project from the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation, which sent their approval to the City on Aug. 20.

A bond program for the project was approved many months ago, and sold by the City early this year.

The matter was approved with no objections or citizen discussion, during Monday night's regular City Commission meeting.

"The next step," said City Manager Bill Simmons, "is to determine what the land will eventually be used for. We had a bid to put a hayfield on the property, but it was withdrawn." He added, "The only bids we have left at this time are two from people wanting to use the land for raising cattle, and one for a possible golf course."

The final determination will be up to the City Commission, which will have to decide if they will accept one of the present bids, or place the project out for additional bids for hayfield or other uses.

School dropout rate declining

By TAMARA HENRY
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON — High school dropout rates are declining for blacks and whites but not for Hispanics, the Education Department said today.

The department's fourth annual dropout report to Congress showed that nationally, the percentage of students ages 15 through 24 in grades 10 through 12 who quit in a single year without completing high school declined about 34 percent, from a 6.1 percent rate in 1980 to 4 percent in 1991. That means about 348,000 students left school without graduating in 1991.

Using a slightly different age sampling, the department calculated that 12.5 percent of the 16-24 age group, or 3.9 million people, was not enrolled and had not completed high school in 1991, down from 14.1 percent in 1980. That rate reflects the cumulative effects of annual dropouts over a number of years.

Hispanic dropout rates have remained high during the last 20 years, while the dropout rates for whites and blacks declined between 1980 and 1991.

The report by the National Center for Education Statistics measures the dropout rate in three ways. Officials track those who leave high school each year; the proportion of the population who have not completed high school, regardless of when they dropped out; and a single group of students over a period of time.

From 1972 to 1991, the report showed, the dropout rates for 16-through 24-year-old blacks went from 21.3 percent to 13.6 percent. For whites in that age group, the rates dropped from 12.3 percent in 1972 to 6.9 percent in 1991. The rates are for those who have not completed high school, regardless of when they dropped out.

According to the report, the Hispanic dropout rate was 35.3 percent in 1991 for ages 16 through 24. In 1972, that rate was 34.3 percent.

Most of the eighth-grade students who were tracked over a period of time listed school-related reasons for leaving, such as "did not like school," had failing grades or "could not get along with teachers." However, 31 percent of the female dropouts were pregnant.

Twenty-three of the nation's largest cities have nearly twice the number of dropouts as the national rate, when measured by the percentage of Americans from ages 16 through 19 who had not completed high school and were not currently enrolled in school. The report said 1.6 million Americans, or 11.2 percent, fall in that category.

The dropout rate among this age group soared in several California cities. Santa Ana reported a rate of 38.7 percent, followed by 27.8 in El Monte, 26.3 in Ontario, 24.9 in Pomona and 24 in Compton.

Overall, the dropout rate was above 20 percent in 23 of the 250 largest cities in the United States, above 20 percent in 133 counties and above 30 percent in 17.

Virginia executes Jones

JARRATT, Va. — A man who had asserted that "killing me is not the answer" was executed in Virginia's electric chair Tuesday night for the robbery and slaying of an elderly couple.

Willie Leroy Jones, 34, was pronounced dead at 11:08 p.m. at the Greensville Correctional Center, where the state's electric chair is located.

Wayne Brown, operations officer at the prison, said Jones had a final statement: "I love you."

Dale Gauding, a reporter for WTKR television in Norfolk who witnessed the execution, said, "I would say he had a slight smile on his face, not a smile of amusement but a knowing smile ... He seemed to be a man who was very much at peace at that point."

Less than five hours before the execution, the U.S. Supreme Court, by 9-0 votes, refused to grant a stay and rejected Jones' application to hear his appeal. An hour later, Gov. L. Douglas Wilder rejected Jones' clemency petition.

Earlier, Jones had said he was prepared for his execution, but "Killing me is not the answer. There's a place called prison."

Jones admitted killing Graham and Myra Adkins in their rural home east of Richmond on May 13, 1983. The couple, both in their late 70s, were the parents of a man who had let Jones live with him the previous winter.

Candidates maneuver through campaign

LOS ANGELES — Campaign appearances by both President Bush and Democratic rival Bill Clinton are being influenced more and more by the moves of the other. The hopacotch strategy comes as each side maneuvers to get the upper hand.

Both camps are moving into a phase in which their schedules are being determined at the last minute for largely tactical reasons.

A case in point: Clinton's last-minute decision to go to Salt Lake City on Tuesday to speak to the same military group that Bush was addressing.

"We're trying to be very flexible and fast on our feet," Clinton campaign adviser Paul Begala said.

Kaui residents return to homes

LIHUE, Hawaii — Residents returned to hurricane-ravaged Kauai for their first heartbreaking look at the damage. Health officials, meanwhile, warned people to bury spoiled food and issued instructions on digging latrines.

Limited water, telephone and electrical service were restored and the first commercial flights resumed Tuesday, four days after Hurricane Iniki hit.

Duette Rochelle, a 67-year-old retired nurse who left her house last week, was on one of the first flights back. She returned to find her carport torn off the house and her garden ruined.

"I am just sick," she said. "I just don't have the heart right now to do anything about this."

Guzman: Shining Path's founder, director

LIMA, Peru — Abimael Guzman, the captured chief of Latin America's most dangerous guerrilla movement, is much more than the Shining Path's founder and director.

Guzman, known to his followers as Presidente Gonzalo, is the Shining Path's spiritual leader and guiding light — "a philosopher-king," in the words of one expert on the rebels.

Observers worry — and the guerrillas claim — that he created a movement that will outlast him.

"The Shining Path is more like a religious movement than a political force. Religions are stronger. They can last a long time," said Carlos Ivan Degregori, director of the Institute for Peruvian Studies. Guzman, 57, was captured Saturday at a safehouse in a middle-class Lima neighborhood, 12 years after he launched an armed insurgency to impose a hard-line, communist utopia in this impoverished nation.

President Alberto Fujimori said Tuesday that Guzman will be tried by a military tribunal that will issue its verdict Oct. 7, with a ruling on any appeal to be issued Oct. 27. He said he would consider public sentiment in weighing whether to impose the death penalty.

N.Y. candidates battle to photo finish primary

By MIKE SILVERMAN

Robert Abrams, New York's attorney general, claimed victory today in a too-close-to-call battle with Geraldine Ferraro for the Democratic nomination to oppose Sen. Alfonse D'Amato. Two congressmen lost, bringing to a record 19 the number of House incumbents ousted in this season of voter discontent.

Democratic state Sen. Patty Murray of Washington set a record of a different sort, becoming the 11th woman nominated this year for a U.S. Senate seat.

In other highlights on the last big day of 1992 primary voting Tuesday:

—Former Washington Mayor Marion Barry launched a comeback, winning nomination for a City Council seat. "This is a victory for the people," declared the man who went to prison for a 1990 drug conviction.

—First-term Rhode Island Gov. Bruce Sundlun survived a scare in a Democratic primary from an opponent who criticized his handling of the state's banking crisis. He will face GOP nominee Elizabeth Leonard, a political newcomer. "This campaign has been the toughest of all," Sundlun said.

Sundlun had 52 percent of the vote to 48 percent for former three-term Warwick Mayor Francis X. Flaherty.

The congressmen who put 1992 into the record book were Democrats Chester Atkins of Massachusetts, who wrote 127 bad checks on the House bank, and Stephen Solarz of New York, with 743 overdrafts. Atkins lost to former prosecutor Martin Mechan; Solarz lost to Nydia Velazquez in a new, mostly Hispanic district.

Balloonists lift off on perilous race to Europe

BANGOR, Maine — Five high-tech helium balloons lifted off in the moonlight today on a perilous, unprecedented race across the Atlantic that will end when one of them crosses a paved road — any paved road — in Europe.

Hundreds of spectators lined the runway at Bass Park race-track as the five international teams embarked before daybreak on the first trans-Atlantic balloon race. The 3,000-mile trip is expected to take three to five days.

"We feel very confident, and we're anxious to go," U.S. crew member Troy Bradley said.

Spain addresses abortion issue

By MICHAEL M. PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain — A government-backed proposal to ease abortion restrictions threatens to make Spain the next battleground in Europe's growing conflict between secularist politicians and the pulpit.

Like other mostly Roman Catholic nations locked in abortion rights disputes — notably Poland and Ireland — the battle lines in Spain are clear: reform-minded officials versus clergy demanding adherence to church teachings.

The controversy also shows signs of becoming as divisive as elsewhere.

In a rare — and possibly unprecedented — political statement, Spanish clergy have appealed for the ouster of pro-abortion rights lawmakers.

"As Spanish citizens,

Catholics have the moral obligation to use all means at their disposal to prevent this attack on human life from becoming a reality," said a statement from the Bishops' Committee for the Defense of Life after the proposals were announced earlier this month.

The Socialist government, led by Health Minister Jose Antonio Grinan, contends the proposed reforms answer demands by most Spanish women.

"What is fundamentally important is the woman's opinion since she's the one who undergoes the anguish and suffering, and, in any case, would have to go to jail for having an abortion," Grinan told reporters recently.

The government plan would allow an abortion in the first 12 weeks of pregnancy if a doctor considers it is causing psychological stress and the woman proves she has sought information on alternatives.

Since 1985, abortions have been allowed only in cases of rape, incest, fetal deformation or a threat to the life of the mother. Before 1985, abortions were outlawed.

Because Socialists control a majority in both houses of parliament, the reform seems likely to pass despite the church opposition. Conversely, Poland and Ireland have so far rebuffed attempts to liberalize laws on abortion, which is legal with few restrictions throughout most of western Europe.

Polish lawmakers gave initial approval in July to a law that would ban abortion and provide two-year jail sentences for doctors who perform the procedure. It still must win final approval in parliament.

Senate, House seeking compromise on $10.5 billion hurricane-aid bill

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — House-Senate bargainers say they could rush a multibillion-dollar relief package to President Bush as early as this week for people digging out from Hurricanes Iniki and Andrew.

With Americans from the Atlantic to the mid-Pacific still homeless and dazed from the two super-storms, negotiators from Congress' two chambers prepared today to try to fashion the final bill.

On Tuesday, the Senate approved its own $10.5 billion measure on an 84-10 vote. The legislation would provide loans, grants and other payments to residents of Hawaii, where Iniki struck Friday, and Florida and Louisiana, which Andrew pummeled on Aug. 24.

The House version calls for $8.8 billion in relief, including $520 million for farmers whose crops were destroyed by Andrew and $400 million for food stamps for people battered by the storm.

"We owe it to the people who suffered devastating losses of homes and schools and businesses to get this bill through Congress and onto the president's desk as expeditiously as possible," said Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., the Senate bill's chief sponsor.

Bush late Tuesday amended his weekend disaster declaration for Hawaii to permit the federal government to assume 100 percent of the costs of certain recovery programs, waiving usual state and local cost-sharing requirements. He had taken the same action for Florida and Louisiana earlier.

The Senate bill contains $92 million to rebuild limited facilities at Homestead Air Force Base, the south Florida airfield that the president pledged to rebuild during a campaign-style trip there last month.

That was far less than the $480 million Bush sought to begin reconstructing a base that was a major employer in a state he wants dearly to carry on Election Day.

But with senators worried that budget pressures would force military base closures in their own states, there was little support for spending huge sums to revive Homestead.

In a letter to Senate leaders, the Office of Management and Budget said the administration was "deeply disappointed" that the full $480 million was not approved. But it issued no veto threat.

The bill would leave the final decision on Homestead to the Base Closure Commission, which is scheduled to make its next round of recommendations for closing military bases by July 1, 1993.

"This gives our community hope. We've said there's always tomorrow, and I think today, tomorrow came," Homestead City Manager Alex Muxo said after a day-long lobbying effort.

The legislation initially contained $7.5 billion for victims of Hurricane Andrew and of Typhoon Omar, which ravaged the U.S. territory of Guam on Aug. 28.

But on a voice vote Tuesday, senators boosted that total by $3 billion to help Hawaiians begin recovering from Iniki, and to help Andrew's victims cope with ever-swelling rebuilding costs.

Both storms were of historic proportions. Andrew caused an estimated $22 billion in damage, the costliest natural disaster ever to hit the United States.

Hurricane stirs government

By BRENT KALLISTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Hurricane Andrew sure got things moving in Tallahassee after a relatively quiet summer. A staggering flurry of announcements came flying out of the Capitol as bureaucrats worked to get on top of the disaster.

The various information arms of Florida's independently elected Cabinet were especially busy, in part keeping their bosses on the news pages. Likewise, many lobbying arms were just as busy trying to persuade the masses that victims' needs were being met with dispatch.

Attorney General Bob Butterworth rode herd on price gouging; Treasurer Tom Gallagher stayed on top of the insurance companies; Education Commissioner Betty Castor had the schools; Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford worked to help farmers, leaving Comptroller Gerald Lewis and Secretary of State Jim Smith with little opportunity for publicity.

Smith did have one full day of coverage because of the one-week postponement of the primary election in Dade County and Lewis' office grabbed attention in the middle of all this when it criticized state hospitals for buying expensive, top-grade steaks for its inhabitants.

The Department of Commerce took out an ad a day after the storm to reassure potential tourists that Florida was still open for business across much of the state. They later made $10 million available for low-interest loans to small business owners smacked by Andrew.

A television documentary on how some school districts coped with the disaster was also ordered up, certain to feature Castor, a likely candidate for statewide office in 1994.

And it's impossible to separate the politics. All but Lewis are likely candidates for higher office at some point in the future, many in 1994.

It's a dicey proposition as President Bush has found out; his visits to the storm-ravaged areas were seen in some circles as political.

"If a public official is perceived as seeing a parade and electing to march in front of it, he runs a risk of appearing to exploit a situation for political benefit," said Terrence McElroy, spokesman for Lewis.

"Anytime you attempt to exploit any situation from a news standpoint, I think you do so at your own risk," said McElroy. "That backfires a lot."

McElroy said the comptroller took action on several fronts without any attendant publicity.

Lewis sped up delivery of payroll, welfare and unemployment checks to the storm's victims and also suspended banking regulations to get money on the streets.

"We've done a fair amount, but you haven't see press releases on everything," said McElroy. "Nobody benefits by attempting to gain political mileage."

Smith visited Miami on election day and took time to personally review the damage to cultural facilities and libraries, but his trip was not advertised.

"We didn't want any publicity," said veteran press aide Don North. "We didn't go there for that reason. We felt it would be shameful."

North and McElroy both pointed out the fine line that public officials often walk, particularly at times of unprecedented disaster.

"If I was the attorney general, I'd be mad at price-gouging," said North. "He's 100 percent justified in following through on those cases. I can't fault him one bit."

And North said politicians also fear being perceived as out of touch, or uncaring.

"It would be hard to be a public official, elected statewide, and not say you didn't go down there," said North, who like McElroy and many of the key press aides at the Capitol are former reporters.

Politicians hire them for a reason.

"They know what makes a story and how it'll be played," said McElroy.

Ram boys rebound from loss

From Staff Reports

APOPKA — In the short history of high school boys' volleyball in Seminole County, the Lake Mary Rams suddenly found themselves in foreign territory.

Last Thursday night, the Rams suffered two firsts. Not only was their loss to the Bishop Moore Hornets their first ever to a non-Class 4A school, it marked the first time that Lake Mary had lost its first match of the season.

Scheduled to play defending Volleyfest champion Kissimmee-Ocoola and annual Seminole Athletic Conference challenger Lake

Howell their next two times out, the Rams went into Tuesday night's match at Apopka needing a win.

They got what they needed, sweeping the host Blue Darters 15-8, 15-8.

"We felt that this (the Apopka match) was a very important match, especially having to play Ocoola then Lake Howell," said Lake Mary coach Bill Whalen. "And we went into it with that attitude."

The Rams responded with a balanced attack as seven different players registered kills and six players had blocks. Leading the attack were Ian Saunders (four kills, five blocks), David Sciacani (four kills, two blocks) and Edrick Cosmo and Drew Thomas (each with four kills and a block).

Will Lipcomb was credited with eight assists while Collin Munns registered six assists. Munns also had a six-point service run in the first game.

Hawk girls rally past B. Moore

From Staff Reports

WINTER PARK — With the Seminole Athletic Conference schedule looming ahead, Lake Howell girls' volleyball coach Jo Luciano needed a way for her inexperienced team to gain some experience in a hurry.

After sending the Silver Hawks through the West Orange Invitational last weekend, Luciano matched her team up against the well-coached Bishop Moore Hornets Tuesday night.

Despite suffering from a substantial size inequity, Lake Howell rallied from a first-game defeat to score an important 13-15, 15-8, 15-12 victory over the visitors.

"They were tall and they're well-coached," said Luciano. "Every game was close. We had to work very hard to win this match."

"It was a very good match to open our home season. We played a little bit better defense tonight, but we still a long way to go with our attack."

Strong service games from Allison Semones and Teresa Mallardi keyed the Silver Hawks in the third game. With the score tied 12-12, Tina Lehman delivered a big hit to get the serve back for the Silver Hawks.

After a side out, Mallardi served the match out for Lake Howell. Connie Bonaventure scored the 14th point with a dump set before a Bishop Moore error resulted in the match point.

Bishop Moore won the junior varsity preliminary, LH 15-7, 15-9.

Lake Howell (now 2-2) hosts Lake Mary in the SAC season opener for both schools next Tuesday night. Bishop Moore (2-4) hosts the Lyman Greyhounds this evening.

Signature Homes had problems on the base paths during the sixth inning of its 10-0 loss to Whelchel and Howard on Tuesday, when two runners were thrown out trying to take an extra base. Tom Tews (sliding, above) was tagged out by third baseman Duane Lee (right) to complete an inning-ending 7-5 double play.

Goldberg victorious in return to New Smyrna

By PAUL MARABELLA
Special to the Herald

BAMSLA — After a long absence from New Smyrna Speedway, Mike Goldberg had no trouble finding his way to victory lane last Saturday night.

Goldberg assumed the lead of the Late Model feature on the 10th lap and built a half-track advantage on the 10-car field by the 14th lap. Three caution periods with five laps remaining bunched up the field, but Goldberg was able to hold off David Rogers despite side-by-side restarts to claim the checkers.

"I know it's been at least two years since I last raced here," said Greenberg, 30. "The car was outstanding tonight. We had a lot of power and the handling was perfect. It's a great welcome back."

Goldberg started the race on the outside of the front row. At the drop of the green flag, fellow pole sitter Jeff Burkett took the early lead as Goldberg dropped into second place.

Several laps into the race, Burkett blew his engine and was forced from the race. As Goldberg assumed the lead, Greg Froemming, Pete Orr and Marc Kinley began to battle for second place.

"After I got the lead, I settled down and just drove a real cautious race," said Goldberg, who has been racing for eight years. "It felt good to be out front and despite my layoff, I was real comfortable racing."

Froemming eventually settling into second with Orr and Kinley lined up on his rear bumper.

Rogers, who the feature event the week before, and Guy Thomas started the main event from the back of the pack. With six laps remaining, Rogers moved into second with Thomas taking over the fourth position.

Despite the late cautions, Rogers couldn't overtake Goldberg and settled for second.

"It's tough to win a 25-lap race when you start from the back of the pack," said Rogers, a three-time track Late Model champion. "To win, you have to pass at least a car a lap. I guess I must have wasted too much time on one or two cars."

"We had a good car tonight, but so did Mike □ See New Smyrna, Page 28

Miami's Barlow wins Pro Four Hurricane Andrew benefit race

Special to the Herald

BARBERVILLE — Racing fans were treated to great weather and great racing at Volusia County Speedway last Saturday, Sept. 12.

Highlighting the card was a special Pro Four Modified "Hurricane Andrew Benefit Race," which was won, fittingly, by Dana Barlow from Miami.

"This is a great track and a great audience," said Barlow during victory lane ceremonies. "We really appreciate having the opportunity to come here to race and also help the victims of Hurricane Andrew."

A collection was taken of money and non-perishable items, which were brought to south Florida to aid in relief efforts in Dade County.

The Late Model Stock main saw Wayne Lockett of Eustis take the lead at the start with Ormond's Greg Ward and Tuck Trentham of Orange City in close pursuit. When Lockett went a little high, Trentham shot underneath and quickly established a five-car advantage.

David Showers of St. Augustine and Jacksonville's David Browning moved up to battle for second until they came together in turn two, bringing out the caution flag.

Trentham, having developed problems with his No. 1 mount, eventually surrendered the lead to Ward, who went on to take the win. Shane Williams of Barberville came on strong during the final circuits before settling for the runner-up spot.

Following Ward and Williams across the stripe were John Michalowski, Showers and Browning.

Rodney Orr of Palm Coast held the early lead in the 15-lap Sportsman feature but it didn't take long until current points leader, David Ponder of DeLand, claimed the point.

Edgewater's Jim Winks stayed on Ponder's tail, challenging for the lead and finally passing Ponder by diving to the inside on lap six. Ponder attempted to battle back but couldn't get past as Winks chalked up the victory.

Orr, Rusty Eberolf and Bill Morris rounded out the top five.

From the outside pole, Bunnell's Gene Pellicer took the lead of the 15-lap Street Stock feature. Scott LeCates of Ormond moved up to second by the fourth lap and on Pellicer's back bumper, challenging for the lead by lap five. LeCates took the point on the sixth lap and drove unchallenged to the win.

Trailing LeCates were, in order of finish, Ray Fulford, Pellicer, Paul George and Rod Gammon Sr.

The Charger feature saw DeLand's Mike Bowling on the front at the drop of the green. By the fifth lap, Jim Hefner of Ormond was applying pressure on Bowling. The lead pair continued to run nose-to-tail with Hefner trying to pass below Bowling in every turn.

On lap 14, Hefner once again tried to take

Bowling on the inside. However, the two tangled, handing the lead to Altamonte Springs' John Bennett. But just as it looked like Bennett was going to notch the win, Tony Newsom of Orlando scraped past him in turn four to take the checkers.

Pat McClain, Mike Bowling and Robert Letter finished third through fifth, respectively.

Elliott pulls away from Allison

DAYTONA BEACH — Bill Elliott moved a step closer to a possible second NASCAR Winston Cup stock car racing national championship despite his 14th-place finish in Saturday night's Miller 400 at Richmond, Va.

Elliott extended his lead by 15 points over second-place Allison.

(Goldberg). He drove an outstanding race and he deserved to win."

Trailing Goldberg and Rogers to victory lane were Froemming, Thomas and Orr.

"It would have been very nice to have won this race," said Froemming. "But I'm very pleased to have finished third in tonight's field."

Thomas echoed Froemming's sentiments.

"It was tough getting to the front tonight," said Froemming, who has one feature win on the season. "We had a good field of cars and you had to work for what you got. I would have liked to finish better, but I'll settle for fourth."

Mike Fitch led every circuit in the Modified division as he raced to his 22nd win of the season. Rounding out the top five were Bill Coody, Jeff Anderson, Lewis Ickdock and Gene Barlow.

Dale Howard also went wire-to-wire to take top honors in the Sportsman class. Howard, who now has 12 wins on the season, crossed the stripe 10 car lengths ahead of Sanford's John Ripley, Ted Head, Rick Johns and Butch Pierce.

Allan Rhodes took the lead on the third lap in the Limited Late Model main event and held off a challenge by Mike Williams to claim his 13th checkered flag of the season.

Don Roberts, Darrell Frye and Jeff Burkett rounded out the top five.

Late in the race, a double wall banger hung Randy Grief's race on the outside retaining wall as well as severely damaging the car of Jacob Warren. Fortunately, neither driver was injured.

A collision with three laps remaining between race leader Tommy Symons and Ted Vulpius opened the door for Don Keithley to win his first ever Mini Stock feature.

Symons, who restarted the race from the tail end of the field, worked his way back to second place by the race's end. Behind Symons were Richard Newton, Bob Doxie and Vulpius.

David Gould led all but two laps as he scored his first career win in the Bomber division. Finishing behind Gould were Mike Hughes, Walt Loring, Greg Noe and Gould's brother, Darren.

Lee Wagner won the Run-A-Bout feature while Danny Tyler took the checkers in the Demolition Derby.

Junior women to meet

The Junior Woman's Club of Sanford wishes for the community to be made aware that the disparity between Florida's wealth and its children's health is the widest in the nation. According to the Florida Center for the Study of Social Policy, Florida ranks 45th in the nation on a composite of eight key factors of child health and well-being, putting Florida way down at the bottom in caring for children. At the same time Florida's per capita income ranks 19th highest in the nation.

Joseph A. Roster, an attorney and a representative from Florida Children's Campaign, a non-partisan educational and awareness group, will provide the program for the OJWC Junior Woman's Club of Sanford, Thursday night at 7 p.m.

If you are interested in a heightened awareness of children's needs and want to know how to identify if candidates are educated about the importance of having a platform that emphasizes investing in children and families, you may wish to attend this meeting.

For more information on the Junior Woman's Club of Sanford or attending this program, call Kathy Krasnoff at 321-8526 or Jay Lee at 323-1955.

Varied interests include cooking

Volunteer work followed by her chocolate silk pie

By SEL FREEMAN
Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — Longwood resident Kathy Murphey doesn't work outside the home but finds plenty to keep her busy caring for the couple's two Schnauzer dogs and two parakeets. Husband, Jim, works for the city of Altamonte Springs as a detective.

Kathy frequently cooks a full meal for the couple, but says a good deal of her time is spent in volunteer work. For the past two years, she has been affiliated with an organization which grants vacations to children with life-threatening illnesses, acting as an airport greeter when the families arrive in town.

"It's very rewarding, and it makes me feel good that I'm able to help these people," she said.

Kathy has been involved in a myriad of projects in the past, including acting as president of an all-breed dog club, where she attended obedience classes and even showed one of the couple's dogs in competition.

The couple also retain a fondness for hot-air ballooning, and have crewed on a number of record-holding balloon flights, although they primarily remained on the ground.

"In 1984, we traveled to Caribou, Maine, to crew the first solo Atlantic crossing," she said. "We got the balloon launched and he went across the Atlantic and landed in Italy."

As primary breadwinner in the household, Jim enjoys his work with the Altamonte Police Department, and Kathy said she no longer worries about him now that he is no longer on the street. He combats the stress of the job by operating an electronic bulletin board, (BBS), called Coffee Shop, and spends his spare time sending messages back and forth with people around the world and stocking up on books and programs user members can download depending on their areas of interest.

Jim's board is a general purpose board, and is also a Diaktop Publishing Association (DPA) bookstore, offering electronic books and magazines to users via two phone lines.

He offers programs on his board for recording and storing recipes, making shopping lists, etc., but Kathy primarily relies on the old-fashioned handwritten or photocopied recipes, and seems to think one computer-addict in the family is quite enough.

Kathy's recipe for chocolate silk pie, however, is much in demand and has been passed around both in hardcopy format and to the couple's myriad of BBBing friends, who have stored it in the recipe programs they have downloaded from Jim's board.

CHOCOLATE SILK PIE CRUST

1 stick butter (1/2 cup)
2 cups coconut
2 cups chopped pecans
Melt butter and add coconut and pecans, and cook in a frying pan until lightly browned. Press into a 9-inch pie pan, saving some of mixture for topping.

Filling
2 sticks butter (1 cup)
4 squares melted, unsweetened chocolate
1 1/2 cups sugar
2 Tbsp. vanilla
4 eggs
Whipped topping

Cream butter, and sugar and blend in melted, cooled chocolate and vanilla. Add eggs one at a time. Beat 3 minutes each egg addition. (Important!)

Pour into baked and cooled pie shell. Pie can be made ahead of time and frozen. When ready to serve, place dollops of whipped topping on top and sprinkle with reserved crumb mixture or toasted almonds.

ITALIAN SLAW

1 medium cabbage, shredded

1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. dry mustard (hot)

Time to cook

Delicious meals needn't take forever even if they look it

By MARILISA GALYA
NEA Food Writer

Laurie Colwin, the author of "Home Cooking" (Bantam, 1990) writes that in the search for "an enormous return on a small investment," she has learned that "almost the only situation in which this is possible is cooking."

I am a real fan of Colwin's, and recommend her book to anyone who has ever paused to ruminate about the meaning of all those hours logged in the kitchen.

Re-reading a chapter entitled "Easy Cooking for Exhausted People" made me realize that my very favorite recipes are, with few exceptions, ridiculously easy. But "the beauty part," as a neighbor of mine used to say, is that they are the kind of recipes that other people THINK are hard. The result is that you get tons of credit for knocking yourself out in the kitchen when, in fact, you were knocking yourself out doing something else, like the laundry, for which no one will give you any credit at all.

I, who work at home, have not seen a paid holiday in years. I have instead resolved to TAKE a day off, to spend with my husband. Furthermore, I have resolved that taking the day off means not spending hours in the kitchen (or doing the laundry, for that matter.)

The beauty part is that it is perfectly possible to make absolutely delicious food easily and — yes — FROM SCRATCH. This includes homemade French bread, which is nowhere near as difficult as it sounds, provided that you are not a purist and find almost any homemade bread hot from the oven tempting and delicious. My recipe requires about 7 minutes of actual labor, although one does have to be in the vicinity for the rising and baking. (If you can't get your hands on any bread troughs, you can fashion them from several layers of heavy-duty aluminum foil). Likewise, the lemon chicken takes maybe 8 minutes to prepare, and you can go outside and throw a frisbee with your kids while it's in the oven. The cold soup and dessert were developed by my friends at the New England Culinary Institute, and they prove that the more you know about food, the more you understand that cooking does not have to be complicated.

The only thing missing from this menu of labor-saving dishes is a vegetable, and I recommend steamed green beans, lightly salted and drizzled with olive oil or butter and lemon juice. Or salad.

FRENCH BREAD
1 tablespoon active dry yeast
1 1/2 cups warm (not hot) water

3 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon cornmeal, to add texture (optional)

In a large bowl, stir together water and yeast. Let sit for 5 minutes to activate yeast.

Stir in flour, salt and cornmeal (if using). The dough will be spongy and batter-like.

Place a clean dish towel over bowl and let sit in a warm place until dough is double in bulk (about an hour).

Stir dough again. Lightly grease bread troughs with vegetable shortening or oil. With wet hands, form dough into two rope-like loaves and place in bread troughs. Cover with damp towel and let rest 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, place oven rack in middle of oven and preheat to 400 degrees. Place troughs on rack. For crustier bread, boil water and pour into a shallow pan placed on lowest rack of oven, below the troughs. Bake until golden brown, about 30 to 40 minutes.

Yield: 2 loaves.
This recipe is based on the one used by Paul and Elaine Manghi of Manghi's Bakery in Montpelier, Vt.

CHILLED CANTALOUPE SOUP

3 ripe cantaloupes, peeled and seeded and cut into 1/4-inch pieces

1/4 cup plain, low-fat yogurt
4 slices lime
mint for garnish

Put cantaloupe in a blender or food processor. If using a blender, blend until smooth, about 2 to 3 minutes. If using a food processor, process about 30 seconds. Refrigerate until chilled.

Pour into serving bowls. Garnish with spoonful of yogurt, and place lime slice and sprig of mint in center.

Yield: 4 servings.
Recipe developed by Allen Danaher, student, New England Culinary Institute, Essex, Vt. Ripe melons are a must.

LEMON CHICKEN

1 whole roasting chicken, 4 to 5 pounds

4 whole lemons
salt and pepper
dried basil dried oregano
garlic powder
Preheat oven to 450 degrees.

Rinse chicken in cold water, removing neck and giblets.

Wash lemons. Reserve one for garnish. Using heel of hand, roll three of the lemons on hard surface. Prick all over with sharp knife or fork tines. Stuff pricked lemons into cavity of chicken. (If you can't fit all three in, use one for additional garnish.)

Lightly sprinkle outside of chicken with salt and pepper, basil, oregano and garlic powder.

Place chicken, breast side up, in roasting pan; place in oven and immediately reduce heat to 350 degrees. Bake for 15 to 20 minutes per pound, until skin is brown and crispy and juices run clear. Carve and serve.

Yield: 6 servings.
If you are a dedicated gravy-maker, add a good squeeze of lemon juice to the pan drippings.

VERMONT COUNTRY BERRIES WITH SYRUP

1 pint blueberries, rinsed and drained

1 pint raspberries, rinsed and drained

1 pint strawberries, rinsed, drained and quartered
2 cups maple syrup
1 cup club soda
ground black pepper

1 quart vanilla ice cream or frozen yogurt (optional)
mint for garnish

In a mixing bowl, toss berries together lightly. Add syrup and club soda. Sprinkle with black pepper. Serve as is or with ice cream or frozen yogurt.

Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

Men see scars as part of the whole

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Inhibited and Embarrassed" not to worry about her mastectomy scars. Her potential lover might have a few problems of his own. She'd be lucky to find anybody in even near mint condition. Many of us, both male and female, in the fifty-something age range have had organs lopped off, bypassed, reamed out, and otherwise rearranged.

Any man who would reject a woman because of her scars or an absent breast is a man from whom she could be fleeing as fast as she can.

If I were a widower, I'd consider myself lucky to meet a gem of a lady who had a record of a successful, loving marriage, had won a battle against cancer, had endured the trials of widowhood and who now has the spunk to remarry. A great big hug to her and congratulations to the lucky man who finds her.

S.O.B. IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 45 years. She lost her left breast to cancer 30 years ago.

Last March, she lost her right breast. Did it make any difference to me? Not a bit! I thank God every day for her life. I love her for what she is, not for what she looks like. Besides, we have known each other since we were 13 — and she didn't have any then, and it didn't make any difference.

BOB LOWE, SACRAMENTO

DEAR ABBY: First of all, let me tell you that I am a male and a nudist, and I have seen women of all shapes and sizes — some have had mastectomies. There is one thing I learned from being a nudist, and that is to respect people for what they are not what they have, or what they look like. People who carry scars from surgery shouldn't feel embarrassed — they are "badges of honor" awarded to survivors of a life-and-death battle.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Some years ago, I met a woman I found attractive. She was hesitant to get involved, and finally confessed that she thought I might be turned off by the scars she carried following her mastectomy. I told her I had a few scars of my own across my back and across my chest from a VC grenade ambush I earned along with a Purple Heart and a Bronze Star. I confessed that while recovering in a VA hospital, I worried that my scars would turn women off. I worried in vain. We accepted each other for what we were — not how we looked. This is the second marriage for both of us, and we couldn't be happier.

AN OFFICER AND A GENTLEMAN

DEAR INHIBITED AND EMBARRASSED: Your body is not disfigured — it carries a badge of courage and triumph over disease. Your husband had the sense to realize this, and you should not settle for less now that he is gone. Physical attraction is mental and emotional. If someone loves you with his whole heart, mind and body, it will not matter that you are missing a breast, an arm, a leg or any other part. You have nothing to be ashamed of. I am a 53-year-old man, and if I were not already "involved" with someone I love very much, I would be delighted to meet you!

The Sanford Herald welcomes suggestions for cooks of the week.

From chicken to tasty entrees

Cooking meals for one or two can be a difficult task and many times it hardly seems worth the effort. However, the microwave can be used in combination with a variety of recipes that have quick, simple preparation and delicious results to help make the job much more enjoyable.

The chicken recipes show how to transform a package of boneless chicken breast fillets and chicken coating mix into three different entrees, each taking less than ten minutes to prepare. Freeze extra chicken fillets and store coating for another meal or two.

If you check the frozen entree selections at the market you'll find they do this for you at a considerable higher cost.

Take advantage of what your microwave does so efficiently — cooking small quantities quickly.

Use this coating mix for chicken, pork, or fish to add a golden brown color and crunchy texture.

Steroids could help relieve lung disease

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there any new information you can pass on regarding COPD? I'm being treated with prednisone for sarcoidosis of the lungs and wonder how long I can stay on the steroids.

DEAR READER: There's not much new information about chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, which is marked by increased production of bronchial mucus and trapping of stale air within the lungs. COPD is a common, late consequence of cigarette smoking and air pollution. Also, it's often the end result of occupational exposure, such as black lung (in miners) and farmer's lung.

In my experience, sarcoidosis doesn't ordinarily cause COPD. Sarcoidosis is a disease of unknown cause that produces areas of low-grade inflammation in various body organs, notably the lymph nodes. A pulmonary type, causing diffuse lung irritation, can hinder breathing. The treatment for this is prednisone or other steroids.

In patients with severe and incapacitating COPD (from any cause), the use of steroids may improve breathing. As you know, these drugs have serious side effects (such as bone brittleness, cataracts and reduced immunity to infections); therefore, doctors usually prescribe prednisone cautiously and only after explaining the risk/benefit ratio to patients.

In your case, this would be especially appropriate because I don't know the extent of your disease(s) and which one necessitates the use of prednisone. Ask your doctor about this. Also inquire about the duration of therapy.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'd like information on hepatitis C. How is it contracted, is it contagious and can a child get it? Sign me worried.

DEAR READER: Hepatitis C is one of five types of viral liver infection. It is spread by blood transfusions or needle sticks; therefore, people of any age can be exposed. It is not, however, contagious from casual contact, as is the common cold, for instance.

There is no preventive vaccine

Answer to Previous Puzzle

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Samuel Johnson once said to someone: "You must have taken great pains, sir; you could not naturally have been so very stupid." At least we know that he couldn't have been talking to a bridge player. Players of our great game need to have good brains in their heads. But even so, occasionally these well-oiled intellects blow a neuron. Take today's deal as an example.

North's jump to five spades showed slam interest, with useful cards in spades and diamonds, but no heart or club control. South was happy to raise to the slam.

West led the spade two, the normal lead of low from a doubleton in trumps. Finding himself in the dummy, South was lured over the precipice, immediately finessing his heart jack. However, when West won with the king and returned his second trump, South suddenly found that he had only 11 tricks. There was no way to avoid a club loser.

South had stopped to count his tricks and found 12: seven spades, two hearts, one diamond and two clubs. But he hadn't considered the entry situation. When the heart finesse lost, he didn't have the communications to collect the second heart trick. However, if South had just led a heart to his ace at trick two and returned the heart jack, he would have been in fine shape.

West wins with the heart king and returns a trump. But now declarer can discard his two club losers, one on the heart queen and the other on the diamond ace.

Only take a finesse if its success will generate an extra trick or its loss won't cost you an additional trick.

By Bernice Bode Deal
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Sept. 17, 1992

Travel, especially journeys to foreign lands, could produce some rather remarkable benefits for you in the year ahead. Try to become knowledgeable in advance about the countries you intend to visit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There is a special market for some knowledge you've recently acquired. If you can zero in on the outlet, it could be very profitable for you. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone you have a strong connection with will be looking out for your material concerns today. This isn't the first time this individual has helped you without your having to ask.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone you recently met is in a position to help you develop a new circle of influential friends. There is a chance you'll be receiving a social invitation from this individual soon.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could be instrumental today in helping yourself, and those you're involved with, in achieving something of mutual benefit. However, be sure to share the glory with your peers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have several qualities that will be admired by the people you'll be involved with today. First and foremost is your philosophical way of dealing with uncertainties.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A positive attitude will help you fulfill your expectations today. Don't be anxious about the outcome of events but visualize optimum conclusions and work in that direction.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Play the back-up role in a partnership today instead of trying to be the wheel-dealer. The key to success is to position yourself where you'll be the most effective.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

PHASEOPE

By Leonard Starr

You're presently in a cycle where good things could get better, provided you don't leave everything up to chance. Create a solid game plan and then adhere to it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't be surprised if you get a few more compliments than usual today, especially from members of the opposite gender. Observers like your style and may even try to emulate you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A close associate might be the purveyor of some desirable information today that will buoy your spirits. It pertains to something you hope will transpire.

CANCER (June 21-July 21) Your best asset today is your ability to evaluate the worth of others' suggestions and ideas. When you hear something of interest, you'll know how to maximize it to your advantage.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22) You're in a stronger position than you may realize at this time where your career is concerned. If your performance warrants it, inquire about a promotion and/or raise.
