$3.9-Billion Measure Approved 310-96 Congress Votes To Override Jobs Bill Veto

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress, with an attack on unemployment as a major goal this election year, today overrode President Ford's veto of a $3.9-billion public works jobs bill, making it into law.

The Senate voted 72 to 24 Wednesday to override Ford's veto of the public works bill.

House Majority Leader Thomas O'Neill and other Democratic leaders had predicted they would have no difficulty winning the jobs bill override.

The bill will provide millions of dollars for projects in Sanford and other parts of Seminole County.

In February, the Sanford City Commission directed City Manager Warren Knowles to work with county officials to have the county designated an economically distressed area, so area residents would be able to reap the benefits included in such a measure.

Supporters of the public works bill say it would create 200,000 construction and other jobs while protecting another 90,000 state and local government jobs.

Sen. Walter Mondale, the Democrats' vice presidential nominee, said he couldn't understand Ford's veto because "the worst thing you can do is deny people work. This country needs work."

Ford had called an earlier $6.2-billion version of the bill, which he successfully vetoed, "little more than election-year pork barrel." He made clear he considers the new version little better.

"This bill will not create lasting jobs," Ford said, "but will instead create more inflation."

Supporters say the bill will create jobs in the construction industry because it authorizes $2 billion in grants to state and local government for public works construction projects that can be started in 90 days.

They say the 90,000 state and local government jobs will be saved by a $1.25-billion authorization in the bill for anti-recession grants to maintain government services in areas with high unemployment.

Democratic leaders, particularly in the House, set creation of more jobs as their major legislative goal at the start of this year.

Jobless Decline May Hurt Area

By KRIS NASH

After struggling long and hard to drag its unemployment rate down out of double digits, Seminole County appears to have finally succeeded. But this may hurt the county's chances to share in the $3.9-billion public works jobs bill which became law today on a House override of President Ford's veto.

Seminole's unemployment level dipped to 11.1 per cent in May, the latest figure available from the Florida State Employment Service. The May unemployment reading for the

SHA Records Show A Possible Conflict

By JACQUELINE DOWD
Herald Staff Writer

A Sanford Housing Authority commission may have violated state ethics laws when he did $45.40 worth of dry cleaning for the agency he helps direct.

Commissioner D.C. McCoy, owner of McCoy's Deluxe Cleaners at 1107 W. 13th St., admits doing the cleaning, but says he hasn't violated any laws because "as long as there's no charges, you can do anything you want."

But housing authority records show McCoy's Cleaners was paid on two separate occasions for dry cleaning jobs.

On Nov. 14, 1975, a check was issued for $15.50 to McCoy's firm to cover cleaning of drapes in the housing authority administrative offices on West 10th Street, in the Castle Brewer Court housing project.

On May 28, a $27.90 check was issued to McCoy's firm for cleaning drapes in the conference room at Redding Gardens where the housing authority commission meets.

Florida statutes, which prescribe standards of conduct for public officers and employees of agencies, say a public officer or employee "acting in a private capacity" shall not rent, lease, or sell any realty, goods or services to his own agency.

Housing authority Executive Director Thomas Wilson III confirmed that McCoy's Cleaners had done work for the housing authority and was paid, but defended McCoy, who has supported Wilson in his recent battles with other commissioners and tenants.

"We did a comparison of rates charged in the city and we found his rates were less," Wilson said. "To me, it's all a matter of where we can get the lowest price and the best service."

Although one housing authority employee says the possibility of a conflict of interest was discussed by staff members, the decision to use McCoy's Cleaners was never officially presented to the commission.

McCoy's possible conflict of interest was mentioned in a recent letter from a representative of the Seminole Joint Tenants Council to the commission.

Water District Eyeing Sanford

Sanford is being considered for the new home of the St. Johns' Water Management District administrative offices.

Seminole County Port Authority Administrator Jim Ryan said Wednesday he is sending preliminary information to St. Johns District officials, who must soon decide whether to add on to their present headquarters in Palatka or move to another city with better transportation facilities.

Sanford can offer one thing the other cities being considered don't have — a waterfront site overlooking the St. Johns River. Ryan hopes that psychological selling point will help Sanford land the St. Johns District headquarters.

Sanford's chances improved this week when Orlando's proposal to house the St. Johns' District offices at McCoy's Jetport hit a snag. The district's southern boundary is the Martin Anderson Breville Expressway, located just north of the proposed jetport site.

The St. Johns District staff, which now numbers about 80, is expected to expand to 200 within two years. The first step in the expansion is scheduled for Jan. 1, when the upper St. Johns River basin — now under control of the Central and Southern Florida Flood Control District headquartered in Vero Beach — will be transferred to the St. Johns District.

Ryan says the port has plenty of room for the 7,000 to 12,000 square-foot building that will be needed by the St. Johns District staff.

County Has No Program To Control Them

Seminole Mosquitoes May Carry Disease

Encephalitis-carrying mosquitoes are present in Seminole — but the county doesn't have a mosquito control program.

Fred Hassut, district entomologist for the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, told that a group of Sanford area residents during a meeting to explore methods of controlling the non-biting "blind mosquito" problem along the waterfront of Lake Monroe and in Downtown Sanford.

Hassut said Florida was one of the few states in the nation that didn't have one encephalitis-related death in 1975. "But," he warned, "that doesn't mean we won't have any in the future."

Asked if the state of Florida could force a county to undertake a mosquito control program, Hassut said the state could do "nothing more than make a recommendation."

"There is no doubt," Hassut said, "that you do have a problem with the mosquitoes, but it is definitely a countywide problem. I've received many telephone calls all my Winter Park office from South Seminole residents complaining about the mosquitoes, so I know

Children Describe Kidnaping

'We Were All Scared, Crying'

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) — "At first I was a little scared to talk about it," admitted Jennifer Brown.

But then words starting spilling out of the 8-year-old girl's mouth as she and her brother described how they and 24 other school children were kidnaped from their bus last Thursday and buried alive in a dirt-covered moving van.

"We saw a van in the middle of the road. A guy got on. He had a gun. My brother thought it was a joke. He got up on his seat with his hands up and shouted, 'We didn't do it,'" Jennifer told the San Francisco Examiner Wednesday.

Her 10-year-old brother, Jeffrey, added: "Everybody laughed. I crack a lot of jokes in school. Then the guy said, 'Everyone get in back.' Everybody said, 'Really funny, Jeff.' Then another guy came on. He put on white gloves and drove the bus. They all wore white gloves," Jeffrey said.

As soon as we saw the guy's gun everybody got scared... he drove the bus down into the ditch. There was a green van waiting for us. We thought they were going to take us and scare us, then take us home. We asked if they were going to hurt us. They said they weren't going to hurt us.

We asked if they were going to take us home. They said they weren't going to hurt us.

Her brother picked up the tale with the vans stopping at the quarry in Livermore.

"When they backed up to the hole our van hit a tree... When I saw the hole I first thought it was a tent. They were going to lock us in it and zip it up. Then I found out it was a hole. I missed a couple of steps on the ladder and came down the hard way."

"I was told by the sheriff's office not to say whether I have one son or 10 sons," Woods said.

Houchins said he also was interested in talking to two of young Woods' friends — Richard Schoenfeld, 22, and James Schoenfeld, 24, sons of J.B. Schoenfeld, a pediatrician in nearby Atherton.

A highly placed source in the

Deputies Searching Estate For Evidence In Bus Hijack

Alameda County sheriff's office told The Associated Press Tuesday that one young man being sought in connection with the kidnaping was connected to the rock quarry. The source said the other two were sons of a prominent San Francisco area physician.

Houchins emphasized at a news conference late Wednesday night that the younger Woods and the Schoenfeld brothers had not been named in any arrest warrant.

Officials also emphasized early today that no arrest warrants had been issued in the case.

Diving Fix Attempt By Russians Uncovered

MONTREAL (AP) — Tom Gompf, manager of the U.S. Olympic diving team, accused Soviet officials today of contacting him in what he called an attempt to fix the Olympic springboard diving events winding up tonight.

Gompf told the Associated Press a deal was suggested to him in which the Russians would have gotten voting support for their women's springboard diver, Irina Kalinina, in exchange for a promise to have Russian judges back at the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

Gompf said the Soviets knew the proposal, made to him at a diving competition in Leningrad, was a long discussion of the politics surrounding the judging of diving. "In very clear, slow tones while the copag was going around, someone who I won't name said what a shame it would be if such a good diver as Kalinina was ruined in the Olympics by the old fogies of the International Diving Commission puts on the panels."

"In the same breath, they said what a shame it would be for Boggs to have that happen to him too. Then they said, 'Tom, we're very concerned about the wrong people getting the medals.' There wasn't really much more to add."

Artist, musician and now author of a book on American Indians, Ted Williams learned about the culture and traditions of his people while growing up on the Tuscarora Reservation in upper New York State. (AP Photo)

Artist Preserves Indian Culture

NEW YORK (AP) — When Hrooskahrohet was a child he was going to sign up for a creative writing course. I said "That's all I ever wanted to do." That was an old Indian trick," he said, and laughed at the memory of his small lie.

Today, Hrooskahrohet — loosely translated as He Who Wears a Cloth Shirt — is 36-year-old Ted Williams, author, painter, sculptor, musician, paratrooper and medicine man.

He has turned his talents to spreading the culture of his people through his art and his writing, both of which have been recently published as "The Reservation."

Williams is dressed in a gaudy flowered shirt and red pants. A necklace of brightly colored Indian beads hangs from his neck. Under his shirt he wears a medicine bag that he says "heats up" to warn him of impending danger.

Williams left the reservation at 18 to join the army, serving four years as a paratrooper, most of them in Korea. After the war, he took advantage of the GI Bill to study modern jazz at the Knapp Institute in Chicago and learned to play the trumpet. About ten years ago, he went to work for Eastman Kodak in Rochester, N.Y., where he now lives.

Williams got started on "The Reservation" almost purely by chance. "I saw this woman that I had eyes for and I got her phone number."

A Golden Opportunity For Shutterbugs Television Can Provide Olympics Photos

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

How would you like to be a photojournalist covering the 1978 Olympic Games at Montreal or any of the major news-worthy events taking place throughout America during its Bicentennial celebration? All you have to provide is camera, film, time and effort.

What about transportation, press credentials, a good seat at the arena? No problem at all. You're taken directly to the scene, provided with the best viewing location and are free to photograph whatever you feel is important. It's an assignment which can reveal whether you have the makings of a new photographer, whether you can anticipate — and capture — those "decisive moments" which are the dramatic highlights of any event.

OK, what's the catch ... and what will it cost?

There is no catch and it doesn't cost anything. Here's how: You can photograph Montreal's summer Olympics or any major news event by setting up your camera in front of your television set and giving yourself the assignment. A TV screen is a magic machine which provides instant transportation, personal press accreditation and the best viewing locations at the Olympics, political conventions, or any event of public nature.

You can photograph these great news events in the comfort and privacy of your home and if you goof and miss the winning high jump or the fastest sprinter or the record-breaking champion, no one need know. You can hope to learn from the experience and to have your reflexes sharpened by the time you see the event.

At the same time, the incredible technology of television equipment and experts will be transmitting the action in close-up details impossible for human eyes to duplicate to an estimated billion viewers throughout the world.

Just one of the remarkable facets of Montreal's TV coverage is the largest concentration of TV receivers ever assembled for one story.

RCA of Canada gathered and provided 3,500 Colortrak TV sets at Montreal's Olympics which permit viewers to monitor up to seven different events while they are taking place. Installed at 27 different locations in sufficient quantities, they are available for reporters, radio and TV broadcasters, the athletes and coaches and the public to see any of the major events going on simultaneously by pressing buttons.

Meanwhile, back at the ranch in Texas ... or the den in New York ... or the patio in California ... or the hacienda in New Mexico, would-be photojournalists can be setting up for their self-assigned Olympic Games coverage.

Center the camera squarely in front of the TV screen for least distortion. Put it on a tripod or firm support and use a cable release to minimize camera movement. Focus sharply on the screen and make sure it doesn't shift, perhaps by taping the lens in place.

Fill the film frame with the largest possible complete TV screen picture and then check the focus for sharpness. If the camera's closest focusing distance still results in a small TV image, add a 1- or 2-closeup lens attachment and follow the directions with careful measurements.

Never use flash or flood lights to photograph a TV image. If you use the TV picture and the result is a blank screen with no image. The basic shooting speed for leaf-type shutters is 1/250th or 1/100th of a second — never faster. Cameras with focal plane shutters present a problem at that speed — it's likely to show a diagonal band across the picture to some degree. To eliminate that band, it's necessary to shoot at 1/48th second. This requires careful choice of the lens on the TV screen and instant to photograph to avoid a blur of movement. Normally, it's too slow a speed. I've made satisfactory pictures from the TV screen at 1/300th second with a focal plane camera though the hand does show up.

TRIX film, ASA 400, is recommended for black-and-white prints. In a simple camera with no shutter speed settings, insert a US$10 flashcube in the flash socket to reduce the shutter speed. Don't come closer than the minimum focusing distance unless using a close-up lens as per directions.

In And Around Sanford Women Greet Newcomers

Feeling the need for community promotion and better human relations, Harriett (Baba) Deas and Jean Bryant have turned their ideas into action and are presently in the process of reactivating Welcome Wagon International in the Sanford area.

Both women are longtime area residents and feel a greeting service of this nature would benefit newcomers in familiarizing them with the community structure and available activities.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Know all about persons or firms you contract work with today. An unformed choice will cause you a pain in the checkbook. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today, someone may not be all she appears to be. Don't tell her too much. She could do you dirt later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Let sleeping dogs lie today. It's to no one's advantage to rehash an old family problem even though it's on your mind. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could judge your buddies a little too harshly today. Show that kind, compassionate nature you're noted for.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't anticipate defeats today. A negative attitude lessens your ability to face issues squarely. YOUR BIRTHDAY July 23, 1976 You will form several interesting new associations this year. Just be sure the persons you ally yourself with have your high standards.

break which would spoil the potential dummy reversal. Once both opponents followed the rest was easy. She ruffed a second spade high, entered dummy with the king of clubs, ruffed a third spade high, entered dummy with the queen of diamonds, ruffed the last spade, led her last trump to overtake in dummy, discarded one club on dummy's last trump and was held to six when East kept a diamond stopper.

Here is another hand from the AITA quarterly. According to Betty Lind, her daughter sitting East opened with a psychic bid of one spade. West bid two spades and West into the act by trying four spades. For some reason or other North didn't double, but when Betty bid five hearts North raised her to six.

Women Turn Sports To Social Soirees What, would you guess, was the most important influence on sports in the last ten years? Golf? Tennis? Football? All wrong. According to the man who knows more about the subject than probably anyone in the country — Leonard Steinauf, head of Herman's World of Sporting Goods, a division of W.R. Grace & Co., the answer is women.

An endorsement and campaign contribution procedure has been organized on a statewide level in Florida to elect pro-ERA candidates to office in this election year.

Nancy Traver, President of the Florida Women's Political Caucus, spearheaded the political action coalition group which includes members from a diverse and multipartisan number of organizations including: Business and Professional Women, League of Women Voters, National Organization for Women, Women's Political Caucus, Common Cause, Methodist Women, Coyote, Democratic Campaign Committee, Republican Campaign Committee, Communication Workers of America, United Faculty of Florida, Black Women's Political Caucus, Florida State ERA Coalition, Coalition for WATER, and the Feminist Party.

These organizations who because of Florida election law procedures can not on their own endorse and give campaign contributions to candidates, have joined together in the Florida Women's Political Caucus Campaign Support Committee, nicknamed "Mary Ann."

Mary Ann is the political arm through which each organization channels its support — endorsement, workers and campaign contributions — to pro-ERA.

At the first meeting of the Endorsement Committee of the Florida Women's Political Caucus Campaign Support Committee, an endorsement questionnaire form was adopted which local groups will use to poll prospective candidates in their local areas.

Those endorsed by local groups will be eligible for endorsement and campaign contributions collected by the statewide and national groups representing tens of thousands of members.

Any organization or individual wishing to contribute to the election of pro-ERA candidates in Florida may make checks payable to: Florida Women's Political Caucus Campaign Support Committee, and mail to 6340 E. W. 16 Terrace, Miami, 33155.

Wealthy Trio Sought In Bus Kidnap Case

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. (AP) — Three "armed and dangerous" men from wealthy California families are the target of a nationwide hunt today, sought for questioning in the most kidnapping and ransom case in the history of the state. The trio was sought for questioning in the kidnapping of three San Francisco Bay-area men.

An all-points bulletin named Frederick N. Woods, 24, James L. Schoenfeld, 22, and Richard A. Schoenfeld, 22. It described them as "armed and dangerous" and told officers to "arrest on probable cause."

Alameda County sheriff's deputies were reported to have obtained at least one search warrant early today to search a warehouse in eastern San Jose. A San Jose police source said deputies hoped to find the pair of vans that transported the Chowchilla youngsters to the quarry where they were imprisoned for 19 hours. Whether the deputies went into the warehouse, or found what they were looking for, could not be immediately determined.

Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins and Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates told a news conference Thursday night that ransom may have been the motive for snatching the youngsters and baring them alive inside a van in a Livermore rock quarry owned by Woods' father.

"I believe these three are involved in the kidnapping sufficiently enough so that we can arrest them," Bates said. He said new searches were underway in Sonoma County and San Jose where Woods "has some acreage, some warehouses and barns. They'll be looking for some more vehicles, more vans."

Two vans were used to transport the Chowchilla children after the kidnappers camouflaged the bus from which the children and driver were taken.

Woods and James Schoenfeld graduated within a year of each other at Woodside High. City and county records, however, indicate they had no business license.

The three friends had one scrape with the law. On Oct. 6, 1974, they were arrested in the tiny community of Downieville about 150 miles northeast of San Francisco on a charge of felony jayriding.

They pleaded guilty to petty theft, but withdrew the plea before their January 1975 trial began. Later, they pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of auto tampering, were fined $125 each and sentenced to a year's probation.

The neighbor on the other side of the Schoenfeld residence is Richard Storm. He said the Schoenfelds, whom he has known three years, are "superkids."

"They tinkered around with cars a lot. They buy cars, fix them up and sell them," he said. "Rick keeps some horses. He takes care of them real good. They are very friendly kids and very helpful. When I had something wrong with my engine, they came down and helped me with it."

Woods' father, Frederick N. Woods III, owns the California Rock and Gravel Co. in Livermore where the Chowchilla children spent their five days of underground terror.

The senior Woods provided the bus which took reporters and photographers into the quarry Tuesday to watch Alameda County sheriff's officers unearth the moving van in which the children had been imprisoned.

Candidates Scramble For Names

System Penalizes Independents

By KRIS NASH Herald Staff Writer Unless you've been locked up with a sawed-off shotgun and a box of 00 dum-dum shells until the death penalty was reinstated or Howie Kuhn made an intelligent decision — whichever came first — you've probably seen the fellows with the clipboards and the long lists of names.

You can spot them in shopping centers, at chamber of commerce get-togethers, circulating through the courthouse, or just about anyplace where a number of people might add their names to those long printed rosters.

They're the independent candidates for federal, state and county office, who have been busily feeding signatures to their voracious filing petitions for a couple of months now. Each one must accumulate the autographs of five per cent of the registered voters in the area he wants to represent as an officeholder.

Sounds pretty easy, doesn't it? You pay a lower filing fee than a party-affiliated candidate, then get a bunch of your friends and neighbors to sign your petition, and you're in.

The fact is, however, that there are a number of inequities in the system which seem to work against independent hopefuls in almost every case.

Take a candidate for District 1 of the Seminole County Commission, for example. If he runs as a Republican or Democrat, he has to pay a filing fee of $825.91, or five per cent of his anticipated $16,518.20 first-year commissioner's salary. And that's it. He can return to his job, begin work on his campaign or sit back and tune in "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." The independent in this case, though, must pay a three per cent filing fee ($488.55) then go out and beat the bushes for some 2,000 petition signatures. And each one of those costs him 10 cents when he turns it in, whether it is counted as "valid" or not.

This means that someone who goes on a minimum number of signatures would still end up paying around $15 to run as an independent in District 1 — only $110 less than a Republican or Democrat who didn't have to wrestle for weeks with the petition sheets.

And in practice, the independent contender would seek 2,500 or 3,000 names to balance the ones that will be thrown out, because they don't belong to currently registered voters. So what it boils down to is that for a $30-$40 saving in District 1, the independent candidate is compelled to go through a lot more grief to qualify.

Then there is the Republican or Democrat who signs a written statement, given under oath, to the supervisor of elections requesting exemption from the filing fee because he "cannot pay such charges without imposing an undue burden on (his) personal resources or upon resources otherwise available to him."

Such a candidate has to qualify by what is affectionately known as "going the petition route." But unlike his independent counterpart — the Republican or Democrat does not have to pay the 10-cent verification charge for each signature he obtains. This cost is picked up by the taxpayers.

And while they're at it, the taxpayers can foot the bill for the Republican or Democrat hopeful's petitions, too, because it is up to the candidate's office of residence to furnish the forms. Needless to say, the independent contender has to pay for his own.

Well, if nothing else, the Republican or Democrat who doesn't pay the filing fee has to get out there and slave for signatures just like the peons, right?

Not quite. While the independent scrambles for five per cent of the electorate in his proposed district, Democrats and Republicans need only secure five per cent of their party's registered county membership.

According to figures on file with Seminole County Supervisor of Elections Camilla Bruce, this means that about 1,365 Democratic signatures and about 860 GOP signatures would be needed to enable their respective party candidates to qualify by petition.

And at absolutely no personal expense other than the cost of transportation which independents have to pay, too.

It is possible for an independent hopeful to avoid the filing fee and signature verification charge by claiming financial hardship, also — but he is still left with a much larger task in getting his petition completed.

The way it stands now, there seems to be just one factor in the independent candidate's favor — time. Republicans and Democrats going the petition route this year could not begin gathering signatures until 12 p.m. June 15, and their completed forms were due by 12 p.m. July 6, 20 days later.

Meanwhile, an apparent loophole in the Florida election law leaves the independent contender's starting time unspecified and mentions only the deadline for submitting petitions to the supervisor of elections.

But Seminole independent candidates say as soon as state legislators realize the situation, this one edge that they do have will probably disappear as rapidly as did their illusions of equity in election qualification procedures.

School Board, SEA Negotiations Scheduled To Resume Tuesday

Contract negotiations between the Seminole County School Board and the Seminole Education Association (SEA) will resume on Tuesday at 1:15 p.m.

The session will be limited to 3½ hours and is scheduled to be held at First Federal of Seminole in Downtown Sanford.

According to Ernie Cowley, chief negotiator for the school board, three major articles of a contract have not yet been discussed, including those regarding compensation and expenses, health and health protection, and the length of any contract that might be agreed upon.

Two other articles — dealing with recognition of the bargaining unit involving the negotiation process with SEA only; and one dealing with class sizes, teaching loads and assignments — have already been discussed but no agreement has been reached.

An agreement has been reached between the school board and the Seminole Educational Clerical Association Inc., and must now be ratified. This is the first time a contract has ever been held between the two groups.

No agreement could be reached between the school board and two other bargaining units and the Florida Public Employees Relations Commission (PERC) was asked for help in breaking the impasse.

PERC informed the school board and the two groups — the Seminole County Bus Drivers Association Inc., and the Association of Non-Instructional Personnel of Seminole County (NIPSCO) — that agreement involved district-wide teacher-to-pupil ratios. At the kin-
