Energy Advisors Ask Limit On Sales Of Gas In Seminole

Service station operators in Seminole County will be asked to put a minimum and a maximum limit on the amount of gas sold to motorists if the board of county commissioners accepts the recommendation of the newly formed county energy committee.

The committee met for the first time Monday and agreed to recommend to the minimum and a $10 maximum purchase was

Another recommendation forwarded to the county commissioners for approval is the requesting of posted flags at service stations to alert metorists of a station's fuel supplies. A red flag would be flown over pumps with no fuel left and a green flag at a pump would Mel Dekle said a similar flag alert system was used by some area stations during the

Despite the precautionary measures, Ms.

Blackmon said, the county still remains "in relatively good position" in terms of available fuel supplies. She said there is no need to consider more stringent measures such as the odd-even fuel sale days set up in other Florida counties. Under such a plan motorists are rmitted to buy gas on alternate days, depending on the last digit of their license

"We don't want to resort to any type of rationing at this time," she said. "It is better to let the individual retafiers set their own hours of operation and adjust the supply at that time."

Any conservation measures recommended by the committee and approved by the county commission would have to be strictly voluntary, she said. Although Gov. Bob Graham authorized the formation of energy committees in each Florida county, the committees are not given the authority to enforce their recommendations. The committees are strictly advisory, Ms. Blackmon 2000-0-"The state and the federal government are the only ones with any clamp to enforce the rules." she said.

The county commission was expected to review the recommendations during its regular session today.

Ms. Blackmon said she has sent letters to each of the 108 Seminole County service station operators asking them to advise her of their fuel allocations for next month. She said operators, furthermore, are being asked to advise her when they feel their supply is nearing depletion. Such information, she said. will be used to determine if the fuel situation is deteriorating and whether additional fuelsaving measures need to be considered.

WORLD IN BRIEF

OPEC Oil Ministers Begin

Price-Fixing Meeting

GENEVA (UPI) - The 13 OPEC oil ministers today began the cartel's most crucial price-fixing conference since the world oil crisis five years ago. A substantial increase was certain, with only the exact amount in doubt. The ministers met behind a screen of tight security in the ballroom of the Hotel Intercontinental.

The conference, scheduled to last two or three days, has pitched conservative Saudi Arabia against OPEC's more radical members.

The Saudis are the only OPEC members to have stuck to the benchmark price of $14.54 fixed in March. The others all impose various surcharges, with the average price now around the $18 level.

Tanker, Freighter Collide

CIVITAVECCHIA, Italy (UPI) - A fully loaded Italian oil tanker and a French freighter collided today in heavy fog off Italy's western coast. Port officials said fires aboard the two vessels raged out of control. Early radio reports said at least one crewmember was dead and 29 injured in the fiery collision. Two of the injured were reported in critical condition. The 4,942-ton, Italian tanker Vera Berlingieri and the 12,202-ton French freighter Emmanuel Palmas slammed into each other while moving through dense fog at 6:30 a.m. (1:30 a.m. EDT), 14 miles off the coast between the port cities of Eiumicino and Civitavecchia along the Tyrrhenian coast.

Carter, Ohira End Talks

TOKYO (UPI) - President Carter and Japanese Premier Masayoshi Ohira today wound up talks in preparation for the Big Seven "energy summit" which was overshadowed by the OPEC oil cartel conference on the other side of the world.

Carter and Ohira, shedding their suit jackets and rolling up their shirt sleeves, concluded two days of talks on energy and political and strategic matters which had furthered "the mutual trust and friendship" of the two countries, a U.S. administration official said. The meeting was held at Ciso, a picturesque seaside resort within sight of the sacred Mount Fuji. Carter flew there by helicopter after jogging and swimming at dawn.

Haig 'Knew' He Was Target

CASTEAU, Belgium (UPI) - Gen. Alexander M. Haig said he had known for a year before Monday's assassination attempt he was the "target" of a specific But neither he nor Belgian police would say which group is the prime suspect in Monday's attempt, which failed by a fraction of a second to kill NATO's supreme commander A bomb planted beneath a roadway in the nearby village of Obourg was detonated by remote control just after Haig's chauffeur-driven Mercedes 600 had passed it. A trailing security car took the brunt of the blast, slightly injuring two of its occupants. Only the trunk of the general's car was damaged and Haig was unscratched.

Reds Talk About Energy

MOSCOW (UPI) - COMECON, the common market of the Soviet bloc nations, opened its 30th anniversary meeting today with energy, the arms race and international trade foremost on the minds of the communist

Members of the socialist economic bloc centered unofficial discussions on energy, which also is the chief concern of Western economic giants meeting in Tokyo, and OPEC oil ministers gathered in Geneva. Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin, as host, opened the session in Moscow's House of Unions.

Official Car Uses Alcohol

BRASILIA, Brazil (UPI) - Setting an example for using alternative energy sources, President Joao Figueiredo became the first chief of state to use an official car that runs on alcohol.

In ceremonies at the Planalto Palace Monday, Ford Motor Co. mechanics turned over to Figueiredo his black Landau limousine modified to run on alcohol instead of

Tampa Truckers Vow

To Continue Strike

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) - Independent truckers took over hauling gasoline where the Florida National Guardsmen left off Monday with the settlement of the weeklong strike, but more guardsmen were called up for duty today in the Tampa area where the strike

Truckers voted 92 to 13 Monday afternoon at Port Everglades to accept the Public Service Commission rate hike of 7 percent and other concessions from the state. While the settlement by gasoline haulers elated south Florida motorists, it did not sit well with other semi operators.

"Our drivers are hot, very hot. We did not even know they were meeting," said Paul Yager in Tampa. He represents the Exempt and Independent Truckers Association. "We're staying out, definitely. All of Florida is staying out except for the tankers at Port Everglades," Yager said.

Five-Day Closing Eyed

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) - A five-day closing of service stations over the Fourth of July holiday will be considered Saturday by the board of directors of the Florida Allied Gasoline Retailers Association.

The association has about 1,000 members and represents about 10 percent of the service stations in Florida

Jim Miller, spokesman for the group, said the independent station operators want the government to increase the amount of profit they are allowed to make. "We want a 31/2 cent a gallon increase or a total of 30 percent of our costs," Miller said Monday. "We're still making the same amount we made in March of 1974."

Proffitt Stay Considered

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) - A federal judge Monday took under advisement a request to stay Charles Proffitt's scheduled Wednesday execution while another federal judge in Fort Lauderdale granted Robert Sullivan an indefinite stay.

Both convicted killers had been scheduled to die in Florida's electric chair Wednesday morning After a three-hour hearing, U.S. District Judge V Terrell Hodges said he would study the seven-volume trial transcript and rule by this afternoon "at the latest" on the habeas corpus petition by Proffitt's attorneys.

Jury Selection Exasperating

MIAMI (UPI) - An exasperated judge suggested Monday if attorneys don't speed up their questioning, "it's going to take us six months to get a jury" to try Theodore Bundy for the Chi Omega murders. Judge Edward Cowart dismissed seven prospective jurors on the trial's opening day. Two others, a woman who worked in a bowling alley and a black social worker. were tentatively seated.

Defending and prosecuting attorneys reserved the right to dismiss those two jurors after further questioning. A venire of 500 people was summoned.

Utility Pays Top Price

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) - Florida Power & Light Co., the state's largest electric utility, has been ordered to explain why it paid $1.16 a gallon for diesel fuel to run its generating plants.

Public Service Commissioner Joe Cresse, noticeably angered by the price, said that any motorist could buy the same fuel at the gas pump for 85 cents a gallon. He raised the question during a Public Service Commission hearing Monday on fuel adjustment charges for July for all the state's electric utilities.

Doctors Wait And Hope

Laurie Montgomery of Flatlands, New Bruswick, underwent a 14-hour operation at Tampa General Hospital June 15 in which her skull was reduced in size from that of a 35-pound watermelon to near normal size.

The young girl suffered from hydrocephalus, a con dition in which a tiny pathway which normally drains off the fluid that cushions the brain, fails to develop.

Clemency Hearing Today

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) - For the first time since Florida resumed executing killers after a 15 year hiatus, the State Clemency Board today will consider reducing the sentences of two Death Row inmates.

Gov. Bob Graham, who has signed four death warrants in the past two months, has recommended commutations to life in prison for Learie Leo Alford, West Palm Beach. and Clifford Hallman, Tampa.

It takes the affirmative votes of at least three of the six Cabinet members of commute a sentence, and Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington, who has said publicly he would always go along with the governor's clemency recommendations, is vacationing in Europe.

Better Late Than Never

President Carter's announced decision to proceed with the mobile MX strategic missile program, while encouraging, is hardly cause for assuming that the Soviet Union's emerging nuclear superiority has been effectively countered.

The current MX program schedule calls for test flights beginning in 1983, followed by production and deployment between 1986 and 1989. No one can guarantee that, at some point along this lengthy continuum, the MX will not meet the fate that befell the B-1 bomber: namely, peremptory cancellation on one pretext or another. Nor can anyone be sure that the MX will not be subject to further instances of the wholly political delays that have already repeatedly postponed its progress.

If these observations reflect a certain cynicism, we can only observe that the Carter administration's record on defense matters provides ample justification.

The fact that cancellation of the MX would have killed Mr. Carter's cherished hopes for Senate ratification of the SALT II treaty only heightens suspicions that the announcement reflects something less than wholehearted support for the new missile.

Still let us assume that the MX program proceeds on its announced schedule. At the moment of supreme Soviet threat to this country's deterrent forces in the early to mid-1980s, not a single MX missile will be available.

That is so because the MX program has suffered from so much foot-dragging and because the Carter administration agreed in the protocol accompanying SALT II not to test a mobile, strategic missile until 1983. Thus have the Russians guaranteed our vulnerability for at least the first half of the 1980s.

But criticism of the administration's MX program is not limited to its glacially slow pace of development.

The mobile MX missile is now essential to are large enough and accurate enough to destroy the United States' chief nuclear deterrent, the 1,054 Titan and Minuteman missiles housed in fixed. under-ground silos.

To circumvent this vulnerability, the planned 200 MX missiles would be deployed in underground tunnels and constantly shuttled between thousands of prospective launching points. The Soviets-could never be certain of the exact location of the MX missiles and thus would have to expend thousands of additional warheads to destroy all the potential launching mechanism.

This would vastly complicate the task of disarming the United States in a surprise attack. But a system that would also conceal the exact location of the existing Minuteman and Titan missiles would be even more effective in reducing the probability of a Soviet attack.

The Air Force last year proposed such a system, which involves shuttling a limited number of missiles among a much larger number of launching silos. Periodically, all silos could be opened so that Soviet satellites could photograph the missiles and ensure compliance with SALT limits. But the Carter administration permitted the Soviets to veto this so-called "shell game" system.

We are stuck then with the much more expensive and much less effective MX tunnel scheme. Any favorable decision on the MX, whatever the basing mode, can be expected to elicit howls of dismay from congressional doves who see in every American weapons system the potential for an

"unrestrained" arms race. We suggest they address their complaints to the Kremlin, whose burgeoning missile forces made MX necessary, and to the Carter administration's SALT negotiators, who failed to achieve one of SALT's most important goals - the denial of a disarming first-strike capability to either side.

Friday they hit home. Every station I visited was either closed, out of unleaded fuel or had such a long line it wasn't worth the trouble to wait. As a result, the weekend was spent close to home.

One thing that I'm sure will occur as a result of the gas crunch is that millions of veterans will be forced to break a promise made the day they were discharged, i.e. NEVER AGAIN TO STAND IN LINES

From the first day of boot camp to the field day of military service I can't recall a friend who didn't make such a promise. I heard the same pledge by students waiting to register for courses in By GEOFFREY POUNDS college, but it was never made with the same commitment as that of soldiers and sailors.

lines. Everyone becomes an enemy. The person serving you is a fool because he doesn't operate more efficiently; the person ahead of you is a jerk because he takes such a long time and diddles around getting his money in or out; the person behind you is an aggravation because he gives you such evil looks while trying to hurry you; and you even begin to get mad at yourself for putting up with the whole process.

What makes gas lines especially annoying is that you know it is going to be a regular event. In the newspaper advertisements appearing in major cities, Exxon proclaims it "is not holding back products" and tells gasoline-short mortorists "we're doing the best we can with what we have."

In testimony at a congressional hearing, a senior vice president of Texaco says one way to alleviate the worsening gasoline shortage is to convince the public that there's a real problem "to be approached rationally and without panic."

But amid all of the petroleum industry's repeated calls for calm and conservation, a great deal of embarrassing information about BUSINESS WORLD the rapidly deteriorating gasoline crisis isn't being provided to either drivers or politicians. Much of that information is buried in the statistical report issued by the Department of Energy and the American Petroleum Institute, two organizations that traditionally have been highly protective of the oil industry. Among the disturbing conclusions that emerge from a detailed examination of those weekly and monthly reports:

Item: Despite the highly publicized interruption of United States imports of crude oil from Iran as a result of the revolution in that nation, there was no significant decling in this country's total imports late last year or early this year.

The shortfall induced by the Iranian political crisis was about 300,000 barrels per day - not the 500.000 barrels per day repeatedly cited by Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger. But it was largely offset by substantially increased imports from Saudi Arabia.

In fact, during the preside period encompassing the last quarter of 1978 and the first quarter of 1979, total imports of crude oil into the United States, compared with the same period one year earlier, actually increased by more than 75 million barrels of 6.8 percent.

Item: At the same time the major oil companies have been reducing service station allocations to 80 or 85 percent of the gasoline provided one year earlier, the industry has been increasing its stock of crude oil.

Crude stocks normally are reduced in the first quarter of each year, as high inventories built up in prior months are refined into gasoline and other products.

In January of this year, crude stocks were an unusually low 296.6 million barrels. With the industry desperate to replenish its supplies, the total rose to 297.1 million in February, 308.7 million in March, 324.4 million in April and 324.4 million in May.

But while crude oil stocks were growing, gasoline stocks were dwindling - despite the industry tradition of devoting a substantial amount of refinery capacity to gasoline production during the early months of the year. Last August, the industry allowed gasoline stocks to drop below 209.9 million barrels - the lowest level in more than three years - and never adequately rebuilt them.

In summary, crude oil is available but it's being hoarded by the industry, refinery capacity is grossly underutilized and gasoline stocks continue to dwindle. Yet the petroleum industry can't understand why it's the object of so much public suspicion.

BY KAZUO MIKAMI NEW YORK (UPI) - With the East Asian and Pacific nations emerging as the growth center of the world, increasing attention is being paid to the concept of a Pacific community. But no flesh has been put on the bones. The Pacific basin today constitutes the world's dynamic, fastest growing region with Japan's economic success being echoed around its rim.

For the United States, the Pacific countries have supplanted the Atlantic countries as the to assure the continued rapid growth of countries major center of trade and commerce - at least in terms of volume.

William V. Roth, Jr., Republican senator from Delaware and an influential member of the Finance Committee, speakin to the Japan Society recently, proposed creation of a "Pacific on Lapan while smaller nations on our side of the Forum" among the non-communist nations of the Pacific basin to discuss mutual interests. The forum, if created, would include the United States, Japan, South Korea, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Mexico and the five members of the Association of Southeast Asian

It goes back to the 1973 Arab-Israeli war. Two weeks after the outbreak, the Arab rulers resolved to use the oil spigot as a weapon. service, you didn't always know when you were going to encounter a line - it could be every day or every week. Any kind of a function would mean a line, but at least you had the fun of guessing when. In college, the lines varied according to your course load. Some semesters you took courses that were unpopular or not required. There were no lines. Other times you hit all the favorites. There were lines. At least there was an element of chance. But if the gas crunch continues, as many people now anticipate, there will be no hope. Every three days I will need gas, and every three days I'll have to wait in line.

Before it is all over, I have an idea it will be the lines giving me gas.

> VIEWPOINT What Mass Transit?

By DON GRAFF Well, we certainly brought this one on our-

The subject is again the gasoline pinch, which is responsible for lengthening lines at stations, noticeably reduced highway traffic in more and more sections of the country and also a rediscovery of mass transit by multitudes of commuters and long-distance travelers long accustomed to wheeling it on their own.

But there's a hitch. The nation's transit system as it semi-exists today cannot accommodate these masses of new customers.

Surprise. Which is what it certainly should not be to anyone even slightly familiar with transportation trends of the past 30 or 40 years. The oil exporting cartel may have us over a barrel. What can we really do to halt their game of price leapfrogging as long as our economy is so dependent upon energy supplies available from them and, very likely for some time to come, from them alone?

Big oil may or may not be manipulating the situation for its own profitable benefit. In the multilateral discussions among Pacific basin crossfire of statistics, explanations and accusations between industry and government, "First, the implications of China's moder- what can the public do except declare a nization program are of great interest and im- plague on both houses - and pay up?

We have, however, no one to blame but ourselves for the patchwork transit system we must now turn to in time of need. For decades we, the public, have been deserting public transportation, allowing passenger rail and urban bus routes to shrink and facilities to deteriorate while we overindulged our love affair with the automobile.

In the process, we seduced ourselves into an multi-billion-dollar orgy of highway building that compounds the present problem. The expressways transformed once compact cities into sprawling suburban-dominated complexes, created by and for the private auto, that are today much more difficult and expensive to serve even if mass transit can be upgraded to the TASK

That last is a massive "if." Systems in many cities are putting old but still operable vehicles back into service and some may make emergency use of vans, and even school buses. New equipment is on order, but production facilities are limited and even should orders be multiplied several times over, it would be a year or most likely more before the result would be evident in expanded service.

There is also the problem of financing. Most municipal systems, currently not paying their way, don't have anything approaching the money necessary for the job. They look to Washington, but the current federal budget includes only $3.2 billion for transit aid, compared with a minimum $15 billion estimated to be eeded.

One source might by the Federal Highway Trust Fund, the special account drawn from federal gasoline taxes that built the interstate system and which mass transit advocates long have sought to tap for public transportation. The fund, however, is not what it used to be and as the interstates age and deteriorate, more and more of it must be allocated to road repair. There is no thought of allowing the highway system built up at such cost and effort to go the neglected way of the railroads.

V.F.W., Moose Open Junior Loop Playoff

For the first time in four years different teams have won the first and second halves of the Sanford Junior League schedule, and a best two out of three games series will be played to determine the league champ.

That series opens tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Chase Park on Celery Avenue in Sanford, with first half champ V.F.W. squaring off against second half winner Moose. The Moose nine will be looking for its third consecutive city championship.

The second game of the series is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, with the third game, if necessary, set for Friday night.

V.F.W. enters the tournament with the best record, 16-3,

Fans Cheer NBA Draft

NEW YORK (UPI) - Yes, UCLA's David Greenwood was pretty nervous." He came right out and said so. Besides, you could tell he was by the way he kept fidgeting with the tiny camera he held in his hand. His mother had made him take it with him when he left his home in Los Angeles. She had heard Monday's NBA draft was going to be held in the Plaza, one of New York's oldest and most fashionable hotels, and not being sure she'd ever have an opportunity to stay there herelf, she was curious about what it was like on the inside. "David, make sure you bring back some pictures of the hotel," ny mother said to me," Greenwood revealed. "I promised her l

But the 6-foot-91/2 forward became so preoccupied, so taken up with the pre-draft excitement, he very well could have forgotten to take any pictures. Maybe he remembered later on when things eted down a bit

Bill Cartwright, the University of San Francisco's 7-foot center hid his nervousness better than Greenwood, and Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who knew he was going to be the No. 1 selection all along, had nothing to be anxious about at all. He was cooler than a trayful of ice cubes, having agreed to terms with the Los Angeles Lakers some time ago as a hardship case.

"I don't have to be nervous," he said, a few minutes before the actual draft selection began. "I know where I'm going. When the Lakers say me, all I do is say, 'Yeah.'" Promptly at noon, Larry O'Brien, the NBA commissioner, got the drait process under way but before he did, he welcomed all the fans being admitted to the session for the first time this year. They cheered loudly when O'Brien acknowledged their presence. The commissioner said he also wanted to welcome the NBA officials, coaches and representatives of the class. "The fang, booed ... Montecel lustily at that announcement. With the amenities over, O'Brien began the draft.

"The Los Angeles Lakers select Earvin "Magic" Johnson," he Phila eclared. Yaaaaaaaaaaa

The fans nearly tore the roof off at that one.

After it was announced the Lakers had selected him, Johnson vas asked to come up to the lectern by O'Brien where the two men shook hands and posed for photographers. O'Brien was then ready to announce the second choice made by

That drew the loudest cheers of all, the room being filled mostly with long-suffering Knick fans. "Come on up here, Bill," O'Brien called to Cartwright, sitting in

"I was hoping they'd pick (Sidney) Moncrief," he said. O'Brien continued with the draft.

"The Detroit Pistons select Greg Kelser," he said. His voice, amplified by the loudspeaker, carried to the adjacent

Hotline Due Tourists

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) - With tourism the underpinning of Florida's economy, state officials are preparing an emergency advertising program to ward off the fears that ravelers may have about nadequate gasoline supplies

The state Department of Commerce also said Monday t's going to set up a telephone notline for tourists to get a owdown on supplies throughout the state.

"The fear of not getting asoline is as bad as not having t," said Dean Gaiser, assistant director of tourism, pointing out some areas with plenty of gas probably suffered because panicky tourists cancelled reser-

Indeed, resorts from Panama City to Key West reported a "soft" weekend with plenty of vacancies at a time when they are usually full.

"Many of those that cater t automobile tourists reported a lot of cancellations," Gaiser aid. Resorts which depend nostly on groups coming in by ous or plane had no problems. Panama City Beach, which lepends on car traffic from bordering Alabama and Georgia for the bulk of its tourist business, was hard hit. There were vacancy signs

Gaiser said the combination of the gasoline shortage compounded by the truckers' strike made this past weekend especially difficult. While areas in south Florida began gas rationing programs stations in northwest limited purchases to $5.

Approval of the revision and the rezoning came on votes of 4-to-1, with commissioner Bill Kirchhoff voting in opposition twice. However, Kirchhoff explained he voted against the motions because his family has property adjacent to the planned project and thus did not want to cast a vote that could be construed as selfserving. He filed a conflict of interest statement and intended to abstain from the voting, but county attorney Nikki Clayton advised him to vote yes or no.

classroom work. Unlike the artists in old detective movies, White does not work with a pad and a pencil. Instead, he creates his pictures by using a combination of 400 plastic transparencies contained in an identi-kit. Each transparency has a separate facial feature. By piecing together the scattered recollections of those who have been victimized by a criminal or have seen the perpetrator of a crime, White is able to assemble a rendering that can be sent across police wires for widespread use in identification.

"It's not as hard as it seems. Most people see more than they think they have seen. It is just a matter of bringing back what they have observed," White said. "The mind is like a camera. A person sees a face and his brain takes a picture. In a crime, particularly a violent Sturm's remark was greeted with loud applause from the estimated 100 Midway residents who packed the meeting room at city hall to express support of the project. "Now we have hope, it's going to do a great deal for the morale of Midway residents," SEEDCO's vice-president, Ruthie Hester, said after the vote.

Before the vote was taken, a string of Midway citizens adiressed the commission with pleas to help alleviate the housing shortage to low-income residents. "I have just a couple of rental properties in Midway, but seven crime, a victim may tend to bury that picture in his or her subconscious. What we do with the identi-kit is reassemble the picture a little at a time," he said. During the procedure, White said, the person interrogated never sees the composite picture until a first draft is complete. Upon seeing that, he said, the witness's memory reacts and compares the sketch to the suspect observed. From that point, the subtle variances in hair line, chin shape, eye size and facial wrinkles can be modified until the rendering corresponds to the picture in the witness's memory.

"You start with an average composite, based upon height, weight and age," he said. Each age bracket, size and weight carries an average chin line and facial shape, he explained. Thus when a victim says the person who attacked him was about 30 years old, six foot tall and perhaps 180 pounds, for example, White can immediately produce an average face for persons with such characteristics. Then the specifics can be added. White said after getting a chin line and face shape, he will begin asking witnesses about hair line. Was his hair thick? Was it balding? Was there a part?

Lake Mary will spend $300 a year to keep the newlyacquired identi-kit on hand. So far it has never been used in an actual case. But nationwide, more than 180 arrests for serious crimes such as murder and robbery have been made on the basis of renderings made with the kit, White
