Hedy Lamarr Is Featured With Robert Taylor

The widely-awaited appearance of Robert Taylor and the sensational Hedy Lamarr in "Lady of the Tropics," a languorous drama of smoldering passions laid against an exotic background of Indo-China, occurs Sunday and Monday at the Ritz Theatre in what is heralded as the most fascinating romance of the year.

A dramatic tale of an adventurous American and a beauteous half-caste of the Orient, the picture surrounds Taylor and Miss Lamarr with lavish setting reminiscent of the mystique and splendors of the Far East in a story written especially for the stars by Ben Hecht.

Three years in preparation, "Lady of the Tropics" brings to the screen for the first time a number of background scenes of little-known places of Indo-China and Cambodia which were filmed by a photographic expedition exclusively for the picture.

The love story has its beginning in the harbor of Saigon, with its teeming Oriental traffic of native liners off-shore, quaint native craft at the docks, natives babbling in the colorful, narrow market places and caparisoned elephants and oxen lumbering through the streets.

A riverfront a quarter of mile in length was dredged from California soil, landings were built, native huts were erected on piles and a large section of the famed and ancient Angkor Wat Temple was re-created for a climactic love scene between Taylor and Miss Lamarr.

Taylor, as Bill Carey, arrives in Saigon and falls in love with Manon, the Eurasian, married by Miss Lamarr. A half-caste, she had fled Indo-China by social distinctions. Falling to earth through the influence of Delevich, the rich and powerful admiral, she had planned to marry a native prince when she is discovered by Taylor, whom she marries instead. Although married to an American, Manon is presented from fleeing from Indo-China. To release her husband, when she loves devotedly, she plays the man who has thwarted her happiness, then ends her own life.

COMMISSION ON WAY

NEW YORK Sept. 16 (AP)— Authoritative sources here said yesterday it was understood the British Government will shortly send a war supplies purchasing commission. The commission, it was reported, would establish headquarters in Canada.

ROBERT TAYLOR and Hedy Lamarr in "Lady of the Tropics" provide the feature attraction next Sunday and Monday at the Ritz Theatre.

"Four Feathers" Features Great Drama Of Sudan

Brutally-treated jungle tribes, Alexander Korda's two-year-old discovery, in co-starred by Ralph Richardson and... elements in the producer's great Technicolor adventure drama of the Sudan, "Four Feathers," which is scheduled for a two day engagement at the Ritz Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday of next week. Heading the cast which supports the trio of stars are C. Aubrey Smith, Jack Allen, Donald Gray, Clive Barker and Henry Oscar.

Zoltan Korda directed "Four Feathers" from the screen adaptation by R. C. Sheriff, noted playwright. All exterior scenes for the film were photographed in the African-Egyptian desert, where the Korda brothers established an enormous location camp at Sabotoka Gorge, forty miles from Khartoum in the Sudan. One hundred and forty packing cases were sent from Denmark to the location camp in Egypt, in addition to thirty-three cases of Technicolor camera equipment, fifty-six cases of "props," twenty-five cases of wardrobe costumes, seven cases of make-up equipment and twenty-six cases of general stores. Among the odds and ends included were five pairs of scissars, one English-Italian dictionary, two bundles of cigarette sticks, a tub of specimens, visiting cards, matches and nose feathering cards, astrich and mouse feathers, and hair nets. One mysterious item from the property department was twelve pawn tickets. Also shipped along was a complete cricket set, a portable victrola and a Arab-tinted grease paint.

The story of "Four Feathers" treats of a young man who because of fear and cowardice deserts his regiment on the night of its departure for Egypt. John Kitchener's Army later redeems himself by completing an extremely dangerous mission. The picture is being released under the auspices of United Artists. It is based on the widely-read novel by A. E. W. Mason.

BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

ALL CAN UNDERSTAND WISDOM EXEMPLIFIED IN A LIFE: And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth. John 1:14

OFF TO SCHOOL
Throat a little lumpy,
Eyes a trifle dim;
Hearts a wee bit lumpy
All because of him.
Countless mothers maybe,
Now the days are cool,
Bust to see the baby
Starting off to school.

Strange that I should sigh so,
When the day is here;
Strange that I should try so
Not to shed a tear.
Yes I stand here grieving
In the vestibule
As I think of leaving
But all day in school.

Why this sinking feeling?
Why this moment's pain?

What am I but a burning brain?
Can it be that mothers
Suffer deep concern
When at last from others
Babies begin to learn?

This is the reason maybe
Heartache troubles me;
Never more the baby
Mama alone will be.
No more can hold him
Mine is love and care
The world's too much him
Now he's off to school.

When Thieves Fall Out

At 6:00 o'clock Sunday morning the four million soldiers of Russia's Red army began the advance into Poland, already battling for his life against the overwhelming odds of the powerful mechanized German war machine. It was perhaps to be expected that Stalin would stab the Poles in the back whenever the moment arrived that they were in no position to strike back.

This was the price which Hitler paid for Stalin's signature to their non-aggression pact. Russia was to repudiate its non-aggression pact with Poland, even as Germany planned to do, and to attack the Poles when they had been brought to their knees. In return for this kind of neutrality, Russia was to get its share of the remains after Germany had gobbled up all it wanted.

Just what will happen when the Russian Red Army and the German soldiers meet somewhere in Poland is still somewhat of a mystery. Will they fly at each other's throats like a gang of pirates unable to divide up the loot in any mutually satisfactory manner, or will they be able to control the natural enmity of centuries, at least until having devoured everything else they begin to eye each other?

It is not inconceivable that Russia and Germany will be able to collaborate on the partition of Poland. Part of Poland used to belong to Russia, the rest to Germany, just before the last World War. The old boundaries may be restored. Or the victim may be cut up three ways, with a buffer state still remaining between the two powerful neighbors. And something of the same nature may happen to Rumania, where both Russia and Germany have ambitions.

But after these morsels have served to whet the appetites of the dictators, what then? For over 15 years Hitler has been preaching that Germany's destiny lay to the southeast, and he has not neglected to mention the Russian Ukraine again and again as a part of his plan. German troops fought in Spain against Russian troops to down the Communist menace.

And how long will Japan be able to get along with her new found friend in the Far East. After fighting with Russia for years over boundary disputes and fishing rights, Japan has finally made peace at the instigation of Germany. But what kind of a peace is it? How long can Germany keep these two natural enemies apart?

If the Nazi diplomatic triumph is as sincere and binding as it appears to be, it is indeed bad news for the French and British empires. A combination of totalitarian powers including Germany, Russia, Japan, Italy and Spain would be hard to beat. But somehow we cannot bring ourselves to believe that Stalin can remain long as a member of the anti-comintern group.

Tell 'Em The Truth

"If I had a son," says J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the G-men and outstanding leader in the drive against crime in this country, "I'd swear to do one thing: I'd tell him the truth." Probably not one parent in ten would dispute the wisdom of that assertion. Yet how many in its practical application live up to it?

A newspaper columnist, writing of her own experience the other day, told how she tried "to put one over" on her nine-year old son. "Several days ago when it was particularly sultry after a heavy shower of rain, they (the parents) were famished for a cooling drink and decided to quench their thirst at a nearby night club. Not thinking it necessary to tell their son of these plans, they informed him they were going for a short walk. He requested to go along, but they persuaded him it was a good idea to stay home with baby sister. Not for a minute, however, did they deceive this smart young fellow. No sooner had they arrived at their destination, a popular night spot, than said father was called to the telephone. Yes, you guessed it—it was young son, just calling to see if you were there."

They tried to deceive their nine-year old son and got caught. It was a "white lie", of course, one of those expressions which can be used to cover almost any number of sins. Undoubtedly this boy had caught his mother and father in similar lies before. He was not surprised this time... But imagine what his horror must have been the first time he discovered they were not telling him the truth!

Why do parents do it? When children ask questions which you cannot answer truthfully, as all children do, wouldn't it be better to tell them frankly it is none of their business, rather than try to deceive them with some fibby falsehood? A lie may seem to offer the easiest way out, but no child is long in falling to recognize it as such.

Parents who do not tell their children the truth cannot expect to raise truthful children. Parents who try to deceive their children as to where they are going and what they are doing, can expect their children to deceive them when the situation is reversed.

WHAT'S GOING ON IN THE BACK ROOMS?CLARIFYING THE MONROE DOCTRINE
NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

Few people will quarrel with, of course, any legally binding proposal put forward by President Roosevelt's statement that while the United States would, of course, be directly concerned if Canada were to be attacked, this does not constitute indirect quotations, because what counts are his views on the subject, and his views, we are certain, represent in this instance the consensus of American opinion. The Monroe Doctrine, he is reported to have said, is a question to any change or transfer of sovereignty already established by the doctrine was called into being. In other words, it provides against any change in sovereignty of the British, French and Dutch West Indies and of the Guianas and British Honduras, as well as Jamaica, Bermuda and the mainland and islands of Canada, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Labrador.

The President's interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine has not, even further and embraced the value. But it is worth repeating, even though it was rendered in indirect quotations, because what counts are his views on the subject, and his views, we are certain, represent in this instance the consensus of American opinion. The Monroe Doctrine, he is reported to have said, is a question to any change or transfer of sovereignty already established by the doctrine was called into being. In other words, it provides against any change in sovereignty of the British, French and Dutch West Indies and of the Guianas and British Honduras, as well as Jamaica, Bermuda and the mainland and islands of Canada, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Labrador.

It should be made absolutely clear that the United States does not harbor any design of establishing its own sovereignty over any of these territories. All that American interest demands is that they not be turned over to another power. So long as they remain under their present flags the United States has nothing to say. But, as President Lowell

Poland's Defenders Still Resist Despite Insurmountable Odds

50,000 Prisoners And Immense Booty Are Spoils Of German Victors At Lodz

Allies Repulse Saarland Thrust

Major Offensive Believet Brewing On Rhineland Frontier

Only Warsaw's defenders and two other isolated Polish forces were reported still resisting the German and Russian invaders.

The German command reported the nine-day battle north of Lodz had ended with the capitulation of the encircled Polish forces. Fifty thousand prisoners and an "immense booty" were reported taken by the Germans.

The Soviet general staff announced its troops were approaching Wilno and Lwow and were continuing to eject Polish forces.

Only Warsaw's borders with Poland and Russia soon would be set up in Poland to form a buffer between the two great powers. Sea operations against Poland were started by Russia.

France declared the German attack "in the Saarland" has been repulsed.

Swiss reports said German forces facing the French and British in the west had been strengthened by men and equipment from the Eastern Front.

Anticipating a major attack France and Britain also reinforced their Western Front lines.

The Russian navy began hunting whatever Polish submarines may be left operating in the Baltic. Polish staff officers in Rumania estimated the 18 days of bitter fighting against Germany had cost between 50,000 and 100,000 Polish casualties.

They said the German casualties were between 35,000 and 50,000.

681 Survivors Of Sanford To Get State-Supervised Citrus Washhouse Carrier Rescued

579 Believed Missing After Sinking Of Ship By Submarine

Achievements Of Conscientious Grower Acting Bring Praises

LONDON, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The Admiralty announced today that 681 survivors of the 1,200 aboard British aircraft carrier Courageous sunk by an enemy submarine. (That would leave 579 missing.)

The Admiralty statement said:

"Following are approximately figures of the complement of the Courageous and survivors: total complement, 1,200, comprising 90 officers, 1,170 rating, (estimated strength), 70 sailors, 100 crewmen. The approximate total survivors, 681—70 officers, 611 men."

Some of these rescued came ashore half-clad or with uniforms torn to shreds.

"Plates, timber, and anything movable was thrown overboard to assist the crew," Lieut. H. S. Barber, flying officer and one of the survivors, said yesterday. "The majority of the crew of 1,200 were on deck at the time.

"Some of the starboard life-boats were launched, but it was impossible to launch those on the port side.

"The submarine was seen after the attack with lights shining on her periscope.

Barber said many of the crew swimming in the water for more than an hour after their ship went down sang songs and joked.

Lieut. E. F. Weston cott, captain's clerk, was at supper when the explosion occurred. He went to the bridge, where he saw the captain and others waiting.

The captain in gave orders to abandon ship. Weston cott said, and the crew dove into the water.

"I heard two violent explosions which seemed to lift the ship," Weston cott said. "All the lights went out and the crockery fell over."

"With the order to abandon ship, I just stripped and jumped into the water. I was in the water about 40 minutes, swimming all the time, and reached one of the destroyers.

"Everybody behaved very calmly and cracked jokes. There was no panic or disorder."

The Courageous was sunk at 8 P. M. Sunday.

Rickenbacker Credits Nazi Planes With Win

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, America's ace in the World War, yesterday gave Germany's air force credit for the quick capture of Poland.

"The offense was carefully planned," he said. "The German air force systematically destroyed the major air fields, also making it impossible for French and British planes to come to Poland's aid."

The cities followed. Then came the bombing of railroads, bridges and highways, cutting off the army's lifeline of food and war materials. The swift entry of mechanized forces finished the job.

"It will be a long war," Rickenbacker continued. "Bombers do swift devastating work, but the air fleets will be quickly decimated when the belligerents settle down to real fighting."

Rickenbacker, president of Eastern Air Lines, recently returned from a European trip.

Buyer Of War Supplies For Russia Reveals Hiring Of "Contact Men"

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—(AP)—An exporter authorized to buy battleships and airplanes here for Russia told the Dres committee yesterday of hiring of "contact men" who have been identified with the Democratic National Committee.

Sam Carp, 51, a native of Russia, whose sister is the wife of Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet premier, testified he had a $100,000,000 authorization from Moscow in 1936 to purchase two 85,000-ton warships.

He had a New York firm draw battleship plans which he sent to Russia but which were rejected. He then sought to purchase other war equipment. He obtained the Clegg Export and Import company of New York to arrange exports to Russia and to obtain financing personally on trips to Moscow and through Amorg, Russian trading firm in New York. His books show payments of $500 in June, 1937, and $20,000 in June, 1938, to Preston McGowin, whose Carp said he hired "because I wanted good contacts and wanted the right plans approved by the state department."

Representative Mason Republican, Illinois, asked if McGowin was a Democratic National Committee member. He replied, "Yes," and Carp added, "He is a lawyer."

"Did you know Scott Ferris was a Democratic National Committee member from Oklahoma?" asked Mason.

"No," replied Carp.

replied that he did not know.

McGowin had been employed by the committee off and on for a number of years but was not working for the committee at the time of these payments. He had been employed by McGeown previously and is employed by him now.

"The $500 payment was a check," said Carp, "and the $20,000 was in cash in $1,000 bills."

"The $20,000 was all he got," said Carp, "and I was dissatisfied with his work and I fired him."

"I didn't at first know of his connection with the National Committee. He concealed his identity to me and told me he had a lot of good connections so that he was a former minister."

McGeown, he said, was recommended to him by J. A. Delinda, who was not identified further. Delinda has been called to testify today.

Rhee Whitley, committee counsel, then introduced an account showing a "payment of $500 to Scott Ferris of Washington, D. C., on June 24, 1938."

"Yes," said Carp. "After I fired McGeown I hired Ferris as a lawyer."

Fuehrer Dwells At Length On Efforts To Preserve Peace

Neutrality Change May Be Step To War, Nazis Warn

Versailles Treaty Germany Keeps Close Watch On Plan To Alter Arms Embargo

Adolf Hitler told Britain and France today he had "no war aims" against them but declared Germany was ready for as much as seven years of war.

In a ringing speech at Berlin marking any definite neutrality, which would mean war with Britain and France, Hitler told Britain and France that Germany had complete control of the Versailles Treaty.

Without making any definite promises, Hitler dwelt at length on what he called the "living along friendly" relations with Britain and France.

He asserted that Germany and Russia acting in concert would "smash" the Polish question but that "the Reich would not want to be involved even at the end of the war." Hitler said.

Full report on the peace offensive in the United States in the Neutrality Act are to be given later.

Newspaper stories on the peace offensive in the United States asserted the United States took the biggest uncertainty for Germany.

Polish Invasion By Sovi. Unjustified, Britain Indicates

LONDON, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The British government indicated last night that it would not accept the Polish invasion of Poland as a violation of the Versailles Treaty.

A formal communiqué from the ministry of information asserted: "The British government has considered the situation created by the attack on Poland and has decided to take no action." This attack was the first official communication from Poland when it was protested at the face of overwhelming force.

Germany had carried through its determination not to attack women and children, but there were cases when wounding and killing of non-combatants could not be avoided. For the future he pointed out Germany would be bound in the conduct of war.

We will act as others act to defend our rights," Hitler said.

England's objective is not only to terminate the German regime but to secure men, women and children. It has been said that Germany should be destroyed, and the first Treaty of Versailles was signed for that purpose.

Probably the second treaty would attempt the same thing."

Hitler said "we do not need any further patriotism."

Hitler was introduced by Alfonso XIII, King of Spain, and Hitler had corrected the injustice of the Versailles Treaty.

Silence fell over the crowd a moment later when Hitler, speaking at first in a calm voice, began addressing them. This great moment, the Fuehrer said, was not for Danzig alone but for all the German people.

The fate of Danzig, Hitler said, was the fate of all Germany. The World War, he continued, "made us strong."

The peace imposed on the Germans at Versailles, Hitler said, had worked a great oppression, but the time had come for them to live again, he added.

His voice which had been under considerable restraint when he started rose to a high emotional frenzy at times.
