Prayer breakfast unites community

Globetrotter Lemon inspires packed audience

Members of the Sanford Kiwanis Club listen attentively to speakers this morning.

SANFORD — The fifth annual Seminole County Prayer Breakfast was as fast-paced and entertaining this morning as any performance by the Harlem Globetrotters.

While the audience at the packed Sanford Civic Center grazed politely on a hearty family style breakfast of omelettes, sausages, bacon strips, fresh fruit and assorted breads, local business and political leaders prayed for the health and prosperity of the area.

Mayor Bettye Smith of Sanford called for the community to join together to work toward the future, to encourage one another and to find leadership that follows a righteous path. She encouraged those in leadership roles to be humble.

"Humility is the correct estimate of ourselves," she said, adding it should be remembered that the "positions we hold are only ours temporarily and they only belong to the people we serve."

Siemens-ROLM awarded contract a second time

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — And the winner is Siemens-ROLM.

Again. For the second time in six months, the Seminole County School Board has selected Siemens-ROLM to provide a telecommunications network for the Educational Support Center and all of the district's schools, following nearly half a year of legal wrangling, name calling and finger pointing.

In a special meeting on Tuesday, the board made official what they had been saying for a month. After reviewing the requests for proposal from Siemens and NEC Communications, the board decided to go with Siemens despite a higher approval rating for NEC from a poll consultant and the board's Business Advisory Board (BAB).

The BAB and the consultant agreed the school board would save nearly a million dollars by using the NEC system which they believed to be more expandable. They believed the initial cost would be slightly higher, but the money spent over the next decade would be less with NEC.

The contract signed yesterday with Siemens will cost the district approximately $10 million over the next decade, nearly half of that in the cost of the initial equipment. The board has entered into the contract with Siemens through the state. The conditions and amounts are the same. State contracts allow government agencies to buy products and services at a prearranged price reached by competitive bid.

After Siemens was selected as the contractor in the fall, NEC filed a formal complaint with the state.

County Republican chairman analyzes primary

By NICK PFEIFAUER
Herald Staff Writer

Pat Buchanan's victory in yesterday's New Hampshire primary was not as much of a surprise as was Bob Dole's second place finish.

Tom Kuhn, chairman of the Seminole County Republican Executive Committee, commented this morning. "I guess we should have seen that as a possibility, especially after Dole didn't win by that big of a margin in the Utah caucus."

"To me however," he said, "the biggest surprise is how well Lamar Alexander did."

In a local straw poll, Kuhn said Alexander tied with Buchanan in receiving nine votes each, while Dole took 23 of the votes. "Actually though it was Phil Gramm who won the poll locally with 38 votes, but he has now dropped out of the race."

What Kuhn said he expects is to see the list of potential Republican candidates begin to dwindle. "In my opinion, some may swing their support to Dole, while others will go to Buchanan. But I don't think there will be too many switching to Alexander."

In that same poll, on a statewide basis, Buchanan came in fourth after Dole, Gramm and Alexander.

Agent admits he made obscene calls

MIAMI — A decorated former U.S. Customs agent admitted he made harassing and obscene phone calls to the mother of a girl who has been missing for more than two decades.

"I felt like I was going insane," Henry Blair said Tuesday during a pretrial hearing on three charges of aggravated stalking of Susan Billig. "It seemed like it got harder and harder to control... It was such a secret thing. How do you tell your co-workers, wife, children that you are torn apart by these thoughts?"

Blair, 48, said he could not control his urges, which he claimed were brought on by mental illness combined with stress, the birth of a child, marital problems and alcohol. The Miami Herald reported in Wednesday's editions.

Billig, whose daughter Amy disappeared from a Coconut Grove sidewalk in 1974, was among his targets. Cellular phone records link Blair to perverse calls made to her and the mothers of two other murdered or troubled women.

"This man has taken my life apart for 21 years," Billig said. In his calls to Billig, Blair often told the tormented mother he was using her daughter as a sex slave.

Blair was arrested Oct. 27 after police traced a call to Billig made from his cellular phone. Prosecutors refuse to say whether Blair, who retired from his Customs job after his arrest, is a suspect in Amy Billig's disappearance.

Crews work to reopen interstate

VENICE, Fla. — Construction crews are working overtime to reopen the southbound lanes of Interstate 75, perhaps as early as this weekend.

The crews are replacing the Salt Creek bridge, damaged when a tanker truck loaded with fuel rolled under it and flared into a 1,900-degree fire. The Feb. 6 crash killed the driver and blistered the bridge beyond repair.

State transportation officials initially predicted that I-75, the main artery leading to southwest Florida and onto Miami, would be closed six to nine months.

They cut off an eight-mile stretch of the interstate and rerouted traffic through downtown Venice on already-jammed U.S. 41. The 15-mile detour caused rush-hour delays of up to 2½ hours and prompted motorists to overload the 911 emergency line with complaints from their car phones.

Three days after the accident, an emergency on-ramp was paved to take traffic back to the interstate north of Venice. It cut the detour to seven miles, three lights and about 30 minutes during peak periods.

To help reopen the interstate during the peak tourist season, construction crews are working day and night on the skeleton of a highway bridge.

The truck's owner, Florida Rock & Tank Lines, headquartered in Jacksonville, will be responsible for the $1.1 million bill.

Chief justice named

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Supreme Court named Justice Gerald Kogan as the high court's next chief justice Tuesday. He will begin his two-year term June 1.

Kogan, 62, was appointed to the court from the Dade County Circuit Court in 1987 by then-Gov. Bob Martinez. He will be the state's 61st chief justice and the fourth Dade County judge to serve in the court's top post in the 150-year history of the state courts system.

"One of the top goals of my administration will be to implement reforms designed to make it easier for Floridians to gain access to services offered by the court," Kogan said in a statement.

That includes strengthening seven-member court's connection to the Internet, provide more education resources for Florida's teachers, and reviewing the court's rules and practices.

Kogan will succeed Chief Justice Stephen Grimes.

Register to vote

TALLAHASSEE — Florida college students may soon be able to register to vote at the same time they sign up for their courses.

The idea, dubbed "Register Once," is being proposed by the Florida Student Association, the lobbying group that represents student interests at the Legislature.

The students want legislators to amend the state's "Motor Voter" law to let them register or get information about absentee voting when they enroll in classes or pay fees.

"Too often, young people are disenfranchised and don't participate in the political process," said Kevin Mayeux, FSA president. "It's a good bill because it gets students involved in their government."

Florida residents already can register at driver's license offices, public assistance offices, libraries and by mail.

If the measure succeeds, students would be able to register on campus by January 1997. They also would be able to change their party affiliation or request an absentee ballot.

Casino gambling in Florida

Push for legalized gaming may be abandoned on 1996 ballot

By ADAM YODANIS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A casino gambling initiative backed by Bally Entertainment Corp. may drop its push to bring legalized gaming to Florida.

A final decision hasn't been made, but organizers of Florida Locally Approved Gaming, or FLAG, said they are leaning toward abandoning their push in this year's election.

FLAG would allow up to 20 casinos in hotels and riverboats in counties where local governments had approved gambling. Seminole County would qualify for a riverboat.

The referendum was poised to make this year's ballot. It had already received approval from the Florida Supreme Court and collected nearly all the 430,000 signatures required.

Chicago-based Bally Entertainment, the sole backer of the campaign, now says it won't try to pass the initiative without financial and organizational support from other business groups.

"If I had to say we were leaning one way or another, I'm leaning toward not doing it," said Bernie Murphy, vice president of Bally. "If Bally calls it quits, this would be the second casino initiative to withdraw."

Safe Bet for Florida, which would have allowed 21 riverboat casinos, has decided any casino referendum would fall after voters defeated casinos by a nearly two-to-one margin in 1994. That was the third time since 1978 that a casino referendum had failed.

Safe Bet had collected more than 400,000 signatures but did not have Supreme Court approval.

Casino opponents welcomed the news but said they had no plans to drop their campaign until the initiatives were officially dead this year.

million, in 1994. That proposal would have allowed 47 casinos around the state.

Bally had expected to spend between $15 million and $16 million on its campaign this year, Murphy said.

"It is going to take a fairly sizeable education campaign," he said.

Murphy said a final decision may be made next week by Bally chief executive Arthur Goldberg after FLAG supporters meet.

FLAG's drive would require eligible counties and cities to approve casinos. Counties with at least 200,000 residents would qualify for riverboat casinos and counties with at least half a million residents could get a hotel casino for every 500,000 people.

Seven counties would qualify for at least one hotel casino: Dade, Broward, Palm Beach, Hillsborough, Pinellas, Orange and Duval. Dade would qualify for three and Broward two.

Another 11 counties would qualify for a riverboat casino: Polk, Brevard, Volusia, Lee, Seminole, Pasco, Sarasota, Escambia, Manatee, Marion and Leon.

Record companies sue Amway over use of music in videos

By NEE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO — Amway Corp. and some of its top distributors "blatantly exploited" recording artists by illegally using their music in promotional videotapes, according to a federal court lawsuit.

Jason Berman said the 108 counts of infringement for the unauthorized use of 57 different sound recordings constituted only a few of the violations. The lawsuit will be expanded as the two-year investigation by RIAA continues, they said.

Amway, founded by Rich DeVos and Jay Van Andel, in 1959, offers more than 400 products bearing the Amway name, plus many other brand name items, through a network of distributors.

Eleven giants of the recording industry filed suit Tuesday in Orlando, alleging that the direct-sales company and numerous individuals violated copyright laws by failing to obtain licensing rights.

Some of the most valuable recordings in the industry were used in videotaped presentations of the glamorous lifestyles led by Amway's "diamond distributors," according to the suit. The videos were used as motivational tools and to recruit other salespeople for the company's home products.

Among the recordings listed in the suit were The Beatles' "Help," Michael Jackson's "Remember the Time" and Whitney Houston's "One Moment in Time."

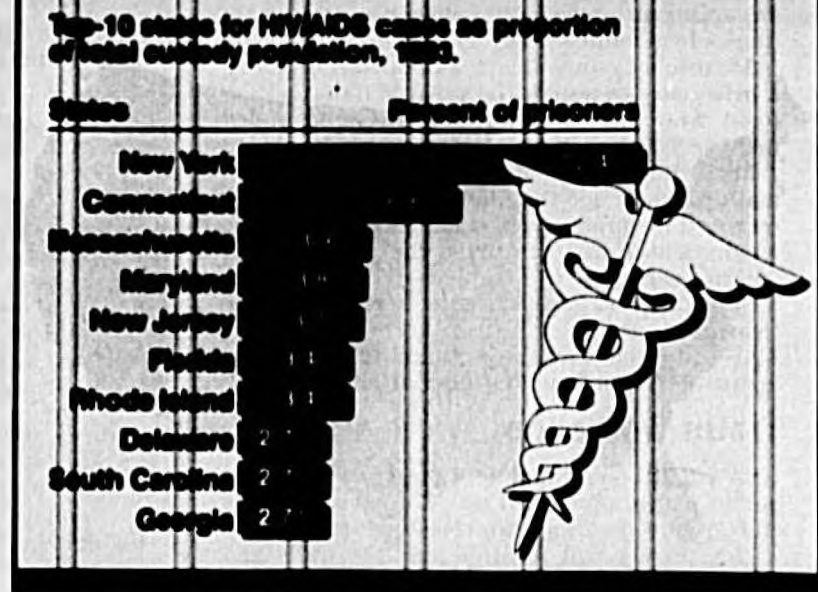

Kim Bruyn, a spokeswoman for Amway, based in Ada, Mich., said the company was not aware of the suit but would not comment on the allegations.

The artists are represented by the Recording Industry Association of America.

"What's unusual about this claim is the massive amount of commercial piracy that has occurred in conjunction with a multimillion-dollar company and multimillionaire business people who should know the law," said Hilary Rosen, president of RIAA.

Hundreds of state workers get raises

By ADAM YODANIS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Lawmakers scraped to find enough money last year to give state workers a 3 percent pay raise.

But legislative leaders haven't had the same problem in giving hefty merit pay increases to their Tallahassee staffers.

Since last summer, House and Senate leaders have granted merit raises of 10 percent and more to hundreds of their legislative staff. Those raises were in addition to the 3 percent raise all state workers received at the beginning of the year.

"The people who work in the House work exceptionally long hours, especially before, during and right after the session," said House Speaker Peter Rudy Wallace, D-St. Petersburg. "They deserve to be rewarded when they perform beyond the call of duty."

John Andrew Smith, longtime director of the Senate Ways and Means Committee, received one of the heftiest raises — a $7,452 boost that increased his annual salary to $118,236 a year, including the 3 percent across-the-board increase. Smith supervises about 30 employees who help write the state's budget, now about $39 billion.

By comparison, Ed Feaver, secretary of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, oversees nearly 30,000 employees and makes $96,196 a year.

Robin Nystrom, who is chief of staff for Senate President Jim Scott, also was rewarded with a 13.3 percent raise, including the 3 percent given to all state workers. Her annual salary jumped from $83,004 to $94,056.

Nystrom defended the merit pay system, saying legislative staffers like herself were rewarded for producing more with less resources.

Armed boy, 10, grabs tot as hostage

By The Associated Press

LAKELAND — A 10-year-old with a loaded shotgun is charged with using his 3-year-old niece as a shield in a standoff with a truant officer because he didn't want to go to school.

For seven minutes Monday, fourth-grader Timothy Becton held Polk Sheriff's deputy Eric Rauch at bay with a .12-gauge shotgun when the officer arrived at the youth's home to check on him, a sheriff's spokeswoman said Tuesday.

NAACP greets new president, Mfume

By BARBARA SUPERVILLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Breathing new life into the NAACP means carving out a larger role for young people and their ideas, says Kweisi Mfume, the civil rights organization's newly installed president.

Mfume said his top priority will be to increase youth membership to help reinvigorate the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and shake the perception that it is a middle-class organization out of step with the next generation.

"While experience and maturity are valued, we must also learn to cherish youth," he said said Tuesday.

As backup deputies began arriving, the boy grabbed his niece, Tiffany Yawn, put her in front of him and told Rauch to shoot, said Sonya Dodds.

The young Becton, known to school authorities as a habitual truant, kept the loaded weapon trained on Rauch and told the officer he would rather shoot him than go to school, she said.

After the incident in the Becton living room ended — without injury — Rauch asked Becton why he used the tot as a shield and the boy replied:

"Because that took your shot away."

"It's an outrage," Dodds said. "We're very fortunate no death was involved. You read about these things, you see them on TV, but until you're faced with it you don't realize how real it can be."

Dodds said the child's father came home and accused officials of picking on his son.

"If it would have been me, I would have shot the deputy," the father was heard to say.

As deputies tried to calm down the 40-year-old Billy Becton, he began arguing to get his shotgun back. When Sgt. Dan Pennell said it was evidence, the elder Becton threatened to shoot him between the eyes, authorities said.

Timothy Becton was charged with aggravated assault with a firearm on a law enforcement officer, armed kidnapping and criminal mischief and turned over to juvenile authorities.

The elder Becton was charged with extortion (threats to an officer) and resisting an officer without violence.

Attendance records show Becton had 14 reported absences in kindergarten, and missed 55 days between first and third grades.

"I was shocked," said Debra Wright, principal at Socrum Elementary where the boy is enrolled. "We've never seen this kind of problem, he's never exhibited any violent behavior."

600 show up for children's summit

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — More than 600 people turned out for a meeting called by Gov. Lawton Chiles to brainstorm about how the state can do more to help its needy children.

"You are really our shock troops," Chiles told the audience at his Children's Summit. "You're the beginning of the force and the force is what you have to create."

As he prepared his budget recommendation for lawmakers earlier this year, Chiles announced he was going to make children's issues the top priority for the three years left in his second term.

The goal behind Tuesday's meeting is to build support for programs that help children who need more or better care, Chiles said.

Recent improvements in infant mortality, immunizations and adoptions could be lost if supporters don't continue to insist they are important, the governor said.

Florida doesn't have to design new programs, Chiles said, because the state has quality programs scattered throughout the state. But the challenge is to expand the successful programs to benefit all children in need, he said.

"We've lit the fuse and I believe that the fuse is burning and the charge is there and we're going to see that it goes off," the governor said at the closing session.

Budd Bell, a longtime children's advocate in Tallahassee, said she was optimistic the meeting could make a difference because it would build networks around the state. She called the turnout wonderful.

"I think people really are trying to say 'Count me in, I want to be part of the solution,'" she said.

Charles S. Peters does volunteer work to increase prenatal care to poor pregnant women and works for Honeywell Inc. Space Systems Division in Clearwater. Peters said his company thinks Chiles is "absolutely right on track."

Peters is in charge of human resources, administration, staffing and community affairs for Honeywell in Florida and can list several family benefits the company provides its employees.

"We can demonstrate for every dollar we put in these programs we get back $2.50 that goes straight to the bottom line," he said.

Peters said he was surprised by the turnout.

"It's large. It's rewarding. It's encouraging," he said. "I hope it really does start some momentum that we can sustain."

Divided into work groups, the people at the summit identified three priorities in helping children.

The first is quality affordable child care. The second is programs and services designed to prevent health and emotional problems from developing. The third is coordination of all services so that children, especially those with special needs, don't fall through the cracks because they don't match up with any particular program.

Political season

Many years ago, in the Little Orphan Annie comic strip, one series focused on a man running for political office. If recollection is correct, it was for the governorship of some state.

In the comic strip, the man never appeared at any political debates, never put out campaign posters or issued political statements. While he didn't do much in expounding his own merits, he never, in any way, attempted to bring bad light to fall on his opponents.

As the story evolved, he eventually won election because he, as "Daddy" Warbucks observed, was the only person in a five candidate race, who never slung mud.

Unfortunately, when the series ended, the man proved to be only a figment of someone's imagination. It was merely a test to see how much effect mudslinging has on a campaign.

The point here is that we believe there are way too many accusations, innuendos, and half-truths being tossed about, not only in the presidential campaigning, but in anticipation of local elections as well.

We believe if a candidate has nothing to say other than mouth dirt toward an opponent, then he or she has nothing to say worth considering.

During this political season, let's look at what a candidate believes he or she can accomplish and how it will be approached, rather than what is wrong with his or her opponent.

Recapture the dream

February holidays remind us of some basic virtues undergirding America's foundation. Washington and Lincoln recall virtues of honesty, integrity and brotherhood. Valentine's Day speaks of hearts, love and devotion. One president was dubbed, "First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen." These thoughts are summarized in a modern phrase, "For God, Home and Country."

Somehow these virtues seem to be overshadowed today in business, social and political relationships. The media reports stories of the "bleeding" of America. Expanded news items tell of shady dealings and downright dishonesty in business, industry and the political realm, and of expanding crime in the "mainstream" of America.

Acerimonious and malicious charges seem to have grasped the minds of many politicians as "a way of doing business." Friendly and cooperative relationships seem to have been "downsized." As verbal attacks and confrontations escalate, they increase our problems. What can we do to solve them?

We need to regain our trust and dependence on the spiritual foundations undergirding America's Constitution and founding policies. These values should be thrust foremost in our political, social and personal relationships.

The New Testament in Paul's first letter to the Corinthians elites how people should act toward one another if they're really sincere and "above board" in their actions, motives and relationships. "Love is patient and kind. Love is not jealous. Is not arrogant. Is not boastful or rude. Love does not insist on its own way. It is not irritable or resentful ... It does not rejoice in wrong."

The American nation was built on religious values and teaching. While it has always rejected the idea of any church running the "state," or interfering with its politics, yet it has built its liberties and democratic policies upon religious and moral values.

We need to return to those values which laid the foundation of our nation. Faith and confidence in these is a primary requisite to America's future.

We need to get America "back on the track" and place moral, ethical and religious values foremost in all our "dealings" in politics, business and social actions.

We need to restore "family values" to prime acceptance in daily life.

We need to place America first above political partisanship.

We need to challenge ourselves as prime motivators in recapturing the American spirit, American values, the American dream.

Lifting sanctions would be misguided

UNITED NATIONS - Five years after the Gulf War, it's easy to understand why Saddam Hussein is still in power and George Bush is not.

But what seems to truly defy logic is what's happening behind the scenes at the United Nations: Russian, French and other diplomats are arguing for a lifting of sanctions against Saddam. Revisionism about the ruthless ruler of Iraq, however, is not confined to the United Nations.

Some military analysts and Bush administration critics have argued that the allied military force should have pursued the Iraqis all the way to Baghdad, found Saddam Hussein and killed him. Even President Bush himself appeared to rethink it a bit in an interview with David Frost.

"I miscalculated," Bush confessed. "I thought he'd (Saddam) be gone" after losing the war.

But knowledgeable military, intelligence and Middle East experts have confirmed to us that Bush's decision was essentially correct. Without intelligence on where Saddam was hiding, coalition forces would have become involved in a pitched urban battle. Even non-supporters of Saddam, including women and children, would have come out to defend their capital from foreign invasion.

Monday morning quarterbacks conveniently forget that the reason coalition troops did not have to duke it out with Iraqi civilians in southern Iraq is because the region is dominated by anti-Saddam Shiite Iraqis. Those people welcomed the invaders with open arms as fellow enemies of Saddam. The Sunni Muslim majority in central Iraq, who give Saddam his power base, would have welcomed the intruders with a different kind of arms -- weapons.

The great irony is that Bush won the war, but inattentiveness to domestic pocketbook issues cost him the presidency a year later. Saddam lost the war, and is responsible for the physical and economic devastation of his country, but he is still in power.

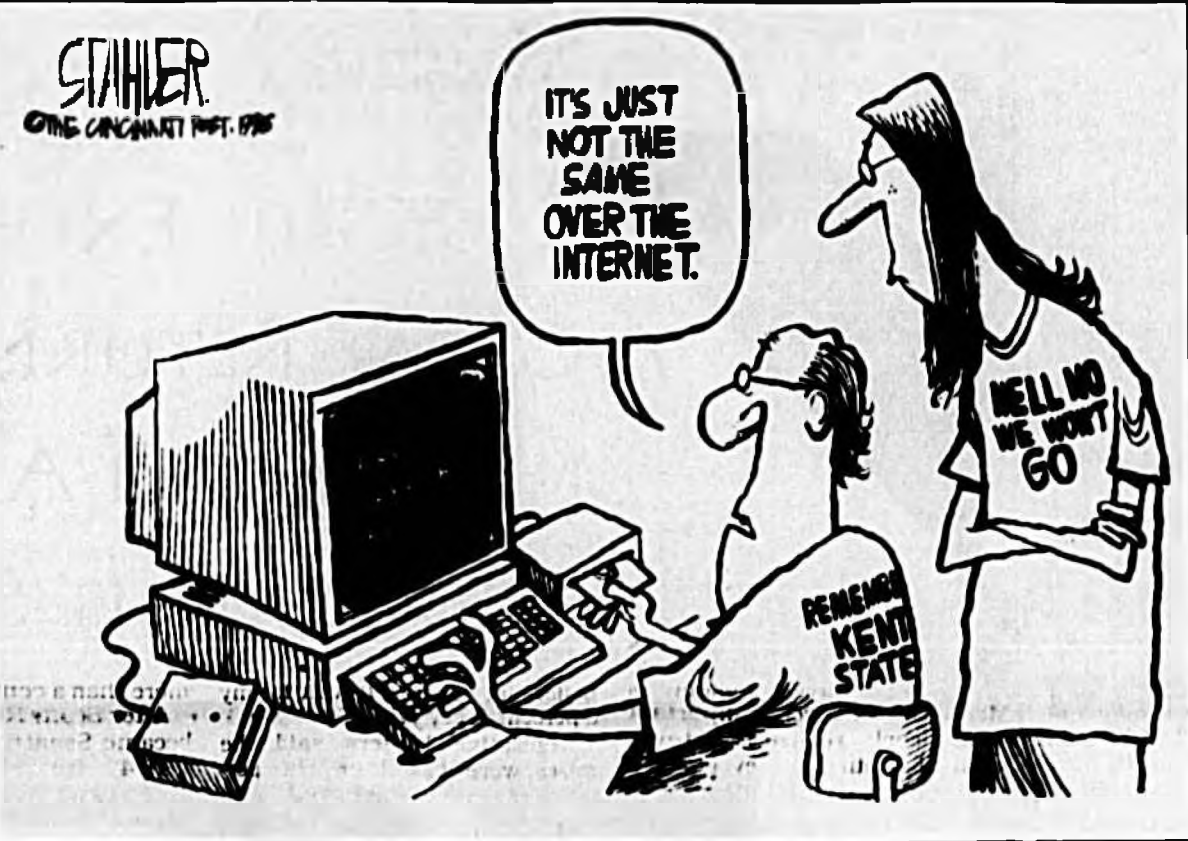

Saddam has always been a cross between Stalin and a Mafia kingpin.

The reason is simple: Saddam has always been a cross between Stalin and a Mafia kingpin. He uses brutal tactics -- such as torture and executions -- to keep subordinates in line. And then, like a Godfather, he forced them to "draw blood" with him -- putting them up to their necks in the same blood-letting that Saddam is hated for.

Thus, the security force that surrounds Saddam consists of thousands of fellow criminals, related by marriage, village ties or political party positions, who cannot afford to let Saddam give an inch or waver. Nor will they likely mount a coup, since they would no doubt be soon ousted by an angry Iraqi populace. The fear Saddam has created through repression is the glue that keeps such men in power.

That's what startles Americans here at the United Nations, and the international staff of the U.N. Special Commission on Iraq, when they hear Saddam defended by Russian and French diplomats. They urge lifting the U.N. sanctions, saying Saddam has complied with enough of the provisions to allow him to sell oil.

Rehashing the Curmudgeon

I don't have a book, but I have a title: "AL FRANKEN IS A MEAN OLD COPYCAT and Other Observations."

The reason I don't have a book, you see, is because "Saturday Night Live" writer and comedian Al Franken just wrote it for me. He collected and reworked a bunch of old Curmudgeon columns and published them under the title, "RUSH LIMBAUGH IS A BIG FAT IDIOT and Other Observations."

OK, OK, maybe he didn't actually lift the Curmudgeon's stuff, but he sure went to school on it, I betcha.

Of course, I would never be so tasteless as to use such a prejudicial title as "RUSH LIMBAUGH IS A BIG FAT IDIOT." I mean, it's just not politically correct. I would have used something more like this: "RUSH LIMBAUGH IS A HORIZONTALLY DISADVANTAGED KNOWLEDGEBASE NONPOSSESSOR."

In any case, I urge the millions of Curmudgeonians out there to read "RUSH LIMBAUGH IS A BIG FAT IDIOT and Other Observations," because it is enormously entertaining. It is enormously informative. It is enormously inclusive -- and Curmudgeonians will immediately realize that they have been reading similar observations right here in this corner of their newspaper.

Throughout "RUSH LIMBAUGH IS A BIG FAT IDIOT," for example, Mr. Franken points out that Rush Limbaugh is a also a big fat hypocrite. Where have you read that before?

Rush denigrates the poor as "piglets" feeding off the government, yet Limbaugh himself once collected unemployment. He criticizes Bill Clinton's draft avoidance, yet Limbaugh himself managed to dodge military service with a health problem he did not previously know even existed. And worst of all, he pokes fun at the physical shortcomings of other human beings.

He ridicules Labor Secretary Robert Reich for his small size and Attorney General Janet Reno for her bulk. He once said Hillary Clinton has a face like a hood ornament. He once asked his studio audience, "Did you know there's a White House dog?" He then held up a photo of 13-year-old Chelsea Clinton.

Of course, Rush Limbaugh can say these things because he is so perfect -- the very personification of a protoplasmic blob. Franken points out more hypocrisy in Chapter 9. Rush and his idols have a lot of experience on which to base their family values. Franken reports, given the fact that they've had so many families, "Quick," Franken asks, "what do Newt Gingrich, Bob Dole, Phil Gramm, and George Will have in common? Answer. They've all been married only one less time than Rush Limbaugh."

Franken points out in Chapter 22 one of Rush's cherished fabrications -- that Ronald Reagan tried to trim government but Congress wouldn't let him. Reports Franken: "Over the eight years of the Reagan presidency, the Gipper asked Congress for $16.1 billion more in spending than it passed into law."

Heh, heh. Go back and check the Curmudgeon's column of Feb. 6, 1989, and guess what you'll see. If you'll trust me, I'll save you the trouble of looking it up: "The simple fact is that Ronald Reagan himself requested $48.1 billion more during his eight-year tenure than Congress appropriated." (I think you'll find my figure more accurate).

Maybe he didn't actually lift the Curmudgeon's stuff, but he sure went to school on it, I betcha.

It's better than you think

MANCHESTER, N.H. - Chatting with the four major contestants who campaigned in the New Hampshire primary yields at least one vigorous opinion shared by them all. They think that their messages have been unreported or misreported by the press. I think they are right, even though some of it is their own fault.

While political tactics and hokum are always at work, Sen. Bob Dole, Gov. Lamar Alexander, Steve Forbes and Pat Buchanan are serious and substantive men, seeking to help America by their own lights.

I was traveling with my sometime colleague in commentary David Gergen. We met up first with Lamar Alexander and the end of a wrap-up party in Bow, N.H., just south of Concord. Later, sharing late-night burgers and shakes in the candidate's campaign van, we hear him sardonically scorch the media. He has been running for two years, and only now is he getting attention. That attention is almost entirely on tactical matters: "Is he moving up?" "Can he finish third?" "Is he the candidate most likely to beat Clinton?"

Alexander says he has a coherent set of views. He wants people to have more power over their own lives and more responsibility; he wants Washington to diminish its role. He has plans for welfare and education. He understands the importance and potency of the values issues. He has even written a book on the subject, which he sardonically notes no one has read, and probably won't until he gets to the White House.

Alexander is confident he will get there -- to a point of cockiness and disparagement. He asks: Who else could beat Clinton? What's Forbes ever done, gone to prep school? Is Forbes qualified to be president?

The next morning we watched Bob Dole at two events and talked with him in a private interview. He was introduced by Ambassador Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick. She recalled what Winston Churchill said when he was appointed prime minister as the dark days of World War II approached: "I've been preparing for this job all my life." It is Kirkpatrick's view that the same situation applies to Dole: It's a dangerous time and this man is ready.

Dole looks most like a president: tall, broad-shouldered, handsome and confident. He was at ease with his audiences -- much more appealing than on television. He picked up the foreign policy theme. The White House, he says, is no place for on-the-job training in a foreign-policy crisis. He is ready. His view is that the new Republican ideas are solid, from economics to values, that the House freshmen are moderating in a healthy way -- and that all the GOP needs is an experienced leader as president who can take them to the promised land with skill and deftness. He is angry that Forbes and the press have brought so much negativity into the race and focused it on him.

What about Steve Forbes? With economist Phil Gramm out of the race there can be little doubt that he knows more about macroeconomics and finance than any of the other candidates -- and perhaps all of them put together. He scorns the venerable "Phillips Curve," which alleges to prove that too much economic growth yields ruinous inflation. Forbes says America is growing too slowly and could grow much, much faster. His chosen instrument to make that happen is a flat, low income tax, with no taxes at all for the poor and lower-middle class. That would provide, among other things, more spending money, more business, more jobs and higher incomes.

Forbes says that economics and values are an integrated whole, bolstering each other. He feels strongly about school vouchers, but complains that such views of his are paid little attention. He acknowledges that his tough negative ads brought some of this on himself, and says that smart people learn from their mistakes, and that he shall stray no more.

Which leaves Pat Buchanan. He was moving slowly on snowy roads, and running late. We talked to him by cellular phone. I asked him if he was running a softer campaign than in 1992, and if so, if it was planned or just happened that way. He said: "I'm four years older. Last time I came in angry -- real angry -- at George Bush for going back on his promises. This time I'm not angry."

Buchanan said he's proud of the insurgent campaign he's running, representing people who are hurting. He said he was going to run this campaign right so that come what may he would be proud of it for the rest of his life. He was more amused than contemptuous of a press corps that now wanted to characterize him as an old-fashioned, protectionist, New Deal Democrat.

He's doing very well now. In my judgment he is dead wrong on trade and immigration, but they are red-meat popular issues, and it's good when such issues are expressed rather than repressed.

I think they are right, even though some of it is their own fault.

Primary

receiving only 301 votes compared to 1,104 for Dole.

Guerrilla politician Pat Buchanan proclaimed "a victory for a cause" in a dime-thin New Hampshire triumph that dethroned Bob Dole without crowning a new front-runner and gave Lamar Alexander a last-man-standing strategy for winning the Republican presidential nomination.

Floridians will have their opportunity to make a selection during "Super Tuesday," on March 12. Prior to that time, on March 5, the "Yankee Primary" will be held, with Maine, Vermont and Connecticut voting, along with Colorado, Georgia, Maryland, and Minnesota.

By that time, experts say the candidates will probably be down to the final few.

In New Hampshire however, the Granite State primary, so often decisive, decided nothing except that the contest will have to be settled elsewhere.

Former Vice President Dan Quayle, offering an observation shared by others in the party, said Dole's weakness — coming atop his thin margin in the caucuses on the friendlier soil of Iowa — has put the nomination "up for grabs."

From here on, Quayle said, Dole was "going to have to go and be energetic and articulate that vision and see if the Republicans will buy it."

Still, no one but his opponents were writing off Dole. The Senate majority leader enjoys the backing of the Republican establishment and has $4.8 million for the next round of primaries and caucuses; his two chief rivals are almost out of cash.

Buchanan, giddy with excitement, told supporters that the party regulars were frantically seeking a way to block him.

"You can hear them right now," he said. "The fax machines and the phones are buzzing in Washington, D.C." And the message, he said, was: "Somebody's got to get out and take on this guy."

Alexander said he was that somebody. He portrayed himself as the mainstream-acceptable alternative to "a weakened Senator Dole" and an overly divisive Buchanan. But he acknowledged, "I've got to start winning soon." In Iowa, he also finished third. Dole won there, but narrowly; Buchanan was an unexpectedly strong second.

Looking stricken Tuesday night, Dole gamely went through the motions of accepting yet one more New Hampshire defeat. His usual bouncy optimism was reduced to a lame invitation to a Dole inauguration.

"Everybody who knows Bob Dole knows that things haven't come easy for me," he told a subdued crowd of supporters. "We're not going to give up."

Dole had often — perhaps brahly — said during the last week that the winner in New Hampshire would get the nomination. Buchanan reminded him of that when the votes came in Tuesday night.

Today, Buchanan took the fight South — where he looked for support from like-minded conservatives — and to the Dakotas, where he planned to scope out Mount Rushmore, monument to the greatest of presidents.

Alexander was heading back to his native South, too, while Dole looked for solace in the Dakotas, in the prairies that produced him.

Buchanan won in New Hampshire by less than 1,400 votes of a record 203,000 ballots cast. With 99 percent of precincts counted, Buchanan had 27 percent, to 26 percent for Dole and 23 percent for Alexander.

Magazine publisher Steve Forbes was humbled by a distant fourth-place finish, with 12 percent. Forbes planned to press on but associates said he was reassessing his unusual candidacy.

In Tier II, Sen. Dick Lugar of Indiana was fifth at 5 percent and moralist Alan Keyes had 3 percent. Illinois businessman Murray Taylor and California Rep. Robert Dornan had little to show their efforts.

Sixteen years ago, Ronald Reagan knocked Dole from the race in New Hampshire. Eight years ago, it was George Bush who delivered the blow.

This time, Dole said he knew why it was called the Granite State — "because it's so hard to crack" — but he promised to soldier on.

More than 30 Republican primaries and caucuses confront the weary candidates over the next five weeks; they will select 70 percent of the delegates and decide the race. But that may take a while.

Buchanan said he was on a roll.

"This is a victory for a cause," he told his joyful Buchanan Brigade. "It is the cause of a brand new, bold conservatism in American politics, a conservatism that gives voice to the voiceless."

But he is short on money, and did not claim that he would ultimately prevail. "I will lead as long as I can and as hard as I can and as far as I can, until we drop the torch and someone else picks it up," Buchanan said instead.

Next Saturday comes Delaware, with 12 of the convention's 1,990 delegates at stake. Only Forbes and the now-withdrawn Phil Gramm made much of an effort there.

On Tuesday, primaries will be conducted in Arizona and the Dakotas, where Dole looked to rebound. Forbes entertains hopes in Arizona because of wealthy retirees who like his tax plan.

But a new Arizona poll said Buchanan was gaining ground on Forbes and Dole, the early leaders, with more than half of those questioned still undecided.

In a survey of 2,556 voters questioned as they left the New Hampshire polls, one third said Dole's age — he's 72 — would hurt him in serving as president.

Alexander and Dole split the moderates, while Buchanan scored with conservatives.

"I love what he stands for," said Lucille Sarette, an independent who voted for Buchanan. "He'll bring America back to its heritage. God-fearing people — that's what we need."

Prayer

But as the spotlight passed to Meadowlark Lemon, former Globetrotter great, the mood lightened though the subject remained serious.

With the forceful, pounding voice of a preacher, Lemon handed the scriptures with the same nimble motions as he once handled a basketball.

He spoke of the ways he communicates with God (and, more importantly, he said, how God communicates with him). The Lord, he said, is an understanding God, but He wants a commitment.

People do not have to be perfect, he said. Only Jesus Christ is perfect, he said.

"Y'all are gonna be ugly sometimes," he said. "It's OK. You can't help it. You're gonna drive out of here and someone's gonna cut you off and you're gonna be ugly. That's the way it is."

Then, covering his Bible with a red napkin from beside his plate, he said, "But, you're covered. The blood of Jesus has got you covered."

Lemon demonstrated that at nearly 84-years-old, he's still got what it takes with a basketball. Passing a multi-colored ball through his legs, over his shoulder, around his back and to an unprepared target with accuracy and pizzazz, he brought cheers from the audience.

"I know y'all like Shaq (Shaquille O'Neal) and Penny (Anfernee Hardaway)," he said, referring to the stars of the Orlando Magic, "but before there was Shaq or Penny, there was Meadowlark. And I'm gonna teach Shaq how to shoot freethrows."

When the cheers and laughter died down, he said he would need to bring O'Neill to the Lord first.

"And don't tell me," he said, "that the Holy Ghost can't teach you how to shoot a freethrow."

The father of a 17-month-old son, Lemon said children do what they see at home and, after relaying various amusing anecdotes about his son, Caleb, he noted that it is our (adults) responsibility to set a good example for the next generation.

"I've seen so many young people in prison because we messed up," he said.

The prayer breakfast brought together people from all walks of life to enjoy Lemon's stories and demonstrations, but they also came together to pray for the future of Seminole County and the world. The event was the brainchild of Steve Strang, owner of Strang Communications in Lake Mary. Area businesses combine talents to bring the event to Sanford each year.

He wants to increase the corporate support that slowed to a trickle after a series of embarrassing revelations in 1994 about NAACP leaders and their spending, and persuade creditors to either forgive or restructure portions of the organization's debt. He did not rule out further staff cuts.

Mfume, a Maryland Democratic representative who resigned his House seat to head the NAACP, was flying to Los Angeles today to announce nominations for the NAACP Image Awards, a program that in the past few years has lost more money.

But in a deal with the Fox network, Mfume said the NAACP "won't have to put out a dime" and stands to make money on the program, which is scheduled to be taped in April for its first prime-time broadcast.

Study: Third of prostate surgery patients need more treatment

By LAURAN NEERGAARD Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Men who have their cancerous prostates removed in the hopes surgery alone will cure them should know they may have a one-in-three chance of needing additional cancer therapy, researchers report today.

Surgery is one of the most common ways to try to cure prostate cancer, the second-leading cancer killer of men. But until now, doctors had no way to tell patients how likely they were to need additional treatment to fight relapse.

A study of more than 3,000

Medicare patients found 35 percent received radiation treatment, hormone injections or had one or both testicles removed within five years of the original prostate surgery.

"If a man chooses surgery just because they think they may be done with the cancer ... they need to know surgery may not be sufficient," said Dr. Lu-Yao of the Health Care Financing Administration, whose study appears in today's Journal of the National Cancer Institute.

Lu-Yao may have overestimated the retreatment rate, because she studied patients diagnosed before doctors began using a blood test called PSA to detect prostate tumors earlier, said Dr. Gerald Chodak of the University of Chicago.

Still, the study gives doctors the sound advice that "you cannot be over-optimistic about surgery," added Dr. Peter Scardino of Baylor College of Medicine. "It's very important that people realize whatever form of treatment they get, including surgery, there is no guarantee they will be cured."

About 317,000 American men will be diagnosed with prostate cancer this year and 41,400 will die, the American Cancer Society estimates.

Prostate cancer usually occurs in older men and often grows slowly. Men whose tumors are very small often choose merely to monitor the cancer rather than risk such surgical complications as impotence or urinary incontinence. Others choose among surgery, radiation and hormonal treatment.

Lu-Yao, then at Dartmouth University, decided to see how often patients undergoing the surgery, called radical prostatectomy, got additional treatment. She studied 3,494 Medicare patients in Connecticut, Washington and Georgia who had radical prostatectomies between 1985 and 1992.

One reason the retreatment rate was so high was that surgery is supposed to be done only on men whose cancer hasn't spread beyond the prostate, but just 55 percent of the study participants fit that description. Because doctors don't have a good test for tumor spread, they often discover cancer's spread while they're operating, Lu-Yao explained.

Among optimal candidates for surgery — the 1,934 whose cancer had not spread — some 15.6 percent men with less aggressive tumors and 41.5 percent of those with aggressive tumors needed additional therapy.

things differently, it's not going to be just tenure, plod along, everybody-treated-the-same," said Scott, who presides over the first Republican-led Senate in more than a century.

After Scott's R-Fort Lauderdale, became Senate president in late 1994, he eliminated 21 Tallahassee staff positions and revamped the functioning of Senate committees. Instead of working only on their own projects and legislation, committee staffers were ordered to work with counterparts in other areas.

More than 300 legislative staffers — or more than half of the 540 House and Senate capital staff — have received the special raises. That figure will rise as other employees get pay increases during the remainder of the budget year that ends June 30.

officer sided with NEC in a hearing in December. The board's selection of Siemens-ROLM was "arbitrary and illegal," the officer wrote.

According to Diane Kramer, the district's executive director for facilities planning, the school board will pay NEC approximately $150,000 to compensate them for not being awarded the contract, despite their higher rating. Siemens will lower their equipment costs to help defray the cost of the payment to NEC.

Siemens-ROLM has told the board they will have the first phase of the new system in place within three weeks.

Steve Newton, spokesman for NEC, could not be reached for comment.

School Board bans clubs

SALT LAKE CITY — Rather than allow gay students to form a club, the city Board of Education narrowly voted to ban all nonacademic clubs, including chess, ski, Students Against Drunk Driving and Bible clubs.

The measure, which passed 4-3 Tuesday after a heated 4½-hour public hearing, takes effect this fall.

The proposal by students at East High School to form a gay-straight student alliance had created controversy throughout Utah.

Supporters contended that children struggling with sexual identity problems needed to be able to support each other. Some opponents equated homosexuals with transvestites, alcoholics and perverts.

"I don't believe our young people should be placed in a position to deal with these kinds of issues," said board member Clifford Higbee, who made the motion to ban the alliance. "This is a moral issue."

Doug Bates, attorney for the state Office of Education, feared that banning extracurricular clubs would harm many students.

"Neither straight kids nor gay kids can use the schools as a place to organize orgies," Bates said. "That's what people are afraid of."

Greenspan: Economy on track

WASHINGTON — Hedging his bets, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan is telling lawmakers the economy is "basically on track" but also is signaling that interest rates could be cut to ensure sustained growth.

In a closely-watched semiannual report to Congress on Tuesday, the central bank chairman acknowledged economic performance was dismal in January. But he expressed confidence that "any weakness is likely to be temporary" — the result of two partial government shutdowns, a transitory increase in backlogs of unsold goods and heavy winter snowfall.

"A number of fundamentals point to an economy basically on track for sustained growth," he said.

His comments rattled nervous financial market traders who fear the Fed may be less likely than had been anticipated to push short-term interest rates lower this spring.

Bombing trial moved to Denver

OKLAHOMA CITY — Keith Coverdale wants to be at the trial of the two men charged with blowing up his two little boys. But now he and others touched by the federal building bombing must travel about 600 miles to attend, a journey some won't be able to make.

"We in Oklahoma didn't choose for them to come here and for this bomb to blow up here," said Coverdale, whose sons Aaron, 5, and Elijah, 2, died in the building's day-care center. "We are all victims in this state, and this will bring hardship on some families to attend."

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch ruled Tuesday that Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols "have been demonized" in the news media, and moved the case to Denver to ensure a fair trial. He did not set a trial date.

Coverdale and others said the ruling at the very least will make it difficult for them to attend as much as they would have liked. Nonetheless, many agreed with the judge.

Restaurant no-show penalty

ARLINGTON, Va. — American Express is testing a punishing new program: charging restaurant customers a penalty of up to $25 for not canceling reservations secured with the credit card. USA Today reported today.

The company launched a test program last summer at 35 restaurants in 20 cities, including New York and Houston, and plans to go nationwide in May, the newspaper said.

To guarantee a reservation, customers must provide their credit card number. And if plans change, the person must call to cancel — or pay $10 to $25 per person.

A restaurant cannot charge a no-show fee to a credit card unless it has the card sponsor's prior approval. MasterCard and Visa said they have no plans for such a program.

Getting out of Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — By bus and by truck, Bosnian Serb leaders are offering Serbs the means to get out of Sarajevo before their wartime enemies start taking control of their neighborhoods.

The message was repeated Tuesday on Bosnian Serb television and radio: Serb authorities would provide transport, food and fuel for those wishing to flee before Friday, when five Serb-held districts will gradually be turned over to Muslim-Croat control. The switch is to be completed by March 19.

Roads into Serb-held districts were clogged with empty buses and trucks struggling through heavy snow. Dozens of trucks and cars, even horse-drawn carts and tractors towing trailers, drove out.

In the northern Sarajevo suburb of Vogošća, Serbs carried piles of documents out of the town hall and set them on fire. Workers stripped the building of everything but some doors and old chairs.

Healthy restaurant breakfasts?

By BARLENE SUPERVILLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Start the day with a typical family-style restaurant breakfast and you could be getting nearly a day's worth of fat and more than 1,100 calories — all of them before that morning meeting, a consumer group said today.

But there was good news too.

Diners can get healthier breakfasts at these restaurants by ordering cautiously and requesting substitutions, said Jayne Hurley, senior nutritionist at the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

"But if you're not careful, it's easy to consume an entire day's worth of fat, saturated fat, cholesterol and sodium, all before 10 a.m.," said Hurley, who announced the results of the group's latest restaurant survey.

Previous studies by the Washington-based consumer-advocacy group have examined the healthfulness of restaurant-prepared Chinese and Italian foods, deli sandwiches and movie-theater popcorn.

For its newest study, the center dissected 12 popular breakfast entrees and side dishes bought at 17 locations in Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles and Washington. The restaurants included Denny's, the International House of Pancakes and Bob's Big Boy.

The survey found two days' worth of cholesterol, 49 fat grams and more than 1,100 calories in the most popular breakfast choice — two each of eggs, sausages, bacon and pancakes — such as the Denny's "Grand Slam."

The government recommends a daily fat intake of 65 grams for adults.

"A Grand Slam-type breakfast is a nutritional strikeout," Hurley said.

Attempts to get comment from officials at Denny's, IHOP or Bob's Big Boy by telephone Tuesday evening were not successful.

To make such meals healthier, Hurley suggested asking for egg substitute, skipping the butter or margarine and substituting fresh fruit for sausage or bacon.

But there's little hope for improving the beloved Belgian waffle.

A single waffle sans whipped cream had 17 grams of fat — the same as in two McDonald's Quarter Pounders — and 800 calories, mostly because of the eggs, butter and milk in the batter.

Pancake or French toast platters with four sausages contained about 65 grams of fat, as did the biscuit and gravy platters analyzed.

The best breakfast choice was the hot or cold cereal platter, with fresh fruit, juice and toast and jam, minus the butter or margarine. It weighed in with about 600 calories and 7 grams of fat.

Health-conscious eaters should take advantage of breakfast buffet bars to stock up on unlimited amounts of fresh fruit and cereal, Hurley said.

But diners who must have their favorites should remember that:

—Hash browns have 11 grams of fat, half as much as french fries, and roughly the same as two slices of toast with margarine.

—A side order of sausage (four links) has about 32 fat grams — 10 times the amount in a 2-ounce order of ham; the fat content of four strips of bacon falls somewhere in between the two.

—When ordering toast, French toast or pancakes, ask the waiter to hold the butter or margarine that some establishments add automatically. Use only jam on toast, low-calorie syrup or two tablespoons of the regular kind.

The center made composites of nine samples of each breakfast component and sent them to independent labs where they were tested for calories, fat, saturated fat, cholesterol and sodium. It calculated numbers for the platters by adding lab results for each component.

Magic set record

ORLANDO — Orlando didn't miss its shot at NBA history.

The Magic set an NBA record for home wins at the start of a season, improving to 28-0 at Orlando Arena with a 123-104 rout of Philadelphia on Tuesday night.

Orlando, which got 24 points and 13 rebounds from Shaquille O'Neal, broke a 49-year-old standard set by the 1946-47 Washington Capitols team coached by Red Auerbach. The Atlantic Division leaders have won 35 straight regular-season games at home, three shy of the league record held by the Boston Celtics.

Dennis Scott was 6-for-8 from 3-point range and scored 20 in the first half. Nick Anderson had 14 points and Anfernee Hardaway 13 before four of Orlando's starters went to the bench for good late in the third quarter.

Horace Grant, who made all six of his shots and scored 12 points, was the only Magic regular to play in the fourth quarter. He left with just under nine minutes to go, and Philadelphia responded with a 44-point period.

Tribe fails to Terriers

SANFORD — Titusville scored five runs in the top of the fifth inning to break a 2-2 tie and went on to beat Seminole 7-4 in a girls' softball game Tuesday afternoon.

Shawna Doolittle went 2-for-4 with an RBI and Kelly Langton had a single and scored a run for the Tribe, who will host Osceola in a Class 5A-District 6 contest at home at 3 p.m. today.

Table with 2 columns: Team, Record. Rows include Titusville, Seminole, and a combined record for Linsley and Altman.

ASA umpires needed

SANFORD — Umpires are needed to umpire ASA (Amateur Softball Association) softball in Sanford and surrounding leagues.

A clinic will be provided. Interested people should call 321-2752 for more information.

Lake Brantley postpones game

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Lake Brantley's home opener for its baseball team with Dr. Phillips was postponed Tuesday night while school administrators look into a situation that occurred while the team was in Tampa playing in a tournament this past weekend.

Lake Brantley head coach Mike Smith would only say that several players had broken curfew. Police were called to the hotel where the team was staying but no report was filed by Tampa Police.

A decision on the fate of the players is expected either today or Thursday. The Dr. Phillips game may be rescheduled for Saturday.

Cox headed to Bears

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Bryan Cox, a three-time Pro Bowl linebacker known for his emotional outbursts with the Miami Dolphins, has agreed to four-year contract with Chicago.

A source close to the negotiations said the contract is worth $13.2 million, with a $5 million signing bonus. The unrestricted free agent made $1.1 million last season.

Stockton now Mr. Theft

SALT LAKE CITY — John Stockton broke Maurice Cheeks' NBA career record for steals in Utah's 112-98 victory over Boston.

The Jazz guard reached steal No. 2,311 when he took the ball from Eric Williams with 8:21 left. Stockton, who set the career record for assists last season, finished with two steals, 14 assists and six points.

Cheeks had 2,310 steals in 15 seasons.

Magic Injured

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Magic Johnson strained his right calf in the first quarter of the Los Angeles Lakers' 121-104 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers.

Johnson, who didn't score and had no shot attempts, rebounds or assists, immediately headed to the dressing room and left the Forum before the game was over. Team spokesman John Black said Johnson's calf started bothering him in practice Monday, and added Johnson was "day-to-day."

OAKLAND, Calif. — Cornerback Larry Brown, the Super Bowl MVP, has left the Dallas Cowboys for the Oakland Raiders.

Lake Mary girls rally; Lake Howell ousted

By GARY GOATMAN Herald Staff Writer

Lori Hammett looks to shoot over a Hurricane double team in Lake Mary's 63-60 North II Regional Quarterfinal victory over Lake Weir Tuesday. Hammett had 12 points as the Rams advanced to Saturday's semifinals.

LAKE MARY — Two freshmen combined for 35 points Tuesday as No. 7 Lake Mary rallied from a huge third quarter deficit to knock off Lake Weir 63-60 in a Class 6A North II Regional Quarterfinal contest at Lake Mary High School.

Freshmen Lauren Bradley had 21 points and Ashlee Ballance 14 as the District 4 champion Rams outscored the District 3 runner-up Hurricanes 22-8 in the fourth quarter to erase a 52-41 deficit at the end of three periods.

"Lake Weir played very hard, but our kids showed a lot of heart and poise," said Lake Mary coach Carl Brown. "I'm proud of our kids. We were a little nervous when the game started, but we were able to get the shots we wanted once we settled down."

The victory puts Lake Mary (25-2) into the North II Regional Semifinals this Saturday night against District 1 runner-up Pensacola High School (24-4). The Tigers eliminated District 2 champion Madarin 61-51 in Jacksonville Tuesday night. The game will be played at Lake Mary starting at 6:30 p.m. or 7:30 p.m., depending on the outcome of tonight's boys game.

Ballance gave Lake Mary an early 5-0 lead with a three point field goal, but an 8-0 spurt gave Lake Weir an 8-5 lead. Stephanie Dale pulled the Rams even at 8-8, and another Ballance three pointer gave Lake Mary a 13-12 advantage. The Hurricanes had a 14-13 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Lake Weir opened the second quarter with a 7-2 spurt for a 21-15

Dream Catchers clinch at Chase

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — The Dream Catchers did everything but win the title of the Sanford Recreation Department Women's Chase Park Polar Bear Slowpitch Softball League Tuesday night as all three of their nearest competitors in the standings all lost.

The Dream Catchers took care of two of the teams themselves, scoring seven runs in the final three innings to erase an early 5-3 deficit and then withstood a seventh inning Sharks rally to win 10-8, then punting their nearest competition, the She-Devils, 21-1 in less than five innings. In the late game, the Red Hots jumped out to a 17-8 lead in the third inning and held on for a 21-18 upset of Club Paradise.

The Dream Catchers are now 8-1 and have clinched a tie for the championship. The only team still with a chance is the She-Devils, who are now 4-4 and must win their final four games and hope the Dream Catchers lose their last three.

Completing the standings are the Sharks and Club Paradise (both 3-5) and the Red Hots (3-6). See Chase, Page 2B

C & A Sales took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning before Sanford Magic came back with a run in the bottom of the first inning and another run in the fourth to go ahead 2-1. C & A Sales tied things back up with a run in the top of the sixth inning.

But the C & A Sales defense fell apart in the bottom of the sixth inning as three errors loaded the bases with only one out and Bazler

SCC held leads of 7-3 and 8-4 and the score was still tied at 10-10 heading into the bottom of the seventh inning when the Titans (8-2) came up with five runs to claim the victory.

It was the wildness on the part of the Raiders pitchers that spelled the difference as seven of the BCC players that reached by either a walk or a hit batter scored.

Wake up to coffee's culinary perks

By MARILYN GAATA
NEA Food Writer

If you were stranded on a desert isle, and could only have a few foods with you, do you know what they would be? My list is far from complete, but I know two things that would top it: garlic and coffee. Garlic, because almost anything (with the possible exception of coffee) tastes better with garlic, and coffee because, well, because life would hardly be worth living without it. I know that sounds extreme, but I am extremely fond of coffee. I buy the best beans I can afford (organic, when I can find them) and grind them up each morning in that little fetishistic ritual that so many of us caffeine fiends follow. (While I love coffee, I am not indiscriminate: I eschew most supermarket blends and would have to be pretty desperate to drink instant.)

Now, anyone serious about coffee should immediately go out and buy "The Joy of Coffee," by Corby Kummer (Chapters, 1996), a book which will tell you everything you need to know about coffee, and a lot more you didn't know you needed. (As part of his research, Kummer visited the famed La Minia plantation in Costa Rica, and he takes readers through the planting, growing, harvesting, sorting, roasting and brewing process.) Kummer also offers some terrific, friendly recipes for cookies, candies, cakes and other sweets which, I can promise you, will go great with a cup of coffee. (Even - sniff - TEA drinkers will find these recipes wonderful.)

A book of a different sort is "Coffee: The Essential Guide to the Essential Bean," by Catherine Calvert (Hearst Books, 1995). It has a great look, evocative photos, and some very sophisticated recipes for dishes that are made with coffee, or good to eat with coffee, or just plain good.

The recipes below put my favorite bean to good use. As a bonus, I have included the Barbecue sauce recipe from Chef Benjamin Cevelo of The New England Culinary Institute in Essex, Vt. This is simply the best BBQ sauce I have ever tasted. The secret ingredient?

You guessed it.

BLACK AND WHITE COFFEE CHIP COOKIES

- 1-1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2/3 cup unsalted butter, softened
- 1/2 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1 large egg
- 1 teaspoon instant coffee powder, dissolved in 1-1/2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
- 4 teaspoons ground coffee (regular grind)
- 1/2 cup semisweet chocolate chips
- 1/2 cup white chocolate chips

Center a rack in the oven. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Lightly grease 2 baking sheets or line them with parchment paper.

Sift together the flour, baking soda and salt into a small bowl; set aside.

In a large bowl, with an electric mixer on medium speed, cream together the butter and sugars until light and fluffy, scraping the bowl to blend batter evenly.

Add the egg, the coffee-vanilla mixture and the ground coffee and blend 1 minute.

Add the flour mixture and mix about 1 minute. Stir in both kinds of chips with a wooden spoon.

Drop by scant tablespoonfuls onto the baking sheets, about 2 inches apart. Bake 1 sheet at a time for 12 to 14 minutes, or until cookies are golden around the edges. Remove from pan immediately and cool on wire racks. Store in airtight container for up to 1 week or freeze for up to 4 months.

Yield: about 3 dozen cookies.

BLACK AND WHITE Coffee Chip Cookies are a delicious treat that coffee lovers will adore.

With an electric mixer on medium speed (use whisk attachment if using a standing mixer), whisk the egg whites with the salt and cream of tartar until soft peaks form.

With mixer running, gradually add sugar, 1 tablespoon at time.

Scrape sides of bowl. Add the ground coffee, the coffee-liqueur mixture and the vanilla. Whisk on medium speed a few seconds, just until incorporated.

Drop batter onto baking sheets by scant teaspoonfuls, about 1 inch apart.

Bake 1 sheet at a time for 40 minutes, until cookies are firm. Let cool completely on the pan before removing. Store in an airtight container for up to 2 weeks for freeze for up to 4 months.

BARBECUE SAUCE

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1/2 cup minced onion
- 2 tablespoons minced garlic
- 1/2 cup brewed coffee (strong)
- 1/2 cup Worcestershire sauce
- 1-1/4 cups ketchup
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- 4 tablespoons packed light brown sugar
- 2-1/2 teaspoons chili powder
- 1-1/2 teaspoons chili paste (available in Asian markets, often as garlic chili paste)
- Salt and pepper to taste

To make the sauce (can be done several days before you are using it): melt the butter in a heavy-bottomed saucepan or skillet. Add the onions and simmer 3 to 4 minutes. Add garlic and saute a few more minutes. Add the coffee, Worcestershire sauce, ketchup, vinegar and brown sugar. Simmer for 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Season with chili powder, chili paste, salt and pepper. Cool. Store, covered, in refrigerator.

Yield: 2 cups.

Woman's success story may affect welfare of others

DEAR ABBY: I can relate to "Elizabeth B. in Fresno, Calif.," who is struggling on welfare and has to contend with the disapproval of others. When I was 19, my husband walked out on me and our infant. I had nowhere else to turn, and was on welfare from 1975 to 1978.

Abby, after I received my AFDC check and paid my rent, phone and light bills, I had $5 left each month. Food stamps cannot be used to purchase diapers, toiletries or even laundry detergent. If it hadn't been for my family sharing these items with me, I don't know what would have happened to us. Because I was so embarrassed by the disparaging looks I received, I tried to shop for groceries when the store was least busy.

Things began to turn around

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

when my case worker phoned to tell me about a job that was available through the CETA (Comprehensive Employment Training Act) program. My first job was clerking for the Department of Public Assistance. While I was learning skills, I was earning an income, and I have been working ever since.

Hang in there, Elizabeth, and don't give up. I know it's hard to ignore the nasty remarks and looks, but someone will give you your chance. I have owned my own business for eight years now, and I would hire you.

WORKED OFF WELFARE

DEAR WORKED OFF WELFARE: I'm printing your success story for Elizabeth and others like her to see. You are a voice for people everywhere who have struggled through difficult periods and pulled through — not only intact, but improved. My hat's off to you.

For readers who are interested, the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) replaced CETA in 1983. Its purpose is to assist youths and unskilled adults enter the labor force. For more information, contact your state employment office.

DEAR ABBY: Every member of my family has two children. My husband and I have one child.

At birthday time, we invite 20 cousins to a party, yet only 10 gifts are received — and they are not doubly expensive either.

Abby, I think each child should give a gift, not just one gift from each family. After all, throughout the year, we give 20 gifts and host 20 children at our child's birthday party.

Fair play would dictate that each child bring a gift — or at least make the "family" gift slightly more significant.

I hate to appear petty, but after five years of this inequality, I'm angry and disappointed that my relatives haven't figured this out themselves.

Is there a tactful way for me to mention it?

P.O.D IN NEW YORK

DEAR P.O.'D: There is no

tactful way to remind your relatives that you are spending twice as much for birthday gifts as they are. They surely are aware of it, so for you to "mention" it would be in extremely poor taste.

DEAR ABBY: Help! We named our daughter after both of her grandmothers. The first name is after her paternal grandmother and the middle name after her maternal grandmother. On her birth certificate, I spelled the middle name differently because I thought it looked better.

Now my mother says her granddaughter is not named after her because the spelling is different. I say, so what? She is named after both grandmothers. What do you say?

NEEDS YOUR OPINION IN N.C.

DEAR NEEDS: I agree with you — so what? Your daughter is named after both grandmothers regardless of how the name is spelled.

Thyroid disorder could be the culprit

DEAR DR. GOTT: I just read an article on thyroid disorders and wonder if I could have the problem. I have cold hands and feet, a low energy level, muscle aches and weakness, and weight gain. I'm a 19-year-old female. Since the age of 14, I've gained 10 or 20 pounds a year. The gain is consistent, whether I'm eating healthily and exercising, or not. Could a thyroid disorder be behind all this?

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR READER: The thyroid gland governs metabolism. Too little thyroid hormone slows the body, too much accelerates it. Therefore, signs of hypothyroidism (underactive thyroid) include lassitude, weakness, slow thinking, constipation, heart disorders, and a host of other signs and symptoms.

DEAR READER: Numbness in the arms means that the nerves are not functioning normally. This could, as you suspect, be caused by poor circulation. However, in my experience, it's more likely due to pressure on the nerves to your arms. You may have a herniated disc in your neck, an arthritic spur or some other bone abnormality that is impinging on the nerves.

First of all, you need an examination by your family physician. This should include blood tests and X-rays of your neck. Then, depending on the findings, the doctor may choose to refer you to a neurologist for further testing (such as a nerve conduction study) or to an orthopedic surgeon for treatment of a spinal problem; this might include physical therapy or, in an extreme case, corrective surgery.

The place to start is with your doctor. He can enlist the aid of specialists, if needed.

* 1986 NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

You'll notice that I failed to mention weight gain. This is because an underactive thyroid gland does not cause significant weight increase. What little weight is gained is caused by edema (excess fluid retention).

For the sake of completeness, I'll mention that hyperthyroidism (overactive thyroid) leads to nervousness, intolerance to heat, rapid pulse, weight loss, and many other manifestations. Patients with excess thyroid hormone lose weight because the body is forced to burn whatever tissues (including fat and muscle) are available to supply energy for the hyper-metabolic state.

I gather from your question that you believe your thyroid gland may be underactive. I agree. Check with your family doctor, who will examine you and obtain blood tests to analyze thyroid function. The tests are simple, quick and relatively inexpensive.

If your thyroid is deficient, the doctor will prescribe thyroid supplement pills.

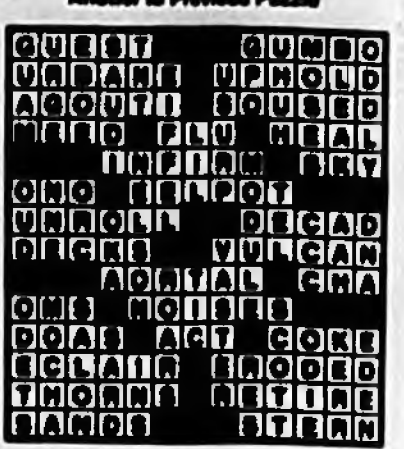

Regardless of your thyroid status, you should address your weight as a separate problem. Ask the doctor about a healthful diet or join a weight reduction program, such as Weight Watchers.

To give you more information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports "Weight Control through Calorie Control" and "Winning the Battle of the Bulge." Other readers who would like copies should send $2 for each report plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title(s).

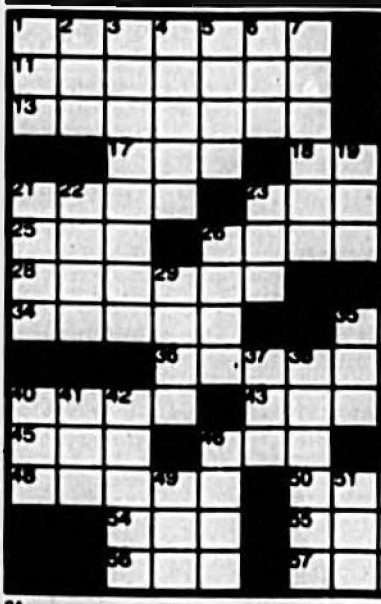

DEAR DR. GOTT: For the last month I've had to rub my arms because they fall asleep while I'm sitting, or they wake me from a sound sleep. I'm 38 and am very concerned about my circulation.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Play to your assets

By Phillip Alder
Sir Thomas Beecham, the conductor and impresario who founded the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, said, "There are two golden rules for an orchestra: start together and finish together. The public doesn't give a damn what goes on in between."

6-10 high-card points. The play began with a diamond to dummy's king, a heart to the queen and ace, a diamond to dummy's ace and a heart to the jack, which pulled the trumps. Next, declarer took the club finesse, but East won with the queen and switched to a spade, defeating the contract when West had two tricks to take.

Only someone in Beecham's position could say something like that. Yet there are bridge players who, when they are dummy, only care that the declarer comes home with the right number of tricks. What goes on between trick one and trick 13 doesn't matter. In today's deal, though, what goes on in the middle does matter. A misstep costs three tricks. How should South play in four hearts against a diamond lead? South opened with a weak two-bid, showing a good six-card suit and some
