

LAMONT SEES BUILDING BOOM AS RATES DROP

Predicts Unusual Construction As Easier Money Conditions Are Felt All Over

WASHINGTON, Mar. 17.—(AP)—Secretary Lamont said today that the lower interest rates on money throughout the country should permit an important speeding up during the next few months in new construction which he said already had been stimulated by the "remarkable cooperation" from the various states.

The commerce secretary asserted the high interest rates during the past year had been one of the major factors in slowing down construction and added that while the rate had dropped in New York, the easier money conditions have not yet reached throughout the country.

This condition could not be worked out in 24 hours, Mr. Lamont said, but the situation is gradually becoming and construction during the spring should be greatly aided by the easier money.

The secretary pointed out that the states and governments have been aided by the government wherever possible.

The state of Ohio was cited by Mr. Lamont as one of the states which has gone far in its efforts to effect the depression in full view of the market.

Arch Gatherings Held In Protest Of Soviet Persecution

NEW YORK, Mar. 17.—(AP)—Thousands of persons of all religions gathered in cathedrals, churches, synagogues and meeting halls yesterday to pray for the end of religious persecution in Russia.

When speakers at the protest services were denouncing attacks on religion by the Soviet government, 12,000 held a counter demonstration in Bronxville, N. Y., where the Russian Catholic, Protestant, Jewish and other churches and synagogues were held in a service to the Soviet action was worse than the Roman persecution of early Christians and was only comparable to the torments of the French revolution.

Bishop William T. Manning, Protestant Episcopal, led special services for all Protestant denominations in the cathedral of St. John the Divine. In addition to the cathedral were the Rev. Dr. William H. Miller, secretary of the Greater New York Federation of Churches, the Rev. Dr. Raymond L. Ferman, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church, and the Rev. Henry Howard, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Bishop Manning said it was the only way to bring about the relief from the lives of the whole Russian people.

ARGUMENTS IN BANDITS' TRIAL TO END TODAY

Prosecution Asks For Extreme Penalty In Case Of Slayings Of Jacksonville "Cop"

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Mar. 17.—(AP)—The state, in arguments before the jury today, demanded the death penalty for Watson, Moultrie and Roland Lalone, on trial for the murder of Detective W. D. Smith in a gun battle last January.

On the other hand, the defense argued that the state had not proved that any "premeditated murder" had been committed, necessary for a verdict for first degree murder, and asked the jury to acquit the men.

Francis L. Poor, assistant defense counsel, and Samuel B. Wilson, assistant prosecutor, made the morning arguments, and this afternoon, J. L. Farris, chief defense attorney, and William A. Hallows, chief prosecutor, will close the speckling before the jury.

Poor, in opening, said that he had no feeling against the Jacksonville police department. He said that he and J. L. Farris had not taken the case of the two men because they had any ill feeling to the police.

"We took the case because every man is entitled to the consideration we are giving these two defendants," The Constitution gives them the right to defend," Poor said.

The defense is not faced with the necessity of proving the defendants innocent, Poor said. "The burden rests on the state to prove them guilty beyond any doubt, the burden of every reasonable doubt," (Continued On Page Three)

Sanford Celery Is Pleasing To Mayor Of "Gateway" City

A crate of Sanford celery was sent to Mayor John T. Allen, Jr., of Jacksonville, last week by his long-time friend J. H. Macfarlane, manager of the Sanford Celery Co. of this city. In this morning's Florida Times-Union, it was made known that the Jacksonville mayor received the gift and spoke highly of its quality.

The following article appeared in the North Florida city this morning:

"Sanford celery is the product which has made that Florida city nationally famous, has gained another booster."

Mayor John T. Allen, Jr., Saturday joined the thousands with whom Sanford celery the most delicious they have ever tasted.

"The mayor has known for some time that celery from that point is 'mighty tasty' but not until Saturday did he fully appreciate its finer qualities. Joe Macfarlane, manager of a Sanford celery, and a long-time friend of Mayor Allen, sent the Jacksonville mayor a crate of attractive celery to celebrate the anniversary of the city's founding."

The crate was opened immediately after it was delivered at the mayor's house. The celery was crisp and delicious. The celery was a product of the Sanford Celery Co. of this city.

The mayor handed out several bunches to friends who called at the office, and then divided the rest with his secretary, Mrs. George T. Allen, who heartily noted the mayor's endorsement of the product."

Vilma Banky To Make Debut In "Talkies" In Milane Film Tonight

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announces the all-talking picture debut of Vilma Banky tonight at the Milane Theatre in "A Lady To Love," adapted from an original story by Sidney Howard. The supporting cast includes Robert Ames, who played opposite Gloria Swanson in "The Trespasser." Edward G. Robinson, Lloyd Ingraham, George Davis, Gum Chin, Richard Carle, Anderson Lawler and Henry Armetta.

Although Miss Banky gave movie audiences a sample of her speaking voice in the brief first sequence of her last picture, "This Is Heaven," her new production is the first in which her voice may be heard throughout the entire length of a picture. The new production comes at a particularly auspicious moment when general curiosity concerning the caliber of the voice of foreign stars seems to be at its height.

The story is that of a fifty-year-old Italian vinegrower who has achieved financial success but longs for the comradeship of an attractive wife. When he falls in love at sight with the blonde waitress of a San Francisco restaurant he writes for a proposal of marriage, but fearful of being scorned at sight of his own physiognomy, he encloses the photograph of his young Irish assistant, hoping to persuade the girl of the charm of being the mistress of his vast farm when once she has arrived.

On the way to meet the girl at the station, Tony, the Italian, is seriously hurt in an automobile collision, and Lena, the waitress, meets the assistant and recognizes him as being her savior. When she is told of the deception she is at first furious but subsequently discovers how much Tony loves her and marries him. Luck, the youthful assistant, also falls in love with the beautiful Lena and the resultant conflict between youth and age is finally brought to an emotional climax.

Miss Evelyn Cust Married Saturday

The quiet wedding ceremony of Miss Evelyn Cust, daughter of Mrs. E. A. Moffitt, 1111 Cherry Avenue, to W. J. Robinson, son of H. A. Robinson of Orono, N. Y., was performed Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother on Cherry Avenue. The Rev. W. P. Robinson officiated in the presence of intimate friends of the couple.

The bride was attended by Miss Florence Flowers, maid of honor, while the groom and his best man, his brother, Emil Robinson of Orono, N. Y., the bridal party stood beneath an improvised archway made of roses, carnations, snapdragons, lily's, lilies and fern.

After the dining room where refreshments were served later in the afternoon by Mrs. Moffitt, assisted by Mrs. R. H. Thompson, Mrs. J. S. Driver and Mrs. Bushnell Bates, was a profusion of candies and fern.

The bride is the only daughter of Mrs. E. A. Moffitt of this city. She has made her home here for a number of years and was a student in the public schools. At present she and Mrs. Lulu Miller own the Blue Bird Beauty Shop where she will continue to work until she and Mr. Robinson leave in a few weeks for New York.

The bridegroom is the son of H. S. Robinson of Orono, N. Y. He has been spending the winter with his father at Orono. He is employed as an interior decorator with a firm at Orono.

The couple are at home to their friends at 1111 Cherry Avenue for a few weeks. Present at the ceremony were: Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Moffitt, Clinton Bradshaw, Miss Florence Flowers, H. A. Robinson, Emil Robinson, Mrs. R. H. Thompson and son, Billy, Mrs. Alva Vernon and son, Billy, Mrs. Bushnell Bates, Mrs. J. S. Driver and Mrs. William Polk.

Mrs. Reuth Hostess To Members Of Club

Snaphagons, petunias, verbena and fern adorned the rooms of the home of Mrs. Walter Reuth, West Second Street, when she entertained the members of the "Egg Club" and a number of other friends with a bridge party Friday evening at her home. Novelty green dolls were used to mark the tables while green baskets filled with candies were arranged at the guests' places. Tallies and score pads bore hand-painted designs of old-fashioned girls.

At the conclusion of the bridge progressions, scores were collected and prizes awarded. High score prize for the club members, a vanity set, went to Mrs. J. E. Baker, while high score prize for the guests, a handkerchief, was given to Miss Chloe Reuth.

At the tea hour a sweet course and coffee were served on plates adorned with miniature Irish pipes. As it was the hostess' birthday a large birthday cake was also cut at that time.

Those present were: Mrs. W. E. Varn, Mrs. E. J. Reuth, Mrs. Martin Stinecipher, Mrs. Victor Green, Mrs. J. E. Baker, Mrs. Harve Kent, Mrs. G. H. Brown and Miss Chloe Reuth.

The Woman Of It

By Marguerite Mowers Marshall

The Fifty-Fifty Wife and the Home

Does the married woman who makes money refuse to make a home?

Does the wife who can do something else besides cook and raise children refuse to make a home?

It is not we or most other fifty-fifty wives who say "yes" to these questions, but hostile critics. Many have their opposition to women earning for the wife on the theory that she who does it insists on putting her husband out to board, or on poisoning him with bad food at home.

Believe it or not, neither arrangement is usual, among the women we know who keep on with some sort of paid work after marriage. They do have homes, as well as jobs. They take a stubborn satisfaction in proving that they can play the new game and the old one too. They manage to preserve "freedom for the wife" in doing her own job and yet all the real values of happy home life.

As Katharine Brush, author of "Young Man of Manhattan," that brilliant new novel of fifty-fifty marriage, defined its chief problem in the recent interview which she gave us for The Evening World.

After the publication of that interview we received a letter which on honestly voiced the dark suspicion directed from many quarters at the fifty-fifty wife that we thought our readers would be interested in the letter itself and in Miss Brush's honest and happy answer to it.

"Your interview with Miss Katharine Brush was well written and interesting and I enjoyed it," writes Heather Graham, "I couldn't tell you how these things, deftly concealed, how you yourself were affected by the tone of silly snobishness in the writer's voice. I was particularly irritated by her plea not to put words about 'making my husband's dinner' in the piece. Some of the most brilliant women I have ever known have been good cooks and proud of it."

"Now I may be wrong, but I am assuming from the trend of the story that what Miss Brush immediately responded was the assumption that she could or would 'make dinner.' Because the lady tells her work to editors, she evidently fancies that she is above the serious business of house-making."

"This strikes a directly false note, it seems to me. Please let me know, in your column, what you think about it. Is it beneath the dignity of an intelligent woman to cook?"

"What I take to be Miss Brush's attitude is so snobbish and so typical of a certain group of young women in New York on the sentimental as based on what seem to me entirely false premises. For example, Miss Brush is lucky. Indeed, in being able to 'quite thrill' her little boy. But haven't you known men and women who, while they would not perhaps use the word 'thrill' in connection with their mother, have a feeling fond and yet at the same time contemptuous, and able to remember those same mothers engaged in the unromantic act of frying doughnuts?"

"Being a good wife or a good mother isn't all a matter of being tickled and charming. I am all for the lipstick and the champagne, but I am inclined to question the innate intelligence and good taste of a woman who bases her claim to distinction on so flimsy a social fabric."

"Sophie Kerr, the most delightful author I know, I know, would I think, agree with me that the implication which Miss Brush has 'fought all my life' the implication that she might know how to or be able to cook is scarcely such an insulting one as to engage all her family and friends."

"Yours for better meals and straighter thinking."

And here is the case for the defense which, at our request, Miss Brush has written for the column:

"I have read with interest and appreciation Miss Graham's letter to you about your interview with me. I have, in fact, read it twice. The first time was this morning at my all-too-new apartment where I sat on a barrel of china directing the work of two electricians and three glaziers and some carpet men and a paper-hanger or so, and occasionally reexamining not too mildly—with my small son, who wished to paint daisies on a mirror with the painter's green paint. "Because the lady tells her work to editors," I read, "she evidently fancies that she is above the serious business of house-making."

"I tried again this evening, in the comparative calm of the hotel rooms where we still wait for the company O. K. list, 1936," to calm true. I have been able to perceive that Miss Graham's point is better taken than it first appeared. It would, indeed, be silly snobishness on my part to decline to cook dinner because I felt it was beneath me. I decline for no such reason, and decline in the wrong way, anyway. I can cook a dinner, I have cooked dinners—and breakfasts and lunches and suppers; and often, too, Miss Graham would believe, I still do."

"My objection to the former interview's quotation of me as having said, 'I must go home and make my husband's dinner,' was not that it sounded as if I could; but that its tone of compulsion, of enforced domesticity, was inconsistent with the fifty-fifty marital arrangement I had repeatedly declared as mine. It sounded—the quotations—as if I were obliged, always, to abandon any professional project or engagement of my own and rush home when my lord's dinner hour approached. This was unfair to him."

"It happens that I write better than I live. Both are full-time jobs, and I have elected the one for which I showed the greater aptitude. As an author, I am sometimes asked how I, personally, have solved, or how I seek to solve, certain domestic problems. My answers are not intended as general advice, neither are they meant to be in the slightest degree criticisms of those whose solutions to the same problems differ from mine. In your faithful report of our talk together you stressed the fact which I had stressed: that individuals must work out their personal adjustments."

Miss Brush merely inquired how her own domestic plans in the happy adjustment for herself and her husband? This paragraph appears to have escaped Miss Graham altogether.

"Certainly it is not beneath the dignity of an intelligent woman to cook, when, as and if she chooses. I am with Miss Graham wholeheartedly on that. And certainly the innate intelligence and good taste of a woman who bases her claim to distinction on lipstick and charm—I think I quote Miss Graham correctly—should be questioned. So you see, we are in accord. There's no argument, really. Miss Graham feels that her scheme of living is a better scheme than mine; and I have no fault to find that, for Miss Graham, it is."

Evangelist To Hold Series Of Services In Sanford Church

Beginning Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock, Rev. Harry G. Allen, of Marion, Georgia, who is one of the general evangelists of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will conduct a series of evangelistic services at the Methodist Church here. Rev. W. P. Hubman, local Methodist pastor, announced this morning.

In making the announcement, Rev. Hubman said that Rev. Allen stands high among the ministers of his church for "sincerity, earnestness, and successful service" as an evangelist, and holds "a very special commendation" from Bishop Warren A. Candler, senior bishop of the church. Preparatory prayer meetings are being conducted at the Methodist Church each morning by the pastor at 10 o'clock. Every one is invited to attend, Rev. Hubman asserted.

11 Persons Hurt As Train Jumps Track

BATESVILLE, Miss., Mar. 17.—Eleven persons were injured slightly and extensive damage was done to equipment when one car of Number 1, east-bound bound Illinois Central passenger train, was derailed near here today.

A. B. Monroe, station agent here, said cause of the wreck had not been determined. The train, carrying six pullmans, three day coaches and five mail and express cars, was running on schedule time, which is fast, when the cars suddenly leaped the rails and piled up on a hillside in an ugly mass of wreckage.
