Stop Canal Work 'Source' Traced

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon's order halting construction on the Cross Florida Barge Canal may have had its origin in a memo from an avowed canal opponent, a former special assistant to the Secretary of the Army

Robert E. Jordan II made the statement Thursday in testifying at the consolidated federal court trial of five lawsuits on the North Florida canal The waterway was one third built when Nixon stopped it in January 1971.

Jordan said he first learned of the memo by

A copy of the memo, which was introduced into torney said it was written in December 1970.

In the memo, Train declared the canal project could "seriously affect the environment by degrading water quality, altering the water supply of Central Florida, vitally affecting fish and wildlife and combining what now are separate ecological

He also said the canal would spread pollution and pests and would be a threat to alligators, panthers If the situation is really bad enough, something should be and wild turkeys. Train concluded by saying there would be "more times, well.....

Take what happened this past Wednesday evening when most of the students were trying to make the 7 p.m. late bell for classes at Seminole Junior College. Bear in mind that most of the students taking evening classes are doing so to further their education and probably have enough time to come home from their fulltime jobcatch a bite of supper, and then they're off to school.

The back approach to SJC is via Lake Mary and SR 15. As you pass the Lake Mary Elementary School, there's the obvious school zone, slow down reminders (notwithstanding that it stands unoccupied during the summer months). After crossing the railroad tracks, the posted speed zones are 35 and 40 m.p.h., all of which has houses on both sides of the road. This brings us to Broadmoor Avenue, the main artery leading to campus.

Lo and behold, that even though there are only five houses on the left-hand side of the road and absolutely none on the right hand side, the posted speed is 25 m.p.h.

As a matter of information on parts of this road, one side of it is in the Sanford City Limits while the other is the responsibility of Seminole County. (Cont'd On Pg. 3A Col. 1)

WREV. ROBERTE: LOY "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee."

Larke 12:20. This verse of scripture is taken from an experience of a farmer who enjoyed the abundance of a great harvest season. Let me share with you some thoughts on his folly. 1. He was so caught up with his abundance that he forgot the giver of his abundance. His was an attitude of ingratitude. In verse 17 he asked himself this question: What shall I do because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?" He failed to remember that every good and every

3. He was so caught up with his abundance that he forgot his mortality. He acted as though he would live forever in his abundance. He made no provision for death and eternity. Today I urgently remind you to remember all you have is the result of God. Remember you are to share of your abundance with others. Prepare yourself today for eternity tomorrow. Hooked Generation Down Latin Way

Latin American teen-agers are called the generation of the 3 M's: marijuana, Mao and

Like their U.S. counterparts, the new generation of Latin American teen-agers has little time for the seemingly staid and simpler vices and virtues of their parents. Mao Tse-tung is their ideologist, and free love, as symbolized by the harmless but supposedly aphrodisiac Amazon machaca bug, their ideal.

Latin American parents can comprehend Mao and machaca as part of the worldwide youth rebellion and the traditional generation gap. They are totally at a loss, however, when it comes to dealing with the problem of narcotics, the least of which is marijuana.

Nowadays, the Latin American teenager appears just as drug-oriented as U.S. youth. Though he usually has less money to spend, the Latin American can buy any variety of drugs at bargain prices as his continent is the world's principal supplier of cocaine and marijuana and a major transshipment point for heroin.

Because Latin American pharmacies do not usually require medical prescriptions, even a six-year-old can buy amphetamines and barbiturates. Indeed, in some countries, amphetamines and tranguilizers are considered as harmless as aspirin, and taken in equally large

Even those without the ready cash can find an ample supply of drugs such as coca leaves, hallucinatory mushrooms and marijuana, by hitchhiking from the cities to the mountain plantations where peasants cul. te the plants. As a result of the cheap and pientiful supply of narcotics, drug addiction in Latin America has skyrocketed in recent years. According to studies presented during a recent seminar sponsored by Latin American medical schools, teenage narcotics addiction and drug-induced crime have doubled in many countries in the last five years.

In Argentina, for example, marijuana consumption increased by 40 per cent between 1969 and 1971, while cocaine addiction doubled. A survey in Chile covering the same period showed an increase in marijuana consumption among high school students from 6.9 per cent to 34.7 per

LSD and other hallucinatory drugs also are popular among Chilean teenagers, as they are in Colombia. A survey of high school students in Medellin, Colombia's textile capital, revealed that 47.1 per cent use drugs, the most popular of which are tranquilizers, followed by marijuana and amphetamines

Marijuana beats almost all other drugs in Mexico, as might be expected in a nation famous for its "hierba," Inhaling such solvents as gasoline also is popular. A survey of university students showed that 10.4 per cent used marijuana; 10.7 per cent, solvents; 10 per cent. amphetamines; 9 per cent barbiturates; and 2.4 per cent, hallucinatory drugs.

Price Of Progress Is Problems

By EDWARD NICHOLS

TAIPEI - Is all progress good? The China News, a morning English-language newspaper, asked this here the The question, reflective of similar editorial and official comment elsewhere in this bustling Asian metropolis, is To the Republic of China on Taiwan, of which Taipei is the cultural and economic capital, progress literally is the

And Taiwan's progress has been dramatic, to say the least, particularly since the expulsion of the Republic of China from the United Nations in October of 1971.

In 1972 the industry in Taiwan grew at a rate of more than 26 per cent, construction was up 32 per cent over the previous year, and the export of industrial products soared nearly 46 per cent to a total value of $2.6 billion. Textiles, millions of television sets, footwear, machinery, processed foods, sugar, pork, bicycles and scores of other products from Taiwan are pouring into world "And we are only in our industrial puberty," says Y.T.

Wong, director of the Board of Trade. The remarkable industrial growth of Taiwan has been translated into substantial improvements in standards of living - which are the highest among underdeveloped nations in Asia. Wages are rising steadily, contributing to an annual cash income of $400 per capita. Nine years of education has been mandatory since 1968, and one fourth of

Nine universities and 90 additional colleges and junior colleges are available for those who are qualified to advance to higher education. Officials make it clear that the economic and social advances are Taiwan's umbilical cord for survival - a central part of its dedicated effort to remain free of the control of Communist China on the mainland. The dramatic progress that the Republic of China has made in building a modern, industrial state makes it hard to accept its own self-evaluation as an "underdeveloped By contrast, Communist China, which is considered a world power, has less international trade than the Republic of China. The Soviet Union, which is the second-ranking economic power in the world, has less trade with the United States than does Taiwan, a nation of 14 million persons with a fraction of the area and no natural resources. "Nevertheless, we are an underdeveloped nation," said Wong. "It is a paradox that the problems confronting us are those of a highly developed country - inflation and shortages created by domestic inflation, international monetary fluctuations, mounting worldwide shortages of agricultural products and raw materials, and the pent-up demands of a racing economy that finally caught up to us." The first major national acceptance that the problem had reached a near-crisis level occurred on July 1 when the Executive Yuan (Cabinet) announced a sweeping 11-point program of "price stability measures." In many respects, the measures are compared to Phase I of the economic controls inaugurated in the United States on

And now John Mitchell Any chance that the Watergate testimony to follow John W. Dean 3rd's explosive performance might be anticlimactic was dispelled by the former attorney general and presidential campaign director.

In three days of sharp interrogation by the Ervin committee. Mitchell added less new tacts than a new and troubling dimension to the Watergate story.

Once the chief law officer of the United States, he has acknowledged, first, being aware of the commission of illegal acts, and then participating in their cover-up. He has based his justification for placing political expediency before official responsibilities on the rock of his devotion to the President: "... the re-election of Richard Nixon compared with what was available on the other side was so much more important. But the President himself had already undermined that rock. In his April 36 address to the American people on Watergate, that same R chard Nixon said must not again fall into the trap of letting the end, however great that end is, justify the means." It is unfortunate the President did not make his convictions on this point perfectly clear to his associates much ear-

BRUCE BIOSSAT Nixon peril even after Watergate

WASHINGTON (NEA) Picture a President Nixon who somehow gets through Watergate but later finds himself beset more than now with perplexing economic problems and energy crises which strike right into American homes

In this unsettling Watergate spring and summer, the President has his bitter critics, a widening number if the polls are correct. But he also has his delenders, who are growing increasingly angry as the inquiries progress.

The newspaper the National Observer has been deluged with a furious fusillade of pro-Nixon mail from some of these defenders, since it carried a column by the perceptive graceful political writer James M. Perry which boldly declared that much of the press views Watergate as proving the validity of its long-held suspicions of the President as a devious man.

Yet it has been suggested to me (and some others) that Mr. Nixon's support from these people might dwindle to an incredible minimum if a worsening economic and energy dilemma confronts him later on. Suppose he seeks to meet these difficulties with new. tough control measures which smack almost of wartime austerity. Suppose my knowledgeable informant is right and his present angry backers, feeling the pinch directly as they do not feel Watergate, largely desert him. How will he react? Says a Republican sensitive to the President's make-up

"He'll get angry. He'll get madder and madder. If he finds he suddenly has no defenders, he'll defend himself by lashing 'He'll respond the way he did when the Senate rejected his second southern U.S. Supreme Court nominee, Harrold Carswell, the way he did when he labeled as 'those burns' the students who rioted against his 1970 decision to invade This Republican adds that, should he find only Richard Nixon standing up to defend Richard Nixon, he will lay blame all about him - firing harder than ever at an uncooperative, outdated, immobile Congress, blaming foreign gov ernments for part of our economic troubles, chopping even at specific American groups like farmers and industrialists for putting their interests ahead of national concerns. More still from this source:

"He'll challenge all these critics to get up off their backsides and do something, arguing that as President he's doing everything he knows to meet the crises and should not have to stand alone in such times of national crises."

By hacking away in this manner, it is suggested, the President might hope to regain at least his standard core of support, which ranges generally just above 40 per cent of voters though in rare 1972 he swamped a widely unacceptable Sen George McGovern with his 61 per cent total. Yet, should the President's script run along these lines, it would contain what seems an utterly absurd contradiction.

Flailing about so broadly in his self-defender's role, he would in effect be going over the heads of the people to win back Desperation nevertheless might drive him down this road.

For, while Mr. Nixon is used to enemies, may even need them as some of his watchers contend, he never has stood in politics with almost no friends at all.

The signals she sends don't say 'stay away'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm 22, better than average looking, and I'm told I have a good personality. Altho I don't pretend to be "Miss Super Virgin," I don't care to jump into bed with a guy on the first date.

How does a girl tactfully let a guy know this when he doesn't exactly come right out and ask her to go to bed with him, but he just keeps pushing himself on her?

I must be going about it in the wrong way because even tho my date and I really have a good time, when it comes to the moment of truth he gets disgusted with me. This happens on every date I've had lately and I'm beginning to feel like a failure when a guy rushes me home, says, "I'll see you around," and I never hear from

DEAR PROBLEM: Your big problem is the way you conduct yourself during those moments that lead up to the moment of truth. Your actions undoubtedly telegraph the message that you would be a willing partner. Put the brakes on during the preliminaries, and you won't find yourself faced with "the moment of truth" so soon. And by the way, a guy who disappears permanently because a girl refuses to jump into bed with him on the first date is no

Can this happen to a man my age? Or should I settle for a nice woman who qualifies in every other way and put aside these dreams of romance?

POLLY'S POINTERS

Modern Design Makes Autos Uncomfortable

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY - My Pet Peeve is with those car manufacturers who expect us to redesign ourselves to fit their latest styling. Women sit too low and too close to the wheel. Men often hit the ceiling of the new low models and concave seat backs cramp the driver's back and shoulders. A wheel set close to the dash, a seat that moves up and down and a straight back with a continuous adjustment all make a car fit many more drivers. Thanks for the advice we get on so many subjects. - EDITH

Polly's Problem DEAR POLLY - I would like to know how to remove the shine from a blue serge suit. - JOHN

DEAR POLLY - and Joy - As a former alterations and repair worker I am familiar with the repairing of leather, vinyl and plastic materials. Ingenuity is the first requisite as various types of damage require different types of repair. Holes and tears of the size of a cigarette burn are mended by fitting in a piece obtained from the garment's hem or a seam. Fit the piece flush in the damaged area using leather glue. Back the patched area with a piece of cheesecloth or a small piece of gummed hem tape such as used for putting up hems in leather garments. For snags, tears or splits, the cheesecloth or the sticky tape on the wrong side should suffice. Use waterproof marking ink on the butting edges of a patch to blend in with the garment. This ink comes in many colors. Underarm damage is best repaired by removing the damaged area and insetting a matching colored gusset cut of elasticized or stretch fabric in a weight suitable for the garment. Leather should be sewn by hand with a glover's eedle and with seams of not more than one-eighth-inch evercast closely. Such a needle has a very sharp triangular point. Old garments are often a source of supply for patches or one could go to a leather outlet, shoe repair shop or glove

DEAR POLLY - Have you ever had trouble with gum sticking to your false teeth? Out of desperation I sprayed my plate with that great spray-on vegetable coating for cookware and found it really works. - OPAL campaign to curb inflation, but the rate of braking was a little too fast for government econo-The administration Thursday released additional details of its Phase 4 planning, including proposed ceiling price regulations for gasoline that could force rollbacks of gasoline prices in some areas by Aug. 12. should remain voluntary.

Cost of Living Council Chairman John T. Dunlop said the Phase 4 regulations issued Thursday still are tentative, and he invited public comment before July 31. They are to take effect Aug. 12 at the end of the current 60-day price freeze. But it was clear from what officials said that major features of the proposed regulations will be retained, including provisions to require large firms with inflation problems to absorb some of their increased costs rather than

Presidential Veto Seen For War Bill

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)-An almost certain presidential veto awaits the compromise version of Senate and House bills to limit the war-making powers of a president.

The Senate measure passed Friday would allow a president to commit U.S. troops for 30 days without congressional approcal in casr of enemy attack or to

The same holds true on the entrance leading into the college from Highway 17-92. Both of these will be changed.

Incidentally, Sheriff Polk remembers precisely when these signs were erected ... 1:30 p.m. on Friday, July 13th because he had the occasion to attend a function at SJC on that

The Senate passage of the measure was 71 to 18, ot 11 votes more than the two-thirds Senate leaders are confident they will be able to muster to override. First, however, if the bill is vetoed, it will go to the House. Its margin on passage Wednesday was

On the other hand, Republicans who supported at my home with Sheriff John the bill will be under strong pressure to uphold the Polk. (Nan, he didn't give me a President, so the outcome remains in dount.
