The Third Term Issue

Since President Roosevelt's recent trip across the continent speculation has been revived as to whether he inends to run for a third term, and if so, what chance he would have of being elected. The large crowds which turned out to greet him, occasional shouts from his audiences urging him to run again, and at least one petition from a labor organization, all point to the fact that a third term is a distinct possibility.

However, the majority of the people of the United ates do not think the President intends to seek re-election. This, at least, is the conclusion arrived at by the Instatute of Public Opinion, which conducts the only straw vote, since the crack-up of the Literary Digest, to retain any very high degree of self-respect. Last week the Institute conducted a nation-wide survey on the third term

> Thirty-six percent of those polled answered affirmatively the question, "Do you think President Roosevelt will run for a third term?" In spite of the fact that a minorty felt he would seek re-election, a majority believed that he would win if he did. Fifty-one percent said "yes" to the question, "Do you think he will be elected if he runs?"

> Although there is still only about one-third of the people who think President Roosevelt will run again, the number has increased appreciably during the past year, he poll reveals. A survey conducted by the same organization a little over a year ago shows that at that time only 28 percent, as compared with 36 percent now, believed he would seek a third term.

> As a matter of fact, the chances are that the President does not yet know himself what he will do about the third term issue, and is not in a position to say yet whether he will run again even if he wants to do so. If he can name his successor, a liberal who will carry on the present policies of the New Deal, he will likely be content to retire to his flyde Park home. If he is blocked in this ambition, he will probably carry the issue to the people under his own banner.

Fit For A King

When the King and Queen of England were in France recently they dined upon one occasion in the famed Hall of Mirrors of Louis XIV in Versailles Palace where the French government really did its stuff believing, no doubt, hat the way to a country's heart is through the stomich of its king.

No less than ten of the foremost chefs of all France, long famous for its chefs, combined their culinary skill to produce a meal of which the least that can be said is that t was fit for a king. The rarest delicacies of the world were served. The vegetables were grown out of season at Limoges and flown to Versailles by airplane the morning of water when nobody was of the banquet. The menu briefly was as follows:

Les Perles fraiches de sterlet Le melon frappe Les delices du Lac d'Annecy a la Nantua Les Mignonnettes d'agneau Trianon

La Timbale de cailles farcies a la Talleyrand Les aiguillettes de caneton rouennais a la Montmorency avec salade gauloise
