Cops say love triangle led to stabbing

By NICK PFEIFAUER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A knife fight police say was prompted by a love triangle sent two women to the hospital yesterday.

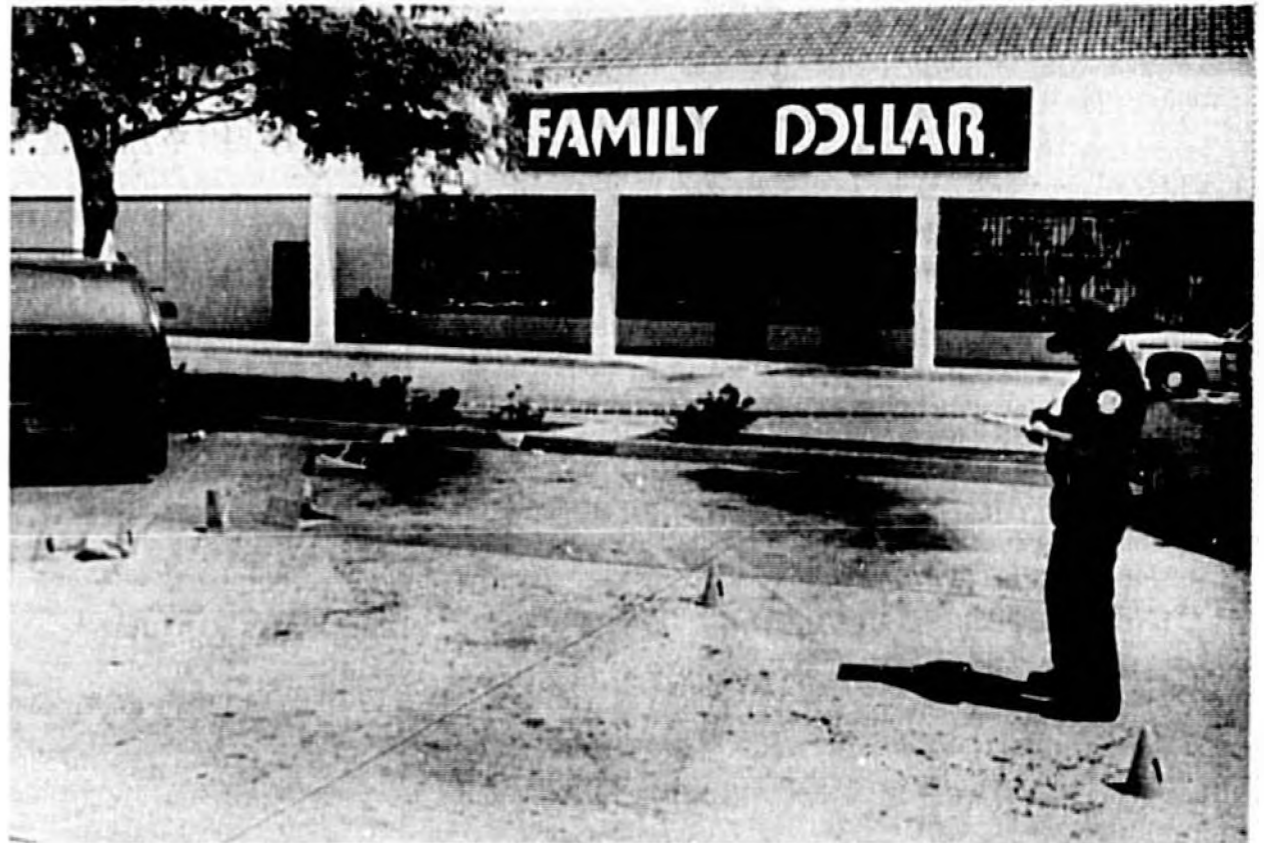

As of this morning, no charges have been filed pending the completion of an investigation.

Sanford Police Commander Dennis Whitmire said two women, believed to be the wife and girlfriend of an unidentified man, spotted each other in the Winn Dixie Store, 1722 Airport Blvd. on Monday.

"As we understand it," Whitmire said, "the wife, Lenora Washington, 31, of 151 Bethune Circle, apparently saw the girlfriend, identified as Rosalyn Little, 18, of #18 Castle Brewer Court, in the store. One of them apparently ran into the other with her grocery cart."

"The two apparently got into a dispute there in the store," Whitmire said, "and when Little left, she went to the nearby Family Dollar store, and

Teacher arrested

Suspension may follow sex, drug charges

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County school district officials have recommended that a fifth grade teacher arrested on sex and drug charges be temporarily suspended while an investigation continues.

Scott Lehman, 33, a fifth grade teacher at Wilson Elementary School in Sanford, was arrested last Thursday by Volusia County sheriff's officers on charges of solicitation, possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana, possession of drug paraphernalia, exposure of sex organs and lewd and lascivious behavior.

He was arrested in Valentine Park in Orange City.

According to the Volusia County sheriff's office, Lehman asked an undercover agent to engage in sexual activity with him there. They also reported that in the subsequent search of his car, officers found a small amount of marijuana and a pipe used for smoking marijuana in the trunk of his car.

He was taken to the Volusia County jail where he was held on $2,500 bond, the sheriff's office report said. He was released the same day.

Seminole County school district officials have recommended that the school board suspend Lehman for a period of time while they conduct their own investigation into the matter.

The charges must also be reported to the state Department of See Teacher, Page 5A

Hospital head chooses hearts over Hillary

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — While other hospital administrators from across the nation gathered in Orlando to hear first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton speak yesterday, Roy Vinson, hospital administrator at HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital paced the halls outside the new open heart surgery unit in Sanford.

"I had two outstanding opportunities yesterday," Vinson said. "One was to go listen to Hillary and the other was to stay here while the first surgeries were being performed in our new unit. I think I made the better choice."

According to Vinson, a pair of surgeries, were done yesterday, another is scheduled for today and a fourth is scheduled for Thursday.

"It's going to be a pretty busy first week," Vinson said.

Nuisance ordinance update would allow county to clean up eyesores

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — A proposed update to the county nuisance ordinance, the first in 16 years, would allow the county to clean up unsightly properties when owners can't afford to eliminate the eyesores and for the first time, expand the regulations to include non-residential properties.

Although considered, the ordinance if adopted would not prohibit boats or recreational vehicles from residential areas. The ban might still be considered under future zoning requirements.

Seminole County commissioners will review the proposal today and if they have no major concerns, public hearings will be set for later this year to consider adopting it. If adopted, the new rules would affect only areas outside cities.

Herb Hardin, manager of the Current Planning Division, said the Code Enforcement Board recommended including a provision to allow the county to clean up properties if the owner can't afford to do it.

Under the proposal, the owners See Eyesores, Page 5A

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Crowd protests judge's racial remarks

MACCLENNY — About 30 demonstrators carried signs and shouted slogans against a county judge who was secretly videotaped making derogatory racial remarks during a campaign.

The Rev. Charles Wilson, vice president of the Baker County NAACP, said Monday ministers and a group of black lawyers in Jacksonville were preparing a formal complaint against Judge Joey Williams to be submitted to the state Judicial Qualifications Commission.

"We will be out here for however long it takes," Wilson said. "Malcolm X said, 'By any means necessary.' We say, 'However long it takes.' We're not going to stick our heads in the sand and wait for it to go away."

Williams made the derogatory remarks during a bitterly contested judicial race with Macclenny attorney Hugh Fish.

On the tape, Williams complained about "nigger crackheads" who mugged his mother. He also said, "The good, the decent blacks are in the minority in the black community."

Suspected burglar nabbed while napping

TITUSVILLE — A man suspected of burglarizing 10 homes over four days apparently fell asleep after entering his 11th house, where police found him dozing on the back porch.

Police said Monday they discovered David Spungin, 20, of Melbourne, sleeping. He apparently sat down to rest before beginning his burglary Friday evening, police said.

Spungin was charged with two counts of burglary of an occupied dwelling, one count of burglary to a dwelling and one count of petty theft in connection with the break-in.

Records show that Spungin, who is suspected of committing 10 other burglaries during a four-day period last week, already is on probation for burglaries in Melbourne.

Officers accused in cover up

MIAMI — Firms of the current and future Miami U.S. attorneys represented policemen now accused of covering up the slaying of a drug dealer, a defense lawyer said.

Milton Hirsch refused to enter a plea Monday for his client in that coverup until prosecutors gave a "bill of particulars" clarifying the roles of U.S. Attorney Roberto Martinez and his nominated replacement, Kendall Coffey.

A new indictment against the policemen refers to unnamed persons who participated in the alleged coverup, and Hirsch said he wants to know if that included the officers' then-attorneys.

Federal prosecutors Dan Gelber balked, telling U.S. Magistrate Linnea Johnson that all relevant information was in the indictment, which doesn't mention Martinez or Coffey.

The magistrate then entered an innocent plea for Hirsch's client, officer Pablo Camacho, 35.

The case centers on the death of Leonardo Mercado, 35, killed during a 1988 raid by a Miami police drug squad. The 1990 acquittal of the officers on most federal charges sparked a small riot in Miami's largely Puerto Rican neighborhood of Wynwood.

Boy survives 7 story fall

DESTIN — A 2-year-old boy, who fell from a 7th-story balcony onto an asphalt parking lot, spent the night in the hospital and continued his vacation with only a few bruises and scrapes.

"It's absolutely unbelievable," Rick Hord, a spokesman for the Okaloosa County Sheriff's Department, said Monday.

A fall from four floors or higher is often fatal or results in very serious injury, Hord said.

Gregory Hayes Burton of Isola, Miss., was released from Destin Hospital Monday morning, just 24 hours after he fell seven stories from the condominium where his family was staying.

The child apparently climbed on top of a luggage cart or beach equipment to reach the top of a solid wall lining the balcony, Hord said.

Palm Beach going after rich deadbeats

PALM BEACH — City officials of this tony town may begin to clamp down on owners of ritzy cars who haven't paid their parking tickets.

The Palm Beach Town Council is expected to vote today on whether to begin cracking down on those who have not paid their parking tickets.

The value of the unpaid tickets total $44,319, and some of the 341 cars listed as having at least five overdue parking tickets include 11 Mercedes, nine BMWs, five Volvos, three Porsches, three Audis, eight Cadillacs, an Alfa Romeo, a Jaguar and a Maserati.

"Maybe they can't afford it because their cars are so expensive," quipped Councilwoman Hermine Wiener, who says she's fed up with deadbeat parkers. "The way I see it, the law is the law, and it should apply to everyone equally."

Wiener is proposing that police immobilize cars with three delinquent tickets instead of current five.

Miami firm's $55,250 leads lobbyists in entertainment spending

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A Miami firm reported $55,250 in entertainment costs for lobbying in the last fiscal year, spending 60 percent of that in the last six months which included the legislative session.

In a field where access to lawmakers is sought as much through wining and dining as with facts and figures, Robert M. Levy's public relations and political consulting firm was the spending leader.

"It's part of the process," Levy said. "Once you're at the table, the process requires you to continue buying food, for want of a better term, and it's a never-ending thing."

Every penny was well spent considering the 19 new Senators and 47 new House members in the Legislature this year, he said.

freshmen at election time, Levy's clients, from advertising agencies and shipyards to symphony orchestras, want their attention now.

All told, $797,581 was spent for the care and feeding of Florida lawmakers in the fiscal year that ended June 30, up $20,000 from the year before, lobbyists reported to the Joint Legislative Management Committee.

Following Levy among top spenders were

Jack and Keyna Cory, representing pari-mutuel gambling and tobacco interests, auto dealers and auto rentals, $23,050; Jon Shebel, president of Associated Industries of Florida, $21,467; and Bob Flora, representing dog racing interests, $15,519.

Flora accounted for about a third of the $45,722 spent by lobbyists for horse and dog tracks, jai-alai frontons, breeders and related interests as lawmakers considered revision of Florida's pari-mutuel code.

Tobacco lobbyists spent $10,430 so the industry beat back a 25-cent-a-pack cigarette tax increase sought by Gov. Lawton Chiles for prison construction.

Leading the pack were the Corys, spending $3,108 on behalf of Philip Morris; John French, spending $3,094 for Philip Morris; R.J. Reynolds lobbyist J. Larry Williams, spending $1,651; and Wilson Wright, who represents tobacco and candy retailers, spending $1,000.

Closing arguments begin in bitter court fight over girl

By JAMES MARTINEZ Associated Press Writer

SARASOTA — Kimberly Mays' biological mother stuck by her suspicions that the man who raised the girl was involved in a hospital baby switch, saying her daughter shouldn't be hurt by the conspiracy theories.

"Because I love my daughter, I would want her to know the truth — wherever the truth leads us," Regina Twigg testified Monday.

"There are so many unanswered questions that point to a criminal conspiracy," she added.

Mrs. Twigg's allegations are the main reason 14-year-old Kimberly wants to sever all ties to her birth parents and remain with Bob Mays, whom she has lived with since the switch at a Florida hospital in 1978.

Circuit Judge Stephen Dakan has set closing arguments for today. He is expected to issue a written decision within a few days on whether to grant Kimberly a wish or allow the Twiggs visitation.

On the stand Monday, Mrs. Twigg acknowledged repeating the conspiracy suspicions of Mays to the author of a book, on tabloid television and in letters to the editor she wrote to Kimberly's hometown newspaper. She said she signed other people's names to the letters because she didn't think they would be published otherwise.

Mrs. Twigg said she didn't think Kimberly should be hurt by her baby-swap conspiracy theories, and was asked by attorney David Denkin how she knows what's best for Kimberly.

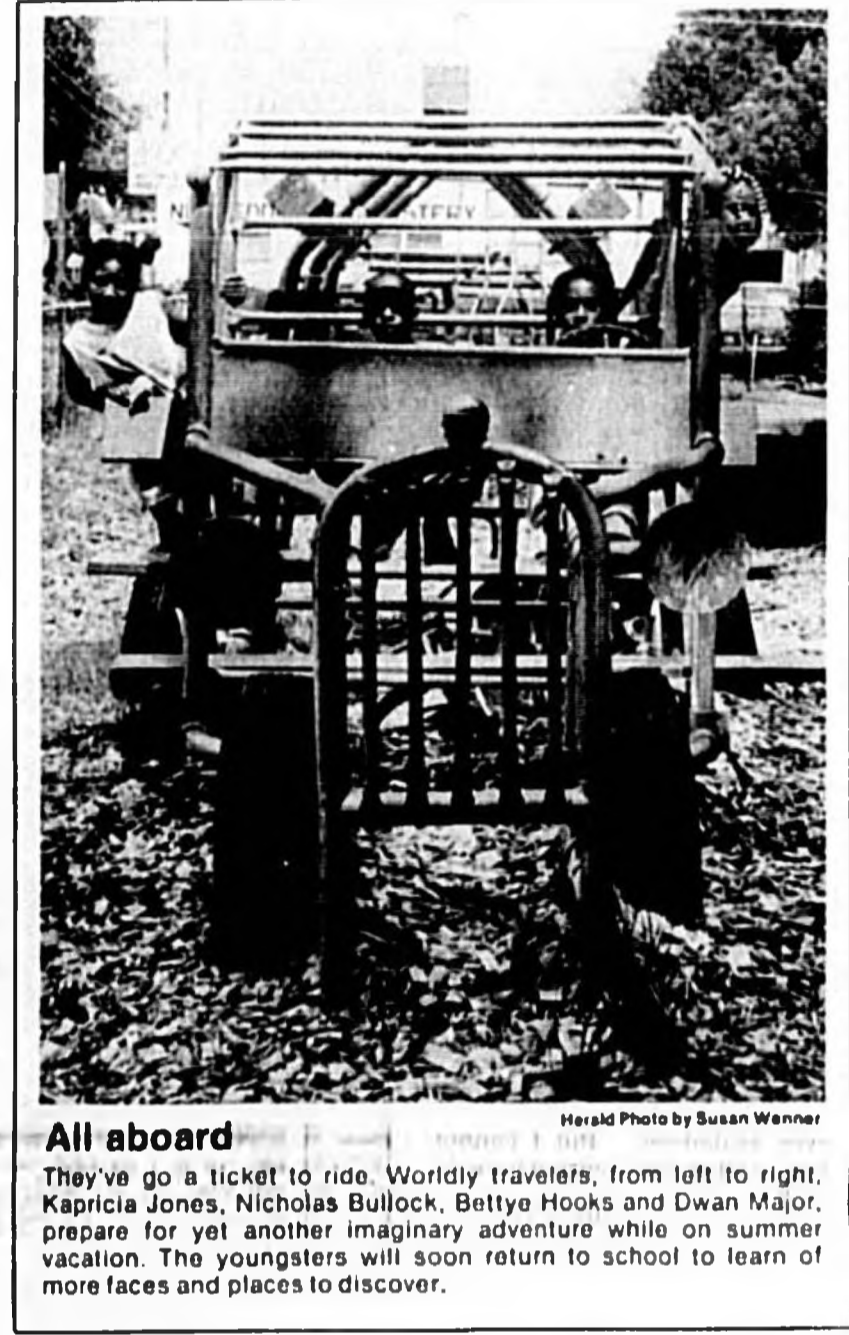

The woman, who has raised seven other children, replied: "My experience as a mother."

"Don't you think it's about time you started acting like a mother?" Denkin asked as he walked away amid objections from the judge and groans from the courtroom gallery.

So ended six days of testimony in the trial to decide how, or if, to divide the girl between two feuding families.

Whatever the judge's decision, the losing side is likely to appeal and may keep Kimberly's future in the courts until she is 18, when she can legally decide for herself what she wants.

Both families have deep pockets to keep the fight going since settling a lawsuit two years ago from Hardee Memorial Hospital in Wauchula where the switch is alleged to have occurred.

Doctors, firms cheated Medicare of millions

By Associated Press

MIAMI — Medicare was bilked of $14 million when a ring of doctors and health care companies recruited elderly people to submit phony billings for nutritional supplements and feeding tubes, federal prosecutors said.

"The recruiters would go to community centers and apartment buildings where large numbers of senior citizens were present to solicit new patients," the indictment unsealed Monday said. "The recruiters would tell the senior citizens they were eligible to receive 'milk' free of charge from the government."

The patients were then referred to five doctors — Emilio Valdes, Mario Fonseca, Juan Padron, Gilberto Escalante and Orestes Berrogo — who certified they could not take food orally.

The doctors in turn falsely certified — sometimes without even seeing patients — that they needed the tubes and special nutritional supplements, said Miami U.S. Attorney Roberto Martinez.

"The role of the doctor was essential to the fraud," he said. He added that the investigation is still open.

For 2½ years, the group allegedly paid recruiters up to $100 per person to find elderly people at community centers and retirement homes, then funnel them to the doctors.

For each patient, Medicare reimbursed the companies $400 a month for liquid nutritional supplements and $250 a month for tubal feeding kits, according to the indictment.

Twelve people, including two doctors, were named in the indictment. Three other doctors and three health company workers were charged separately and have agreed to plead guilty and cooperate in the case.

Four people have been declared fugitives, among them the key figure in the ring, Froilan Delgado and family members who helped him.

Four of the 18 defendants were arrested Monday, and 10 others were to turn themselves in today, federal authorities said.

Delgado allegedly used a series of companies called Morfa Healthcare Inc., L&M Healthcare Inc. and other names, to collect the fraudulent billings. He opened new companies to keep Medicare from becoming suspicious about his swelling client numbers.

In some instances, Delgado's companies would pay kickbacks to the doctors.

Cops punished for going too far with teen prostitutes

By The Associated Press

OAKLAND PARK, Fla. — Three vice-squad detectives showed "over zealousness" and now have been punished after they engaged in or watched sex acts with girls they were trying to arrest, the police chief said.

One officer was fired, another demoted and a third suspended briefly from the Oakland Park Police Department on Monday for overstepping the line during the videotaped sting.

"It was an unfortunate set of circumstances," Police Chief Edward Overman said. "There was a lack of control, perhaps over zealousness. But I cannot ignore what has occurred here."

The 23-minute tape shows one officer receiving oral sex and another officer fondled, all with their sergeant filming the scene from an adjacent room, hidden from the teens, he said.

"This was a prostitution operation, and the operation should have stopped well before any sexual contact was made," Overman said. "The message is that you're not supposed to get oral sex on the job."

The tape also shows the officers and girls talking about sexual fantasies and which man would go with which prostitute.

Officer Brian Rupp was fired, Sgt. Glenn Osani was demoted to patrolman and suspended for 10 days and Officer Forrest Santalucia was suspended for five days, Overman said.

Overman's report noted Rupp was warned more than a year ago about receiving oral sex during another prostitution sting.

All three can appeal their punishments, he said.

Shortly after the taping, the officers arrested the girls. The subsequent investigation led to the uncovering of a ring of Cooper City high school girls allegedly working as prostitutes for Thomas Hildebrand, who is jailed awaiting trial.

Arrest affidavits said the girls charged $150 an hour, giving Hildebrand 40 percent. One girl said she was making $3,000 a week. Hildebrand allegedly advertised through newspapers to get the girls clients, sometimes calling them "stewardesses looking for fun times."

Back to school in two weeks

With the exception of students in year-round schooling, it's back to school in just two weeks. Summertime vacations are ending and it's time to get back to educational thinking.

Florida Education Commissioner Betty Castor has already predicted, "This year is going to be different from every other year."

Here in Seminole County, many new programs will be offered for the first time. More advanced classroom equipment, especially in the field of electronics, is being put in place at several schools.

As an example, Lakeview Middle School students will find a new $135,000 computer lab this year.

New plans have been formulated to allow for more local control of schools. The plans were the result of cooperative efforts between teachers, parents, business leaders, and school officials at individual schools.

The first few days back in the classroom are often a traumatic experience. Some students are starting at a new school for the first time. Others are moving to new classrooms with new instructors. Parents, children and teachers will all be faced with learning new routines for the first few weeks.

Unfortunately, tempers may be pushed to extremes during this adjustment period. It is going to be difficult until each participant knows what to expect and where to be.

During these final two weeks, we suggest everyone think about these changes and the new situations they will encounter. Give some thought on learning to adjust, and accept things which may at first seem difficult to manage.

If mom, dad, teachers and students each realize it's going to take a cooperative effort to get back into the world of school-days, the success of the entire operation will be easier.

We hope everyone had a good summer, and extend best wishes for a successful and productive new school year.

More on commissioner

Ref. Mark Barfield's article "Suber's probe of Howell's residency pending"

I know that some people think I am giving the city commission hell all the time but I remember I read once, I can't remember where, but it applies here, that "I never gave anybody hell. I just told the truth and they thought it was hell."

As Howell stated in the Sanford Herald (July 23), "the governor's office has exonerated me of my residency problem." What I and the rest of the people of Sanford would like to know, did the governor exonerate you of the lie you told? To state that you believe you never did anything wrong only proves your ignorance. You're no decent parent either, for a decent parent would not lie, even for their own child. To me a liar is only one tier above being a thief, not much of a difference at all.

It gives one pause to speculate just how important is the truth in today's world? Sometimes it seems that the end objective is more important than telling the true facts, whether by individuals or governments. Lack of truthfulness is sometimes labeled "public relations" or "politics." If it is either of these, such professions are indeed poorly and unjustly used. The public is most responsive to the truth, the big truth. Savvy politicians have found that out and use it with joy as a weapon to slug their opponents. And as a weapon, few objects have an impact greater than the truth. I'd like to think that there were some redeeming qualities in this man, but damned if I can find any. If the governor isn't ethical enough to remove Mr. Howell, I guess it'll be up to us citizens to do the job.

So come January I propose we start a recall petition to remove this and the other deadwood from the political structure of Sanford. I've already had several calls from people who want to join in on this endeavor. If any other citizens wish to participate in this, you can come by my workplace and chat with me about it. Most of you know where I work by now, and you can rely on me to hold whatever you have to say in the strictest confidence. And that's the "truth!"

Death row inmate asks for dignity

David Edwin Mason wants to die. But foes of the death penalty are determined to deny the convicted killer his final request.

Mason has been on California's death row for nine years. The drifter from San Lorenzo committed the most unspeakable crimes. Preying on four elderly people, aged 71 to 83, robbing them of the little cash and jewelry they had in their possession, savagely beating them, then strangling them to death.

Mason has an appointment with the executioner on Aug. 24. He will be the first death row inmate in California history to voluntarily march into the gas chamber without exhausting all possible appeals.

In a prison interview this week, the convicted killer said that one of the reasons he is waiving further appeals is that he does not want a repeat of the spectacle that attended the April 1992 execution of Robert Alton Harris.

After a night of several appeals and delays, including one that came after Harris actually had been strapped into his gas chamber chair, the killer was finally — and mercifully — put to death.

Mason has another, even more important, reason for eschewing further appeals. In paying the forfeit for his horrible crimes, he feels that in some way he may find spiritual redemption. Voluntary acceptance of his punishment has given him a "pool of peace," he said.

But death penalty foes don't care about Mason's redemption, or whether he is at peace with himself. "We feel that the issue as a whole really goes beyond David's situation," said Pat Clark, a spokeswoman for Death Penalty Focus, which opposes capital punishment.

Clark's outfit organized a letter-writing campaign to try to persuade Mason to change his mind, inundating the killer with more than 200 pleading missives. Mason was not dissuaded.

He was similarly unswayed by the remonstrations of his anti-death penalty attorney, Charles Marson, who challenged the killer's decision to drop appeals of his execution. Marson wanted to base an appeal on the argument that Mason was mentally incompetent owing to abuse he suffered as a child.

But foes of the death penalty are determined to deny the convicted killer his final request.

"I don't want to be an accomplice to that," Mason said. He fired his lawyer.

Meanwhile, the American Civil Liberties Union insinuated itself into Mason's case, filing an unwanted appeal on his behalf on grounds that California's use of the gas chamber amounted to cruel and unusual punishment.

"I have desperately tried to keep ... the ACLU out of my life," the killer said.

What Mason seeks in death is the dignity he did not evince through much of his life. Thus, his harshest words in the weeks leading up to his execution are reserved not for those who would send him to his death, but for the industry of defense attorneys who gin up all manner of death penalty appeals to delay executions.

"I accept responsibility for my actions," Mason said. "I believe in the death penalty. I believe in the most serious penalty for the most serious crime."

Dangers of particle pollution

We need only switch on a light to see the value of energy that the world's reserves of fossil fuels provide. The steam engine to 747 era has been powered by coal, oil and natural gas.

Only recently have we had to account the costs the ever-quickening demand for those reserves entail. Acid rain and ground-level ozone pollution were terms unknown to previous generations. So was the probability of climate change fed by greenhouse gases.

To the account should now be added frank consideration of a cost hardly anyone is aware of outside a limited circle of scientists.

Research done over the last few years is concluding that the tiny particles left in the air after fossil fuel is burned cause lung damage and eventual death at far higher rates than previously imagined. The researchers are narrowing in on the likelihood that every year tens of thousands of deaths in this country, up to 60,000 according to one research estimate, are attributable to this form of pollution. If confirmed, these findings would make particle pollution the worst environmental killer known.

"It's hard for people to accept that this ubiquitous stuff, particles from fossil fuel combustion, is really an important contributor to disease and mortality," says Dr. C. Arden Pope of Brigham Young University and one of the foremost researchers in the field. "It's only been in the last five or six years that the flood of evidence is getting so large that it is hard to ignore."

That evidence includes a major study recently completed by Pope and a team of colleagues at the Harvard University School of Public Health. They monitored 8,111 people in six cities over a 14- to 16-year period. This exhaustive method allowed them sufficient information to confidently screen out deaths caused by such things as lung cancer induced by smoking.

Topeka, Kan., was one of the two cities in their study with the least polluted air. Stubenville, Ohio, had the most polluted air. Their study found that a person living in Stubenville had a 25 percent greater chance of dying due to the microscopic particles that are part of that polluted air than did a person living in Topeka.

Pope declines to extrapolate the study findings to a national rate of mortality. He does say, however, that all of the research taken together points to a range of mortality in which 3 to 10 percent of all deaths in the nation's urban areas are associated with air pollution. Citing the middle ground within that range, he asks, "Are we willing to accept that 6 or 7 percent of our urban mortality — possibly several tens of thousands of deaths annually — is due to air pollution? I don't think so."

Another disturbing result of this work is that there does not appear to be any level of breathable particles in polluted air below which there are no effects on the lungs.

This is a finding policy-makers simply do not want to hear. Regulations are usually based on tolerance levels, or thresholds below which it is assumed either no adverse health effects occur or there are only negligible risks. (Negligible risk is a vague way of saying the probable ill effects are so low that society will accept them as a necessary trade-off for the benefits derived from the thing being regulated. It is usually associated with a one-in-1-million chance of death.)

"There does not appear to be any threshold" below which fine particle pollution stops being associated with a decline in lung function, Pope says. "It is becoming quite apparent that we are going to have to decide what is acceptable, because we like to think that below some point nobody is at any risk and that is just clearly not the case."

The research shows, in short, a direct relationship between respiratory symptoms and breathable particle pollution. It shows up in increased rates of bronchitis, for example, particularly among children.

One lesson clearly to be drawn from this type of work is the urgency to reform how we as a society set as acceptable certain levels of toxins set loose on ourselves by our own actions.

The emphasis for all the toxic levels we have deemed to be acceptable in this country is probable cancer effects. These misnamed tolerances largely ignore non-cancer symptoms, like the lung diseases and deaths involved in Pope's work or other findings linking toxins to immune and nervous system damage, and disruption of the endocrine system that regulates hormones in the body.

"From a public health point of view, it is essential that we develop a profile of the range of a chemical's toxic potential and not continue to be driven by a cancer myopia," says Dr. John A. Moore, president of the Institute for Evaluating Health risks.

That, at least, would be a start to facing up to the dangers that we are only now learning some of these chemicals present.

If confirmed, these findings would make particle pollution the worst environmental killer known.

Confederate flag makes me shiver

During Ruth Bader Ginsburg's confirmation hearings, I thought Sen. Carol Moseley Braun was really reaching to find Sen. Orrin Hatch's comparison of the Dred Scott and Roe v. Wade decisions "too painful" to hear, being the descendant of a slave, I wondered about her powers of reason.

But a few days later when she slapped senators awake and stopped Congress from conferring prestige on the United Daughters of the Confederacy's Confederate flag insignia, I understood exactly what she meant. Since the advent of C-Span, I've heard a few great pleas on the Hill, but none better made nor more moving than Moseley Braun's.

"It is absolutely unacceptable to me and to millions of Americans, black or white, that we would put the imprimatur of the United States Senate on a symbol of this kind of idea," she alternately cried and shouted. For the first time that morning several of the senators snapped to and paid attention to the issue, which Sen. Jesse Helms was trying to sneak through by attaching it to the national service bill.

The "idea" Moseley Braun shouted about, of course, represents the acceptance of slavery. Paint it any way you like — and I've heard a variety of colorful renditions of history to downplay the part slavery played in the Civil War — the Confederate States of America believed in the right of one group of people to enslave another.

The South may have fought for the ideal of states' rights and the natural pride most of us have for our cultures and ways of life, but a linchpin of that culture was a belief in slavery to preserve its economy and social structure.

I am the daughter of a family that has lived in Alabama for several generations, the descendant of Confederate soldiers. I've always done a balancing act to reconcile my family's pride in our Confederate ancestors and my own discomfort with the hallowing of Confederate symbols. When I see a Confederate belt buckle, flag or license-plate holder, I always wonder what kind of message the owner is trying to convey: Pride in heritage? An affinity with rebels? A wish to once again own black people?

Some very vocal and demonstrative white supremacists are using the Confederate flag as their symbol today, and they don't make any bones about why they're using it. They want blacks back in Africa preferably, but failing that, at least out of the United States.

I've tried to be respectful of my family's reverence for Confederate forbears. Honorable people appreciate the sacrifice and work of our ancestors, and often the philosophies they held don't jibe with ours today. My nephew is a Civil War re-enactor, a member of a Confederate unit. He is fascinated with the stories of Confederate soldiers and their feelings about their homes and the battles they fought. Perhaps his study will someday help me to understand how those young men could fight so bravely, and with such honor and compassion for each other, for a way of life that included slavery.

But it will be a long time before I can look at a Confederate symbol and not have to suppress a shiver. Just the thought of slavery still affects me so physically that I can barely stand to watch a drama about the American slave experience. I kid people in my office who take soap operas so seriously, yet the television mini-series "Queen" upset me for days. I can't imagine anything worse: a lifetime spent without the basic right of determining one's own movements, never being sure that a spouse or child will not be sold away, and in many instances being beaten, raped and killed with no hope of recourse.

But it will be a long time before I can look at a Confederate symbol and not have to suppress a shiver.

Longwood commissioners pass police staffing provision 4-1

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The staffing provision for the city police department bumped along its rough road toward passage Monday night as Longwood City Commissioners passed it by a 4-1 vote on first reading.

It took less than 10 minutes for the commissioners to pass the amendment at the special meeting. However, Mayor Paul Lovestrand said pre-advertising the ordinance to meet legal time limits between first reading and final passage will make the ordinance vulnerable to challenge in court. Lovestrand opposes establishing the police department in the city charter and has voted against the measure at every juncture.

The ordinance is set for public hearing and a final vote at the commission's next regular meeting Aug. 16. If it passes, the question of putting the police department in the city charter will go to a referendum by voters in the November election. By establishing the department in the charter, it would take an unanimous vote of the five commission members to bring about change, as opposed to the three vote majority now required.

Voters defeated a referendum last year, supported by Lovestrand, to do away with the city police department and have the county sheriff handle law enforcement in Longwood. Commissioner Harvey Smerilson proposed the charter amendment to take the police department out of politics.

In July after the original police department in the charter ordinance was passed, Lovestrand pointed out that the federal manning guidelines used would require the hiring of 10 to 19 additional officers. The amendment passed Monday night deleted reference to the federal provision leaving staffing of the department in the hands of the city commission.

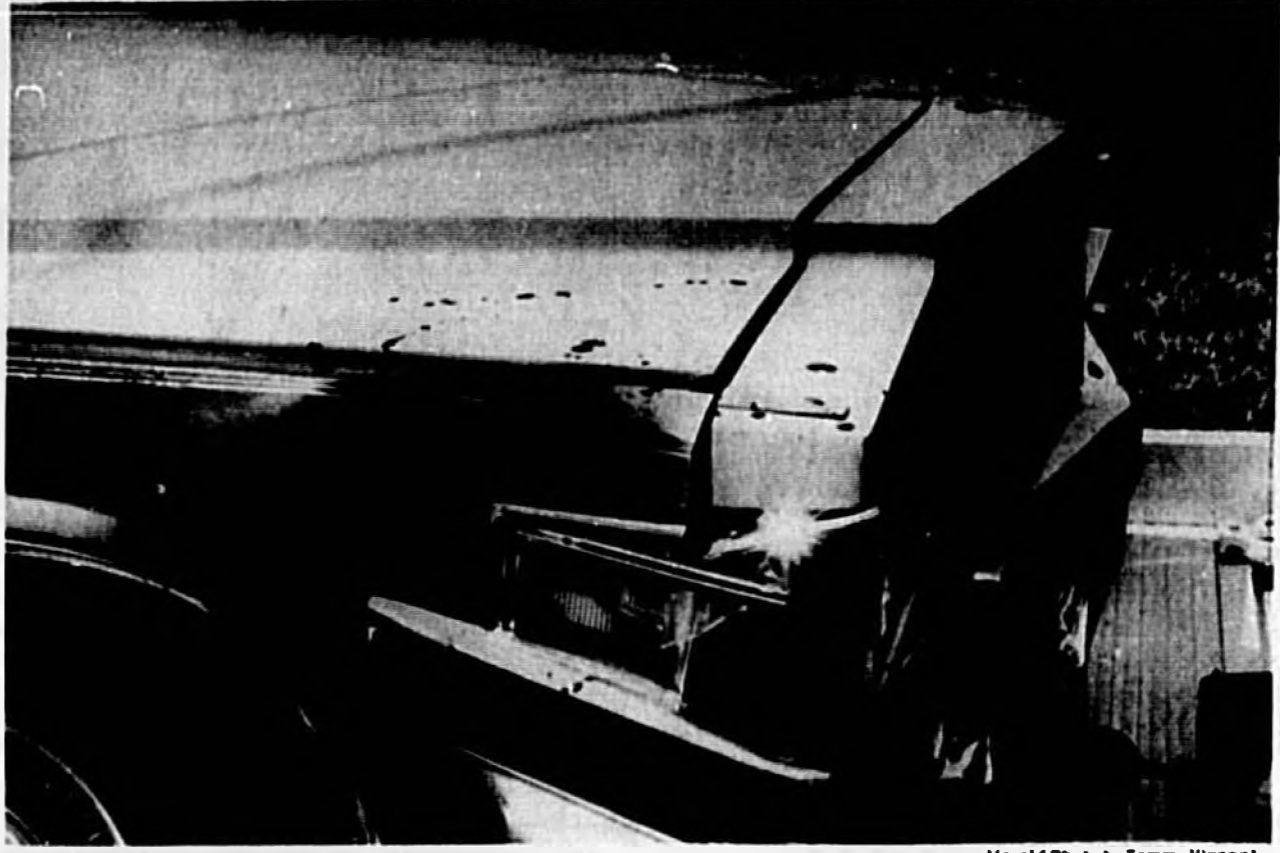

Commissioner Fred Pearl recommended reference to the federal guidelines be deleted. Backed by commissioners Smerilson and Rex Anderson, the motion passed. Commissioner Steve Miller voiced against the motion along with the mayor. Miller said he still objects to the minimum staffing provision in the ordinance of 2.2 officers per 1,000 population. Miller said the commission should be governed by budget considerations on staffing the department and not held to a required minimum.

Police Chief Greg Manning asked that the minimum manning level be kept at the current number of officers in the department. As the population increases, or circumstances warrant, the commission may add more officers. After the meeting, Pearl said he still plans to file a complaint for malfeasance against Lovestrand with the governor and attorney general for preventing him from voting via telephone on the amendment Aug. 2. Pearl was out of town at a medical convention during the regular meeting when the vote was scheduled. The majority of the commissioners agreed in late July to allow the telephone vote after city attorney Becky Vose said it was legal.

When the time came, Lovestrand ruled he would not recognize Pearl, who he claimed was absent. The mayor said the city has no provisions allowing someone not physically present at a meeting to vote. Lovestrand walked out of the meeting, leaving only three commissioners present and Pearl on the telephone. Miller said he might also leave if a vote was called. To avoid possible legal challenge to the vote, Vose recommended a special meeting for the first reading.

Pearl said the actions by "our clown mayor" only add to some peoples' view of Longwood as "Wrongwood." Pearl added he was really offended when Lovestrand "mocked me" during the telephone call. Lovestrand commented he wouldn't recognize the voice on the phone by saying, "how do I know that is Fred Pearl and not Rich Little?"

Pearl defended his attendance record at commission meetings, adding "This is my 16th wedding anniversary, and I'm here." "It is my job as mayor to follow the rules," Lovestrand responded. "I'm doing the best I can of enforcing the rules."

Fight

He continued, "When the two confronted each other out in the parking lot near the Family Dollar store, they got into a fight, and Washington was badly cut in the abdomen with the knife. Whitmire said one witness said Washington may have had an ice pick, but by late yesterday, police have been unable to determine if that was true.

Washington was airlifted to Grando Regional Medical Center where she underwent an operation yesterday afternoon. A hospital spokesman this morning said she was listed in stable condition.

Littles, also suffering from lacerations, was treated and released at HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford.

"Until our investigators have an opportunity to question the two women regarding the case," Whitmire said, "there won't be any official charges made."

City to donate three lots; woman may get new home

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — An offer to donate three parcels of land to the city may prove beneficial for one Sanford woman, Edna Burton may end up with a new home.

The three parcels of property are located near the intersection of West 9th Street and Holly Avenue. The owners had offered to donate the property to the city in exchange for a waiver of code enforcement fines which are in excess of $11,000.

The initial proposal was to consider turning the three parcels over to GoldenRule, which had indicated willingness to accept them if the city would waive the fines.

GoldenRule would then develop the lots for low income housing projects.

While the City Commission discussed the proposal during last night's meeting, no decision was made regarding acceptance.

City Manager Bill Simmons suggested, "I think, before we go into this, we may look into a possible use for one of the lots. If it were given to Habitat for Humanity, they might be able to build a house to help Edna Burton, a Sanford woman whose house has been damaged because of the Cloud Branch flooding problem."

The Cloud Branch water problem was brought about by the need to relocate major water flow areas in the western part of the city in order to help improve drainage and stormwater flow.

"If we do this," Simmons continued, "Habitat for Humanity could possibly provide Ms. Burton with a home she could afford. Then, we could transfer the other two lots to GoldenRule. I would recommend we consider looking into negotiating this deal on two separate arrangements."

"This is an excellent suggestion," said Commissioner A.A. McClanahan. "If you make arrangements for this woman to possibly get a new home, you can be assured I'll do whatever I can to help you."

The commission indicated approval of Simmons' suggestion and authorized the city check with Habitat for Humanity, GoldenRule and Edna Burton.

Simmons expects to be able to bring the matter up for formal action at possibly the next regular city commission meeting.

Health

He described yesterday's surgeries as "flawless" and reports that both patients are doing well today.

Though he missed the first lady's talk to "share in everyone's joy" in the inaugural surgeries, Vinson said he decided not to observe the surgeries in person, yielding space to the "professionals" who were on hand to see the work. He said he, instead, waited not-so-patiently for reports from the doctors who were using the hospital's heart unit for the first time.

He said he doesn't believe he gave up anything by choosing not to hear the first lady's address.

"Hillary's meetings have been marvelously covered by the media," he said. "I didn't feel I was going to hear anything different."

While hospital industry leaders are enthusiastic about much of the Clinton administration's emerging national health care plan and pledge to help achieve its major objectives, Vinson said he doesn't believe any specifics have been put in place yet. He said he is enthusiastic about some of her suggestions however.

She said the plan to be announced this fall will call for universal health insurance coverage, a cost-containment system that would sharply reduce hospital administrative expenses and more government guidance on regulations affecting the industry.

The program envisions a health security card for each American citizen and an emphasis on primary and preventive care.

But its success depends on slashing paperwork and government bureaucracy, she told the administrators yesterday.

"I think that reducing the amount of paperwork will take a lot of costs off of us," Vinson said. "I think that that will not allow our costs to escalate as quickly. I don't know that the cost of health care will go down, but it will not go up as fast if we are able to reduce the amount of paperwork."

Hospital mergers, community health networks and other cooperative ventures by the industry should not have to fear anti-trust laws, Clinton said, promising reform along those lines.

Some delegates expressed concern about financing the national program.

Felix Fraraccio, executive vice president of Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg, Va., said he worried about the plan to broaden the existing employer-worker insurance coverage system.

"Financing it on the backs of small business would exacerbate the problems," Fraraccio said. "Some small employers could go out of business with any added costs."

About 85 percent of working Americans have health insurance, and Clinton was asking for the remainder to come under the system.

"She has been shying away from how that will be financed,"

Vinson said.

He said that while HCA Central Florida had a larger percentage of Medicaid patients than a community hospital in Orlando, for example, the percentage of uninsured patients remained about the same here as nationally.

Clinton said the program had served well "but unfortunately hasn't fulfilled its promise" to insure all workers. Some employers have borne most of the burden, and there is a need to bring in all employers and workers, she said.

Almost 40 million people have no health-care access, Clinton added.

The fact that not everyone is insured results in $25 Tylenols and outrageous costs for such things as latex gloves, Mrs. Clinton said, praising Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles for pointing out some of the same things.

Chiles, who accompanied the first lady, is to be congratulated for pushing a statewide plan to provide health care for everyone, she said. This would make the Florida program "a model for the country."

Vinson said he is anxious to see the Clinton administration's proposals in September, but he is even more excited about the new open heart surgery unit here.

"I'm real proud of what we started yesterday," he said.

Information from the Associated Press was contained in this report.

would be billed and if they can't reimburse the county, a lien would be placed on the property title to recoup the expenses, with interest, when the property is sold.

Now, the CEB imposes fines until the owner removes the eyesore, said Hardin. Such a process may take a year or more where a property owner has a large junk pile, such as an operating junk yard. Although the process takes time, it is often successful, said Hardin.

Hardin said he was concerned the county may accrue a large amount of debris removal debt that may never be fully refunded.

Although Hardin said there is no wide-scale nuisance problem in non-residential areas of the county, there are several locations where owners have allowed their property to become unsightly. The proposal would require those owners to remove junk vehicles, appliances, debris or vegetation in excess of 24 inches high.

College aid program losing millions to fraud, documents show

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A Russian immigrant who came to the United States in 1988 was surprised when government investigators asked him about a Pell grant he was receiving to attend an orthodox Jewish school in Brooklyn, N.Y.

The school, Toldos Yakov Yosef Seminary, received $4,700 in the immigrant's name from 1990 through 1992. But he told investigators he had never attended classes there, according to an Education Department enforcement report.

The case is just one of many examples described in government documents or by investigators of fraud that is costing the nation's largest cash aid program for higher education millions of dollars.

Education Department officials acknowledge the Pell program has lacked oversight.

"There is fraud and abuse in the program that we have to get on top of," said David Longanecker, assistant secretary for post-secondary education.

The allegations have spawned a federal grand jury investigation of at least three dozen orthodox Jewish schools in the New York City area, sources said.

And Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., says a subcommittee he chairs has uncovered evidence that some students in the program have been given kickbacks — paid either to attend a school or to allow their names to be used on Pell grant applications. The panel plans to present the evidence at a hearing in September.

"There's no real monitoring of the federal funds," said Kenneth Gribetz, the district attorney in Rockland County, N.Y., who handled one of the cases now under federal investigation.

"It's like Santa Claus came to town and just gave out money," Gribetz said. "A good program for needy people could be killed by inadequate supervision."

Last year, the government distributed $6.7 billion in Pell grants to assist some 3.8 million of America's neediest students — an average of $1,763 each. Some 6,300 schools nationwide are eligible to participate in the program, named for Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I.

The grants are intended to help needy students attend college or trade schools to improve their job prospects.

Concerned about the findings, Longanecker said the department is already setting up mechanisms to screen schools more carefully before they are permitted into the Pell program.

And he promised tougher penalties. "If people transgress against the system, they will pay for that," Longanecker said.

Five sources familiar with the New York case say dozens of Jewish schools are under scrutiny and that a federal grand jury is hearing evidence. "If they decide to indict, there will be a lot of indictments," said one law enforcement official, speaking only on condition of anonymity.

The sources could not legally identify the schools because of the grand jury probe.

Bobbi White, left, and Vicki Jernigan are waiting at Sanford Paint and Body to service you and your car.

Car Care With A Woman's Flair

Once again that familiar white steam begins pouring out from beneath your hood and forms a cloud above your car. You pull off to the side of the road and pop the hood to examine the cause of this steam cloud - one which is definitely lacking a silver lining. Just be thankful that you're a man and you can take care of yourself in these situations. Yep - there's the engine, the carburetor, the transmission, and...more steam. Where could it all be coming from? You see a truck pull up behind your car. The driver walks over and begins talking to you from behind the hood. "Maybe I can help you with that," the voice says. You peer out from under the hood with the hope that this person can miraculously fix your car. The first thing you see is long, dark blonde hair. A woman!?! A woman can help me fix my car? Is this a joke? Well, if it is then the punchline is...Vicki, new owner of Sanford Paint and Body, will help you with all of your car care needs whether they be mechanical problems, body damage, or towing needs.

However, this is no laughing matter. Fred Bussey is now the president and has turned daily operations over to Vicki Jernigan, Vice President, and Bobbi White, new office manager. They are two women who are serious about caring for your car's every need. Sanford Paint and Body does more than just paint the body work. It's your "one stop service shop" which also provides mechanical repairs and 24 hour emergency towing. They know that the most important thing is to have your car fixed as quickly and efficiently as possible.

"It looks like you need a tow truck," the female voice says. Sanford Paint and Body's experienced tow truck operators are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Whether you want your car towed to your house, Sanford Paint and Body, or another shop, the drivers will haul it short or long distances without damaging your car. Towing service is available for both accident vehicles and those with mechanical problems.

"Why don't we get your car over to Sanford Paint and Body to have our mechanic take a look at it?" the voice suggests. Sanford Paint and Body can expertly care for mechanical problems on your vehicles - foreign or domestic, car or truck. Why run around town from one specialist to another when you can have the professionals at Sanford Paint and Body care for all your car's needs under one roof?

"Not only do you have some engine trouble, but it looks like your paint is beginning to chip and peel," the woman continues. Sanford Paint and Body can fix this for you without any extra aggravation. They know that the last thing you need after the frustration of an accident is to worry with the body shop and insurance company. Sanford Paint and Body makes it easy on you by communicating directly with your insurance company on all of the necessary details from body damage to car rental. By ordering your parts in advance, Sanford Paint and Body has your car only for the time required to fix it. They believe that your car was meant to be driven and go places rather than wasting time sitting and waiting on their lot. Whether you were involved in a fender bender or a major accident, the body and paint shop will replace needed parts and feather and blend the factory matched paint to make repairs unnoticeable. Sanford Paint and Body won't forget those finishing touches such as trim work, molding, pin stripes, and detailing.

"This car is a 1969 Mustang, isn't it? Have you ever thought of having it restored?" she inquires. Your car doesn't have to be wrecked to take advantage of the experienced auto body staff at Sanford Paint and Body. Bring your older or vintage car in for a free estimate to see how they can make your 20 years old car look 20 years new.

Although some things may have changed at Sanford Paint and Body, you can still get professional service Monday through Friday from 8:00 to 5:00 or by calling 322-8844 or 322-8909. Towing assistance can be obtained by calling 322-8930.

Pope's first visit to Mexico since reforms

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY — The last two times that Pope John Paul II visited Mexico, he was on the wrong side of the country's tough anti-clerical laws. But he won't have to worry this time — most of the laws no longer exist.

This visit, beginning Wednesday, will be the pope's first completely legal trip to Mexico. President Carlos Salinas de Gortari has pushed through reforms that have the church and state to what may be their most amiable point since shortly after Mexican independence from Spain in 1821.

"The pope (will) ... enjoy the result of a new situation that in some ways he encouraged with his first visit in 1979," said Roberto Blancarte, head of the independent Center for the Study of Religion.

The pope made his first trip here as a private citizen because Mexico did not recognize the church. He violated Mexico's constitution on that visit and on a second in 1990 by wearing religious vestments in public.

Yet the exuberant greetings he received on those trips dramatized the passionate Catholic faith that coexisted with Mexico's fiercely anti-clerical politics.

Roughly 90 percent of its 86 million people are baptized Catholics. For many, the Indian-featured Virgin of Guadalupe is as much a symbol of Mexico as the nation's flag.

Church spokesman Ramon Godinez said the papal visit "could help strengthen the faith" of Mexicans and help them "value and appreciate" Indian cultures.

The pope is due to spend two days in the Yucatan Peninsula, making up for a visit he had to cancel last year for health reasons. The purpose is to meet with Indian groups as part of observance of last year's 500th anniversary of Roman Catholic evangelism in the New World.

Federal and local officials have spent an estimated $7 million preparing for the visit — paving and widening streets in the state capital of Merida and preparing a 212-acre venue for an open-air Mass in the outlying town of Xoclan.

Salinas exchanged ambassadors with the Vatican this year and has pushed through constitutional amendments that stripped away most anti-church clauses, such as those that forbade the church to own property or operate schools.

The laws were the legacy of a bloody church-state struggle that was at the heart of Mexican politics from the early 19th century into the 1930s.

The church was virtually an arm of the Spanish crown during most of Mexico's three centuries as a colony. Catholic leaders supported almost every reactionary cause in the century that followed independence.

Senior church officials backed the hated dictator Augustin Iturbide, who seized power after independence and proclaimed himself emperor. They fought Mexico's most popular hero, Benito Juarez, who oversaw laws that broke up the church's vast land holdings.

They blessed the foreign invaders who briefly placed Maximilian of Austria on a Mexican throne. And they grew friendly with dictator Porfirio Diaz, who was overthrown by the 1910 revolution that created the current political system.

The new government reacted with religious persecution, hounding priests, seizing churches and harassing believers. Catholic radicals responded with a guerrilla campaign that exploded into the Cristero wars of 1926-29, when 80,000 people died.

Since 1988, John Paul has beatified more than two dozen of the church's martyrs in that struggle. They include Father Miguel Pro, who was executed on the orders of anti-clerical President Plutarco Elias Calles on trumped-up charges of trying to assassinate a former president.

In the aftermath of the Cristero war, Mexican politicians encouraged the growth of Protestant churches as a counterbalance to the Catholics.

Some Catholic officials in Yucatan have expressed hopes that the papal visit will help stem the growth of Protestant groups, which have been especially strong among Indian groups in southern Mexico.

Hollywood's alleged madam denies charges

By LINDA DEUTSCH
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES — Heidi Fleiss swept into court like a movie star to deny charges she ran a high-priced call-girl ring that catered to Hollywood's elite.

Fleiss smiled Monday as she stepped out of a black BMW and into the glare of TV cameras and flashbulbs. Wearing sunglasses, a thigh-high, taupe-colored dress and spiked heels, she shouldered her way through the throng.

Inside, the 27-year-old pleaded innocent to pandering and cocaine charges. The judge refused a prosecution request to raise her $100,000 bail.

If convicted, she could get 12 years in prison. Later, in an interview at her Beverly Hills home, the alleged Hollywood madam told the Los Angeles Times that she had been "terrified" by the media crush.

"I was, like, almost trampled to death," she said. "Someone was pulling my hair. I was panicked. I thought someone was going to pull my clothes off."

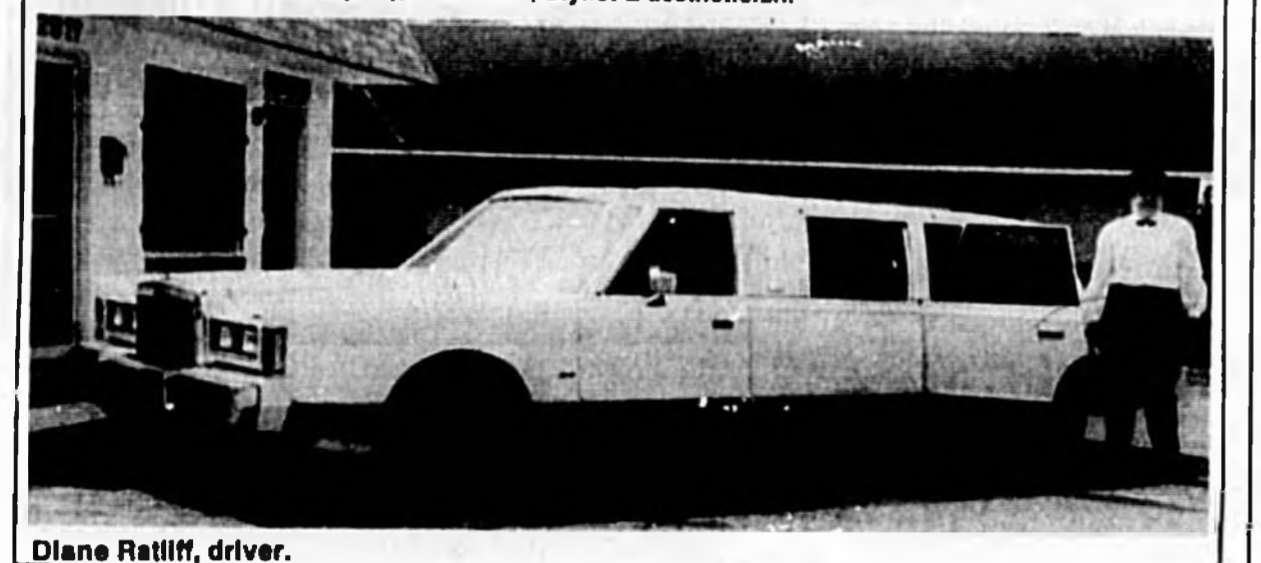

She saw no mystery, however, in the interest about her case. "Sex sells," she said, smiling. Fleiss is accused of providing prostitutes to Hollywood stars and studio executives for a reported $1,500 per encounter.

Her arrest in June has started a Hollywood guessing game about exactly who is on her list of alleged clients. Fleiss hasn't named names, and police refuse to disclose the contents of her address book.

Police said the alleged clients won't face charges because a law enforcement officer must witness the violation for it to be prosecuted.

Budget cutbacks expose U.S. to exotic germs

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — A new highly virulent cholera. Killer bacteria in hamburgers. A rodent-borne virus that turns Southwesterners' lungs to soup.

Scientists say it's only a matter of time before another exotic germ or new strain of bacterium attacks, but budget cutbacks have sapped their ability to protect Americans from such emerging diseases.

"This is something you can't ignore," said Dr. Gail Cassell, a microbiologist who advises the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. "We are in for danger."

The CDC functions as America's medical sleuths, determining the reasons for sudden outbreaks and finding ways to prevent disease. With known diseases such as flu, lead poisoning and, recently, even AIDS, its system works well.

But there's no system to warn about emerging diseases, like the new cholera strain that has killed 5,000 people in India this year or the hantavirus that has taken at least 18 lives in the American Southwest since late May.

And Americans' vulnerability is heightened because the scientists who fight new, rare diseases are vanishing in the face of budget constraints and natural attrition, and there's no money for replacements.

■ We're going to be at increased risk for these things getting out of hand. Imagine what it would have meant to the U.S. if AIDS had been kept in Africa, for example. ■

—Dr. C.J. Peters, one of the world's handful of experts on hantavirus

"It's like letting your insurance policy lapse," said Dr. Robert Shope of Yale University School of Medicine. "The danger's always there, but our ability to react to it is not so great."

"We're going to be at increased risk for these things getting out of hand," said the CDC's Dr. C.J. Peters, one of the world's handful of experts on hantavirus. "Imagine what it would have meant to the U.S. if AIDS had been kept in Africa, for example."

AIDS was first detected in gay men in San Francisco in 1981, but doctors now know it infected people in Africa as early as the 1960s. They believe it originated in African monkeys and somehow made the jump to humans.

New diseases can evolve from animals, or mutate or migrate from other countries. The challenge is preventing or containing them.

But research into most infectious diseases is underfunded until the germ causes an outbreak, said Cassell, of the University of Alabama at Birmingham. "That was the lesson of AIDS — to not be caught unprepared," she said. "We haven't learned it."

The CDC does expect from Congress a record $2.2 billion for 1994, to spend on everything from breast cancer to lead poisoning.

But for all infectious diseases except AIDS, which has an independent line of funding, the House has appropriated $40.3 million — less than half the $92 million requested and no increase from this year. The Senate has yet to set a figure.

Over the last decade, the CDC has lost about 20 percent of its personnel and its budget for infectious diseases other than AIDS. And last year, the Pentagon ended most of its research into rare diseases that threaten to migrate to the United States.

Only AIDS, tuberculosis and vaccine research — President Clinton's priorities — are getting increases at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases next year, said financial manager Steven Berkowitz.

The reasons: More and more diseases must vie for a share of the same pool, and research costs far outstrip inflation, even when funds are increased, he said.

The CDC says three U.S. outbreaks, in rapid succession, depleted its funds this year:

—E. coli, a little-understood, food-borne bacteria that got into hamburgers in a Pacific Northwest restaurant chain in January, killing two children and sickening 500 other people.

—Cryptosporidium, an intestinal parasite that sneaked into Milwaukee's water, striking thousands in April.

—A new strain of rodent-borne hantavirus that has caused severe respiratory illness in the Southwest since May.

"We could not have done two of these at the same time," Dr. William Roper warned on his last day as CDC director.

And if Peters and another Army hantavirus expert hadn't landed at the CDC when the military slashed its research, it would have taken longer to uncover hantavirus as the killer in the Southwest, the CDC says.

The 1994 budget doesn't yet reflect it, but Congress is listening.

GOP ranks split on health care

By KAREN BALL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Republican are suffering an ideological rift over how best to respond to President Clinton's coming health-care proposal, leaving them without a clear alternative to rally behind.

House Republican leaders and some in the Senate are pushing for a plan that takes only incremental steps on health care — rather than a major overhaul — and thus would limit its impact on the economy.

This would keep government mostly out of the reform process, but create health care "IRA accounts" aimed at reining in costs.

But other, moderate Republicans are backing variations of what Clinton's likely to offer, such as a plan that weaves in a basic package of benefits, universal coverage and cost controls, without the expected payroll tax bite.

"You're never going to have 100 percent on any plan," said Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., defending the Republican split. "The Democrats are all over the lot on this, too."

There's also a bit of a fuss over timing. One camp wants to wait until after Clinton's package comes out in late September, and keep the negative focus on the White House package for several weeks before launching their own.

That way, Democrats can't spend time shooting down the Republican plan, this theory goes.

"The Democrats need to tend to their own knitting, rather than taking time out to disparage the Republican plan," said Rep. Dick Armey, R-Texas.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas predicted Congress would not enact health care reform this year because there is not enough time left for hearings and debate on such a major undertaking.

"Right now nobody has the votes," he said in Topeka, Kan., on Monday. "The president doesn't have the votes. Obviously, Republicans don't have the votes. Democrats are divided, Republicans are divided, and this is an issue that cries out for bipartisanship. Whether we can put it together, I don't know."

Some Republicans are pressing to launch a pre-emptive strike on the White House and show leadership on the issue.

Sens. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, John Danforth of Missouri and Conrad Burns of Montana introduced a health-care plan early this year. So far it's the only one out there with bipartisan support. Democratic Reps. Dan Glickman of Kansas and Dave McCurdy of Oklahoma have signed up.

Yet other Republicans haven't been as quick to jump aboard, perhaps because the plan includes many of the elements the White House package is likely to focus on. Some Republicans want a stark contrast with the White House to make health care a "wedge" issue for the two political parties.

Their plan would set up a basic package of benefits that all insurance carriers would have to sell, and all Americans would have to carry. There would be annual limits in premiums to hold down costs. To expand coverage for the uninsured, the government would provide vouchers to poor people to purchase the policies. Medicaid would be scrapped and folded into the new system.

It would be paid for with current Medicaid expenditures; higher taxes for people who buy insurance more generous than the basic package of benefits; and taking up to 1 percent of the current Social Security payroll tax, which would raise $56 billion if the full percent were needed.

Other key Republican proposals:

—Chafee is drafting a package that forces states to set up group purchasing organizations — just like the Clinton plan is expected to do, on the theory that alliances would have the bargaining clout to bring down costs.

Covering the uninsured hasn't been worked out, though that is Chafee's goal, and the financing mechanism is still up in the air too.

—More conservative Republicans, such as Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, are drafting a plan that would set up medical accounts, much like Individual Retirement Accounts, from which Americans would have to pay their own medical costs, up to a certain point. For instance, if a person's account had $3,000 in it, the first $3,000 in medical costs in any given year would come from the person's pocket.

Because they would keep what was left at the end of the year, people might be more inclined to exercise more restraint about going to the doctor. Consumers, knowing insurance will pick up the tab, don't think about it now, Gramm said.

"If I bought groceries the way I bought health care, I'd eat a lot differently and so would my dog," Gramm said.

AROUND THE STATE

Weiss lifts Marlins over Cubs

MIAMI — Walt Weiss' run-scoring single snapped a seventh-inning tie Monday night as the Florida Marlins beat the Chicago Cubs 3-2.

Beno Santiago started the inning with a double off starter Frank Castillo (5-7). Greg Briley sacrificed Santiago to third and Weiss slapped a single by a drawn-in infield for the go-ahead run.

The Cubs threatened in the eighth inning with back-to-back singles by Rey Sanchez and Mark Grace. Rich Rodriguez, who relieved winner Ryan Bowen (7-11) to start the inning, got Derrick May to bounce into a double play. Matt Turner came in and struck out Steve Buechele to end the inning.

Bryan Harvey pitched a scoreless ninth to earn his 35th save in 38 opportunities.

Bucs escape Denver unscathed

TAMPA — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers emerged from their preseason opener without any serious injuries and began the task Monday of correcting mistakes made against the Denver Broncos.

"That will be our focus for this week," coach Sam Wyche said.

"But that's not to say that a lot of things went wrong. In fact, after reviewing the video, I can tell you that a lot of things went right. One thing that jumped out at you was how physical we were."

The Bucs threw five interceptions and lost one fumble during last Saturday's 23-7 exhibition loss to the Broncos. However, the play of young players like rookie strong safety John Lynch overshadowed the miscues, Wyche said.

Dolphins take stand

DAVIE — The Miami Dolphins' contract offer to unsigned running back Bobby Humphrey will be reduced unless he accepts a deal by Tuesday, general manager Eddie Jones said Monday.

Miami's offer is an estimated $650,000 for one season. Humphrey wants nearly twice that.

Humphrey's agent, Hycall Brooks, said his client was attending a church convention in Cleveland and had not yet learned that the Dolphins planned to reduce their offer. Brooks declined to speculate on Humphrey's reaction.

"I would just say he has proven to be a level-headed young man," Brooks said.

Humphrey, who was accidentally shot and arrested on drug charges during a troubled offseason, is the Dolphins' lone unsigned player.

Birmingham shuts out Suns

JACKSONVILLE — Kevin Belcher hit a 2-run homer, and Steve Adkins and Jell Carter combined on a five-hit shut out to lead Birmingham to a 6-0 Southern League victory over Jacksonville on Monday night.

Adkins (1-2) got the win, while Carter picked up his first save. Kevin Coffman (1-3) took the loss for the Suns.

AROUND THE NATION

Mice ride 8-run rally

From Staff Reports

WINTER SPRINGS — One thing about slowpitch softball is that it really isn't over until it's over.

Paddy McGee's Mice proved that once again Monday night in the Seminole County Women's Class C Softball League at Central Winds Park.

Trailing the Mistis 5-2 when they came to bat in the bottom of the fifth inning, the Mice sent 13 hitters to the plate in one inning to score eight runs and take a 10-5 lead, then hung on for a 10-8 victory.

Paddy McGee's comeback didn't get started until the first two batters were retired in the bottom of the fifth.

Jackie Janowiak began the rally with a single. That was followed by four consecutive walks to Lori Lingo, Phyllis Baynes, Lisa Berg, and Denise Levinson. Janowiak scoring on Berg's walk and Lingo coming in on Levinson's free pass.

Tammy Chesser then singled to score Baynes with the tying run before April Stoner singled home Berg and Levinson to put the Mice ahead. On the play, Chesser advanced to third as Stoner took second on the throw.

Terri Mann increased the Mice's lead to 9-5 with a double that scored Chesser and Stoner. Heidi Greene then singled Mann to third before Theresa Walburger singled to score Mann.

Stoner led the Paddy McGee attack by going 3-for-4 with three RBI and one run scored. Mann contributed a double, single, two RBI, and one run. Berg added two singles, a run scored, and an RBI.

Walburger had two singles and one RBI. Janowiak chipped in with two singles and a run scored. Levinson singled, scored a run, and had two RBI. Chesser had a single, one run, and an RBI. Lingo and Baynes both singled and scored two runs. Greene hit a single.

Now 4-1 with two weeks left in the season, Paddy McGee's Mice will play league-leading Lewis Drywall (7-1) at 7:30 p.m. next Monday night at Central Winds Park.

Offerdahl, associates pull couple from sinking car

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

DAVIE — The way John Offerdahl spent his day off made life in the NFL suddenly seem serene.

"I'm glad I'm back playing football," he said Monday.

The Miami Dolphins' linebacker helped save two people from a car that crashed into a murky pond Sunday. Back at training camp 18 hours later, Offerdahl remained clearly shaken by the ordeal.

"It's a great burden of responsibility to have a life in your hands," the five-time Pro Bowl linebacker said.

Offerdahl and four companions rescued Julius and Ruth Roth, both 86, after their car was sideswiped by another car and plunged into a pond west of Boynton Beach.

Mrs. Roth was in critical condition Monday night at a Delray Beach hospital. Her husband was treated for injuries and discharged.

Offerdahl and several business associates were standing in front of his new bagel shop when they heard the crash at an intersection 150 yards away. By the time they reached the Roths' car, it was 25 feet from the edge of the pond.

"We all dove in," Offerdahl said. "A couple of the guys took care of the man in the back seat, but the woman was in the front seat, her door was locked, and she was under water. It was pretty tense."

Poor visibility in the pond complicated the rescue effort. Offerdahl tried to pull Mrs. Roth out through an open window on the driver's side, but he couldn't.

"The car was sinking fast, and every moment counted," Offerdahl said. "I realized the probability of this woman dying."

Another rescuer, Joe Hanley, finally managed to free Mrs. Roth through the rear door on the passenger's side. She was unconscious when a nurse and another bystander stopped and performed cardio-pulmonary resuscitation. Pete Burch and Joe Davis, business associates of Offerdahl, were credited with pulling out Julius Roth.

"All of us were totally exhausted," Offerdahl said. "I'm a pretty good swimmer, and I've never been so tired in my life. It's not like the movies, where you can hold your breath for an hour and go down 40 feet."

Mrs. Roth suffered fractures in her arms and leg and was breathing Monday with the aid of a respirator, a spokeswoman at Delray Community Hospital said.

"By the time that lady was saved, you couldn't see the car. She had to be under water at least four minutes," Offerdahl said. "By the grace of God, she was able to live. It was a miracle."

At the movies: 'The Fugitive'

By PATRICIA BIBBY Associated Press Writer

If you can suspend your disbelief, "The Fugitive" is a raucous, rampaging adventure that's certain to thrill. If your eye gets caught on details, however, you'll be annoyed by plot twists that range from unlikely to unbelievable.

For the most part, director Andrew Davis ("Under Siege") knits a fabulous story based on the 1960s television show in which Dr. Richard Kimble is wrongly convicted for the murder of his wife.

When the cops come, they find Kimble's story of the one-armed intruder implausible. And they probably find Ford's stony countenance odd for a man who has just lost his wife.

While being hauled off to prison, several convicts attempt to escape. But the bus they are in goes out of control after the driver is shot.

Kimble manages to escape and begins his odyssey to find his wife's killer. Simultaneously,

Dressed to kill

No, Bonnie the Beagle is not a killer watch dog in disguise. She dressed in her Sunday best for a stroll in the park with special friends and the dog of her dreams.

Gerard (Tommy Lee Jones) is dispatched to corral the escaped inmates. With his minions panting breathlessly behind, Gerard has mountain-sized determination and just as much grit.

The pair's cat-and-mouse hunt forms the bulk of the first half of the film and makes for compelling viewing. The second half gets bogged down as Kimble sleuths his wife's killer amid a complex conspiracy involving a huge pharmaceutical company.

The biggest irritation, however, is that so many details and events strain credibility. The most offensive is when Kimble takes what appears to be a 15-story plunge over a dam into a pool of water.

Gerard, meanwhile, gets a big break when a kid arrested in a drug bust identifies Kimble as the man who has rented their basement apartment. A few such coincidences are forgivable, but the onslaught here comes off as contrived.

Ford gives his standard jaw-clenched, knitted-brow performance. There's not much subtlety or nuance here but he's servicable as the driven doctor. Jones, on the other hand, is nothing less than superb. His wry, callous attitude imbues every frame.

Produced by Arnold Kopelson, the screenplay was by Jeb Stuart and David Twohy. The Warner Bros. film is rated PG-13.

Adventurer soars with the eagles by glider in Alps

By TERRIL JONES
Associated Press Writer

PARIS — When it comes to flying like an eagle, perhaps no human comes closer than Didier Favre.

He's spending the summer soaring atop the Alps by hang glider, swooping past majestic peaks, alighting for the night, taking off the next day to complete a 750-mile odyssey.

The 46-year-old Swiss adventurer took off June 20 from the hills of southern France near Monaco. After two bouts with bad weather that cost him 12 days, he is now winging around the Swiss Alps.

"There was a lot of rain in the beginning, and lots of mtstrals (northerly winds) that slowed me down," Favre said by telephone from an inn in Zinal, 7,874 feet high near the Matterhorn. "But morale is excellent."

Favre, who lives outside Geneva, started several small companies before devoting himself full time to hang-glidering and environmental causes. He is making his second attempt at what he calls "the mad crossing of the Alps."

Last year he had to abandon his trek after a few weeks because of a "stupid accident" in which he broke his arm. This time though, the hard part's over and he hopes to complete the remaining 440 miles and land in Ljubljana, Slovenia, by Aug. 15.

His path is taking him from France over Italy, across the length of Switzerland, over the Tyrolean regions of Italy and Austria, to the Slovenian capital.

"All that is thanks to solar energy, the thermal currents," Favre said.

Bad weather forced Favre to stay in the French alpine town of Les Arcs for four days, then grounded him for eight days in Valle d'Aosta in Italy. Twice he tried to leave Valle d'Aosta, but each time had to turn back after floating about for a bit.

Twice also he has had to climb nearly 3,300 feet — with all his gear — to reach take-off points. He never relies on motor vehicles.

"People don't understand how a man can do such a thing without an engine," said Favre, who has 15 years' hang-glidering experience. "But up there you're just like a bird. You're free, you don't fear anything."

Favre carries two or three days' worth of food amid his 44 pounds of gear, but usually stays with shepherd herds in the mountain meadows where he lands. Sometimes he camps outdoors, using a sleeping bag and small, portable stove.

His flight instruments are a compass, map, anemometer to measure wind, and a variometer to show speed of altitude change, which helps find ascending thermal currents. "Ninety percent of people think that you take off, fly around for 10 minutes and land," Favre says. "I'm showing that you can truly fly."

He's usually aloft for four hours or so, averaging 12 mph, but sometimes reaching 37 mph.

Favre never takes off before 1 p.m., waiting for the air to heat up. The best flying time is 2 p.m. to 6 p.m., he says, as a setting sun doesn't provide enough thermal currents.

"In midafternoon, the southern flanks of mountains are best because of exposure to the sun, and later in the afternoon the western flanks are better," he says. "Watch eagles fly sometime — you'll see they use the same principle. It's very subtle, but extraordinary. I try to rise to the west, then descend in as straight a line as possible."

Solar power could solve the world's energy needs, Favre says, "but there are always political problems. We need to change our esprit, and that's why I'm doing this."

He's getting some sponsorship from Energie 2000, a Swiss organization promoting solar energy, although the cost of his trip is only around $2,500.

"And not a single franc for gasoline!" Favre said.

He's already mentally filing his next flight plans, in the mountains of Chile and Nepal.

"Here I am, flying over glaciers at 4,000 meters (12,000 feet)," he said.

"Every day I fly with eagles, falcons and bearded vultures. And every day I just think I'm the luckiest man in the world."

High protein level may be dangerous

DEAR DR. GOTT: My daughter was diagnosed as having very high levels of urinary protein during her last pregnancy. Her doctors told her not to worry until after the baby was born. However, her son is now 3 and the levels remain high. Will her kidneys be ruined by high protein levels?

DEAR READER: Pregnant women often exhibit high blood pressure and protein in the urine. Called "pre-eclampsia," the condition usually disappears after delivery, although some authorities believe that this condition is a "marker" for true hypertension later in life. Most obstetricians continue to monitor blood and urine tests to identify kidney damage for several months after the baby's birth if the mother was pre-eclamptic.

The fact that your daughter still has protein in her urine more than three years later is troublesome. I'd really worry that she may have an underlying kidney disease. Is she hypertensive, too?

You see, it's not the protein that damages the kidneys; the reverse is true. Kidneys conserve protein. If the substance is leaking out, most physicians would suspect a hidden, underlying renal disorder, such as vascular disease, "hypertensive kidney," or nephritis (kidney inflammation).

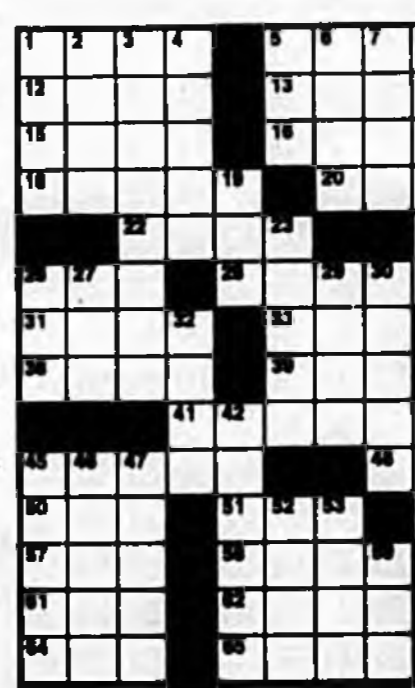

In my view, your daughter should be examined by an internist, a specialist in diagnosis. She needs further blood and urine testing. If she also has high blood pressure, she needs treatment, such as anti-hypertensive drugs. Should the internist fail to find the cause of your daughter's urinary protein, he'll likely refer her to a nephrologist, a kidney specialist.

Your daughter should not delay in seeking further medical care. If she has a kidney disorder that is progressive, each passing week increases the potential for further, irreversible damage.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Kidneys." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Gerald and Stuart Tredinnick are twins who have been very successful in bridge recently. Today's deal occurred while they were winning the English international trials last year.

The popular contract was six hearts by North. Every declarer felt quietly confident — until East discarded on the first round of trumps.

However, one player made a slam — Gerald Tredinnick. In the twins' auction, one diamond was Precision, showing at least two diamonds and denying a five-card major, a six-card club suit and a balanced hand. East's two no-trump showed at least 5-5 in the minors. Four no-trump was "rolling," asking for more information.

South won trick one with the club king, discarding a diamond from the dummy. Next came the spade king; West unwisely won with the ace. South won the diamond switch with dummy's ace, crossed to hand with a spade to the queen and cashed the club ace, discarding dummy's last diamond.

Tredinnick knew that West, an aggressive bidder, would have made a one-spade overcall with a reasonable five-card suit. Judging, therefore, that East was signaling honestly with three spades to go with his known 10 minor-suit cards, South led his heart and finessed dummy's nine.

Well done, but East's bid of two no-trump was stupid. One opponent had opened the bidding and the other had made a strong jump shift. How could he win this auction? For once, justice was done.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 11, 1993

In the year ahead someone who really likes you will work behind the scenes on your behalf to help improve your lot in life. This is a person who knows how to get things done.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your powerful sex appeal to members of the opposite gender might turn your head today and involve you in a forbidden situation fraught with complications. Be disciplined. Leo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A well intentioned friend might offer you some financial advice today that could prove detrimental if put to use. Get a second opinion before doing anything.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Unfortunately you might not fully capitalize on your opportunities today, owing to inclinations to take them for granted. Don't look a gift horse in the mouth.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Lady Luck will be willing to give you a helping hand today, provided you don't leave all the heavy lifting up to her. If you do, she might suddenly let you fend for yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're able to competently sort out problems for others today as long as there isn't any additional outside interference. If the uninvited get into the act, matters could go downhill.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone who let you down previously might make you some lavish promises today. Remember your past history with this individual and take him/her with a grain of salt.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your stick-to-itiveness, as well as your attention span might be operating at low levels today. This could cause you to lose interest in your endeavors before finishing them.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be patient regarding something that must be done for you by another and not yourself. Your chart indicates things will work out, but they must be given adequate time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be generous and giving towards others today, but don't go to extremes to make your point. A thoughtful gesture is more effective than a grossly extravagant one.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your friends like you for what you are, so the use of affectations is unnecessary today. Nothing will be achieved by attempting to gild the lily.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Financial conditions might be a bit "iffy" today, especially in areas where you're tempted to take gambles or financial risks. Be cautious and traditional.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Usually your practical outlook enables you to see things for what they are. Today, however, you may kid yourself into believing certain situations aren't as bad as they seem.
