FAMED CRATER BELCHES WITH MORE VIOLENCE

Vesuvius Lava Flow Engulfs 2 Villages And Threatens Destruction Of More

NAPLES, June 5—(INS)—A number of university students, caught in an outburst of molten lava from the new crater of Mt. Vesuvius, were injured today. A flaming river of destruction is still pouring from mountain side. The flow of lava towards Ariva has increased. It is encircling the deserted village of Terigino, which is again menaced with destruction.

NAPLES, June 5—(INS)—Bursting out with renewed violence, the famous volcano, Mt. Vesuvius, continued to belch a constant stream of lava today, completely engulfing two villages and threatening destruction of several others.

One inch of the smoldering mass, 200 yards wide and 24 feet high, was up the village of Paganica shortly after the village of Campielli had been engulfed. Residents of both places had fled before the lava reached their homes.

The village appears to be retaining its greatest violence at intervals of seven or eight hours. Tectonic explosions were heard again in the crater between 8 and 9 o'clock last night, during the night. These abated somewhat but at 4 o'clock this morning they were again heard. Columns of smoke reaching three miles in the air hovered over the volcano across the crater.

Two cameras, photographing the flow of lava, were automated by the death-dealing phenomenon and were saved in miraculously fashion when planks were thrown across the molten stream.

The stream was moving at less than 150 feet an hour. Barriers quickly evacuated yesterday afternoon when the lava reached that town, less than half a mile from Terigino at 8 o'clock last night.

The stream of lava is advancing down the Campi Valley and is divided in two main sections; one moving toward Campielli and the other divided into four small rivulets of which two flowed along the path of the lava formation of 1906 and the other two toward Paganica.

Prompt measures were taken when it was seen that the flow was of a vicious nature. Trainloads of soldiers were dispatched to Barre and Terigino to oversee the evacuation of those towns while General Taranto, commanding of the army corps in this area; Count Caprilli, vice-premier, and a number of engineers went by special train to the neighborhood of Terigino where they studied the menacing terrains.

The district threatened is a richly agricultural one and famous for a number of excellent vines. The lava has already destroyed part of the vineyard which stretch for miles and on which the grapes are just to ripen.

2 Bodies Are Sought Following Explosion

BRAINTREE, Mass., June 5—(INS)—Bodies of two missing men were sought today in the flame-swept debris which lay in the wake of two terrific explosions in the plant of the Cities Service Refining Company.

Hours after the $500,000 blast fire departments of four communities had the fire under control but officials stated that it would be many more hours before a search of the ruins of 17 big buildings could be made. A score of employees, members of the night force, were injured, four seriously. The series of blasts, followed by a burst of flame, shook the countryside for miles around.

Another Race Bill Offered In Senate

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., June 5—(INS)—A racing bill carrying a state-wide referendum clause was introduced in the Senate today by A. M. Taylor, of St. Augustine. Following a battle last night over introduction of a race track bill, the House today struck another, and when a resolution was offered to invoke the so-called "two-vote" cloture, the bill was withdrawn. The subject matter is to 10 minutes. Forty-nine names were signed to the resolution. Mathis, of Dixie and Hayes of Wakulla, whose names appeared, asked that they be stricken as they had no prior knowledge of the measure. The resolution went to the rules committee. The race track bill, offered by the St. Johns and Duval County delegations, was withdrawn after it had been attacked on the grounds that it did not come within the purview of the Governor's call.

JURY RETURNS 3 INDICTMENTS IN CASE OF BLACKS

Another Day Required To Complete Work Before Inquisitor

After more than a week of investigations, the grand jury, returning completion of its duties, this afternoon handed three bills to Judge Wallace W. Wright with the advice that its work was not completed and that it expected to be busy for another day. State's Attorney Miller B. Smith has been in charge of the jury.

The three indictments presented today charge Henry Rozier, negro, with murder in the first degree and Fred Harris, negro, on two counts, with breaking and entering. Rozier was arraigned a few minutes after the indictment was presented to the court and pleaded guilty upon the advice of his attorney, George A. Deotis.

The Rozier case is set for Friday of this week. Fred Harris, now in the City Jail where he has been held since his arrest some days ago, is reported to be the perpetrator of a number of robberies which have been committed during the past month. He was said to have confessed to robbing the home of Howard Long, Stark Avenue, the Patrick home on Magnolia Avenue, and the residence of Heyward Walker, Washington Avenue.

Two cameras, photographing the flow of lava, were automated by the death-dealing phenomenon and were saved in miraculously fashion when planks were thrown across the molten stream.

Final Settlement Of Reparations Controversy Seen As Step For Universal Amity

LA GUARDIA SAYS CANADA AIDS U. S. TO ENFORCE LAW

BOLTON APOLOGIZES FOR ATTITUDE OF COUNTRY ON PROHIBITION ISSUE

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(INS)—Canada is doing more to enforce America's prohibition than the United States itself is doing, Rep. M. H. LaGuardia, (R) of New York declared in a speech in the House yesterday "apologizing" for the American attitude toward the northern neighbor.

LaGuardia assailed the latest American request to Canada to stop clearance of rum-running vessels for United States shores—described as "unreasonable." He said the American people would not permit "financial prohibitionists" to endanger friendly relations between the two nations.

The United States, he said, had taken advantage of the liquor smuggling angle in Canada in 1924, under which Canada agreed to inform American officials of the clearance of rum-running vessels.

Canadian customs officers, he said, began making daily telephone reports of clearances by American prohibition officers stopped this and called for weekly reports—after the vessels had sailed.

Canada also offered to permit American officers to be stationed in Canada and obtain first hand information of sailings. This offer he said was refused. Now he said the United States asks Canada to amend its treaties by enacting laws to prohibit clearance of liquor vessels.

"Such a far-fetched request of a foreign government to enact laws in order to make unlawful what in their country is lawful in order to assist enforcement of a local law has never been previously regarded in the history of the world," he said.

"The present demands made on the Canadian government are nothing but a continuation of the United States' demand of the Canadian failure of prohibition."

I think I know the sentiment of the American people who have gone into the facts in favor of the generous offer of Canada to permit American officers to operate within her borders, when I say that we appreciate the generous attitude of Canada and that we will not permit the interests of any friendly or enemy nation and bad blood between the people of these two countries."

LaGuardia reiterated his call to support a statement that "we" should encourage more Canadian liquor than is consumed in Canada's own soil that fed over $300,000 out of the total $12,000,000 excise tax on Canadian liquor was collected on exports to the United States.

He told Canadian officials to exert every effort to effect that near Detroit and Buffalo, American prohibition officers had learned information regarding sailing of rum runners. American customs officers update Bridgesburg, Ohio, can see rum runners leave but don't bother them, he said.

Milkmaids Are Obsolete

MILKMAIDS. Those picture figures of grace and poetry, have vanished from our mundane scene. Their beauty, because men do the milking now, and the cow has become a pampered creature, where every physical want is promptly attended to. She is not only fed correctly, but groomed to perfect health, and kept in the most hygienic condition. Correct feeding is due to the fact that the vitamin content of milk is directly affected by the amount of vitamins in the cow's diet, and dairy men are now feeding much more intelligently than in former years.

"While no food can be considered a 'perfect food,'" said R. Adam Fletcher, Head of the Department of Agriculture's Pennsylvania State College, "the cow's diet, in all its various marketable forms comes about as near to this ideal as we can hope to find in a single food product."

In The Hands Of Fate

Strange sometimes are the exigencies of fate. A flicker of an eyelash may alter the course of a whole life. The death of a single man may turn the tide of battle, and place upon a great people a new rule, and transform events in the world. A small financial success may hinge upon a paltry detail; material failure may result from the peculiar pronunciation of a single word.

What it was then that brought about the vast change in the lives of a young brother and sister is no less significant. Twelve years ago, then only four and six, the deaths of their parents left them orphans, placed in the care of a family friend, who had been a school teacher, but whose large household had been broken up by the death of his wife. The sister was adopted by the late S. D. Strother, a wealthy Oklahoma oil magnate. The brother was taken by a family of poor farmers. Separated so young in life, they have lost track of each other, and might never have seen each other again but for a little personal item printed in a Nashville paper. The boy saw it communicated with his sister, and after twelve years of separation, they have been reunited.

How different the lives of these two have been! She has been brought up in a gorgeous mansion, trained by educated governesses, educated in exclusive schools. She has enjoyed all the pretty clothes that money could buy, has driven her own automobile, and has taken expensive trips. Her friends have been cultivated among the rich. When her adopted father died, he left her a fortune.

The life of her brother has not been so pampered, nor so secure. He was adopted by a family which needed a boy to do the chores around the farm. He got up at daybreak and worked until the sun set behind the western horizon. He got some schooling in the public schools, but no nurses, no governesses, no tutors. His life has been dedicated to work, as only boys are raised on a farm know how to work.

The life of his brother is about over. His sister has announced that she will help him from now on.

They are going to spend the summer at the pastoral Louisiana estate of H. P. Worley, the sister's guardian, and in the Fall she is going to send him to a university.

Comforts In The Country

Discouraged folks who are planning upon abandoning their farms or country homes because of the high cost of living, should not be afraid to do so. They have all the comforts of home, and the most up-to-date conveniences.

We sometimes feel the idea that there are many more conveniences to be enjoyed in the cities than in the country, and undoubtedly this at one time was true, but is it now?

Recently an editorial writer pointed out that farm people move to the cities and towns in order to get rid of the cares of life which might not be enjoyed by the city population.

"One of the first steps in the movement of the rural population to the cities is the increase in the cost of living, and this is due to the fact that the cost of living in the cities is greater than in the country.

It is true that the cost of living in the cities is greater than in the country, but the cost of living in the country is also greater than in the cities.

According to the Ocala Banner, if it's all right for men to bear arms, it should be all right for women to bear arms.
