HEAD OF ORANGE COUNTY SCHOOLS RAPS 'PETTING'

Superintendent Continues His Fight To Weed Out 'Loafers'

ORLANDO, Feb. 3.—Reports of "too many petting parties" which were described as centering around Lakes Ivanhoe and Underhill, as well as complaints of "too many student party games and prom outfits" were added yesterday to previously made charges of "loafing in class rooms" on the part of Orlando high school students by Judson B. Walker, Orange county superintendent of public instruction.

The superintendent described the class room situation as serious and explained that school authorities would be within their rights in "weeding out" high school students who do not come up to reasonable standards. He asserted that parents were responsible for what their children do after school hours. He pointed out that he had never had any reference to "loafers" in grade schools, for the state compulsory education law requires that children under 16 attend school regularly and no provision is made for exempting those who do not work.

Admitting that much time was lost in social activities after school hours, Superintendent Walker called upon parents to assist in curbing "loafing tendencies" of their children, whether in high school or not. He admitted that many complaints have reached his office from parents who objected to "too many party games, prom outfits, and fancy clothes" which, they asserted, were necessary or said to be necessary in connection with high school activities.

"I know it is a fact," the superintendent said, "that many high school students go home empty handed—they don't take any books with them—and some do not apparently study three minutes a day, either at school or at home."

He pointed out that school authorities could not be held responsible for alleged "petting parties" among high school students, but admitted there was reason to believe they were common among students here. He said he had been told that many students spent moonlight nights in parked cars in the vicinity of Lakes Ivanhoe and Underhill as well as elsewhere about the city. He asserted that this did not help class room work and declared that he was ready to cooperate with parents in bringing about an improvement in conditions generally.

The superintendent said that the depression had not helped in bringing about a more serious outlook on life among the youth of the city. "The youngsters, look out and see those who have graduated looking for jobs, often without finding any, and they seem to think twice about working hard in preparation for what awaits them after graduation," he declared. He denied that young people generally have become more studious since the so-called "laxage" has become more or less of a memory.

Superintendent Walker's plan is to lighten burdens of taxpayers by reducing the number of students in high school. He explained that the cost per student is much higher there than in the grade schools. He said he believed that when a few lazy students had been ousted that other students would improve their work and become more serious as far as their studies are concerned. He suggested that a charge might be made for tuition in cases where students failed in a course and were obliged to repeat it. This, he believes, would promote harder work on the part of students. He suggested adopting some of the systems of colleges, including dismissing students who do not pass a certain percentage of courses.

The chancellor interrupted a working schedule which has left him very few hours of rest to outline for the coming year the broad principles upon which he hopes to govern the country until 1937.

HOUSE PASSES ONE BILLION SUPPLY BILL

(The fact of what he termed government indifference.

At the top of the list of witnesses was Charles A. Miller, president of the R. F. C., and bringing up the rear were two individuals whom Senator Brookhart presented to the committee as "examples of the forgotten man."

Representative Fish, Republican, New York, urged the adoption of his resolution to have the attorney general investigate the failure of corporations which have received R. F. C. loans and asserted: "There is some crookedness going on."

In a statement made a part of the record, he asserted that Rudolf S. Hecht, of New Orleans, "should be compelled to resign as chairman of the advisory committee" of the R. F. C. because of some loans to the Union Indemnity Company, of New Orleans, which recently went into receivership. He was a director of the company which Fish said $370,000 was loaned a few days before the receivership.

The witnesses before the Senate committee presented a variety of views on the adequacy of past and present relief, but were unanimous in expressing the opinion that more assistance will be needed in the future.

During the day, the Reconstruction Corporation authorized loans totalling more than $27,000,000, including emergency relief allotments aggregating $1,022,980 to Indiana, Tennessee, and West Virginia. The remainder was largely for self-liquidating construction projects in various sections.

Miller warned that the present $300,000,000 fund for relief loans in states would last only until June and said that one state is already within six weeks of exhausting its $45,000,000 quota. Although he did not name the state, committee members understood he referred to Illinois, which has borrowed about $38,000,000.

Miller opposed the proposal in the pending bill by Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, to throw the vast resources of the corporation open in direct relief, saying that a limitation was necessary to prevent the breakdown of local efforts.

Lewis appeared before the committee to charge that certain members of the Reconstruction board "tried to find every way relief could be prevented." He said they found provisions of the law preventing aid to the needy, but could always find justification for rendering aid to the influenza and powerful.

There seems to be a complete blindness, deafness, stupidity and inexcusable obstinacy on the part of those administering the government," Lewis said, "to those millions outside the doors that may

HITLER APPEALS FOR FOUR YEARS TO PROVE WORTH

Says "Crucify Me" If Policies Don't Succeed By That Time

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler, who took over the reins of government four days ago, yesterday renewed his plea for four years of power, challenging his countrymen to "crucify me or do anything else to me" if his policies have not succeeded in that time.

While he was talking to foreign newspaper correspondents the police, by his order, were raiding communist meeting places and the homes of suspected communists, arresting anyone implicated in the serious disturbances which have been continuing since the Hitler government was formed.

The chancellor interrupted a working schedule which has left him very few hours of rest to outline for the coming year the broad principles upon which he hopes to govern the country until 1937.

"The other side had things all their own way for 14 years, and look at the results," he told his visitors. "Give us four years, the legal period of a Reichstag, and then let the country sit in judgment. Let them crucify me or do anything else they want to me if at the end of four years we have not succeeded."

When he had shaken hands with the correspondents the chancellor began quietly:

"I hope the people of the world realize what is going on in Germany. There can be no middle course here. Either the red flag of bolshevism will be hoisted soon or Germany will find herself again."

"I want to appeal in the press of the world not to form premature judgments on the events that are taking place. Please judge me in a spirit of revolt."

Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, wealthy editor of a Washington newspaper, told the committee of a personal survey of conditions among children in the nation's capital, saying she found "children who were cold to the touch because there was no heat and hungry because there was no food."

Germany's new government by its deeds, and take its deeds as a whole, not as isolated incidents."

"I have been represented," he went on, "as making bloodthirsty, firebrand speeches against foreign countries, and now the world seems surprised at my moderation."

"Gentlemen, I never made a firebrand speech. My speeches of even 10 or 12 years ago testify to that. Anybody who knows war as I know it knows what a tremendous waste of strength it is."

"We can only guess what the results of another war would be, and nobody wants peace more than I do—more than the German people do."

He spoke with tremendous earnestness.

"But we must insist on equality with other nations and on our rightful place in the world. I cannot think that any patriot in any country would do any differently than we are doing for our country. Naturally my first concern is Germany."

Yesterday's raids on communist meeting places resulted in numerous arrests, but "disorderly" clashes between communists and national socialists. This resulted in a general order forbidding all open-air meetings of the communist party.

In the absence of any official declaration of the government's program with regard to outlawing the communists from the next Reichstag, which will be elected on Mar. 5, some speculation was made.

Up to now the nationalist, whose leader, Alfred Hugenberg, is a member of the cabinet, have opposed such action because it would give the Nazis too much power in parliament. Hugenberg's party prefers to keep the communists to counterbalance the Nazis.

BRITAIN TO SEEK FRIENDLY SPIRIT FOR DISCUSSIONS

Desirous Of Creating Mutual Trust, Better Understanding

LONDON, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Great Britain's fundamental aim in entering the Washington debts discussion will be to create a friendly atmosphere and a mutual trust leading to a widespread American understanding of the world nature of the problem which, in the British view, calls for a rapid final settlement by a drastic scaling down.

This is the authoritative opinion of highest government quarters today and with the cabinet strongly united on the war debts policy, plans will be completed rapidly for the Washington negotiations as soon as Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador to the United States, arrives in England Monday.

Prime Minister MacDonald and the group considering the debts negotiations are awaiting to receive a report from him on the present debt situation in America. After that there will be a full cabinet meeting to choose the personnel of the British delegation and to decide upon procedure.

Great Britain regards the provisional loan agreement which virtually ended reparations as the anchor for British economic recovery and the British delegation will try to gain some similar settlement of war debts at Washington.

The first task will be to win American public opinion and the ambassador will be assigned the task of inaugurating upon his return to Washington a move for a popular American understanding of the British war debts policy. It is stated here that Great Britain hopes to dispel the prevalent idea in the United States that the war debts question is merely one of money owed by Great Britain to the United States which, if not fully discharged, will cause the burden to fall upon the shoulders of the American taxpayer.

The British view is as Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, stated Wednesday to American correspondents, that the present situation is as bad for the creditor as for the debtor, and that the Anglo-American debt is now between the United States and Great Britain in relation to each other's present economic position.

SOLUTION FOR FARMER'S ILLS IN SOUTH GIVEN

Knowledge of Marketing, Grading, Standardizing Seen Key

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—A better knowledge of marketing, including the grading and standardizing of his products, is the key to increased profits for the southern farmer, according to studies recently made by state units of the Southeastern Council.

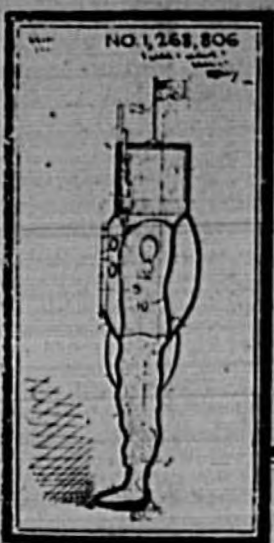

The Alabama Industrial Development Board learned that the farmer was handicapped because of his lack of information as to the city man's wants—essential details as to grading and standardization. The University of Tennessee found the usual complaint of the farmer to be: "We can't sell our stuff; there is no market." Other units reported like findings.

The situation has existed where the southern food distributor would not buy locally because he could not be assured of a steady supply of produce packed in proper form. The result has been that the section has been running up an unfavorable trade balance of $1,000,000 each year by buying its food and feeds from other parts of the country. The farmer has been impoverished, rendering him unable to buy manufactured products, thus helping to throw industrial employees out of work.

Industrial leaders of the South, realizing that their troubles increase as do those of the farmer, have taken the lead in helping the farmer market his products, diversify his crops and stop planting most of his acreage in cotton. In this way, it is hoped to bridge the gap between agriculture and industry.

An example of team work with the farmer is furnished by the Alabama Industrial Board working with various industries, the state department of agriculture and the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. A few years ago no southern-grown hay was sold in Birmingham and other cities because farmers would not grade their output according to standard and it could not be used by dairymen and others with certain knowledge as to its feeding qualities. The message was carried to the farmer and farm agents showed him how to grade his hay, with the result that every ton of No. 1 Johnson Grass Hay grown in Alabama can now be sold in Birmingham.

A short five years ago there was no market for Alabama-made butter and dairy products. A survey showed Alabama imported practically all its cheese, more than 90 per cent of its butter. During this time a number of condensaries have been established in the state and more than 40,000 pounds of milk and cream are sold in Birmingham daily.

Having looked into the hay and dairy business, the industrial board next asked itself a series of questions: "Why were Alabama farmers not raising chickens and eggs?" "Why were Vermont turkeys and 'Long Island ducks' flooding the state when conditions were ideal for their production?" "Why was Alabama beer 'inferior' to the Western product?"

In answer to these questions it was found that Alabama eggs were as fine and as perfectly stored as other eggs, provided the hens were fed properly balanced rations. It was discovered that proper refrigeration would produce beef as fine as any imported from the West. It was learned that tur-

INFLATION SEEN AS NO CURE FOR BUSINESS SLUMP

Stress Is Placed On Sound Governmental Fiscal Policy

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Although business is in an obvious stalemate and some impetus is needed to start action, inflation is certainly not a sound method for bringing the dazed result, the Guaranty Trust Company of New York contends in a review in the Guaranty Survey, published recently. Ample credit resources are already available, it is pointed out, and contrary to some reports, the majority of banks is willing and desirous to advance funds for sound business expansion.

"Parasitic and quick remedies of all sorts are being offered on the market," the survey continues. "The most frequent suggestion is that resort to some form of inflation is necessary to bring revival. For accomplishing this there are many different proposals, equally unsound and unworkable, but the human inclination is to turn to some false remedy or treatment of its economic ills reaches its climax after all long periods of depression, and apparently history is repeating itself at present. In the minds of many students the parade of panaceas may well mark the climax of the depression.

"Many suggestions for the creation of more credit and more currency are being offered without any apparent study or grasp of the situation as these proposals might apply to it. There is more credit available today than ever before in our history and the outstanding currency is at its high point, nearly a billion dollars more than at the peak of our boom period in 1929. The 1 per cent deduction is that what we need is not more credit or more currency, but greater confidence in the use of the credit and currency available. So the crux of the situation is the restoration of confidence and the crucial question is: how may that be stimulated?

"Again the answer seems somewhat obvious. If Congress would concern itself less with specious remedies and more with fundamental corrective measures, confidence would soon be revived. Established government credit through a balanced budget and a sound basis of taxes would mark the beginning of a return of confidence. Business-like settlement of the debt problem, proper adjustment of tariffs, relief from the ills and abuses of our bankruptcy laws, and revision of the anti-trust laws to permit control of production, are among the positive suggestions that would have a constructive effect.

"Negatively, assurance on the part of Congress that the public credit would be maintained, that the tax base would be broadened, that governmental expenditures would be cut to the bone, that no more unsound and wasteful experiments for agricultural aid would be undertaken, that no attempt would be made to tamper with our currency or credit machinery would be permitted, and that there would be no drastic and destructive revision of our banking system—this assurance would have a vast effect in relieving the public mind of current anxieties and preparing it for the next step forward, which will come when a promise of sound legislation and wise guidance along the path of recovery is provided."

FACULTY GIVES NEWS UPON NEW SOCIAL THEORY

Professors At Southern College Skeptical Of Technocracy

LAKELAND, Feb. 3.—Southern college faculty members, like everybody else, are reluctant to express a final opinion until more facts have been produced.

President Ludd M. Spivey and three other faculty members were asked what they thought about this radical plan that has been the center of America's attention during the last few weeks. None was enthusiastic about making a statement so soon. They were finally persuaded to write out at least a few of their thoughts.

Besides Dr. Spivey, the statements are from Dr. W. E. McIlroy, head of the department of economics; Dr. W. E. DeMott, head of the department of social sciences; and Dr. C. C. Corbett, head of the department of history and political science.

sufficiently advanced to substitute the engineer for the politician; we still like to be duped.

"The technocratic idea has monopolized our attention because, in such a period of economic stress, we desperately and thoughtlessly seize anything that has the appearance of being a solution."

Dr. McIlroy: "Thus far we have not been able to measure all kinds of energy, nor have we a satisfactory ratio for the exchange of that energy."

"Our economic problem is one of distribution, not of production. There is no surplus, provided people have the purchasing power. Our distributive system is antiquated. Human wants are indefinitely expandable, and so far as we know, production can never outrun human wants."

"In our distributive system we use too much human energy. Our merchandising system, for example, is slow and bunglesome."

"The technocrats have started a very critical examination of our whole economic system. Out of it may evolve some workable plan. It will probably not be the 40 kilowatt hour as a substitute for our dollar."

"The interest that the vulgar and impressionistic statements of the technocrats have aroused is evidence of the uncertainty that people have of the future."

Dr. DeMott: "Judging by recent events, it appears that technocrats are not born to rule, but to serve. A rule of technocrats might indicate a lower plane of living and thinking than that upon which we have been moving."

the novel. However, the conservative, who prefer the stable and organized ways of society, will not be persuaded readily to change the certain for the problemal, the tried for the untried. Whether the visionary and unmaterial principle of technocracy will serve mankind better remains to be seen."

Dr. Coe: "No sane man is yet so desperate as to scrap all human experience until we have tried to readjust distribution, train men to the use of leisure time, and yet keep them sufficiently occupied to feel themselves secure in life, liberty and property, and thankful that more perfect machinery spares them the grinding toll of their ancestors."

"Mr. Scott has voiced my criticism perfectly in his explanation in The Living Age for December, under the title, 'Technocracy Speaks,' when he says, 'Technocracy proposes no solution, it merely poses the problem raised by the technological introduction of energy factors in a modern industrial mechanism.'"

South Carolina Is Seeking Method To Correct Finances

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 3.—Faced with a $13,000,000 deficit, the largest in its history, complicated by court action over unpaid salaries, South Carolina confidently believes that some way will be found to adjust its tangled finances and place the state on a sound basis.

Approximately $10,000,000 of the $13,000,000 in obligations coming due in or before April, most of them in February. In the payment of highway notes and state deficit bonds, which will be rendered doubly difficult on account of the fact that 1932 revenues show a decrease of more than $1,000,000 from the figures on which the general appropriation bill of approximately $9,400,000 was based.

Foreseeing this last June, the state finance committee instituted a 15 per cent slash in general appropriation expenditures. However, even this measure failed to provide sufficient funds for paying all state salaries for the last two months of the year.

Declaring he regarded the remaining money he has on hand as a "trust fund," State Treasurer Julian N. Scarborough declined to pay warrants issued for December and 90 per cent of November salaries, in order that funds might be available for meeting the interest on a $3,400,000 loan obtained to pay 25 per cent of state teachers' salaries and to discharge other pressing obligations.

OUT OF BUSINESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—The Atlantic City National Bank did not open for business. At close of business Dec. 31 the bank published total resources of $14,300,740.36.

Growers Urged Not To Hold Up Boarding Cron

During the meeting each member of the committee was urged to say that the continuance of "whole-hearted co-operation from all growers" is a "most gratifying" phase of the present situation. Opinion was expressed that growers are rapidly understanding the situation and are realizing that there is a large crop growing this season, and that the country in its present financial condition will not be able to purchase over half of this crop, if that much.

A delegation of celery growers, headed by Martin Stanko, of Slavia, received a report from Mason & Potter, certified public accountants, which showed that total costs of operating the city of Orlando have declined from $1,240,648.68 in 1929 to $706,877.24 last year. The figures include bond interest, sinking fund payments, capital expenditures and all city expenses.

Commissioners learned that on Dec. 31, 1932, Orlando's assets exceeded liabilities by $9,968,789.79. The report showed total bonded debt in Orlando is $6,173,699. $3,090,500 is in the bond refunding program, however, which leaves bonds not being refunded in the amount of $2,483,100, according to the report.

The city's bank balance as of Dec. 31, 1932 was given as $65,154.74 in the general fund. It was shown that in Jan. 1932 when the present administration came into office there was a "deficit" in the form of an overdraft amounting to $36,189.18.

The report carried a recommendation that personal taxes should be collected by the city.

"Buy American, Florida, Local Movement" Urged

TITUSVILLE, Feb. 3.—The "Buy American-Buy Florida-Buy Locally" movement which originated in American Legion circles, got under way locally Wednesday night when a committee was appointed by Commander W. O. B. Chittenden to formulate definite plans for a local campaign. Members of the committee are: L. C. Stewart, chairman, J. W. Hanson and C. H. Bethra.

The general plan of the campaign is to stress the necessity of buying American made goods, in preference to foreign made goods, to influence local people to purchase Florida products in preference to products of other states, and to purchase locally in preference to patronizing business firms located in other cities, particularly mail order houses.

In practically every community in the state where a Legion Post is located, this campaign will be carried out. It is being urged as a Legion activity by the commander of the "BUY AMERICAN" of the Florida department. The Detroit, Mich., Post was the originator of the movement, and it was said at the meeting that it had had a widespread beneficial effect in Michigan and in other states where it had been attempted.

Mr. Stewart stated that he would call a meeting of the committee soon and that more definite plans would be formulated for carrying on the campaign. He said that the condition the movement is aimed at is serious and that the local Post should get busy at once.
