Furlong bids for second term

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioner Larry Furlong announced his bid for a second term in office this morning. Furlong created a major upset in 1990 by turning out three-term commissioner Sandra Glenn to become the first Democrat on the board in more than a decade.

In a statement, Furlong said he will again limit contributions to $100 from each supporter, one-fifth the state-allowed limit. Furlong said he will seek 1,575 signatures to place his name on the ballot.

So far, the only announced opponent for Dist. 4 is Robert M. Bernys, a Republican.

Man found dead

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Seminole County sheriff's investigators are looking into the shooting death of a man this morning. Undersheriff Steve Harriett said dispatchers received a call at about 9:40 a.m. from a woman at a home near State Road 436 and Howell Branch Road saying two hispanic males had shot the man. Deputies found a man dead at the residence, Harriett said. No other information was available this morning.

Lakefront: More plans?

City may split cost of UF $30,000 study

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The city may be asked to help finance another waterfront study.

The Waterfront Master Plan Steering Committee met yesterday afternoon, and considered asking for approximately $15,000 in matching funds.

The money would be used for a University of Florida Architecture Studio project. Upper level students who are majoring in planning and architecture would make what the committee considers as possible final plans for the lakefront development.

Chairman Larry Strickler explained, "The offer from the university would be to have the students take some of the plans we already have, from say,

Child support lawsuit

Few complaints from area moms

By VICKI DeBONNIE
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — While the rest of the state seems to be struggling to get delinquent and other child support to children and mothers who need them, Seminole County appears to be fairly free of such complaints.

A Tampa woman charged Wednesday in a federal lawsuit that deficiencies in the state's child-support system forced her and her three children to live in their car.

Karin Carpenter and 11 other poor mothers contend the state's system for collecting and distributing child-support payments is so flawed that the bureaucracy itself is causing needless hardship.

"The practical effect is that women don't get their money at all, or they get their money so erratically and delayed that they can't budget.

Politicos add two cents to three topics

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Members of the Seminole County Charter Review Commission heard few words of support for potential changes to the county's constitution last night.

But members did largely hear from Republicans and GOP elected officials who opposed non-partisan elections and the appointment of what are now elected officials.

About a half-dozen "average citizens" joined about 50 elected officials, Republicans, Libertarians along with representatives of United We Stand America and the League of Women Voters to express their views on three topics. The charter committee will consider the testimony in deciding whether to pro-

Lake Mary may gain housing development

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — A residential area that could add 150 homes to Lake Mary is again being considered by commissioners tonight. The matter has been on hold since September.

At issue is a request by Centex Homes, to change approximately 47.5 acres of land from commercial to low/medium density residential and restricted commercial/office spaces. The property is located on the western side of Lake Emma Road near Emma Oaks Trail.

Centex has indicated plans to build possibly 150 homes on the site.

The proposal for rezoning came before the commission on Sept. 23 of last year. It was approved on first reading by a unanimous vote. Also approved was a move to have the second reading and public hearing withheld until December 16.

It was determined that the application, which required changes in the city's Comprehensive Plan, would have to be sent to the State Department of Community Affairs, to be reviewed. Concerns voiced by the DCA would then be given to Lake Mary, and changes would have to be either made or explained.

The second reading had been scheduled previously, but the full report had not been completed, and the matter has now been scheduled for second reading at tonight's meeting.

"I think we have answered all of the state's questions regarding the proposed development," said City Planner Matt West. "Of course even after it is approved, they will still have a time period to be certain it is in compliance with their rules and regulations."

During the first reading in September, both Mayor Lowry Rockett and Commissioner George Duryea had discussed having land originally designated as commercial being changed to residential.

pose changes to voters in November.

The charter commission will hold their next public hearing Feb. 9 to consider such topics as single member districts and term limits.

In a hearing dominated by Republican senior party officials and elected officials, charter members heard little support for conducting non-partisan elections of county commissioners and constitutional officers. Deborah Carwell, president of the county League of Women Voters, said her organization supports non-partisan elections to reduce the influence of the parties.

Ben Tucker, charter commissioner and county party official, asked Carwell if the League wants greater influence on elections. Carwell responded "That's what we hope will happen."

"You would be making a serious and grave error to change the way elections are conducted in Seminole County," said Mike Saporito, past chairman of the Republican Executive Committee. "Party labels offer some indication of philosophy. By taking away that clear choice, you lead the way to special interest politics. It's a fraud on the voters."

Charter member Adrienne Perry asked Saporito if candidates sometimes register for a party based on the total party membership rather than philosophy. Saporito responded that may sometimes occur, but "once they're in office, their true colors will come out."

County commissioner Pat Warren, a Republican, supported continued partisan elections, saying party labels offer her the "first tier" of information about a candidate.

Theresa Coker, SCREC vice chairman, said the party officially opposes non-partisan elections and added, the more information available to a prospective voter, the better informed they become.

Charles Champion Jr., representing county Libertarians, said party affiliation should not be listed on ballots, but candidates should not be prevented from promoting their affiliation.

Ernie Whitaker, representing UWSA, said the local organization supports non-partisan elections because they reduce the influence of state party involvement.

On the issue of partisan school board elections, charter commission chairman Fred Streetman read a letter from school board attorney Ned Julian Jr., stating school board members declare their elections are beyond the scope of the Seminole County Charter.

But under questioning, county attorney Bob McMillan stated the opposite was true and the Florida Supreme Court ruled the only counties which can have non-partisan school board elections are chartered counties.

Robert Daves of Longwood said party involvement in school board elections are "nothin' but trouble" and added partisan elections would be "sticking your head in the beehive" of party involvement.

State and county GOP official Jim Stelling stated partisan elections would help reduce the influence of the teacher's union and cited statistics showing in Seminole County and other non-partisan school board counties, there is less voting in school races than other county offices compared to partisan school counties.

"By denying partisan politics, you turn control over to the most controlling influence of all, the unions," Stelling said.

Melissa Hardin, representing the Seminole County Parent Teacher Association said the county and state PTA organization support non-partisan school elections, but added under questioning, she personally wouldn't mind party organizations working for candidates.

Former school board member and county commissioner Bud Feather said since the county shifted to non-partisan school elections in 1974, there were fewer candidate forums and less information distributed about the candidates.

"The public really got cheated," Feather said. "Nobody cared. The union got involved and you began to see changes in policy and budget the day the union got their majority in office."

Bill Gilmartin, former chairman of the Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee, said school elections should remain non-partisan, adding "parties pretty much screw up things."

Carwell said the League continued to support non-partisan school elections. Champion said Libertarians supported non-partisan elections.

On the issue of appointed versus elected officials, the idea of hired tax collectors and other senior county officers found few supporters. GOP officials, Warren, Tax Collector Ray Valdes, Property Appraiser Bill Suber and others said they and their organizations didn't want to lose their say in determining who their officials should be.

But Douglas MacDonald said skilled professionals could be hired by commissioners to perform many duties now done by elected officers. But Sam Loper of Sanford noted the 3-2 county commission majority formed in 1989 to oust former county manager Ken Hooper and said "I don't think we want five people running our county."

Hopper, a member of the charter commission, made no comment.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Nationwide banking legislation

Coalition for Economic Development proposes opening borders

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A plan to allow banks in Florida to expand nationwide and make it easier for out-of-state banks to move into the state is being pushed by an association of bankers, business leaders and community groups.

The newly formed Florida Coalition for Economic Development plans to announce today a proposal to open the state to nationwide interstate banking. Since the mid-1980s, bank expansion in Florida has been restricted under a regional agreement with 13 southeastern states.

The leading proponent of nationwide banking is NationsBank, which is itching to expand outside the southeast. It is the fourth-largest bank in Florida.

Barnett Banks, the largest banking company based in Florida, would not say

Wednesday whether it will oppose the plan, although many observers expect them to.

The measure would allow banks like NationsBank, First Union, and SunTrust Banks Inc. to expand to states such as California, New York, Ohio and others that allow nationwide banking. About 36 states allow nationwide banking and three others — Georgia, Virginia and South Carolina — are considering similar bills this year.

It also would allow out-of-state banks with no presence in Florida to acquire state banks. Currently, banks based outside the southeast can move into the state by buying a failed or struggling institution.

The proposal would prohibit banks outside the region from expanding into the state by opening a branch office.

Supporters of the measure in Florida said the southeast agreement has allowed NationsBank and other regional banks to grow and compete with any bank in the country. They said the move to nationwide banking would increase competition in Florida and allow regional banks to continue to grow.

"Consumers are always benefited by increased competition," said Mike Fields, a senior vice president for NationsBank in Tallahassee.

The changes would lead to higher interest rates for customer deposits and lower credit costs, supporters said.

Jacksonville-based Barnett does not plan to move outside the southeast, said spokesman Robert Stickler.

The nationwide banking coalition is headed by Bill Sutton, a former banker in Tallahassee and former secretary of the state Department of Commerce.

Scheduled to join him at a news conference today are Sheila Tschinkel, director of research and senior vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank in Atlanta, and David Humphrey, a banking professor and eminent scholar at Florida State University.

Kemp, conservatives meet in Miami, blast Clinton's first year

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — President Clinton's potential 1996 rival Jack Kemp and other Republican conservatives blasted the administration's first year as an almost unrelieved string of failures.

In foreign policy, "the president's administration has been close to a disaster in terms of credibility," said Kemp during the meeting Wednesday in Miami. "It's an empty shell."

The former housing secretary under Bush ridiculed Clinton for allowing "a bunch of thugs ... with AK47 submachine guns" to force a U.S. Navy warship to leave Haiti.

He criticized Clinton for being too soft on North Korea's nuclear threat, and said the administration has fumbled the Bosnia crisis with its inaction.

Former U.N. Ambassador Jeanne Kirkpatrick also took Clinton to task, saying his just-concluded trip to Russia and Eastern Europe was a pullback of the historic U.S. commitment.

"The U.S. performance was largely interpreted as a retreat," said Kirkpatrick. "It was a weak performance."

She said the French interpreted Clinton's statements as "a broad policy of withdrawal, a weakening of America's NATO role in Europe."

U.S. Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., said Clinton had backed away from many of his conservative campaign promises domestically as well.

"I'm very disappointed," said Mack. "I'd give him a 'D' for his first year."

Kemp cited the few issues on which he supported the Democratic administration as the North American Free Trade Agreement and the backing of Boris Yeltsin in Russia.

But criticism aside, Kemp conceded that the improving economy and bright spots like the move toward peace in the Middle East is improving Clinton's standing with the voters.

"If he could run right now, he'd be re-elected," said Kemp.

Kemp, Kirkpatrick and William Bennett — the former education secretary and drug czar under the Reagan and Bush administrations — were in Miami for the third regional meeting of their new organization, Empower America.

The nominally nonpartisan conservative group, which has billed itself as a GOP shadow government during the Clinton administration, was in Miami to address hot-button issues including youth crime and family values.

Bennett called for the end of welfare, saying it fosters the dissolution of low-income families.

He said polling data shows a change in values in America that has worsened the crime crisis, with few modern parents looking at their children as their most important priority.

$500 million project faces questions from local, state agencies

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — A consortium that wants to operate a magnetically levitated train from the Orlando airport to a tourist district near Walt Disney World faces some tough questions.

Local and state officials want specifics on how Maglev Transit Inc. plans to finance its $500 million-plus project and when it proposes to start on the 6-year-old program.

"Projects of this nature will take a long time," Maglev Transit President Sam Tabuchi said

Tuesday. "You must be very patient."

The Greater Orlando Airport Authority and the Florida Department of Transportation have been patient and accommodating. But they want some answers within the next few months.

State permission to build the Orlando train included a requirement to prove by June 1993 that it could be financed. The company, composed of Japanese, American and German firms missed that deadline but was given an extension until the end of the year.

The resulting 4-inch-thick report recently filed by Maglev Transit contains no final financing plan. A letter from an official of the Industrial Bank of Japan listed banks and companies that are the "most likely sources" of money for a financial plan to be completed by June 1994.

The DOT wants to decide by April whether to give Maglev Transit another extension.

The company originally proposed using only private money to finance the train. It failed to attract investment, however, and in 1991 Congress gave the company $97.5 million for land and construction.

This prompted criticism about the use of taxpayer money for such a project.

Maglev Transit had planned to use a German-designed train, the Transrapid-07, widely regarded as the most advanced maglev train in the world. But last year, Maglev Transit couldn't reach a deal with the company that owns the 250-mph Transrapid. It now plans to use a 130-mph train designed in Japan, the HSST.

The HSST would still be the world's first maglev train in commercial operation, and the fastest in this country.

Crisis of kids killing kids

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A child or teen-ager is killed by gunfire every two hours in the United States — the equivalent of a classroomful every two days — the Children's Defense Fund said today in its annual look at the state of America's children.

The influential children's advocacy group headed by Marian Wright Edelman used the release of its report to call for stronger regulation of the sale, manufacture and possession of non-sporting firearms, especially assault weapons and handguns.

"Our worst nightmares are coming true," Edelman said. "After years of epidemic poverty, joblessness, racial intolerance, family disintegration, domestic violence and drug and alcohol abuse, the crisis of children having children has been eclipsed by the greater crisis of children killing children."

According to the group, 5,356 children and teen-agers were killed by gunfire in the United States in 1991, the latest year for which statistics were available.

It said nearly 50,000 children and teen-agers were killed by firearms between 1979 and 1991 — a number nearly equal to the American casualties in the Vietnam War.

That total includes 24,552 homicides, 16,614 suicides with a firearm, and 7,257 gun accidents. The figures come from unpublished data from the National Center for Health Statistics.

According to its calculations, a child dies from gunshot wounds every two hours, while a police officer is killed by gunfire every five days and nine hours. Homicide is now the third-leading cause of death for elementary and middle school children, ages 5 to 14.

"It is adults who have manufactured and profited from the guns that have turned neighborhoods and schools into war zones," Edelman said. "And it is adults — parents, clergy, community leaders and public officials — who must give our children a safe start with nurturing homes, moral guidance, basic health care, decent child care and education and a stake in the future."

Among the report's other findings:

—Child poverty continues to increase, as 14.6 million children, or 21.9 percent, lived in poverty in 1992, more than in any year since 1965.

—442,000 children lived in foster care in June 1992, about 68 percent more than a decade earlier.

—One in every eight children had no health insurance in 1992. Almost 7 percent of babies were born with low birth weights.

—In 1990, there were more than half-million births to girls ages 15 to 19, pushing the teen birth rate up for the fifth consecutive year to its highest level since 1971.

The report said juveniles now account for both a high and rapidly growing share of homicide offenders as well as victims.

The number of arrests for murder and non-negligent manslaughter for adults rose 11 percent from 1982 to 1991, while the number of juveniles arrested for those crimes rose 93 percent, the group said.

There was also a 79 percent increase in the number of 10- to 17-year-olds who used firearms to commit murder during the 1980s.

Harding implicated more deeply in Kerrigan attack

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding knew of the plot to attack Nancy Kerrigan and at one point complained it was taking too long to carry out, her bodyguard told The Oregonian newspaper in an interview published today.

Shawn Eckardt also told the newspaper that Harding's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, offered a $10,000 U.S. Figure Skating Association check as a bonus if the attack on Kerrigan was carried out immediately. Top figure skaters get financial aid from the sport's governing body.

The newspaper interview was published a day after Gillooly's arrest and the release of an affidavit from a sheriff's deputy implicating Harding in the Jan. 6 attack for the first time.

In the affidavit, which accompanied the warrant for Gillooly's arrest, Eckardt claimed Harding made two phone calls to find out Kerrigan's practice schedule at a skating rink near Boston and later devised an alibi to explain the calls.

"Tonya categorically denies those allegations," said Harding's attorney, Dennis Rawlinson. "We believe Mr. Eckardt's lack of credibility is already well documented."

Eckardt, Gillooly, Shane Stant, the alleged "hit man"; and Derrick Smith, the alleged getaway driver in the attack, have been charged with conspiring to injure Kerrigan. Harding has not been charged and has denied any involvement.

Eckardt told The Oregonian that he met with Gillooly several times to plan the attack. At one midnight meeting around Dec. 31, he said, as they talked while Harding practiced at a rink, she skated over and said "she was disappointed these guys didn't do what they said they were going to do."

Eckardt said Gillooly showed him a $10,000 check from the USFSA and said, "Tell these guys I'll give them a $10,000 bonus if they'll get it done."

Harding remains under investigation, Assistant District Attorney John Bradley said. She was questioned for 10 hours by the FBI and the district attorney on Tuesday.

Harding may yet skate at the Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway, next month.

Clare Ferguson, president of the USFSA, said figure skating officials will vote next week.

Dilemma over tax cap law

Whoops! Another piece of legislation has snuck through without the drafters going into specifics. What is known as Amendment 10, placing a cap on tax appraisals for Florida homeowners, has been delayed one year.

This isn't the first time a lack of details has caused problems on local as well as State laws.

For example, city charter changes in Lake Mary, approved at the polls, later required a re-writing of certain election sections found to be unclear.

Also, the State Supreme Court recently ruled invalid, a portion of a law dealing with drug free zones within 200 feet of public housing facilities. The court overturned it, saying the wording was too vague.

Now, a similar situation has arisen. It deals with Amendment 10, originated by citizen demands for a cap to be placed on the amount of increases for property taxes.

The Supreme Court has delayed the cap limitations until Jan. 1, 1995. It should have become effective immediately, but the court said supporters failed to specify when it should have started.

As a result, homeowners could be faced with a serious problem. Knowing that a tax cap will be in effect next year, we could see our property taxes skyrocket this year. In that way, they could be considered high enough to avoid the need for any increases for the next few years.

Citizens must be extremely cautious, and watch the taxing which will go on this year. If it is a logical tax increase with a clear need, we can understand it. But if it is a major increase to raise taxes before the cap goes into effect, we must take immediate action to prevent this from happening.

On Janet Reno

Janet Reno has been selected by the Orlando newspaper as "Floridian of the Year." This pick of an attorney who is a master politician who thinks she is a social worker and not a lawyer is an insult to my intelligence. Her choice is also an insult to the other winners of this prestigious award.

Let's talk about Janet Reno:
Janet Reno wants to save your children by taking them from you or by setting them on fire like she proved in Waco, Texas.

Janet Reno wants to uphold laws only if she feels like it. Recent case: when the Supreme Court found search and seizure illegal she said that she wouldn't abide by their decision.

Janet Reno wants to take away your right to bear arms.

Janet Reno wants to determine how you worship God.

Janet Reno wants to control your freedom of speech by making pro-life demonstrators federal felons.

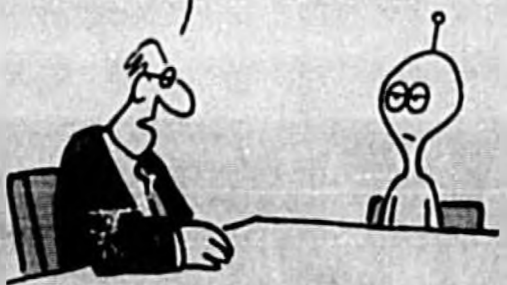

Janet Reno has had a history of protecting the rights of criminals vs the rights of law-abiding citizens.

Janet Reno, a hypocrite, a liar. It's time the American public get to meet the real Janet Reno...before it's too late.

Can Clinton afford a foreign policy?

President Clinton's first trip to Europe is now over, and his handlers are gratefully totting up the pluses: a number of good photo ops, announcement of the usual (prearranged) agreements, etc. There were also the inevitable minuses — notably a couple of flare-ups of the famous Clinton temper, when reporters insisted on asking questions about Whitewater.

In real terms, however, the accomplishments were few. NATO was formed as a military alliance for mutual defense against the Soviet Union. Now that the Soviet Union has disappeared, NATO is casting about for a new role. Some thought it might serve as a device for putting out local European fires, such as Bosnia. But NATO's European members, who might be expected to take the laboring oar in such enterprises, have proved understandably reluctant to become entangled in military expeditions that don't involve (as defense against the Soviet Union clearly did) their vital national interests.

Others think NATO should be enlarged to include the former Warsaw Pact nations of Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, and perhaps Slovakia. But such an expanded NATO could only be understood as aimed at Russia — unless Russia, too, were allowed to join it. In that case, though, who would be the (even purely hypothetical) enemy of the alliance? Internal divisions would become the danger.

Mr. Clinton therefore fell back on the old technique of splitting the difference: inviting Poland, etc. to join a "Partnership for Peace" — becoming, in effect, official candidates for future membership in NATO. If this truly leads to full membership, however, or indeed means anything at all, it can only become effective if the American people can be persuaded that any change in the present western borders of Russia, to the detriment of its neighbors, would constitute a threat to the vital interests of the United States.

That is not entirely inconceivable. But look two or three decades ahead and note how the picture may change. It is quite possible that by then Russia may be so concerned over the growing power of China that it will seek (and obtain) admission to NATO itself. In that case the vital interests of the United States might suddenly involve, not containing Russia's western borders, but defending its eastern ones.

Complex as such problems are, Mr. Clinton probably prefers them to the awful simplicity of the one that defeated him in the Far East: What to do about North Korea?

The grim truth is that Kim Il Sung and Bill Clinton went eyeball-to-eyeball over the issue of nuclear proliferation, and Mr. Clinton blinked. Formerly, our policy was to take any steps necessary to prevent North Korea from making a nuclear bomb. Now it seems probable that North Korea already has one, and Secretary of State Christopher has suavely redefined our objective as resisting North Korea's embarking on "a nuclear weapons program."

Worse yet, in view of this backdown, is Washington's quiet surrender on the issue of nuclear inspections. North Korea has finally agreed to let an international team inspect its five "declared" nuclear facilities — but not the two "undeclared" sites where violations of the non-proliferation treaty are suspected.

Out goes the bad, in comes the good

I really don't understand all the hoo-ha over negative news. The media only report the bad stuff, they say. Why don't the media ever write about good things that happen, they say.

Well, we do. The papers are replete with positive news. All you have to do is look for it. There's so much of it, in fact, that I keep a special file of good news stuff and whenever I need a lift I pull it out and read it. It gives me great relief to read it — so much relief, in fact, that I refer to my good news folder as my "Roloids" file.

I was in need of spiritual comfort the other day, for example, and I learned from my Roloids file that archaeologists have dug up evidence that the workers who built the pyramids were served beer three times a day. I had often worried whether the poor fellows who pushed those stones had some means of allaying the drudgery and I am relieved to know they did. I also discovered from my Roloids file that coroners in Florida are keeping track of cadavers with scanner codes on toe tags. Doesn't it relieve your mind to know that high technology is being harnessed to deal with the burgeoning murder rate?

Sometimes you hear something that makes you happy and you can't even figure out why. I recently found out there is something called a California Prune Board. I don't know why, but it pleases me to know there is a California Prune Board.

Speaking of California prunes, there was a story in the paper the other day that Sonny Bono, Cher's erstwhile husband and the former mayor of Palm Springs, Calif., has announced that he will run for Congress. Now isn't that good news? I had been concerned that Sonny would have nothing to do after saving Palm Springs from thong bikinis (he shepherded through a law banning them), and now he plans to take his leadership skills to Washington so all the nation can benefit. I think that is wonderful news.

Speaking of unemployed California politicians, the story broke recently that former Gov. Jerry Brown has signed up to host a radio talk show. The idea is to provide a liberal alternative to conservative talkmeister Rush Limbaugh. Where is the good news in this? Well, just ask anyone who appreciates a good boor fight. We are twitching with anticipation.

Sometimes you can't turn around without hearing good news. Did you know that the Material Girl has been told to quit playing with didgeridoos? This is true. While on tour in Australia last fall, Madonna was given a didgeridoo — a wind instrument played by Aborigines — and this so upset an elder named Badangthun Munmunyarrun that he told her to quit carrying it around. "In Aboriginal culture, women do not touch or play the didgeridoo," he said. "It is tribal law that a didgeridoo is only played by men." I was personally indifferent to this event, but didgeridoo fanciers everywhere say it is good news that women have been put on notice to leave the instruments alone.

Did you know that people are employed in the South to smell catfish? This is a fact. You see, farm-raised catfish taste bad if they are harvested from odoriferous ponds. So processing plants hire sniffers to determine whether they are "on flavor" or "off flavor." The sniffers even bite off a chunk once in a while to confirm what their noses tell them. I don't eat catfish, but this has got to be good news for people who do.

Well, we do. The papers are replete with positive news. All you have to do is look for it.

MARTIN SCHRAM

Fighting to save neighborhoods

Our dedicated Day of The Dream has been duly celebrated — with a smattering of speech-making and an orgy of mall shopping. Our politicians and preachers have paid their annual homage to Martin Luther King Jr. by telling us how they, too, have a dream about a crime-free tomorrow with opportunity for all.

Now, feeling better, most of us are back at the myopic grind that is our business-as-usual. We are sending our children off to school, trying not to think about the fact that an estimated 100,000 of their classmates (it's always somebody else's kids) will be secretly packing guns.

At the White House, real news was made in the form of commemorative candor. "There is more violence, less opportunity and more destruction of family and community for the places that are really hard hit than there ever was 25 years ago," said President Clinton. "And I think the only way we can honor Martin Luther King's memory is to be honest about that and to ask ourselves, what can we do?..."

Clinton has put the full weight of his presidency behind what he calls a "new partnership" between government and private enterprise to develop America's most needy neighborhoods.

Is that our best hope for fighting crime? We get little help from the pop-political culture that dominates our news media's misguided quest for balance. The nation's loudest liberals and conservatives are back at their old battle stations, from the hallowed halls of Congress to the hot-airwaves of talk radio and its video equivalent, CNN's "Crossfire." On crime, the liberals demand that we treat the sociogenic root causes; the conservatives insist that we lock up the crooks and throw away the keys.

You won't hear either side volunteer the correct answer: We've got to do both — but starting by putting more cops on the streets to reduce the incidents of crime (it worked in Los Angeles, when police patrols were increased before the latest Rodney King police brutality court decisions).

Perhaps the best analysis of the plight faced by all Americans — especially those who live in our urban ghettos — was this passage uttered by Vice President Al Gore Jr. as we celebrated what would have been the 65th birthday of Martin Luther King Jr.:

"By our readiness to allow arms to be purchased at will and fired at whim, by allowing our movies and television screens to teach our children that the hero is one who masters the art of shooting and the technique of killing, we have created an atmosphere in which violence and hatred have become popular pastimes."

Gore read those words in tribute — for they were first spoken in 1963 by Martin Luther King, five years before he was murdered by a gunman firing at whim. And while it is easy to see from King's words that little seems to have changed in the three decades since, we have also seen some signs that indicate for the first time that we may finally come to grips with our most fundamental national ills.

In Washington, The Rev. Jesse Jackson, a disciple of King's who in recent years often seemed to be serving his own political agenda, has taken on perhaps his most noble and worthwhile cause of all: the violence committed by blacks against blacks (94 percent of all black murder victims were killed by other blacks).

And our Democratic president put his prestige behind a program enacted by Congress to create 104 "empowerment zones" and "enterprise communities" — he promised that they would be run in a common-sense, hands-off way that sounds downright Republican. Local communities and private enterprise will come up with plans to develop needy urban and rural neighborhoods and give jobs to the residents; the federal government will provide tax incentives and cut red tape.

Clinton's challenge will be to harness this new form of activist government and rein supreme — to assure that Washington serves as a catalyst but not a controller.

Now, feeling better, most of us are back at the myopic grind that is our business-as-usual.

They're thrown continually into crisis," said legal aid attorney Deborah Weissman, who filed the suit. "We get the money in and turn around and cut a check the next day..."

supercomputer for most of the problems.

"It's meant terrible hardship to a lot of families out there," he said. "In March there'll be some improvements in the turnaround time, and I hope by July it'll be fixed."

In Ms. Carpenter's case, she said her family moved into their car in 1991, and her only Christmas present for the children that year was a coloring book. The oldest child is legally blind and needs new eyeglasses twice a year, but she blames the child-support delays for leaving her too poor to buy them.

In another case, a mother of two said she was threatened with evictions and utility disconnections when IRS owed her $1,000.

IRS acknowledges the problem but blames EDS Inc., the target of a $90 million damage suit filed by the state over computer installations controlling welfare services, including child support enforcement.

A total of $340 million in child-support payments was collected by the state last year, up 60 percent in three years, Towey said.

But Weissman blames heavy caseloads and lack of training for producing a system "riddled with deficiencies." Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay in October recommended shifting the child-support function to the state Revenue Department. Towey endorses the proposal, and the Legislature is expected to consider the idea this spring.

The suit assigned to U.S. District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich seeks an injunction requiring an immediate improvement in payments and creation of a single state office to concentrate on the task.

Information from The Associated Press is contained in this report.

Whether county commissioners should be elected solely from within their districts or continue to be elected coun-

Whether the county attorney should continue to be hired by the county manager or if that position should be hired by commissioners. The commission will also hear a recommendation from the Libertarian Party to include a county "Bill of Rights" in the charter and a proposal by Central Florida Tax Action Network to limit county spending increases to its residents' personal income growth.

Lakefront

Bruce Andersen and some of the Andres Duany suggestions, and fine-tune them down to the point where we will have a viable working concept."

"This is a volunteer Waterfront Committee," he said, "and as such, the need is to be certain our work continues to move ahead, or people will become dissatisfied with our progress and we will end up accomplishing nothing."

"If we get into an agreement with the university," he said, "we could probably have some working plans by August or September of this year. From that point on, we would determine what type of developers we may need, and start seeking them out."

Strickler said the goal here is to establish a marketing strategy. "Let's face it," he commented, "We have the Seminole Towne Center Mall coming up out west of the city. What can we do to bring people into our city after that gets underway? Develop what we have that very few other cities have, a beautiful lakefront."

"If the city will go along with these matching funds," he explained, "we will have to come up with the rest, but still maintain additional money with which to undertake additional projects which are still ahead. But, I think we can do it. Based on the support we have from the people on this committee."

Committee member Kay Bartholomew said the meeting yesterday had a very positive approach. "We appear to be moving ahead on establishing some basic philosophies on marketing," she said. "Chairman Strickler is very good at keeping things moving at as rapid a speed as possible so we will have some action soon."

Bruce Andersen, of Andersen & Andersen, spoke to the group during last month's meeting. He developed some initial plans for the waterfront area development which Strickler says now need to be put into working plans.

"In addition to entering into an agreement with the university," he said, "we may also decide to have Mr. Andersen do some more work."

Andersen had been hired at a cost of $2,000, to develop some initial lakefront development plans for the Waterfront Committee.

"Based on what he charges, we really got a good deal," Strickler said. "If we go ahead with adding the University Studio concept, it may cost somewhere around $30,000 to $31,000, but again, that will be a lot less expensive than hiring some of the professionals who do this for a living."

Andersen had projected an image of various activity centers along the lakefront, various markets, and high-end single family residential areas.

Andersen wasn't the first to express his opinions about what the lakefront could become. In April of 1992, noted historical architect Andres Duany had made projections in what was known as his "Old Sanford" plan.

Regarding the lakefront, Duany had suggested city owned land, such as the post office parking lot and other areas were an amenity.

He wrote, "These sites should be used for buildings that have an arcaded first floor for restaurants and shops, and at least three floors above designated for apartments."

"If this land were owned by developers rather than the city," Duany suggested, "those developers would consider themselves to be wealthy simply by the ownership of this land."

He said it is typical for municipalities not to realize the real estate value of what they own.

Strickler said the next step will be to approach the city commission with a request for matching funds to be used on the University Studio project. "If we don't have any problems with this," he said, "we could see some of the development work and marketing underway before the end of this year."

Records: Clinton venture sometimes blurred lines

By DAN SEWELL and BILL SIMMONS
Associated Press Writers

LITTLE ROCK — President and Mrs. Clinton's often-informal business dealings with their Whitewater Development Co. Inc. sometimes blurred the lines between the partnership and personal property, a review of land and tax records show.

Such arrangements resulted in Mrs. Clinton being personally responsible for a $30,000 bank loan on a piece of Whitewater property put in her name. She transferred the loan to Whitewater, and both the company and the Clintons at times made payments.

That piece of property, known as "Lot 13," eventually was sold, bought back from a Mississippi bankruptcy court by Mrs. Clinton and sold again by the Clintons. Both times the Clintons were the legal sellers.

How the proceeds of the first sale were handled is unclear from records, but White House senior adviser Bruce Lindsey said the money did not go into Mrs. Clinton's pocket. The Clintons reported a modest gain on the second sale.

What is clear from more than a decade of land and tax documents obtained by The Associated Press in Arkansas is that informal business arrangements at Whitewater date to its inception in the late 1970s. That's when the Clintons and their business partners, James and Susan McDougal, bought some 230 acres of wooded, rocky land along the White River in the Ozark Mountains, hoping to develop it into a bustling vacation and retirement community.

White House officials say the Whitewater dealings were all legal but acknowledge their informal nature has led to many of the questions that eventually led Clinton to acquiesce in the appointment of a special counsel.

"Between the parties in the company, the formalities are not important," Lindsey said in an hour-long interview. "The way they did it shouldn't raise any questions."

One financial expert said the partial portrait available from documents suggests that the Clinton's Whitewater dealings were likely to have been legal under complex real estate and tax laws.

"Oftentimes, as long as the bookkeeping entries are accounted for properly, there is no tax issue," said Jack Porter, national director of tax partners at BDO Seidman, a national accounting firm.

Others say the lack of complete records and the informality of some arrangements make it impossible to verify the Clintons' claim that they lost nearly $69,000 in the venture.

"Records for the deal appear to have been sloppy or not kept at all," said a Jan. 17 report in Tax Notes, weekly publication of the industry group Tax Analysts. That article concluded the Whitewater deal raises tax questions because it's not clear whether the Clintons "had income from corporate dividends or loan forgiveness."

The Whitewater venture is part of a Justice Department investigation of the failed Arkansas savings and loan owned by James McDougal, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. The Clintons and McDougals have denied wrongdoing.

The Whitewater deal dates to Aug. 2, 1978, when the Clintons and McDougals purchased the 230 acres for about $203,000 or around $880 an acre, from a larger tract of land owned by a northeast Arkansas company.

That purchase, the records show, was financed by two bank loans taken out by the Clintons and McDougals.

In 1979, they transferred the land to their newly formed Whitewater corporation. Tax stamps from that transfer suggest Whitewater took the land at value of $250,000, raising the question of a profit in the transfer.

McDougal's attorney, Sam Heuer, said the increase reflected the partners' payments on their loans and capital improvements they made on the land such as surveys. It was a "paper transaction," Heuer said.

The Clintons' involvement with Lot 13 began in December 1980, shortly after then-Gov. Clinton lost a bid for re-election.

Mrs. Clinton obtained a $30,000 mortgage from the Bank of Kingston, controlled by McDougal and whose president was Clinton gubernatorial aide Steve Smith.

Whitewater transferred the ownership of the three-acre lot to Mrs. Clinton, according to a warranty deed that lists no purchase price for the transfer. Mrs. Clinton used that property to secure the personal loan.

Company's teaching lessons on environment provoke criticism

By DAVID E. KALISH
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — It seemed like corporate philanthropy to thousands of money-starved public schools: free teaching kits with lessons on environmentalism, a subject many students embrace.

But the curriculum, funded by Procter & Gamble Co., is drawing bad marks from some environmentalists who say it contains misinformation designed to further the interests of the leading consumer products company.

Among the lessons: timber clear-cutting stimulates growth and feeds animals, disposable diapers are as environmentally sound as cloth, and incineration is like recycling.

Critics have asked attorneys general in 11 states to investigate the kits.

Those disputing parts of the curriculum include several members of an advisory panel that reviewed it. They said P&G ignored some of their advice.

Cincinnati-based P&G owns leading household brands ranging from Crest toothpaste to Scope mouthwash to Tide detergent. Its Pampers and Luvs dominate the disposable diaper market.

The company denied suggestions it has tried to mislead teachers and students. It said the "Decision: Earth" kit builds critical thinking skills and taps experience dating to 1912, when students used Crisco oil lessons to learn cooking.

"Clearly in this case we don't believe it's marketing materials and don't believe there's any inherent conflict with existing regulatory guidelines," P&G spokesman Scott Stewart said.

Companies have long tried to influence classroom thinking. But in recent years, businesses have intensified their presence in public schools.

One company, Whittle Communications of Knoxville, Tenn., has aroused a major debate by giving schools free TV gear if they show its regular program of news and ads.

Schools themselves have appealed for corporate help because of budget problems. Businesses also are drawn by kids' spending power, which has doubled since the mid-1980s.

"Schools are just about broke, so they welcome bona fide teaching assistance," said James McNeal, a Texas A&M University professor specializing in children's marketing.

Stewart said that the P&G material is popular with teachers and that some concerns may stem from outdated information, though there are no immediate plans to revise it.

Distributed to 70,000 teachers via mail and conventions for the past two years, the material introduces the "life-cycle" of consumer goods, or their environmental impact from manufacture to disposal.

"Clear cutting removes all trees within a stand of a few species to create new habitat for wildlife," one passage asserts. "Procter & Gamble uses this economically and environmentally sound method because it most closely mimics nature's own processes."

Most environmental experts say any ecological benefits to clear-cutting, which denudes swaths of forest, are overshadowed by erosion, loss of wildlife habitat and the replacement of diverse vegetation with single-species tree "farms." The P&G material doesn't mention this.

Thomas Shimalla, one of six people on the P&G advisory panel, said he didn't remember the clear-cutting depiction and expressed surprise upon hearing it.

"Oh my God," said Shimalla, assistant director of the Pocono Environmental Educational Center in Dingmans Ferry, Pa. "I don't think I would have let something like that slip by."

Panel member Anthea Maton, a curriculum consultant in Oklahoma City, said she had told P&G the passage was inaccurate. "I was surprised when I saw that in there, and I put a little note in there saying this was not necessarily believed by many people," Maton said.

A science teacher who uses the P&G kit, Kathy Lynch of Glen-Este High School in Cincinnati, said she found sections on composting and other topics useful.

But Joan Borovatz, a science teacher at Santa Cruz High in California, said she wouldn't use the kit, partly because of what she called its emphasis on consumerism.

Seminole runs by Brantley

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — If the engine's running rough, give it a little gas, let it rev for a few minutes, and see if it cranks up.

Seminole's Arrow Force II applied that automotive rule of thumb in their Seminole Athletic Conference boys' basketball contest with the host Lake Brantley Patriots and raced away to a 61-46 win Wednesday night.

After struggling in the first quarter, Seminole "hit the gas" on defense and jump-started its offense.

"We were like a 10-cylinder car running on just eight cylinders."

'Hounds continue hot play

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD — Despite the near-freezing conditions, the Lyman High School girls' soccer team was red hot for about 20 minutes Wednesday night, just long enough to singe the visiting Lake Howell Silver Hawks 4-0.

Leading 1-0 at halftime, Lyman struck for three goals in the first 20 minutes of the second half and cruised to its 21st win of the season in 22 starts. It was the 18th consecutive victory for the Greyhounds, who also moved to 9-0 in the Seminole Athletic Conference.

"It was really cold," said Lyman coach Gary Barnett. "Both teams were freezing. We came out and scored 2 1/2 minutes into the game and that was it for the rest of the half."

"Lake Howell played a very strong game in the first half. They challenged us a lot and really took us out of our game in the first half."

After discussing the situation at halftime, the Greyhounds came out at the start of the second half and immediately took matters into their own hands.

"The girls came out and played soccer the way we like to in the second half," said Barnett. "We brought the ball back to the ground and started creating some things on offense."

"Bud" Tobin shows DAR coins and a newspaper from the Revolutionary War era.

Reflections of war WW II Marine relives era for DAR

SANFORD — Page School in Sanford was the scene for the Jan. 14, 1994 meeting of the Sallie Harrison Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The opening ritual was conducted by Regent Virginia Mikler, Chaplain Ester Anderson and Flag Committee Chairman Laura Fansher.
 Following the opening, chapter members sang "Happy Birthday" to member Ethel Deane in observance of her 90th birthday.
 Speaker of the day "Bud" Tobin was introduced by Program Committee member Ester Anderson. Tobin, a member of the Sanford American Legion, served in the U.S. Marines during World War II. He led into his topic — World War II Reflections — by displaying various memorabilia from his collection. These included a number of coins from the Revolutionary War period, as well as a newspaper from the same era. From World War II he showed ration books, short stories, and a number of autographs. He also displayed a saber belt that once belonged to Field Marshal Rommel.

 Tobin's service took him to such places as North Africa and Italy. When Italy surrendered he returned to New York City, then was sent to the Pacific. He was present when General MacArthur, keeping his promise to return, stepped ashore at Leyte, Philippines.
 Following Tobin's talk, Patricia Fox read the president general's message and National Defense Chairman Elisabeth Boyd read an article concerning the continued need for the SDI program.
 Ina Ratliff gave the secretary's report and Emogene Heisman, the treasurer's.
 Membership chairman Catherine Wiley introduced four prospective members: Elizabeth Antakia, Mildred Lind, Suzanne Ogren and Mildred Orlitzki.
 Elected delegates to the 1994 Continental Congress were Ester Anderson and Virginia Mikler with Virginia Kelly as alternate.

Unhappy mom depressing to daughter who wants to help

DEAR ABBY: I've started this letter a hundred times, but tore up all of my beginnings. This one I will mail.
 I love my mother. I really do. But nothing I do (or have ever done) is right. I can be in the best mood when we go somewhere together — or even talk on the phone — but by the time it's over, I am so upset and depressed I feel like crying.
 My mother is down on life, down on men, down on everything! She can't stand to see others have it better than she's had it, and if they do, she finds something wrong with them.
 If I've heard this once, I've heard it a million times: "I've had to work two jobs to support you; your father wouldn't do anything, no matter how good a person you are. If you don't have good luck, you can't get anywhere in this world."

Abby, she never smiles; she wrinkles her mouth up like a prune, and never has a good word to say about anybody. She is so negative and sour on life that I hate to be around her.

I would like to make her happy, but I don't know how. Please, Abby, if you or one of your readers can help me, you could make two people very happy. Maybe other mothers and daughters could benefit from this.

DEPRESSED MOTHER
DEAR DEPRESSED: First, your mother's problem may be physical or emotional. Insist that she have a complete physical examination if she hasn't had one recently. And perhaps a psychological evaluation would be in order.

If neither examination explains your mother's negativity, then instead of letting your mother bring you down, try to bring her up. Take her to a movie (if you can find one that's an upper), even if you have to see "The Sound of Music" or "My Fair Lady" again.

If that doesn't work, say: "Mom, I love you but you're really a downer. I know you've had some rough times, but you're a survivor. If you need therapy, I'll help you get it. Your negative attitude is getting you nothing but loneliness. And let me get you a facial, a massage, a new hairdo, and let's talk about an exercise program for you. Let me help you develop a positive attitude."

DEAR ABBY: My grandma passed away last July. While going through her things, I found this poem. (She did not write it.) When I read it, I couldn't help but laugh:

WHY WORRY?
 There are only two things to worry about:
 Either you are well or you are sick.
 If you are well, there's nothing to worry about.
 But if you are sick,
 There are only two things to worry about:
 Either you get well, or you die.
 If you get well, there's nothing to worry about.
 But if you die, there are only two things to worry about:
 Either you will go to heaven or hell.
 If you go to heaven, there's nothing to worry about.
 But if you go to hell
 You'll be so busy shaking hands with friends
 You won't have time to worry.
STILL SMILING

Public invited to seminars

Free programs cover taxes, stress, crime

LAKE MARY — As the tax season approaches, many citizens worry about their financial future and look for ways to sort out the confusion of the "financial opportunities." Some are overwhelmed with the impact inflation has on their finances and look for ways to structure their savings, investing and insurance programs.

Recognizing the needs of the community, Christian Fellowship Church, UCC has planned a series of community seminars in the financial area as well as seminars addressing other pressings needs. The first seminar will be held on Tuesday, Jan. 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Lake Mary Community Building, 260 N. Country Club Road, Lake Mary.

The workshop which will include budget control, savings, family protection, tax reduction, investing for retirement, and charitable giving will be conducted by Virginia Slade of Waddell and Reed Financial Services.

This informative workshop is free and is open to everyone in the community. Mark your calendar now to come and to invite your friends.

The second of the series will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 22 and is designed to help you empower your life. You will learn how to balance work and home life, manage stress, make challenges become opportunities, create the life you want for yourself and to become an empowered person.

The third session to be held at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, March 22, will be presented by Citizens Against Crime and will address personal safety.

The fourth session to be held at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Apr. 26, will be presented by the Lake Mary Police Department. The topic is: home safety.

Christian Fellowship Church, UCC is a new church started in the Lake Mary area. It has supported several events such as the Easter sunrise service, Thanksgiving dinner and Christmas celebration, and hopes the planned series of seminars will also meet the needs of members of the community.

Any cancer therapy may provide hope

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband suffers from untreatable kidney cancer. He had one removed already because of this. Is a diabetic, and needs some direction. A friend suggested shark cartilage as a possible cure. Is this a logical move on top of the eight medications he's already taking?

Nevertheless, you and your doctor might consider a meticulous investigation to discover if you have clots in the veins I mentioned. A Doppler ultrasound examination or venogram (X-ray of the veins) should indicate whether the veins in your legs and pelvis are free of clots. If they are, fine; you're in no danger. If they're blocked, however, you may have to consider a caval filter.

MEDICINE

DEAR READER: The therapy for untreatable cancer of any type depends on the roll of the dice. Because the condition is, by definition, untreatable (usually because it is too far advanced), any experimental therapy -- no matter how outlandish -- may provide last-ditch hope for cancer patients who cling to life. And, in fact, an occasional, terminally ill patient will seem to respond to unconventional treatment.

I watched the recent "60 Minutes" segment on the use of shark cartilage in cancer patients and was impressed that the substance seemed to show promise. However, there are -- as yet -- no studies convincing enough to sway most cancer specialists.

Because your husband is already taking so much chemotherapy, I'd be reluctant to add another drug -- especially an unproved substance. Nonetheless, it probably wouldn't hurt; ask his oncologist about this.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffered two episodes of pulmonary blood clots in the past, one in 1987 and another in 1991, both of which were near-death experiences. Were I to experience another episode, is there newer treatment for my condition? I was originally prescribed heparin and Coumadin.

DEAR READER: Pulmonary emboli (blood clots in the lungs) are usually the result of clots that break off from veins in the legs or pelvis. Anti-coagulation drugs, such as heparin and Coumadin, remain the mainstay of therapy.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Australian Ron Klinger has written many excellent books. The latest to be published by Gollancz, "Winning Bridge -- Trick by Trick," has reached these shores ($13.45, The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025-7124). It contains 24 defensive and 33 declarer-play problems set out in "movie" style. You cover the page with an opaque sheet of paper and work through the challenging deal, being presented with questions at regular intervals.

Some of the bidding is iffy. Take today's deal. Klinger has South opening with a weak no-trump, showing 12-14 points, and North "cleverly" using Stayman to try to stop a major-suit lead. I'd say it was stupid. If South is 4-4 in the majors, disaster must ensue. Look only at the North-South hands. West leads the heart three: two, ace, nine. Back comes the heart eight: king, four, seven. How do you continue?

This is a rare deal in that you either win an overtrick or go down. The key is to combine your chances. Start with a diamond to the king, hoping for a singleton queen. When that doesn't transpire, run the spade jack. If the spade finesse wins, you will duck a diamond. But if the spade finesse loses, you won't have time to concede a diamond; you will need a 2-2 split.

Here West wins with the king and returns his last heart. Now be careful to lead the diamond jack to dummy's ace. You mustn't fall at the final hurdle by blocking the diamonds. When they are 2-2, you claim 10 tricks: two spades, two hearts and six diamonds.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Elevate your sights a couple of notches higher today where your material objectives are concerned. Thinking "more" should prove an asset, not a detriment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you believe your ideas are better than those of persons with whom you're involved today, speak up against opposition, because they probably are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Although you'll enjoy doing things that earn you accolades from others, your most meaningful performance is likely to be acted out today when an audience isn't present.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's to your benefit to remain in the good graces of key allies today. These are the people who can help you accomplish collectively what you can't do on your own.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) An indecisive friend of yours might come to you for advice today. Fortunately, he/she will have picked the right person, because you'll show your pal how to make a decision and stick to it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Improvements in your financial affairs are indicated at this time, but they might not come about in the exact way you anticipate. Leave a little hedge room, so you can make adjustments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A poor choice has been made in a situation in which you're involved with others. They picked the wrong person to head it up, but if you take charge today, the problem can be corrected.
